It is very easy for hon. Members who care enough about the dangerous situation in the United Kingdom to be here for the debate. But it is also very easy to be brave and to make brave statements when one is many miles from the problem. So long as Members say that the sea is between us, and we can keep the killings going among the poor souls in Ulster and keep it from the rest of the mainland, that is unfortunately what people in Ulster are tempted to believe at times. [Interruption.] I hear mutterings, Mr. Deputy Speaker, from someone who, in the position that he holds, should have better manners than to carry on in this way. However, one must forgive him when one realises the rump of a party that he leads. The right hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Ashdown) is far from the trouble, and far from the threat and fear that many people living along the border areas of my constituency understand. I ask the right hon. Member to have the decency to bear in mind the genuine fear. We are not talking about a picnic. We are not talking about something that can easily be dismissed. We are talking about human life.

If the right hon. Member wants to comment, I shall happily give way to allow him to do so, but I ask him to have the good manners to listen whenever a speech is being made, no matter how distasteful he may find some of the comments. Of course, there is nothing to prevent him from coming to live in that part of the United Kingdom and standing for election if he so desires and if he feels brave enough to do so.

Parts of Ulster, like parts of the United Kingdom, are quite safe. Some areas in our Province—there is one not far from my home—are remote from much of the trouble in certain parts of my own constituency of Mid-Ulster. But the Government are asking elected representatives, who live in areas that are predominantly Republican and support the IRA, to take action against Sinn Fein while the Government sit back and watch the outcome.

There are some very dangerous areas in which to live. Take the area of Fermanagh and South Tyrone. The hon. Member for Fermanagh and South Tyrone (Mr. Maginnis) has described how dangerous life is for people in his constituency. Members of my own party in the Strabane district council, the chairman of which is a Sinn Feiner, live along the border. Can anyone imagine what it is like to live along the border and to be expected by the Government, with no protection, to stand up in court and be the person who has brought the Sinn Fein mouthpiece for terrorists into the court room in an endeavour to remove him from a council chamber?

Although few hon. Members are in the Chamber listening to our arguments, no doubt they will come out at voting time into the Lobbies without having listened to the heart's cry of the elected representatives of Northern Ireland, and the legislation will be passed, as the Minister desires. That is the way of it. But should, God forbid, this legislation cause the death of any councillor colleague of mine or of any hon. Member, whether Nationalist or Unionist, let the hon. Members who pushed it through remember that they must bear the guilt.

I make an earnest and genuine appeal to the Minister to listen to the elected representatives of Northern Ireland and to accept the amendments of my hon. Friend the Member for Antrim, South (Mr. Forsythe). If they are not accepted, I will join my colleagues in the Lobby to support the official Opposition and the amendments.

Mr. Needham: We have had a full debate on this series of amendments. I am surprised by the Opposition's suggestion that the Attorney-General should be involved. The hon. Member for Leicester, South (Mr. Marshall) mentioned that some councils are working well together and he is right. However, if anything would prevent those councils or councillors from bringing actions and would make matters worse, it would be the introduction of the Attorney-General.

10.30 pm

The one lecture that the Opposition have constantly given the Government and other hon. Members concerns the danger of creating political martyrs in Northern Ireland. As the hon. Member for Leicester, South knows, involving the Attorney-General would make it appear that the British Government were imposing their political views in the council chambers of Northern Ireland. The hon. Member said that the amendment had the support of all Opposition Members. At that time, the hon. Member for South Down (Mr. McGrady) was not in the Chamber. He is now in his seat and I would be surprised if he were prepared to join the hon. Member for Leicester, South and his Unionist friends in the Lobby. That is a fundamentally important political point which Opposition Members cannot duck and which is in total contradistinction to everything they have said about the Bill up to now.

The Attorney-General has no capacity to monitor expressions of support for proscribed organisations. He has to depend entirely on the information given to him by others. It is those others who, in our judgment, should bring the action, not least for the reason given by the hon. Member for Mid-Ulster (Rev. William McCrea). It is they who may feel that they may be intimidated. If the Attorney-General or the Director of Public Prosecutions is given the job, they would have to give evidence.

[Mr. Needham]

We have to apply our minds to an important question which underlies the reason why Unionist Members are concerned about this part of the legislation. That is the question of intimidation. Intimidation must inevitably arise, whoever brings the action. Those who are called to give evidence are the people who will be intimidated. I accept the point about tape recording made by the hon. Member for Londonderry, East (Mr. Ross) and we shall look at that. However, that alone would not be sufficient. Witnesses would still be required.

We know that intimidation of witnesses is a problem in criminal cases in Northern Ireland. It is well established that such intimidation is almost always within communities. There is little evidence that intimidation in civil cases or between communities is widespread in Northern Ireland. I can understand hon. Members' fears when they say, "That is all very well. That may have been the history up to now but it may not happen like that in the future." If there is intimidation, it has to be a matter for the police. They have to take control and ensure that witnesses are properly looked after and protected. If those fears exist, we must discuss the matter with the police and ensure that intimidation is not allowed to exist in Northern Ireland. Intimidation undermines everything. If hon. Members are saying that no case can be brought because witnesses and applicants would be intimidated, what justification is there for believing that any cases in Northern Ireland have any hope of success? That cannot be the case and I do not believe that it is.

Mr. Frank Cook (Stockton, North) rose——

Mr. Clifford Forsythe rose——

Mr. Needham: It is late and I want to get on but I will give way to the hon. Member for Antrim, South (Mr. Forsythe).

Mr. Forsythe: It is not a matter of people being intimidated into not bringing the case, but the fact that, when they did, there would not be intimidation but violence.

Mr. Needham: That will happen whoever brings the case. If the council brings the case and witnesses are called, those witnesses will have to appear and are likely to be intimidated. The witnesses will be at risk because they will have to give the evidence to the court on which the judges will make the decisions.

I understand the point that the hon. Member for Antrim, South is making. He wants to broaden the scope and bring in Members of Parliament. The Government say that this is a matter to be resolved by those who have an interest in council or assembly affairs and it is for councillors and assemblymen, in the conduct of their business, that the legislation is proposed. I understand that hon. Gentlemen who are also councillors clearly have an interest, but I do not see that Members of Parliament, as such, have interests that would give them the right to bring cases of this sort. There may be some hon. Members who, having listened to the fears of their colleagues, are grateful for that.

Nor can I look with much enthusiasm on the idea of Mr. Gerry Adams acting as a policeman for the Belfast city council. I do not believe that Members of the European Parliament have a locus. Finally, I do not accept that the inclusion of the Secretary of State, whatever his personal qualities or those of his Ministers, would do anything other than bring an even greater outcry from those who felt that the British political machine was bringing cases in Northern Ireland. The arguments to which I have alluded with regard to the Attorney-General would be even greater if the Secretary of State was bringing such cases.

17The hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Ashdown) tried to get round this problem of intimidation in a neat and ingenious way. I listened to and understood the points that he made, but I hope that I have given some of the basic reasons why the Government feel that the question of intimidation is much broader than the question of who brings cases of this sort. I do not believe that the right hon. Member's proposed changes would be workable. Not only that, but the functions of the Director of Public Prosecutions, which are set out under the 1972 order, make it clear that the director can deal only with criminal cases, and these cases will not be criminal ones. I accept that we could change that, but it would need a major rethinking of the philosophy underlying the 1972 order and the role of the director in Northern Ireland would be one with which I am far from convinced he would be terribly happy.

The amendments do not propose straightforward inclusion of the DPP; there is a caveat attached that the DPP should be allowed to bring actions only where there is a possibility of personal intimidation or threat. What constitutes intimidation for these purposes? Who would decide whether it was likely? Would applicants decide? If so, the director would be involved in every case that was ever brought. Would the DPP decide? If so, what criteria would he use? It is not possible just to draw up criteria for the DPP in this way.

When considering all these amendments it should be borne in mind that the application for breach of the declaration can be brought by a group of people—councillors, the council, the electors. This, we believe, is sufficient to protect applicants against intimidation. We agree that it does not cover the intimidation of witnesses, which is the key element in the fears among councillors and hon. Members. That is a matter for the police and it is crucial that it is resolved with the police when such cases are brought. I cannot ask my right hon. and hon. Friends to accept these amendments.

Mr. Jim Marshall: By leave of the House, I should like to reply briefly to the debate. As we have the support of the DUP, the Official Unionists and the Social Democrats, perhaps we should take our amendment away and have a further look at it. If, as the hon. Members from those parties have said, they intend to vote with us, we shall be pleased to have their company.

Mr. Clifford Forsythe: My hon. Friends and, I presume, hon. Members of the Unionist fraternity on the other Benches are quite capable of being convinced by a correct argument. It is unfortunate that the hon. Gentleman seems to be saying that he cannot be persuaded by argument.

Mr. Marshall: I am pleased to hear the hon. Gentleman concede that if an argument is rational and convincing enough he is prepared to be convinced by it. I regret that on previous occasions when I am sure that my arguments were equally or perhaps more cogent, rational and convincing I failed to carry the hon. Gentleman and his

hon. Friends with me. Perhaps I should not say much more about that in case I lose the potential support of the Official Unionists.

I have a point to make to the right hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Ashdown) and it is one that the Minister tangentially approached. We deliberately chose the Attorney-General because we wished to emphasise that we want the offence to remain a civil one. We had a long debate in Committee when we considered whether to choose the Attorney-General or the Director of Public Prosecutions. We made it clear then that we were opposed to criminalisation, and the very mention in the north of Ireland of the initials DPP implies criminalisation.

Mr. Ashdown: I am grateful to the hon. Gentleman for that elucidation. Does he share my view that the Minister, who has been very eloquent and is a powerful speaker who presents his case well, has been remarkably unsound on his ground in the debate? Of all the Minister's arguments I found most sinister the one that Members of Parliament were somehow not involved in these affairs and that only councillors or electors could bring charges. Perhaps the hon. Gentleman would comment on that. It seems odd that the Government's argument is based on the idea that an elector can initiate the law but an elected representative cannot.

Mr. Marshall: Perhaps I could deal with that when I am dealing with the Minister's reply to the debate.

The hon. Member for Mid-Ulster (Rev. William McCrea) again spoke about the genuine fears of people in Northern Ireland in general and in specific areas of the Province. I think that I speak for all my hon. Friends when I say that we fully understand that. Time and again I and my hon. Friends seek to curb what we are tempted to say so that we do not exacerbate those fears or be seen to be inciting people to commit acts of violence. We understand and share the grief and sympathy that undoubtedly abounds in the north of Ireland. The hon. Gentleman belittles himself when he says that because we live hundreds of miles from what is going on day-by-day in the north of Ireland we fail to understand and appreciate the dimension of agony in another part of the United Kingdom. I ask him to accept that there is a shared feeling about that.

The Minister made great play of the need for councillors, electors or councils to be the Government's front-line soldiers. He is saying, "You are the people directly involved. You are the people whom we expect to carry out the Government's will—whether you be an ordinary elector, councillor, or even a Member of Parliament who happens to have been elected to a specific district council."

10.45 pm

It is wrong of the Minister to hide behind those innocent people. He is asking them to do something that he will not have to do—put the finger on an individual or on individuals. That person may appreciate that the act of fingering and speaking out against another party might spell his own death. But that is what the Minister asks people to do on his Government's behalf.

Our argument, and the essence of the amendment, is that such a requirement is wrong. We deeply disapprove of the legislation, but if the Government wish to impose it, then they must have the courage and guts to accept that, as it is their legislation, it is their responsibility to implement it. The best way of doing that is through the office of the Attorney-General.

Mr. Needham: If the hon. Gentleman were right, then his argument would be true of any civil case brought in Northern Ireland. We are here dealing with a civil case involving electors in a given district, councils, and councillors. In those circumstances, it is right that they should be the parties bringing the action.

Mr. McNamara: The hon. Gentleman is playing with words.

Mr. Marshall: My hon. Friend says that the Minister is playing with words, which is true. But the Minister has, in respect of this legislation, been playing with words for weeks and months. However, he cannot escape from the fact that the legislation is political in both concept and character. It seeks to impose political conditions on Northern Ireland's local councils. The Government are responsible for that concept, and for the kind of political views that they wish to outlaw in councils. If political decisions must be taken, the Government must realise that the Attorney-General should take the responsibility for implementing them.

Question put, That the amendment be made:—

The House divided: Ayes 31, Noes 104.

Division No. 56] [10.47 pm

AYES

Ashdown, Rt Hon Paddy
Barnes, Harry (Derbyshire NE)
Beggs, Roy
Campbell, Menzies (Fife NE)
Cook, Frank (Stockton N)
Cryer, Bob
Flannery, Martin
Forsythe, Clifford (Antrim S)
Golding, Mrs Llin
Hughes, John (Coventry NE)
Kilfedder, James
Livsey, Richard
McCrea, Rev William
McCusker, Harold
McKay, Allen (Barnsley West)
McNamara, Kevin
Maginnis, Ken
Marshall, Jim (Leicester S)
Martlew, Eric
Maxton, John
Michael, Alun
Molyneaux, Rt Hon James
Morley, Elliott
Paisley, Rev Ian
Robinson, Peter (Belfast E)
Ross, William (Londonderry E)
Skinner, Dennis
Smyth, Rev Martin (Belfast S)
Steel, Rt Hon David
Taylor, Matthew (Truro)
Walker, A. Cecil (Belfast N)

Tellers for the Ayes:
Mr. Frank Haynes and
Mr. Jimmy Dunnachie.

NOES

Alexander, Richard
Amess, David
Amos, Alan
Arbuthnot, James
Arnold, Jacques (Gravesham)
Arnold, Tom (Hazel Grove)
Ashby, David
Atkinson, David
Baker, Nicholas (Dorset N)
Batiste, Spencer
Bennett, Nicholas (Pembroke)
Boswell, Tim
Bowis, John
Brandon-Bravo, Martin
Bright, Graham
Brown, Michael (Brigg & Cl't's)
Burt, Alistair
Butterfill, John
Carrington, Matthew
Carttiss, Michael
Chapman, Sydney
Chope, Christopher
Conway, Derek
Coombs, Anthony (Wyre F'rest)
Coombs, Simon (Swindon)
Cran, James
Currie, Mrs Edwina
Davies, Q. (Stamf'd & Spald'g)
Davis, David (Boothferry)
Day, Stephen
Devlin, Tim
Dorrell, Stephen
Dover, Den
Durant, Tony
Fenner, Dame Peggy
Fishburn, John Dudley
Forth, Eric
Franks, Cecil
Gale, Roger
Gill, Christopher
Greenway, John (Ryedale)
Griffiths, Peter (Portsmouth N)
Ground, Patrick
Gummer, Rt Hon John Selwyn
Hamilton, Neil (Tatton)
Hanley, Jeremy
Harris, David
Heathcoat-Amory, David
Holt, Richard
Howarth, Alan (Strat'd-on-A)

Howarth, G. (Cannock & B'wd)
Hughes, Robert G. (Harrow W)
Hunt, David (Wirral W)
Hunt, John (Ravensbourne)
Hunter, Andrew
Irvine, Michael
Jack, Michael
Janman, Tim
King, Roger (B'ham N'thfield)
King, Rt Hon Tom (Bridgwater)
Knapman, Roger
Knowles, Michael
Lang, Ian
Lightbown, David
Lloyd, Peter (Fareham)
Lord, Michael
Lyell, Sir Nicholas
Mans, Keith
Martin, David (Portsmouth S)
Maxwell-Hyslop, Robin
Meyer, Sir Anthony
Morrison, Sir Charles
Needham, Richard
Norris, Steve
Porter, David (Waveney)
Roe, Mrs Marion
Rowe, Andrew
Sackville, Hon Tom
Sayeed, Jonathan
Shaw, David (Dover)
Shaw, Sir Michael (Scarb')
Shepherd, Colin (Hereford)
Smith, Tim (Beaconsfield)
Stern, Michael
Stevens, Lewis
Stradling Thomas, Sir John
Summerson, Hugo
Taylor, John M (Solihull)
Taylor, Teddy (S'end E)
Tebbit, Rt Hon Norman
Thompson, Patrick (Norwich N)
Thorne, Neil
Thurnham, Peter
Tracey, Richard
Twinn, Dr Ian
Viggers, Peter
Waddington, Rt Hon David
Waller, Gary
Warren, Kenneth
Watts, John
Wells, Bowen
Wheeler, John
Widdecombe, Ann
Wood, Timothy

Tellers for the Noes:
Mr. David Maclean and
Mr. Michael Fallon.

Question accordingly negatived.

Amendment made: No. 27, in page 4, line 2, leave out 'while a member of a district council or of the Northern Ireland Assembly'.—[Mr. Needham.]

Schedule 2

DECLARATION AGAINST TERRORISM

11 pm

Amendment proposed: No. 22, in page 11, line 5, leave out ', if elected,' and insert

'after nomination until the declaration of the count and, if elected, during the life of the elected authority'.—[Mr. Molyneaux.]

Question put, That the amendment be made:—

The House divided: Ayes 10, Noes 127.

Division No. 57] [10.50 pm

AYES

Forsythe, Clifford (Antrim S)
Kilfedder, James
McCrea, Rev William
McCusker, Harold
Maginnis, Ken
Molyneaux, Rt Hon James
Paisley, Rev Ian
Robinson, Peter (Belfast E)
Smyth, Rev Martin (Belfast S)
Walker, A. Cecil (Belfast N)

Tellers for the Ayes:
Mr. William Ross and
Mr. Roy Beggs.

NOES

Alexander, Richard
Amess, David
Amos, Alan
Arbuthnot, James
Arnold, Jacques (Gravesham)
Arnold, Tom (Hazel Grove)
Ashby, David
Ashdown, Rt Hon Paddy
Atkinson, David
Baker, Nicholas (Dorset N)
Barnes, Harry (Derbyshire NE)
Batiste, Spencer
Bennett, Nicholas (Pembroke)
Boswell, Tim
Bowis, John
Brandon-Bravo, Martin
Bright, Graham
Brown, Michael (Brigg & Cl't's)
Burt, Alistair
Campbell, Menzies (Fife NE)
Carrington, Matthew
Carttiss, Michael
Chapman, Sydney
Chope, Christopher
Conway, Derek
Cook, Frank (Stockton N)
Coombs, Anthony (Wyre F'rest)
Coombs, Simon (Swindon)
Cran, James
Cryer, Bob
Currie, Mrs Edwina
Davies, Q. (Stamf'd & Spald'g)
Davis, David (Boothferry)
Day, Stephen
Devlin, Tim
Dorrell, Stephen
Dover, Den
Dunnachie, Jimmy
Durant, Tony
Fallon, Michael
Fenner, Dame Peggy
Fishburn, John Dudley
Flannery, Martin
Forth, Eric
Franks, Cecil
Gale, Roger
Garel-Jones, Tristan
Gill, Christopher
Greenway, John (Ryedale)
Gregory, Conal
Griffiths, Peter (Portsmouth N)
Ground, Patrick
Gummer, Rt Hon John Selwyn
Hamilton, Neil (Tatton)
Hanley, Jeremy
Harris, David
Haynes, Frank
Heathcoat-Amory, David
Holt, Richard
Howarth, G. (Cannock & B'wd)
Hughes, John (Coventry NE)
Hughes, Robert G. (Harrow W)
Hunt, David (Wirral W)
Hunt, John (Ravensbourne)
Hunter, Andrew
Irvine, Michael
Jack, Michael
Janman, Tim
King, Roger (B'ham N'thfield)
King, Rt Hon Tom (Bridgwater)
Knapman, Roger
Knowles, Michael
Lang, Ian
Lightbown, David
Livsey, Richard
Lloyd, Peter (Fareham)
Lord, Michael
Lyell, Sir Nicholas
McGrady, Eddie
McKay, Allen (Barnsley West)
McNamara, Kevin
Mallon, Seamus
Mans, Keith
Martin, David (Portsmouth S)
Martlew, Eric
Maxwell-Hyslop, Robin
Meyer, Sir Anthony
Michael, Alun
Morley, Elliott
Morrison, Sir Charles
Needham, Richard
Norris, Steve
Pike, Peter L.
Porter, David (Waveney)
Roe, Mrs Marion
Rowe, Andrew
Sackville, Hon Tom
Sayeed, Jonathan
Shaw, David (Dover)
Shaw, Sir Michael (Scarb')
Shepherd, Colin (Hereford)
Skinner, Dennis
Smith, Tim (Beaconsfield)
Spicer, Sir Jim (Dorset W)
Steel, Rt Hon David
Stern, Michael
Stevens, Lewis
Stradling Thomas, Sir John
Summerson, Hugo
Taylor, John M (Solihull)
Taylor, Matthew (Truro)
Taylor, Teddy (S'end E)
Tebbit, Rt Hon Norman
Thompson, Patrick (Norwich N)
Thorne, Neil
Thurnham, Peter
Tracey, Richard
Twinn, Dr Ian
Viggers, Peter
Waddington, Rt Hon David
Wallace, James
Waller, Gary
Watts, John
Wells, Bowen
Wheeler, John
Widdecombe, Ann
Wood, Timothy

Tellers for the Noes:
Mr. Alan Howarth and
Mr. David Maclean.

Question accordingly negatived.

Order for Third Reading read.

11.10 pm

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (Mr. Tom King): I beg to move, That the Bill be now read the Third time.

Although this is a somewhat later hour than some of my hon. Friends might have hoped for, they will accept from me that Northern Ireland cannot be accused of overtaxing the House. I take considerable pleasure from the fact that this modest measure has had the opportunity of a full discussion in the House this evening, and I am pleased that so many hon. Members from Northern Ireland have taken part in the debate on the amendments.

I hope that those hon. Members who served on the Committee will not treat me as an interloper if I take part at this stage of the Bill. I hope that all hon. Members will join me in expressing appreciation to my hon. Friend the Minister in charge of the Bill for the way in which he has conducted its proceedings.

I hope also that two provisions of the Bill are not too controversial. The extension of the franchise to those who enjoy it under certain election procedures but not under others, but who will now enjoy it under the council procedure, is overdue, and it corrects an anomaly that should have been corrected before. I trust that I carry the House with me on that point. The anomaly that only those convicted of minor offences be disqualified from subsequently serving on local authorities in Northern Ireland, but not those convicted of major offences, because the disqualification period has long expired before they emerged from their period of confinement should also be corrected.

I recognise that the controversial elements in the Bill relate to the declaration by candidates in consideration of an abjuration of violence.

In terms of protagonists, the debate has focused on those who believe that this is not a sensible proposal and that nothing should be done, and on those who believe that much more should be done. That is perhaps typical of so many of the problems faced by those responsible for government in Northern Ireland and the balance that has to be struck.

I do not claim that the measure is a guaranteed, fail-safe solution to what I genuinely believe is a real and manifest problem. It is no secret that the Bill is before the House because it is recognised that there is a genuine problem. My hon. Friend the Minister and I embarked on the consultation paper that we issued and the discussions that we had with many people in Northern Ireland because we recognised that there was genuine concern. We recognised that there was something uniquely offensive in people serving on councils in Northern Ireland with people who openly supported murder, killing and violence as an adjunct to their political activities.

[Mr. Tom King]

It would have been easier to walk away and do nothing. Some have suggested that we should go further and proscribe such organisations. Some talk of proscription as though it were a fail-safe option that was guaranteed to work. I have made no secret of the fact that we do not rule out that option, but it has many difficulties and needs to be considered carefully before it is adopted.

The proposals that we have put before the House have been made not in an impetuous or ill-considered way, but after considerable detailed consultation. My hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State has discussed the measure with a number of hon. Members, people who hold elected office in Northern Ireland and many others who were concerned about the issue. That was the right way to proceed. There is a genuine issue that needs to be addressed and this is the honourable and correct way in which to do so.

Above all, we ensure by this measure that the many people who have felt the offence of finding themselves in elected office in Northern Ireland and having to face people who abuse the electoral process have some means of redress whereas previously they were told that there was nothing that they could do.

We have sought to bring the measure before the House in readiness for this year's local government elections in Northern Ireland. Its existence, given the support of the House on Third Reading and then of another place, means that those who stand for election will do so in the knowledge that each candidate will be standing under the same circumstances and with the same commitment not to support violence in any form in which it is described in the Bill. It is in that spirit that I commend the Bill to the House.

11.18 pm

Mr. McNamara: It is noble of the Secretary of State to come before us and take responsibility for the Bill. He referred to it as a modest measure. There is a lot to be modest about.

If we believe what we read in the newspapers, the real author of the legislation is the Under-Secretary of State. I have a message for the leader of the Social and Liberal Democratic party. Whatever his reputation here, despite his birth and the ancestry of his parents, Action Man in Northern Ireland, according to the Belfast Telegraph, is the Under-Secretary. For all the right hon. Gentleman's claims to fame, I am sorry that he has not gone that far. The heading was,

"The dreams of an action man".

The problem is that both the right hon. Gentleman and the Minister share dreams. One believes that one day he might takeover the Labour party and the other believes that the Bill might improve the situation in Northern Ireland. Both are misconceived in their ideas.

The article also states, referring to the Minister:

"Already he can claim credit as the man who finally got Ulster pubs open on Sundays."

I suspect that he found the Bill late one Sunday night in a bar. One of the most interesting comments on the Bill was the strange statement of the Minister in the same issue of the Belfast Telegraph. He said:

"Mr. Needham says that while his plan may not solve the problems in the councils, it does show the Government's determination."

It seems that the Minister's ambition is to secure an entry in the Stormont book of heroic failures.

The shallowness of the Bill is shown by the Minister's lack of conviction about it. It shows the Government's determination, but it will not solve any of the problems. He would be better employed taking the Bill away and allowing the electorate of Northern Ireland to decide who is best fit to represent it. Determination can be an admirable quality, but unless it is allied with sensible purpose, it degenerates into mere stubbornness. That is what we have seen tonight. The Minister has persisted in stubbornly imposing on Northern Ireland a Bill which will satisfy no one in the Province and will offend many beyond the ranks of those it seeks to curb. It is ironic that a Minister who has been so vigorous, as the Belfast Telegraph said, in advocating the need for greater self-government in Northern Ireland should stand so firmly against the voices from both sides of the community who are opposed to or dissatisfied with the Bill. It is almost as if he has resorted to the old colonial tactic of divide and rule where the Government were measured by their capacity to offend all sensibilities equally.

The Bill, as a whole, is a disaster. We shall not have to wait very long before we see the negative effects of the legislation in the council chambers later this year. I shall identify the main reasons that lead the Labour party to that conclusion, but, before doing so, I must mention one positive aspect of the Bill—clauses 1 and 2, which bring the franchise for local elections into that for parliamentary elections. The anomaly was a hangover from the days of sectarian abuse and of explicitly sectarian Government in Northern Ireland.

I was bitterly disappointed that some Northern Ireland hon. Members sought to maintain such blatant sectarianism in their amendments. If they cannot demonstrate more concern to treat their neighbours as equal citizens, the future for the Province is grim. However, those provisions are about the best thing that can be said about the Bill. To be fair, Ministers have resisted the more outrageous proposals, but they would never have been put forward if the Bill did not provide suitable opportunities for them. The Government are belatedly beginning to recognise that they have created enough damage without the exercise in destruction that they would have been invited to undertake today by some hon. Members and their more outrageous amendments.

It is also a curious twist that a Bill that includes the extension of the franchise should be coupled with an attempt to limit the significance of the exercise of that franchise. By requiring candidates for elected office to sign a declaration, we are placing barriers in the way of free elections. The paradox is that those who advocate violence will sign the declaration and find a way around it. Those whose attitude towards violence has at best been ambiguous will sign it and cover themselves with self-righteousness while some of those whose conduct has been irreproachable will refuse to demean themselves by signing the declaration. To sign is an implicit acceptance by a candidate that there is a possibility of him or her supporting violence. The Bill is a calculated insult to the vast majority of public representatives and electors in Northern Ireland.

The key clauses—clauses 6 and 7—are completely unacceptable. Clause 6, which deals with breaches of the declaration, is appalling and has failed completely to give a genuine definition of what constitutes a breach of the declaration.

Mr. Ashdown rose——

Mr. McNamara: I am not giving way.

Mr. Ashdown: It is on the point that the hon. Gentleman has just made. I am fascinated by his logic.

Mr. McNamara: The right hon. Member must continue to be fascinated. Time is going on and I will not give way.

Not only have the Government resisted all attempts to provide a strict definition, but they openly admit that they wish the courts to do the work that they should have done in drafting the Bill. Then they have the gall to describe the Bill as a carefully considered measure. All they have done is to make the Northern Ireland judiciary the arbiter of acceptable political behaviour in Northern Ireland, thus replacing the electorate with the judiciary, and to make the prospect of sectarian litigation more inviting, as well as politicising the judiciary. These are the proposals of a Government whose Ministers claim to wish to promote the possibility of greater self-government for the Province.

As for clause 7, we have already rehearsed the arguments. My hon. Friend the Member for Leicester, South (Mr. Marshall) eloquently demolished the clause when proposing our amendment. I only regret that the Government have not accepted responsibility for the enforcement of their own legislation. As my hon. Friend said, it will allow sectarian litigation to increase turmoil in council chambers and will probably, as hon. Members from Northern Ireland have suggested, lead to lives being placed at risk. It is not, as the Under-Secretary said, the witnesses or the clerks of the council who will be at risk; the person who will be fingered is the person who initiates the action.

I do not agree with all the suggestions made by hon. Members from Northern Ireland, but I find it strange that the Government's intention to promote the cause of more responsive government in Northern Ireland is associated with a talent for creating consensus of opposition, however diverse its strands, from all sides in Northern Ireland.

I note that the Government's contempt for the people of Northern Ireland extends to statutory bodies, such as the Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights, whose views on the Bill have been ignored. It had little time to express its views to the Secretary of State until after the Committee stage.

I do not wish to waste more of the time of the House than has already been taken up by this unnecessary, divisive and destructive Bill. It is sad that when there are so few opportunities to debate Northern Ireland in the House we should find ourselves dealing far too often with ill-considered measures. The Government are not setting the political agenda, as they would have us believe. They are simply dancing to the tune of the open supporters of the paramilitaries. They are not even prepared to enforce their own legislation. That is the mark of people who are neither convinced of nor sincere in their purpose.

Because we do not believe in such a futile measure and because we regret very much the lack of conviction of the Government in their own measure, we shall divide on Third Reading.

11.28 pm

Mr. Clifford Forsythe: Usually when a Member has worked on a Bill in Committee and in the House he is glad when it completes its stages in the Chamber even though he may not agree with all its provisions, but I must say that I am very sorry that we have reached the end of the road on this measure. The Bill has a stance. It will be completely ineffective. Unfortunately, the work of hon. Members in putting the Bill through the House will be wasted.

We on these Benches were anxious to support the Bill. We felt that with a little bit of alteration, and a couple of amendments, the Bill could be made effective. Unfortunately, there has been no movement whatsoever. Every suggestion that has been put to the Government has been rejected. All the arguments about intimidation could have been considerably lessened by making the declaration a criminal offence. If the Minister had worried about a criminal offence, it would have made the position slightly different. I know that the Secretary of State does not agree with that; indeed, he shakes his head.

While I do not agree that right hon. and hon. Members are too far from the situation—if one is a little further from a situation one might look at it differently—they must agree that those of us who come from Northern Ireland, who are close to the people, may have a different view which perhaps should be listened to occasionally.

Members of Parliament will be able to take action against breaches of the declaration as we all live in local government areas. The Government are placing one side of the council chamber against the other. I agree with the hon. Member for Leicester, South (Mr. Marshall) that this is a political Bill in that one political party in the council will be set against another. There is no doubt about that.

We must put it on record that the Bill is ineffective. It will be proved to be so in a few years or less, when those who brought in the legislation will probably be sitting on the same Benches and answering the same questions. We should think about that.

I do not wish to detain the House longer, so I will end by describing in this way what will happen after May. It will be seconds out, round one.

11.34 pm

Mr. McGrady: Like the hon. Member for Antrim, South (Mr. Forsythe) I have gone through all the stages of the Bill from studying the White Paper to Third Reading. It is patently obvious, although this is portrayed erroneously by the Government, that the Bill will not reduce or impinge on terrorism in Northern Ireland in any way, in fact, given the workings of the political wings of the paramilitary groups, the Bill will be a weapon in their hands and be to their advantage.

The only consequence of the Bill will be an exceedingly disadvantaged local government scenario, because we shall have party political confrontation in the council chambers. And, as has been said often enough tonight, the confrontation will not simply be with Sinn Fein; it will be right across the political parties, because like everyone else, they will take advantage of the Bill. A decision about the declaration will be made not on the basis of whether they want to take a seat but on the basis of the long-term political advantage of the paramilitaries. That is how they will decide whether to make such a declaration. Thus the decision will be a totally political one, and I must agree with the hon. Member for Antrim, South that this is a political Bill.

[Mr. McGrady]

It means, of course, that under the Bill we will have the strange anomaly of a civil offence which can be perpetrated only by elected councillors. The situation will be unique, because they will be the only people capable of committing a civil offence under this legislation. One is forced to ask why a spoken or written word in support of terrorism or violence should not be an offence for every member of the community, rather than merely selectively, as under the Bill, for elected councillors. Surely, what is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander.

There is another dramatic consequence that we shall see very shortly. When it becomes apparant to the Northern Ireland community that there will be additional confrontation in the council chambers—as there will be, no doubt about it—the people will prejudge that situation and the calibre of candidates offering themselves for election in May of this year will be very much diminished, to the detriment of local government. Local government in Northern Ireland has many flaws and faults, and I have been forced to criticise them, but at least one should not act in such a way as to diminish the possibility of some improvement.

I know that it is not proper to discuss a specific aspect of a Bill on Third Reading and most of the clauses were dealt with in general debate tonight, but the exception was the very essence of the Bill—the character of the offence itself.

I asked the Minister responsible for piloting the Bill through Committee what he meant by the phrase, apart from the written and the spoken word, "and any other behaviour". I found his reply rather naive. I described a situation which is quite common in council chambers where a negative position could quite clearly be an expression of support for violence. I gave examples on Report, and hon. Members who wish to know what I mean by that can refer to my speech. A negative attitude to a course of action can be a clear indication of support for violence. The Minister's reply was that the phrase "other behaviour"

"does not cover and is not intended to cover doing nothing. The phrase 'other behaviour' would cover, for example, the wearing of insignia or paramilitary dress."—[Official Report, Standing Committee A, 20 December 1988; c. 57.]

Every second citizen in Northern Ireland has paramilitary dress or, if not, certainly has insignia.

The unqualified phrase "other behaviour" will be an enormous legal quagmire. We will thus have a bad law and the imprecision of that law will be passed on to the courts for judgment, and yet in no way will we have affected the presence of supporters of terrorism in the council chambers. All that will happen is that they will use the Act and turn it back on those of us who are totally and implacably opposed to violence. For that reason, my party has opposed the principle of the Bill from the word go. Having sat through all the arguments in Committee and in the House I have not heard one good reason to change our mind. The Bill will be applied to local government in Northern Ireland and it will be debilitating. It will be a great cause of aggravation in our council chambers.

11.40 pm

Mr. Ashdown: I acknowledge immediately that the Bill raises difficult judgments. The history of oaths and declarations in Irish politics is not a happy one. Those of us who are aware of what has taken place know that. We are also aware that the Bill can be represented as some infringement of the civil liberties of those who go through the electoral process. If it were not so a similar declaration would be made in Britain. Those who are concerned, as I am, about civil liberties, must be worried about that. Ultimately, we have to make a judgment on individual civil liberties and what is appropriate to give the largest liberty to the greatest number of people in difficult circumstances. The key liberty is the liberty to survive without the threat of violence as part of everyday life and politics. As hon. Members who represent Irish constituencies have said, we are miserably far from that condition in Northern Ireland today.

Throughout the various stages of the Bill I have said that it has to be judged on the answer to a single question. Will it, in however small a measure, assist the process of democracy, and prevent, or at least inhibit, violence in the everyday life of Northern Ireland, especially in its politics? It is on that single judgment that one must come to a conclusion.

I have heard it said by hon. Members, including the hon. Member for South Down (Mr. McGrady), that this is a political Bill. Of course it is. It is about politics and it is introduced according to a political judgment. However, if by that hon. Members mean that it is a politically partial Bill, I have to disagree with them.

I hesitate to take a different view from hon. Members who represent Northern Ireland constituencies. I suspect that there is broad agreement amongst them and the Labour party. I know the difficulties under which they have to labour and the courage that they have to show to practice the ordinary process of democracy in Northern Ireland on a day-to-day basis. Those of us who represent English, Scottish or Welsh constituencies and who are not involved in Northern Ireland, have no idea of the extent to which that must disrupt their daily lives, threaten their families and so on. Therefore, one does not lightly take a different view from them. However, I have to take that different view as a matter of judgment.

Let me place on record that, although I suspect that when we divide every hon. Member representing an Irish constituency will oppose the Government, I would not wish it to be known that that is the overwhelming and unanimous view of the people of Northern Ireland. There are many who would support the legislation. One political party in Northern Ireland—the one for which I have the most respect; the Alliance party—is on record as having stated that it supports the legislation.

Mr. McGrady: On a point of information, the leader of the Alliance party, Dr. John Alderdice, said in my presence the other day—it was witnessed by the hon. Member for Fermanagh and South Tyrone (Mr. Maginnis)—that his party was totally opposed to the Bill.

Mr. Ashdown: The hon. Gentleman will recognise that that is simply hearsay. I spoke with the leader of the Alliance party in Northern Ireland very recently, including when I was on a visit to Northern Ireland only a matter of a month ago, and he did not express that view to me, and as far as I know he has not changed his view. I notice, and perhaps it should be placed on record, that the Secretary of State, who presumably has spoken to that gentleman as well, takes the same view as myself. The hon. Gentleman has raised an important matter and I shall consider it. I take his comments seriously, but he will understand if I do not accept them at face value, because they are entirely contrary to the information which I have.

I think that those hon. Members who have spoken with considerable passion and a good deal of argument on their side against the Bill today, have nevertheless come to a wrong conclusion. I say that, albeit with some diffidence, because I believe they may have underestimated the effect which making a declaration of this sort will have in displaying in a most powerful manner the duplicity of those who in a matter of weeks, or months, or perhaps even years, will obviously breach it. I accept that there are people in Northern Ireland who are capable of acting so cynically. But I believe that the showing of that duplicity in such a powerful form will have an effect on the democratic process in Northern Ireland. Maybe that is a wrong judgment, but it is a judgment that I have to make.

I would go further and say that those hon. Gentlemen from Northern Irish constituencies who have spoken against this Bill may well in the long run have overestimated the propaganda uses to which this could be put by the people of violence. It may well be that in a few months from the passing of this Bill there will indeed be the circumstances described by hon. Gentlemen, but at the end of the day the propaganda effect of that, in my judgment, will wear out and the long-term beneficial results which this Bill could bring may well begin to be seen.

To return where I started, the single judgment that we have to make in deciding how to vote on a difficult Bill on these difficult issues is whether it will assist the process of democracy and inhibit the process of violence in Northern Ireland. My judgment is that it will. Let that statement not be misunderstood in any way. I do not believe that this legislation by itself will be a cure-all or that by itself it wil solve all the problems. It is one small piece in an armoury we must carefully and patiently assemble that willl encourage the democratic process and inhibit the process of violence. If hon. Members believe that this Bill, despite whatever practical drawbacks it may have—I have expressed my views about one or two of those—adds in however small a measure to that armoury, they should support it tonight.

That is my judgment and this is why I and my party will support the Bill.

11.28 pm

Rev. William McCrea: Having listened to the preceding speeches, I think it is right to say that many hon. Members would like to support this measure. Indeed, as I come from a council that has a number of Sinn Fein representatives of murderers in the council chamber, I should like to be able to give a clear assent to the Bill. The Secretary of State has made his considered judgment, the Minister concerned has made his, and one must respect their right to make those judgments. But other hon. Members have considered the Bill carefully, hoping for a measure that would be effective in silencing terrorists. In our judgment, it does not meet the requirement which we longed to have met by a Bill that could have been brought before the House. In the days to come we shall see the proof. We shall see whether the judgment of the Secretary of State and his Ministers is right or whether the judgment of hon. Members who think that the Bill does not go far enough is proved correct. There is an old saying that the proof of the pie is in the eating.

I listened carefully to the speech of the right hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Ashdown). My colleagues and I did not emphasise the propaganda use that Sinn Fein, the IRA or the spokesmen for terror may make of the Bill. In many ways I do not concern myself about what some of the representatives of murderers will say. They have said all that they can about Northern Ireland Members, so that that aspect is not my main concern. The genuine concern of Unionist Members is about the danger to the lives of those who will take action against the men of violence and their spokesmen. I hope that the Minister will accept the genuineness of that concern.

Even if the Government do not agree with us and do not accept our summary of the debate and the Bill, they must accept that the danger to those who will take action must weigh heavily on the minds of elected representatives. In the border constituencies the people in the front line will be those who finger councillors and take them to court. That is a fact of life. It is sad that the Government did not see fit to take that burden away from people who have suffered enough and who are under enough pressure.

It would have been more honourable for the Government to bring in a proper Bill and see it through to the ultimate conclusion. They have not done so and that is the main reason why I and my hon. Friends cannot support the Bill. Its major weakness is that it will endanger life, especially the lives of those in border areas. I know that because I represent a border constituency. I hope that the Secretary of State and the Under-Secretary of State will accept that that weighs heavily on my mind. The people in those areas are my colleagues and it is right for me to put that on the record. We need a measure that will effectively remove from the councils the people who speak for terrorism, and the Government had an opportunity to do that. I do not say that the Minister decided to rub everyone's nose in the dirt or that he has gone out of his way to reject everything that we have said.

The Bill will not do what the Government say it is intended to do and it will cause great danger to members of district councils who finger offending councillors. I have a great deal of will in my heart, because as much as any other hon. Member I want action to be taken against the spokesmen for terror, but I and my colleagues cannot give to the Bill the support that we long to give to an effective measure.

11.54 pm

Mr. William Ross (Londonderry, East): On Report, I said that nothing is worse than a law that does not fulfil its stated objective. We have reached almost the end of the proceedings, and I believe that the Bill still does not fulfil its stated objective. That failure is already widely recognised among Unionist councillors, and as it becomes even more widely known in Northern Ireland, other councillors—who, having fought a savage battle for many years, are already weary—will find it increasingly difficult to take up the cudgels again.

The presence of Sinn Fein on Northern Ireland councils has created a serious situation, and it makes for one of the most frustrating experiences that any elected representative could confront, with consultations that mean nothing and instances of councillors being overruled time and again. That is because the council system has been beheaded as a result of direct rule, with decisions being taken by the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland and his Ministers—or, more likely, by the civil servants who advise them—without that close-to-the-people, on-the-ground knowledge that is needed to arrive at sensible decisions affecting local government. Northern Ireland councillors are, in the main, good people who have served since 1973, but they are utterly weary of the way that they have been treated. The Bill does nothing to ease their burden, but tends to increase it.

[Mr. William Ross]

Sinn Fein has already said that it will sign the declaration, and I am sure that it will do so by way of practising duplicity—as was said by the right hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Ashdown). However, the right hon. Gentleman and other right hon. and hon. Members may not appreciate that such duplicity will be seen by Sinn Fein's supporters as cleverness—to be commended rather than condemned. That is the mentality of the people with whom we are dealing. If the Secretary of State and his Ministers do not understand that, they can know nothing of the problems of the Province they govern.

The lack of understanding by the Northern Ireland Office that the Bill reveals is widespread in the House. However, such lack of understanding may have diminished among those right hon. and hon. Members who listened to today's debates. Sadly, not nearly enough were present. I wish that there had been more.

If the Government had made a real effort, the result would have been an oath or declaration that the IRA could not have signed. My hon. Friends indicated a willingness to meet our responsibilities, and invited Ministers to do likewise—but that offer did not receive their support. That will be viewed in Northern Ireland in a way that is not complimentary to Ministers. The Government should have seriously considered the good results that would have flowed from abolishing proportional representation, but it appears that that never crossed their minds. It would make it more difficult for Sinn Fein councillors to be elected. The Government could simply have banned Sinn Fein.

The Government could have accepted—albeit it late in the day—my suggestion that all council proceedings be recorded. The Minister did not turn a blind eye to that proposal. Perhaps he—like myself—thought of it a little too late. If so, no doubt an opportunity will be taken in another place to remedy matters.

The hon. Member for Kingston upon Hull, North (Mr. McNamara) and I both recognise the distinction to be drawn between giving evidence and initiating proceedings. The hon. Gentleman and I clearly understand that there is a vast difference between the two, but the Government do not. If proceedings are begun against the promoters of murder and supporters of violence by someone other than councillors, the councillors and others who give evidence will be in a more secure position than if they have to stand up and say, "Yes, he is the fellow who said this. I heard him say it. Here are the words that he uttered." To do that would be to invite a death sentence.

The Bill was conceived some three and a half years ago. After its conception, it did not develop very much; it went into suspended animation for many months. Eventually, however—as the hon. Member for South Down (Mr. McGrady) mentioned—something happened. As so often before, the Government had to be seen to do something, no matter what, to give the impression that useful action was being taken. Thus the Bill finally resumed its development and was brought forth. What a poor, miserable mouse it has proved to be. It certainly does not measure up to the requests of law-abiding councillors.

The Minister will remember that he refused to give way to me when we were discussing the meaning of the words "repudiate" and "repudiation". I should like to correct him now. I have here a copy of the Oxford English Dictionary, and even if the Minister is not prepared to accept what it says, I believe that the rest of the House will be. I do not wish to detain the House for long; the definition takes up a column and a half. But it includes the following:

"Of a woman: Rejected or put away by her husband; divorced;"

That is permanent. It goes on

"To divorce, reject".

That is also permanent. Next we have

"To cast off, disown (a person or thing) . . .

To reject (opinions, conduct, etc. with condemnation or abhorrence."

Need I go on? The entire meaning of the word as set out here, contradicting what was insinuated by the Minister, is that repudiation is permanent. Using verbal gymnastics unbelievable except to those who listened, the Minister tried to tell the House that repudiation was of what had gone past and could, as it were, be turned on its head in the next instant. That is not the meaning that I find in the dictionary. If the Minister cares to argue about meaning and context, he should be prepared to take the book in his hand and consider very carefully what it says before considering his own words and the case that he tried to put to the House.

In the light of what is in the dictionary, the Minister's words do not stand. In the light of a judgment in which words were supposed to be accepted on their plain everyday meaning, I plead that the Minister has failed to make his case; and in failing to make his case he indicates to any sensible, sane person that the Government's case is wrong. It will not stand the test of time.

For that reason I invite the Minister, the hon. Member for Staffordshire, South-East (Mr. Lightbown) and indeed the Secretary of State and the Prime Minister to wait until May 1990—a year after the next local government elections—and then to come back and read what they have said tonight. I invite them to consider what they have allowed to pass through the House, in the light of 12 months' experience, and then do the decent thing and resign. By that time they will be convicted by their own words of the wrong that they have done, and the failures that they have been in Northern Ireland.

The Secretary of State did one good thing tonight: he said that it was nice to have a debate on Northern Ireland. If he meant that genuinely, he can help matters along by ensuring that every change in the law in Northern Ireland goes through this procedure, so that the understanding of his right hon. and hon. Friends will be increased. We have a faint hope that even his understanding will be improved.

12.4 am

Rev. Ian Paisley: Surely the Government should have second thoughts about this Bill. All hon. Members in the Chamber, with their diverse political opinions and platforms, are totally opposed to it. Surely the Government should think again when they see the opposition of elected representatives in this House to the Bill. Of course my views and opposition are different from those of the hon. Member for South Down (Mr. McGrady). Nevertheless, there is a consensus that the Bill is not the way to proceed.

I regret that the leader of the Liberals is not in the Chamber at the moment. He castigated me at the beginning of the debate and said that I had made misrepresentations about the views of the Alliance party. He accused me of being guilty of misleading Parliament and of putting forward falsehoods about that party.

I live in east Belfast. I know the leader of the Alliance party by repute and I have read what he has said. Tonight evidence was given that that gentleman said, in front of witnesses, that he was opposed to the Bill. The Alliance party is on record as stating that it did not want the onus to be placed on ordinary individuals. It stated that it should be placed on the Law Officers in keeping with an amendment moved tonight by the official Opposition with regard to the Attorney-General, or even in keeping with the view put forward by the leader of the Liberals. The Alliance party evidently speaks with two voices on this matter. It has told the leader of the Liberals one thing and the people of Northern Ireland something completely different.

The Alliance party does not have representatives in this House. The leader of the Liberals told us that there was a widely held view in Northern Ireland in favour of the Bill. Where is that support? It cannot be found among the elected representatives in this House.

The Government should govern, and tonight they are not doing that. When there are deaths, murder, mayhem and bombing in Northern Ireland, the Secretary of State comes to the Dispatch Box and pleads with the people of Northern Ireland to come together and stop the bombing and killings. However, the ordinary people of Northern Ireland can do nothing about that. As the Secretary of State spoke tonight, he put the onus back on the ordinary people. If the Bill does not work, the people of Northern Ireland will be blamed.

Yes, the elected representatives of the people of Northern Ireland came together tonight, but the Government did not listen to them. The Secretary of State had the opportunity tonight to stand in the front line and take action by accepting an amendment. However, the Minister said that it was not a matter for the Secretary of State. Others were prepared to go on the front line, but that was not acceptable to the Government. The first person to finger a member of Sinn Fein, the first person to succeed in bringing an action against Sinn Fein, will have written his own obituary. Time will tell. It is all right for the Secretary of State to comment, but that is the reality. Members of Sinn Fein will use the measure when it suits them and when they want to bring about a crisis in a council area. The person who is responsible, seeks to do what is right and to take his responsibilities seriously will suffer, or his wife and family will suffer.

The Achilles' heel of every politician in Northern Ireland is not himself. Those in public life in Northern Ireland have made a decision and are prepared to carry the burden. But the weakness of every man is his wife and his children. That is the worry of politicians in Northern Ireland. I am not worried about myself; I and my colleagues in the House who represent Northern Ireland are worried about our families. They are our Achilles' heel, because at any moment they can be shot down in the street. Gun law is the order of the day in Northern Ireland. Those are the facts and we need to face them.

As I told the House, last night I sat with a young woman and her little child. What can one say to a woman whose husband, aged 26, goes out in the morning and is brought back in a box in the evening? That is the situation we face in Northern Ireland. This legislation, instead of bringing us nearer to a solution is drawing us further away from it.

12.11 am

Mr. Harry Barnes (Derbyshire, North-East): I shall try to be brief, although that is often more easily said than done. I believe that I shall be the last Back Bench Member to speak in the debate, and I wish to make a point that does not directly relate to the main arguments that have been raised during the debate. I wish to speak not so much for the hon. Members who are here, but for the record, for those who are not present tonight.

It is terribly disappointing for hon. Members representing Northern Ireland to speak to a House in which 190 hon. Members voted earlier this evening and now has more than 500 hon. Members absent. Whichever party they represent, they cannot all have had legitimate reasons not to be here.

We are considering a Bill to "Amend the law relating to the franchise at elections to district councils in Northern Ireland, to make provision in relation to a declaration".

That is not a minor item about democracy. If hon. Members are not concerned enough to attend debates dealing with items of local government electoral systems, that seems to me to be disturbing, and it applies to both sides of the House. I realise that many will have legitimate reasons for not being here, but others, from both sides of the House, should realise that, as Parliamentarians they should be involved in these proceedings.

Surely, within a parliamentary democracy, the first thing that we should be concerned about is the electoral system. Democracy does not depend just on electoral systems, it depends on many other arrangements such as petitioning rights, civil liberties and how organisations are supposed to present their views through pressure group activities. All those factors seem to be under attack. The Government should reflect that the climate of the House produces the feeling that items will be steamrollered. Many hon. Members believe that it is useless to involve themselves in important and significant debates such as this. This should be a major parliamentary occasion in which we discuss democracy. Some hon. Members have carried the weight of the debate and should be congratulated on their contributions. Others, despite the line that the Whips have taken, have decided that they should not be involved.

Declarations are being introduced that are democratically dangerous. Northern Ireland needs not qualifications and restrictions on democracy but an extension of it, and improved social and economic conditions.

12.16 am

Mr. Needham: We have exhaustively and exhaustingly covered all aspects of the Bill. Having listened, I hope attentively, to the hon. Member for Kingston upon Hull, North (Mr. McNamara) and his hon. Friends—who are not present in significant numbers—I find their arguments as weak as at the end of the debate as I did at the beginning.

The Opposition have opposed all the recent measures that the Government have introduced to limit the hideous effects of terrorism with various degrees of antagonism or apathy and sometimes both.

The hon. Member for Kingston upon Hull, North accused the Bill of being draconian, of limiting freedom of expression, of being a step to totalitarianism and of undermining democratic politics. Yet on Second Reading he abstained and said that there were two small clauses to which he could not object.

In Committee, the Opposition proposed a series of contradictory amendments. Some, such as substituting "crimes of violence" for acts of "violence for political ends", clearly broadened the scope of the Bill in a way that was completely unacceptable to the Government, and which could have been criticised as unjustifiable restrictions of freedom of expression.

Another amendment proposed—it was moved again tonight—that the Attorney-General should be introduced into the proceedings. That was an astonishing development from the Labour party, given its recent attacks on the Attorney-General. It was more astonishing in the light of its apparent desire to appeal to Nationalist sentiment; no wonder the hon. Member for South Down (Mr. McGrady) sat on his hands when that suggestion was put to the vote.

Has the hon. Member for Kingston upon Hull, North forgotten the history of the Attorney-General in Irish affairs? In 1844, Daniel O'Connell was prosecuted for conspiracy. Who prosecuted him? The Attorney-General. In 1848, Smith O'Brien was sentenced to death, although he was later reprieved. Who prosecuted him? The Attorney-General. The role of the Attorney-General in the affairs of Northern Ireland has led to the creation of martyrs and greater divisions in the island of Ireland.

Other Opposition amendments have tried——

Mr. Deputy Speaker (Sir Paul Dean): Order. I am sorry to interrupt the Minister, but I must apply the rules equally. We cannot again go over the Committee stage of the Bill; we must deal with the Bill's provisions.

Mr. Needham: I understand, Mr. Deputy Speaker, and I am sure that the House will not want me to weary it with the details of the earlier stages of the Bill.

I have found the views expressed by Opposition Members extraordinary. The remarks of the hon. Member for Kingston upon Hull, North reminded me of a few lines from Alice in Wonderland, which say:

"'You are old, Father"
Kevin
"the young man said,
'And your hair has become very white;
And yet you incessantly stand on your head—
Do you think at your age it is right?'
'In my youth,' Father"
Kevin
"replied to his son,
'I feared it might injure the brain;
But, now that I'm perfectly sure I have none,
Why I do it again and again'."

Unionist Members' arguments also appear to have been muddled. If they want Sinn Fein banned—I understand the arguments for that—they are entitled to ask for proscription, but even if they were to have proscription, we would still require the Bill. If, however, they want a Bill to stop terrorism being advocated or violence supported in councils, they must explain to the House and to the people of Northern Ireland how using the Attorney-General and the Director of Public Prosecutions in making a breach of the declaration a crime will work more effectively than the Government's proposals. They have clearly failed to do that.

I do not wish to go back through the arguments about repudiation, but a court can consider evidence on whether a councillor is supporting violence, but it cannot consider establishing whether a person has repudiated his vow. Many Unionist Members' arguments would not have made the Bill more effective—they would have made it less effective. The hon. Member for Mid-Ulster (Rev. William McCrea) rightly mentioned intimidation. I agree that it must be tackled, but it would happen to witnesses and applicants, and it would have to be tackled whenever any action is brought in the court.

The point of the Bill is that we want candidates to sign the declaration and, when they are elected, to abide by it. It is not that we want an endless series of cases on the issue.

As has been mentioned, the Bill has been attacked by the Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights. The commission believes, as others do, that there is a serious problem in local government, and I welcome that belief. The commission is concerned that the declaration that we are proposing will not work and that, in some way, it will be counterproductive. It believes that the problem should be tackled by creating a new offence of supporting or condoning the use of violence for political ends, which offence could be committed by anyone. In other words, the commission's proposals would limit the freedom of speech of those who have chosen not to accept elected office. The commission's drastic proposal to invoke the criminal law in respect not merely of councillors and assembly members but of any citizen is not justified. I am surprised that the SACHR should advocate the introduction of new criminal legislation which undermines freedom of expression in a way that the Government's proposal does not. I am surprised to note that the Opposition seem to agree with that line.

This week, I was explaining the Bill to a Democratic state senator from Massachusetts. He expresaed surprise that the Bill was being opposed. Hon. Members from Northern Ireland will accept that, in a recent poll, 84 per cent. of the people of Northern Ireland supported the concepts behind the Bill, for all sorts of reasons, but the elected Members of Parliament from Northern Ireland have opposed it. That senator asked me, "How can any match be started unless the teams are made to leave their knives by the touchline?"

The Bill says to the advocate of violence, "Thus far and no further. Advocate your violent views, if you must, in your attempts to gain a vote, but we, the vast majority, respect honour and will uphold the rules of political democracy." The men of violence have a choice—shut up or get out. The Bill may be a small step for democracy, but it is a further step from the abyss, and I commend it to the House.

Question put, That the Bill be now read the Third time:
The House divided: Ayes 98, Noes 21.

Division No. 58] [12.23 am

AYES

Alexander, Richard
Amess, David
Amos, Alan
Arbuthnot, James
Arnold, Jacques (Gravesham)
Arnold, Tom (Hazel Grove)
Ashby, David
Atkinson, David
Bennett, Nicholas (Pembroke)
Boswell, Tim
Bowis, John
Brandon-Bravo, Martin
Bright, Graham
Brown, Michael (Brigg & Cl't's)
Burt, Alistair
Carrington, Matthew
Carttiss, Michael
Chapman, Sydney
Chope, Christopher
Conway, Derek
Coombs, Anthony (Wyre F'rest)
Coombs, Simon (Swindon)
Cran, James
Currie, Mrs Edwina
Davies, Q. (Stamf'd & Spald'g)
Davis, David (Boothferry)
Day, Stephen
Devlin, Tim
Dorrell, Stephen
Dover, Den
Durant, Tony
Fallon, Michael
Fenner, Dame Peggy
Fishburn, John Dudley
Forth, Eric
Franks, Cecil
Gale, Roger
Garel-Jones, Tristan
Gill, Christopher
Greenway, John (Ryedale)
Gregory, Conal
Griffiths, Peter (Portsmouth N)
Ground, Patrick
Gummer, Rt Hon John Selwyn
Hamilton, Neil (Tatton)
Hanley, Jeremy
Heathcoat-Amory, David
Holt, Richard
Howarth, Alan (Strat'd-on-A)
Howarth, G. (Cannock & B'wd)
Hughes, Robert G. (Harrow W)
Hunt, David (Wirral W)
Hunt, John (Ravensbourne)
Hunter, Andrew
Irvine, Michael
Jack, Michael
Janman, Tim
King, Rt Hon Tom (Bridgwater)
Knapman, Roger
Knowles, Michael
Lang, Ian
Lawrence, Ivan
Lightbown, David
Lloyd, Peter (Fareham)
Lord, Michael
Lyell, Sir Nicholas
Maclean, David
Mans, Keith
Martin, David (Portsmouth S)
Maxwell-Hyslop, Robin
Morrison, Sir Charles
Needham, Richard
Norris, Steve
Porter, David (Waveney)
Roe, Mrs Marion
Sayeed, Jonathan
Shaw, David (Dover)
Shaw, Sir Michael (Scarb')
Shepherd, Colin (Hereford)
Smith, Tim (Beaconsfield)
Spicer, Sir Jim (Dorset W)
Stern, Michael
Stevens, Lewis
Stradling Thomas, Sir John
Summerson, Hugo
Thompson, Patrick (Norwich N)
Thorne, Neil
Thurnham, Peter
Tracey, Richard
Twinn, Dr Ian
Viggers, Peter
Waddington, Rt Hon David
Waller, Gary
Watts, John
Wells, Bowen
Wheeler, John
Widdecombe, Ann
Wood, Timothy

Tellers for the Ayes:
Mr. John Taylor and
Mr. Tom Sackville.

NOES

Barnes, Harry (Derbyshire NE)
Beggs, Roy
Cook, Frank (Stockton N)
Cryer, Bob
Forsythe, Clifford (Antrim S)
Kilfedder, James
McCrea, Rev William
McCusker, Harold
McGrady, Eddie
McKay, Allen (Barnsley West)
McNamara, Kevin
Maginnis, Ken
Mallon, Seamus
Molyneaux, Rt Hon James
Paisley, Rev Ian
Pike, Peter L.
Robinson, Peter (Belfast E)
Ross, William (Londonderry E)
Skinner, Dennis
Smyth, Rev Martin (Belfast S)
Walker, A. Cecil (Belfast N)

Tellers for the Noes:
Mr. Frank Haynes and
Mr. Jimmy Dunnachie.

Question accordingly agreed to.
Bill read the Third time, and passed.

STATUTORY INSTRUMENTS, &c.

Electricity

Motion made, and Question put forthwith pursuant to Standing Order No. 101(5) (Standing Committees on Statutory Instruments, &c.).

That the draft Electricity and Pipe-line Works (Assessment of Environmental Effects) Regulations 1988, which were laid before this House on 29th July 1988, in the last Session of Parliament, be approved—[Mr. Maclean.]

Question agreed to.

Harbours, Docks, Piers and Ferries

Motion made, and Question put forthwith pursuant to Standing Order No. 101(5) (Standing Committees on Statutory Instruments, &c.).

That the draft Harbour Works (Assessment of Environmental Effects) (No. 2) Regulations 1988, which were laid before this House on 9th December, be approved.—[Mr. Maclean.]

Question agreed to.

Industrial Development (Northern Ireland)

Motion made, and Question proposed, That this House do now adjourn.—[Mr. Maclean.]

12.34 am

Mr. Michael Brown (Brigg and Cleethorpes): We have had a long debate on matters relating to Northern Ireland and it is appropriate that my Adjournment debate, which I am delighted to have the opportunity of initiating, should also be about Northern Ireland. I wish to talk about a better position—the economy and the work of the Northern Ireland Industrial Development Board and the Local Enterprise Development Unit. Those two organisations have done a great deal to benefit the economy.

The public image, to some extent reinforced in the earlier debate, is that there is much strife and division in Northern Ireland, overshadowed by the phenomenon of terrorism. But there is another Northern Ireland which I have had the opportunity of getting to know over the years in my capacity first as secretary of the Conservative parliamentary Northern Ireland committee and subsequently as vice-chairman of that committee. That Northern Ireland is shown in the work of the employers' organisations and of industry which do such a great job of keeping the economy going in the face of the difficulties of strife, division and terrorism. There is a good news story to tell. Hon. Members who represent Northern Ireland constituencies will appreciate that there is another side to Northern Ireland to which I should like to draw attention.

The report and accounts of the Industrial Development Board for the year 1987-88 show the tremendous effort put in by that organisation and by the Northern Ireland Office to regenerate the economy. In his statement in the report the chairman says that in the last year three major milestones were passed in the work of the board since it was established in 1982. In the year to 31 March last the number of new jobs promoted rose to more than 20,000, the total leveraged investment of the board in industry surpassed £1 billion, and the number of factories sold to the private sector exceeded 200.

These achievements have provided genuine satisfaction to the Industrial Development Board, but the real congratulations deservedly go to Northern Ireland industry as a whole. The graph of jobs promotion has continued upward for the third year running, with about 5,200 jobs having been promoted. It was the best ever job promotion total, with £302 million worth of investment secured in 115 projects. In creating dynamism in the economy for this expansion in investment confidence has been vital.

That confidence has showed itself in two recent announcements by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland. The first was the announcement by my right hon. Friend and Daewoo, an electronics company which is part of a £15 billion group. It is to set up a video cassette recorder factory which will create more than 500 jobs in two years. That announcement was made about two and a half months ago. It is expected that a 100,000 sq ft purpose-built factory will be erected on a 12-acre site at the Rathenraw industrial estate at Antrim as part of an £18 million investment by Daewoo over the next three years.

It is, I understand, the first Korean investment in Northern Ireland and the third plant that Daewoo Electronics has located outside Korea. Northern Ireland industry, the people of Northern Ireland, the Northern Ireland Office and the Industrial Development Board in particular should be congratulated on the work that they have done to secure this excellent project which will bring considerable employment opportunities to the Province. Production will start in the middle of this year when the new factory has been completed. It will have the capacity to produce 500,000 video recorders a year, which will be sold mostly in the European market.

We have also had the good news about the French company, Montupet. The Secretary of State announced just before Christmas that about 1,000 manufacturing jobs will be created by that company within five years at Dunmurry, near Belfast. My right hon. Friend was delighted to welcome the investment by Montupet, which is a world leader in the production of aluminium components for the car industry. This £90 million investment is the biggest project ever to be secured by the Industrial Development Board and the largest initial investment made by any overseas company in Northern Ireland. This was more good news for jobs in Northern Ireland at the end of 1988, which saw a substantial fall in unemployment. It has been a good year generally for investment by many of Northern Ireland's companies, reinforced by Daewoo and now by Montupet.

I shall be very happy for the hon. Member for Londonderry, East (Mr. Ross) to catch your eye in this brief debate, Mr. Deputy Speaker, but first—this will be relevant for the hon. Gentleman—I want to turn the House's attention briefly to the work of the Local Enterprise Development Unit during the past year.

I have had an opportunity, in my capacity as vice chairman of the Conservative parliamentary Northern Ireland committee, to meet the officers and those in charge of LEDU, over several years, as I have the industrial development board. LEDU had a new chairman last year in Mr. Hadden, who presented his first report recently. There is good news with regard to LEDU, which is responsible principally for the smaller businesses. IDB is responsible for securing the large projects and investments from companies such as those I have outlined.

LEDU does very important work in assisting very small businesses, with perhaps six or 12 employees, to get off the ground. It gets to the small business man. Alongside the great skill and enterprise in Northern Ireland and the initiative that is characteristic of the Province, LEDU's work is very important.

The principal means of assessing the agency's performance is to consider the number of jobs promoted and renewed. The total for 1987-88, the last year for which figures are available, was 4,570, which was an increase from 4,543 in the previous year and well ahead of the expectations of LEDU and the Northern Ireland Office.

It is gratifying to note that each of the past seven years has been a record promotion year against the previous year, and as a result LEDU has more than doubled the annual rate of job promotions and renewals in the period 1981-82 to 1987-88, from 2,060 to 4,570. But there are other aspects of the agency's activities which cannot be measured just in terms of present-day job promotions, but which are helping to boost the job potential for future years by improving the environment in which small businesses can flourish and in encouraging companies to improve their overall efficiency, productivity and profitability.

I know that this is outside the terms of the debate, but I had the opportunity of meeting the chairman of Short Brothers earlier today. Here again is another good news story—they are everywhere we look in Northern Ireland. Those of us who represent constituencies on the mainland sometimes have the ability only to look for the bad news and to look at the security problems, but there is another Northern Ireland where there is initiative, enterprise, expansion and industry and a massive fall in unemployment. Two massive investment opportunities were announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State just before Christmas. So that there is another side to Northern Ireland which I hope the House will take on board.

12.44 am

Mr. William Ross (Londonderry, East): I am grateful to the hon. Member for Brigg and Cleethorpes (Mr. Brown) for allowing me a moment to intervene to raise a matter which comes about because of a development by a young man in my constituency.

The House will be aware that the facsimile machine was a British invention. If, however, one tries to buy a facsimile machine made in the United Kingdom today one will run into certain difficulties: even the ones that the Post Office produce have all their bits and pieces made in Japan. It is a story, which is far too often told, of a British invention which is not brought to fruition and benefit for the people of this country because the development money has been unavailable.

My constituent is grateful for the support that he has already received from the Local Enterprise Development Unit, but he has now run into another snag. For commercial reasons, I do not wish to give any indication of the type of invention that he has come up with, but this man discovered something that I think has great potential. He also discovered that he had to pay quite a lot of money to protect his patent rights. He could not go on developing the thing in secret because one simply cannot keep these things secret; at some point they will become public knowledge and one must protect oneself against that.

Unfortunately, the amount of development that must still be done before the invention can go to market is considerable, and he still needs protection for his patents during that time. Worldwide patents are costly.

The Minister should have a letter in his office from me on this matter, asking him to look at it. I believe that there is a problem that needs to be addressed. It is the need for support for an inventor in patent protection until the thing has developed to the stage, not necessarily of production but of marketability. It is a costly business.

I appreciate all the difficulties. The whole question has more prickles than a cactus. But I ask the Minister most seriously to look at this difficulty which could mean something going overseas when it could otherwise be kept at home, with great benefit to our economy and to the workpeople of Northern Ireland and of the United Kingdom generally.

12.47 am

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (Mr. Peter Viggers): I thank my hon. Friend the Member for Brigg and Cleethorpes (Mr. Brown) for raising the subject of the Northern Ireland Industrial Development Board and the Local Enterprise Development Unit in this short Adjournment debate. My hon. Friend is vice-chairman of the Conservative Back-Bench committee on Northern Ireland and his keen interest is greatly appreciated at all times.

As to the point made by the hon. Member for Londonderry, East (Mr. Ross), he says that he has written to my Department. I shall make a point of pursuing the matter personally and discussing it with the chairman of the Local Enterprise Development Unit, and I will come back to the hon. Gentleman in writing and, if necessary, by way of a meeting.

As my hon. Friend said, few people outside Northern Ireland hear of the industrial success of the Province because, unfortunately, the achievements of business and the steady fall in unemployment are not the stuff of headlines. Understandably, it is violence and the image of violence that impinge on the public perception. The reality of Northern Ireland is quite different. The vast majority of people there live perfectly normal lives. They shop in modern shopping precincts in Belfast and in the towns of the province. They send their children to the first-class schools and, in their leisure time they can enjoy the beautiful countryside and excellent sports facilities.

But the subject of our debate is the work of the industrial development agencies, and here, particularly, there is a real success story to tell.

The Industrial Development Board was established under the Industrial Development (NI) Order 1982 which came into effect on 1 September 1982. The order set up an IDB board of not more than 12 members chosen for their individual experience and expertise. Since the IDB is fully part of a Government Department and therefore accountable to Ministers, the constitutional position of the board is somewhat unusual. The board is described in the 1982 Order as having the role of advising the Department and its Minister and overseeing the work of the IDB staff —"the Executive". Ministers have, however, made it clear that the board has effective decision-making powers across a broad spectrum of its work and these arrangements have been incorporated in guidelines issued by the Department of Economic Development. The IDB has established a reputation for being separate from the mainstream of Government activity and commands, the respect of the business and commercial community. Its independence is important. The chief executive and the board have full executive responsibility for the implementation of the industrial development drive and well-established delegated authority. On a formal basis, the chairman and chief executive of the IDB have direct access to me as the Minister for industrial matters; informally we meet frequently and work closely together.

The IDB is staffed partly by civil servants with experience of industrial development, but it also receives a constant flow of industrial, commercial and financial expertise through secondment or engagements on short-term contract, of those with relevant experience from the private sector.

The IDB's role is not merely one of a provider of financial assistance. Instead, it aims to work with companies to help plan and aid their development. The IDB cannot tell companies how to survive and develop. Companies are much better placed to do that, with their in-depth knowledge of the business environment. The IDB can provide the framework for companies to research the changes, plan for them and to act quickly to take advantage of them. It does that through the various types of assistance and advice packages that it can provide.

[Mr. Peter Viggers]

Mr. Roy Beggs (Antrim, East): We appreciate the compliments that have been paid to Northern Ireland industry and we congratulate the IDB and LEDU on their achievements. Can the Minister assure us that the financial packages that he can help IDB and LEDU to make available in Northern Ireland will continue to be at a level that will attract overseas investment? Can he assure us that Northern Ireland, with its high unemployment, will not discover that it is being disadvantaged by better packages of assistance being offered on the mainland

Mr. Viggers: I can give the hon. Gentleman that assurance without fear. The proud boast of the IDB is that no worthwhile project fails for lack of financial assistance. As the hon. Gentleman knows, with his keen interest in such matters, the IDB has been outstandingly successful in winning inward investment and promoting indigenous investment.

The IDB has been successful in marketing its operations and hon. Members will know of the 40-60 scheme which is aimed at encouraging companies to develop comprehensive marketing plans for their future development. That scheme provides 40 per cent. of costs up to a maximum of £60,000 per year to each eligible company. That scheme is exclusive to Northern Ireland, In 1987-88 the IDB offered over £2 million to companies to assist them with planning or opening up overseas markets.

To ensure that its marketing development services are and remain relevant, the IDB has established a marketing advisory group with representatives from the private sector.

Great Britain remains a major focus for Northern Ireland companies and the IDB has organised a series of major purchasing seminars to introduce Northern Ireland companies to major purchasing organisations in Britain and elsewhere.

Trade missions and fairs help to develop Northern Ireland industry. They help companies to sell in export markets, assess market potential, gauge competitor activity, develop or renew export contacts and offer customer reassurance. The 10 missions and seven fairs organised in 1987 resulted in prospective orders worth up to £44 million.

As more Northern Ireland companies move into the challenging international export world there is even greater need to be competitive. To this end, industry is increasingly recognising the need for technology and to forge closer links between higher education institutions in Northern Ireland and local companies.

In 1987-88 the IDB offered companies research and development assistance amounting to £8 million. This involved total company investment of over £22 million, and since 1983 some 187 companies have received assistance for the development of new products and processes.

However successful the IDB may be in securing new jobs through the development and expansion of companies already operating in Northern Ireland, it is necessary that this effort be supplemented by the winning of further inward investment to provide the employment opportunities which Northern Ireland so desperately needs. Inward investment is an important source of new viable jobs.

Inward investment offers more than just new jobs. It offers new management styles, new technology, new skills, new products and new markets for goods manufactured in Northern Ireland. But, as I said earlier, we have a major image problem, and this becomes particularly obvious and acute in seeking to win further inward investment. It is therefore to the IDB's considerable credit that it succeeds in overcoming initial concerns and persuades businessmen to look beyond the image to the industrial reality. And success IDB certainly does have.

One hundred and fifty-four million pounds, or 51 per cent., of the total investment and 2,486 of the new jobs promoted in 1987-88 arose from foreign-owned companies. That is a welcome indication of the confidence that foreign investors have in Northern Ireland as a sound business location. Confidence breeds confidence and I believe that the fact that 12 first-time inward investment projects came to Northern Ireland in the year ended 31 March 1988 is an indicator that the level of confidence in Northern Ireland as an industrial location is increasing. In the last three months alone, as my hon. Friend said, Daewoo, from Korea, and Montupet, the French car components manufacturer, have established plants in Northern Ireland. Between them those companies will require about 1,600 workers.

Since the IDB was established, in 1982, it has promoted over 20,000 jobs, and the total investment leveraged by IDB assistance has exceeded £1,000 million. Job promotions are up for the third year running. In 1987-88, the best year so far, some 5,300 jobs were promoted, and I am confident that that record will be beaten this year.

I have mentioned the investment of some £18 million through Daewoo and some £90 million through Montupet. More recently we have seen Ford invest a further £50 million in its Northern Ireland plant. Other investments, by du Pont at its Maydown plant near Londonderry have taken that company's total investment in Northern Ireland well above £500 million. These are major investments which are very significant, not only to the Province but nationally.

I turn now from the Industrial Development Board to the second of our development agencies, the Local Enterprise Development Unit. Operationally, LEDU is independent of Government and only in very rare cases does it have to refer decisions to the Department for approval. Its activities are currently overseen by a board of eight part-time directors all drawn from the business community, and hence, like the IDB, its operations benefit from the direct input of those with real industrial and commercial experience.

It is essential for an agency dealing with small businesses to be readily accessible to their clients. LEDU achieves this by operating out of four area offices spread across Northern Ireland. Again, to achieve the commercial input, the work of each area office is overseen by an area panel made up of local business men.

LEDU's field of responsibility covers small firms in the manufacturing, craft and service sectors. Like the IDB, it offers selective financial assistance, but here also considerable emphasis is placed on working with companies to develop their marketing, research and development and competitiveness. LEDU is seen by the local business community as a valuable source of advice, support and, when appropriate, financial assistance.

In 1983, LEDU launched a major initiative designed to encourage local communities to play a more active and positive role in developing small businesses in their areas. Under the initiative known as the local enterprise programme, LEDU provides help towards the setting up of enterprise centres. Each centre offers low-cost small workshop accommodation in addition to providing common support and advisory services.

The provision of basic support services, such as typing and photocopying, is of considerable assistance to small companies starting operations and becoming established. Thirty such centres are planned of which at least one will be in each of the 26 district council areas. To date 20 centres are operational, and between them they provide 1,530 jobs in 430 businesses. These figures are projected to rise to 2,100 jobs and 520 businesses by next year. I am greatly encouraged by the fact that over 300 local business people serve on the boards of these centres on an entirely voluntary basis.

The LEDU has consistently met its job promotion targets. Since its formation in 1971 it has promoted over 35,000 jobs, of which 20,000 were in the last five years. In the last financial year, 1987-88, a total of 4,047 new jobs were promoted, of which about 500 were associated with enterprise grants towards new, very small, often one-man, businesses. Those figures demonstrate the importance of the small firms sector and LEDU's role in promoting it.

I take it as evidence of the high esteem in which the work on developing enterprise in Northern Ireland is held that the European Community small firms task force chose Northern Ireland for its first European enterprise conference. The conference, which was held last autumn in Belfast, gave us the opportunity to share our experience of enterprise in action with more than 400 delegates from all over Europe and beyond. The event undoubtedly enhanced Northern Ireland's reputation as a leader in enterprise development and enabled us to learn from the experience of others. I am sure that all who attended found it a most rewarding and stimulating experience.

The Government are totally committed to the development of the economy of Northern Ireland and have demonstrated that in their funding of the IDB and LEDU. The IDB's funding over six years has exceeded £390 million and £127 million of support is planned for next year alone. That answers the funding point raised in the debate. LEDU's funding over 10 years is £125 million, and £32 million is projected for next year. The important factor is not money but the industrial activity, the profits and, above all, the jobs that flow from this support. I take this opportunity to thank all those at the IDB and LEDU who have worked so hard to promote prosperity and employment. Their success is reflected in the growing confidence of industry in Northern Ireland.

Question put and agreed to.

Adjourned accordingly at two minutes past One o'clock.

House of Commons

Friday 27 January 1989

The House met at half-past Nine o'clock

PRAYERS

[MR. SPEAKER in the Chair]

Orders of the Day

Protection of Privacy Bill

Order for Second Reading read.

9.35 am

Mr. John Browne (Winchester): I beg to move, That the Bill be now read a Second time.

At the outset, I should declare that I have interests in the media industry, both as a director of a satellite television company and as a member of the board of an international newspaper. I should declare, too, a general interest in this Bill, for I, like every man, woman and child, will stand to benefit from the protection that it offers.

I wish to record my sincere thanks to those eminent people who have helped me in drafting the Bill, including the Clerks of the House, the Library staff, my staff, especially Miss White, and other people in the House of Commons. Professional reasons prevent me from mentioning some of their names, but I can mention Mr. Peter Ashman of Justice, Mr. Mark Littman, QC, Mr. Henry King, a senior partner in David Polk and Wardwell in New York, and, of course, my old friend, Mr. Peter Carter-Ruck, that most eminent of solicitors who, together with Mr. Littman, chaired the key Justice report of 1970, to which I shall refer.

I thank, too, my sponsors, who come from both sides of the House, and, on behalf of them, may I tell my hon. Friend the Minister that we are putting before the House the principle of privacy protection. We do not hold that our drafting is perfect. Therefore, should the Government come forward with amendments, we as sponsors will be thoroughly co-operative.

I make a special menion of my hon. Friend the Member for Stafford (Mr. Cash). His knowledge has been of great help to me. Although he is not a barrister, I truly feel that he is my hon. and learned Friend.

In describing the concept of privacy—the right to be let alone—I can do no better than qote from the Justice report of 1970, which states:

"To preserve his sense of identity and the integrity of his personality, to work out his personal relationships and find his way to his own salvation, each human being needs to be able to limit the area of his intercourse with others . . . Above all, we need to be able to keep to ourselves, if we want to, those thoughts and feelings, beliefs and doubts, hopes, plans, fears and fantasies, which we call 'private' precisely because"— when we wish to—

"we wish to be able to choose freely with whom, and to what extent, we are willing to share them . . . The problem, therefore, is one of balancing the individual's need for privacy against the legitimate needs of the community".

I re-emphasise to right hon. and hon. Members that we must always distinguish between the public interest and the interests of the public, which are often different and sometimes even conflicting.

Past Governments have ensured that protection exists for the individual in respect of his physical person, his personal reputation and his personal property, including intellectual property. However, no effective legal protection of personal privacy exists under English law. There is a serious gap in our law. It is clear from Gallup polls that about 70 per cent. of the public are both disgusted by and concerned about the increasing exploitation of breaches of privacy for financial gain. That public concern is reflected in Parliament, where in the last Session about 60 per cent. of Back Benchers signed early-day motions supporting the right to privacy.

Today our lives are lived in a more and more congested style. In a world of increasingly sophisticated eavesdropping devices and of instant global communication, the need for legal privacy protection is increasing fast. In other countries, including the United States, Germany, Holland, Italy and France, privacy laws have worked for decades and yet there is no evidence that the freedom of speech has suffered one jot. In France, for example, the equivalent of Private Eye is the magazine Le Canard and it thrives despite the French privacy laws. In the United States, privacy laws exist despite the fact that the first amendment to the United States constitution is the protection of free speech and the freedom of the press. The American equivalents of Private Eye, however, Spy and Village Voice, continue to thrive.

Why is it that the law in this country authorises no protection for individual privacy? Why are we so far behind? Why has not something been done already? In this respect it is important to note that the Government have already signed international human rights conventions that enshrine the right to privacy as a basic human right. Obviously, by signing international conventions to this effect, the British Government agree in principle to that right. Therefore, why do we not have laws in common with other countries?

Mr. Greg Knight (Derby, North): My hon. Friend referred to an international convention, the European convention on human rights, and I believe that he meant article 8. Will he reflect on the fact that article 10 provides for freedom of information and freedom to disseminate information?

Mr. Browne: My hon. Friend raises a valid issue, which is at the crux of the debate: where should the balance be struck? At the moment everything is wide open and there is no balance. The aim of the Bill is to strike a balance that protects the individual citizen's privacy.

Why do we not have laws similar to those in other countries to protect privacy within the United Kingdom? As the learned Lord Ross said in his minority report from the 1972 Younger committee, to continue without such laws is,

"At least to some extent, a sham."

He also said:

"The law in the United Kingdom should now be brought into line with these important declarations."

That was in 1972, 17 years ago.

In today's world, I firmly believe that the protection of privacy is a fundamental human right, along with freedom of speech, of movement and of free association. Surely all men and women in our land believe that their home is their castle in which their private lives should be protected and that preserving privacy is in the public interest. My sponsors and I hope that the Bill will put water in the moat of everyone's castle.

[Mr. Browne]

I have had an explanatory memorandum to the Bill printed and, therefore, I shall not waste the time of the House by describing each clause in detail. I will, of course, try to answer any questions that may arise. Basically, the Bill recognises two competing interests—freedom of information, mentioned by my hon. Friend the Member for Derby, North (Mr. Knight), and the protection of individual privacy. The Bill seeks to confer remedies for the public misuse of private information rather than a general right for the protection of privacy.

Essentially the Bill is based on international human rights obligations already accepted by the Crown. Clause 1 creates the statutory tort of breach of privacy. It allows the plaintiff to have someone else act for him under power of attorney if, for instance, the plaintiff is abroad and wants an injunction. It defines the persons who may be liable for committing a breach of privacy.

Clause 2(1) is most important as it balances the competing interests of freedom of information with the protection of the individual's privacy. It includes a hurdle or test for the plaintiff. That has been specifically included to ensure that the press is not shackled. Clause 2(2) gives guidance to the court on balancing the competing interests. Clause 2(2)(a) provides an extension of the public interest to include public benefit. I have included that so that the narrow definition of public interest, which might only include misconduct and criminal activity, is extended to include other things that may be of benefit for the public to know.

Clause 3 provides the other defences in addition to that of public interest. Clause 4 outlines the remedies that a court may award. It also gives guidelines to a court on assessing damages. Clause 5 states the period of limitation. Clause 6 ensures that the court will not award double damages. Clause 7 identifies the areas of a person's life that most reasonable people would regard as private and that are protected by virtue of the Crown's international human rights obligations. They are personal communications, the home, personal relationships, personal health, personal behaviour and personal financial affairs. It also defines personal and public use of dissemination by means of printed matter or broadcast material. That is important as it ensures that conversations, even gossipy conversations, are not killed by the Bill, which does not set out to be the kill-joy of normal village tittle-tattle.

Clause 8 allows the Bill to operate in Scotland. Clause 9 ensures that no actions can be brought on matters arising before the Bill comes into effect. Clause 10 binds the Crown, defines the short title of the Bill and provides for it to come into force on 1 January 1990.

In general, the Bill calls for no procedural changes. It preserves the principles of open justice, of damage relative to harm proved, the avoidance of double damages and the principle of mitigation. It does not include, however, provision for legal aid. Critics of the Bill argue that the absence of legal aid means that only the rich can benefit from the Bill's protection. Although I support legal aid, its inclusion in the Bill would have incurred the immediate hostility of the Government. It would have provided officials with easy ammunition with which to attack the Bill. Furthermore, those who feel strongly that legal aid should have been included will surely accept that the key issue is the principle of legal privacy protection. If such protection is needed, it should not be overruled simply because the Government do not think it is right to provide legal aid.

Mr. Alex Carlile (Montgomery): Does the hon. Gentleman agree that, although the absence of a legal aid provision is a disappointment, it will be possible to bring an action in the local county court and that it is now possible to obtain guidance easily on how to bring such actions in person? Therefore, there should be ready redress in a local court.

Mr. Browne: I am glad that the hon. and learned Gentleman has raised that point because he anticipates my next statement.

Critics have said that the Bill is for the rich only, but I must drive home the fact that the Bill is designed for the ordinary man and woman in the street. What the hon. and learned Gentleman says is perfectly correct, and after the Lord Chancellor's review a person will be able to take a case to the county court for about £20. That means that there will be wide access to the courts for everyone, including those on low incomes.

Mr. Greg Knight: Did my hon. Friend seek the advice of the eminent lawyers he mentioned on the subject of legal aid, because I am not sure that what he is saying is right? In the absence of any comment about legal aid, I understand that the normal rules for civil legal aid would apply to the Bill. That being so, has my hon. Friend any idea of what the implications for the costs to the legal aid fund would be?

Mr. Browne: That is a deep, legal question. As I understand it, without provision for legal aid, legal aid would not apply, just as it does not apply now for cases brought under the defamation laws. I shall try to confirm that during the course of the debate.

The subject of financial accessibility to justice faces our entire legal system and it is far beyond the scope of the Bill. I should re-emphasise, however, that, unlike libel plaintiffs, plaintiffs under the Bill can bring their cases before the county courts, as the hon. and learned Member for Montgomery (Mr. Carlile) has said. Following the Lord Chancellor's review, access to the county courts will be much cheaper than it is even today. Therefore, the Bill will greatly improve accessibility for the less well off in comparison to access currently afforded in civil torts such as those of defamation.

My right hon. Friend the Member for Chingford (Mr. Tebbit), whom I much admire and who is one of my political heroes, wrote an article which appeared in The Evening Standard last night which raised that exact point. It is unfortunate that he is not here today because I do not like to talk about hon. Members when they are absent from the Chamber. My right hon. Friend said:

> "Few such ordinary people would be protected by Mr. Browne's Bill, any more than they are protected by the law of libel."

That is utterly incorrect. He also said:

> "Mr. Browne's Bill is bound to inhibit the freedom of the Press to do its proper job."

I dispute that and hope to illustrate later why that view is wrong. The less well off will have much better legal access under the Bill than under the present laws of tort, such as libel.

The Bill has also been criticised for not including a provision for a jury. Naturally, I support jury trials, and I should willingly accept amendments that allowed either side to demand trial by jury, as in libel cases. In fact, I excluded juries simply to protect the press from extortionate and punitive damage payments. It is, perhaps, worth noting that in the case of South Hetton Coalfield v. North Eastern News in 1894, the judge ruled specifically that the determination of public interest was a matter of law for the judge. Hence the concept of a judge determining what is in the public interest or benefit has been recognised as a matter of law for 100 years or more. The Press has not felt the need to complain until now.

The Bill has been criticised for its provisions about injunctions. Basically, there is no change in the Bill in the method and manner in which injunctions are applied for and granted. As you know, Mr. Deputy Speaker, Parliament's wish to see privacy protected is not new. Bills have been introduced by the late Lord Mancroft in 1961, Alexander Lyon in 1967, Brian Walden in 1969 and, most recently, by my hon. Friend the Member for Stafford. This Bill draws upon their experiences, and I salute and thank all those who have gone before. Despite the mounting evidence of popular demand for protection of privacy, reflected by the presentation of no fewer than four Bills, past Governments have avoided the issue. Whether the fear of media moguls or the fear of an anti-media image has played a part, I know not, but I do know that nothing effective has been done to protect the privacy of the individual citizen. The moats around the castle homes of England are dry and individual privacy is invaded, at profit, with impunity.

Mr. Roy Beggs (Antrim, East): Does the hon. Gentleman agree that the benefits of the Bill should be extended to Northern Ireland? Could he arrange that?

Mr. Browne: I believe that the benefits should be extended to the whole of the United Kingdom, and I and my sponsors would agree to extend it to Northern Ireland if amendments were tabled to that effect in Committee.

The smokescreen put up by past Governments has followed a pattern. First, such a Bill would be unworkable, despite the fact that privacy laws have worked, and worked successfully, without muzzling the press in other countries for decades. Furthermore, the tort of privacy is very similar to the tort of libel, which has worked well in our country for a century or more. The second reason given was that there are competing interests, so self-regulation is best. But self-regulation tends to cater for only one side of the balance of interests and, as a principle, the Government themselves, in many areas, no longer tolerate self-regulation in such places as the stock exchange, where regulations are now fully backed by statute law.

The third reason given by past Governments was that the key definitions of privacy and public interest are too difficult. We as sponsors maintain that such definitions may be difficult, but they are definitely not impossible. We already live and work with definitions of other equally difficult legal concepts such as nuisance, negligence, obscenity, trespass, misrepresentation and contempt. For the past 36 years, cases of breach of privacy have been decided by the Press Council. In each case, individual members of the council have had to decide according to their own individual view of privacy and public interest. The result? It has been arbitrary definitions with no restitution for the wronged. Meanwhile, breaches of privacy have become even more outrageous.

Mr. Robin Corbett (Birmingham, Erdington): I am grateful to the hon. Gentleman for mentioning the Press Council. At the moment, if a complaint goes to the Press Council, one waives one's right to seek any other recourse. It would seem that, under clause 6, one could take a complaint about privacy to the Press Council and then have the right to go to court to seek the damages that the Press Council was unable to award. Is that so?

Mr. Browne: That is so; and, of course, it is so under the laws of libel today. That is why the Press Council has instituted the waiver, which I find distasteful. I do not see why any citizen should waive his legal right to appeal to a tribunal. None the less, that may be a matter that can be dealt with in Committee. The provisions of the Bill are exactly the same as the laws on defamation.

Let us now look briefly at the key definitions of privacy and public interest. The Government have already signed international human rights conventions enshrining personal privacy as a fundamental human right. My definitions are based on those very same conventions, as identified in clause 7. Surely any reasonable person, given the facts, will have a clear idea whether privacy has been breached. People keep asking about uncertain cases, but they are provided for in the Bill. The Bill directs that if there is uncertainty, the decision must be made in favour of publication. If my critics are correct and uncertainty does exist or does enter the mind of the court, publication will take place.

The concept of public interest or benefit is not new in English law. Section 6 of Lord Campbell's Libel Act of 1843 refers to public benefit. Section 4 of the Law of Libel Amendment Act 1888 refers to public concern and public benefit, as does section of the Defamation Act 1952. Section 3 of the Theatres Act 1968 refers to the public good. Indeed, a key in the defence of fair comment in our present libel laws is the ability to show public interest. Ample precedents for public interest already exist and are practised constantly in English law.

Despite those legal precedents, some Government officials may still feel that legislation would be too difficult. Here I shall quote the views of two eminent barristers. The noble and learned Lord Ross, in his minority report to the Younger committee, said:

"uncertainties in the law are not unusual. To decline to alter the law because it would be difficult to define the new law is a doctrine of despair which could be applied to almost any proposed legal reform."

The noble and learned Lord Alexander, perhaps the most eminent practising barrister in the land, said in an article in The Daily Telegraph on 21 January 1989:

"This Bill may well be capable of improvement, or may need some amendment; but the principles it seeks to protect should now become part of our law."

If the Government have any ideas for improving the definition in the Bill, we as sponsors will co-operate fully.

I now turn to the press, which will be much affected by the Bill and which is, quite rightly, concerned. A free press is the key to the sustenance of a free democracy. However, within that free democracy people as individuals must also be free to speak, to move and to associate, and free to enjoy the dignity of privacy.

[Mr. Browne]

Mr. Robert Banks (Harrogate): Would the Bill give some protection to members of the royal family who suffer from prying journalists and photographers in their private lives?

Mr. Browne: My hon. Friend raises an important subject. As I have said, everyone must be equally subject to the law and equally protected by it. Plainly, that includes the royal family. But whether people wish to exercise the remedies by going to court would be up to individuals.

In any civilised country the right to publish private information should prevail only where publication could be shown to be in the public interest. In that respect I shall now turn to the Younger committee. The Bills of the 1960s caused the then Governments to institute royal commissions, including the Younger committee, which reported in 1972. This was an important report and resulted in a significant minority report by Mr., now Lord, Ross. The Younger committee concluded that, first, there was no evidence of serious infringement of privacy. Secondly, it concluded that reliance could be placed on self-regulation and the professional ethics of the potential infringers of privacy backed by the Press Council remedy. The third recommendation was that a reformed law on breach of confidence would fill any of the remaining gaps. Today those findings appear naive.

I suspect that few people would think that the problem of privacy invasion was not serious. Events of the past decade or so have been extremely serious, and clearly something has to be done. The people of our country are looking to the Government for help in the formation of legal protection. In this respect it is clear from history that we cannot rely upon self-restraint by the media; the competitive forces are far too great. A line needs to be drawn.

I understand that some people, including my right hon. Friend the Member for Chingford, are minded to give the Press Council another chance under its new chairman, Mr. Louis Blom-Cooper, QC. Another chance after 36 years on trial and three royal commissions? My view is that the Press Council, which issued its own declaration in 1976, has tried hard but, to say the least, has been ineffective. Even The Observer of 22 January said in an editorial about the Press Council:

"The present set-up is well-meaning, amateurish and ineffectual."

The Press Council is not seen to act on behalf of the public. It is an attempt at self-regulation that has failed over the past 36 years, not because of any lack of will or ability on the part of its individual members, but because Parliament has given it no definitions of privacy or public interest. We have given it no guidelines and no teeth so that there is no restitution for the wronged.

Some people argue that the Press Council should be given teeth, but in today's world that means damages of hundreds of thousands of pounds. If the Press Council were given teeth, the press would rightly demand that evidence should be given on oath instead of upon written deposition, and that professional representation by barristers should be allowed. If the Government were to accept that, it would effectively turn the tribunal of the Press Council into a court. Why not accept the demand for legislation now?

I have interviewed the past chairman of the Press Council, Sir Zelman Cowen, and I am sure that he supports the Bill. He is on record as saying that he is sick at heart from revelations exposing people to hurt. I also believe that the new chairman of the Press Council, Mr. Louis Blom-Cooper, would find the Bill very acceptable. Despite this serious situation, no Government have yet taken action. Even the Bill has been rubbished as woolly. In that respect I should again like to draw the House's attention to Lord Alexander's article of 21 January. He says:

"The strongest criticism of any suggested law of privacy has invariably been that such a law would be too vague and leave too much to the discretion of the judges. I have always thought that this view underestimates the ability of the common law to develop both purposely and with common sense. The law of confidence, evolved to cover situations as different as commercial secrets and information held by members of the security services, is judge-made law. I hope the Lord Chancellor's Department and the Law Officers will not consider, as it has been reported they might, that such a law would be unworkable. We can trust to the vitality of the development of the common law, and to a sensible balance maintained by the judges. If Mr. Browne's Bill needs clarification, it should be amended, not killed".

In relation to the rubbishing in certain sections of the media, I shall turn again to the minority report of Lord Ross in 1972. In that report he says:

"The truth is that the press have always fought a strong, rearguard action when it has been suggested that the press acts unfairly towards private individuals. In seeking quite legitimately to protect what they see to be their best interests, the press have always exaggerated the dangers of muzzling the press".

This is happening today, and I believe that my right hon. Friend the Member for Chingford is wrong to give it so much credence.

The impression given in some sections of the media is that news gathering would be hampered by the Bill. Unlike its predecessors, the Bill makes no attempt whatever to stop sound investigative journalism, which can occasionally lead to the exposure of criminal activity.

Mr. Jonathan Aitken (Thanet, South): My hon. Friend makes an important point when he says that under the terms of his Bill honourable news gathering and investigative journalism can continue. My hon. Friend has been long on principles and short on specific examples. I should like to put a specific example to him and ask him how his Bill deals with it.

Immediately after recent major disasters, such as those at Hungerford and Lockerbie and the one that greatly concerned my constituents, the sinking of the Herald of Free Enterprise, the tabloid press sent reporters to do truly outrageous things to people. For example, in the case of my constituent, Captain David Lewry, the captain of the Herald of Free Enterprise, tabloid reporters smashed down the walls of his intensive care unit, invaded his home, put microphones in his car and treated that honourable man to a degree of invasion of privacy that was disgusting and vicious by any standards. When my hon. Friend comes to the weighing of public interests versus rights of privacy, will he be able to tell us that the Bill will stop such abuses in such future disasters?

Mr. Browne: I agree with my hon. Friend's every word. I must explain that I have been short on examples because

I am trying to limit my speech to give other hon. Members the chance to give examples. The examples of invasion that my hon. Friend quotes would not be directly stopped by the Bill. However, it would stop them indirectly because it would not pay television or broadcasting companies or the press to make intrusive interviews of the type that my hon. Friend quoted of the captain of the Herald of Free Enterprise because they could not publish them afterwards. The Bill gets at this by stopping the publication of private information rather than stopping the gathering of information, which may uncover crime. Technology may well eventually outstrip anything that we could write into what would become an even more complex Bill.

As I say, rather than concentrating on stopping investigation, the Bill stops the illegitimate publication of private information. Let us remember that privacy laws in other countries have not even hampered, let alone muzzled, the press. The Bill has been especially tailored to meet the legitimate interests of the press. Some people even say that it is too biased towards the press.

In conclusion, I should like briefly to mention some of the support that I have received, most interestingly, from within the media. Indeed, I have been told privately by a number of journalists, both from the press and broadcasting, that they will be delighted to see this Bill become law. One tabloid journalist said to me——

Mr. Corbett: Don't name him, for Heaven's sake.

Mr. Browne: The hon. Gentleman anticipates my fear. The tabloid journalist said:

"You will be amazed at the support for your Bill even from my paper. After all, we are human. We have children and families. We do not like to carry out some of the intrusive operations that we are given by our editors. We are professionally embarrassed. However, if we fail to get the story"——

such as the one quoted by my hon. Friend the Member for Thanet, South (Mr. Aitken)—

"we get the sack. Even our editors are driven by the competition of free market forces in an ever-downward spiral."

[Interruption.] Opposition Members may laugh. I must say that these words are a quotation. They are not even a quotation criticising the free market; they are criticising a free market with no bounds. That tabloid journalist went on to say:

"Many of us would welcome it if someone drew the line."

In other words, it is like drawing the boundary lines of a football game—free game and equal competition, but within the limits.

My plea to my right hon. Friends in Government, and especially in the Home Office, is to see this Bill as putting forward a principle—that is, the legal protection of the privacy of every man, woman and child in our country. Do the Government agree or not agree that individuals should have this right, a right that already exists in most civilised countries where water now fills the moat of every citizen's home or castle? The eminent legal practitioners whom I have consulted have all agreed that this Bill is long overdue and thoroughly workable in our courts that are familiar with dealing with civil wrongs. The key issue is whether an individual citizen should have any legal right to privacy.

I conclude with two quotations, first, from the noble and learned Lord Denning who, as Master of the Rolls, in the 1961 debate on Lord Mancroft's Bill, said

"if the law does not give the right of privacy, the sooner this Bill gives it the better".—[Official Report, House of Lords, 13 March 1961; Vol. 229, c. 640.]

Secondly, I quote again from Lord Alexander, QC, who said:

"This Bill may well be capable of improvement or may need some amendment but the principles it seeks to protect should now become part of our law."

Preserving privacy is in the public interest. In that spirit, I commend the Bill to the House.

Mr. Deputy Speaker (Sir Paul Dean): It will be evident to the House that many hon. Members wish to speak in this debate, so I hope that speeches will not be too long.

10.13 am

Mr. Alex Carlile (Montgomery): I start by congratulating the hon. Member for Winchester (Mr. Browne), first, on the principle that he is seeking to espouse in the Bill and, secondly, on his speech, which set it out most cogently and will enable me and other hon. Members speaking in support of the Bill to be brief. It is important that we should hear a wide range of views and I believe that we shall hear substantial support for the Bill from all parties.

The Bill seeks to incorporate for the first time a positive and important right into the law of the United Kingdom. I agree with the hon. Member for Antrim, East (Mr. Beggs) that that should mean the whole of the United Kingdom, including Northern Ireland. The right that the Bill seeks to incorporate into British law is the right of privacy. There is no such right in any substantive sense in British law at present. As a result of the absence of such a right, we should not mince our words about what the press sometimes does. The hon. Member for Thanet, South (Mr. Aitken) gave a striking example of the way in which the press can misbehave when he spoke of what they did to the life of the captain of the Herald of Free Enterprise.

However, every day, not only in respect of people who have attracted public attention, such as Captain Lewry, but in respect of ordinary citizens who do not have the defence of a big corporation around them, or of wealth, we read in some newspapers of deliberately dredged smut that has no connection with the public interest whatsoever. A minority of newspapers produce that smut, but it is a majority of the copy going out over the newsagents' counters that contains that dreadful material. Day after day, local councillors, people who have had road accidents, Members of Parliament, doctors and nurses, but rarely journalists—I wonder what they would think if we were to say, on the Floor of the House with the protection of parliamentary privilege, what we know about some of them—are subjected to horrendous and often untruthful newspaper articles about their private lives.

The bench mark of a free press is that it acts in the public interest. A free press must be able to act in the public interest, even if that interest is contrary to the views of the Government and of very powerful people in the land, including the proprietors of those newspapers. However, it is not for the press to tell us by what standard the public interest is to be judged. It ill-behoves the press, and there is no intellectual or logical justification for it, to deny Parliament and the courts the right to set what is a reasonable standard for the public interest.

The Bill, of which I am proud to be a sponsor, gives the courts the opportunity at last to decide where the line between public interest and sheer prurience lies. Unfortunately, there is at the moment an industry founded on prurience. Hundreds of journalists could do—and most would like to do—a much more useful job, but are told by their proprietors to go snoop and pry. They will lose their jobs if they refuse. There is no public interest whatsoever in that sort of invasion of privacy, except of course, the public interest in bringing it to an end.

[Mr. Alex Carlile]

The Bill sets out a number of categories of human life and behaviour which should surely be protected from the type of journalism that has become prevalent in the past few years. Clause 7 sets out the six categories.

Why should the press be able to steal and then publish the private letters of individuals? Surely personal communications, including telephone calls, should be protected. It is a fact beyond denial that the press intercept people's telephones, put listening bugs on their windows, and use what they hear to produce newspaper stories. It is beyond doubt that people's homes, too, should be protected. What legitimate interest have the press in their contents and, most particularly, in people's very private belongings and interests?

If a person has a row with his wife, it should not be trailed across a newspaper—but it is at the whim of an editor. I applaud the Bill for seeking to protect personal relationships. If someone in public life has a sexual orientation that does not accord with the majority view, should not that information be protected, unless it affects his performance and integrity in a public office? What possible public interest can there be in it, except merely that which some find enjoyable—the reading of a bit of smut about a person of note?

If an individual is suffering from a serious illness such as AIDS or any other form of virus, surely he is entitled to the protection of the law, so that unless he is willing to have that information published, the press should not be entitled to publish it willy-nilly. The Bill provides for anyone who wishes to waive his rights. If an individual wishes to take money from a newspaper to have his private affairs trailed across page 3 of the Sun or page 4 of the News of the World, that is a matter for him. He can take the money and the paper is free to publish. But the right to retain privacy should be protected.

The final category that the Bill seeks to protect is personal financial affairs. There are people in public life who are very rich, and there are people in public life who are much poorer than the public might ever imagine.

Mr. Dennis Skinner (Bolsover): Is the hon. and learned Gentleman talking about me?

Mr. Carlile: The hon. Member for Bolsover (Mr. Skinner) puts himself in the latter category.

Some right hon. and hon. Members might have overdrafts, while others might have money in the bank. What business is it of the press into which of those categories a right hon. or hon. Member falls, unless he chooses to waive his right of privacy? The exception is where a right hon. or hon. Member's financial affairs are a matter of genuine public interest, by standards generous to the press and set out in clauses 2 and 3.

Mr. Hugh Dykes (Harrow, East): Bearing in mind that many, if not all, journalists are elastic with their expenses claims—it is a profession well known for that practice—does the hon. and learned Gentleman recall any newspaper publishing a story about journalists claiming exaggerated expenses, or any legal action being taken against them?

Mr. Carlile: I cannot recall a single story of that kind being published, though right hon. and hon. Members are peculiarly prone to receiving publicity about whether they have paid even small bills. The hon. Gentleman makes a valid point.

If the Bill, duly amended, becomes law, properly trained journalists will start doing the job they were trained to do. That job is to investigate, present news, and write stories that are of genuine public interest. At present, I find certain newspapers easy to read, because there is practically nothing in them to read. I also find them difficult to read because they contain so much that is offensive. If the Bill becomes law, newspapers will have to change the way in which their contents are written. I look forward to reading the Sun when it has some news on its pages. I look forward to reading the News of the World when its editor has to ensure that its contents are true, and are in accordance with the Bill's provisions.

I hope that the House will have the courage to face up to the howling of the press, and to ensure that the right of privacy is enshrined in our law.

10.25 am

Mr. Julian Critchley (Aldershot): How nice it is to see the House of Commons so full on a Friday, and how much nicer to see so many members of the press perched in the Press Gallery. I am even told that sketch writers—those aristocrats of my profession—have forgone the delights of spending the weekend in great houses to continue their duties here today.

The British tabloid newspaper is as British as a football hooligan, and just as welcome. The leaders of the pack are Rupert Murdoch's the Sun and News of the World, with The Star bringing up the rear. In 1939, I was evacuated to my uncle's cottage in darkest Shropshire, because we believed that the Luftwaffe had no idea where Craiven Arms was. The cottage was all lit by oil lamps, and it had a lavatory at the bottom of the garden. Inside the loo, the News of the World was cut into six-inch squares, hanging from a piece of string. All those sad, fallen vicars. Since then, due to increased living standards—due in part to the combination of my right hon. Friends the Prime Minister and the Chancellor of the Exchequer—I no longer make use of the News of the World in quite the same way.

I suppose that the Sun is the most successful and the least attractive British newspaper. It is not so much a newspaper, more an entertainment sheet. Its staff—and I have written a column for the Sun in the past—refer to it as "the comic". The truth is that as standards fall, circulation figures rise. Such newspapers lie in search of profit. Oscar Wilde observed:

"In the old days, men had the rack, now they have the press."

The rackmaster is Mr. Rupert Murdoch, who is Australia's revenge for Arthur Phillip, captain of HMS Sirius. Mr. Murdoch's republican sympathies have nothing to do with his recently acquired American nationality. "Les Patterson" may have accepted a knighthood, but not Mr. Murdoch.

The Sun never neglects the royal family, but sucks it as if it were an orange. It treats the royals as if they were a soap opera, but with the difference that the Sun writes the script. Its heroes and villains are the heroes and villains of its choosing. It has already scored a double first—an injunction secured by lawyers acting for the Queen to stop publication of a footman's memoirs, and the legal action taken last October after it published a stolen picture of members of the royal family. That theft cost the newspaper £100,000. Elton John, on the other hand, has cost it £1 million.

In the Sun, the Prince of Wales is shown as a wimp, his wife as "fun-loving" and their marriage as a subject of ceaseless speculation. The UK Press Gazette, a trade newspaper, argued in an editorial last year:

"the truth is an alien quality to most tabloid Royal reporting. Most stories have only the faintest basis of fact, and the pictures to go with them are obtained by the sort of invasion of privacy that no Fleet Street editor would tolerate if inflicted upon his own family".

Here comes the rub. It can be argued that celebrities such as the hon. Member for Bolsover (Mr. Skinner) are fair game, although it is not so argued by me. But what about the families of public people?

Last year the News of the World, under the editorship of a Wendy Henry—the first lady of Fleet Street—carried as a centre-page spread the sad story of the love affair of the daughter of a Member of the House. The boyfriend in question had flogged the story of the affair to Ms. Henry, who published it—not because the love affair was in any way different from a thousand others, but because of the girl's father. The spread was illustrated with pictures of the Member and his wife. Ms. Henry was later sacked, although whether it was for being vile or not being vile enough was never made clear.

Leslie Grantham is the star of EastEnders—"Dirty Den". His father, Wally Grantham, is a Conservative councillor in Rushmoor in my constituency. The Granthams' life has been made a misery by the attentions of Sun reporters in particular, who have staked out their house, cultivated their neighbours and monopolised their telephones. When he heard about today's debate Mr. Grantham rang to urge me to vote for the Bill, which I shall.

In the tabloid newspapers one apology is very much like another. It is enough to say that the Sun easily headed the complaints league last year, with 15 complaints to the Press Council upheld and one partly upheld. I doubt that Rupert Murdoch or his editor Kelvin MacKenzie much care. The 16 rebukes are probably painted on MacKenzie's fuselage like so many RAF roundels on an ME 109.

In a society that seems increasingly divided between yobs and yuppies, it is easy to condemn the Sun and its kind, and its defenders may accuse me of hypocrisy or pomposity. Yet the success of newspapers like the Sun certainly raises some hard questions. Does MacKenzie really do no more than hold a glass to the face of his readers? Does the Sun lead, or does it simply follow?

Mike Molloy, the editorial director of the Daily Mirror, says that the Sun was the first paper to spot the Right-wing yob emerging. Professor John Vincent of Bristol, on the other hand—he writes a column not only for The Times but for the Sun, and in the same week—says that the Sun works on the frontiers of literacy. Will Mr. Kelvin MacKenzie ever be knighted, as was his predecessor Sir "Larry" Lamb? The answer must surely be "over the Queen's dead body".

The real villains of the piece are the newspaper proprietors. In the past the press lords were more circumspect. They sought the good opinions of their peers, and many of them wanted to sit in the other place. Today they suffer from no such inhibitions. They change their nationality as often as they change their shirts.

10.34 am

Ms. Dawn Primarolo (Bristol, South): I hesitate to follow the hon. Member for Aldershot (Mr. Critchley), who put so clearly points that I, too, wish to make, but I should like to make some further comments.

I have looked carefully at what the press has said about the Bill. Discussing press freedom, Hugo Young observes in The Guardian that the voyeurism that appears in the Sun and other tabloids has nothing to do with the interests of the quality newspapers. The British press now finds itself in a crisis of legitimacy, so relentlessly do some of its members pursue people in their private lives.

There is a delicate balance between investigative journalism and rights of privacy, and I do not think that the Bill deals sufficiently with that balance. There are dangers in the Bill, and I have many reservations about it. The time has come, however, when the House must address itself to how some members of the press now operate, and to whether their operations are legitimate.

I hesitate to use as an example something that happened to me, but I feel that we must be forthright and tell the perpetrators of these appalling stories that whatever our walk of life—whether we are Members of Parliament, prominent in society through trade union activities, or the families of the victims of tragedies—we have a right to strike back. My patience is exhausted by journalists who tell me that they have codes of conduct and that the press must keep itself in order; it is patently failing to do so. We have been very patient with those members of the press, but if they cannot police themselves through professional standards, that policing must be done through legislation.

I have taken advice on what happened to me, and I have been told that the journalists involved were in contempt of the House. I could have taken the matter to the Committee of Privileges, but, because that option would afford me a protection not available to ordinary members of the public, I decided not to take it.

The story goes like this. Hon. Members may remember that a week ago yesterday I put a question to the Prime Minister on behalf of my hon. Friend the Member for Cynon Valley (Mrs. Clwyd). Within hours journalists were at my home in Bristol—none of them spoke to me here—harassing my friends and family. They did not have legitimate queries about what they thought of my question; they were looking for possible sordid or unsavoury episodes in my past, or indeed my present, that they could plaster across their newspapers, simply because they did not like the question that I had put in the House.

As if that were not bad enough, the next day two Sun reporters hot-footed it down to Bristol and encamped themselves outside my ex-husband's house. Although we have been separated for six years, he lives very near to me. The journalists visited community projects that my husband and I had been involved in; they went to his place of work; they sat outside his house from early in the morning until 8.40 pm on Friday night. Neighbours were suspicious about those two people sitting outside the house, so they rang the police. The police later told them that they had been informed that two reporters from the

[Ms. Dawn Primarolo]

Sun were extremely anxious to speak to Mr. Primarolo about Mrs. Primarolo. They wanted to dredge up anything that could be used to discredit me, because they did not like the question that had been asked in the House.

My ex-husband got in and out of his house for the entire day over the back garden fence. All our friends had to be warned. They were very upset about the possibility of saying a word out of place which would then be blazoned across the newspaper as an attack on me. My ex-husband spent Friday night with friends.

I have an 11-year-old son. We had to make arrangements to get him out of school by the back door, because we know the depths to which that newspaper will sink. The last thing I wanted was to see a photograph of my son set against an unpleasant, insinuating article in that newspaper. My son was very upset the next day. We had to discuss in some depth whether it is correct for newspapers to be able to do that.

Apart from that unpleasant article that appeared on the Friday, there were no further reports about me in the press, and none appeared in the Sun, but the point is that I should never have been subjected to that treatment. My family, friends and associates should not have been subjected to it either simply because their political complexion had led journalists to be angry with me for the effrontery of asking the question of my hon. Friend the Member for Cynon Valley on the Floor of the House.

It has been suggested to me that a person holding office in this House under this Government spoke to members of the press lobby and helped them along with their story. He believed that they were sympathetic to the Government, so he gave them information that included completely unfounded allegations and lies about me, which resulted in the harassment of people who are dear and close to me. We are discussing a much wider subject than just whether cases can be taken to the courts when the press have invaded our privacy.

I accept entirely that journalists have a right to investigate hon. Members. We are public figures. There are things that it is legitimate for journalists to investigate, but I do not accept that they are entitled to muck-rake, to fabricate, to spread lies about us and then say that we have recourse to the courts. They should not be doing it in the first place. I do not want to have to go to court to obtain damages afterwards; I do not want them to do it in the first place, because there is always somebody, somewhere, who says, "There is no smoke without fire."

I intend to quote what was written in The Independent by Peter Tatchell about the many, many lies that were spread about him. He said:

> "The after effect is that my income, political future and physical safety remain in jeopardy six years later. For the journalists who wrote the stories I am now old news and they have largely forgotten me: the bigots whose prejudices they aroused have not."

It is a question of rights and responsibilities. Journalists have rights to investigate and rights to freedom, but those rights have to be balanced by responsibilities because of the consequences of their actions for many other people. I do not believe that they have proved that they respect those responsibilities. The problem has grown considerably worse since the Younger committee reported. We intend to use the Bill, despite our reservations, as a vehicle for debate on this subject.

The sponsors of the Bill list a number of areas in clause 7 that they consider to be private. I do not agree about all those areas. As an example, I refer to personal financial affairs. When the hon. Member for Winchester (Mr. Browne) moved the Second Reading he did not make clear exactly what he meant. If I had massive investments in French water companies—the French water companies that are sniffing around Wessex Water and all the other water authorities in the run up to privatisation—if I were passionately keen, which I am not, on voting for water privatisation and if I therefore intended to go around the country advocating the benefits of water privatisation, it would be wholly legitimate for the press to point out that I had invested money in French water companies and that I stood to make personal gain from privatisation.

Mr. John Browne: That is protected precisely in the Bill and it would be a classic case of public interest.

Ms. Primarolo: I see the point that the hon. Gentleman makes, but I still do not think that that is made clear enough. It is not good enough for us just to claim recourse to the courts or to say that it is in the public interest, because somebody would challenge it. It could be argued out in court by the person who felt that it was not a legitimate public interest or who could claim that the media had got hold of the information by devious methods. The matter could get as far as the courts. The media would have to defend themselves for taking that action. I do not believe that that should be necessary. The point needs to be made clearer.

Mr. John Browne: The basic point is clear. There would be a defence of public interest. If there were any doubt in the mind of the court about the validity of the case for privacy versus public interest, the court would decide in favour of publication. The case that the hon. Lady has cited is a clear case of public interest. I hope that the hon. Lady will concentrate on the fact that the Bill is not designed to prevent investigation. The question is what one does with the information when one has obtained it.

Ms. Primarolo: This debate should be conducted in Committee. The hon. Gentleman will forgive me if I do not engage in it now. I do not agree with him. The Bill does not make it clear and the matter needs to be looked into.

The hon. Member for Winchester spoke on television this morning. It is interesting to note that he cited a case that suggested that standards were becoming more flexible. He referred to a woman who had had an abortion and who then could not make up her mind whether she was for or against abortion. The hon. Gentleman felt that that was a legitimate matter to investigate and to comment on. I disagree with him, but such examples will have to be discussed in Committee.

The House should give the Bill a Second Reading so that these issues can be thrashed out in Committee. If we are still not satisfied with the Bill when it is reported to the House, we can vote it down. However, the time has come when we have to consider what is the relationship of journalists to our private lives and to those of other people. Legal aid will have to be provided. If the right to privacy is a right at all, it must be a right for everybody. It is not a right that one should be able to enjoy just because one can afford to go to court.

The Bill should not enable solicitors to make lots of money, or people to obtain huge damages by going to court. Its purpose ought to be a return to a dialogue with journalists about what is and what is not legitimate journalism, so that stories of the kind I have mentioned do not appear. Then we can get back to normal, when the press is respected, and clearer lines have been drawn to define the rights of privacy of the public and hon. Members. The information that will be made available to the public will then be more specific and more relevant and will enable them to make fairer judgments about whether we are adequate to represent them and whether other people in institutions outside the House are fit to serve them.

For those reasons, I shall vote for the Bill today, but will reserve my position to see whether some matters are clarified in Committee. The press must realise that investigative journalism does not give journalists the right to destroy, to harass and to make people's lives a misery. A balance has to be struck and the Bill offers us the opportunity to do that.

10.50 am

Mr. William Cash (Stafford): I take this opportunity to congratulate my hon. Friend the Member for Winchester (Mr. Browne) on his luck in the ballot and particularly on the skill and determination with which he has pursued a matter with which I have been closely associated in the past few weeks.

The Bill concerns people from all walks of life. It is not only about those in the public eye and their families. Those of us who saw "Newsnight" saw what happened to the people of Lockerbie. We know what happened to the victim of the Ealing rape case, and we heard that when a young boy had been drowned, the following day his parents had to see, on the front page of a local newspaper, a photograph of his body being winched up to a helicopter. In Stoke on Trent recently there was the very sad case of a lady who, unfortunately and tragically, was dying and who wanted to raise money for an appeal. She approached a newspaper, hoping to make that appeal as successful as possible. I understand that she had made some reference to her husband's future life. The newspaper turned that story around in such a way as to imply that, as she was dying, she was choosing a future wife for her husband. Such practices are absolutely and wholly repellent and have to be stopped.

The Bill is being proposed at the right time; it is about time that something was done. It is 17 years since the Younger committee reported. It concluded:

"On balance, there is no need at present for a general law of privacy."

It is pretty remarkable that, although the Younger committee had frequently been put forward as saying that there should be no general law on privacy, that is not what it said. Quite clearly, the members of the committee regarded their views as provisional, dependent upon whether their recommendations to beef up the Press Council produced proper results. We know the answer to that. There is absolutely no question but that the committee thought the Press Council would do the job. It is equally clear that it cannot.

By all accounts, the position has become much worse. I recently came across an interesting article in The Spectator written by Michael Trend, which stated:

"What have the press been making of this? Why have they largely failed to take up the debate on fundamental principles that has been offered to them?"

He gave an interesting example:

"One tabloid leader writer (who, without seeing the humour in it, demanded that I respect his 'rights of privacy' by not naming him or his paper) told me that at the moment he was 'quite out of ideas'. He could think of no better line to argue against the Bill than that as it would be bad for his paper it must be bad for its readers."

Shortly before, in an article in The Daily Telegraph, Honor Tracy wrote an article about an anonymous tabloid editor who is quoted as saying:

". . .if a story is good for circulation he will print it, as the publicity value outweighs even a heavy libel award against him."

Private information is circulating under the cloak of privacy, revealing what is going on. My final quote is from the Second Reading debate on the Right of Privacy Bill —Brian Walden's Bill—on 23 January 1970. In an intervention, the then hon. Member for Buckingham, Mr. Robert Maxwell, said:

"Before the hon. Gentleman leaves the principle which he objects to the Bill introducing for the first time into our laws —namely, a right of privacy directly instead of, as it has been indirectly—would he not agree that the public are of the opinion that the right of privacy exists, but that the trouble is that that right has been given only so far in our legislation indirectly and that it is riddled with holes and abuses? What the Bill seeks to do is to put that right.—[Official Report, 23 January 1970; Vol. 794, c. 915.]

I found that advice very instructive and extremely helpful.

There is no question there being no remedy to deal with the present invasions of privacy. We have already heard about the legal waiver and the difficulties experienced by people faced with rulings that are flouted. It has been said that the Bill would be a Bill only for the wealthy. I must say most emphatically that that is not true for the reasons that my hon. Friend the Member for Winchester and other hon. Members have given today. The new arrangements for the courts will help to speed up justice and make it cheaper, but, as has been said, actions could be taken in the county court.

In addition, inevitably a deterrent value would emerge from these proposals, and would inevitably lead to adjustments in the mechanisms within each newspaper and to the mechanisms and administration of the Press Council. I do not believe that the Bill means that there need not be a Press Council. At the moment, the press has to live with the libel laws within which journalists can conduct investigations and ensure that ethical standards are maintained. The Bill seeks to ensure that people have direct personal rights that they can sustain. We have heard about the important contribution to that debate by Lord Alexander.

It is argued that only the wealthy will be able to benefit from the Bill, but that applies equally to libel, yet no one would say that there should be no libel laws merely on that account.

I turn now to the workability of the Bill, and in particular to the definitions within it. As my hon. Friend the Member for Winchester said, the Bill has been vetted by some of the best legal brains in the country. All Bills contain definitions. Those definitions obviously have to be left to the courts as that is one of their main tasks. The term "defamation" and the expression "public interest" have already been defined in terms that include the need to ensure that justice is seen to be done. But if we consider another example that has been mentioned, private nuisance, there is a deep irony in the fact that, where property is affected, private nuisance can give rise to an action in tort. But that was for the protection of property.

[Mr. William Cash]

That is a throw-back from the 18th century when those principles were being developed. Is it not ironic that there can be an action in tort for that but not to protect human life?

The Press Council already defines public interest or public benefit, as "a legitimate and proper public interest and not only a prurient and morbid curiosity."

It defines the invasion of privacy as an unwarranted intrusion into private life. It happily applies its definitions, even if it cannot enforce them. Those who wish to do so can study the 1976 declaration of principles. The Press Council recognises the need for a remedy but cannot ensure one. In effect, it acts as a court, albeit an inadequate one. That directly affects people in their day-to-day lives.

If the Press Council alone cannot be entrusted with such an important task, what are the choices? One could substitute an ombudsman, as I have heard mentioned—I do not include the ombudsman whose appointment was announced a few days ago and who was described in The Spectator as "Quite a good joke." If we were to have an ombudsman, it would have to be on a statutory and enforceable basis. There would have to be an appeal system and the question would arise of to whom a complainant would appeal and who would appoint him. Would it become mixed up in political appointments? There would also be questions of evidence, the need for cross-examination and who would pay the fees. There would have to be open hearings and consistent precedents. The system would contain all the characteristics of a court but none of its advantages.

I have examined the arguments against former privacy Bills that have been debated in the House. The reasons contained in those debates are no more convincing than those being given today. The case for such legislation today is much stronger. Last year the Minister of State, my hon. Friend the Member for Mid-Sussex (Mr. Renton), and another Minister and, in 1983, the noble lord Lord Elton all issued warnings to the press. They said, "You must watch out. If you don't get your act together, legislation will be introduced to deal with the problem."

The Government recognise that there is a problem and that it cannot be shuffled under the carpet. When my hon. Friend the Minister of State replies, will he give us a constructive suggestion on which to work? Will he seriously consider the implications of rejecting this measure or, effectively, leading us into a cul-de-sac over the Bill?

There will always be a tomorrow and there is always a request for one more chance. However, these arguments have been continuing for 17 years to no effect and they will wash no longer. The insurance policy is void. We all remember the adage, "Publish and be damned." The problem now is that it is the victim who is damned and not he who publishes. Press freedom was nurtured and developed to protect individual freedom, in the House as well as outside. Now that press freedom is being used to deny individual freedom. All who cherish the freedom of the press should support the Bill, because it is a powerful means of righting wrong while restoring the press to its true role as a defender of liberty for all.

11.3 am

Mr. George Galloway (Glasgow, Hillhead): It is with some trepidation that I rise to follow such a master parliamentary draftsman as the hon. Member for Stafford (Mr. Cash) and to oppose a Bill over which he has had an influence. He is the man who reputedly has the roundel of the Single European Act on his fuselage.

I also have trepidation in opposing the Bill having just heard the fresh and livid speech of my hon. Friend the Member for Bristol, South (Ms. Primarolo) who, a matter of hours ago, was the object of the rampaging rat packs of the tabloid press. The story she told clearly angered the House and it is to the House's credit that it can get angry at such behaviour. However, when one hears of abuse, there is often more heat than light. All hon. Members would do well to remember that one cannot legislate on the basis of worst abuse. One should not legislate in the heat, no matter how long the heat has been in the baking. I accept that the problems have been getting worse for a long time. However, that is not the right atmosphere in which to legislate on such a serious matter.

There is no doubt that there is a major problem with the British press. The hon. Member for Aldershot (Mr. Critchley) in an elegant and witty speech said that it is a British problem. No other country, probably in the world but certainly in Europe, has a press that is so heavily bottom-loaded—if hon. Members will forgive the pun—where so many copies of the worst types of newspaper dominate the market. It is a British problem which has been with us for a long time and is getting worse.

That the media have a case to answer is denied by no one. Anyone who has scanned, as I have in the run-up to the debate, the press coverage of the Bill, especially in serious newspapers, can see that the press recognises that it has a case to answer. If one walks into a newsagents, especially on a Sunday, where the newspapers are spread across the counter, one can see at a glance that the media have a case to answer. If one studies the dramatic escalation in libel awards in the courts, one can see that juries—microcosms of the British public—think that the media have a case to answer. In 1986 the total amount of libel damages awards made in British courts was only £416,000, less than the total in one celebrated case in 1987 and only one third of the total awards made by juries in that year. That enormous escalation is a further example of the extent to which the media have a case to answer.

The spectacle—hilarious if it were not so revolting—of the Sun appointing its present managing editor as its ombudsman to deal fairly and squarely with complaints is enough to make a horse laugh. It is further evidence of the extent to which the media feel that their ground is shifting beneath them.

As the hon. Member for Winchester (Mr. Browne) made clear, Gallup polls show that a majority of the public think that the press goes too far. That must be put into context—in this we are implicitly levelling criticisms at our constituents—because the same people who are polled by the Gallup pollsters and who express repugnance at the daily and weekly fare available in the newspapers, are buying those newspapers in ever increasing numbers. The Sun and the News of the World are the most successful newspapers in Europe, if not the world. Their sales are rising rather than falling, despite the considerable larger number of titles available now than a few years ago.

Therefore, the Gallup poll results must be balanced with that. Whether the British public get the press they deserve is a moot point and we cannot hide from that.

There has undoubtedly been a collapse in press standards. Stories have been splashed on the front page and carried over to pages 7 and 8 that a few years ago might have been spiked by the editors. In a splendid speech, the hon. Member for Aldershot said that the Murdoch press bears much responsibility for this problem. The arrival of this least-welcome immigrant and his emergence as the most powerful press baron in the world has coincided with a spectacular but successful drop in standards as his profits have risen and media power expanded. I heard on the grapevine—I heard it again as I was entering the Chamber but I will not betray the confidence of who said it—that Mr. Murdoch has visited No. 10 to ask its inhabitant whether, even at this late stage, this Bill and the Right of Reply Bill can be stopped or blunted. We are unaware of the Prime Minister's response, but we know that Mr. Murdoch has some influence with No. 10. His newspapers are obsessive supporters of the Government, but it remains to be seen whether his lobbying will have any effect.

The concentration of press ownership in the hands of an American citizen, who was formerly an Australian citizen, is a matter of concern. Other newspapers watching his circulation figures zoom have been forced by the market forces so beloved by Conservative Members to follow him downwards. It would be welcome if my concern was shared by Conservative Members, but this subject will be dealt with on another occasion.

Because of my experiences, I have some trepidation in opposing the Bill, especially given the stories that we have heard this morning. As is well enough known, the hon. Member for Winchester and I have been the subject of the most rapacious interest by the yellow press and the tabloid rat pack. I should not like to enter into an argument with the hon. Gentleman, but I contend that I have probably suffered more than him or perhaps any other hon. Member from their interest.

It is worth running through a few of my experiences because they are germane to the debate. At a press conference a month or two after the election at which I was elected, which was called to deal with quite different matters, I was confronted by a journalist from a national newspaper who had documents that had been stolen from a friend of mine. He proceeded to ask me, in full view of the entire press corps, with cameras whirring and microphones recording, a series of the most personal questions. Crucially, they were questions to which the journalist already knew the answers, so there was no hiding place. I responded honestly if a little colourfully and the balloon went up. I may have been an hon. Member for a short time, but I have been in public life for most of my career in one form or another and cannot claim to be naive. Within hours, those honest if colourful remarks had been transformed in the editorial offices of Fleet street into a different story, which seemed—it was probably because there was little news around and the silly season was upon us—to be the most important of the day—my sex life of several years before becoming an hon. Member.

Within hours, all those connected with me from my elderly grandmother, my mother, my wife, her father, our neighbours and neighbours of friends of mine were besieged in their homes by many journalists. I was astonished that so many reporters were on the books of national newspapers. Outside my home, there were more than 20 journalists for 48 hours. They were burning night lights, had little primus stoves to cook their tea and camp beds on which to sleep, although they took it in turns to ensure that no one could sleep by ringing the doorbell, banging the door and knocking on the window throughout the night. This was, to say the least, a harrowing experience for the people in the house. It was harrowing for my neighbours in the leafy environs of Blackheath, who had never been invaded by a group of louts from the tabloid press.

If I thought that that was bad, what was to come was worse. In common with the experiences of my hon. Friend the Member for Bristol, South, the attention switched from me—I could take the attention—to innocent people. The most innocent person was my five-year-old daughter, who was most alarmed by the whirring of a dozen or more cameras. She was chased down the path into the John Bull primary school in Blackheath. The school was ultimately invaded by a photographer characteristically wearing a dirty mackintosh, under which dangled his camera. The janitor was asked where my daughter could be found as the photographer was her uncle and had come to take her from school for her own protection from journalists and photographers. The janitor, who knew better, having read the papers of the previous 48 hours, bundled him out. Suffice it to say that much distress was caused to people who were innocent of even the uttering of colourful, honest language. They were connected with me only by blood or friendship.

Someone stole my telephone card index system and gave it to one of the newspapers. Every woman in it from 15 to 90 years was systematically telephoned, often at home when they were sitting with their husbands and families, and asked whether they would like to talk about their affair with me, when none of them had had one. The houses of the most promising, those aged somewhere between 18 and 40, were staked out. Two of the women were offered money. A woman in Glasgow was offered £1,000 by the Sun to tell of her affair with me when in fact she had never had one. She turned the offer down. I shudder to think what would have happened if the newspapers had hit upon a woman who badly needed £1,000 and who might have been prepared to lie. I can speculate about what might have happened—it would have been plastered across every newspaper in the land.

I am probably more aware than any hon. Member of just how deeply distressing and unpleasant is the experience of being pursued by those rat packs, as they are known in Fleet street. The rat packs comprise men and occasionally women. That great organ of truth and knowledge, the Sunday Sport sent a female correspondent. She passed a note through the letter box addressed to my wife in which she gave her name and said she was from the Sunday Sport and wanted to conduct an interview with my wife. She assured my wife in the note that she would conduct it with the greatest sensitivity. My wife was not an expert then on the different qualities of every newspaper in Fleet street. However, she knew enough to know that it was unlikely that the Sunday Sport would treat the interview in that way and she politely turned down the invitation. She was also offered very large sums of money to come out and talk. However, she did not.

I am well aware of the extent of the problem. The issue is whether the Bill is the answer or throws too many babies out with the bath water, as I contend. I will oppose it. If it is not an abuse of the privileges of the House, I want to state now that if the Bill reaches Committee, I should very much like to be a member of that Committee. I hope that it is not improper to make that bid now.

[Mr. George Galloway]

Britain is already too secret to afford new restrictions on the freedom of the press. Freedom of information in this country is already in too short supply. Along with curbing the excesses of the worst newspapers, the Bill risks curbing the very necessary and good things about the British press—the kind of investigative journalism on which a free society depends.

The House should tread carefully and not appear to be rushing into passing this legislation. I have no wish to impugn the motives of the Bill's supporters. I know some of them very well and respect them enormously. However, William Cobbett in his observations on the immigration of Doctor Joseph Priestly wrote:

"amongst the persons I have heard expressed a wish to see the Press what they called free and at the same time to extend the restraints on it with regard to persons in their private life, I have never that I know of met with one who had not some powerful motive of his own for the wish, and who did not feel that he had some vulnerable part about himself."

I do not agree with that quote. That quote does not apply to many of the Bill's sponsors. However, the House should be careful before giving the impression that it is about digging moats around the castles of the rich and powerful.

Mr. Gerald Howarth (Cannock and Burntwood): The House has listened with great interest to the personal experiences that the hon. Gentleman has endured. I am sure that I am not alone in being surprised to learn that after those experiences, he will oppose the Bill. Does he accept that today he has been able to put right many of the inaccuracies that have been promulgated throughout the land about him and that that opportunity is not available to our fellow citizens for whom the Bill is designed to provide a remedy?

Mr. Galloway: that is a valid point and I hope to deal with it later.

Some of us have bigger castles than others and some have more skeletons in those castles than others. If we have skeletons in our castles, we must be careful in a free society that we do not use our power. We have power and although I am not rich, I have more power, as the hon. Member for Cannock and Burntwood (Mr. Howarth) explained, than most people. I would be very careful not to give the impression that I am filling my moat, which only I as a legislator have the power to do, with sufficient water to keep out the most energetic investigators. We must be careful not to give the impression that we powerful people living in glass houses are trying to ban the throwing of stones. That would send a message to the public which would devalue parliamentary democracy.

It is strange that so many Conservative Members are keen on this legislation. I do not make that as a petty political point. It is a philosophical point. From Edmund Burke downwards it has traditionally been the position of Conservative Members in the House and Conservatives elsewhere that the general rights, such as the right of privacy, should not be——

Mr. Quentin Davies (Stamford and Spalding): Will the hon. Gentleman give way?

Mr. Galloway: The hon. Gentleman is welcome to intervene, but my understanding, is that the philosophical position of British Conservatives has been to rely on specific remedies rather than to bestow general rights on people.

Mr. Quentin Davies: Is the hon. Gentleman saying that Edmund Burke was a Conservative? If so he is rewriting history.

Mr. Galloway: Edmund Burke was possibly the most conservative Member of Parliament ever. His philosophy was exceedingly conservative. He is the idelogical mentor of many Conservative Members. That cannot be gainsaid. As I understand it, it has always been the position of British Conservatives that the legislative books should not be cluttered with new legislation, unless that legislation is absolutely necessary.

Specific remedies are available, but they must be reformed, radically overhauled and transformed in some cases, to cope with many of the abuses about which we have heard and which we know exist. We do not need to create this general right of privacy.

There is not much support on the Conservative Benches for a Bill of rights. Not many Conservative Members signed Charter 88 which was formulated by some right hon. and hon. Members. There is not much support on the Conservative Benches for giving the British population a general set of rights, and that is presumably because of the philosophical objection of Conservative Members to that approach to these questions.

The hon. Member for Winchester made a Freudian slip. The great advocates of the free market are less keen on a free market in information than in a free market in virtually every other aspect of our national life. The very water that we drink can be subject to the free market. My grandfather used to say that if the Tories could bottle the air we breathe and sell it to us, they would. Conservative Members have less enthusiasm, however, for a free market in information.

There are other remedies, some of which it is true are working imperfectly. Only last week I received £5,000 in damages from The Guardian for something written about me by a journalist whose work I greatly respect. I read his articles avidly every day. I am grateful for Andrew Rawnsley's error, because it has made me a richer man —or at least has made my overdraft smaller.

Libel can be pursued. However imperfect the process is, people can win libel cases and some of them are won spectacularly. I have a splendid libel lawyer whom I recommend to all right hon. and hon. Members, Mr. Oscar Bevsalink of Wright, Webb and Syrett, or "Sue, Grabbit and Runne" as they are known in the trade. He is open for business, and has dealt with some of the most hideous abuses of press power in recent times. Although this will not find much favour with Conservative Members—I have no complaint about it—I shall mention the scandalous calumnies which were printed against Mrs. Carmen Proetta for daring to say that she saw something in Gibraltar which Conservative Members did not like to hear. She was branded the "tart of Gib" and was slandered in every filthy newspaper in the country. Mrs. Proetta, through the good offices of my lawyer and hers, has begun to clean up. She will take the British press for a substantial sum of money. That is available to far too few people. Libel actions take far too long, cost far too much, and the dangers for people entering into such a case are far too great. It must be said that damages are far too high. There is a clear case for the reform of the libel laws. We need a fast track system with a low cost floor and ceiling of damages, so that these matters can be resolved more quickly and efficiently. But libel is one specific remedy to use against the abuse of the press.

Mr. Frank Cook (Stockton, North): Does my hon. Friend agree that there is a clear distinction between libel and slander and unwarranted and unjustified intrusion of privacy, which is the area that this legislation seeks to deal with?

Mr. Galloway: I accept that there is a difference. Although in some cases the only difference is that something which is printed and is said to be an abuse of privacy is true and something that is libellous is by definition untrue. If I write something about a person that is untrue, I have committed a libel. If I know something about that person—which he does not wish me to reveal—that is true, the Bill would preclude me from revealing that unless I could show public interest, because it would be an abuse of that person's privacy. Not everything that is not libellous should be banned from the public domain. It is correct that some things about people should be known, even where a person's privacy is, by definition, invaded.

Mr. Tim Devlin (Stockton, South): Does the hon. Gentleman agree that there are things that are legal in this country—for instance, his own previous life outside this House, where the activities in which he was involved were legal—but about which it might not be appropriate for the wider country to know? In the case of the hon. Gentleman, it sparked an investigation into him, his friends and acquaintances, which on any view was completely unwarranted.

Mr. Galloway: I agree that the way in which the investigations were pursued was completely unwarranted. Whether the public has a right to know about the sex lives of politicians is a moot and debatable point, especially if those politicians are members of a party which takes a politically ideological stance against permissiveness for the family, and are for Victorian values. If in their private lives, they are acting in a way which is different from their public stance, it is at least debatable that the public has a right to know about it.

Mr. Devlin: I can see the hon. Gentleman's point there—

Mr. Quentin Davies: It would be covered by the Bill.

Mr. Devlin: That would be covered by the Bill—I am sorry I have forgotten my point.

Mr. Galloway: It is arguable whether it is covered by the Bill. At the very least, it would be much more difficult for such information to be published than at present.

Mr. Greg Knight: The hon. Gentleman is on far sounder ground now than when he was discussing the ideology of the Conservative Party. The hon. Gentleman has made a number of valid points. Is not one of the crucial points to those of us who are not happy with this Bill, not what we know the Bill to cover, but what we are unsure it will cover? Will he reflect, for example, on the legitimate users of private information, such as local authorities and employers, who may, as I read the Bill, have to seek the permission of every person on whom they have private information to ensure that they are safe and free from the threat of being taken to court?

Mr. Galloway: I believe that the Bill—for the reasons which the hon. Member for Derby, North (Mr. Knight) has made clear—produces a potential thicket of offences and litigation which will certainly excite and encourage the saliva of our learned Friends. It would certainly be a bonanza for them.

Dame Elaine Kellet-Bowman (Lancaster): The use of private information by local authorities would surely be covered by qualified privilege, because it would be in the public interest.

Mr. Galloway: The hon. Lady says "surely", but I am not so sure. All I know is that we will potentially be putting into the court rooms and into judges' chambers a thicket of judgments and decisions about what is private and what is public. I do not have the touching faith of some hon. Members in judge-made law. Anyone who has studied the "Spycatcher" affair right up to the final and upper levels of the British judiciary, and anyone who knows the social and political background and ideas of the majority of British judges, would be wary of transferring decisions, such as what can be published in the public domain, from editorial rooms into court rooms. I am rather anxious about that aspect.

The libel law provides one clear avenue. That law must be radically overhauled, but it is a specific remedy which should not be underestimated. Existing law can stop much of the other abuses about which we have heard. The hon. Member for Thanet, South (Mr. Aitken) raised the plight of the captain of the Herald of Free Enterprise. I was moved, as all hon. Members were, by that story. The examples given, however, by the hon. Gentleman of the abuses of press power were all blatantly illegal under existing law. Smashing down the doors of the captain's intensive care unit was a clear breach of the law and the journalist who did so should have been hauled off to prison. A new press law is not needed to deal with such an abuse. If someone's house is broken into and an electronic eavesdropping device planted, that is breaking and entering—burglary and all other manner of breaches of the criminal law. A new privacy law is not needed to deal with such things. The laws of trespass could also deal with some of the abuses that have been mentioned.

Mr. Devlin rose——

Hon. Members: He has remembered what he wanted to say.

Mr. Devlin: No, this is a different point. Is the hon. Member aware that the legal definition of burglary is entering premises with intent to commit theft, rape or criminal damage? If someone breaks into a person's house to plant a bug it is possible that he is not guilty of breaking and entering with the intent to commit theft as there is no property in information. The only way in which to charge such a person would be if he criminally damaged some part of the property when entering.

Mr. Galloway: I am not a lawyer, but I doubt whether it is within the law to break into premises to plant an electronic eavesdropping device.

Mr. Greg Knight rose——

Mr. Galloway: I would rather not give way as I have been reminded that I have been speaking for quite a time and I must get on.

The hon. Member for Winchester said that it was possible to "exaggerate" the dangers of muzzling the press. I have visited many countries in Europe, Africa, Asia and the middle east where the press is muzzled very nicely thank you. It is not possible to overstate the dangers of muzzling the press. Although the Bill does not represent a major attempt to gag the press, it is significant when taken together with other things that have affected broadcasting and press freedom. Given the other existing intrinsic blocks to freedom of the press in this country, the Bill is a dangerous step, which will assist in muzzling free investigative reporting. It is not possible to exaggerate the significance of that.

Obviously the law must find a balance and I agree with the adage, "My right to swing my right fist ends when it reaches the tip of the other fellow's nose." The hon. Member for Winchester has made it clear that the Bill is designed to shift the balance from journalists and the editor and move decision-making from the editorial room to the court room. That causes me anxiety because public versus private interest is a vexed issue.

The hon. and learned Member for Montgomery (Mr. Carlile)—he is not in the Chamber for the moment—said that it was not in the public interest to know how poor or how rich a Member of Parliament is. I disagree. If an hon. Member has millions of pounds in the bank it is a matter of public interest because that influences his perceptions of the world. If an hon. Member has an overdraft of more than £500,000 that is also in the public interest. I must declare that I have an overdraft, but it is not of that dimension. If I had a gigantic overdraft the public would have a right to know because it reveals something about the way in which I conduct my financial affairs. Therefore, that would have some influence on my ability to consider the nation's financial and economic affairs. It is absurd to pretend otherwise. I was astonished that the hon. and learned Member for Montgomery—a Liberal at that—said that the public had no right to know such things.

The Minister of State, Home Office (Mr. Tim Renton): I agree with what the hon. Gentleman said about the difficulties of defining what is or is not in the public interest and I shall enlarge upon that later.

The hon. Gentleman believes that it would be in the public interest for the financial affairs of a politician to be known and that if that person has £20 million in the bank, that should be common knowledge. Surely there is a good argument against that on the ground that if that information is known it is likely that his children could be liable to kidnap.

Mr. Galloway: Obviously there is a danger of that.

Mr. Eric S. Heffer (Liverpool, Walton): Some of our previous Prime Ministers have had great difficulties in raising personal finance from time to time, but that did not make them lousy Prime Ministers. Perhaps they could not maintain their personal finances, but that did not mean that they did not make a great contribution to the country. I believe that my hon. Friend's argument is rather weak.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. Interventions are perfectly in order, of course, but I hope the House will remember that they prolong speeches.

Mr. Galloway: I will reach a conclusion shortly. I accept the points made by my hon. Friend and by the Minister. Although a Chancellor of the Exchequer may have an overdraft of £700,000 that does not, of course, negate the possibility of his being a good Chancellor. Nevertheless that information should be in the public domain so that people can weigh in the balance the financial skills, responsibility and probity of that Chancellor. I am not suggesting that every politician should go outside and hold up his bank balance, but we cannot complain if our financial affairs become public knowledge and if they are considered germane by those who write about us.

We have spent most of the debate discussing the press—we have not talked about television or radio—but what about the publishing industry? What about the biographer and those who write memoirs? Those activities, which are crucial to a free society, would be severely circumscribed by the Bill.

I believe that it is generally accepted that when a biography is written about someone of interest, one wants to know about the whole man. As a result of the Bill, the subject of a biography could go to court and suppress large sections of it because he does not want the public to know certain things. I do not believe that that is in the public interest.

Goldman's biography of John Lennon was a repugnant piece of work, which traduced the memory of a great man. Large sections of that book could have been suppressed under the Bill by action through the British courts. Although I loathed Mr. Goldman's book, I could not be party to passing a law that significantly precluded his right to write. Kitty Kelly wrote a marvellous biography about Frank Sinatra which revealed appalling aspects of his character. As a fan of Frank Sinatra I was deeply distressed by those disclosures. Unless I am reading the Bill wrong, I believe that large sections of Kitty Kelly's book could be suppressed. If that happened we would not know the things we now know about Frank Sinatra. Some hon. Members may say that that does not matter a fig, but as a fan, or rather a former fan of Frank Sinatra, I believe that it does.

I believe that the Official Secrets Bill, the broadcasting and terrorism measures and this Bill clearly intend—perhaps unwittingly in the latter case—to chip away at our cherished and vital freedoms. That would take us down the road not to totalitarian dictatorship, but towards the status of a third-rate democracy—the poor man's democracy in Europe. I hope that we shall not take another step down that road by passing the Bill.

11.50 am

Mr. John Hannam (Exeter). The hon. Member for Glasgow, Hillhead (Mr. Galloway) appeared to be presenting a strong argument in support of the Bill, with examples of the gross intrusions he has experienced, but he came down in judgment against the Bill, on the same grounds as my right hon. Friend the Member for Chingford (Mr. Tebbit) had expressed in an article in the Evening Standard last night. The grounds were that we should continue to give the media and press another chance and yet another chance to put its house in order.

I congratulate my hon. Friend the Member for Winchester (Mr. Browne) not only on his luck in the ballot, but on taking on such a contentious and difficult issue and presenting it in the right way. I do not intend to speak for long, but I want to express my support for the principle behind the Bill and to give the reasons why the time has come for us to make the move from self-regulation to positive legal protection. It is sad that after all the years of promises being given by the media that they would uphold and practise a reasonable level of professional ethics, Parliament is having to consider their imposition by statute.

Of course, as Members of Parliament, we are opening ourselves to the usual barrage of articles accusing us of protecting our own personal interests. That is par for the journalistic course. But in all the articles that I have read implying that, there were also undercurrents of a realisation that standards have dropped too far and that it is no great surprise that legislation is being considered. The article written by my right hon. Friend the Member for Chingford falls into the same trap of relating the Bill to an obsession of Members of Parliament to take their revenge on all the journalists who, from time to time, have invaded their privacy. That is a wrong presumption. When we enter politics, we know that we are placing ourselves in an exposed position. The reason why we have become so incensed about the lowering of standards of reporting is our contacts with constituents and our involvement in major incidents, when members of the public have suddenly found themselves thrust into the limelight. We know how often their personal privacy is being trodden underfoot, as my hon. Friend the Member for Thanet, South (Mr. Aitken) pointed out so eloquently earlier.

Like other hon. Members, I want to recount a couple of examples of the type of intrusion that I should like to see stopped and which took place long before I entered politics. When I started my business career, I opened a small restaurant in Somerset, which my hon. Friends the Members for Winchester and for Stafford (Mr. Cash) visited in those early days. Early one evening, many years ago, a distinguished man who had achieved a good deal of publicity because of his romance with a certain royal personage, came with his elderly mother to have a meal. His mother lived nearby in Somerset. During our conversation, I learnt that they had spent the earlier part of the afternoon looking at poultry houses at a well-known poultry house manufacturer, Harry Hebditch Ltd. of Martock.

Two or three hours later, I received a telephone call from William Hickey of the Daily Express, asking me whether it was true that Group-Captain Peter Townsend had been entertaining a young woman at my restaurant. In my naievity, I thought that if I explained the simple truth, I should clear up his misapprehension, so I said that Mr. Townsend had dined at the restaurant with his mother and that he had been looking at poultry houses at a nearby factory. At midnight, that journalist arrived at the front door of poor Mr. Hebditch, the manufacturer of the poultry houses, woke him up, asked the same questions and was told the same true story. An hour later, he arrived at my front door and was sent away with a flea in his ear. An hour later, he arrived at the door of the mother of Mr. Townsend. With all the information that he had received, one would have expected the story to end there. But the next day, the headlines said:

"Ex-Royal lover dines with woman friend in secluded restaurant."

That was the first example in my life of intrusion and misrepresentation.

My second example happened a year later. I was skiing at Kitzbühel in Austria and I happened to be staying at the same hotel as the young Aga Khan—luckily, as I was on a package holiday. The Aga Khan was being subjected to horrific press investigation. We were horrified, several days later, to find that a newspaper reporter and photographer——

Mr. Corbett: Was the Aga Khan on a package holiday?

Mr. Hannam: My package tour was useful, but did not last many years after that. Prices are obviously, rocketing up.

After two or three days, we found that the press had positioned a photographer and journalist in a room opposite the hotel and had taken photographs through the only window visible, which happened to be the window of the Aga Khan's hotel bathroom. One cannot imagine how one could possibly use that in publicity, but photographs were taken and duly published. Such gross intrusions of the privacy of those individuals so disgusted me that I, like so many others, have always recoiled from reading newspapers and magazines that trade in such material.

What has happened since? Have the successive inquiries and reports and Press Council actions resulted in the establishment of ethical standards by the media? The answer must be no. With 309 hon. Members signing a motion last year supporting the Right of Privacy Bill of my hon. Friend the Member for Stafford, there is no doubt that we feel that something pretty drastic must be done.

Journalists to whom I have talked in recent weeks admit—privately, as one would expect—that a bottom line should be drawn on their standards and conduct. We see that privacy laws exist in other countries without threat to press freedom. As my hon. Friend the Member for Winchester said, the individual is protected under our laws against assault, defamation, trespass of property and patent and public order offences, but no effective legal protection exists for private life under English law, despite our ratification of the European convention on human rights and the international convenant on civil and political rights.

The Bill is a genuine attempt to strike the correct balance between the necessary freedom to publish information that is in the public interest—and that would cover a great deal of the activities of Members of Parliament—and the protection for every man and woman, regardless of position or wealth, against the awful intrusions that the media so often feel they have carte blanche to operate. We are told by opponents of the Bill that the definitions are too vague and leave too much to the discretion of judges. I have always believed that our system of common law works on the assumption that the courts build up case law so that effective judgments can evolve. I do not doubt that the Bill will need some amendment in Committee and I hope that the Government will lend their support to that course rather than contriving to have the Bill to be killed.

My right hon. Friend the Member for Chingford in his article took the line that, once again, we should give the press the benefit of the doubt, just as we did in 1970, 1972, 1977 and have repeatedly since then. If I believed that the Press Council in the 1990s would be any more effective than its much criticised predecessors, I might be inclined to hold back. If I believed that the editors and newspaper owners themselves would be more ethical in applying article 8 of the European convention on human rights, which provides that:

[Mr. Hannam]

"Everybody has the right to respect for his private and family life, his home and his correspondence,

I might be inclined to hold back from supporting the Bill. But the appointment by the Sun of its own in-house ombudsman sent me scurrying back to my original position of total support for the Bill. I should like to see legal aid available and I should like access to juries, but the important thing at this stage is to give this vital human rights legislation a Second reading. I hope that the House will do that.

11.59 am

Mr. Gerald Howarth (Cannock and Burntwood): I am delighted to follow my hon. Friend the Member for Exeter (Mr. Hannam), because I, too, support the Bill. My hon. Friend the Member for Winchester (Mr. Browne) has set out his stall most eloquently and has caught the public mood because public opinion is now strongly behind this measure.

The debate is being held because of growing public concern, unchecked by the propaganda of eminent leader writers, about the excesses of the press—especially at its gutter end. For example, there is intrusion into family grief such as occurred in the case of the captain of the Herald of Free Enterprise. That case was eloquently outlined by my hon. Friend the Member for Thanet, South (Mr. Aitken), and many other examples abound from recent tragedies.

Secondly, there is hounding of the royal family, the intrusion of gigantic telephoto lenses that are carried off at great expense to distant islands in the West Indies and elsewhere, so that at no time are members of the royal family allowed any time to themselves free from the fear that any private action of theirs could be exposed and subjected to the gaze of the tabloid press. Thirdly, there is the persecution of individuals, salacious stories about private lives that titillate the public and line the pockets of unscrupulous journalists and their proprietors.

As has been said, some journalists say, "We do not like doing this but we are obliged to do it." There are examples of that in history where people have said, "I was only obeying orders." Such journalists could resign if they do not like the way in which their employer requires them to work.

I shall be brief and give just one example in the third category of those that I have mentioned. I agree with my hon. Friend the Member for Aldershot (Mr. Critchley) —I hope that that does not cause him too much enbarrassment—that people in public life are entitled to some protection. That point was most eloquently made by the hon. Member for Bristol, South (Ms. Primarolo) whose personal experience moved the House. It certainly moved me. In my own small way I had a similar experience when I asked a question at Prime Minister's Question Time. I asked my right hon. Friend whether she would support the reintroduction of corporal punishment because the day before three men had tried to batter down the door of my home at 2 o'clock in the afternoon when my wife was there with my baby son. That seemed a perfectly reasonable example to promote the case that I was making.

Within half an hour of asking the question I had a frantic call from my wife who told me that hordes of journalists were at the door and that one newspaper had said that unless it got a nice photograph it would put in the newspaper a photograph of the house. I had to deal with the news editor of that newspaper and tell him that I would be grateful if he did not print a photograph of my house because that would attract all sorts of vandals who would know that Members of Parliament work odd hours. I had to do a deal and I regretted that. However in the interests of my family I had to do it.

Even if we have not had such experiences ourselves, many of us, like my hon. Friend the member for Aldershot, have constituents who have had such experiences. Our concern today should not be for ourselves. As I said to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Hillhead (Mr. Galloway) Members of Parliament are influential and in the House we have the privilege of being able to expose these excesses. The hon. Gentleman has been able to put the record right today. Our concern should be for those who have no such remedy.

Every Sunday I go to my local newsagent to scan the press. I resent paying any money to line the pockets of newspaper proprietors and have an arrangement with my newsagent to look through the papers. A glance at page one is quite sufficient and one does not need to delve any further. I shall forgo the example of a story about a world war 2 bomber found in outer space. Recently a tabloid gutter newspaper—I shall not name it or give details of the issue, because I do not want to add to the newspaper's notoriety—had a story exposing the private life of an accomplished actor who plays in a popular comedy series. He is said to have said, "I am aware that this could destroy me."

We are not talking about a politician who publically advocates sobriety but is to be found in the Kremlin bar at midnight stoned out of his mind. I am not suggesting that any hon. Members are in that category, because I would be out of order if I did that. We are not talking about somebody who has taken a conscious decision to enter public life or about a clergyman who has had a secret affair with the doctor's wife. We are talking about a private individual whose sole qualification for such attention is that he has become immensely popular with the public because the talent that he deploys is widely appreciated and enjoyed by many viewers. What right have a couple of Wapping hacks to pillory this man and, in his words, "destroy him"? I strongly disapprove of the behaviour of which he is said to have been guilty, but I protest that he is not public property and has a right to a private life.

The report was sanctimonious garbage and issued an unbelievably cant invitation to readers to phone in on separate telephone numbers to say whether the actor should stay in the television series or be harried out by a bunch of unscrupulous, disgraceful, disreputable and probably anonymous hacks whose own private lives would fail to stand up to the scrutiny of a lighted match. No doubt there will be a follow-up story about this man. I have made the assumption that all this is true.

There is also the case of an hon. Friend who left the House at the last election. He is still an hon. Friend but is no longer a Member of the House. I am speaking about Harvey Proctor, and many of us know about his experience. He was charged with an offence and between his being charged and convicted a journalist called Annette Witteridge, a freelancer working for the News of the World, wrote a story in May 1987 suggesting that Harvey Proctor's friends were concerned about his health and that he should have an AIDS test. She told him that she had checked the story but later admitted that she had not done so and four or five months later her source told her that it was a pack of lies.

To this day the "News of the Screws"—for that is the popular name for the News of the World—has failed to retract that story. It is despicable that such people should continue to be allowed to operate in what is called a profession. They should have been drummed out of it long ago. I hope that those two examples show the kind of problem with which we are dealing.

The press is in part hostile to the Bill. Of course freedom of expression is vital and no hon. Member would gainsay that. However that freedom does not extend to the right to destroy individuals or their characters. The hon. Member for Hillhead is not in the Chamber. I say for his benefit that the free market operates, not in a vacuum but within bounds. There is the law of defamation, and the sponsors of the Bill seek to provide further clarification of the bounds within which free comment may take place. The press says that self-regulation is the safeguard, but, as early as 1962, Lord Shawcross was critical of the Press Council. Over many years we have had extensive declarations of good intent from the Press Council, none of which in my view, nor I think in the view of the House has been fulfilled.

There was a declaration of principle on privacy in April 1976 which stated:

"The publication of information about the private lives or concerns of individuals without their consent is only acceptable if there is a legitimate public interest overriding the right of privacy."

That is clearly the kind of thing that the Bill seeks to address, but has the press lived up to that? The answer is no. I do not agree with what my right hon. Friend the Member for Chingford (Mr. Tebbit) said in his article in yesterday's Evening Standard and I told him so last night. There is a remedy to him. He is a powerful man and can tell the press barons that, if they go beyond the boundary of what he deems to be his private life, he will come down on them like a ton of bricks. That remedy is not open to many of our fellow citizens to whom this Bill would give a remedy. That is why I have the greatest pleasure in supporting the Bill and I hope that it will be carried by the House.

12.10 pm

Mr. Ron Brown (Edinburgh, Leith): I support the Bill and do so for good reason. We should always remember that privacy is important to all of us, rich or poor, Socialist or non-Socialist. I am sure that many of us can speak from personal experiences. I can certainly give one or or two examples of my own.

An incident involving my assistant allegedly took place in the shower room of this House. I went to the Serjeant at Arms and asked for information about that alleged incident. He said that he had no information. In other words, the incident did not take place, but that did not stop the Sun printing a story. Of course, it was exciting stuff, but it was untrue. Nor did it stop the News of the World, the sister paper of the Sun, going one step further. It alleged that my assistant had become pregnant as a result of that so-called incident and it justified its allegation on the basis of a report thought up by a drug addict. That individual was paid a lot of money for that story. Not only did the Murdoch press feed his craving for drugs, but it fed a pack of lies to the public.

Naturally, the News of the World wanted to interview my assistant and offered her £30,000 for her story. There was no story, but that did not stop the newspaper and its reporters hounding my assistant, her husband and her relatives. That was despicable. They attempted to dig the dirt, but as they found no dirt, they had to invent the dirt. That is a sad reflection on the tabloids of this country.

If I condemn the Murdoch empire, I also condemn the Maxwell empire because its so-called newspaper, The People, thought that it could do a flyer. It thought that it would do a similar type of story about me, so what did it do? It found that I had originally stayed in Scotland. Journalists went to the flat at my old address. They spoke to the neighbours and asked them, "Could you find anything wrong with Ron Brown's presence at this address?" There was no criticism, but they found an old-age pensioner in that street and gave him a great deal of money to make a number of allegations. That old man —I do not blame him; no doubt the money was useful —alleged that he could see into my bedroom. He said that he could see all sorts of lurid events which allegedly took place there. That is remarkable. He could see through two sets of curtains and two sets of brick walls because the bedroom is at the other side of the house. That is a fact. The house is still there and is now occupied by a Tory Member. I am sure that he will give a guided tour to prove my point.

Surely we have reached a stage where any story can be pumped out by the tabloids and the media, provided that they can pay for it. Unfortunately, many people are willing to accept money, irrespective of the truth of the incident. The tabloids go from bad to worse. Of course, they live up to their slogan which states, about stories, "Make it simple, make it juicy, and make it up". That has repeatedly been the case in recent years and that slogan unfortunately brings the media into disrepute. It affects many honourable journalists because most of us suspect journalists' motives. That may be unfair, but the yardstick that we use as Members of Parliament must sometimes be used elsewhere.

Some people will no doubt suggest that I am exaggerating, that I complain too much and that, after all, I could go to the Press Council. I did go to the Press Council, but it did very little. It was not particularly interested and, when it considered all the allegations, it favoured, in the main, the media. It supported the tabloids, yet the tabloids could produce no evidence against me or my assistant.

Let me give another example of how the Press Council operates. Last January, I was in Afghanistan, negotiating the release of a French journalist who was held by the Afghan Government. There was an agreement for me to phone in reports about my efforts to the Press Association. Those reports were mentioned by the Sunday Express which, in turn, tried to rubbish my efforts. It said that I had made reverse-charge calls to the Press Association from Afghanistan, so I complained to the Press Council. The council looked at my complaint and found in favour of the Sunday Express, yet the Press Association has now admitted that it was wrong and that the Press Council was wrong. To my knowledge the Press Council has not reversed its decision.

[Mr. Ron Brown]

That typifies the attitude of the Press Council at present. If a Member of Parliament cannot get a fair hearing from the Press council, who can? It will certainly not be the people outside this place whom we represent. I say that because a particular case springs to mind. Some time ago there was a rape case in Leith. It was a particularly nasty case and the tabloids were anxious to interview the victim and the mother. The mother refused and told the Sun in particular that she did not want to say anything. What did the Sun do? It made up an interview and, when a complaint was lodged with the Press Council, the council did nothing to help that particular lady.

Of course, if a person has bags of money, he can always go to the courts. We should always remember Gerald Nabarro's infamous remark that, if one is rich, one can buy justice. Sadly, that is the case today. Not everyone is wealthy enough to hire lawyers or has the money of Elton John, Jeffrey Archer or Koo Stark. Most people simply cannot afford lawyers to go to court.

I do not always agree with the Prime Minister, but she made the point some time ago, when she condemned trial by the media, that we must not simply say that we condemn it; we should do something about it. That is why, if we wish to look for a remedy, we must consider this Bill. It may not be perfect, but at least it is a step in the right direction and perhaps it will, for once, provide some basic rights and bring some sanity back to this country, particularly in the way that reports are put out by the media. This is an important Bill and I hope that all hon. Members will support it.

12.19 pm

Mr. Ivan Lawrence: I accord my congratulations to my hon. Friend the Member for Winchester (Mr. Browne) for judging the moment of parliamentary and public anger that enables him to make this difficult change to the law. It is a great honour to be a sponsor.

The gutter press is the unacceptable face of our free society. If the press does not like the Bill, it has only itself to blame, for, despite continuous warnings over many years, it has chosen to do nothing to control itself. The Bill is long overdue, and few in Britain will dispute that. One wonders why such a law was not placed on the statute book before.

It is partly because we do not have a written constitution enshrining a Bill of rights. We tend to forbid certain actions rather than give rights to enjoy. It is partly because the law of defamation, trespass and confidence, and the criminal law of breach of peace, have frequently been said to be adequate for dealing with problems caused by infringements of privacy. The argument that the Mancroft Bill of the 1960s was unworkable was advanced by the then very powerful Lord Chancellor, Lord Kilmuir. It was said that such legislation would constitute a serious danger to a free press and its right to publish and enjoy free expression. Brian Walden's Bill was withdrawn when the Home Secretary of the day announced that the Government proposed establishing a Royal Commission. Resistance to a privacy law was underlined by powerful law reform committees, such as the Younger committee in 1974 and the Porter committee on defamation in 1948. The conclusion reached by them all was that the right to privacy was too drastic a remedy for dealing with the relatively infrequent occasions when privacy had been abused, and that the risk of newspapers being deterred from communicating matters of great public concern was so high that occasional intrusions should be tolerated. We can now draw on the experience of countries such as the United States that have a law of privacy, and where there seems to be little problem in telling the public what they need to know in their own interest, notwithstanding such laws.

The tide has now risen, and it is to be hoped that no Canute seated at Wapping or by the river Fleet will turn it back. How has that happened? It is because the catalogue of horrors has grown too large and has been brought too closely to the attention of right hon and hon. Members.

I have no need to improve on the stories advanced today by my hon. Friends the Member for Thanet, South (Mr. Aitken) and for Aldershot (Mr. Critchley), and the hon. Members for Bristol, South (Ms. Primarolo), for Hillhead and for Edinburgh, Leith (Mr. Brown). However, I make mention of the totally despicable behaviour, by whichever newspaper it was, when, after the wife of one of the House's most respected Members was killed in a terrorist explosion and he lay maimed and mauled, to send its reporters to their young children's school to ask how they felt about what happened to their parents. It is difficult to imagine a more despicable act. It was at that moment that my thoughts turned to doing something far more drastic than had been previously attempted, to discipline the behaviour of a section of the press.

The tide has turned because it is now dawning on many people that, given the existence of communications satellites, sophisticated listening devices, computers and high-definition long-distance photography, the situation will become very much worse unless something is done. There is the realisation also that the Press Council has utterly failed. That is not its fault. It was never a court of law, and never had the power to stop publication. However, when a former Press Council chairman, Sir Zelman Cowen, and the present holder of that office, Louis Blom-Cooper, think that the time has come for the law to step in because the council is too feeble to discipline the gutter press, we must take cognisance of that.

Mr. Greg Knight: Will my hon. and learned Friend say when Louis Blom-Cooper commented that the law should step in? I understand that he never made such a comment. He said that he felt the Press Council as currently constituted needs changing, and that he proposes making certain amendments next week. I am not aware that he has ever made the statement that the law should step in and supplant the Press Council.

Mr. Lawrence: That is the conclusion I draw from the criticism levied by the current chairman of the council and by one of his predecessors—that their frustration is so great that something must be done. Whether the answer is strengthening the Press Council or introducing a right of privacy is a matter for the House to consider.

The tide has turned also because it is now clear that remedies existing in other areas of the law of tort and of the criminal law are inadequate for dealing with the overwhelming flood of press abuse. The hon. Member for Hillhead was wrong to suggest that the crime of burglary will necessarily deter someone from entering premises for the purpose of bugging them.

The final reason why I believe the tide has turned is this excellent Bill, which neatly avoids the imprecise and generalised provisions of a right to privacy that has been the subject of past criticism because of its unworkability, in favour of a more practical and realistic approach to protecting the public misuse of private information. So that privacy can be breached, yes, but the product of it cannot be used—thus making it a waste of time to invade privacy.

This is a Bill whose time has come. It will be welcomed by all fair-minded people, as it will by all who have suffered at the hands of the gutter press and by their families, whose suffering has often been much greater. I suspect that the Bill is welcomed by a large section of the press, if only with relief that at last something is being done to stop the gutter press from doing something that is clearly indecent, to protect circulation when their competitors are doing the same thing. The Bill will certainly be welcomed by the decent press as a step forward in protecting the liberty of the subject. The Bill will be popular in the country because it recognises the deep feeling among all those who are privileged to live in a free society—for it has been said that, of all the jewels in the crown of human life, none shines so bright as the right to be left alone.

12.28 pm

Mr. Frank Cook (Stockton, North): I join other hon. Members in congratulating the hon. Member for Winchester (Mr. Browne) on his good fortune in the ballot, and also on his good judgment in choosing this topic. I thank him for doing me the honour of asking me to be one of the Bill's Labour sponsors, an honour that I gladly accept. While I have one or two reservations at this stage, as would anyone, I assure the hon. Gentleman and the Bill's other sponsors that I shall do all I can to improve the Bill and help it to reach the statute book.

Having listened carefully to the debate since 9.30 this morning, I have observed a number of ironies. First, I find it ironic that we should be criticising the press and at the same time offering its members a field day at our expense. I have been mildly amused at the almost salacious style of certain sketch writers who have scurried in and out of the Press Gallery as different hon. Members have stood up to speak. It is significant that they have been absent when the tone of the debate has been serious. I do not, of course, wish to suggest that any of it has been frivolous, but I think that the journalists have been much more interested in the gossipy, confessional contributions of some hon. Members than in attempts to analyse the problem seriously.

I do not blame the journalists for that. They make their bread by selling such nonsense, and we cannot expect them to change today simply because we happen to be debating their affairs—or our affairs, as discussed by them—any more than we can expect the leopard to change its spots.

I am pleased to see that my hon. Friend the Member for Glasgow, Hillhead (Mr. Galloway) has returned to the Chamber. He produced a wonderful exposé—an appropriate word in this context—of the case for the Bill, and then went on to say that it posed a threat to freedom. I understand what he means, and genuinely sympathise with the need to protect press freedom; but freedom is a two-way thing.

In an article that has already been mentioned several times this morning, the eminent barrister Robert Alexander quotes Oliver Wendell Holmes as saying:

"The right to swing my fist stops where the other man's nose begins."

That is fine as far as it goes, but does it go far enough? I have been accused by the press of almost swinging my fist. Had I done so, which I did not, and my fist had not landed, it could have been said that no freedom had been violated. But the threat to swing a fist is indeed an infringement of freedom if the potential victim happens to be frightened of receiving a fisticuff, as most people are.

I would go much further than Robert Alexander. I do not think that it is enough for my hon. Friend the Member for Hillhead to justify his opposition on those grounds. It is certainly not fair for him to say that he wants to be on the Standing Committee simply because he thinks that the Bill threatens to infringe freedoms and he wants to stop it from doing so if he will not allow freedom to those who are threatened.

It is also ironic that we should be discussing openness of access and what should and should not be permissible, and seeking to defend individual privacy from one point of view, when for a couple of days this week we have discussed the probability of Government agents freely infringing individual privacy. It is reassuring to see that so many Conservative Members have turned out to support the Bill; I only wish that I had seen as much ardent enthusiasm for the protection of the individual earlier this week. I notice that the Comptroller of Her Majesty's Household is nodding his head. I do not know whether he is nodding his head in agreement or whether he is nodding his head in appreciation of the irony of the situation. [HON. MEMBERS: "He is nodding off."] Ah, well, there we go.

I reaffirm my enthusiasm for the measure, as long as it is given a good airing in Committee. I promise the sponsor of the Bill all my support.

12.34 pm

Mr. Neil Hamilton (Tatton): No hon. Member can have sat through this morning's debate without being deeply moved by the experiences of many of the speakers that have been so eloquently recounted—some serio-comic and some desperately serious, which I found very moving, such as the speech of the hon. Member for Bristol, South (Ms. Primarolo). As is well known, I have crossed swords with the press and the broadcasting media from time to time, but I have no personal axe to grind in the debate. My disputes with them were entirely outwith the ambit of the Bill. We must draw a firm distinction between the laws of libel and what they are designed to cope with and the mischief with which this Bill is designed to cope.

I am sure that all hon. Members agree with the aims and objects of my hon. Friend the Member for Winchester (Mr. Browne), to whom we must all be grateful for sponsoring the Bill. Article 8 of the European convention on human rights provides for precisely the kind of result that my hon. Friend wishes to be achieved, but it does so in more generalised terms. Article 8 says that everybody has the right to respect for his private and family life, his home and his correspondence.

Freedoms of a similar kind have been protected in English law for centuries. There is freedom of the person from physical attack, as the hon. Member for Stockton, North (Mr. Cook) pointed out. It includes causing somebody to fear that he is about to be hit. That is already covered by the criminal law. There is also freedom to enjoy our property without molestation and free from invasion from without. In an eloquent speech in this House 250 years ago, William Pitt, Earl of Chatham, said:

[Mr. Neil Hamilton]

"The poorest man may in his cottage bid defiance to all the forces of the Crown. It may be frail—its roof may shake—the wind may blow through it—the storm may enter—the rain may enter—but the King of England cannot enter—all his force dares not cross the threshold of the ruined tenement."

The law of this country, both the statutory and the common law as it has developed throughout the centuries, has protected private individuals against unwarranted incursions into their privacy in respect of their physical assets and persons. The time is now upon us when we should extend that protection to private life.

That view is shared by the Press Council, which in its 1976 annual report said:

"The publication of information about the private lives or concerns of individuals without their consent is only acceptable if there is a legitimate public interest overriding the right to privacy."

That is precisely what the Bill is designed to achieve.

Several hon. Members have pointed out that the Press Council, as an exercise in self-regulation, has manifestly failed. This morning we have heard of countless examples of the press acting like a pack of ravening hounds, setting itself on almost defenceless individuals and tearing them to pieces. The heartless, pitiless and merciless individuals who have been responsible for some of these excesses in many ways deserve our pity. How they sleep at night knowing what they have done, Heaven knows.

As my hon. and learned Friend the Member for Burton (Mr. Lawrence) pointed out, the former chairman of the Press Council, Sir Zelman Cowen, has said that he is sick at heart at the Press Council's failures and the revelations that have exposed people to hurt. Not all journalists today are quite as brazen as some who have treated the Press Council with contempt in years gone by. Mr. John Gordon, a former editor of the Sunday Express, when threatened by a report on him to the Press Council for failure to publish a justified factual correction, said this to his correspondent:

"You can report me to the Press Council, Madam Tussaud's, the Society for the Protection of Sputniks, NATO, UNESCO or the Dancing Dervishes' Association as you wish. May you enjoy yourself."

That is a fairly robust rejection of the Press Council and the protection which it is supposed to offer readers.

Dame Elaine Kellett-Bowman: I had a job with the Press Council at that time. He was the only one who treated it with such disrespect while it was under the chairmanship of Lord Devlin. It was only after Lord Devlin left that the press began to put two fingers up to it.

Mr. Hamilton: I simply cannot believe that my hon. Friend was a member of the Press Council that long ago. She does not look as if she could satisfy the dates to which she referred.

Even today there are such examples, and the Sun is foremost among them. There was the case of Mr. Terrance McCabe who refused to cross the picket line at Wapping. I was wholly opposed to the dispute at Wapping and I thought that the unions were quite wrong. But I am happy to draw to the attention of the House an example which involves somebody who is wholly opposed to what I stand for which demonstrates the tyranny of the press over individuals. Mr. McCabe refused to cross the picket line at Wapping. The Sun then printed a story about him calling him a "lying trucker" and printed details of his previous convictions. That article was condemned by the Press Council. The Sun responded by repeating the allegations and dared Mr. McCabe to sue. The Press Council further censured the Sun. As a result the Sun published the adjudication prominently and in full and repeated the allegations for the third time. Quite manifestly, the Press Council is not treated seriously by the press.

Mr. Cash: I spoke to Terrance McCabe quite recently and I received a letter from his wife explaining the incredible hurt, the dreadful way in which she was treated and the fact that their children were involved. Therefore, the situation involved their entire family.

Mr. Hamilton: I am sure that hon. Members will be moved by what my hon. Friend has said.

The position of the Press Council is so bad that in 1980 the NUJ withdrew its support for the Press Council on the ground that it was incapable of reform and wholly ineffective. I share the view of the NUJ, as do most hon. Members present today.

My hon. Friend the Member for Derby, North (Mr. Knight), who I know is a libertarian and is opposed to the Bill, drew attention to article 10 of the European convention on human rights which refers to the right to information. But that right to information is already restricted in many respects by existing law, not least by the law relating to defamation which by and large concerns only false allegations; but in some cases, even the truth is defeated as a defence of defamation by proof of malice, so there are restrictions on the dissemination of truthful information where it is not regarded as being justifiable in the public interest. The defence of fair comment in defamation is available only if that fair comment is made in the public interest.

If the hon. Member for Glasgow, Hillhead (Mr. Galloway) were to extend his argument that we cannot trust the courts to decide such issues, logic would dictate that we remove one of the existing defences in the law of defamation which was designed to protect persons making comments in the public interest.

The Bill does not introduce anything particularly novel in the method by which it seeks to achieve its object. Over the centuries the courts have developed the law in a flexible way and it will be further developed according to the acceptance of society at the time.

Mr. Lawrence: My hon. Friend does not need to be defensive in answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Derby, North (Mr. Knight) because the international covenant on civil and political rights and the European convention on human rights include rights of privacy, so we are inconsistent with those international agreements by not having such a right.

Mr. Hamilton: I am grateful to my hon. and learned Friend for that information. It is true that we are unusual amongst industrial and advanced states in having no protection for the rights of privacy.

Mr. Greg Knight: As my hon. Friend spent the last few minutes of his speech referring to my intervention, I think that he will accept that it is only right for me to place on record the reason why I made that intervention. It is not fair to make a selective reference to a convention. My hon. Friend the Member for Winchester (Mr. Browne) referred to article 8, but we should also appreciate that the convention contains article 10.

My hon. Friend the Member for Tatton (Mr. Hamilton) spoke about other countries' laws on privacy. He should bear in mind that their laws on defamation are different from ours. We should look at the whole picture and not just at this particular narrow matter.

Mr. Hamilton: I accept that. The experiences of different countries will differ. Some countries' laws are more draconian than the Bill's provisions, and others are less so. Nevertheless, we are unusual amongst Western countries in having no proper protection for the individual against the abuses about which we have heard so much this morning.

I resent the view expressed by some hon. Members who, although they support the Bill, say that, as public figures, we are not entitled to privacy in our personal lives. There are aspects of our behaviour in private that impinge on our public duties, and it is right that the public should have a right to know about those actions and we should be held accountable for them. However, there is a swathe of activities which may not appeal to everyone but which are private and which those in the public eye are entitled to carry out privately.

Mr. Nigel Dempster, who performs a function that might be described as dandruff on the shoulders of Fleet street—that is the politest way to describe him—said:

"People who promote themselves as Members of Parliament, or write books and flog them to the public, or open their houses for profit, forfeit their right to their personal lives. They know that. They've known that throughout the history of this great country of ours."

That is an example of arrogance in the press that we are here to complain about—[Interruption.] I look forward to the revelations to come in the speech of the hon. Member for Birmingham, Erdington (Mr. Corbett).

I am anxious to complete my speech but I shall address the complaint made by opponents of the Bill that the proposals it contains are vague. They are no more vague than the concepts used in the common laws of negligence and nuisance and others upon which British law is based —the concept of reasonableness and the reasonable man. For 500 or 600 years the courts have developed and interpreted those concepts according to the facts of each case. The courts will continue to be able to do that and to develop in accordance with changes in feeling about this issue as they do in other matters.

If the Bill is passed, as I hope it will be, it will not lead to undue prohibition of freedom of speech. There are few countries in which that principle is taken more seriously than in the United States where it is protected by the constitution and the Supreme Court. The United States has a law of privacy which, in many respects, is similar to that which we are seeking to achieve in the Bill. It is applicable, inter alia, only if it involves private facts that do not belong to the category of legitimate news, the provisions of which are protected by the United States guarantee of freedom of speech. Although there is no written constitution in this country, we can replicate the provisions in the United States on legitimate access to information.

It has been said before that nobody lost money by underestimating the public taste. Tabloid newspapers have proved that daily for many years. We should ask them to do what the News of the World used to place at the end of its agent provocateur articles—make an excuse and leave.

12.49 pm

The Minister of State, Home Office (Mr. Tim Renton): It may be for the convenience of the House if I intervene to give the Government's view on the Bill.

I congratulate my hon. Friend the Member for Winchester (Mr. Browne) on his success in the ballot and on the skilful, persuasive and eloquent manner in which he invited the House to give the Bill a Second Reading. I pay tribute to the fact that he has not been afraid to make use of his good fortune in the ballot to take up an issue which, while undoubtedly of much public interest and importance, has nonetheless had a somewhat chequered history of previous attempts to legislate. I admire the pertinacity of my hon. Friend and his drafting ally, my hon. Friend the Member for Stafford (Mr. Cash). I have seen them a number of times in recent weeks huddled together in various parts of the House like Cassius and Casca, looking lean and hungry while preparing the Bill. I hope only that it is a Fleet street Julius Caesar whom they have in their sights rather than a Minister.

The roll call of those who have tried but failed to introduce a statutory right of privacy is impressive. Previous attempts were made by Lord Mancroft in 1961, Alex Lyon in 1967, Brian Walden in 1969 and, most recently, my hon. Friend the Member for Stafford in 1987. The Walden Bill led the then Home Secretary, now Lord Callaghan, to establish a committee on privacy under the chairmanship of the late Sir Kenneth Younger, which reported in 1972. Despite its age, the Younger report is still the definitive work on the subject. I disagree with my hon. Friend the Member for Winchester that its findings were naive. Events have moved on since 1972 and the world described by Younger was in some respects different from that of today. I should not wish to suggest that Younger's recommendations must necessarily represent the last word, but much of the committee's underlying analysis remains good and we must carefully consider the arguments that it presented.

I echo strongly what my hon. Friend the Member for Winchester and other hon. Members said about the extent of concern at the intrusion into individuals' private lives. I should not want to ignore the serious distress and hurt that can be caused to victims and their families. Undoubtedly, there is growing resentment in many quarters at the way in which some of the tabloid press blatantly exploits details of the private lives of not only public figures but, on too many occasions, ordinary people such as victims of disasters and their relatives, who, through no choice of their own, but through bad luck or happenstance, are thrust into the public eye. I hope that what has been said in the debate will be widely reported in the tabloids and the serious press.

Mr. Ron Leighton (Newham, North-East): Does the Minister accept that the behaviour of the tabloid press has become worse since Younger reported?

Mr. Renton: That point has been made often in the debate, and I shall return to it later.

[Mr. Renton]

There is something very objectionable about seeing the privacy of individuals invaded and lives, reputations and families destroyed by newspapers in pursuit simply of higher circulation figures. At times it seems as if the freedom of the press has degenerated into unpleasant and unforgivable licence. My hon. Friend the Member for Thanet, South (Mr. Aitken) gave us examples of the disgraceful behaviour of journalists after the sinking of the Herald of Free Enterprise. My hon. Friend the Member for Aldershot (Mr. Critchley) picked up on that theme in his inimitable columnist style. To show that the feelings is shared by hon. Members on both sides of the House, I am sure that we all have much sympathy with the hon. Member for Bristol, South (Ms. Primarolo) and a sense of disgust at some of the things described by the hon. Member for Glasgow, Hillhead (Mr. Galloway).

It is one thing to feel a sense of outrage and distaste about those things, but it is quite another to devise a sensible and satisfactory means of putting matters right. To use the metaphor employed by my hon. Friend the Member for Winchester, we need a means that will keep the water in the moat surrounding the metaphorical castle rather than one which allows it to seep out in unforeseen ways.

Ms. Clare Short (Birmingham, Ladywood): Does the Minister agree that as well as the invasion of privacy and the harm that is done to individuals and families, we should also consider the standards of our media and press? Material involving degeneracy and a low level of titillation does not simply relate to the invasion of privacy. There must be fundamental standards in the press. That enters the argument as well.

Mr. Renton: The hon. Lady is trying to lead me down an avenue in which she is very interested and which she may want to explore in the context of another private Member's Bill later in the Session.

I understand and sympathise with the view of my hon. Friend the Member for Winchester and his sponsors that this area calls for legislative action. I am aware that others take a similar view. Some years ago a committee of Justice, the British section of the International Commission of Jurists, to which my hon. Friend the Member for Winchester referred, published an influential report calling for the creation of a general right of privacy. That report was the basis for Brian Walden's subsequent Bill and the arguments have been carried forward since by Peter Carter-Ruck and most recently by Lord Alexander in his article in The Daily Telegraph last week.

Those who advocate a change in the law may be right. The Government are not prepared to say that they are wrong or that we have a better solution to put before the House. Nor do we want to argue, despite the complexities, that this is a subject which is inherently unsuitable for private Members' legislation. We shall not therefore oppose the Second Reading. I hope that my hon. Friend the Member for Winchester and his sponsors will take comfort from that. If it is the wish of the House, we are prepared for the Bill to be considered in detail in Committee. However, having said that, it is right for me to put on record a number of the reservations which the Government have about legislating on privacy and the legislation before us.

We must consider the role that the law should play in this area. My hon. Friend the Member for Winchester quoted extensively from Lord Ross and the minority report to the Younger Committee. However, I want to remind the House of the majority conclusion of that report. It stated:

"Privacy, however defined, embodies values which are essential to a free society. It requires the support of society as a whole. But the law is only one of the factors determining the climate of a democratic society"— and that refers back to the point raised by the hon. Member for Birmingham, Ladywood (Ms. Short)—

"and it is often only a minor factor. Education, professional standards and the free interplay of ideas and discussion through the mass media and the organs of political democracy can do at least as much as the law to establish and maintain standards of behaviour."

Mr. Cash: My hon. Friend may recall that I quoted from the Younger report, which stated unequivocally that the committee had concluded merely that on balance—in 1972—there was no need, as it saw it, for a general right of privacy. That appears to be a different question from the one with which my hon. Friend is dealing.

Mr. Renton: I do not believe that that is right. I am conscious that my hon. Friend stressed in his speech the use of the word "yet" in the Younger committee report, and that is a word that I too, would use. I shall come back to that later.

The committee went on to say that it saw risks in placing excessive reliance on the law to protect privacy and that, subject to some specific recommendations aimed at giving the law its due place in the protection of privacy, it saw no need to extend it further. It argued especially against including any general right of privacy in our domestic law. It based its argument—the degree to which this has changed is questionable—in large part on the uncertain scope and unpredictable implications of a general right of privacy. In our judgment, a further consideration must be whether the creation of a new statutory right is likely in practice to give satisfactory redress to those whose privacy has been infringed. That is a question which must concern supporters of the Bill on both sides of the House, because the one thing that they want to see is satisfactory redress for those whose rights have been infringed.

That matter takes us straight into the question of legal aid for privacy actions. Under the Bill, the normal arrangements for civil legal aid would apply. With great respect to my hon. Friend the Member for Winchester, I believe that his remarks were incorrect on that point. My hon. Friend the Member for Derby, North (Mr. Knight) was right in his intervention. Legal aid is automatically available unless provisions are made to the contrary. It is a well-known fact, however, that legal aid is not available in defamation actions.

Mr. Browne: I understand that the Legal Aid Act 1988 enables the Lord Chancellor to extend legal aid to areas of the law by regulation. We should be pleased to see the Lord Chancellor do that. We are not precluding legal aid, but we have not included it in the Bill because we do not want to give officials the chance to hit it out of Parliament.

Mr. Renton: I listened carefully to my hon. Friend. I am not a lawyer any more than he is, but I know that the Lord Chancellor may, if he wishes, extend legal aid to categories that are currently exempted. Those apart, the normal arrangements for civil legal aid will apply unless specific provisions are made to the contrary, which is a different point.

Legal aid is not available in defamation actions, as litigation in that area can be expected to be—and certainly is—contentious and uncertain, and more likely than most other kinds of proceedings to prove trivial or ill-founded. Similar considerations might point to excluding legal aid from proceedings for breach of privacy under the Bill. Although the legal aid scheme seeks to exclude unmeritorious proceedings—that might be something else that my hon. Friend the Member for Winchester had in mind—that is likely to prove especially difficult in actions for breach of privacy, and the availability of legal aid in such cases could be potentially expensive. We must recognise, therefore, that, as it stands, the Bill could have considerable resource implications because of the burden that it would impose on the legal aid fund, which was another point made by my hon. Friend the Member for Derby, North.

Mr. Quentin Davies: Does my hon. Friend agree that, if contingency fees are introduced—contrary to the restrictive practices currently upheld by the two sides of the legal profession—they would go a long way towards solving the problem and ensuring that, if the Bill becomes law, every citizen will have redress irrespective of his means, so long as he can persuade a lawyer that he has a sufficiently good case to represent him on that basis?

Mr. Renton: My hon. Friend leads me down an interesting path. From my experience as a commercial man in the United States, I have great sympathy with the idea of contingency fees. The possibility of extending that principle to either libel or invasion of privacy actions has yet to be explored. I accept, however, that it is an interesting idea.

My hon. Friends the Members for Winchester and for Stafford were right to remind the House that, by enabling actions to be taken in the county courts, costs are likely to be a good deal less than they would be in the High Court where fees are higher and cases tend to take longer to resolve. But we would be misleading ourselves to pretend that the cost of actions even in the county court may not be a serious deterrent for many would-be litigants.

Mr. John Browne: Is my hon. Friend saying that serious consideration by the Government about whether they should offer the individual citizen protection before the law, which would fill a serious existing gap—protection already approved of by the Government as a consequence of their international obligations—could be precluded because it might, as my hon. Friend the Member for Derby, North (Mr. Knight) said, have financial implications? Is that a serious reason to think ill of the Bill?

Mr. Renton: I am just about to discuss the interface between privacy and other areas of the law, which so far has only been commented upon by the hon. Member for Hillhead. One could argue that if it were commonly agreed that legal aid should be available for privacy actions—as the Bill is currently drafted there would be legal aid for such actions—there is a consequential reason why that aid should also be available for libel actions.

I shall explain what we see as the danger of legislating for privacy in isolation from other related areas of the civil law, in particular the link between privacy and breach of confidence and privacy and defamation.

Breach of confidence affords protection against the disclosure or use of information which is not publicly known and which has been entrusted to a person in circumstances imposing an obligation not to disclose or use it without the authority of the person imparting it. That action would therefore be available in some circumstances to which my hon. Friend's Bill would also apply. The Younger committee itself drew attention to the action for breach of confidence which it considered was potentially capable of affording greater protection to privacy than had hitherto been realised. The issue was subsequently referred to the English and Scottish Law Commissions, which have made proposals for changes to the existing law.

The interface between privacy and defamation is, in principle, yet more clear-cut. While my hon. Friend's Bill is concerned essentially with the disclosure of what is true, the essence of defamation is that it relates to statements that are both defamatory and false. But, that said, the injury inflicted by an invasion of privacy must bear a striking resemblance to the wrong for which a remedy is provided in the law of defamation. It is necessary therefore that the two should be considered in the same context. Proposals were made by the Faulks committee as long ago as 1975 for reforming the law on defamation but they have not found favour with successive Governments.

Mr. Cash: Does my hon. Friend agree that it would be absurd if a trivial libel were allowed because of the libel law, but, by the same token, there was no law to prevent a gross invasion of privacy? My hon. Friend has no argument about whether there should or should not be legal aid, because nobody would be likely to argue that, merely because of legal aid, there is no need for a libel law.

Mr. Renton: I am making a different point. If we are to go down this path it is right that the interconnection between and consequences on the law of libel and the law on breach of confidence should also be considered. I am not arguing—I believe that this is what my hon. Friends have suggested—that until everything can be done, nothing should be done. The best may be the enemy of the good, but I am concerned that in considering a possible new cause of action without being able to relate it properly to existing remedies—which may themselves be capable of restatement and improvement—the result may be that we produce overlapping and inconsistent provisions.

The third general point concerns the difficult concept of privacy itself. One of the early chapters of the Younger report is entitled "What is Privacy?", but one does not have to read very far in the chapter to discover that the majority of the committee took the view that the concept of privacy cannot be satisfactorily defined. As the committee noted, attempts to do so either went very wide, equating the right to privacy with what Judge Cooley last century termed: or they boiled down to a catalogue of assorted values to which the adjective "private" or "personal" could reasonably, but not exclusively, be attached. Those who have sought in the past to legislate on the subject of privacy have varied considerably in the concepts of privacy for which they sought protection.

"the right to be left alone",

[Mr. Renton]

Despite the short title of the Bill, my hon. Friend the Member for Winchester has avoided any attempt to define privacy, but has based his proposed action on the unauthorised use or public disclosure of certain types of sensitive private information.

Mr. Lawrence rose——

Mr. Renton: I shall give way for the last time. I have been generous.

Mr. Lawrence: Is not the whole point of our law that a number of concepts, such as negligence, have been developed by the courts and that definitions that, over the course of time, reflect the wishes of the people at the particular period have been worked out by the courts? The same could happen with the definition of privacy.

Mr. Greg Knight: Like obscenity.

Mr. Renton: I accept my hon. Friend's point. However, obscenity is not a good example for those in favour of the Bill because of the reasons for reaching definitions in court. I shall come to the question of the courts' ability to construe general concepts, such as privacy.

My hon. Friend the Member for Winchester has found it necessary to define related concepts such as private information, personal and public use and disclosure. I do not believe—with all respect to my hon. Friend—that one can entirely avoid in that way the central problem of defining what the scope of privacy should be. The Justice committee, from whose report my hon. Friend produced an eloquent quotation, expressed well the difficulties that beset any attempt to find a precise or logical formula to circumscribe the meaning of privacy or to define it exhaustively.

The Justice committee suggested two reasons why the task was so intractable.

"First and foremost the notion of privacy has a substantial emotive content in that many of the things which we feel the need to preserve from the curiosity of our fellows are feelings, beliefs or matters of conduct which are themselves irrational. Secondly, the scope of privacy is governed to a considerable extent by the standards, fashions and mores of the society of which we form part and these are subject to constant change".

The Justice committee went on to suggest that one could identify a central area that consisted of certain matters which, at any given time, almost everyone would agree should be private and, therefore, protected from the intrusion of others. Surrounding that central area there was, it said, an outer grey area on which opinions would differ. But it had to admit that the extent both of the grey area and of the central area was bound to vary from time to time.

My hon. Friend would, I imagine, maintain that he has sought to do no more than give protection to specific matters of private information that would be generally agreed to form part of the central area identified by the Justice committee. But there is a further difficulty in his approach. Several categories of private information that his Bill identifies are themselves qualified by the word personal, such as personal communications, personal relationships, personal behaviour and personal financial affairs. Yet when we come to consider what is meant by the word "personal" in that context, the Bill tells us simply that it means by virtue of the private capacity of the individual. I have no better solution to suggest to my hon. Friend but the circularity of the argument is striking.

The balance between privacy and freedom of expression should properly greatly concern the House. Whatever the precise approach adopted for the purposes of legislation it is apparent that privacy cannot be an absolute right. As Younger said:

"A man's right to privacy has to be balanced against the rights of others; any additional protection which the law may afford to privacy may be found to impinge upon such other rights, in particular the right of free communication of the truth and comment upon it, which are generally accepted as of great importance in a democratic society."

It is important to note that this balancing of rights is explicitly recognised in the European convention on human rights. Although article 8 of the convention to which my hon. Friend the Member for Winchester drew attention; says:

"everyone has the right to respect for his private and family life, his home and his correspondence".

article 10 must also be considered. It provides that:

"everyone has the right to freedom of expression". That right includes,

"freedom to hold opinions and to receive and impart information and ideas without interference by public authority."

Mr. Devlin: That is not an argument on why there should not be an article 8.

Mr. Renton: Of course it is not. I am saying that article 10 must be read alongside article 8 because it is also in the convention.

Mr. John Browne: I thank my hon. Friend for giving way again. In the example of the United States the first amendment, not the fifth, sixth of seventh amendment of the constitution, provides for free speech and a free press. How is it that the United States can live with the privacy law when its first amendment also has to be balanced in the same way as article 8 and 10 in the convention?

Mr. Renton: I intend to deal with the position in the United States and in France and Germany about which my hon. Friend spoke earlier.

The House will agree that there is an inevitable tension between the individual's right of privacy and the right of a free press to investigate and report stories which are in the public interest. Clause 2(1) of the Bill recognises the fact that the public interest in securing the privacy of the individual may or may not be outweighed by the public interest in disclosure.

The question obviously arises as to who should decide whether the importance of a particular story should override personal privacy. Younger concluded that it was impossible to devise any satifactory yardstick for making such decisions, which had necessarily to be based on the circumstances of each case. The committee was in no doubt that the initial decision could be made only by those responsible for the publication, that is, by the press itself. The committee went on to consider whether, in performing this function, the press should be liable in case of complaint to be called to account by the courts acting under a law designed to protect personal privacy.

The difficulty that the committee saw, and which led it to reject this approach, was that judges would have to decide in each case between values which, in the abstract, might appear to have equal weight. The Committee thought that such a task would be likely to make the law uncertain, at least until the necessary precedents, covering a wide range of situations, had been established. It would also extend the role of the judiciary too far into determining controversial questions of a social and political character.

That leads me to the point about the ability of the courts to construe general concepts. My hon. Friend the Member for Winchester has sought to argue that reservations about the ability of the courts to determine matters of this kind are overstated, and that in practice the courts are frequently involved in balancing conflicting considerations such as these. In our view that overlooks the fact that questions of privacy will often involve a more complicated and subjective judgment than would be required in other contexts. The Younger committee put the point well when it said:

"Where in defamation cases a court has to decide what is or is not in the public interest, it is at least dealing with a situation in which a given statement is defamatory and untrue, and it is clear to the courts that such a statement will give rise to liability unless the defence of public interest is made out. But when for instance the right to privacy and the right to speak and publish the truth are in conflict, and no guidance is given on their relative importance, it is very doubtful whether a court is an acceptable arbiter on the issue of public interest involved".

I doubt whether there has been much change in that position over the last 15 years. I might add that we already have a good deal of experience of the uncertainties which arise, for example, in obscenity cases, where the courts have to make judgments on controversial matters where statutory definitions are unclear or unsatisfactory and there is no consensus on the difficult social and moral issues that arise.

Dame Elaine Kellett-Bowman: It seems to me that my hon. Friend, throughout his argument, has been equating things that are untrue and therefore libellous with things that are true, but nevertheless extremely hurtful and quite unnecessary.

Mr. Renton: That point is made very clear in Germany. There is an interlapping between the law on libel, and the remedies that are available under that law, and similar remedies, that would be provided if we were to have a law against the intrusion of privacy. That is an important point for the House to consider if the Bill goes into Committee.

There is the further point that the law is likely to prove a clumsy instrument for handling all but the most extreme instances of breach of privacy, and we cannot necessarily assume that resort to the courts would be particularly frequent. While this may not in itself be a disadvantage, it could well be many years before a relevant case law was built up and, in the meantime, the uncertainty that would exist in the law might lead to serious inhibitions on freedom of communication. What would tend to happen, I suspect, is that writs would be issued with the object of preventing publication, followed subsequently by the settlement of actions out of court without any clarification of the law having taken place. In any case, as Younger again remarked, it is

"questionable whether a topic which is subject to such rapid changes in social convention as privacy can suitably be regulated on the basis of case law, slowly built up, which would tend to reflect the values of an earlier period rather than of contemporary society."

The Government share the reservations expressed by Younger about the risks of bringing the courts into these matters. While we would not necessarily go all the way with those who argued before the Younger committee that the potential cost of possible action for invasion of privacy would severely inhibit the press from proper reporting, neither do we believe that legislation would necessarily, in practice, foster an increased sense of responsibility by the press.

I disagree with my hon. Friend the Member for Stafford who referred to the deterrent value of the proposals. On the contrary, there could well be a danger of journalists and editors abandoning any idea of self-discipline and of treating anything as acceptable provided that it did not actually render them liable to legal action. I take the point made by my hon. Friend the Member for Winchester that the Bill contains a positive bias in favour of publication where the issue is finely balanced, but I continue to believe that we should be wary of any legislative initiative which might undermine our long-established tradition of press freedom. Newspapers do not of course always strike the right balance between liberty and responsibility, but a press which at times outreached the bounds of decent behaviour—a point made by the hon. Member for Hillhead—may be a price that we have to pay for freedom of speech.

For those reasons, I have to continue to believe that the present system of voluntary self-regulation through the Press Council, a system endorsed by successive Royal Commissions on the press, is a more effective and appropriate form of control than would be provided by legislative action. The council has been criticised as weak and ineffective——

Mr. Michael Brown (Brigg and Cleethorpes): It is a joke.

Mr. Renton: My hon. Friend warmly endorses that criticism.

Certainly the concept of self-regulation has been under strain because of the attitude taken by some newspapers towards the council. No hon. or right hon. Member will deny that.

However, the council is concerned to improve its image and procedures. Sir Zelman Cowen, the council's former chairman, has been succeeded by Louis Blom-Cooper, who began work only this month, and whom we must all welcome to his challenging and difficult job. He has begun developing radical and imaginative ideas for reform. Mr. Blom-Cooper should be given the opportunity to make his influence felt, before we rush into action that could effectively undermine the future of press self-regulation.

I do not think that my hon. and learned Friend the Member for Burton was right to say that Mr. Blom-Cooper implied that the time has come for the law to step in. On the contrary, Mr. Blom-Cooper pointed out, in a thoughtful article in The Times last Saturday:

"If only the Press would be prepared to make self-regulation work by co-operating more fully with the work of the Press Council, privacy Bills like Mr. Browne's would be unnecessary."

—[Interruption.] The House must remember that Mr. Blom-Cooper has been chairman of the Press Council for only four weeks.

I shall touch briefly on the subject of overseas experience of privacy legislation, as I promised my hon. Friend the Member for Winchester, that I would. He made the point, endorsed by other hon. Members, that it is nonsense to argue that there will be difficulties in introducing a right of privacy into British law, because a number of other countries have enjoyed such a right in their own legal systems for many years. France, Germany and the United States are frequently mentioned in that connection. Some critics go further and claim that our country is failing in its obligations under article 8 of the European convention on human rights in not introducing a corresponding provision into our own law.

[Mr. Renton]

I agree that we should pay close attention to the experience of other countries. However, it is well known that the method of adjusting domestic legislation to the requirements of international agreements differs widely beween signatory states, and that is particularly true of human rights. Younger identified two reasons why that is so. First, the committee pointed out that certain legal systems are readier than others to declare a general right and then leave to the courts the development of effective sanctions against violations of it. It may be simpler for countries with written constitutions to proceed in that way than it is for those such as Britain, without one.

The second relevant consideration for Younger was the extent to which existing laws in particular countries already provide sufficiently for the protection of the new right. Younger noted that in some countries where the law of defamation is less developed than it is here, new laws for the protection of privacy are used in cases that we regard as falling squarely within the ambit of defamation. In Germany, for example, the dividing line between privacy and defamation is very blurred.

We should not underestimate the considerable extent to which privacy is already protected by existing British law. It may be said that we already have what are, by international standards, very stringent laws of defamation, making it fairly risky to say anything, true of false, about someone who is prepared to resort to litigation to pursue his point.

So far, I have concentrated on general issues that must be addressed in connection with the Bill. None of them is necessarily decisive, but they all serve to explain why the Government have yet to be persuaded that creating a statutory right of action for breach of privacy is the proper course to take at present.

Mr. Merlyn Rees (Morley and Leeds, South): The Minister has made a declaration of neutrality. If the Bill is given a Second Reading and goes into Committee, where a number of matters will have to be cleared up, will the Government play a positive part? Will the Minister on the Committee point out the difficulties so that we can alter the Bill if necessary, or will this neutrality be maintained?

Mr. Renton: I rather hope that I may serve on the Committee. I intended to touch on the role that I would play in my final remarks—which, I assure the House, are getting nearer. I apologise for taking so long, but I have given way several times.

Although I should like to make a number of points, time is getting on and other hon. Members wish to speak, so I shall mention only two aspects. First, the Bill applies to any unauthorised public use or public disclosure of private information. But public use and public disclosure are defined in clause 7 as relating to circumstances in which the material is made known simply to persons other than the individual to whom it relates. Two or more persons would apparently be sufficient, provided that the disclosure was made in the form of printed matter or broadcast material.

That leads on to the point that printed matter includes devices for automatic data processing, and could therefore catch material produced on a word processor, while broadcast material includes material reproduced by electronic means, and could therefore apply to the playing back of an audio cassette or tape recorder. The Bill could thus cover cases in which disclosure had in practice been made on a very limited scale, and had not been made public in the normal sense of the word.

Secondly, I think that there may be a problem with the requirement in clause 1 that proceedings must be brought by or on behalf of any person to whom the information relates. There may well be cases in which the distress, annoyance or embarrassment caused by the disclosure is suffered most acutely not by the person to whom the information relates but by a relative. In such cases, the aggrieved person would have no cause for action.

I have pointed out some of the issues on which the sponsors will need to concentrate if the Bill goes into Committee. Because, for the reasons that I have given, the Government are not yet persuaded of the need for such a Bill, I feel that despite the blandishments of my hon. Friend the Member for Winchester, the onus must be on him, not on me or my Department, to consider how the Bill can be improved to meet the points that I have mentioned.

As I have said, I do not intend to ask hon. Members to vote against Second Reading, despite my reservations about the Bill. We recognise the strength of feeling on these matters, and understand the widespread impatience in Parliament and the country for legislative action. Nevertheless the Bill as drafted poses significant problems. If the House decides to give it a Second Reading, we shall want to be satisfied at the end of the Committee stage that it can be made to work in a way that will not raise insuperable difficulties for the courts and those affected by it.

The Government's critics, be they political journalists or Members of Parliament, are fond of branding us foes of press freedom. We have been accused of wishing to censor newspapers, of designs to shackle civil liberties and of manufacturing cloaks of secrecy with the same speed and effectiveness as is deployed by Marks and Spencer in making socks or shirts. This debate should have punctured some of the extravagant assertions of those critics. I find it ironic that some of the hon. Members who have harried us most fiercely over our alleged concern for secrecy may today vote for a measure that will certainly define and limit the scope of investigative journalism.

The truth is that the Government start from the premise that we cannot have a free society without a free press.

Ms. Short: We have not got one.

Mr. Renton: From that it follows that any legislative curbs on newspapers and journalists—I hope that the hon. Member for Birmingham, Ladywood (Ms. Short) will bear this in mind—should be imposed only after careful thought and only when a matter of overriding national interest is involved. That is why, in our Official Secrets Bill, we are removing the great majority of official information from the protection of the criminal law. That is also why, despite my sympathy for my hon. Friend's objectives, and despite the eloquent and persuasive speech that he has made, I must ask the House to consider carefully the pitfalls that lie along the road that he wishes us to tread.

1.35 pm

Mr. Robin Corbett (Birmingham, Erdington): We have just had 45 minutes of neutrality. It was akin to Mussolini's neutrality when he went to the aid of his pal, Adolph Hitler, at the start of the second world war.

I shall not weary the House with a detailed reply to the Minister of State's main points, which so unimpressed his hon. Friends. All I would say is that, as he knows very well, in areas such as nuisance, negligence and obscenity, juries can and do, every day of the week, on the basis of their common sense, take a view on the basis of the facts that are put before them. In none of these cases is there a detailed guide.

I, too, congratulate the hon. Member for Winchester (Mr. Browne) on enabling the House to debate this important topic, the wisdom of which is demonstrated by the unusually large turn-out of hon. Members.

I approach the Bill as both a journalist and a Member of Parliament. I have experience on both sides of the privacy fence. When I was on the Daily Mirror some years ago, I was sent to cover an accident in which twins had been killed in a playground accident. I drew the line at approaching either the parents or the relations, having got other aspects of the story, but because of that I was called to the office and given a wigging. Years later, my wife and I lost a baby in a cot accident. Although I was not then a Member of Parliament, a local journalist, under the guise of friendship, rang to express condolences and to ask for a photograph of the baby. We much resented that intrusion, and I do not doubt that all others in that position would do so as well.

There is no doubt that the excesses of the sewer Sun and other tabloids have reached such proportions in the quest for sensation and sleaze that action must now be taken, but we should be cautious about legislating on matters that affect the press. Whatever the justification, we should not legislate out of feelings of revenge. Even the sewer Sun seems to recognise the concern over the deliberate slide into profitable sleaze. It began a startling report on 17 January in mock reverential tones, not usually found in this rag. It crowed:

"The Sun is pleased to announce today the appointment of an ombudsman to act as an independent referee to hear and settle complaints by readers."

The independence of Mr. Ken Donlan, the 61-year-old managing editor of the Sun, is clearly in no doubt. He is paid by the Sun, he works full time for the Sun—so that, of course, ensures his total independence.

I hope that there is no truth in the story that is going around that Mr. Donlan greeted his appointment with some such offensive words as, "I'm the man who's got to deal with all those whingeing, pinko poofters." If he did not say that, or words to that effect, I apologise, but they fit exactly into the language that the sewer Sun uses daily.

Mr. Rupert Murdoch, the proud proprietor of the Sun, greeted the appointment thus, and presumably with a straight face:

"Newspapers and journalists today face heavy responsibilities to preserve the freedom we all enjoy by living up to the best traditions of British journalism."

That could have come stright from the mouth of the editor of the Daily Crucible in the "Hot Metal" series. It sounds all the more odd coming from Mr. Murdoch, given the vast sums in damages that his newspapers have had to hand over in the courts and elsewhere.

The Daily Mirror has had an ombudsman for four years. I tried to ring him yesterday. I was put through to the publisher's office, and, when I asked for the ombudsman, the person to whom I spoke grilled me on who I was and then asked, "Is he here?". "How do I know?", I replied. "Is he here for a meeting?", I was asked. "I have no idea.", I said, "He is the Daily Mirror ombudsman.". I was told, "Let me try another number.". Another number rang and I was back with Mr. Maxwell's office. We both laughed. There was a rustle of pages as telephone lists were consulted. Then I was told, "I only have an external number." I said, "What is an external number?", and I was told, "It is not an internal number; it is a home number.". I asked, "May I have it?". I was told, "I will check.". A moment later, back came the voice, "I have an idea, why don't you give me your number and I will ask him to ring you.". I asked, "But how can an ombudsman have a confidential number?". I was told, "It is the only one we have.".

I am still awaiting a call from the Daily Mirror ombudsman, and after this I doubt that I shall get one, so perhaps there is not much hope of help from ombudsmen, whatever they are, but the fact remains that they can come into operation only after the events which are complained about have taken place.

What about the Press Council? Even under the vigorous leadership of Louis Blom-Cooper, QC, there is little evidence yet of any lack of willingness or effort on the part, not of the Press Council, but of the newspaper proprietors in whose name and at whose behest the things about which everyone who has spoken today has complained are carried out. The Murdochs of this world have demonstrated that they will not comply with the Press Council now, and there is certainly no evidence to suggest that they would welcome the Press Council having stronger powers.

The problem is that many tabloid owners and editors think that anything goes and, certainly in the case of the sewer Sun, have given themselves a licence to lie. No one is safe from the sewer Sun. Falklands war widows had words put into their mouths by a journalist who was subsequently appointed editor of one of Mr. Murdoch's newspapers. The victim of the Ealing rape had an alleged photograph of her smeared across the front page of that rag. The lorry driver, Terrance McCabe, was attacked by the Sun when he refused to cross the picket lines at Wapping, as the hon. Member for Tatton (Mr. Hamilton) said. His previous spent convictions were continually carried as part of a vendetta by Sun journalists against small people who they know cannot hit or hurt them.

We should not be concerned only or mainly with ourselves or families. Every citizen should have a right to privacy and to keep private, their personal affairs. That is why I welcome the Bill in general as a step in that direction, although I believe that it has some flaws. We must not restrict or impede the responsible end of our press from its proper duties to reveal what the rich and powerful prefer to keep hidden.

I do not intend to quote from cases affecting right hon. and hon. Members for fear of giving them another run, except to say that many have been done over by the daily and Sunday tabloids, not for doing anything illegal or for engaging in activities which remotely could be considered to affect their ability to carry out their responsibilities as Members of Parliament, but purely for the sake of titillation cheap thrills, and voyeurism.

[Mr. Robin Corbett]

It also happens for another reason. Earlier, my hon. Friend the Member for Bristol, South (Ms. Primarolo) movingly told the House the reaction of some sections of the press when she put the question to the Prime Minister, on behalf of her voiceless hon. Friend the Member for Cynon Valley (Mrs. Clwyd), and saying that she had achieved her position only because she had received the help of a millionaire.

The Daily Mail, whose editor is ever loyal in recognition of the knighthood he received from the Prime Minister, went to work on my hon. Friend the Member for Bristol, South. The next day that newspaper ran a piece heavy with smear and innuendo. It said that my hon. Friend was nicknamed Red Dawn—I guess only by Mr. John Deans, the newspaper's political correspondent, under whose, I hope embarrassed, name that report appeared. It made much of the fact that my hon. Friend had been constituency secretary to my right hon. Friend the Member for Chesterfield (Mr. Benn) when he represented a Bristol constituency and revealed—shock, horror—that she was separated from her husband. For added spice, the newspaper told us that he had lost his job for allegedly taking a swing at the headmaster of the school in which he worked. The newspaper said that my hon. Friend shares a house in Bristol with another woman. The inference was clear, as were the newspaper's attempts to involve my hon. Friend's son.

What on earth have those issues to do with the question that my hon. Friend asked on behalf of my hon. Friend the Member for Cynon Valley?

A legitimate follow-up to the issue raised by my hon. Friend would have been for the Daily Mail and other newspapers to consider how my hon. Friend and other women Members achieve election and the extra and special problems that they face in this place.

Opposition Members know only too well how the Daily Mail, the Daily Express and, of course, the sewer Sun hound and vilify elected trade union leaders and shop stewards who are involved in official legal disputes. Any tittle-tattle makes a good enough stick with which to beat them and seek to blacken their names. None of it has the remotest connection to the issues over which the strike or dispute is taking place.

It is the right of every citizen to have kept private the private aspects of their lives. The Bill, especially if amended, will help. We must clarify the question of legal aid. Without a clear entitlement to legal aid, only the well-heeled will be able to afford to take action and face the possibility of losing, and having to pick up crippling costs. Taking a case to a county court is not an attractive proposition because I understand that it is proposed to limit the amount of damages that can be awarded in the county court to £25,000.

I know that at least one of my hon. Friends—grossly libelled by the Daily Mirror, I am sorry to say—had to back off from legal action because, apart from the certainty of success in the courts, he dared not risk action because he could not meet the costs that he would face if, however perversely, the jury went against him. That is an argument not against a jury but for legal aid.

I can understand the hon. Member for Winchester wanting to protect the press from damages awarded by juries, but I believe that he has not addressed the problem correctly. In today's debate, many hon. Members have said that it is not the press that deserves or needs protection but the citizen, the man and woman in the street. Much of the press is rich and powerful and most citizens are not. Perhaps, though I doubt it, punitive damages would persuade the sleaze sheets to start cleaning up their act. Juries are made up of a random cross-section of women and men who are better able to reflect the hurt and harm caused by irresponsible publications and to award financial damages to match the seriousness of the offence. I accept that not all offences can be categorised, but this is a sector in which juries come into their own. On the basis of facts put before them and guidance on the law, they make such judgments every day.

We must not prevent responsible investigative journalism. I exclude Mr. Andrew Neil, who is editor of the Sunday Times, from that description following the report into the Thames Television programme, "Death on the Rock". Journalists should not be prevented from exposing people who hold high and influential positions. There is a place in journalism and democracy for some of the work done by publications such as Private Eye. The Bill acknowledges that fact and offers protection for the press through the public interest defence. No public interest defence or argument put before a jury will save the Murdochs of this world if they pray that in aid in the course of sleaze.

No responsible editor or journalist has anything to fear from the Bill, which I hope will be given a Second Reading so that we can improve it in Committee.

1.50 pm

Mr. Tim Devlin (Stockton, South): The Bill is a long overdue reform of the relationship between the press and people. Our great nation has always nurtured and defended its freedom carefully. Since the time of Caxton, printers have sought further freedom to publish freely held opinions, and even subversion, but above all they have sought freedom to uncover wickedness, depravity and injustice in public life. One has only to cast one's mind back over the history of John Wilkes and the gagging writs to remember how that freedom has been fought for and cherished. I do not believe that the Bill will introduce the concept of a gagging writ. It is a mark of a free society that we have a free and unfettered press. One of the newest and most glaring developments in modern Russia has been the rash of free-thinking and critical articles that have appeared under glasnost and perestroika.

The debate must move from the relationship of the press to the Government establishment to that between the press and the individual. The most important and powerful media of reporting in the 20th century is television. Among newspapers, the most revealing items have been conveyed by photograph. The camera did not exist in the formative centuries when the concept of a free press was developed. The camera can be very revealing—we are told that it never lies, except when in the hands of a dictator or in the strange magnetic conditions of the rock of Gibraltar. The camera has become the instrument most complained about in our press of today. One need only cast one's mind back to the publication by one tabloid newspaper of a picture of a heavily pregnant princess on a beach taken by an ultra-powerful telescopic lens to understand the problem. What was newsworthy about that incident? It was widely known that the princess was pregnant. Further, it was known that she was on holiday. What else but a prurient curiosity was satisfied by the photograph?

To move the focus from the rich and supposedly famous, what of the photography of families in the north-east who were grieving over the loss of relatives on Piper Alpha? What of the villagers of Lockerbie who were unable to contain their grief, yet at the same time were met as they carried on their ordinary business by a solid wall of cameramen? In those cases people suffered grotesquely as a result of intrusive press reporting. It is unfortunate that whenever a figure of even moderate public standing is reported for a minor misdemeanour it is apparently obligatory for his or her family to be subjected to what is known in the trade as door-stepping. We readily agree with the concept of press freedom, but we have a right to qualify it when it involves innocent people having to hide indoors for days with the curtains drawn.

There is no right of privacy in this country. However, we are signatories to the European convention on human rights. The Minister made much of article 8 of the convention and my hon. Friend the Member for Derby, North (Mr. Knight) explained that that article should be read in conjunction with article 10 and we must try to achieve a balance. We know that article 8 states:

"Everyone has a right to respect for his private and family life, his home and correspondence."

I thought that the Minister said that those were cogent reasons why we should not enact something analogous to article 8 into English law, yet we know that we already protect under our law the freedom enshrined in article 10. If the Minister was referring to balance, I would agree with him. However, why are not articles 8 and 10, and even the whole European convention on human rights, enacted into English law? I have argued in the House that the rights of children and parents in the European convention on human rights should be enacted in English law. I am happy to repeat that request for the House to consider in future.

It is particularly strange that in the present circumstances those rights are available to Englishmen, Scotsmen and Irishmen if they go to the European Court of Human Rights after having exhausted the English legal system, but those rights are not available in English courts. The provisions cannot be enforced in our law courts. They are meaningless and that is a bad indictment of our much-prized legal system.

The Minister also referred to the interface between defamation and privacy. The formative case in the law of defamation is that of Princess Youssoupoff and Metro Goldwyn Mayer. Lord Justice Slesser set a two-part test in that case which states:

"not only is the matter defamatory if it brings the plaintiff into hatred, ridicule or contempt by reason of some moral discredit . . . but also if it tends to make the plaintiff be shunned or avoided."

The second part of the test was that the allegation must be untrue. The Minister and others have said that the damage of defamation is the same as the damage of privacy, but that is not quite right.

Let us consider the test set by Lord Justice Slesser. He said that a comment must be untrue. That is the distinguishing feature in defamation. He said damage applies if the plaintiff is brought "into hatred, ridicule or contempt by reason of some moral discredit."

Why cannot the same test be introduced into the law of privacy? He also said:

"if it tends to make the plaintiff be shunned or avoided."

It has always been a feature of our English legal system that there must be damage before one can recover in the courts. If there is publication of something that a person did lawfully in his own home, but which in some way is unusual—perhaps very unusual or perhaps a particularly colourful previous sex life—it is not unreasonable to suggest that it might make the plaintiff be shunned or avoided. There is clear damage there and I do not see why there should not be some provision, perhaps through an amendment in the Bill, for compensation.

Some of my hon. Friends have told me that they will vote against the Bill. My hon. Friend the Member for Derby, North is one. They claim to be libertarians, but that means allowing people free rein so long as their activities are not dangerous to, or do not inhibit the freedom of others. The hon. Member for Stockton, North (Mr. Cook) referred to the test of Oliver Wendell Holmes about the use of a fist. If a man in public life has an unusual or exciting sex life, why should that be referred to publicly?

The point that I would have made—but for the assistance of my hon. Friends—when I interrupted the hon. Member for Glasgow, Hillhead (Mr. Galloway) was that what is of interest to the public about the hon. Member is his competence as a Member of this House. Whatever he may have done in the past, whatever his bank balance or whatever the other features of his life, as long as they do not affect his competence to sit in the House and make decisions on behalf of the public, it is of no interest to the rest of us what he may have done in his own time —on the Greek islands or anywhere else. Good luck to him, because I am sure that, if the spotlight were turned, most of the population would come in the same category.

It may be that these matters are of interest to the public because of its natural lurid curiosity, but are they in the public interest? That is what this Bill deals with. My submission would be that they may have been of public interest but they are not in the public interest. From our post bags, we know that individuals can live the most exotic private lives, but that is not reported, because they are not famous cricketers, union bosses or politicians.

The hon. Member for Hillhead commented on bank balances. One of the most competent and revered Prime Ministers in the history of this country was Disraeli. Yet it is well known from his biographies that he avoided bankruptcy on a number of occasions by the skin of his teeth. It did not, however, make him any worse a Prime Minister. The knowledge of what was in his bank balance, in fact, may have been damaging to him during his career. Is not the man with a massive overdraft—which is publicly known—more prone to bribery and corruption? Is not the man who is extremely rich and has a colossal bank balance in danger of being kidnapped or of suffering other extortionate practices? Barely a week goes by without a new victim of this intrusive curiosity being publicly shamed. The retiring chairman of the Press Council admits to feeling

"sick at heart when I read yet another revelation which exposes people to great hurt."

Even newspapers know in their hearts that often they go too far. The former editor of The Star, Mr. Lloyd Turner, said in December:

[Mr. Tim Devlin]

"We have gone too far and I include myself in that. When I was at The Star I did go too far. That was a mistake."

We know and the press know that that evil exists. The Press Council knows it, but, being a toothless paper tiger, it can do nothing about it.

I shall return to the photograph of the Princess of Wales on the private beach. When the Press Council condemned that photograph and the Sun for photographing it, the Sun republished it under a banner headline, which said:

"This is what the row's all about folks."

What greater contempt can anyone show for the powers, or supposed powers, of the Press Council? For their part the public condemn the press for going too far. The Press Council and its supposed powers are relatively unknown to the public. Louis Blom-Cooper QC, who has just taken over as chairman of the Press Council, said last year in a telling remark:

"To any extent that people have any view of the Press Council, it will be highly coloured and culled from one rather inaccurate press report."

Is that not a telling comment that by implication even the Press Council regards most press reports as being inaccurate?

In answer to what my hon. Friend the Member for Derby, North (Mr. Knight) said about Mr. Blom-Cooper's views on legislation, I must tell him that an article in The Daily Telegraph in May 1988, made it clear that Mr. Blom-Cooper did not regard the need for legislation as inherently objectionable. The Government have expressed their dissatisfaction, too. My hon. Friend the Minister of State, Home Department said in February last year that, if the press did not regulate itself satisfactorily, the Government might consider how proper standards could be enforced.

The only reason that I could divine from the Minister's speech today against the introduction of such standards is that it would be legally complicated. The concept of negligence was legally complicated and many lawyers thought that it was far too difficult to define until the leading case of Donaghue v. Stevenson. The law on that ethereal concept of negligence has been derived from a series of common law decisions from that day to this. Negligence is now one of the greatest areas of the law of tort.

Although I welcomed what my hon. Friend said in February, I do not believe that it is a proper role for the Government to control the press. I agree with the Labour Members that such control would be sinister. It is the proper role of the House, as representative of the people, to seek to control the excesses of the press in the interest of the public. Other free societies, such as France and the United States, have privacy laws, and I see no reason why such laws should not be introduced in Britain. The Minister signally failed to answer that point when it was raised earlier and he passed over it quickly in his speech.

The only difficulty that I can foresee is that of legal definition. As the Minister has said, some time may be needed for the law of precedent to be established. The way in which the Bill is drafted, however, could do a great deal to assist the law of precedent. In that context I shall quote the words of a leading and distinguished Queen's counsel, for whom I have the highest regard, Richard Alexander, who said:

"The strongest criticism of any suggested law of privacy has invariably been that such a law would be too vague and leave too much to the discretion of the judges. I always thought that this view underestimates the ability of the Common Law to develop both purposively and with common sense. The law of confidence, evolved to cover situations as different as commercial secrets and information held by members of the security services, is judge-made law.

In some countries and in much of North America, a right of privacy exists. Some 20 years ago now, I was sent to observe a case in Paris where a claim was brought against an English newspaper for breach of the droit d'intimité. Photographers using telephoto lenses had taken photographs of Brigitte Bardot in her private garden. In pursuing her complaint, her advocate eloquently declared: 'Unlike General de Gaulle, my client has not given herself to the nation.' He established that she had the right to private life and recovered damages.

We, by contrast, have no law which would allow redress if, for example, an aeroplane flew low over a house and thus enabled photographs to be taken of people pursuing their private lives. Yet our judges could shape the development of such a law in just the same way as the French judges can set the boundaries of droit d'intimité . . . This Bill may well be capable of improvement, or may need some amendment; but the principles it seeks to protect should now become part of our law."

Lord Ross said in his minority report to the Younger committee:

"With all respect to my colleagues I find these reasons"— about uncertainties in the law—

"singularly unconvincing. In the first place uncertainty in the law is not unusual."

Mr. D. N. Campbell-Savours (Workington): I put it to the hon. Gentleman that he is damaging the possibility of the Bill reaching Committee because of the way in which he is conducting himself. I ask him to resume his seat.

Mr. Devlin: I am grateful to the hon. Gentleman for his advice because he is a distinguished and elder parliamentarian. I am about to draw my remarks to their rightful close and I shall do so in the next few seconds.

The common law of England is, as it always has been, capable of adapting to and defining new concepts. If my hon. Friend the Member for Winchester (Mr. Browne) will allow me to offer advice to him, I will gladly serve on the Committee. I support the Bill and I ask the House to give it a Second Reading.

2.10 pm

Mr. D. N. Campbell-Savours (Workington): I want to address my remarks specifically to the hon. Member for Derby, North (Mr. Knight) because it may be that the future of the Bill rests uniquely in his hands. I intend to speak only for a couple of minutes. I have reservations about the Bill because of my contact with journalists, with whom the hon. Member for Derby, North may also have contacts. I am concerned about the way in which injunctions can be used to prevent journalists from carrying out their legitimate activities. I have discussed the matter with lawyers and they conclude that there are conditions in which stories may be lost. The problem is that although, on one hand, I want to defend the interests of those journalists, I realise, that there is abuse. We must draw a balance and the only way in which we can establish that balance is in Committee. If the Bill goes into Committee, I shall vote against it, as will the hon. Gentleman, but I want the Bill to go to Committee because no damage will be done by that. It will merely help us to establish where we believe the balance should be.

I shall resume my seat after making one request. The hon. Gentleman may rise to his feet in a minute and he can, in effect, talk out the Bill. If he does that, he will deny people such as myself and others who have reservations about the Bill the opportunity to promote the important debate that will inevitably take place in Committee. The hon. Gentleman knows that there is an element of public concern and he knows that there is an element of concern in the journalistic profession, but let us be given the opportunity to consider these matters. There are many further stages at which we can destroy the Bill if we wish. I can assure the hon. Gentleman that if all my concerns about press freedom are not met, I shall be among those who wish to destroy the Bill. However, the hon. Gentleman is in the unique position today to be able to destroy it. I, together with most hon. Members, appeal to him not to do that and to let us at least be given the opportunity to examine the whole subject in Committee.

2.13 pm

Mr. Greg Knight (Derby, South): It was odd that the hon. Member for Workington (Mr. Campbell-Savours) should make such comments. I seem to recollect that, when I was here some time ago to support the Licensing (Amendment) Bill, he spoke at such considerable length that several of my hon. Friends came to the conclusion that he was filibustering, but I did not seek to say that he was acting in a way that was out of order. I am sure that if you, Madam Deputy Speaker, feel that I am out of order at any time you will bring me to heel.

I must say to the hon. Gentleman that I accept that the matter raises strong feelings among many hon. Members, but I hope that he will accept that there are differing views about what—if anything—should be done and how the press should be regulated. So far in the debate, we have heard only one speech setting out the case against the Bill, which was made by the hon. Member for Glasgow, Hillhead (Mr. Galloway). I have several points to make that should be placed on record to explain why I do not want the House to proceed with the Bill.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: May I suggest that if my hon. Friend has many points, he votes for the Bill today so that he will have more time, in Committee, to develop them.

Mr. Knight: I am also aware that there are hon. Members who do not want the Bill to go to Committee because of other Bills further down the line, but I am not here for that reason. I am here because I disagree with the Bill. It is a bad Bill and I cannot see any way to make it work, even if it were amended in Committee. My hon. Friend the Member for Winchester (Mr. Browne) spoke for 38 minutes outlining why we should support the measure, so it is only fair for the House to listen to my speech. I am not saying that I shall speak for 38 minutes —and, in fact, I do not have that time—but the case against the Bill deserves to be expounded today.

I congratulate my hon. Friend the Member for Winchester on his success in the ballot, but I qualify those congratulations. He was twelfth in the ballot last year and I believe that the time has come for the House to examine its procedures and to consider whether perhaps, an hon. Member who comes in the top 20 should be disqualified the following year so that other hon. Members have a fair chance. My congratulations to my hon. Friend are also qualified because, as I have said, I cannot support the Bill. I have nothing personal against my hon. Friend and he may recollect that I warmly supported the Bill that he introduced last year and which got through both Houses.

The matter of privacy has a long history. The Minister spoke about 1961 when the late Lord Mancroft introduced his measure. Similar measures were introduced by Alex Lyon in 1967 and by Brian Walden in 1969. The important point about the Brian Walden Bill was that it led to the setting up of a Committee on privacy under the chairmanship of the late Sir Kenneth Younger. That Committee reported in 1972.

Some hon. Members seem to have had difficulties in fully appreciating all the arguments, and that is due to the difficulty of obtaining the Younger report. I went to the Library and found that the report, which is Cmnd. 5012, was published by Her Majesty's Stationery Office. I made inquiries at the Vote Office and was told that the report was long out of print. It took me some time to track down a copy. Initially, I was told that the Library did not have a copy, but then I found that it had one copy which, I understand, is kept in a brown paper bag out of sight of hon. Members because the Library is afraid of losing it. It does us no credit that hon. Members have to spend time in the Library photocopying a long document so that they may consider all the points that are relevant to the debate. The one positive side of this debate is that we now appreciate that where an unresolved issue has gone on for many years the Vote Office should keep some available copies of any Command Papers so that hon. Members can avail themselves of the evidence that was considered in the past.

Although 17 years old, the Younger report, as I think my hon. Friend the Minister said, is the only substantial report about an examination of the law on privacy in Britain. Therefore, the House is entitled to ask what that committee said about the matter. My hon. Friends the Members for Winchester and for Stafford (Mr. Cash) skimmed over the majority comments in that report, preferring to quote from the minority report.

Mr. Cash: Bluntly, I must tell my hon. Friend that I quoted the conclusions of the majority.

Mr. Knight: I shall come to that. I accept what my hon. Friend says. He did quote a paragraph from the conclusion. However, he did not go into the general thrust of the Younger report. All the way through, the report warns about the risks of placing excessive reliance on the law to protect privacy, especially with regard to the press. The committee argued against any general right of privacy in our domestic law, and the House is entitled to ask why it did that.

The report said that a general right of privacy would be uncertain in scope and would have unpredictable implications. That is exactly the position with this Bill. The House has to decide who is right—my hon. Friend the Member for Winchester or the compilers of the Younger report. We are entitled to examine whether the Younger report was as thorough as it should have been. In paragraph 6, page 2 of the report, there is a call for evidence. It says:

"Once our terms of reference had been clarified, we issued invitations for evidence: to the public at large by advertising extensively in 44 national and regional newspapers,".

Page 3 of the report says:

"As a result of suggestions from various quarters the list of addresses of this letter was eventually increased to a total of 225,".

[Mr. Knight]

I did not hear my hon. Friend the Member for Winchester speak about having undertaken that sort of research. It is all very well to refer to opinion polls and to say that 60 per cent. of people think that something should be done. I hazard a guess that many of those who were approached and gave answers in the opinion poll are the very people who buy some of the newspapers about which we have heard—the Sun and the Daily Mirror. Because of the circulation figures of those newspapers that must be so.

My hon. Friend the Member for Stafford referred to the committee's conclusion. He is quite right that the committee said:

"We have concluded that, on balance, there is no need at present for a general law of privacy."

My hon. Friend was not entirely fair to the committee's view, therefore, when he sought to take that to mean that, if the committee had reported last week, it would have reached a different conclusion. He cannot say that on the evidence because, throughout the report, the committee made it clear that it felt that the best way of dealing with the press was not by legislation, but by effective self-regulation.

That brings me to the point that a number of hon. Members have made about self-regulation. Although I oppose the Bill, I do not claim that there is no problem. Of course, there is a problem. Hon. Members have referred to cases involving disaster victims, the separation of spouses and bereaved families who find their pictures plastered across newspapers and are interviewed on television. There is a particularly odious form of television interviewing technique. When the person who is being interviewed shows signs of distress, the interviewer will suddenly stop and say nothing. The instinct of a person who is not accustomed to being interviewed in front of a television camera is to go on, so his or her distress becomes worse. I remember seeing a documentary on television four or five years ago in which that technique, which I deplore, was used. The person was encouraged by the interviewer's silence to open up, the distress became worse and the interview ended in tears. More can therefore be done in the area of self-regulation.

My next point was raised by some Opposition Members. I have little sympathy for flamboyant and outrageous characters, particularly in the pop music business, who make a point of exploiting their eccentricities and then cry foul when the press starts to pry into their private lives. People who behave in that way and are in public life forgo the privacy that we all hope and expect to see applied to the private individual.

I do not oppose all change. Some action is necessary. The House is entitled to hear what I think is the answer to the problem. We should be considering a sensible and reasoned way to put matters right. Legislation should not be the first and only option; there are others.

Let us consider the Press Council. My hon. Friend the Member for Brigg and Cleethorpes (Mr. Brown) shouted out, "It is a joke" when my hon. Friend the Minister referred to the Press Council. That caused much laughter among Conservative Members. I do not entirely disagee with my hon. Friend the Member for Brigg and Cleethorpes. The council has been ineffective in some areas and certain things can be done, but let us consider what is now happening to the Press Council. In an article in The Observer of 22 January this year, under the heading

"Press Council set for big shake-up", the media editor, Richard Brooks, said:

"A complete overhaul of the Press Council, including a two-thirds cut in membership and an ombudsman for national and regional newspapers, is being proposed by its new chairman, Louis Blom-Cooper.

Newspaper groups themselves would bear the onus of dealing with grievances under the radical plans Mr. Blom-Cooper will present next Tuesday at his first meeting as the council's chairman."

It is incorrect to infer that the Press Council is useless and that nothing is being done. Something will be done next week. Some hon. Members would say that the House should give the Press Council one last chance. Well, it should certainly be given a chance now that it has a new chairman to see whether his radical ideas can improve the situation.

The report goes on to say that

"Mr. Blom-Cooper wants working journalists, rather than managers, to serve on the council. He also believes he should choose council members himself rather than rely on the traditional outside appointments body."

That is welcome news. The House should wait to see the result. One Opposition Member made a jocular comment about the appointment of the Sun's own ombudsman. I realise that the Opposition holds strong views about the Sun, but they should wait for the outcome of that development. I have more faith in the Sun than they do, and I do not believe that it is a window dressing exercise.

Earlier, in one of my interventions, I was taken to task by my hon. and learned Friend the Member for Burton (Mr. Lawrence) because I referred to article 10 of the European Convention on Human Rights. My hon. Friend the Member for Winchester also made great play about article 8 and how it supported his Bill. I thought it only right to place on record that article 10 provides a right of freedom of information.

I doubt the wisdom of legislating in the area of privacy alone. If the law is to be changed, what about defamation? A bit-by-bit, jigsaw approach is not the best way of proceeding. We may agree that improvements must be made, but that is not the issue today. The question is whether the Bill is the right vehicle. It should be rejected because not only is it the wrong vehicle but it is incapable of improvement in Committee to the extent that it will avoid several pitfalls that I shall explain to the House.

First, I am surprised that no Opposition Member spotted that clause 1 of the Bill provides that

"proceedings may be brought by any person"——

[Interruption.]

Madam Deputy Speaker (Miss Betty Boothroyd): Order. A number of conversations are under way, which shows great discourtesy to the hon. Gentleman who has the Floor.

Mr. Knight: I am grateful for your protection, Madam Deputy Speaker. I did not regard my right hon. and hon. Friends' conversations as a discourtesy, as I believe they were considering and mulling over my earlier points. As I said, I am surprised that no right hon. or hon. Member has spotted the fact that clause 1——

Mr. John Browne rose in his place and claimed to move, That the Question be now put.

Question put, That the Question be now put:—

The House divided: Ayes 98, Noes 1.

Division No. 59] [2.27 pm

AYES

Abbott, Ms Diane
Aitken, Jonathan
Alexander, Richard
Allen, Graham
Anderson, Donald
Baker, Nicholas (Dorset N)
Banks, Robert (Harrogate)
Barnes, Harry (Derbyshire NE)
Barron, Kevin
Beggs, Roy
Bowden, Gerald (Dulwich)
Bowis, John
Braine, Rt Hon Sir Bernard
Brown, Ron (Edinburgh Leith)
Browne, John (Winchester)
Buck, Sir Antony
Campbell-Savours, D. N.
Carlile, Alex (Mont'g)
Clark, Sir W. (Croydon S)
Clwyd, Mrs Ann
Cohen, Harry
Cook, Frank (Stockton N)
Coombs, Simon (Swindon)
Corbett, Robin
Corbyn, Jeremy
Couchman, James
Critchley, Julian
Crowther, Stan
Davies, Q. (Staml'd & Spald'g)
Devlin, Tim
Dobson, Frank
Dunnachie, Jimmy
Dykes, Hugh
Finsberg, Sir Geoffrey
Fishburn, John Dudley
Forman, Nigel
Fox, Sir Marcus
Fry, Peter
Golding, Mrs Llin
Gordon, Mildred
Gorst, John
Greenway, Harry (Ealing N)
Greenway, John (Ryedale)
Griffiths, Win (Bridgend)
Hamilton, Neil (Tatton)
Hannam, John
Hardy, Peter
Hargreaves, Ken (Hyndburn)
Healey, Rt Hon Denis
Heffer, Eric S.
Holland, Stuart
Hordern, Sir Peter
Hughes, Robert G. (Harrow W)
Hughes, Simon (Southwark)
Hunter, Andrew
Janner, Greville
Jessel, Toby
Kellett-Bowman, Dame Elaine
Kirkhope, Timothy
Lawrence, Ivan
Leighton, Ron
Livingstone, Ken
McCrindle, Robert
Macdonald, Calum A.
McWilliam, John
Maginnis, Ken
Maples, John
Marshall, John (Hendon S)
Marshall, Michael (Arundel)
Moate, Roger
Nelson, Anthony
Primarolo, Dawn
Quin, Ms Joyce
Rees, Rt Hon Merlyn
Rhodes James, Robert
Richardson, Jo
Rossi, Sir Hugh
Ruddock, Joan
Short, Clare
Sims, Roger
Skinner, Dennis
Smith, Andrew (Oxford E)
Smith, C. (Isl'ton & F'bury)
Smyth, Rev Martin (Belfast S)
Stanbrook, Ivor
Stanley, Rt Hon Sir John
Summerson, Hugo
Temple-Morris, Peter
Thorne, Neil
Townsend, Cyril D. (B'heath)
Tracey, Richard
Tredinnick, David
Ward, John
Wiggin, Jerry
Williams, Rt Hon Alan
Winnick, David
Worthington, Tony
Young, Sir George (Acton)

Tellers for the Ayes:
Mr. William Cash and
Mr. Michael Brown.

NOES

Bottomley, Peter

Tellers for the Noes:
Mr. Greg Knight and
Mr. George Galloway.

Whereupon Mr. Speaker declared that the Question was not decided in the affirmative, because it was not supported by the majority prescribed by Standing Order No 36 (Majority for closure, or for proposal of question).

It being after half-past Two o'clock, the debate stood adjourned.

Private Members' Bills

ROAD TRAFFIC REGULATION (PARKING) BILL

Order for Second Reading read.

Bill read a Second time, and committed to a Standing Committee pursuant to Standing Order No. 61 (Committal of Bills).

INTERNATIONAL PARLIAMENTARY ORGANISATIONS (REGISTRATION) BILL

Order for Second Reading read.

Hon. Members: Object.

Second Reading deferred till Friday 17 February.

DEFINITIVE MAP MODIFICATION BILL

Order for Second Reading read.

Hon. Members: Object.

Second Reading deferred till Friday 3 February.

RIDERS OF EQUINE ANIMALS (WEARING OF PROTECTIVE HEADGEAR) BILL

Order for Second Reading read.

Hon. Members: Object.

Madam Deputy Speaker (Miss Betty Boothroyd): Second Reading what day? No day named.

GAMING MACHINES (PROHIBITION ON USE BY PERSONS UNDER EIGHTEEN) BILL

Order for Second Reading read.

Hon. Members: Object.

Second Reading deferred till Friday 3 February.

HUMAN RIGHTS BILL

Order for Second Reading read.

Hon. Members: Object.

Second Reading deferred till Friday 3 February.

HEDGEROWS BILL

Order for Second Reading read.

Hon. Members: Object.

Second Reading deferred till Friday 3 February.

Mr. Peter Hardy (Wentworth): On a point of order, Madam Deputy Speaker. I hesitated because I did not hear an objection taken, nor did my hon. Friends. It would be rather nice to find out who objected.

Madam Deputy Speaker (Miss Betty Boothroyd): I understand the hon. Gentleman's anxiety, but I can assure him that more than one voice was raised in objection to his Bill.

Mr. Jeremy Corbyn (Islington, North): Further to that point of order, Madam Deputy Speaker. I understand that you heard objections raised to my hon. Friend's excellent Bill. May we be assured that none of the people who objected to his Bill to protect headgerows has a vested interest by virtue of his owning a large amount of farmland?

Madam Deputy Speaker: That is not a question for the Chair.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES (AMENDMENT) BILL: SECOND READING

Read a Second time.

Bill committed to a Committee of the whole House. —[Mr. Wiggin.]

Committee on Friday 3 February.

AGRICULTURE

Ordered,

That the provisions of paragraph (2) of Standing Order No. 84 (Constitution of standing committees), paragraph (1) of Standing Order No. 86 (Nomination of standing committees) and Standing Order No. 101 (Standing Committees on Statutory Instruments, &c.) shall apply to the draft Codes of Recommendations for the Welfare of Goats, Farmed Deer and Livestock-Sheep as if they were statutory instruments; and that the said draft Codes be referred to a Standing Committee on Statutory Instruments, &c.—[Mr. Chapman.]

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Ordered,

That, at the sitting on Monday 30th January, the Motion in the name of Mr. John Wakeham relating to Access to the Precincts of the House may be proceeded with, though opposed, for one and a half hours after it has been entered upon; and if proceedings thereon have not been previously disposed of, Mr. Speaker shall at the expiration of that period put the Question on any Amendment which may have been moved, and shall then put forthwith the Question on any other Amendments selected by him which may then be moved, and on the Main Question or the Main Question, as amended.—[Mr. Chapman.]

Tinsley Park, South Yorkshire

Motion made, and Question proposed, That this House do now adjourn.—[Mr. Chapman.]

2.41 pm

Mr. Kevin Barron (Rother Valley): I raise this matter on the adjournment because of the great anxiety about the two planning applications for the development of Tinsley park in Sheffield, most of which is not in my constituency. I wrote to the Minister on 16 December, pointing out very briefly the concern among my constituents and other people in the area about the proposed planning applications. I have not received a detailed reply from the Minister, but I expect to hear more of the Department's views on the matter when he replies to the debate.

The application for opencast coal mining on the site preceded an application for what is best described as a short take-off and landing airport. The aircraft will come in over Catcliffe in my constituency and take off over Darnell which is in the constituency of my hon. Friend the Member for Sheffield, Attercliffe (Mr. Duffy).

There has been a major response to those proposals by many of my constituents. The local authorities, Rotherham metropolitan borough council and Sheffield city council, have brought forward the proposal for the airport and held public consultation meetings in my constituency and neighbouring areas. In addition, an exhibition went round the locality demonstrating exactly what the proposals had in store for the area.

The response to those public consultation meetings that the local authority received can best be summed up by the chairman of planning of Rotherham metropolitan borough council in his report to co-ordinating committee A. Page 3, paragraph 3, subsection 4 says:

"The overwhelming reaction of approximately 750 members of the public who attended the three public meetings was against both proposals. This was also reflected in comments slips completed at the six exhibition venues and in subsequent letters and petitions received. Over 4,500 public responses have been received in the form of exhibition slips, letters and petition signatures, the clear majority being opposed to both proposals with only a handful of people expressing support. A wide range of issues have been raised in responses by local people broadly covering environmental, noise, traffic, blighting of property, health and safety matters."

There is no doubt that both proposals created widespread alarm in the communities neighbouring the site.

The Tinsley Park action group was created as a result of this issue. It is a local group which articulates the views of local people. As well as advancing the arguments with the local authorities and elsewhere, it drew up a document called "Tinsley Park: A Case for Protection". The document details the environmental nature of the area.

To understand the feelings of that group and the local people, one needs to know that the area has suffered environmental blight from one source or another—whether industry or different forms of transport—for many years. Tinsley park is one of only two areas in the locality where people who live close by can enjoy the countryside. The countryside is not perfect, but it includes ancient woodland and a municipal golf course which, under the opencast coal mining proposals, would be reduced in size, if not destroyed completely.

I understand that the Department of the Environment has appointed an inspector, Mr. Acton, from Bristol, who is examining the opencast coal executive's proposals. At a meeting last Monday in Sheffield the interested parties discussed British Coal's application. I understand that the inspector told the meeting—I would like the Minister to clarify this—that the Department of the Environment is suggesting the non-determination of planning application B, which was submitted to Sheffield and Rotherham local authorities and is holding a public inquiry in March.

It is important to know exactly what the Department of the Environment is saying will be presented to the public inquiry. My information is that, because of the non-determination of that planning application, British Coal has reconsidered it and discussed with the two local authorities the possibility of changing the application so that more of the environment is protected. British Coal would be happy for opencast mining to go ahead, but not in the terms envisaged in application B. It is important for my constituents to know which application will go to the public inquiry in March.

It is interesting that in the past few years the site has come under the curtilage of the new Sheffield urban development corporation set up by the Government.

I have a copy of an article that appeared in The Star, a local evening newspaper, on 15 December 1988. It is headed:

"Pledge on Tinsley Park opencasting."

The article continues:

"The non-elected SDC is now in charge of overseeing British Coal's plans to open-cast Tinsley Park."

I and many others in my area want to know what that means.

Opencast mining is carried out at another two sites in my constituency. A liasion committee has been set up between British Coal, the site operators and elected representatives from the parish council and Rotherham metropolitan borough council. Sheffield UDC is a non-elected body that is not answerable to my constituents. If the application for opencast mining is agreed, I hope that it will not assume that it can take the role of elected local councillors. While we do not like the idea of opencast coal mining, when planning permission has been given with the knowledge and consent of the local authority there has been good liaison between the site operators and the local community. If opencast mining goes ahead at Tinsley park, I want to ensure that Sheffield UDC does not interfere.

If the planning application is to go before a public inquiry in March at Sheffield, what will happen about the planned airport? I shall quote from the minerals planning guidebook, which was published by the Government in May 1988 and deals with planning for opencast coal mining. Under "Restoration and Aftercare", it says:

"The principles of restoration should be settled at the time planning permission is granted, although it may sometimes be sensible for the details to be agreed at a later stage. The intended after-use must also be decided when permission is granted, but in the case of longer-term sites the detailed aftercare programme can be settled in a scheme agreed subsequently."

Tinsley park is not a long-term site. I am concerned that the Department of the Environment will deal with the issues of opencasting and after-use at different inquiries. I hope that both issues will be the subject of a public inquiry and that Sheffield UDC will be unable to override it on the question of the proposed airport close to local communities. It would be more sensible if opencast mining, after-use and the airport were dealt with together at a full public inquiry at which all bodies concerned could be heard in a proper forum.

2.53 pm

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Environment (Mr. Christopher Chope): The hon. Member for Rother Valley (Mr. Barron) has explained his concern about this case and I congratulate him on bringing this subject before the House. He was kind enough to send me a letter on 16 December about this matter in which he expressed his concern. In that letter he told me that he intended to apply for an Adjournment debate on the subject. I apologise for the fact that I did not reply in the interim period, but I was expecting this debate. I have also received letters about Tinsley park from other hon. Members and I will reply to them shortly.

Tinsley park is currently the subject of various planning applications connected with the opencast extraction of coal and the subsequent building of a short take-off and landing airport. The position with regard to the opencasting is that an application is under consideration by both Rotherham and Sheffield metropolitan borough councils which have indicated that they are minded to approve it subject to the conclusion of a section 52 agreement. However, the hon. Gentleman will no doubt be aware that the British Coal corporation has already submitted to my Department an appeal under section 37 of the Town and Country Planning Act 1984 in respect of a second application which relates to a slightly smaller site, together with requests for related compulsory purchase rights and footpath orders to be made. The public inquiry in respect of this appeal is due to open in March.

I am seeking further information about what was said on Monday. I am not sure whether I can answer the hon. Gentleman on that specific point this afternoon. If I do not get the information before the end of this debate, I will ensure that he receives a reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Barron: I appreciate what the Minister has said. However, it appears that the redefined application for a smaller plan B will be the subject of the public inquiry. As I represent the constituency close to the area concerned and as I represent the area which was originally the subject of plan B, I must state that I have not been notified that a different application will be put before the public inquiry. I assume that that will happen and that the amendment was made in the talks between British Coal and the local authorities and that the new application will go to the public inquiry. Am I right?

Mr. Chope: I am not sure whether the hon. Gentleman is right to assume that and that was not the intention of my earlier remarks. My advice is that the subject of the inquiry would be an ordinary application which was not determined. I understood that there was a section 37 appeal against non-determination and that that would go to the public inquiry in March. In the light of the hon. Gentleman's comments, I will have that checked for him.

With regard to the airport, the local authorities have also said that they are minded to approve the application, but they have referred the case to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State as a departure from the development plan.

I am sure the hon. Gentleman will appreciate that while the appeal is before my right hon. Friend and while the planning application for the STOLport is being considered from the point of view of whether my right hon. Friend should recover it for his own determination, I cannot discuss the merits of any of these proposals.

[Mr. Chope]

The hon. Gentleman has urged my right hon. Friend to call in these applications for a joint public inquiry. He has also referred to the role of the UDC. Before I deal with the question of call in, it may help if I explain the role of the UDC and say something about the Government's policy on opencasting as concern has been expressed about the impact of the proposals on the local area.

I will deal first with the question of planning responsibility and the role of the UDC. Development corporations are charged with bringing land and buildings into effective use; encouraging the development of industry and commerce and improving the environment. They place particular emphasis on the reclamation and servicing of land and the provision of adequate infrastructure to encourage private sector investment. They provide land for housing, industry, commerce and leisure. We are supporting development corporations with grants worth some £200 million in the current financial year.

Sheffield development corporation is one of our third generation UDCs, which came into force on 30 June 1988. It includes nearly the whole of Tinsley park, the subject of these planning applications.

Sheffield development corporation became the development control authority for its area, including Tinsley park, on 5 October 1988. Planning applications in the pipeline at that time, like the opencast and airport applications which had been made previously to Sheffield and Rotherham councils remain to be determined by those councils. But, quite clearly, it makes sense for the issues raised by the applications to be discussed and, where possible, agreed by the relevant parties.

I know that discussions are taking place between Sheffield development corporation, the two councils and British Coal Opencast Executive, all of which have a quite proper interest in the details of the proposals. I know, too, that Sheffield development corporation's strategy will be considering the contribution which opencasting, the resulting reclamation and a city airport could make to achieving its regeneration objectives. That said, however, these matters are now before my right hon. Friend and, while it is sensible for such discussions to continue locally, my right hon. Friend has to consider the matter before him on its merits.

The hon. Gentleman and other hon. Members in correspondence have expressed concern about the impact of the opencasting. Although mineral workings are temporary uses of land, they can have a serious impact on the environment. The Government recognise this. At the same time minerals are essential for the economy and can be worked only where they occur. It is the job of the planning system to balance the need for the mineral against environmental and other relevant factors.

I do not believe that it is necessary for me to set out in detail what is contained in the planning policy guidance note 3, which was published in May last year, to which the hon. Gentleman referred. It is sufficient to say that the guidance advises mineral planning authorities on the balance which needs to be struck between the economic benefits of developing this source of low cost energy and the protection of the environment.

Because opencast coal is one of the cheapest forms of energy available to this country, it is in the national interest to maximise production where that can be done in an environmentally acceptable way.

But there is no Government target for coal production or opencast output. That is a matter for the market. It is therefore for the industry to decide the level of opencast output for which it wishes to aim in any period. But it is for the mineral planning authorities initially—and, ultimately, my right hon. Friend if the case comes before him on appeal or call-in—to determine the acceptability of specific projects having regard both to the benefits of opencast coal and the particular proposal, and the environmental and other material considerations relating to the specific site.

Our aim is to encourage a positive and constructive approach by the industry and mineral planning authorities to ensure that this important resource is extracted in an environmentally acceptable way.

The hon. Gentleman has urged, that these applications should be considered by my right hon. Friend following a public inquiry. It is a long established policy for the Secretary of State not to interfere with the jurisdiction of planning authorities unless it is necessary to do so. That is an important principle. Parliament has given clear duties and responsibilities to local planning authorities. They often have to take difficult and unpalatable decisions, and it would be wrong for my right hon. Friend to interfere unnecessarily in the development control process. My right hon. Friend will therefore continue to be very selective about calling in cases for his decision, and applications will in general be called in only if planning issues of more than local importance are involved. Such cases may include, for example, those which in my right hon. Friend's opinion could have wide effects beyond their immediate locality, which give rise to substantial regional or national controversy and which may conflict with national policy on important matters.

Presently, there are three issues before my right hon. Friend. First there is the application for opencasting of the site currently before the local authorities, which he has been asked to call in. Secondly, there is a similar application for opencasting, on which British Coal has appealed on the ground of non determination, and on which the public inquiry has been called. Thirdly, there are applications for the STOLport which have been referred to my right hon. Friend as a departure from the development plan. Although these applications relate by and large to the same area of land, they are distinct matters and my right hon. Friend will consider each of the matters before him on its own merits.

The hon. Gentleman has referred to guidance from my department on whether simultaneous applications for different types of development on the same site are necessarily called in to be considered together at a joint public inquiry. The general position is that, if one of the proposals is before the Secretary of State for decision, consideration is given on a case-by-case basis whether it would be convenient for the parties for the applications to be considered at one inquiry. For example, if there are competing proposals for a site and they are mutually exclusive, that would be a good ground for a joint inquiry. If only one application, for example, were to be called in by the Secretary of State, that proposal could be disadvantaged by having to spend time going through the public inquiry system. Under those circumstances, if asked to do so, the Secretary of State would consider calling in the other cases purely to ensure that each received equal treatment. Having said that, each would still be considered on its own merits. That circumstance applies to where the proposed developments are mutually exclusive.

However, where the competing proposals are not mutually exclusive, by virtue of being capable of consecutive development—for example the extraction of a mineral from a surface working or any other use of a site for a limited period, following which that site will once again be available for development—different criteria apply. In those circumstances, there is not necessarily anything to be gained by arranging for a joint inquiry.

Mr. Barron: Obviously I do not know the details of the discussions taking place between the opencast coal executive committee, the two local authorities and Sheffield urban development corporation. My understanding is that British Coal has told the local authorities that it will lay down the framework for the runway for a STOLport when it restores the site that it will opencast. I do not believe that there is any contradiction in my argument or in the planning guidance that has been issued by the Department. There is a strong link between British Coal's plans and the plans for the airport. That direct link has been discussed many times in the local press and everybody knows about it. That is why both plans should be subject to a public inquiry.

Mr. Chope: I note what the hon. Gentleman says, but I cannot comment upon the merits of his argument. As I said, my right hon. Friend is considering whether the STOLport application should be called in.

As a matter of general policy, our Department likes to encourage local authorities and applicants for planning permission to reach an accommodation between themselves. Often that is done with the assistance of section 52 agreements, and if a section 52 agreement was reached between the parties in this case, it would not be novel. Obviously, I cannot comment on that case, but what the hon. Gentleman has said will be taken into account when we decide whether to call in the application.

There is nothing more that I can usefully say to help the hon. Gentleman in anticipation of the quasi-judicial process that must continue. I assure him that I recognise the importance of the matters that he has raised, which have also been raised by the hon. Members for Sheffield, Attercliffe (Mr. Duffy) and for Sheffield, Brightside (Mr. Blunkett) as well as by people outside the House. All those representations will be taken into account by my right hon. Friend when he reaches a decision on the matter.

Question put to and agreed to.

Adjourned accordingly at six minutes past Three o'clock.

Written Answers to Questions

Monday 16 January 1989

PRIME MINISTER

Pre-school Education

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if she has any plans to amalgamate the activities for the education of the under-fives of the Department of Education and Science and the Department of Social Security; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The Government will give careful consideration to the recommendations made by the Education, Science and Arts Committee in its report on educational provision for the under-fives, including those which have a bearing on this, and will make our conclusions known in our response to that report.

Greenhouse Effect

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on inter-departmental co-operation and co-ordination on the greenhouse effect.

The Prime Minister: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment is responsible for Government policy on the greenhouse effect, in consultation with the other Ministers concerned. I am entirely satisfied with the arrangements for inter-departmental co-operation and co-ordination.

Ministerial Advisers

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list the ministerial advisers appointed in her office for each year since 1979, the salary each person received, whether paid directly or to another employer, and the duties undertaken, whether solely in her office or in conjunction with other Departments; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The ministerial advisers appointed in my Office since 1979 are as follows:

Year and Name

1979
J. Hoskyns
Mrs. C. Ryder
N. Strauss

1981
Professor A. Walters

1982
C. W. Monckton
W. R. F. Mount
P. Shipley

1983
D. C. Hobson
R. T. Jackling
O. Letwin
N. C. Owen
Sir Anthony Parsons
D. L. Pascall
J. Redwood
R. Young

1984
V. E. Hartley-Booth
Sir Percy Craddock
P. T. Warry
D. L. Willetts
J. B. Wybrew[1]

1985
Professor B. Griffiths

1986
N. R. Blackwell
G. R. J. Guise
P. J. Stredder

1987
Mrs. T. Gaisman
A. J. O'Sullivan

1988
G. D. Bourne[1]
A. Dunlop
Miss C. Sinclair
I. K. Whitehead

[1] Salary paid to another employer. (Information prior to 1984 is not available).

It is not our practice to reveal the salaries of advisers as they are individually negotiated in relation to previous outside earnings and are therefore confidential.

Overseas Visits

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Prime Minister if she will make it her policy to close accounts relating to repayment of costs incurred by media organisations on her visits abroad within three months of the completion of the relevant visit.

The Prime Minister: I have nothing to add to the answer I gave the hon. Member on 10 January 1989 at column 495.

Government Departments (Services)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Prime Minister what is the general practice within Government Departments as to the time permitted for repayment by outside bodies of sums owing for services provided by Government Departments.

The Prime Minister: Government Departments are advised in "Government Accounting" that the full sums due must be calculated and collected promptly.

BBC Today Programme

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Prime Minister which Departments of State were invited to send speakers to the BBC Radio 4 Today programme on Wednesday 11 January to discuss families rendered homeless by mortgage default; what response was made; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: Both the Department of the Environment and the Treasury were invited to send a speaker. The Minister for Housing, Environment and Countryside being unavailable on the date requested, discussed the issue on the following day. Mortgage repossessions are very distressing for those involved, but it is important to keep things in perspective: less than one third of 1 per cent. of building society borrowers had their homes repossessed according to the most recent figures available.

Disasters (Messages of Sympathy)

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Prime Minister what is her policy on redirecting to Buckingham Palace messages of sympathy received by her from Heads of State at times of disasters.

The Prime Minister: Appropriate action is taken on all the messages which I receive.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Mental Health

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consultation takes place with a local health authority when mentally ill patients are to be released from prison; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Prison standing orders require that the discharge of a prisoner in need of skilled advice and attention on grounds of mental disorder should, if the prisoner consents, be notified to the district medical officer for the area in which the prisoner intends to reside.

The desirability of further developing such arrangements was included in the recommendations of a joint Home Office/Department of Health working group and accepted by the Government. The Departments are in discussion about guidance to regional and district health authorities and also with the professions on how this ought to be given effect. Revised prison department instructions and a model letter for use by prison medical officers, both presently in draft, will provide an administrative framework for NHS medical staff to be invited to visit an inmate and to discuss his case with the responsible medical officer.

AIDS

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many male and female prisoners in England and Wales currently have the human immuno-deficiency virus; and in which prisons they are held.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: On 12 January 1989 the prison population of England and Wales included 50 male and seven female prisoners reported as having been identified as HIV antibody positive. For reasons of medical confidentiality it is not the Department's policy to disclose the number of such prisoners located at individual establishments.

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he has any plans to designate any prisons or parts of prisons in England and Wales as national HIV and AIDS centres.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: In the context of its contingency planning the directorate of prison medical services is identifying prison service establishments, with medical facilities which would be capable, when needed, of giving short or longer-term care and suppport to prisoners, with AIDS, AIDS-related illness or other infectious illness, whose condition does not require admission to the specialised facilities of the National Health Service.

A purpose-designed unit is planned for Brixton prison. Accommodation at Risley remand centre near Warrington is to be the main resource in the north. Hospital accommodation with suitable facilities at other establishments in each of the four regions will also be used to fulfil a care and support function as and when necessary.

Scenes of Crime Officers

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish in the Official Report for each police force in England and Wales the number of scenes of crime officers in post; and what is the corresponding percentage of these which are civilian.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The latest available information is as follows:

Police officers/civilians in scenes of crime department

Provincial forces[2]	Number	Percentage civilian[1]
Avon and Somerset	40	7·5
Bedfordshire	13	38·5
Cambridgeshire	10	20·0
Cheshire	22	27·3
Cleveland	20	—
Cumbria	26	61·5
Derbyshire	25	96·0
Devon and Cornwall	28	35·7
Dorset	13	—
Durham	22	36·4
Dyfed Powys	10	10·0
Essex	45	4·4
Gloucestershire	12	—
Greater Manchester	56	1·8
Gwent	12	—
Hampshire	44	9·1
Hertfordshire	19	—
Humberside	41	39·0
Kent	35	51·4
Lancashire	38	—
Leicestershire	23	34·8
Lincolnshire	15	33·3
Merseyside	24	—
Norfolk	20	15·0
Northamptonshire	14	78·6
Northumbria	44	27·3
North Wales	11	100·0
North Yorkshire	18	16·7
Nottinghamshire	31	70·1
South Wales	39	7·7
South Yorkshire	35	51·4
Staffordshire	19	—
Suffolk	12	—
Surrey	21	52·4
Sussex	44	50·0
Thames Valley	33	12·1
Warwickshire	12	41·7
West Mercia	34	38·2
West Midlands	57	31·6
West Yorkshire	54	7·4
Wiltshire	20	—
City of London	14	35·7
TOTAL	1,125	26·0
Metropolitan Police[3]	196	100·0

[1] It should be noted that some of the civilian staff identified for provincial forces may be engaged in general administrative support duties.

[2] As at 31 December 1987.

[3] As at 31 December 1988.

Police Grading

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the rationale and formulae used by his Department to establish the ratios of the different ranks of police officers in each force in England and Wales.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My right hon. Friend is advised by Her Majesty's inspectorate of constabulary which, among other things, takes account of the rank ratios across the police service as a whole. At the end of 1987 these stood as follows:

	Per cent
ACPO	0·2
Chief Superintendent	0·4
Superintendent	1·3
Chief Inspector	1·8
Inspector	5·4
Sergeant	15·5
Constable	75·4

Cumbria Police Force

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the review of police staffing levels carried out by his Department with regard to the Cumbria force.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The chief constable, not the Home Office, has carried out a review of police staffing levels in the Cumbria constabulary. Following that review the police authority has applied for an increase in the force establishments of 62 police posts. This will be considered along with applications which have been received from other authorities for increases in 1989-90. My right hon. Friend hopes to announce his decisions shortly.

Prison (Banstead)

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the category C prison which is being built on the former Banstead hospital site is part of the previously announced programme of 26 new prisons to be opened between 1983 and 1995.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The previously announced programme made provision for 800 prison places on the Banstead site. In view of the urgent need for prison accommodation, these are being increased and provided in two phases. The first phase of converting existing accommodation to category C places is nearly complete. The second phase of building a local prison for 620 inmates will begin later this year.

Ministerial Advisers

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the ministerial advisers in his Department for each year since 1979, the salary each person received, whether paid directly or to another employer, and the duties undertaken, whether solely in his Department or in conjunction with other Departments; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: The special advisers employed in the Home Office since 1979 are as follows:

Name	Period of appointment
Mr. Robin Harris	June 1983 to March 1985
Mr. David Coleman	April to September 1983
Mr. Edward Bickham	September 1983 to April 1986
Mr. David Lidington	December 1987 onwards
Mr. John Godfrey (on secondment)	July 1988 onwards

They have provided advice on a wide range of Home Office subjects. It is not our practice to disclose the salaries of individual advisers as they are negotiated individually in relation to previous outside earnings and are therefore confidential.

Community Radio Franchises

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department by what means he intends to sell community radio franchises.

Mr. Renton: The method of allocating community radio contracts is currently for the IBA to decide.

Entry Refusals

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many representations he has received from hon. Members in connection with individuals refused entry to the United Kingdom since 3 January; in how many cases he agreed to defer removal as a result of those representations; and in how many cases he refused to defer removal.

Mr. Renton: The revised guidelines on the handling of representations by hon. Members in immigration cases, introduced with effect from 3 January 1989, require that, before approaching the Minister to request deferment of removal of a passenger refused leave to enter the United Kingdom, an hon. Member should first contact the immigration service and invite them to consider deferment. There are no central records of the total number of such requests by hon. Members nor of the number of cases in which deferment has been or has not been granted.

Shotgun Licences

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is (a) the number of current shotgun licences, (b) the number of shotgun licences issued since the enactment of the Firearms (Amendment) Act 1988, and (c) the number of (i) civilian and (ii) police staff dealing with the processing of shotgun licence applications and (d) the change in the number of such staff since the enactment of the Firearms (Amendment) Act 1988.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Statistics on shotgun certificates are collected on an annual basis. A total of 861,300 shotgun certificates were on issue in England and Wales at 31 December 1987, the last year for which figures are available. Information is not collected centrally on the number of police and civilian staff dealing with shotgun certificate applications and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Immigrants Advisory Services

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he has any plans to locate a United Kingdom immigrants advisory service office on the east coast of Scotland;

(2) if he has any plans to improve the provision of advice centres for ethnic minorities with regard to immigration, short-term visas and related problems.

Mr. Renton: Under the Immigration Act 1971 the Home Office makes a grant-in-aid to the United Kingdom immigrants advisory service, which offers a nationwide service to persons who have rights of appeal under the Act. We have no plans to make funds available for any other advice centres or organisations involved in these areas of work. The location of UKIAS offices is a matter for that organisation.

Police (Tape Recordings)

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will ask for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis as to whether as a matter of policy and practice Metropolitan police officers are allowed to tape record a telephone conversation between a person held at a police station and a solicitor, relative or friend.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Metropolitan police, like other forces, are bound by the provisions of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 and the codes of practice made under the Act.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance he has given to chief constables about the tape recording by police officers of any telephone conversation between a person under arrest and a solicitor, relative or friend.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: No specific guidance about the tape recording of communications has been given, but general guidance to the police about the treatment of people under arrest is contained in code C of the codes of practice made under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984. This provides, in accordance with section 58 of the Act, that communications between a suspect and his solicitor must be private except in certain circumstances when an arrest has been made under prevention of terrorism legislation. Telephone conversations between a suspect and anyone other than a solicitor may be listened to and used in evidence, for which purpose a record will need to be kept. The suspect must be informed beforehand that his conversation will be overheard.

Greater Manchester Police

My Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has receive about the establishment of Greater Manchester police and what assessment he has made of them.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Representations have been received from the Greater Manchester police authority and from hon. Friends and Members whose constituencies lie within the force area about the need for an increase in the establishment of the Greater Manchester police. My right hon. Friend will announce shortly his decision on this and other applications for increases in police establishments.

Vietnamese Embassy (Incident)

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects that a reply will be sent to the letter from the hon. Member for Sunderland, South, referred to the Minister of State, the right hon. the Earl Ferrers, regarding the incident at the Vietnamese embassy on 4 September 1988.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I am sorry that it has not yet been possible to provide a substantive reply. The correspondence raised a number of matters on which police inquiries were necessary and a report was requested from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis. I understand from the Commissioner that this should be completed shortly. My right hon. and Noble Friend will reply as soon as possible after the report has been received and considered.

Guildford Four

Mr. Hind: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has reached a decision on whether to refer the case of the Guildford Four to the Court of Appeal; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: On 22 October 1975, Patrick Armstrong, Gerald Conlon, Paul Hill, and Carole Richardson were convicted of murder and other offences connected with the bombing of two public houses in Guildford on 5 October 1974, in which five people died. They were sentenced to life imprisonment. In addition, Patrick Armstrong and Paul Hill were convicted of two murders arising from the bombing of a public house in Woolwich on 7 November 1974. On 28 October 1977, after a hearing lasting 11 days, the Court of Appeal refused applications by all four for leave to appeal.

Since then, considerable efforts have been made by many people to establish that these convictions were unsafe. A large number of arguments have been adduced and, in the last two years, much allegedly new evidence has been brought to light.

In circumstances such as these a Home Secretary has, broadly speaking, three choices:

(a) to take no action and allow the verdicts to stand;

(b) to refer the case back to the Court of Appeal;

(c) to recommend the use of the royal prerogative to pardon.

The Home Secretary is an elected politician representing the Executive. The judiciary is and must be seen to be independent of the Executive. It follows that the power of the Executive over decisions of the judiciary needs to be exercised with very great care. Those who are seriously concerned about civil liberties in this country should be particularly chary of urging the Home Secretary to use these powers. I believe that the Home Secretary should only exercise the power of referral within stiff constraints. He should resist the temptation to substitute his view of the case for that of a court of law. The opinions of those who make representations to him, however distinguished, on whether the jury or the Court of Appeal dealt correctly with the evidence before them should not be decisive. Nor should his own personal opinions. This rules out at a stroke many of the matters raised in this case, because they were before the jury or the Court of Appeal. Those who were not in court are not well placed to challenge the decision of those who heard the evidence, except on the ground that there is new evidence or other consideration of substance which was not available at the original trial or appeal hearing. In January 1987 I told the House that in the light of that constraint my view was that there had not been raised any new substantive points which justified action on my part.

A large amount of further matter has been produced since then. The question, which I have examined with great care, is whether it is new and substantial, and now justifies my intervention.

At this point I should refer to the argument, on law not fact, advanced by Lords Devlin and Scarman when they came to see me on 23 July 1987 and further developed in an article in The Times on 30 November last year. In brief, I understood them to argue that the Court of Appeal was wrong to dismiss as worthless without reference to a jury the confessions to the Guildford and Woolwich bombings by members of the Balcombe Street Gang. These confessions were made between the original verdict and the appeal hearing. Lords Delvin and Scarman believe that the jury should have been given the chance to reach a conclusion on the convictions of the Guildford Four by a previous jury in the light of these confessions, of which that jury knew nothing. I understand that a similar point of law was raised in the contest of the Birmingham bombings. The Appeal Committee of the House of Lords, composed of three Law Lords, on 14 April 1988 refused leave to appeal on these grounds. Although I personally would be reluctant to contest an opinion held by Lords Devlin and Scarman, I do not think it would be sensible to base a reference to the Court of Appeal on a point of law which the Appeal Committee had recently declined to consider.

I should, however, point out that when a case is referred to the Court of Appeal by the Home Secretary he may cite grounds for such reference but the subsequent hearing is not confined to those grounds. Once a case is referred, it is treated for all purposes as an appeal by the persons convicted, and the defence may thus seek to raise any matters of fact or law which they regard as pertinent.

Against this background and after prolonged study and thought, I have decided to refer this case to the Court of Appeal. It is right that I make clear now that I do not feel justified in recommending the use of the royal prerogative to pardon or release them. But I am satisfied that amongst the many matters raised with me since January 1987 there are new and substantial points which clearly, and within the constraint set out above, are best considered by the court.

There are three particular matters, to which my attention was drawn:

(a) first, there is the matter of the use of drugs by Carole Richardson, and medical treatment given to her while in custody. There are two points here. Dr. Makos, the police surgeon who saw her in 1974, volunteered in August 1987, and repeated to the Avon and Somerset police in November 1987, that he had administered an injection of pethidine to Carole Richardson. Later, in December last year, in a letter and subsequent statement to officers of Avon and Somerset, he withdrew this admission. Dr. Makos' recollections may be uncertain or unclear, but it does appear that pethidine might not have been a suitable treatment for someone in Miss Richardson's apparent condition, that is suffering from withdrawal from barbiturates. Even if she was not given pethidine, at least some of her confessions would appear to have been made at a time when she was suffering from withdrawal to a greater degree than has hitherto been thought. The admitted administration of the drug tuinal to Miss Richardson would appear, in medical opinion now, to have had the effect of prolonging and increasing withdrawal symptoms. The possible effects of these drugs on the reliability of her statements were not adequately exposed to the jury or the Court of Appeal;

(b) second, the alibi given by Maura Kelly in March 1987 for Carole Richardson, alleges that during the afternoon of the Guildford bomb, 5 October 1974, she was visited at the baker's shop where she worked by Richardson and her friend Lisa Astin, at about 2.30 pm. The two left and returned to the shop some time later, when Richardson gave Maura Kelly a doll. When Maura Kelly closed the shop at around 5 pm, the two girls were still with her. She walked with them to the bus stop when they separated. Maura Kelly had left the country before the trial and the defence were unable to call her to give evidence. Neither a jury nor the Court of Appeal have therefore had the opportunity to assess the value of her evidence alongside the alibi presented by Carole Richardson, that during the course of the afternoon she had no opportunity to make any journey to Guildford;

(c) third, the alibi by Mrs. Fox for Paul Hill, produced on 15 July 1987 states that on the evening of the Woolwich bombing, 7 November 1974, she was at the flat of Mr. and Mrs. Keenan, where Paul Hill was living. Mrs. Fox says she was with Mr. and Mrs. Keenan between 7 pm and 10.15 pm. During that period Paul Hill was present except for a period of about 20 minutes when he left to make a telephone call to his girlfriend. Mrs. Fox attended the trial but did not give evidence, and Mr. and Mrs. Keenan and Paul Hill, who did give evidence, made no mention of her. In statements of 15 July 1987, both Mr. and Mrs. Keenan now confirm that Mrs. Fox had been at their flat that evening.

Paul Hill said he left Mr. and Mrs. Keenan's flat only to make a telephone call. This was supported by the Keenans in their evidence. The account Mrs. Fox offers appears to add weight to the alibi evidence, but neither the jury nor the Court of Appeal have had the opportunity to consider it.

Little purpose would be served by setting out in detail here the other points put to me. The three main points I mention seem to me to bear directly on the safety of the convictions. These points were not available to the jury of the Court of Appeal. They need to be tested in court.

I am grateful to all those whose genuine concern for justice had led them to take an interest in this case. Among many I would single out Cardinal Hume, with whom I have several times discussed the case and who led the delegation which came to see me in July 1987. I am also most grateful to the Avon and Somerset police, who conducted painstaking and invaluable inquiries into certain of the new matters submitted to me.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Members' Income and Allowances

Mr. Allen: To ask the Lord President of the Council what was the cost to the public funds of the office and secretarial allowance for the last year for which figures were available; and what this is as a percentage of the total cost were each hon. Member to have claimed the full allowance.

Mr. Wakeham: The total expenditure from the House of Commons vote (class XX vote 8) during 1986-87 in respect of Members' office, secretarial and research expenses was £11,673,136.50. This figure represents just over 89 per cent. of the total cost had all hon. Members claimed the full allowance during the year.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Rain Forests

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has any conveniently available figures for the volume of aid to (a) Brazil, (b) Malaysia, (c) Indonesia and (d) African states to help them preserve rain forest ecosystems over any convenient period.

Mr. Chris Patten: Available information on aid commitments to projects currently under way is as follows (a) £20,000, (b) £156,000 (a regional Asian project with special relevance to Malaysia), (c) £120,000 and (d) £21·9 million. In addition, over £575,000 has been committed to people from African countries undergoing rain forest-related training in the United Kingdom in 1987-89.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Ministerial Advisers

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Attorney-General, if he will list the ministerial advisers appointed in the Lord Chancellor's and Law Officers Departments for each year since 1979, the salary each person received, whether paid directly or to another employer, and the duties undertaken, whether solely in that Department or in conjunction with other Departments; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: Neither my Department nor the Lord Chancellor's Department has appointed any ministerial adviser during the period to which the question relates.

"The Guardian" (Prosecution)

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Attorney-General what consideration he has given to the possible prosecution of Mr. Richard Norton-Taylor of The Guardian, and of its editor Mr. Peter Preston, arising from the publication on 4 January 1989 of the name and background of the new head of the Secret Intelligence Service.

The Attorney-General: Sufficient.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Falkland Islands (Geese)

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate he can make of the number of upland geese currently on the Falkland Islands; and what were the estimated numbers over the last decade.

Mr. Eggar: According to a 1987 report on geese grazing in the Falkland Islands, there are between 300,000 and 400,000 Upland geese on the Falkland Islands. In the late seventies, numbers were estimated at between 350,000 and 400,000.

St. Helena (University Qualifications)

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has as to the numbers of St. Helenians living in St. Helena with university qualifications; and what were the comparable figures five years ago.

Mr. Eggar: The number of St. Helenians living in St. Helena with university qualifications is nine (1 MEd, 3 BEd, 5 diplomas—postgraduate); the number five years ago was eight.

St. Georgia (Fish Conservation)

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will consider the introduction of a fish conservation zone for St. Georgia and its associated islands.

Mr. Eggar: Conservation in the waters around South Georgia is covered by the convention for the conservation of Antarctic marine living resources (CCAMLR). Under pressure from the United Kingdom and others CCAMLR recently banned all fishing around South Georgia for mackerel ice fish (the primary endangered species) until November 1989. The renewable resources assessment group of Imperial college is currently studying the fishery resources of the area on behalf of the South Georgia Government.

Emperor Hirohito

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs why Her Majesty's Government decided to send an official representative to the funeral of Emperor Hirohito; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: We have close and friendly relations with Japan. The late Emperor of Japan made a state visit to this country in 1971 and The Queen made a state visit to Japan in 1975. Members of successive Governments have been received by the late Emperor. In the light of all these factors we have decided it is right to be represented at the Emperor's funeral.

WALES

Bus Companies (Privatisation)

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list those municipal bus companies that will be privatised in the next six months.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Inter-Valley Link is expected to be sold shortly by Rhymney Valley district council. Proposals to sell any of the remaining five companies in Wales are a matter for the local authority concerned.

Ministerial Advisers

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the ministerial advisers appointed in his Department for each year since 1979, the salary each person received, whether paid directly or to another employer, and the duties undertaken, whether solely in his Department or in conjunction with other Departments; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: Mr. C. J. Butler was a ministerial adviser in the Welsh Office from 1983 to 1985. His salary was paid directly to him and since it was negotiated taking into account his previous income it would not be appropriate to reveal it. He did not work for any other Government Department in the period and his duties were set by my predecessor as Secretary of State for Wales.

Home Improvement Grants

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the amount spent on home improvement grants by (a) Carmarthen district council, (b) Dinefwr district council and (c) the total for all Welsh local authorities in each of the financial years from 1978-79 to the present at 1988 prices.

Mr. Grist: The amount spent on completed renovation grants in each financial year at 1987-88 prices is given in the table:

(£000's)

	Wales	Carmarthen	Dinefwr
1978-79	17,427	550	369
1979-80	20,657	739	490
1980-81	20,442	1,060	442
1981-82	21,786	735	256
1982-83	41,927	1,004	121
1983-84	115,501	6,576	1,006
1984-85	99,149	4,006	1,511
1985-86	59,707	1,840	520
1986-87	62,063	2,032	410
1987-88	60,992	1,889	416

Nursing Homes

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total cost, and from which Government Departments, of funding private and voluntary nursing homes in each year from 1982 to 1987.

Mr. Grist: We have no general powers to fund nursing homes, although project applications relating to their establishment may be considered under urban programme, urban development grant and joint finance schemes. However, the information requested of the Department is not readily available and I have no ready access to information about the costs to other Government Departments.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many places there were in local authority nursing homes in each year from 1982 to 1987 by district health authority; and what was the total cost of those places in each year.

Mr. Grist: There are no local authority nursing homes. The definition of nursing homes refers to those establishments in the independent sector which provide recognised nursing care.

Pay Beds

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many pay beds were available in Welsh health authorities in each year since 1979; what was the percentage occupancy rate in each year; and how much money is still owed by pay bed users.

Mr. Grist: Available information is given in the table. Information on the money still owed by pay bed occupants is not centrally available.

Year[1]	Number of pay beds authorised	Percentage occupancy
1979	39	35·8
1980	36	58·9
1981	[2]46	33·6
1982	[2]47	29·8
1983	[2]47	29·5
1984	[3]49	26·8
1985	[3]49	30·0
1986	[2]54	34·5
1987	[2]54	31·4

[1] At 31 December for each calendar year.
[2] Excludes two beds for emergency use only.
[3] Excludes three beds for emergency use only.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many beds were available in private hospitals in Wales in each year since 1979.

Mr. Grist: Information which relates to each calendar year since statistics became available is given below:

	Number of beds
1982	255
1983	246
1984	246
1985	246
1986	212
1987	215

Consultants

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many National Health Service consultants held full-time and part-time contracts in the Welsh health service in each year since 1979.

Mr. Grist: The information is given in the following table:

Number of consultants—as at 30 September[1]

	Full-time	Part-time[2]
1979	391	307
1980	404	300
1981	431	299
1982	443	300
1983	481	290
1984	500	289
1985	494	319
1986	504	334

[1] Excludes locums and community staff.
[2] Includes consultants with part-time, maximum part-time and honorary contracts.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many consultants were working part-time and full-time in the private health sector in Wales in each year since 1979.

Mr. Grist: The information requested is not available centrally.

Hospitals (Contractors)

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many contracts have been awarded in the Welsh hospital service to outside contractors in each of (a) catering, (b) cleaning, (c) laundry, (d) engineering, (e) building and (f) gardening since 1985; and what percentage of those services are performed by outside contracts.

Mr. Grist: Of the 78 contracts let by competitive tendering since 1985 for catering, cleaning and laundry services, one domestic contract (4 per cent. of total service costs) and one laundry contract (2·5 per cent. of total service costs) were let to private contractors. All other contracts let so far for these services have been awarded to in-house teams. There is no doubt that cost-effectiveness has been greatly improved as a result of the tendering process. Information on engineering, building and gardening services is not held centrally.

NHS Review

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will make a statement on the impact of the National Health Service review's proposed reforms on the Welsh health service;

(2) whether an internal market in the Welsh Health Service will be backed by a subsidised transport service to allow all patients to benefit from empty beds in other areas.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he proposes to issue a White Paper on the future of the National Health Service in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: I shall be announcing shortly the results of my review of the NHS in Wales.

Parc Beck Allotments Society

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will meet representatives of the Parc Beck allotments society accompanied by the right hon. Member for Swansea, West.

Mr. Peter Walker: No, since there is nothing that I can usefully add to the many exchanges which I have had with the right hon. Gentleman and with representatives of the Parc Beck allotment society. The matter is one for the West Glamorgan health authority to pursue in accordance with the relevant departmental guidance.

Local Authorities (Capital Receipts)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish the amount of accumulated capital receipts held by local authorities at the end of 1987-88; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: The total amount of accumulated capital receipts held by local authorities at the end of 1987-88 was £472 million.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Post Office (Industrial Relations)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many representations he has received regarding industrial relations in the Post Office from (a) Conservative and (b) other hon. Members.

Mr. Forth: My right hon. Friend and I have received 25 such representations since the beginning of 1988, 24 of which were from hon. Friends.

Post Office (Letters Monopoly)

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he has any plans to seek to end the Post Office monopoly of letter delivery.

Mr. Forth: We have made it clear that the Post Office's monopoly over the conveyance of letters priced at below £1 is a privilege not a right. We keep the monopoly under review and have said that in the event of cessation or serious decline in the quality of the letter service, we would consider seriously suspending the monopoly. I have, however, no present plans to do so.

Marketing and Research Consultancies

Dr. Hampson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many marketing or market research consultancies based out of London have been invited to tender for Government contracts.

Mr. Forth: During the years 1987 and 1988 17 marketing or market research consultancies based out of London were invited to tender by my Department. I am unable to provide details for other Government Departments.

Market Research

Dr. Hampson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what the total amount spent by Government Departments and agencies on market research was in 1987-88; and what proportion was contracted out to private companies.

Mr. Forth: My Department's records for that year do not separately identify expenditure on market research. The cost of extracting the information manually would be disproportionate. I am unable to comment on such expenditure in other Government Departments.

Post Office (Letter Deliveries)

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on Royal Mail deliveries during December 1988.

Mr. Forth: The quality of the letter delivery service is an operational matter for the Post Office. I understand that despite the 24-hour closure of the Coventry sorting office as a result of a letter bomb and exceptionally high levels of staff sickness, almost all mail posted on or before the latest posting dates recommended by the Post Office was delivered before Christmas day. However, a less than full service was provided in the south-west London district as a result of unofficial industrial action in nine of the 20 sub-districts.

Ministerial Advisers

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the ministerial advisers appointed in his Department for each year since 1979, the salary each person received, whether paid directly or to another employer, and the duties undertaken, whether solely in his Department or in conjunction with other Departments; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: The files containing the information requested are not immediately available. Information from earlier years is being gathered and I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Post Office Counters

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether he will arrange to meet the managing director of Post Office Counters to discuss the effects of the current downgrading of main post offices.

Mr. Forth: My right hon. Friend and I meet the members of the Post Office board regularly to discuss matters of current interest relating to the Post Office businesses.

Textiles (China)

Mr. Knapman: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if the details of the bilateral agreements on trade in textiles within the People's Republic of China initialled by the EC Commission last month have yet been made public.

Mr. Alan Clarke: The quantitative limits for 1989 imports under the agreement were published in the Official Journal of the European Communities (OJL 367) dated 31 December, recently received. However no figures for member state shares of EC-wide limits are given. These are not expected for some weeks.

A copy of the relevant extract from OJL 367 is being placed in the Library.

I understand that a further part of the Official Journal for 31 December has just been published, reproducing the terms of the agreement. This will be placed in the Library as soon as it is received.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

St. Anne's Hospital, Nottingham

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what assistance his Department will give the local education authority in meeting the needs of psychiatrically disturbed children and adolescents in the Nottingham area arising from the closure of St. Anne's hospital and its hospital school.

Mr. Butcher: Before any maintained special school, including a hospital school, can close, the local education authority must seek the Secretary of State's approval under section 14 of the 1981 Education Act. A copy of the Department's Circular 3/82 "Section 14 of the Education Act 1981: Discontinuance of Maintained Special Schools", which explains these procedures, is available in the Library. It is for local education authorities to specify the alternative provision they will be making for pupils affected by the closure of a special school.

No proposal to close St. Anne's hospital school has been received by the Secretary of State.

Natural Environment Research Council (Funds)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the level of his Department's funding of the Natural Environment Research Council for each of the past 10 years in real terms at 1988-89 prices; if he will increase the planned level of funding for the 1989-90 financial year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: The information for the past 10 years is as follows:

	£ million 1988-89 prices
1979-80	68·3
1980-81	73·6
1981-82	77·8
1982-83	77·7
1983-84	78·9
1984-85	79·6
1985-86	78·5
1986-87	78·7
1987-88	77·9
1988-89	91·9

My right hon. Friend announced on 1 November 1988, at columns 605-10, that the Science Budget for 1989-90 would be £825 million and that he would be seeking the advice of the Advisory Board for the Research Councils on the allocation of this amount. In answer to questions from my hon. Friends the Members for Rutland and Melton (Mr. Latham) on 7 November 1988 at columns 2-3 and Derbyshire, West (Mr. McLoughlin) on 8 November 1988 at columns 134-35, my right hon. Friend has already announced that he has allocated in 1989-90 an additional £3 million for the British Geological Survey and an additional £10 million for the British Antarctic Survey. The ABRC advice is now being considered. We hope to announce the allocations to the individual councils (including NERC) shortly.

Special Educational Needs

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) what is his timetable for making regulations under section 17 and section 19 of the Educational Reform Act 1988 regarding provision within the national curriculum for children with special educational needs; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will make it his policy not to lay before this House draft orders for mathematics and science within the national curriculum until after he has published proposals for regulations under section 17 and section 19 of the Education Reform Act 1988 regarding provision for children with special educational needs; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: There is no need for regulations under section 17 regarding provision for children with special educational needs to be drafted before orders for attainment targets and programmes of study for mathematics and science are made. The National Curriculum Council has advised my right hon. Friend that these orders should apply to all pupils without modification, with every effort being made to facilitate access for all pupils including those with a statement of special educational needs made under the Education Act 1981. My right hon. Friend proposes that the mathematics and science requirements should not, however, apply to pupils with statements of special educational needs until autumn 1990. This will give time for statements to be revised to modify or disapply the requirements if necessary.

If section 17 regulations are needed in respect of national curriculum requirements to be introduced in 1990 and subsequently, my right hon. Friend will ensure that the necessary consultations take place in good time.

Regulations under section 19 about temporary exemptions to national curriculum requirements will not be specific to particular subjects. It is my right hon.

Friend's intention to consult on draft regulations shortly, so that the regulations can take effect from 1 August 1989 at the same time as the first statutory requirements relating to the national curriculum.

Teachers (Statistics)

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many people aged 40 years or over have trained since 1980 to become teachers as an alternative to their former profession and are now employed in state schools; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: In March 1986 (the latest date for which figures are available) there were about 1,800 teachers full-time in maintained nursery, primary and secondary schools in England who had qualified since 1980 and were aged 40 or over at the time they did so.

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what records are kept by his Department, or which are available to his Department, in respect of the names, current addresses, experience and occupations of persons who have qualified as teachers but who are not at present employed as a teacher by any local education authority in England.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The database of teacher records (DTR) maintained by the Department to administer the teachers' superannuation scheme contains a record of every teacher who has either had reckonable service or completed a course of initial teacher training in England and Wales. However, for teachers not at present in service the DTR would not hold any of the details listed except for their name at the time of last leaving service or completing training.

Secondary Education (Trafford)

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what advice he has given to groups seeking to opt-out secondary schools in Trafford.

Mrs. Rumbold: The Department issued general advice in its circular 10/88, "Grant-Maintained Schools", and in a booklet "School Governors: How to Become A Grant-Maintained School". These were sent to the chairmen of governors of all maintained schools in England, including secondary schools in Trafford, in autumn last year.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information has been given by his Department to interested groups about plans of the local authority to reorganise secondary education in Trafford.

Mr. Butcher: The Department has informed interested parties that, in view of my right hon. Friend's role in relation to statutory proposals, it is not possible for the Department to comment on the matter. Information on the procedure for rationalising school provision was given in the Department's circular 3/87.

AFRC Bristol

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what are his reasons for reducing the operation of AFRC Bristol in view of the need to conduct heart and related research.

Mr. Jackson: The total resources available for science are distributed taking into account the needs of individual institutions, but that distribution is not determined by my Department.

ENVIRONMENT

Council and New Town Properties

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will state the total spending by local authorities and new towns in England and Wales on repairs to council and new town properties in (a) cash and (b) real terms for such financial year for the most recent 20-year period for which figures are available.

Mr. Trippier: Available figures for English local authorities and new towns are given in the table. For Welsh figures, I refer the hon. Member to the Secretary of State for Wales.

Capital and revenue expenditure on renovation[1]

£ million

	Cash	1987-88 prices
1981-82	1,550	2,085
1982-83	2,025	2,545
1983-84	2,360	2,835
1984-85	2,550	2,930
1985-86	2,640	2,860
1986-87	2,860	3,000
1987-88	[2]3,060	[2]3,060

[1] Excluding estimates of revenue expenditure by Northampton, Redditch and Washington new towns.
[2] Provisional.

Figures for earlier years could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Public Sector Tenants

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will state, for the most recent 20 year period for which figures are available, the annual rate of transfer of public sector tenants from council and new town homes to (i) owner-occupation in the private sector, not including sales of council houses, (ii) private sector flats and (iii) housing association properties.

Mr. Trippier: Estimated numbers of local authority and new town tenants who had moved to other tenures in the previous 12 months, other than by purchase as sitting tenants, are available from two national movers surveys carried out in the 1970s and from the 1984 labour force survey housing trailer. Estimates for England and Wales in 1971 and for England in 1977-78 and 1984 are as follows:

Present tenure and type of accommodation	1971	1977-78	1984
Owner occupier
House	66,000	46,000	32,000
Flat			5,000
Private renter
House			12,000
Flat	25,000	25,000	5,000
Housing association renter			3,000

Type of accommodation is not available for 1971 and 1977-78.

Urban Development Corporations (Report)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to respond to the House of Commons Employment Committee's report on urban development corporations.

Mr. Trippier: I sent the Government's response to the Committee's chairman on 29 November 1988.

Paid Appointments

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many paid appointments to official bodies were within his gift (a) in 1979 and (b) now.

Mr. Ridley: Paid appointments to public bodies for which my Department is currently responsible are shown in the HMSO publication " Public Bodies 1988". Since it went to print, urban development corporations have been established at central Manchester, Leeds and Sheffield and each has 10 paid members.

Publications in the series did not start until 1982 and there was no comparable publication in 1979. However, appointments in the gift of the Secretary of State for the Environment in 1978 are listed in the HMSO publication "A Directory of Paid Public Appointments made by Ministers 1978".

Housebuilding (Wakefield)

Mr. Lofthouse: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list by year for the last 15 years for which figures are available the annual number of completions within Wakefield metropolitan district council area of (i) private sector houses and flats, (ii) council and new town houses and flats, and (iii) housing associations' housing and flats.

Mr. Trippier: Housebuilding completions as reported by Wakefield district council for 1986 and 1987 are as follows:

	Local authority	Housing association	Private sector
1986	59	58	251
1987	54	—	427

Figures for 1980 to 1985 appear in table 1 of "Housebuilding in England by local authority areas: 1980 to 1987". For earlier years figures appear in the following issues of "Local Housing Statistics":

Year	Issue No.	Table
1974	33	5
1975	37	5
1976	41	5
1977	45	5
1978	49	5
1979	59	4

Copies of these publications are available in the Library. Comparable figures for 1973 are not available because of the reorganisation of local government in 1974.

Channel Tunnel (Terminal)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to call in any application to locate the second London terminal for the Channel tunnel at King's Cross.

Mr. Chope: The usual means of proceeding with the development of new railway schemes is by private Bill procedure. It is British Rail's intention to use this procedure for the development of the second London terminus for the Channel tunnel at King's Cross. There would, therefore, be no planning application for my right hon. Friend to call in.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what contribution has been made by his Department to the selection process for the site of the second London terminal for the Channel tunnel; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: None. It is for the promoters to put forward proposals.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what environmental impact studies have been made by his Department on the siting of the second London terminal for the Channel tunnel; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: None. However, I would expect any Select Committee to take the environmental aspects of a second London terminus at King's Cross into account when considering a private Bill.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations have been made to his Department against the possible location of the second London terminal for the Channel tunnel at King's Cross.

Mr. Chope: None.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will name the organisations which have expressed an opinion in favour of (a) Stratford, (b) King's Cross, and (c) another site, as the preferred location for the second London terminal for the Channel tunnel.

Mr. Chope: One favourable opinion has been expressed to my right hon. Friend by the London borough of Newham in respect of Stratford.

Bristol Channel (Pollution)

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Devon, North of 21 December 1988, Official Report, column 269, if he will now take steps to collect and publish the information relating to discharges of sewage into the Bristol channel.

Mr. Moynihan: The information sought is already available on the public registers which the water authorities concerned are required to maintain. Registers are open to inspection free of charge at all reasonable hours.

Water (Privatisation)

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if any discussions have been held or arranged with the suppliers or manufacturers of those chemicals added to the public water supply at the request of health authorities in respect of any changes in liability for the effects of these chemicals following privatisation.

Mr. Moynihan: No.

Housing

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the average length of time taken to construct a unit of accommodation, the average cost and the average interest costs arising during construction, assuming all construction costs throughout the construction period are based on borrowed money (a) for direct labour organisations pertaining to inner London authorities and (b) for the private sector in inner London.

Mr. Trippier: This information is not available.

Football Clubs (Membership Scheme)

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether it is his intention to extend the proposed national identity scheme to non-league football clubs who have a record of football violence should the scheme operate successfully with Football League clubs.

Mr. Moynihan: I hope that it will not be necessary for the national membership scheme to be extended to non-league football but the possibility is one that the Government and the Football Membership Authority would need to consider if there was evidence of a serious problem of hooliganism at non-league football clubs.

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the organisations which have made representations in favour of his proposed national membership scheme for football supporters.

Mr. Moynihan [holding answer 12 January 1989]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to him on 22 December at column 433. I shall be writing to him very shortly.

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations the Minister for Sport has received from the Bedfordshire police regarding identity cards for football supporters; whether they support his proposals for identity cards for football supporters; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan [holding answer 13 January 1989]: The acting chief constable of Bedfordshire police wrote to me on 16 December asking whether the national membership scheme for football supporters would preclude Luton Town football club from continuing to operate its home members only scheme. My present view is that the scheme should be a national one, allowing all members to attend any match, subject to the right of the owner or occupier of any ground to exclude people whom they do not wish to admit. The Football Membership Authority will wish to look at this issue in drawing up the scheme.

Local Authorities (Economic Development)

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 21 December to the hon. Member for Battersea (Mr. Bowis) on local authority economic development, what is his policy with regard to the future funding by local authorities of support and advisory staff for new businesses.

Mr. Gummer [holding answer 10 January 1989]: Local authorities have an important role in providing advice and suitable back-up support for new businesses in their area. The new general economic development power will enable them to do this. We are discussing with the local authority associations the precise scope of the power which will be embodied in regulations in due course.

Luton Town FC

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the source of his information on the number of arrests during the 1987-88 football season at Luton Town football club which took place (a) outside and (b) inside the ground; and if he will seek to provide a similar breakdown of arrest figures for the other Football League clubs.

Mr. Moynihan [holding answer 10 January 1989]: I am aware from information provided by the club that the one arrest for a drugs-related offence, made at Luton Town's home Football League matches last season was outside the ground. Arrest figures for Football League clubs are collated by the Association of Chief Police Officers. They do not differentiate between arrests inside and outside grounds.

Football (Statistics)

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment pursuant to his answer on football statistics in the Official Report on 19 December 1988, columns 55-60, whether there is any overlap in numbers between those arrested and those ejected from grounds.

Mr. Moynihan [holding answer 10 January 1989]: No. The figures for ejections are in respect of ejections other than those following arrest.

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment pursuant to his answer on football statistics in the Official Report for 19 December 1988, columns 55-60, if he will list similar tables for matches played to date in the 1988-89 season showing clubs according to the proportion of arrests at their grounds, with the clubs with the smallest proportion of arrests first.

Mr. Moynihan [holding answer 10 January 1989]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply from my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Home Affairs to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Northampton, North (Mr. Marlow) on 10 January at column 492.

Oil Pollution

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the recent pollution of the south coast by oil.

Mr. Moynihan [holding answer 12 January 1989]: I refer my hon. Friend to the statement made by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, my hon. Friend the Member for Surrey, South-West (Mrs. Bottomley), in reply to the hon. Member for Newham, North-West (Mr. Banks) on 10 January 1989 at column 510.

Water Authorities (Land)

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the total area of land disposed of by each of the water authorities in England since 1983.

Mr. Moynihan [holding answer 12 January 1989]: I have nothing to add to the information which I gave to the hon. Member in my reply of 12 December at column 415.

Mr. Pachett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will be in a position to provide information on water authority land which is designated as (a) of special scientific interest, (b) national parks and (c) areas of outstanding beauty; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan [holding answer 13 January 1989]: I have no plans to make such information available. I refer the hon. Member to the recent publication by the Countryside Commission, "Sites of Conservation and Recreation value currently in the ownership of Water Authorities", which provides most of the information he seeks.

Local Authorities (Capital Receipts)

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the information he has collected on the accumulated capital receipts held by local authorities at the end of 1987-88.

Mr. Ridley [holding answer 12 January 1989]: The information requested is not yet available. I shall write to the hon. Member when it is available and place a copy of the information requested in the Library at that time.

Rates

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list, using 1988-89 prices, for each charging authority area (a) the revenue support grant which would be payable to that area in the first year of safety netting if there was no upper limit to contributions from authorities to the safety net, (b) the revenue support grant which would be payable without safety nets, (c) the difference between (a) and (b) and (d) the average rate payment per adult in 1988-89, showing aggregates, or, where appropriate, averages, for each class of charging authority, for each county or metropolitan area and for each region, respectively.

Mr. Gummer [holding answer 22 December 1988]: The information requested has been placed in the Library of the House.

National Rivers Authority (Correspondence)

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish his correspondence with the chairman of the National Rivers Authority advisory committees.

Mr. Moynihan: [holding answer 13 January 1989]: No.

Radioactive Waste (South Yorkshire)

Mr. Patchett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he is yet in a position to name the sites identified by United Kingdom Nirex Ltd. for deep disposal facility for radioactive waste in south Yorkshire; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 13 January 1989]: We have asked Nirex to put forward proposals for a radioactive waste disposal facility. My right hon. Friend expects a report shortly.

Water (South Yorkshire)

Mr. Patchett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution last monitored south Yorkshire's drinking water; and what were the resulting findings.

Mr. Moynihan [holding answer 13 January 1989]: Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution does not monitor drinking water as it has no responsibility for this subject. Yorkshire water authority is responsible for monitoring the quality of its supplies.

Water Act 1973

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) on how many occasions since the coming into force of the Water Act 1973 disputes have been submitted to him for determination under the provisions of section 11(4) of that Act; and if he will specify the local authority area in which such disputes have arisen;

(2) on how many occasions since the coming into force of the Water Act 1973 he has issued directions under the provision of section 4(10) of that Act to the National Water Council; and what was the purpose of each such direction;

(3) on how many occasions since the coming into force of the Water Act 1973 he has issued directions under the provisions of section 17(5) of that Act, to water authorities; and for which estuary each such direction was made;

(4) on how many occasions since the coming into force of the Water Act 1973 he has issued directions under the provisions of section 5(2) of that Act to water authorities; and for what purpose each such direction was made.

Mr. Moynihan [holding answer 13 January 1989]: So far as I am aware, none of these powers has been used.

Water Pollution

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the form of the current undertakings as to liability regarding the effects of any additional chemicals added to the public water supply at the request of health or other authorities.

Mr. Freeman: I have been asked to reply.

I have today placed in the Library a copy of the model agreement dated November 1987 which provides the basis for discussions between health authorities and water undertakers on the terms under which fluoridation of domestic water supplies may be carried out. This includes a copy of the terms of the indemnity which is provided for water undertakers operating fluoridation schemes.

DEFENCE

Royal Air Force Exercises

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the Royal Air Force will continue to exercise its legal right under a supplement to the 1963 North Atlantic Treaty Organisation status of forces agreement to conduct exercises outside its normal bases; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neubert: The Royal Air Force will continue to exercise in the Federal Republic of Germany in accordance with the provisions of the supplementary agreement to the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation status of forces agreement.

British Army of the Rhine (Drunkenness)

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many British Army of the Rhine personnel were convicted by courts martial of drunkenness offences in each year from 1979 to 1987.

Mr. Neubert: The numbers of British Army of the Rhine personnel convicted by courts martial of drunkenness offences in the period specified were as follows:

	Total	Officers	Servicemen/ women
1979	24	1	23
1980	19	1	18
1981	14	—	14
1982	22	—	22
1983	18	—	18
1984	9	—	9
1985	5	—	5
1986	5	—	5
1987	6	—	6

HMS Bronington

Mr. Churchill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future of HMS Bronington.

Mr. Sainsbury: Following a competitive tender, a consortia of business men have purchased HMS Bronington. They will be placing the vessel in the hands of a charitable trust, which will ensure its permanent preservation. HMS Bronington will be leased to the Trafford Park development corporation and it proposes to preserve, maintain and use the vessel as a floating museum, representing to the general public life on board one of the Royal Navy's mine hunters. The vessel will be sited for the foreseeable future within or adjacent to the corporation's most prestigious development area, Wharfside, Manchester Docks.

Lockerbie Air Disaster

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service personnel, from which services and of what ranks, have been engaged in operations at Lockerbie, following the Pan Am aircraft crash.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: A total of 7,442 man-days of assistance were provided by the three Services during the operation at Lockerbie up to 12 January. The majority of this effort was directed towards the search for bodies and wreckage. A breakdown by Service is given below:

Service	Man-days
Royal Navy	357
Army	2,836
Royal Air Force	4,249

This assistance included a considerable number of formed units; the precise number deployed for each rank is not held. In the immediate aftermath of the incident, up to a dozen RAF and RN helicopters carried out daily salvage and transport tasks. This commitment was subsequently reduced to two helicopters, which continued operations until 12 January. A number of photo-reconnaissance flights have been flown by the RAF to assist in the difficult task of locating the remaining salvage and the Royal Engineers assisted with the removal of the cockpit wreckage. The RAF repair and salvage squadron will continue to support the air accident investigation branch and 100 service men are still assisting with the search for wreckage.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what additional payments are to be made to service personnel engaged in operations at Lockerbie following the Pan Am aircraft crash, specifying the amounts of such additional payments and the ranks to which they are to be paid.

Mr. Neubert: Service personnel are liable for duty at all times and do not receive extra pay for working overtime or on public holidays. The Armed Forces Pay Review Body takes account of this in recommending levels of service pay, which incorparate a 10 per cent. enhancement (9 per cent. in the case of service women) known as the X-factor, in recognition of the disadvantages of service life, including liability for duty at all times without extra pay.

There is, however, provision for a small additional payment to be made where the work undertaken is of an objectionable nature. Those service men who were involved in the recovery of bodies at Lockerbie will be eligible for this payment which is set by the Armed Forces Pay Review Body at 90p a day. In addition, modest welfare payments have been authorised: service men may make free telephone calls up to £2 in value a week and units can claim the equivalent of 50p per man per week to provide recreational facilities.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Long-term Unemployed

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many long-term unemployed there are presently in each of the 26 district council areas in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Viggers: The latest unemployment figures available relate to 10 November 1988. The numbers of claimants in each district council area of Northern Ireland, who had been continuously unemployed for more than one year at that date, are as follows:—

District Council Area	Total
Antrim	1,395
Ards	1,275
Armagh	1,845
Ballymena	1,450
Ballymoney	960
Banbridge	714
Belfast	15,967
Carrickfergus	760
Castlereagh	1,276
Coleraine	2,019
Cookstown	1,348
Craigavon	2,527
Derry	5,525
Down	1,162

District Council Area	Total
Dungannon	2,087
Fermanagh	2,265
Larne	825
Limavady	1,458
Lisburn	2,626
Magherafelt	1,450
Moyle	779
Newry and Mourne	3,801
Newtownabbey	2,067
North Down	1,157
Omagh	1,720
Strabane	2,067
Northern Ireland	60,525

Teachers (Premature Retirement)

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list for the years ending 31 March 1978, 1983, 1987 and 1988 the total number of teachers in Northern Ireland who were granted premature retirement on grounds of ill health.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information is as follows:—

	Number
Year ending 31 March 1978	23
Year ending 31 March 1983	47
Year ending 31 March 1987	58
Year ending 31 March 1988	82

Further Education

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proposals he has for the future development of further education in Newtownards and Bangor; and if he will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: The South-Eastern Education and Library Board has plans at an advanced stage for a major extension to North Down college of further education. It has been agreed with the board of governors that this should be at the Bangor campus.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many temporary classrooms there are at the further education colleges in Bangor and Newtownards.

Dr. Mawhinney: A total of 26 at Bangor and 10 at Newtownards.

Youth Training

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the numbers on the youth training programme by appropriate district unit in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Viggers [holding answer 21 December 1988]: At 25 November 1988 some 14,306 young people were receiving training under the youth training programme. Statistics are not available by district but are collated on a job market area basis in respect of full-time training only. Details are as follows:

Numbers in full-time training

Job market area	Numbers
Bangor	367
Lisburn	443
Newtownards	97
Belfast South and East	1,770
Belfast North and West	1,531
Antrim	181
Carrickfergus	117
Larne	153
Magherafelt	139
Ballymena	560
Ballymoney	126
Coleraine	206
Limavady	125
Londonderry	1,117
Strabane	158
Armagh	93
Cookstown	90
Dungannon	169
Enniskillen	228
Omagh	366
Portadown	319
Ballynahinch	50
Banbridge	105
Downpatrick	158
Kilkeel	1
Lurgan	283
Newcastle	85
Newry	632
Total	9,669

In addition an estimated 4,637 young people were in receipt of employment with training under YTP work scheme throughout Northern Ireland.

ENERGY

Electricity Sales

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) what percentage of total sales of each of the 12 area boards in the electricity supply industry in England and Wales is accounted for by customers in each of the following categories of supply (a) 10 MW-50 MW, (b) 50 MW-100 MW, (c) 100 MW-200 MW and (d) over 200 MW;

(2) how many customers each of the 12 area boards in the electricity supply industry of England and Wales currently have in each of the following categories of supply (a) 10 MW-50 MW, (b) 50 MW-100 MW, (c) 100 MW-200 MW and (d) over 200 MW.

Mr. Michael Spicer: This is a matter for the area electricity boards and I am asking the individual chairmen to write to the hon. Member.

Fulmar Oilfield (Incident)

Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement describing the sequence and timings of the events of 1 January involving the failure of the anchoring system of the floating storage unit on the Fulmar field, the consequent rupture of the pipeline connecting the Fulmar platform to the floating storage unit and subsequent shutdown of oil pumping through this pipeline.

Mr. Parkinson: My inspectors are currently investigating an incident on the Fulmar field of the kind described, which took place on 24 December. Full information on this incident will only be available once the investigation is complete.

Preliminary indications from the operator are that the Fulmar floating storage unit (FSU) and the single anchor point leg mooring (SALM) broke loose from the anchor base at approximately 04.45 hours on 24 December 1988.

Failure of the sea bed latch released the SALM and caused rupture of oil feed pipes at its coupling. The main pipeline was undamaged. Consequent constriction of the feed pipes prevented low oil pressure cut-outs from closing down the main oil pumps on the Fulmar A platform. It was confirmed at 5.30 am that the FSU had moved off its mooring and pumping ceased at approximately 05.35 hours.

Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what are the relative locations, in terms of compass bearing and distance, of oil production platforms on the Fulmar, Auk and Clyde fields to the normal position of the mooring of the Fulmar floating storage unit.

Mr. Parkinson: The information is as follows:

Fulmar A 2 nautical miles bearing 44° (true)
Auk 5·2 nautical miles bearing 204° (true)
Clyde 5·5 nautical miles bearing 106° (true)

Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list the submarine pipelines within a 50-mile radius of the normal position of the Fulmar floating storage unit with a description of their contents and operating pressures.

Mr. Parkinson: The information is as follows:

Pipeline	Contents	Maximum allowable operating pressure[1]
Fulmar A to SALM	Crude oil	183
Auk to Fulmar	Crude oil	148
Clyde to Fulmar	Crude oil	348
Clyde to Fulmar	Gas	2,175
Fulmar to St. Fergus	Gas	2,750
Ekofisk to Teesside	Crude oil	1,680
Argyll base manifold to pipeline end manifold	Crude oil	3,000

[1] Pounds per square inch gauge.

In addition, there are a series of pipelines to the Argyll base manifold for the recovery of crude oil from subsea completions in the Innes, Duncan and New Argyll fields. The maximum allowable operating pressures in these pipelines is 3,000 psig.

Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if there was any danger of rupture of pipelines in the vicinity of the Fulmar field on 1 January caused by the drifting floating storage unit dragging the remains of its mooring system across them.

Mr. Parkinson: No. I understand the only pipeline in the vicinity was the Ekofisk-Teeside oil line which was crossed at 11.15 hours after the Fulmar floating storage unit was under partial control. I am advised that at no time did the unit drag on the sea bottom; clearance above the Ekofisk-Teeside line was approximately 15 metres.

Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what route was followed by the Fulmar floating storage unit after it broke loose on 1 January and before it was fully in control again; what was its closest approach to any installation; and what was its approximate speed of drift.

Mr. Parkinson: Information provided to my Department indicates that the Fulmar floating storage unit drifted at 3·3 knots for three hours on a bearing of 110° (true). After four hours the drift speed slowed and the bearing changed to 125° (true) when the unit came under control of tugs. The Clyde platform was passed at 06.34 hours at a distance of 0·7 nautical miles.

Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what contingency plans existed for the situation in which the Fulmar floating storage unit broke its moorings on 1 January; and whether there was a secondary, emergency anchoring system on the tanker or propulsion and steering systems for this eventuality.

Mr. Parkinson: Emergency procedures prepared by the operator envisage that mooring failure would be dealt with by the use of heavy duty tow lines launched by rocket to the standby vessel and other available tugs. The sector club system involving neighbouring operators provides for additional heavy duty towing, a diving support vessel and aircraft, all of which were used on this occasion.

There was no emergency anchoring system as this is considered to be impracticable for controlling or stopping a vessel of this size under emergency conditions.

The Fulmar floating storage unit has no propulsion or steering systems.

Oil and Gas Installations

Mr. Frank Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what standards are set by his Department regarding the resistance of North sea oil and gas installations to impact by vessels; and what information he has on the standards set by the Norwegian petroleum directorate.

Mr. Parkinson: The Department's current guidance on design and construction of offshore installation recommends that they be designed to withstand the impact of a ship of 2,500 tonnes displacement travelling at 0·5 metres per second, assuming that all of the kinetic energy is absorbed by the installation.

However, following a study by J. P. Kenny, consultant engineers, which was commissioned by my Department, a consultation document is to be issued shortly recommending an increase in the energy absorbtion value for offshore installations. J. P. Kenny's technical report was published on 10 January and a copy has been placed in the Library of the House. I will send a copy of the consultation document to the hon. Member once it is available.

I understand the requirements of the Norwegian petroleum directorate are not expressed in the same way as the United Kingdom requirement. However, I am advised that the values of kinetic energy required to be absorbed in Norway are, in effect, comparable with those to be recommended in our proposed new guidelines.

HEALTH

Births and Deaths Registration Act

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place a copy of the report of the Registrar General of the application of the Births and Deaths Registration Act 1953 to the case of the Carlisle baby in the Library; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The Registrar General is a Crown appointee under section 1 of the Registration Service Act 1953. The Secretary of State has no responsibilities or powers as regards the day to day exercise by the Registrar General of her functions under the Act or under the Births and Deaths Registration Act 1953. The Registrar General's conduct may be the subject of review by the courts. The Registrar General does not make information public about individuals which has come to her knowledge through her duties under the Births and Deaths Registration Act which is not already in the public domain.

The background note provided by the Registrar General on the Carlisle baby case was to enable the Secretary of State to respond to parliamentary inquiries and it is not appropriate for this document to be placed in the Library. It may however be helpful if I set out the legal position with regard to registration procedures.

Section 2 of the Births and Deaths Registration Act 1953 places a duty, primarily on the parents of a child, to give information for birth registration. This information is required to be given within 42 days of the date of birth and failure to give it may result in the local registrar issuing a notice in writing requiring any person to attend to register who is qualified to carry out the registration under the legislation. If a parent, or the mother in the case of a child born outside marriage, continues to refuse to register then that person commits an offence under section 36(c) of the 1953 Act.

Before issuing a formal requisition and pursuing the registration the local registrar has to establish that a birth which is registrable under the 1953 Act has actually taken place. In normal circumstances this information will come via the health authority under the provision set out in section 124(7) of the National Health Service Act 1977. This enables the registrar to have access to notices of births received by a medical officer. However, these notices are required by statute only in respect of births of more than 28 weeks gestation. In the absence of such a notice, the registrar must satisfy himself from other information that a birth has occurred which is registrable under the 1953 Act before issuing a formal requisition.

After 12 months have elapsed the local registrar's immediate responsibilities come to an end and the Registrar General's authority for registration of a birth and also of a death is required under sections 7 and 21 of the 1953 Act. The Registrar General has no powers to require any informant to register a birth or death, and if application is made to her for late registration by a qualified informant she needs to be satisfied that a registrable live birth or death have occurred.

Infant Deaths

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what information his Department has on research in different countries on the links between infant deaths and a sudden fall or rise in body temperature;

(2) what information his Department holds on research in foreign countries examining the results on human infant health of the use of early warning temperature monitors.

Mr. Freeman: Departmental officials are kept informed of research developments including those in other countries through articles in learned journals and through informal contacts with colleagues in those countries. No comprehensive list of such research is however held centrally.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will publish in the Official Report details of any grants that his Department administers or gives for the development of technical aids or equipment by private companies which prevents the death of human infants;

(2) if his Department is giving financial or other assistance to any private company in the research or development of an early warning temperature monitor for human infants.

Mr. Freeman: The Department has made no grants or given any other form of financial assistance to private companies involved in research into such subjects.

Royal National Orthopaedic (Country) Hospital

Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will agree to receive a deputation representing relevant interests groups, including the hon. Member for Harrow, East, to assess the importance of the long-term development of the Royal National Orthopaedic (Country) hospital at its present site in Stanmore, Middlesex.

Mr. Mellor: I would be happy to meet such a deputation once consultation about transfer of management responsibility from Bloomsbury to Harrow is under way.

Health Index

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what conclusions he has reached about the feasibility of creating a health index; and what decision he has taken about its implementation.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I do not believe that the construction of a single index measure of the nation's health is feasible. The state of the nation's health is best gauged by looking at a large range of different measures. In July my predecessor announced the setting up of a new small multi-disciplinary unit in the Department in line with the recommendation in the Chief Medical Officer's report on public health in England. The major function of this new unit will be to monitor and analyse information about the health of the population.

Cancer Screening

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Holborn and St. Pancras of 6 December 1988, Official Report, columns 130-31, if he will place a copy of the guidance notes for health authorities on equipment requirements for breast cancer screening in the Library; whether these recommendations also apply to screening units operated in the private sector; what steps are taken to inspect private mobile screening units; how many staff are employed to perform those inspections; how many such inspections were made in 1988; and how frequently each unit is inspected, on average.

Mr. Freeman: Health authorities are asked to make relevant advice and guidance available to locally registered hospitals and nursing homes but they have no power to monitor private sector screening units. Copies of the guidance notes referred to by the hon. Member have been placed in the Library.

Blood Transfusion Service

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give, for each year since 1978, the number of staff employed to collect blood from donors by each blood transfusion service; and if he will also give for each year and each blood transfusion service the number of staff vacancies for posts intended to collect blood from donors.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is not held centrally.

15

Ministerial Advisers

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the ministerial advisers appointed in his Department for each year since 1979, the salary each person received, whether paid directly or to another employer, and the duties undertaken, whether solely in his Department or in conjunction with other Departments; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Since 1979 up to the formation of two separate Departments in July 1988, the Departments of Health and Social Security appointed the following ministerial advisers.

Name	Date of Appointment	Department
Prof R. Dyson	August 1979	DHSS
Mr. N. True	May 1982	DHSS
Mr. A. J. Turner	February 1987	DHSS
Mr. C. Hendry	May 1988	DHSS
Miss M. Libby[1]	May 1988	DSS from July 1988
Mr. J. Hill	July 1988	DH

[1] Since July 1988, Miss Libby has worked only to the Secretary of State for Social Services. Mr. Hill was appointed to advise the Secretary of State for Health.

It is not our practice to reveal the salaries of individual advisers as they are individually negotiated in relation to previous outside earnings and conditions and are therefore confidential.

Except for Professor Dyson who was seconded into DHSS for one day per week, all salaries were paid direct to the individual adviser. Professor Dyson's employer was reimbursed on a pro-rata basis for his services.

With the exception of Professor Dyson, who was employed as a consultant adviser on industrial relations in the NHS, all advisers were employed solely on duties outside the Department laid down by the Minister they served.

Hip Replacements

Mr. Richard Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average waiting time for a hip replacement operation in National Health Service hospitals in each regional health area in England and Wales; and which district has the shortest waiting time.

Mr. Freeman: The available information for 1985, the latest year for which data are held centrally, is given in the table. Sample numbers in the Department's central data base are too small for reliable estimates to be made below regional level. Information for Wales is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Estimated median interval in weeks between the time a patient was placed on a waiting list and admission to an NHS hospital in England for total hip replacement or other arthroplasty of hip operations, by region, 1985

Region of treatment	Median waiting time (weeks)
Northern	19
Yorkshire	20
Trent	25
East Anglian	21
North West Thames	13
North East Thames	18
South East Thames	23
South West Thames	26
Wessex	28
Oxford	18
South Western	22
West Midlands	24
Mersey	16
North Western	19

Liver Transplants

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money is given directly to liver transplant units by his Department; how many liver transplant units are funded in this way; how much money is given to each unit; and whether he intends to increase the total amount given to liver transplant units or the number of liver transplant units receiving grants from his Department.

Mr. Mellor: We provide supra-regional funding to the designated units through earmarked allocations given to regional health authorities. In the financial year 1988-89 the revenue allocation provided for the four liver transplant centres was £5,038,000.

In 1988-89 the total sum provided for this service will be £7,031,000, a 40 per cent. increase in funding. Individual allocations will be as follows:

	1988-89 £	1989-90 £
Addenbrookes Hospital, Cambridge	1,569,000	2,398,000
King's College Hospital, London	1,133,000	1,368,000
Queen Elizabeth Hospital, Birmingham	1,762,000	2,452,000
St. James' University Hospital, Leeds	574,000	813,000

We will also be providing capital allocations to two units in 1989-90. King's college hospital will receive £21,000 and Addenbrooke's £331,000.

We have no immediate plans to increase the number of designated centres, but the supra-regional services advisory group keeps the service under review and advises Ministers accordingly.

Factor 8

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether any batches of the blood product Factor 8 have had to be discarded due to viral hepatitis B infection of the plasma pool of the blood products laboratory.

Mr. Freeman: Yes, occasionally finished batches of Factor 8 have to be discarded for this reason following quality control checks.

Junior Hospital Doctors

Mr. McCrindle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he has any estimates of the average hours worked by junior hospital doctors in the four Thames regional health authorities as against other health authorities in the rest of the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: We do not hold this information in the form requested.

Mr. McCrindle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to receive the study on health authorities' plans to reduce junior hospital doctors' working hours; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: I expect to receive reports from health authorities later this month and have agreed to consider them with representatives of the British Medical Association in February.

Consultants

Mr. McCrindle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will provide separate and additional funding for health authorities to employ more consultants in areas where need can be demonstrated; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: Generally, health authorities are responsible for determining the number of consultant posts required to fulfil their service objectives and for funding these posts. However, to give an initial impetus to the "Achieving a Balance" initiative we provided central funding for 100 additional posts in general medicine, general surgery and traumatic and orthopaedic surgery. Some authorities have also used the waiting list fund to provide additional consultant sessions to help tackle the problem of long waiting lists and times.

Mr. McCrindle: To ask the Secretary of State for Heath what is his target for the number of consultants in the National Health Service; when he expects this target to be met; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: Regional health authorities are responsible for planning the number of consultants they require to meet service needs. Their forward plans show an average rate of expansion similar to the historical rate of growth of some 2 per cent. per annum and I would expect this to be maintained. Regional health authorities are held to account annually, through the regional review procedure, for meeting the targets that they set in their plans.

Wakefield Health Authority

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the composition of the appointment boards for each district general manager appointed for the Wakefield health authority.

Mr. Mellor: We do not hold such details centrally. The hon. Member may wish to contact the chairman of the health authority which is responsible for the appointment of its district general manager, for the information he is seeking.

Bradford Health Authority (Chair)

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy to conduct an election among the citizens of Bradford for the new Chair of Bradford health authority.

Mr. Mellor: No.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how long the post of Chair of the Bradford health authority has been empty; and if he will now announce his new appointment.

Mr. Mellor: Since 8 November 1988. We hope to appoint a new chairman soon.

Waiting Lists (Yorkshire)

Mr. Lofthouse: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress he has made in reducing hospital waiting lists in the Yorkshire region.

Mr. Freeman: The most recent figures show that, at March 1988, there were 49,000 patients on the in-patient waiting list in Yorkshire region. This is over 8 per cent. lower than at March 1979.

Waiting Lists (Pontefract)

Mr. Lofthouse: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what were the in-patient waiting list figures for the Pontefract district health authority in March 1988, 1987, and 1979.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is give in the table.

In-patient waiting list Pontefract District Health Authority[1]
31 March 1979, 1987 and 1988.

Year	Total
1979	3,007
1987	2,079
1988	[2]1,701

[1] Eastern Wakefield District, prior to 1982
[2] on a comparable basis with previous statistics

Pontefract Health Authority

Mr. Lofthouse: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his latest estimate of the projected budget deficit of the Pontefract district health authority in (a) the current financial year and (b) the next financial year.

Mr. Mellor: We do not collect such information centrally. The hon. Member may wish to contact the chairman of Pontefract health authority for the information that he is seeking. The Yorkshire regional health authority received a recent 7·7 per cent. cash increase for 1989-90, and it must decide what allocation to give to the DHA to meet its approved plan next year.

Aplastic Anaemia

Mr. Lofthouse: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he has any evidence that pesticides, drugs, and toxic chemicals could be the cause of aplastic anaemia;

(2) what evidence he has available on the cause of aplastic anaemia.

Mr. Freeman: Different disorders are sometimes classified under the term appastic anaemia. In some cases the anaemia can be attributed to a chemical including some pesticides and some drugs. High doses of radiation can also give rise to this condition. In other cases, the cause cannot be determined, that is, it may occur as a disease of unknown aetiology.

We are aware of published evidence that prolonged exposure to very high levels of the industrial solvents benzene, toluene and carbon tetrachloride has been associated with the development of aplastic anaemia in some people. There is more limited evidence also that exposure to certain pesticides, namely chlordane, DDT, heptachlor, lindane, pentachloraphenol and those based on arsenic or mercury might cause aplastic anaemia.

The use of all these industrial solvents is controlled, and occupational exposures are well below those at which harm has been shown to occur. Of the pesticides, heptachlor and DDT are no longer approved for use in the United Kingdom, and the others are approved for restricted use under conditions which, as with all pesticides, should avoid harmful effects occurring.

Aplastic anaemia is recognised as a possible adverse reaction to a number of drugs. The Committee on Safety of Medicines has received from doctors over 1,000 reports associated with almost 200 medicinal products.

There is good evidence to suggest that the antibiotic drugs chloramphenicol and phenylbutazone, which are used in veterinary practice, cause aplastic anaemia in those humans sensitive to their effects. Chloramphenicol is only administered in life-threatening conditions where no suitable alternative exists.

Health Authorities (Meetings)

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the district health authorities in (a) the north western region and (b) the Mersey region which meet on a bi-monthly basis.

Mr. Mellor: The following district health authorities meet formally on a bi-monthly basis:

(a) north western region
Blackpool, Wyre and Fylde Health Authority
Bury Health Authority
Tameside and Glossop Health Authority

(b) Mersey region
Southport and Formby Health Authority[1]
South Sefton Health Authority
Wirral Health Authority
Chester Health Authority

[1] This year the health authority will meet in both April and May.

Regrading

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the number of (a) midwives and (b) nurses on different grades following the regrading exercise.

Mr. Mellor: I refer the hon. Member to the reply by my right hon. and learned Friend, the Secretary of State, to the hon. Member for Staffordshire, Moorlands (Mr. Knox) on 28 November 1988 at column 147-8.

Health Authorities (Representatives)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will provide details of the numbers of local authority representatives on each district health authority in England and Wales.

Mr. Mellor: This information is available in the National Health Service (Constitution of District Health Authorities) Order 1981 (as amended)—SI 1981:1838.

HEALTH

Health Authority Funding

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether he has any information concerning the amount of funding transferred by each regional health authority in the latest year for which figures are available from the mental health services budget to the acute services budget;

(2) whether his Department has issued any guidelines to regional health authorities concerning the transfer of funds from the mental health budget to the acute services budget following the closure of mental hospitals as part of the community care programme.

Mr. Mellor: It is for health authorities to determine what proportion of their resources to devote to the various services that they provide. Within a national framework of health care priorities, they have to determine, in the light of local needs and circumstances, how their resources can best be used.

No guidelines have been issued to regional health authorities concerning the transfer of funds between budgets and it is not possible to assess, from information available centrally, the extent to which such transfers may have taken place.

Health authorities are required to ensure that receipts from the sale of land at mental illness and mental handicap hospitals are specifically used to develop services for the mentally ill and mentally handicapped.

Residential Homes (North-West)

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the number of residential homes established in the north western region for each of the last four years, by local authority district.

Mr. Freeman: Information is not readily available in the form requested. The total number of residential homes for elderly and younger physically handicapped people in the north western region by local authority for the years ending 31 March 1984 to 1986 is published in "Residential Accommodation for Elderly and Younger Physically Handicapped People: All Residents in Local Authority, Voluntary and Private Homes year ending 31 March 1981 to year ending 31 March 1986 England". The total number of homes and hostels for mentally ill and mentally handicapped people is published annually in "Homes and Hostels for Mentally Ill and Mentally Handicapped People at 31 March England". Copies of these publications are available in the Library. Provisional information for 1987 is given in the table.

Number of residential care homes in North Western Region, by local authority, as at 31 March 1987 (Provisional)

Local authority	Elderly and younger physically handicapped	Mentally ill[1]	Mentally handicapped[1]	Other client groups[2] [3]
Cheshire	138	27	32	1
Lancashire	581	17	55	0
Bolton	44	2	6	0
Bury	25	1	4	0
Manchester	102	23	45	1
Oldham	49	5	7	0
Rochdale	33	2	5	0
Salford	36	6	8	0
Stockport	59	12	17	0
Tameside	34	2	5	0
Trafford	60	6	6	0
Wigan	32	8	9	0
Knowsley	9	3	4	0
Liverpool	75	14	10	2
Sefton	151	5	15	0
St. Helens	13	1	4	0
Wirral	91	13	25	1
Total	1,532	147	257	5

[1] Includes unstaffed homes and hostels.
[2] Collected from 1987 onwards.
[3] Includes alcohol and drug misusers.

Test Census

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what were the criteria used for selecting the parliamentary constituencies referred to in his answer of 10 January, Official Report, column 603, in respect of the test census in 1989.

Mr. Freeman: The main criteria in selecting areas for the 1989 census test were to ensure that they would cover varying circumstances that would be encountered in a full census in 1991 and provide a thorough test of the response of the public to a question on ethnic group.

In order to make sure that the procedures for delivering and collecting census forms will be effective a test covering a few relatively large areas is preferable to one including many small areas. Areas where recent census tests have been held were avoided.

The precise areas selected were local authority wards as they existed at the time of the 1981 census. The parliamentary constituencies are those including the selected wards.

Listeria

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what action he is taking following the publication of the survey by Bristol environmental department, a copy of which has been sent to him, which indicates that listeria monocystogenes affected one in every 15 samples of pre cooked-chilled chicken;

(2) what information he has as to the proportion of cook-chill food bought from supermarkets which is potentially fatal as a result of the presence of listeria, and what steps he is taking to reduce this proportion.

Mr. Freeman: At the request of the Department, the public health laboratory service has been undertaking a national survey of cooked and chilled foods. The results of this survey are expected shortly. Meanwhile, the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has commissioned studies into the temperature sensitivity of listeria monocytogenes and both the Department and the Ministry are working together with retail and manufacturing sectors of industry to consider optimal production methods for these foods.

Where a product has actually been identified as contaminated the local environmental health officers will take appropriate action in the usual way.

A statement was issued by the Department on 12 January and this has been copied to chief environmental health officers of local authorities. A copy has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if, in the light of new evidence of the presence of listeria in a substantial proportion of cook-chill food, he will now order the immediate suspension of the implementation of cook-chill catering in hospitals.

Mr. Freeman: No. The recent survey by Bristol environmental health department did not find listeria in any hospital produced cook-chill food. The one positive result came from a purchased previously prepared product that would have been subjected to further testing and processing before being released for consumption.

Children (Safety)

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he will introduce regulations for privately-run holiday schemes and privately run out-of-school schemes to provide for the safety of children.

Mr. Mellor: I have no power to make such regulations under present legislation but I refer the hon. Member to my reply to her question on amendments to the Children Bill today.

Childcare

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received on his proposal to seek to amend the Children Bill so as to deregulate child care facilities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The Government proposed in the White Paper "The Law on Child Care and Family Services" that registration requirements should not extend to private arrangements where people look after children aged over five. The Government have announced that they will table amendments to the Children Bill to amend the Nurseries and Childminders Regulation Act 1948. These will rationalise the provisions regulating private and voluntary facilities for day care, short stay and holiday arrangements for children up to age 16.

Present provisions relating to children aged five to 16 are not well understood or enforced. Following consultation in 1988 the intention is for registration and regulation to be retained only for certain residential facilities and for it to be clarified so that it can be more readily enforced. When the amendments have been published we will of course consider representations made on them.

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received from the Chair of the Equal Opportunities Commission on his proposal to seek to amend the Children Bill so as to deregulate child care facilities.

Mr. Mellor: I received a letter on 10 January on this subject.

Nurses

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list by health authority the number of state enrolled nurses, state registered nurses and auxiliaries (a) in post and (b) vacancies for each year since 1983.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 12 December 1988]: The numbers of registered and enrolled nurses and nursing auxiliaries in each regional health authority at 30 September 1983, 1984, 1985, 1986 and 1987 are given in the tables.

National Health Service registered nurses[1]
30 September each year

Whole-time equivalents[2]

Region	1983	1984	1985	1986	1987
1. Northern RHA	10,270	10,500	10,950	11,260	11,560
2. Yorkshire RHA	11,090	11,460	11,890	12,110	12,640
3. Trent RHA	13,050	13,470	14,200	14,640	15,340
4. East Anglian RHA	5,710	5,960	6,250	6,350	6,610
5. North West Thames RHA	11,760	12,160	12,150	12,150	11,700
6. North East Thames RHA	13,440	13,460	13,830	14,000	14,340
7. South East Thames RHA	12,600	12,590	12,820	13,200	13,370
8. South West Thames RHA	10,110	10,090	10,190	10,130	10,080
9. Wessex RHA	8,860	9,090	9,420	9,610	9,820
10. Oxford RHA	6,900	7,330	7,530	7,650	7,940
11. South Western RHA	10,190	10,290	10,700	10,870	11,200
12. West Midlands RHA	15,120	15,400	15,980	16,570	17,220
13. Mersey RHA	7,980	7,940	8,220	8,350	8,420
14. North Western RHA	14,090	14,590	15,170	15,550	15,640
20. London PG(T)	2,430	2,200	2,430	2,400	2,420
London Ambulance Service	—	—	—	[3]—	[3]—
Other statutory authorities	—	—	—	—	10

Region	1983	1984	1985	1986	1987
ENGLAND TOTAL	153,610	156,330	161,730	164,840	168,310

[1] Includes district nurses and health visitors; excludes agency staff. Includes staff in "Other statutory authorities" (for example, Public Health Laboratory Service and the Health Education Authority) not previously collected in annual manpower censuses. Figures are therefore not directly comparable with those for earlier years.
[2] All figures are independently rounded to the nearest ten (10) whole-time equivalents.
[3] Figures less than 10.
Source: Department of Health annual census of National Health Service non-medical manpower.

National Health Service enrolled nurses 30 September each year

Whole-time equivalents[1]

Region	1983	1984	1985	1986	1987
1. Northern RHA	5,460	5,530	5,640	5,650	5,670
2. Yorkshire RHA	5,740	5,830	5,980	5,950	5,880
3. Trent RHA	6,760	6,920	7,180	7,190	7,190
4. East Anglia RHA	2,330	2,470	2,570	2,620	2,670
5. North West Thames RHA	4,520	4,690	4,720	4,580	4,340
6. North East Thames RHA	5,770	5,750	5,760	5,560	5,510
7. South East Thames RHA	5,200	5,180	5,210	5,220	5,140
8. South West Thames RHA	4,080	4,080	4,080	3,930	3,790
9. Wessex RHA	3,290	3,350	3,390	3,380	3,370
10. Oxford RHA	2,430	2,540	2,580	2,600	2,600
11. South Western RHA	4,380	4,390	4,520	4,590	4,570
12. West Midlands RHA	7,470	7,620	7,840	7,810	7,870
13. Mersey RHA	4,570	4,630	4,710	4,680	4,490
14. North Western RHA	6,950	7,230	7,300	7,260	7,140
20. London PG(T)	1,060	1,000	930	920	820
ENGLAND TOTAL	70,020	71,210	72,400	71,930	71,050

[1] All figures are independently rounded to the nearest ten (10) whole-time equivalents.
Source: Department of Health annual census of NHS non-medical manpower.

National Health Service ancillary staff[1]
30 September each year

Whole-time equivalents[2]

Region	1983	1984	1985	1986	1987
1. Northern RHA	5,880	5,720	5,810	5,930	6,090
2. Yorkshire RHA	6,790	6,690	6,790	6,860	6,800
3. Trent RHA	8,670	8,630	9,020	9,170	9,340
4. East Anglian RHA	3,900	3,820	3,940	3,940	4,020
5. North West Thames RHA	5,360	4,980	5,010	5,250	5,270
6. North East Thames RHA	6,430	6,240	6,280	6,190	6,420
7. South East Thames RHA	6,570	6,220	6,110	6,050	6,290
8. South West Thames RHA	5,710	5,560	5,590	5,550	5,580
9. Wessex RHA	6,150	6,210	6,400	6,520	6,620
10. Oxford RHA	4,140	4,170	4,070	4,070	4,110
11. South Western RHA	7,080	7,090	7,300	7,420	7,650
12. West Midlands RHA	10,360	10,160	10,480	10,410	10,610
13. Mersey RHA	5,740	5,480	5,610	5,590	5,570
14. North Western RHA	8,800	8,620	8,730	8,810	8,890
20. London PG (T)	620	550	520	510	720
ENGLAND TOTAL	92,200	90,160	91,640	92,250	93,990

[1] Includes all unqualified nursing staff but excludes agency staff.
[2] All figures are independently rounded to the nearest ten (10) whole-time equivalents.
Source: Department of Health annual census of National Health Service non-medical manpower.

Information about vacancies is not collected by the Department. However, a sample survey for the pay review body showed the proportion of nursing and midwifery staff posts at 31 March each year which had been vacant for three months or more as:

	Percentage
1984	2·5
1985	2·5
1986	3·2
1987	3·5

SOCIAL SECURITY

Regional Organisation

Mr. Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he is yet in a position to make a full announcement of his plans for implementing the recommendations of the report of the regional organisation scrutiny team.

Mr. Moore: In my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Lancashire, West (Mr. Hind) on 12 December 1988, at column 458, I said that plans for moving some work from 21 local offices in London were under consideration. We have now decided to go ahead with moving from those offices all work that does not need face-to-face contact with the public. All of these 21 offices will remain open and continue to provide a service to callers. Indeed, we intend to improve the network of offices by opening new offices in areas not previously served.

New Social Security centres to handle the relocated work will be set up in Glasgow, Belfast and Wigan. This means that we shall be creating over 1,000 jobs in parts of the United Kingdom where they will make a major contribution to our stated policy of encouraging economic development outside London and the south-east.

This project is a major initiative which allows us to address the serious problems that we face in London in delivering the standard of service that we would all like to see. Our staff in London do hard and dedicated work; but we have great difficulties over recruiting and retaining staff. Moving some work to areas of the country where we shall have a more stable workforce will allow us to offer a speedier and more accurate service. By relieving pressure on our London staff will also allow them to offer a better face-to-face service to our customers. I am therefore convinced that this initiative represents a major contribution to improving the service that we give our customers.

The report made a total of 54 recommendations for improving the way the regional organisation delivers its service. An action plan covering all the recommendations has now been produced. Copies of the action plan, and of a detailed information pack on the relocation project, have been placed in the Library.

Pensioners (Nottingham)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many pensioners in Nottingham are in receipt of housing benefit transitional payments.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information is not available in the form requested. The transitional payments unit can provide details of the number of recipients in certain groups only within the area of individual local authorities. As Nottingham is covered by more than one local authority, in various surrounding areas, we cannot provide these figures. Once the majority of payments have been made, we will publish national figures showing a breakdown of the numbers of payments made to people in each local authority.

Ministerial Advisers

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the ministerial advisers appointed in his Department for each year since 1979, the salary each person received, whether paid directly or to another employer, and the duties undertaken, whether solely in his Department or in conjunction with other Departments; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moore: Since 1979 special advisers were appointed to the Department of Health and Social Security as follows:

Name	Date of appointment
Professor R. Dyson	August 1979
Mr. N. True	May 1982
Mr. A. J. Turner	February 1987
Mr. C. Hendry	May 1988
Miss M. Libby	May 1988

Following the creation of two separate Departments of State in July 1988 Miss Libby was appointed to the Department of Social Security.

It is not our practice to reveal the salaries of individual advisers as they are individually negotiated in relation to previous outside earnings and conditions and are therefore confidential. Except for Professor Dyson who was seconded into the Department of Health and Social Security for one day per week, all salaries were paid direct to the individual adviser. Professor Dyson's employer was reimbursed on a pro-rata basis for his services.

With the exception of Professor Dyson who was employed as a consultant adviser on industrial relations in the National Health Service, all advisers were employed on duties laid down by the Minister they served, solely in the Department.

Income Support

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will amend regulation 8(4) of the Income Support (Transitional) Regulations 1987 to make the higher pensioner premium or disability premium available to claimants who have ceased to be entitled to mobility allowance or invalidity pension solely on account of their age.

Mr. Scott: No-one has reached the upper age limit for mobility allowance. People in receipt of the higher pensioner premium when they reach the upper age limit for invalidity pension retain entitlement to that premium. We have no plans at the present time to extend this premium to people who were not in receipt of the higher pensioner premium when they reached the limit.

Benefits and Allowances

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the average length of time from receipt of claim to issuing of a decision for the following benefits during the last year for which statistics are available and in what percentage of those claims the period in question exceeded four weeks; attendance allowance, child benefit, family credit, guardians allowance, industrial disablement benefits, invalid care allowance, mobility allowance, retirement pension, severe disablement allowance, war pensions and widows benefits.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Based on the latest available data the average time between the date of claim and when a decision on the claim is made is as follows:

	Time
Attendance Allowance	7.6 weeks
Child Benefit
New Claims
straightforward[1]	5.96 days
non-straightforward[2]	13.15 days
Supplementary claims
straightforward[1]	4.91 days
non-straightforward[2]	10.84 days
Family Credit	22.9 days
Invalid Care Allowance	17.0 weeks

	Time
Mobility Allowance	7.5 weeks
War Pensions	27.5 weeks

[1] Claims processed by computer.
[2] Claims processed clerically.

I regret that information is not available for the other benefits mentioned nor about the percentage of claims cleared within four weeks.

Family Credit

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security by what date he expects family credit claims to be dealt with within the statutory time limit of 14 consecutive days.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I assume that the time limit to which the hon. Member refers is that contained in section 99(1) of the Social Security Act 1975. This provides that

> "99—(1) An adjudication officer to whom a claim or question is submitted under section 98 shall take it into consideration and, so far as practicable, dispose of it in accordance with this section, and with procedure regulations under section 115, within 14 days of its submission to him."

A claim for family credit is not normally submitted to an adjudication officer until all the evidence about the claim has been gathered. Claims are then determined by the adjudication officer, on average, within five days.

Pensioners (Second-hand Clothes)

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if the price of second-hand clothes bought at jumble sales by pensioners is taken into account in the setting of local social security payments.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The income support personal allowances and premiums are set nationally, at a level intended to provide for all normal day-to-day living expenses including the purchase and replacement of clothing. It is for individuals to spend their benefit as they see fit in the light of their personal needs and preferences.

EMPLOYMENT

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Clelland: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what total annual budget he envisages for the 100 training and enterprise councils outlined in the White Paper "Employment for the 1990s".

Mr. Cope: "Employment for the 1990s" indicated that the annual budget to each TEC would range between £15 million and £50 million, depending on the size of the TEC. Most of the budget would be programme money but it also included costs of administration.

Tourism Review Committee

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when he will consider the final report of the Tourism Review Committee.

Mr. Cope: My right hon. Friend has received the report of the tourism review at the end of last year and is currently considering it.

Opencast Coal Mines

Mr. Batiste: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what action he is taking, in the light of the report of Her Majesty's principal district inspector of mines and quarries on the flooding of St. Aidan's opencast coal site to (a) identify other sites of potential risk and (b) implement the inspector's principal recommendation to establish a standard form of stability analysis.

Mr. Nicholls: The Health and Safety Executive's mines and quarrries inspectorate has carried out a survey of all sites nationally and identified those where working was planned in the vicinity of water courses. Where necessary preventive and advisory action has taken place. Work has already started to implement HSE's recommendations by drafting a code of practice incorporating best current technical procedures and also clearly identifying areas of responsibility.

Ministerial Advisers

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the ministerial advisers appointed in his Department for each year since 1979, the salary each person received, whether paid directly or to another employer, and the duties undertaken, whether solely in his Department or in conjunction with other Departments; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Fowler: The following list shows the ministerial advisers appointed or on secondment to the Employment Department since 1979. It is not our practice to reveal the salaries of individual advisers as they are individually negotiated in relation to previous outside earnings and are therefore confidential. The duties of each adviser were as laid down by the employing Minister and were for Employment Ministers only.

List of Ministerial advisers in the Employment Department since 1979

1979 Mr. T. A. G. Davis
Mr. R. J. Shepherd
1982 Mr. M. J. Dobbs (on secondment)
1984 Mr. R. A. Ehrman
1985 Mr. H. James (on secondment)
1986 Mr. J. H. Hill
1987 Mr. W. M. Lightfoot

Labour Statistics

Mr. Lofthouse: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people under the age of 21 years are currently unemployed in the Pontefract and Castleford constituency.

Mr. Lee: Following is the available information, which is also in the Library. Unemployment figures are not available for the requested age group. However, in October 1988, the latest available date, the number of unemployed claimants aged under 20 in the Pontefract and Castleford parliamentary constituency was 416.

Mr. Lofthouse: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the current level of unemployment in the Pontefract and Castleford constituency.

Mr. Lee: The information is in the Library. In November 1988 there were 4,244 unemployed claimants in Pontefract and Castleford parliamentary constituency.

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what has been the rate of change in the unemployment figures relative to the number of notified vacancies over the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: The table shows seasonally adjusted unemployment and seasonally adjusted unfilled vacancies at jobcentres in the United Kingdom for November 1987 and 1988 with the percentage change over the period.

	November
Seasonally adjusted	1987 (thousands)	1988 (thousands)	Percentage change
Unemployed claimants[1]	2,604·4	2,108·6	−19·0
Unfilled vacancies[2]	265·1	244·9	−7·6

[1] Consistent with current coverage.
[2] Recent research shows that, nationally, only about a third of vacancies are notified to jobcentres.

Health and Safety Executive Factory Inspectors

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many Health and Safety Executive factory inspectors have been employed (a) as a whole and (b) on factory visits for each year since 1979 (i) in the Nottingham area and (ii) in the east midlands; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: The Health and Safety Executive's factory inspectors operate through an area office network. The numbers of factory inspectors based at the north midlands and east midlands area offices since 1979 are as follows:

	Area location
	North Midlands (Nottingham)	East Midlands (Northampton)
1979	29	29
1980	31	29
1981	30	26
1982	29	24
1983	26	23
1984	25	23
1985	27	23
1986	23	25
1987	23	26
1988	21	24·5
1989[1]	21	25

All factory inspectors employed at the Health and Safety Executive's area offices undertake factory visits.

For 1988-89 the Government increased provision to the commission by £6·7 million gross above the level previously planned. In 1989-90 planned provision will be enhanced by a further £8·8 million gross, allowing for gross expenditure of £118·3 million. The planned provision for 1989 to 1992 allows for real growth in the Health and Safety Executive's activities over the next three years. This will enable the executive to increase the number of inspectors including factory inspectors.

Unemployment Benefit

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people (a) within South Shields and (b) nationally had their unemployment benefit stopped because they were considered to be not available for work in the period from January to September.

Mr. Lee [holding answer 22 December 1988]: Information is not available in the precise form requested. However, for the period 1 January 1988 to 30 June 1988, 2,424 cases were considered in the adjudication office area which includes the town of South Shields, because of doubts about availability. From 3 March 1988 not all cases of doubt led to benefit being withheld pending a decision. Between 1 July 1988 and 30 September 1988, 2,164 cases were considered.

It is not possible to provide national figures up to September. However, for the period 1 January 1988 to 30 June 1988, the total number of cases considered due to doubts about availability was 123,606.

CIVIL SERVICE

Agencies

130. Mr. Evennett: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service if there has been further progress in setting up Civil Service agencies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for the Isle of Wight (Mr. Field).

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service if he will make a statement on current progress towards the setting up of agencies within the Civil Service.

Mr. Luce: Since I last spoke to the House on this subject on 5 December 1988, Her Majesty's Stationery Office has been launched as an agency bringing the total of agencies which have been set up to three. Around 30 other candidates for agency status have been announced as under active consideration, and I expect more to be announced.

Civil Service Unions

129. Ms. Quin: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service when he last met representatives of the Civil Service unions; and what was the content of the discussions.

131. Mr. Wareing: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service when he last met the Civil Service unions; and what subjects were discussed.

134. Mr. Favell: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service when he last met leaders of the Civil Service unions; and what subjects were discussed.

Mr. Luce: I have meetings from time to time with representatives of Civil Service trade unions both centrally and during visits to Civil Service establishments. A wide variety of matters are raised.

Child Care Facilities

132. Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service what steps he is taking to improve child care facilities for civil servants.

Mr. Luce: The Civil Service is developing child care facilities to help staff deal with work and domestic responsibilities, thereby putting it in a position to compete with other employers in recruiting and retaining skilled and experienced staff who will be in short supply as a result of the demographic changes in the 1990s. Some nursery facilities for under-fives are among the schemes under consideration. A number of holiday playschemes for school age children are already in operation and more are planned. An interdepartmental scheme will start in central London in the spring. There are also some local departmental schemes to help parents find good childminders. My officials are providing practical advice to Departments where required.

Environmental Policies

133. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service what action is being taken to ensure that the Civil Service uses recycled paper and does not use rare tropical timber; and if he will make a statement on his Department's environmental policies.

Mr. Luce: A working party representing the paper industry and public sector users is encouraging use of recycled paper where this is cost effective, and HMSO publicises its availability. However, supplies of good quality waste are limited and recycled paper can be up to 50 per cent. more expensive than general purpose paper produced from virgin pulp. Imported wood pulp includes only small amounts from tropical countries, mainly from specially planted eucalyptus.

It is my Department's practice to participate in those environmental initiatives applicable to Government Departments in general.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Eggs

Sir Eldon Griffiths: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, what is his estimate of the loss to cereal farmers arising from reduced sales to chicken and egg producers as a result of the recent fall in demand for eggs; and what plans he has to compensate feed wheat growers for this loss.

Mr. Ryder: There is no evidence that the recent fall in demand for eggs has had a significant effect on the ex-farm price of wheat. The level of ex-farm prices is determined by the level of demand in the market as a whole, including demand for exports, and not by demand in any particular sector.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will take steps to introduce clearer markings on eggs or egg containers to indicate to consumers whether the egg was produced by battery or free range methods.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Eggs produced under alternative systems are already marketed in packs bearing the terms "free-range eggs", "semi-intensive eggs", "perchery eggs (barn eggs)" or "deep litter eggs". Consumers may reasonably assume that packs not carrying one of these terms contain eggs which have been produced in a battery.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether the European Community has given approval for the introduction of the aid scheme to the egg industry announced on 19 December 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor: Before introducing these measures, I explained to Mr. Andriessen (then Commissioner for Agriculture) the exceptional occurrences which necessitated them. I have since sent the Commission details of the schemes, which the Government consider to fall within the terms of article 92(2)(b) of the treaty of Rome.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many egg packers have received compensation under the scheme he announced on 19th December 1988; what have been the maximum and minimum levels of compensation; what has been the average compensation payment; and what is the total amount of compensation paid to date.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 13 January 1989]: So far 221 payments totalling £482,450 have been made to egg packers in the United Kingdom. Payments ranged from £90 to £45,810 with an average of £2,183. A considerable number of applications have yet to be processed to the payment stage.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many inspections of poultry farms in each of the last five years revealed salmonella enteritidis in the laying stock; and how many revealed salmonella strains other than salmonella enteritidis.

Mr. Donald Thompson [holding answer 13 January 1989]: The Zoonoses Order 1975 requires isolations of salmonella including in laying flocks to be reported. During 1988 there were 20 reports of the isolation of salmonella enteritidis in commercial table egg producing flocks. It is not possible to identify separately how many isolations of salmonella in laying flocks other than salmonella enteritidis were reported in 1988.

As regards comparable information for previous years it is not available without disproportionate cost.

Civil Defence College

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what were the posts, ranks and responsibilities of those attending the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation central supplies agency study held at the civil defence college in June 1984.

Mr. Ryder: The arrangements for hosting the NATO study in June 1984 were undertaken by my Department. Details of the proceedings, including those attending are subject to NATO security classification and I am therefore unable to provide this information.

Water

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on how many occasions his Department has after 31 March 1978 made an order under section 19(7) of the Water Act 1973, in relation to applications made to him for an option charges order, giving the date of any such order and the location to which it applied.

Mr. Ryder: The power was replaced by section 62 of the Land Drainage Act 1976 but nevertheless has not been used.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what directions he has issued to a water authority under the provisions of section 24(11) of the Water Act 1973, since the implementation of that Act, giving details of the date and circumstances of any such order.

Mr. Ryder: No directions have been given.

Deer (TB)

Mr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the organisations which have been invited to nominate representatives to form an advisory group to consider controlling tuberculosis in deer; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: My officials have written to the following organisations inviting them to nominate representatives to form an advisory group to consider setting up a deer health scheme:

British Deer Society
British Deer Producers Society Ltd.
British Deer Farmers Association
National Farmers Union
British Veterinary Association
Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons

The purpose of the deer health scheme will be to establish a pool of tuberculosis-free herds in Great Britain. It is not the aim of the scheme to control tuberculosis in deer. Control will be by means of the new legislative measures I announced in my statement of 15 December 1988 at columns 674-675.

Mr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about the details of his proposals for an industry funded programme for the compulsory slaughter of tuberculosis infected deer.

Mr. Donald Thompson: In response to calls from industry for compulsory slaughter I have suggested that it might consider the possibility of an industry funded programme. Whether to proceed with such a programme, and the details of it, would depend partly on the industry's response.

Mr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food from how many organisations he is awaiting a response about the possibility of his Ministry introducing an industry-funded compulsory slaughter programme for deer infected with tuberculosis; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: My officials have written to 13 organisations in England and Wales about the measures which the Government propose to introduce and also referring to the request to the deer farming industry to consider the possibility of an industry-funded slaughter programme. A similar letter has been sent to two organisations in Scotland. The letters invited comments from the organisations consulted. Four have replied so far; responses from the others are awaited.

Ministerial Meetings

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many meetings he or his ministerial colleagues have had in 1988 with (a) the National Farmers Union, (b) the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds, (c) the Council for the Protection of Rural England, (d) the Royal Society for Nature Conservation, (e) the World Wide Fund for Nature, (f) the Friends of the Earth, (g) the National Consumer Council, (h) Consumers in the European Community Group, (i) the London Food Commission, and (j) the United Kingdom Agricultural Supply Trade Association.

Mr. MacGregor: Ministers in my Department have contact with a vast number of organisations and individuals. These contacts include many with similar interests to those listed in the question, but also inevitably go much wider than this.

The number of identifiable formal ministerial meetings which Ministers had during 1988, which included the national representatives of the organisations listed was: (a) 37, (b) 4, (c) 2, (d) 0, (e) 0, (f) 0, (g) 2, (h) 0, (i) 1, (j) 7. However, these meetings form just a small part of the very wide ranging contacts which my Ministers and officials have all over the country with these and other organisations.

Bovine Somatotropin

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects the field trials on bovine somatotropin, being conducted by two pharmaceutical companies, to cease; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: This is primarily a matter for the pharmaceutical companies involved who are responsible for generating the data needed to support applications for product licences.

Meat Inspectors

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many meat inspectors he has employed in each year since 1980; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: None. Meat inspection is the statutory responsibility of local authorities (district councils) which are required to appoint sufficient meat inspectors to carry out the duties required of them by the regulations.

Slaughterhouses (Hygiene)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he is taking to improve hygiene standards in slaughterhouses; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The maintenance of hygiene standards in slaughterhouses is the statutory responsibility of local authorities (district councils). Officials of the Ministry's state veterinary service visit all slaughterhouses to give advice on the standards to be achieved. In preparation for the single market after 1992 we are discussing with other EC member states the implementation of a single set of rules for all slaughterhouses throughout the European Community.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will take steps to ensure that standards of hygiene, and the possibility of inspection, in British slaughterhouses are not adversely affected by increases in the rate of slaughter.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Enforcement of slaughterhouse hygiene and meat inspection legislation is the responsibility of local authorities. They have the duty to ensure that all meat sold for human consumption is produced under hygienic conditions and has been inspected and passed as fit for human consumption.

Sheep (Radiation)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if any restrictions are place on the movement of sheep in farms in north Yorkshire as a result of the Chernoby accident under the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Extensive monitoring of sheep in north Yorkshire in 1987 revealed two breeding ewes above the level of 1,000 Bequerrels of radiocaesium per kilogramme. The animals were not destined for the food chain, but as a precaution, I served a direction on the owner of the flock preventing the movement of sheep out of the flock without my express permission. The direction remains in force.

Ministerial Advisers

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the ministerial advisers appointed in his Department for each year since 1979, the salary each person received, whether paid directly or to another employer, and the duties undertaken, whether solely in his Department or in conjunction with other Departments; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor: The special advisers appointed in this Department since May 1979 are:

Mr. T. Boswell (part-time)	May 1984-November 1986
Mr. R. Gueterbock	February 1988-Date

It is not our practice to reveal the salaries of individual advisers, as they are individually negotiated in relation to previous outside earnings and are therefore confidential. Special advisers in this Department assist the Minister and junior Ministers in the presentation of the Government's policies for which the Department is responsible.

Aflatoxins

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he intends to introduce a legal limit on the level of aflatoxins permitted in food; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder: Following a recommendation by the Food Advisory Committee regulations are currently being drafted placing a limit of 10 microgrammes/kilogram on the level of aflatoxins in nuts and nut products.

Butter (Storage and Sale)

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the cost to European Economic Community and to national Government funds, respectively, of the sale of 887,105 tons of butter from public storage and of the storage aid of 264,000 tons in private storage in the period from 1 November 1987 and 31 October 1988.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The loss on the sale of 887,105 tonnes of butter from Community intervention between 1 November 1987 and 31 October 1988 is estimated at approximately 2,145 mecu. The cost of granting private storage aid to 264.000 tonnes of butter in 1988 is estimated at approximately 70 mecu, on the assumption that all butter remained in store for the maximum 180 days. Expenditure in both these areas is met from Community funds, partly on the basis of deferred reimbursement.

Milk Quota Scheme

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what has been the cost to the European Community and to national Governments of the sums paid to farmers for not producing milk, under the milk quota scheme, in each year since the commencement of the scheme.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Until the 1987-88 milk quota year there was no provision for the Community to finance withdrawal from milk production. Community provision for the cost of the outgoers scheme and permanent quota cuts agreed in 1986 and the United Kingdom share of this provision to date are as follows:

	Total cost to EC budget		Expenditure in the United Kingdom
	Mecu	£ million	Mecu	£ million
1987-88	129	82	18·9	12·0
1988-89	194	123	28·3	18·0

The provision made to compensate for the temporary suspensions of quota agreed at the same time is as follows:

	Total cost to EC budget		Expenditure in the United Kingdom
	Mecu	£ million	Mecu	£ million
1987-88	416	264	61·3	39·0
1988-89	572	381	84·3	56·1

All the expenditure provided for is fully financed from the Community budget.

Member states may make separate provision to compensate producers for total or partial withdrawal from milk production. Expenditure in the United Kingdom under these arrangements has been as follows:

	£ million
1984-85	5·0
1985-86	9·6
1986-87	9·5
1987-88	11·1
[1]1988-89	11·7

[1] Estimated.

Information on spending on national schemes by other member states is not available.

Community measures to compensate for the reduction or cessation of milk production are an essential part of a programme to reduce the total amount of milk produced in the Community. The full cost of these Community measures over seven years will be some 1·4 billion ecu. At current disposal costs, the extra spending arising from the continued production of a corresponding amount of milk would be 3·6 billion ecu.

Butter Sales

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish a table showing the total amount of butter sold from EEC public intervention storage of butter in each of the five years previous to the period 1 November 1987 to 31 October 1988.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The information requested is most readily available on a calendar year basis. The amounts of butter sold out of EC intervention stores in calendar years 1982-1987 were as follows:

Year	Tonnes (to nearest 100 tonnes)
1982	49,600
1983	57,100
1984	357,200
1985	336,200
1986	367,300
1987	811,400

Source: EC Commission.

Food and Wine Sales

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish a table showing the sale prices, in pence per pound, of the sales of food and wine agreed by the management committee since he last reported on these to the House.

Mr. MacGregor: At any one time CAP arrangements provide for a number of sales schemes from intervention and from the open market. These tend to follow established patterns, but the following sales to non-EC countries, agreed since I last replied to my hon. Friend on this subject on 8 November at column 155, have distinguishing features;

Date and Commodity	Quantity (t)	Destination	Price (p/lb)
December 1988
Beef	46,000	Eastern Europe	15·3[1]
Wheat	2,232,000	USSR/Other destinations[3]	3·3[2]
Barley	1,665,000	USSR/Other destinations[3]	3·0—3·1[2]
Wheat	1,350,000	China	3·2[2]

[1] The price is the sale price that would have been obtained if the beef had been exported from the United Kingdom, which it was not.
[2] Price is calculated from the dollar equivalent of the price actually paid by the puchaser (including mcas) converted into sterling at spot rates at time of sale.
[3] It is not possible to identify quantities destined for the USSR, which benefited from an additional subsidy of 0·13p per lb.

Food Surpluses

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what has been the total amount spent on the disposal of food surpluses by Government funds in the most recent annual period for which figures are available; and what were the comparable figures in each of the previous five years.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Public expenditure in the United Kingdom on exports and subsidised disposals of commodities in surplus in this country (cereals, beef and milk products) is as follows:

	£ million
1982-83	547·3
1983-84	533·2
1984-85	491·5
1985-86	449·1
1986-87	340·5
1987-88	545·5

Set-Aside Scheme

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the acreage of land which will be affected by the set-aside scheme in 1989; what reductions in the production of wheat will stem from the scheme; and what is his estimate of the sums to be expended by the United Kingdom Government and by the European Economic Council; respectively.

Mr. Ryder: We have received applications to set aside about 60,000 hectares of arable land in the United Kingdom in the current crop year, at an estimated cost of over £11 million in 1989-90. About 42 per cent. of this expenditure would be eligible for reimbursement from Community funds. It is too early to judge what the impact of set-aside will be on wheat or other arable crop production in this country.

Butter Imports

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list by country of origin the percentage of imports of packet butter consumed by United Kingdom households in each year since 1973.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The percentage share of total butter imports into the United Kingdom by country of origin since 1973 is given in the following table.

	1973	1974	1975	1976	1977	1978	1979	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984	1985	1986	1987	[2]1988
France	1·1	7·1	7·8	5·0	4·5	2·0	0·8	0·9	0·6	0·6	0·5	0·8	0·9	0·8	0·9	1·0
Belgium/Luxembourg	1·3	2·9	2·4	1·2	1·3	1·4	1·0	1·3	1·0	1·6	1·8	0·6	0·6	2·3	2·2	2·5
Netherlands	18·2	22·3	22·9	21·6	17·8	13·2	10·9	6·6	10·4	6·2	13·8	7·9	9·7	6·3	3·6	4·9
Germany	0·0	10·3	13·2	11·0	9·0	4·8	3·9	5·8	4·5	3·5	0·5	0·4	0·8	0·2	0·2	0·2
Ireland	11·5	8·0	11·1	12·4	9·7	16·9	17·5	15·3	14·7	15·9	11·5	14·1	10·0	14·5	10·4	12·3
Denmark	22·0	20·6	17·0	17·9	19·4	20·2	18·0	19·9	20·5	21·5	21·7	21·7	22·7	21·1	22·7	27·5
New Zealand	39·0	28·8	25·3	30·8	38·2	41·4	47·9	50·2	48·3	50·7	50·2	54·5	55·3	54·8	60·0	51·5
Other	[1]6·9	0·0	0·3	0·1	0·1	0·1	0·0	0·0	0·0	0·0	0·0	0·0	0·0	0·0	0·0	0·1
TOTAL	100·0	100·0	100·0	100·0	100·0	100·0	100·0	100·0	100·0	100·0	100·0	100·0	100·0	100·0	100·0	100·0

[1] Mainly Australia, South Africa and Poland.
[2] January to October.
Source: Eurostat.

Veterinary Medicine (Research)

Mr. Madel: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the total amount of money that his Department is providing in the current financial year on the funding of research into veterinary medicine; to what organisations this money is given; and what sum of money is planned for the financial year 1989-90.

Mr. Ryder: My Department is planning to spend £10·7 million on veterinary research in 1988-89 and £10·9 million in 1989-90. These figures do not include certain costs for Ministry staff, such as superannuation which is not borne on my Department's Vote.

SCOTLAND

Ayrshire and Arran (Hospital Sales)

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what agreement he has reached with Ayrshire and Arran health board regarding the responsibility for spending and concerning the application of funds received from the sale of Heathfield, Ayr County and Seafield hospitals, or any part of the three, following the opening of the South Ayrshire hospital.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: None. The allocation of receipts will be made in accordance with the rules in force when the properties are sold.

Ayrshire and Arran Health Board

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what the waiting list and waiting times for orphopaedic operations within the Ayrshire and Arran health board area has been each month from January 1985 to the most recent available date.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Information on waiting lists is collected centrally twice in each year. Data on waiting lists for orthopaedic operations are not held; but the number of people waiting for admission as in-patients to orthopaedic units in Ayrshire and Arran health board hospitals at 31 March and 30 September for the years requested is set out in table 1.

The mean waiting times for those admitted from the waiting lists for operations in orthopaedic units in Ayrshire and Arran health board hospitals during each month for the years requested, is set out in table 2.

Table 1
Orthopaedic in-patient waiting list

Date	Number
1985
31 March	1,220
30 September	1,255
1986
31 March	1,369
30 September	1,563
1987
31 March	1,593
30 September	1,454
1988[1]
31 March	984

[1] This figures relates to the "in-patient true waiting list" and is based on a new system of data collection. It is therefore not fully comparable with those previously collected.

Table 2
Mean length of wait in days for cases admitted from the orthopaedic waiting lists for operations

Month	Mean wait
1985
January	128·5
February	96·5
March	104·2
April	106·7
May	97·7
June	94·1
July	163·9
August	115·5
September	134·3
October	109·0
November	102·8
December	105·4
1986
January	108·4
February	115·1
March	120·3
April	118·9
May	105·8
June	103·0
July	100·8
August	150·7
September	143·2
October	135·4
November	132·3
December	139·3
1987
January	150·6
February	152·2
March	152·2
April	135·0
May	113·2
June	159·2
July	138·2
August	261·5
September	248·3
October	204·4
November	182·9
December	170·8
1988[1]
January	109·1
February	121·4
March	119·9

[1] These figures are provisional and are based on incomplete interim data.

Electricity Boards

Mr. Rhodri Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what percentage of total sales of the two Scottish electricity boards is accounted for by customers in each of the following categories of supply: (a) 10 MW-50MW, (b) 50 MW-100MW, (c) 100 MW-200 MW and (d) over 200 MW;

(2) how many customers each of the two electricity boards currently have in each of the following categories of supply: (a) 10 MW-50 MW, (b) 50 MW-100 MW, (c) 100 MW-200 MW and (d) over 200 MW.

Mr. Lang: This is a matter for the South of Scotland Electricity Board and the North of Scotland Hydro-Electric Board and I am asking the chairman to write to the hon. Member.

Ministerial Advisers

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the ministerial advisers appointed in his Department for each year since 1979, the salary each person received, whether paid directly or to another employer, and the duties undertaken, whether solely in his Department or in conjunction with other Departments; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Rifkind: The first and only special adviser in the Scottish Office, whose appointment was made in August 1987 is Mr. Graeme Carter. It is not our practice to reveal the salaries of individual advisers as they are individually negotiated in relation to previous outside earnings and are therefore confidential.

Mr. Carter is paid directly by my Department. His duties are undertaken solely in my Department. Primarily he assists me as Secretary of State; he contributes to the preparation of speeches and supports my ministerial colleagues in the Scottish Office as far as time permits.

Health Boards (Chairmen)

Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which of the chairmen of the Scottish health boards are participants in the performance related pay scheme.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: None.

Nursery Education

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many and what percentage of children aged three and four years were in receipt of nursery education in each local education authority area for Scotland in each of the years 1978-79 to the latest date for which information is available.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The figures for nursery schools and departments at each September for which information is available are set out in the tables:

Three and four year olds in education authority nursery schools

	1978	1979	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984	1987	1987
									three years old	four years old
Number
Borders	299	313	301	363	387	394	359	390	68	322
Central	1,399	1,512	1,681	1,858	1,960	2,166	2,210	2,492	593	1,899
Dumfries and Galloway	253	257	266	247	271	287	316	428	80	348
Fife	3,192	3,235	3,280	3,142	3,439	3,805	3,993	4,193	805	3,388
Grampian	2,233	2,196	2,222	2,244	2,235	2,425	2,433	2,678	610	2,068
Highland	331	455	484	519	567	580	618	617	109	508
Lothian	6,718	6,529	6,795	6,799	7,045	7,477	7,966	7,965	2,991	4,974
Strathclyde	14,501	14,768	14,841	15,406	16,071	16,793	17,376	17,551	5,185	12,366
Tayside	1,841	1,933	2,007	2,014	2,097	2,112	2,136	2,344	757	1,587
Orkney	78	96	93	74	85	89	92	83	25	58
Shetland	32	86	99	91	85	82	102	110	52	58
Western Isles	160	11	162	156	169	146	0	0	0	0
Scotland Total	31,037	31,531	32,231	32,913	34,411	36,356	37,601	38,851	11,275	27,576
Percentage of children in population
Borders	12·2	12·8	13·7	17·1	17·5	16·6	15·2	16·6	5·9	27·0
Central	19·3	21·4	25·2	28·8	29·3	31·2	31·2	37·8	18·4	56·4
Dumfries and Galloway	7·0	7·4	8·4	8·0	8·1	7·9	8·7	12·7	4·8	20·6
Fife	35·4	36·3	38·3	39·3	40·8	42·2	42·8	48·5	18·7	78·0
Grampian	18·2	18·0	18·7	19·4	18·3	18·6	18·6	21·2	9·7	32·6
Highland	6·3	8·5	9·1	10·2	10·7	10·3	10·5	11·6	4·1	19·0
Lothian	36·0	36·6	40·4	43·0	43·3	43·8	45·3	47·8	36·4	59·0
Strathclyde	22·2	23·2	24·7	27·7	27·8	27·7	27·6	29·6	17·7	41·2
Tayside	18·5	20·4	22·1	23·2	23·5	23·0	22·6	25·1	16·1	34·3
Orkney	16·8	19·4	19·3	14·9	16·5	17·9	18·3	18·3	11·3	24·9
Shetland	4·5	11·7	13·2	12·1	22·1	11·1	13·6	17·7	17·0	18·4
Western Isles	19·2	16·8	18·4	19·3	19·7	16·2	0·0	0·0	0·0	0·0
Scotland Total	22·9	23·8	25·6	27·8	27·9	28·0	28·2	30·8	18·1	43·3

Local Authorities (Capital Expenditure)

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total amount of capital expenditure requested by local education authorities in each of the years from 1979-80 to the latest date for which information is available, in cash and real terms.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The following table gives the total value of capital expenditure provision requested by local authorities in Scotland for educational building of all kinds in each of the years from 1982-83 to 1989-90. Requests by authorities for capital expenditure provision in earlier years were not aggregated nationally.

Provision requested by local authorities for capital expenditure on educational building

Year	At outturn prices	At 1987-88 prices (£m)
1982-83	56·863	71·618
1983-84	57·758	69·576
1984-85	52·748	69·576
1985-86	60·900	66·252
1986-87	71·721	75·505
1987-88	66·010	66·010
1988-89	89·512	84·247
1989-90	90·089	80·752

Note:—The outturn figures have been converted to 1987-88 prices using the GDP deflator.

Assisted Places Scheme

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total number of children placed for the assisted places scheme in non-maintained and independent schools as a percentage of the total number of children in each year since the scheme's introduction.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information is as follows:

School Year	Number[1] of Assisted Pupils as a Percentage of Total Pupils in Independent and Grant Aided Schools[2] (per cent.)
1981-82	2·43
1982-83	4·6
1983-84	5·86
1984-85	6·92
1985-86	8·21
1986-87	8·15
1987-88[1]	8·21

[1] Provisional figure
[2] Grant-aided Schools included in years 1981-82 to 1984-85 only

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give an estimate of expenditure on assisted places scheme and of the number of children likely to benefit from the scheme in each of the years 1988-89, 1989-90 and 1990-91.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The estimate for expenditure on the scheme in the school year 1988-89 is £5·9 million covering about 2,670 pupils. It is planned that spending on the scheme will rise to £6·8 million and to £7·7 million in the respective school years 1989-90 and 1990-91 and that the number of children benefiting should rise to over 3,000 by the school year 1991-92.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what was the total amount of expenditure given under the assisted places scheme in each year since its introduction;

(2) what was the total number of children in non-maintained independent schools financed by the assisted places scheme in each year since its introduction.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information is as follows:

School year	Total expenditure £'000s	Number of assisted pupils
1981-82	799	790
1982-83	1,718	1,450
1983-84	2,454	1,900
1984-85	3,299	2,270
1985-86	4,217	2,620
1986-87	4,861	2,626
1987-88[1]	5,360	2,672

[1] Provisional figures.

Non-maintained Independent Schools

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide a complete list of the non-maintained schools in Scotland for each of the years 1978-79 to 1987-88.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information is as follows:

INDEPENDENT SCHOOLS 1978-79

Borders
Garvald School
St. Mary's School

Central
Beaconhurst Grange School
Camphill (Blairdrummond) School
Kindergarten School
Queen Victoria School
Struan House School

Dumfries and Galloway
Crowfordton House School
Kilquanity House School
Merton Hall
Orchardton House School
Rickerby House School
St. Kiaran's School
St. Ninian' School
The Monken Hadley School
Warriston School

Fife
Craigflower School
Inchkeith Private School
New Park School
St. Leonards and St. Katherines School
Seaview Private School

Highland
East Sutherland
Christian School
Fort Augustus Abbey School
Raddery School

Lothian
Algrade School
Belhaven Hill School
Cargilfield School
Cliftonhall School
Columcille School
Compass School
St. Denis and Cranley School
Edinburgh Academy
Fettes College
Gillsland Park School
Hillside School
Holt School
Lereto School
Merchiston Castle School
Murrayfield School for Spastics
Murrayfield Kindergarten
Oxenfoord Castle School
St. Georges School for Girls
St. Hilary's School
St. Margaret's Convent School
St. Margaret's School for Girls
St. Serfs School
The American School of Edinburgh
The Rudolf Steiner School

Grampian
Aberdeen Waldorf School
Aberlour House
Blairmore School
Blairs College
Camphill Rudolph Steiner School
Garden House
Gordonstoun School
Lathallan School
Linn Moor
Rosebrae School
St. Marie's Convent School
Templehill Community School
The American School of Aberdeen
Total Oil Marine's French School

Strathclyde
Atholl Preparatory School
Barrowfield Community School
Belmont House School
Calderwood Lodge Jewish Primary
Dairsie House School
Dardenne School
Deanhouse School
Drumley House School
Fernhill School
Franciscan Convent School

Glasgow Academy
Keil School
Lomond School
Our Lady and St. Ita's School
Park Lodge School
Regina Mundi Preparatory School
St. Columba's College
St. Francis Xavier College
St. Francis Primary School
St. Kevin's School
St. Ronan's Preparatory School
Springbank School
Southannan School
The High School of Glasgow
Wellington School

Tayside
Ardvreck School
Butterstone House School
Centre 535
Convent of the Sacred Heart (now known as Kilgraston School)
Craigclowan School
Croftinloan School
Ochil Tower
Rannoch School
Strathallan School
Trinity College (now known as Glenalmond)

Changes since 1978-79

Schools Opened	Schools Closed
1979-80
Strathclyde	Highland
Muslim Mission School	East Sutherland
St. Francis Primary	Christian School
	Strathclyde
	Barrowfield Community School
	Franciscan Convent School
	Tayside
	Centre 535
1980-81
Lothian	Central
Hillside School Co-operative	Camphill (Blairdrummond)
	Kindergarten School
	Fife
	Craigflower
	Lothian
	Gillsland Park School
	Holt School
1981-82
Dumfries and Galloway	Dumfries and Galloway
Abercree House School	Orchardton House School
Lothian	St. Kiaran's School
Dunedin School Co-operative	St. Ninian's School
	Lothian
	Hillside School Co-operative
1982-83
Fife	Grampian
Starley Hall School	Templehill Community School
Strathclyde	Strathclyde
Gask House School	Calderwood Lodge
Glasgow Christian	Regina Mundi Preparatory School
1983-84
Lothian	Lothian
Hillside School	St. Hilary's School
Westerlea School for Spastics (Formerly Murrayfield)

Schools Opened	Schools Closed
	Strathclyde
	Dardene School
	Dean House School
	Glasgow Christian Academy
	St. Columba's College
1984-85
Dumfries and Galloway	Dumfries and Galloway
Woodlands School	Monken Haldey School
	Warriston School
Fife	Strathclyde
Hillside School	Our Lady and St. Ita's School
Lothian
St. Mary's Music School[1]
Stathclyde
Hamilton College
Red Brae Residential School
1985-86
Central	Dumfries and Galloway
Dollar Adademy	Abercree School
	Rickerby House School
Dumfries and Galloway
Lamachan School (formerly Abercree)	Grampian
Eskdalemuir Childrens Workshop	Garden House School
	Lothian
Grampian	Algrade School
Albyn School[1]	Columcille School
Glenmillan School	Strathclyde
Robert Gordon's College[1]	St. Francis Xavier School
St. Margaret's Aberdeen[1]
Lothian
Mary Erskine School[1]
Daniel Stewart's and Melville College[1]
George Watson's College[1]
George Heriot's School[1]
Strathclyde
Craigholme School for Girls[1]
Hutchesons' Grammar School[1]
Kelvinside Academy[1]
Laurel Bank School[1]
Living Waters Christian School
Park School[1]
St. Aloysius College[1]
St. Columba's School[1]
Wesbourne School for Girls[1]
Tayside
High School of Dundee[1]
Morrison's Academy[1]
Parkview School
Trinity School
1986-87
Central	Grampian
Snowdon House	Glen Millan School
	St. Marie's Convent School
Grampian
Glen Morven Preparatory School
Dutch School
Causewayhead
	Lothian
Moray Steiner School	St. Margaret's Convent School
Oakbank School

Schools Opened	Schools Closed
Lothian	Strathclyde
St. Joseph's School	St. Kevin's School
Wellington School
Penicuik
Strathclyde
Loaningdale School
Torass Emess Jewish Day School
Balnacraig School
1987-88
Central	Dumfries and Galloway
Lendrick Muir	Lamachan School
	Eskdalemuir Children's[1] Workshop
Fife
Kingdom Christian School
	Grampian
	Blair's College
Grampian
The Hamilton
	Strathclyde
	Muslim Mission School
Highland
Scoraig School
Lothian
Regius School
Mannafield Christian School
Newtown Preparatory School
Strathclyde
Ballikinrain School
Giesland School
Glasgow Steiner School
Goodshepherd Centre
Kibble School
St. Philip's School
Springboig St. John's Wee Friends Primary School
Tayside
Redgorton School

[1] Former grant-aided secondary schools.

Mr. Henry McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give (a) the number of children attending non-maintained independent schools and (b) that number as a percentage of the total number of children attending all schools for each of the local education authority areas.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Information related to the areas of schools attended at September 1987 is given in the table:

	Pupils in independent schools	Pupils in independent schools as a percentage of all pupils
Borders	140	0·9
Central	1,500	3·2
Dumfries and Galloway	190	0·8
Fife	750	1·3
Grampian	3,690	4·5
Highland	120	0·3
Lothian	11,350	9·7
Strathclyde	10,870	2·8
Tayside	3,910	6·3
Orkney, Shetland and Western Isles	—	—
Scotland	32,510	3·9

Books and Equipment (Expenditure)

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the expenditure per pupil on books and on equipment in (a) primary schools and (b) secondary schools at the end of each year since 1978-79 in cash terms and real terms using 1987-88 prices and using an index of 100 for 1978-79.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information available is given in the following tables which have been compiled from local authority financial returns. Expenditure on equipment was not separately identified in these returns until 1982-83. There have been some variations from year to year in the recording of expenditure under these two headings. In particular some of the figures for expenditure on library books may include some expenditure on items of equipment.

Table 1: Expenditure per pupil on text and library books and on educational tools, equipment and materials at outturn prices

(£)

	Books		Educational tools, equipment and materials
Year	Primary	Secondary	Primary	Secondary
1978-79	4·54	8·31	n/a	n/a
1979-80	5·49	9·61	n/a	n/a
1980-81	5·84	9·29	n/a	n/a
1981-82	6·54	9·77	n/a	n/a
1982-83	7·03	10·03	8·18	27·33
1983-84	8·99	13·35	7·28	25·36
1984-85	9·55	13·83	8·91	30·09
1985-86	8·91	13·47	8·33	30·26
1986-87	10·93	16·67	8·92	33·85
1987-88	11·68	18·26	11·40	42·39

Table 2: Expenditure per pupil on text and library books and on educational tools, equipment and materials adjusted to 1987-88 prices using the GDP deflator

(£)

	Books		Educational tools, equipment and materials
Year	Primary	Secondary	Primary	Secondary
1978-79	9·32	17·05	n/a	n/a
1979-80	9·64	16·87	n/a	n/a
1980-81	8·66	13·77	n/a	n/a

Year	Books		Educational tools, equipment and materials
	Primary	Secondary	Primary	Secondary
1981-82	8·83	13·20	n/a	n/a
1982-83	8·85	12·63	10·30	34·42
1983-84	10·83	16·08	8·77	30·55
1984-85	10·95	15·86	10·22	34·50
1985-86	9·69	14·65	9·06	32·92
1986-87	11·51	17·55	9·39	35·64
1987-88	11·68	18·26	11·40	42·39

Table 3: Expenditure per pupil on text and library books at outturn prices expressed as an index with 1978-79 = 100

Year	Primary	Secondary
1978-79	100	100
1979-80	120·9	115·6
1980-81	128·6	111·8
1981-82	144·1	117·6
1982-83	154·8	120·7
1983-84	198·0	160·6
1984-85	210·4	166·4
1985-86	196·3	162·1
1986-87	240·7	200·6
1987-88	257·3	219·7

Table 4: Expenditure per pupil on text and library books adjusted to 1987-88 prices using the GDP deflator, expressed as an index with 1978-79 = 100

Year	Primary	Secondary
1978-79	100	100
1979-80	103·4	98·9
1980-81	92·9	80·8
1981-82	94·7	77·4
1982-83	95·0	79·9
1983-84	116·2	94·3
1984-85	117·5	93·0
1985-86	104·0	85·9
1986-87	123·5	102·9
1987-88	125·3	107·1

Education (Capital Expenditure)

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total capital expenditure for (a) primary, (b) secondary and (c) further education in each of the years from 1979 to the latest date for which information is available, in cash and real terms.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information available is given in the following table, which has been compiled from local authority capital payment returns. Expenditure on primary and secondary schools is not separately identified in these returns. The reduction in expenditure in real terms during the period reflects a substantial and progressive decline in pupil numbers.

Capital expenditure by local authorities

£ million

Year	Primary and secondary schools		Further education
	At outturn prices	At 1987-88 prices	At outturn prices	At 1987-88 prices
1979-80	44·958	78·936	5·328	9·355
1980-81	49·637	73·580	3·408	5·052
1981-82	55·165	74·443	3·865	5·216
1982-83	49·728	62·631	5·497	6·923
1983-84	43·359	52·230	6·687	8·055
1984-85	43·431	49·798	5·683	6·516
1985-86	48·368	52·618	4·384	4·769
1986-87	43·011	45·280	4·339	4·568
1987-88	44·340	44·340	9·388	9·388

Note:
The outturn figures have been converted to 1987-88 prices using the GDP deflator.

Museums and Galleries (Attendances)

Mr. Faulds: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will publish in the Official Report the attendance figures for 1988 reported by the national museums and galleries in Scotland, broken down into the individual institutions but including their outstations, with figures in each case of the percentage increase or decrease on the attendance figures for 1987.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information is as follows:

	1988	Percentage change since 1987
National Galleries of Scotland	510,547	−2·6
National Museums of Scotland	688,187	+25·7

The national galleries of Scotland comprise the national gallery of Scotland, the Scottish national gallery of modern art and the Scottish national portrait gallery. The national museums of Scotland comprise the Royal museum of Scotland buildings at Chambers street and Queen street, Edinburgh, the Scottish agricultural museum, the Scottish united services museum, the Museum of flight and the Shambellie museum of costume.

Ex-Members (Appointments)

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the appointments to public bodies which he has made in respect of (a) the Earl of Ancram, (b) Mr. Michael Hirst, (c) Sir Alex Fletcher, (d) Mrs. Anna McCurley, (e) Mr. John McKay, (f) Mr. Alex Pollock, (g) Mr. Barry Henderson, (h) Mr. John Corrie, (i) Mr. Albert McQuarrie and (j) Mr. Gerry Malone since June 1987.

Mr. Rifkind [holding answer 19 December 1988]: I have made the following appointments:

Michael Ancram:
Member, Board of Scottish Homes
Member, Board of Governors, Napier Polytechnic of Edinburgh

Michael Hirst:
Member of the Board of Governors, the Queens College, Glasgow

Sir Alex Fletcher:
Member, Scottish Development Agency
I have not appointed any of the other persons named to any public body.

THE ARTS

Public Building Contracts

101. Mr. Gregory: To ask the Minister for the Arts if consideration has been given to a scheme whereby a proportion of the value of public building contracts would be awarded to the arts.

108. Mr. Knapman: To ask the Minister for the Arts what is his policy towards Per Cent for the Arts; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce: I see the great potential of the Per Cent. for Art scheme on a voluntary basis. I welcome the Arts Council's appointment of a steering group to actively promote the scheme and await progress with interest.

Travelling Exhibitions

102. Mr. Devlin: To ask the Minister for the Arts what are the objectives of the travelling exhibition unit of the Museums and Galleries Commission.

Mr. Luce: I attach great importance to the lending of works of art and I am promoting this through my funding of the travelling exhibitions unit and through the Government indemnity scheme. I had the pleasure last week of visiting the unit to see its work of encouraging exhibition touring at first hand.

I am glad to announce that I have agreed additional funding of £42,000 for the travelling exhibitions unit in 1988-89, to facilitate a touring exhibition drawing on material from the national collections, and to enable the MGC to appoint an adviser on environmental standards and controls.

Victoria and Albert Museum

103. Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Minister for the Arts whether he has met the board of trustees of the Victoria and Albert museum since March, to discuss the report of the National Audit Office.

Mr. Luce: I met Lord Armstrong, chairman of the Victoria and Albert museum trustees, and Mrs. Elizabeth Esteve-Coll, director of the museum in October last year. A number of important issues were discussed including points raised in the National Audit Office report.

The Government are considering the report of the Public Accounts Committee on the management of collections of the English national museums and galleries, and will respond as soon as possible.

Museums and Galleries

105. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Minister for the Arts what additional funds have been made available to English national museums and galleries, since March, in response to the report of the National Audit Office on the management of the collections of the English national museums and galleries.

Mr. Luce: Last November I announced the grant-in-aid allocations to the national museums and galleries, which I sponsor, to the year 1991-92, rolling forward the three-year funding settlement introduced in 1987. The allocations were intended to help the national institutions in tackling their priority concerns in the management of their collections, including conservation, storage, documentation and building maintenance. An additional £13 million is allocated in 1991-92 for these purposes.

The Government are considering the report of the Public Accounts Committee on the management of collections of the English national museums and galleries, and will respond as soon as possible.

111. Mr. Haynes: To ask the Minister for the Arts whether he plans to increase the level of staffing in English national museums and galleries.

116. Mr. Wareing: To ask the Minister for the Arts whether he plans to increase the staffing levels in English national museums and galleries.

117. Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister for the Arts what plans he has to increase the level of staffing in national museums.

Mr. Luce: On 3 November I announced increased funding for the National Museums and Galleries as part of the rolling forward of the arts settlement into a new third year, 1991-92. An additional £13 million has been allocated in 1991-92 to help institutions deal with their priority areas of concern. The allocation of these extra resources by institutions is, however, a matter for individual boards of trustees.

114. Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Minister for the Arts how many posts are currently vacant in English national museums and galleries.

Mr. Luce: The information is not available in the precise form requested. It is for the director and trustees of individual institutions to consider how the planned number of staff in post should compare with an institution's theoretical staffing complement.

115. Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Minister for the Arts what action he has taken since March 1988 in response to the National Audit Office report "on the management of the collections of the English national museums and galleries".

Mr. Luce: On 3 November I announced increased funding for the national museums and galleries for the new three-year settlement period. An additional £13 million has been allocated in 1991-92 to help institutions deal with their priority areas of concern, including conservation, storage and building maintenance.

The Government are considering the report of the Public Accounts Committee on the management of the collections of the English national museums and galleries and will make their response as soon as possible.

118. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Minister for the Arts when he expects to respond to the first report of the Public Accounts Committee on the management of the collections of the English national museums and galleries HC 28; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce: The Government are considering the report's recommendations and will respond as soon as possible.

Museums (Conservation)

106. Dr. Marek: To ask the Minister for the Arts whether he plans to increase the funds available for conservation in national museums.

Mr. Luce: In the new three-year allocations announced in November I responded to the priorities indicated in the institutions' own corporate plans and increased their provisions by £13 million in 1991-92 for the important work of conservation, storage, documentation, and building and maintenance.

Museum of the Moving Image

107. Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Minister for the Arts what figures he has for attendances at the museum of the moving image.

Mr. Luce: Over 150,000 people have visited the museum of moving image since it opened in mid-September 1988. This is an excellent start and well above the orginal target figure.

Dance Companies

109. Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Minister for the Arts what is his estimate of the number of professional dance companies in Great Britain at the end of 1988, 1983 and 1978.

Mr. Luce: A total of 34 professional dance companies are funded by the Arts Council and regional arts associations. There are a number of companies existing solely on private funds. Figures requested for earlier years are not available.

London Museums (Attendance)

110. Mr. Bowis: To ask the Minister for the Arts if he will give the latest figures for museum attendance in London.

Mr. Luce: I understand that the estimated number of visitors to museums and galleries in London during 1987 was over 23 million. This is based on the English Tourist Board's sight-seeing survey. The figures for 1988 are not yet available.

Regional Arts Associations

112. Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Minister for the Arts whether he has any plans to alter the present autonomy of regional arts associations.

Mr. Luce: I refer the hon. Member to my recent announcement of a review of the structure and organisation for support of the arts in England at column 255 of 8 December.

Arts (Devon)

113. Mr. Speller: To ask the Minister for the Arts what specific proposals he has for assistance to the arts in Devon for 1989.

Mr. Luce: Provision for the arts in Devon is a matter for the local authority and the south-west regional arts association. The latter invested £453,000 in the county in 1987-88. South-West Arts, together with Devon county council and eight district councils, have also commissioned a strategy review for the arts in Devon which should be concluded by March 1989.

British Museum

119. Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Minister for the Arts whether he has met the chairman of the trustees of the British museum since 22 March to discuss the state of his museum's collection.

Mr. Luce: I have met the chairman and director of the museum on a number of occasions in recent months, and my Department is in frequent touch on a wide range of matters with the British museum and with the other institutions which I sponsor. The management of the collections of the British museum is a matter for the trustees and the director.

Arts Bodies (Secondments)

120. Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister for the Arts whether he is aware of any secondments to arts bodies by companies in the United Kingdom of employees possessing managerial or marketing skills.

Mr. Luce: There have been many valuable secondments and attachments to arts bodies over the years. Business in the Arts—an organisation set up by the business community expressly to provide this kind of support for the arts—aims to expand these. In addition, many business men and women sit on the boards of arts bodies and give freely of their time and skills in this way.

National Film and Television School

121. Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Minister for the Arts whether he will make a statement as to the future of the national film and television school.

Mr. Luce: The school continues to play an important role in providing training for directors, camera staff and other specialists for the audio-visual industry. It is currently developing longer term plans which I shall be looking at with interest. Funding for the school will rise from £1·6 million in 1988-89 to £1·8 million in 1991-92.

Arts (Funding)

122. Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Minister for the Arts what increases in private and corporate funds for the arts he expects to be generated following his recent arts settlement.

Mr. Luce: I am confident that the substantial and continuing provision of Government support for the arts, and the introduction of schemes of incentive funding, will generate growth in private and corporate funding for the arts activities which I sponsor. I welcome the Arts Council's initiative in its recently published five-year plan, to set targets for the private sector support which it seeks to encourage.

123. Mr. Jessel: to ask the Minister of the Arts if he will make a statement on Government support for the arts.

Mr. Luce: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to my hon. Friend for Warrington, South (Mr. Butler) on 3 November at column 705.

Art Treasures (Preservation)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister for the Arts what action he is taking to protect Britain's art treasures from deterioration because of poor storage conditions and the backlog of conservation work; what assistance he will be giving to museums so that an up-to-date stock record of treasures is made; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce: Last November I announced the grant-in-aid allocations to the national museums and galleries which I sponsor, to the year 1991-92, rolling forward the three-year funding settlement introduced in 1987. I have made increases specifically to help the national institutions in tackling their priority concerns in the management of their collections, including their conservation, storage, and documentation, and building maintenance.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Civil Service (Recruitment)

135. Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the policy of Her Majesty's Government on the re-employment in the Civil Service of persons retired on grounds of invalidity by the European Economic Community Commission.

Mr. Brooke: The Community terms of service common to all its institutions do not recognise any form of secondment from national Civil Services for permanent staff; officers must therefore resign from the United Kingdom Civil Service on taking up a permanent appointment with the Communities. Departments have discretion to offer their staffs undertakings about re-instatement. An officer who has been absent for more than five years and is aged 55 or over has no right of return. The normal pre-appointment inquiries carried out by a Department before a reinstated candidate takes up appointment include a check on health.

Civil Service (Dispersal)

136. Mr. Beith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will make a statement on progress towards the dispersal of more Civil Service posts from the London area to other regions.

Mr. Brooke: The centrally directed dispersal programme affecting 5,900 posts announced in 1979 is virtually complete, and over 6,000 further posts have been relocated from the south-east at departmental initiative.

Departments are now observing Treasury guidelines to review their work locations, with a view to relocating at sites offering easier labour markets and increased cost-effectiveness. With regard to this phase of the Government's relocation policy, I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 2 December 1988, at column 414, to my hon. Friend, the Member for Bolton, North-East (Mr. Thurnham).

National Insurance and Income Tax

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list all of the points on the income scale for a single man with the standard allowance at which the combined national insurance and income tax marginal rates alter; and if he will list those rates.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Information for 1989-90 is given in the table. The calculations use the national insurance contribution rates for 1989-90 announced in chapter 3 of the Autumn Statement 1988 and assume indexed allowances and thresholds for income tax for 1989-90, shown in table 4.1 of the Autumn Statement.

Levels of income at which the marginal rate of income tax and national insurance contributions[1] of a single person[2] changes, 1989-90

Weekly income £	Per cent.
43·00	5
53·37	30
75·00	32
115·00	34
325·00	25
449·52	40

[1] Class 1 national insurance contributions for an employee contracted-in to the state earnings-related pension scheme (SERPS).
[2] Assumed to be non-aged with no reliefs or allowances other than the single person's allowance.

Single and Married Person's Allowance

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer by how much the single and married person's allowance against income tax can be raised for the loss of £2,000 million of revenue in a full year.

Mr. Norman Lamont: It is estimated that all personal allowances could be increased by just over 9 per cent. for a full year income tax cost of £2,000 million at 1989-90 levels of income. The estimate is based on a projection of the 1986-87 survey of personal incomes and is provisional. It has been assumed that the indexed allowances and thresholds in table 4.1 of the Autumn Statement 1988 apply in 1989-90.

Income Tax

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what size of band at 10 per cent. tax could be introduced before reaching the 25 per cent. income tax rate for the loss of £2,000 million of revenue in a full year;

(2) what levels of income could be taxed at 15 per cent. instead of 25 per cent. for the loss of £2,000 million in a full year, if the 15 per cent. rate only applied to those with total incomes below the maximum qualifying level for the tax band at 15 per cent.

Mr. Norman Lamont: It is estimated that a reduced rate band of 10 per cent. on the first £550 of taxable income would have an income tax cost of just under £2,000 million in a full year at 1989-90 levels of income.

For the same cost all single people and married couples with taxable incomes of less than £4,750 per annum could be taxed at 15 per cent. instead of 25 per cent.

Estimates are based on a projection on the 1986-87 survey of personal incomes and are provisional. It has been assumed that the indexed allowances and thresholds in table 4.1 of the Autumn Statement 1988 apply in 1989-90.

Building Land

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy to abolish the exemption from capital gains tax on a person who owns a house with one acre and part of that acre is sold for building land, and replace it with a tax to be levied on the gain resulting from planning permission being obtained; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I have noted the hon. Member's suggestion but cannot, of course, anticipate the Budget judgment.

Ministers (Salary Arrangements)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what financial arrangements for further salary payments ensue when a Minister resigns or is sacked.

Mr. Brooke: Subject to the provisions of section 13 of the Parliamentary Pensions etc. Act 1984, Ministers and paid office holders in the House of Lords are currently eligible to receive a severance payment of three months' final salary on ceasing to be a Minister. There is currently no similar scheme in place for Commons Ministers; they revert to receiving the full parliamentary salary providing they remain Members of Parliament. I would, however, refer the hon. Member to the 26th TSRB Report (Cm. 362), and the statement of my right hon. Friend the Lord President on 24 May 1988 at column 103 in response to the right hon. Member for Wythenshawe (Mr. Morris).

Employee Share Schemes

Mr. Gould: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the tax regime applicable in the case of share subscriptions is generally applied in the case of all employee share schemes, whereby income tax is payable on the difference between the discounted and market prices.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Subject to certain qualifying conditions, employees acquiring shares through employee share schemes approved by the Inland Revenue (under legislation originally contained in the Finance Acts of 1978, 1980 and 1984) are exempt from the income tax liability which normally arises where shares are acquired below market value by reason of employment.

Health Boards (VAT)

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer under what statutory authority value added tax payments and refunds are made in relation to contracts between health boards and contractors for contracted-out services.

Mr. Lilley: Section 27(2A) of the VAT Act 1983.

VAT

Mr. Heddle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he proposes to publish the Finance Bill 1989 draft clauses on value added tax changes resulting from the decision of the European Court of Justice of 21 June 1988 regarding the European Community sixth value added tax directive.

Mr. Lilley: Soon.

Housing (Homeless Persons) Act 1977

Mr. Heddle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will investigate the reasons why Her Majesty's Stationery Office has no stocks of the Housing (Homeless Persons) Act 1977; and, in view of the current review on the matter of homelessness, if he will ensure that adequate stocks are maintained.

Mr. Lilley: HMSO no longer maintains stocks of the Housing (Homeless Persons) Act 1977 because it was repealed for England and Wales by the Housing (Consequential Provisions) Act 1985 (c. 71) s. 3, Sch. 1 Part I, and for Scotland by the Housing (Scotland) Act 1987 (c. 26), s. 339, Sch. 24. Its main provisions are covered, on consolidation, for England and Wales in the Housing Act 1980 (c. 51) and for Scotland in the Housing (Scotland) Act 1987 (c. 26), and HMSO holds adequate stocks of these Acts in both the Queen's Printer's and the Statutes in Force versions.

Taxation (Families)

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many families with children are estimated to have taxable incomes below the income tax threshold; and what proportion this represents of all families with children.

Mr. Norman Lamont: In 1988-89 it is estimated that some 1·6 million families, about 24 per cent. of the total number of families with children in the United Kingdom, have taxable incomes below the income tax threshold.

Independent Schools (Scotland)

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give an estimate of the value of tax concessions granted to non-maintained independent schools in Scotland in each of the years 1978-79 to 1987-88.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I regret that information on the cost of tax relief available to schools with charitable status is not available.

Revenue

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will tabulate in the Official Report the revenues, actual or estimated, that have been received by Her Majesty's Government, or are expected to be received, for each year from 1979-80 to 1988-89 in millions of pounds at 1987-88 prices derived from (a) revenue from North sea oil, (b) revenue from asset sales of privatisations and (c) other sales of land or property of central or local government or their agencies, showing the respective annual totals and the aggregate total for the period.

Mr. Major [holding answer 13 January 1989]: The figures requested are given in the table.

£ million at 1987-88 prices

	1979-80 outturn	1980-81 outturn	1981-82 outturn	1982-83 outturn	1983-84 outturn	1984-85 outturn	1985-86 outturn	1986-87 outturn	1987-88 outturn	1988-89 estimated outturn	Total
Revenue from North sea oil[1]	4,061	5,548	8,761	9,852	10,598	13,791	12,340	5,052	5,305	[3]3,100	78,408
Privatisation proceeds[2]	662	600	665	615	1,372	2,489	2,945	4,695	5,161	[3]5,600	24,804
Receipts from sales of land and building[4]	1,543	1,951	2,823	3,547	2,934	2,774	2,733	3,215	3,989	n/a	n/a
Total	6,266	8,100	12,249	14,013	14,905	19,054	18,017	12,963	14,455	n/a	n/a

[1] Calculated from rounded figures published in the 1988 Autumn Statement.
[2] Oil royalties, petroleum revenue tax, supplementary petroleum duty and corporation tax before ACT set off attributable to United Kingdom oil and gas production.
[3] Consistent with 1988 Autumn Statement.
[4] Figures include sales by local authorities and new towns as well as central Government, and are consistent with the 1988 public expenditure White Paper.

Tobacco Sales

Mr. Sims: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list in the Official Report figures showing sales to the consumer of (a) cigarettes, (b) hand-rolling tobacco, (c) cigars and (d) pipe tobacco for the most recent 12-month period for which figures are available, and for the preceding 12-month period.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 13 January 1989]: The latest estimates of consumers' expenditure on tobacco products for the 12 month period to September 1988 and for the preceding 12 months are as follows:

Current prices, seasonally adjusted

	Cigarettes	Cigars	Other tobacco[1]	Total
	£ million	£ million	£ million	£ million
October 1987 to September 1988	6,924	398	545	7,867
October 1986 to September 1987	6,704	379	545	7,628

[1] Estimates of expenditure on hand rolling tobacco and on pipe tobacco are not separately available.

Cigarettes

Mr. Sims: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the number of cigarettes sold to consumers in the United Kingdom during the most recent 12-month period for which figures are available; what estimate is available to him of what that figure would have been had tobacco duty been increased in each of the 1987 and 1988 Budgets by 10p more than the amount needed to adjust for the effects of inflation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 13 January 1989]: No direct estimate is available of the number of cigarettes sold to consumers. Information is, however, available on the quantity of cigarettes cleared from bond duty paid. During the 12 month period to October 1988 a total of 96,635·3 million cigarettes were cleared. It is estimated that had tobacco duty been increased in each of the 1987 and 1988 Budgets by 10p more than the amount needed to adjust for the effects of inflation the total above might have been around 6 per cent. lower.

Stamps

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what consideration he has given to the implications for philatelists of the reorganisation of value added tax system in the European Community after 1992; whether he has considered a lower rate of value added tax for second-hand stamps and stamps purchased by collectors; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 13 January 1989]: Discussions on the shape of the VAT system post-1992 are at an early stage but the Government have already made it clear that they consider the European Commission's proposals for the approximation of VAT rates to be unnecessary for the completion of the single market. If the hon. Member sees particular difficulties ahead for philatelists perhaps he would write to me.

TRANSPORT

M1

13. Mr. Ilsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to improve traffic flow on the M1 motorway.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: We are planning improvements to junction 1, a climbing lane at junction 9 and widening between junctions 23a and 24.

Opening the M40 extension from Oxford to Birmingham will relieve the M1.

Tees and Hartlepool Ports

14. Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he next intends to visit the ports of Tees and Hartlepool.

Mr. Portillo: I visited Teesport on 26 October 1988. My noble Friend the Minister for Aviation and Shipping hopes to be able to take up later this year an invitation from the chairman of the Tees and Hartlepool port authority.

Buses (Vandalism)

16. Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent assessment he has made of the implications for the level of vandalism and violence on buses of the increase in the proportion of one-person operated buses.

Mr. Portillo: While there is probably no simple correlation between vandalism and violence and the type of vehicle operated, recent research on assaults on bus crews indicates that there is less risk of violence on one-person operated buses.

London Assessment Studies

18. Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his policy on whether boroughs should include references to options contained in the London assessment studies when responding to solicitors' inquiries on land searches.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Land search inquiries are a matter for the local authorities concerned. We understand that it is not their general practice to refer to possibilities being considered in their preliminary transport studies or ours.

27. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to make an announcement concerning the road assessment studies for London.

Mr. Channon: I expect to receive the consultants' reports on the options in the summer and will make an announcement as soon as possible after that.

Signposting

19. Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give more discretion to his regional directors of transport regarding the erection of signs in rural areas.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Traffic signs must be based on clear principles applied consistently throughout the country.

We are currently consulting on changes to the regulations which will widen the choice of standard signs.

Channel Tunnel

15. Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the likely impact on the port of Liverpool of the Channel tunnel.

Mr. Portillo: I understand that the Merseyside chamber of commerce and industry and some other agencies in the north-west have agreed to co-operate in a study of the transport implications for that region of the single European market and the Channel tunnel. Government Departments are ready to assist with information and advice.

I hope that other bodies in the region, especially in the private sector, will join in this initiative.

20. Mr. Hind: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any plans to meet the chairman of British Rail to discuss rail links to the Channel tunnel; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: This topic is discussed from time to time in Ministers' regular meetings with the chairman.

21. Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will commission a study of the impact of the Channel tunnel on the port of Liverpool.

Mr. Portillo: I see no need to commission a study as I understand that the Merseyside chamber of commerce and industry and some other agencies in the north-west have agreed to co-operate in a study of the transport implications for that region of the single European market and the Channel tunnel.

I hope that other bodies in the region, especially in the private sector, will join in this initiative, and Government Departments are also ready to assist with information and advice.

23. Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received on the need to provide a direct rail link between the Channel tunnel and the north-west of England.

Mr. Portillo: Direct rail links already exist between the site of the United Kingdom entrance to the Channel tunnel and the north-west, but we do receive representations from time to time arguing that additional infrastructure should be provided.

24. Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will commission a study of the regional impact of the Channel tunnel.

72. Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will commission a study on the regional impact of the Channel tunnel.

Mr. Portillo: No. The Government concluded at an early stage that such a study would not be a useful exercise. Of more practical benefit to the regions is the plan, which British Rail is required to publish by the end of 1989, for the dispersal of international passenger and freight trains throughout Britain. They are currently consulting widely and assessing demand.

55. Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received from residents of the London borough of Bexley concerning the proposed routes for the Channel tunnel rail link.

Mr. Portillo: We have received a number of representations from Bexley residents on this subject. It is British Rail's responsibility to decide on a preferred route and to justify its choice.

57. Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on progress on the Channel tunnel.

83. Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on progress in the Channel tunnel.

Mr. Portillo: Construction progress is a matter for Eurotunnel. I understand that, following some early delays, better progress is being maintained.

63. Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what initiatives he has taken to ensure that Yorkshire and other northern areas of England will have adequate connection with the Channel tunnel.

Mr. Portillo: I expect British Rail to address these questions in the plan which they will be publishing later this year in compliance with section 40 of the Channel Tunnel Act.

65. Mr. Michael J. Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the progress of the Channel tunnel.

Mr. Portillo: Construction progress is a matter for Eurotunnel. I understand that, following some early delays, better progress is being maintained.

66. Mr. Clelland: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to increase the carrying capacity of the motorway system in the light of the Channel tunnel.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The Government announced in the White Paper "The Channel Fixed Link" (Cmnd. 9735) that the 23km gap between Maidstone and Ashford on the M20 would be filled with dual three lane motorway, and that the 10·8km Maidstone bypass section would be widened from two lanes to three to give good access to the tunnel terminal.

In general, the impact of the Channel tunnel is one of many factors taken into account in planning the forward road programme and in the design of motorway and trunk road schemes.

94. Mr. Litherland: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action he is taking to encourage the development of freight handling facilities in the north of England and Scotland to take advantage of the Channel tunnel.

Mr. Portillo: I expect British Rail to address these questions in the plan which it will be publishing later this year in compliance with section 40 of the Channel Tunnel Act.

Track Signalling Equipment

22. Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has held recent discussions with British Rail and London Regional Transport representatives on procedures and problems affecting safety and other checks on track signalling equipment.

Mr. Channon: The railways inspectorate meets British Railways Board officials twice a year to discuss various operational and safety issues, including signalling. It also meets officials from London Underground Ltd. whenever necessary to discuss signalling.

Air Congestion

25. Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will next meet the chairman of the Air Transport Users' Committee to discuss air congestion in the south-east.

Mr. Channon: I have no plans to meet the chairman of the Air Transport Users' Committee again in the near future. We attended the conference held recently at Lancaster house to consider air traffic control congestion problems.

Network SouthEast

26. Mr. Madel: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he next expects to meet the chairman of British Rail to discuss further improvements in Network SouthEast; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Channon: I regularly meet the chairman of British Rail and the director of Network SouthEast to discuss a wide range of issues.

88. Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he last met the senior management of British Rail's Network SouthEast to discuss the efficiency of their services.

Mr. Portillo: My right hon. Friend and I meet the senior management of Network SouthEast very frequently and often discuss efficiency, amongst other topics.

British Rail (Chairman)

28. Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he next expects to meet the chairman of British Rail; and what matters he proposes to discuss.

Mr. Portillo: I shall be meeting the chairman of British Rail on 23 January to discuss a variety of rail matters.

56. Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent discussions he has had with British Rail; and what subjects were discussed

Mr. Portillo: I have regular discussions with the chairman of British Rail about a wide variety of railway matters.

62. Mr. Patchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will next meet the chairman of British Rail; and what matters he expects to discuss.

89. Dr. Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he next plans to meet the chairman of British Rail; and what matters he expects to discuss.

Mr. Portillo: I shall be meeting the chairman of British Rail on 23 January to discuss a variety of rail matters.

Aviation Liberalisation

29. Mrs. Roe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when European Community Ministers will be reviewing the aviation liberalisation package agreed in December 1987.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The package of measures agreed in December 1987 contains a commitment that the Council will take a second, more radical, step in June 1990, on the basis of commission proposals to be submitted by 1 November this year.

United Kingdom airlines and their passengers have benefited significantly from the December 1987 measures and we shall be seeking substantial further liberalisation in the next round.

British Rail (Inter-city Services)

30. Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the estimated change in the number of passengers using British Rail inter-city services between London and the north-east at peak times over the past five years; and what has been the passenger-seats ratio on those trains over the same period.

Mr. Portillo: My Department does not maintain this information: my hon. Friend should approach British Rail.

Heathrow-Paddington Rail Link

31. Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects the proposed Heathrow-Paddington rail link to be in operation.

Mr. Portillo: In 1993, subject to parliamentary approval for the construction works needed.

Motorways (North-West)

32. Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to extend the motorway network in he north-west.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Construction of the five mile M63-M66 extension from Portwood to Denton is approaching completion. There are three new motorway stretches in the current forward programme:

	Miles
M66 Denton to Middleton (completing the Manchester outer ring road)	11
A6(M) Stockport North/South bypass	5½
M65 extension to M6 (Blackburn southern bypass)	12

We are considering the case for further schemes as part of the current review of the programme nationally.

Motorways

33. Mr. Wood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures he is taking to build new motorways to a higher standard.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Standards for the construction of all truck roads are kept under continual review. Improvements are introduced wherever justified on grounds of safety or value for money.

The new requirements for the structural design of road pavements published in December 1987 and several of the measures announced on 7 April 1988, following the motorway safety review, will improve the standard of new motorways.

41. Mr. Allen McKay: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on his plans to improve traffic movements on the motorway system.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: We are continuing to improve and develop the motorway and trunk road network. Our road programme includes 36 improvement schemes designed to improve the flow of traffic on motorways. The majority of these are junction improvements and widening schemes on existing motorways.

Motorway schemes in programme: at 1 December 1988

Under construction:

NWRO
M62 Eastbound, climbing lane, junctions 21-22
M63 Stretford-Eccles, stages 1 and 2 (Barton Bridge opened 20 December 1988)
M63 Stretford-Eccles, stage 4
M63/66 Poortwood-Denton

SERO
M25 Widening junctions 11-13

WMRO
M5 Lobshill-Lydiate Arch and M42 north turn
M40 Bonsbury BP
M40 Warwick section

YHRO
M62 Westbound climbing lane, west of junction 25

In preparation:

ERO
M1 Climbing lane, junction 5
M11 North facing slip road, junction 5
M40 Widening junctions 4-5

LRO
M4 Junction 4 improvement and M1 junction 1

NWRO
M6 Widening junctions 20-21a
M6 Widening junctions 30-31
M6 Improvement junctions 31-32
M62 Widening junctions 12-18
M66 Denton-Middleton
M65-M6 Blackburn Southern BP
A74 Carlisle-Scottish Border
A6(M) Stockport N/S By-pass

SERO
M2 Widening junctions 1-3
M3 Bar End-Compton
M3 Compton-Bassett widening
M3 Widening junctions 2-3
M4 Widening junctions 8/9—M25
M4 Free flow links at junctions 8/9
M20 Maidstone-Ashford
M20 Maidstone BP widening
M40 Waterstock-Wendlebury

WMRO
M5 Widening junctions 6-8
M40 Gaydon section
A446(M) Birmingham northern relief road

YHRO
M1 Junction 34 Roundabout improvement
M18 Junction with B6094 Cockhill Lane

Air Traffic Control

34. Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he now expects the new air traffic control systems to be operating in the south-east sector in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The Civil Aviation Authority has advised that the major reorganisation of the airspace over south-east England—known as the central control function—will be implemented in stages by the national air traffic services between 1990 and 1995, with some gains in capacity beginning to accrue from 1992.

Trains (Overcrowding)

35. Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received concerning overcrowding on British Rail and London Underground.

93. Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received about overcrowding on British Rail; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: In the last three months I have received 30 representations from Members of Parliament about British Rail and four representations about London Underground, together with 173 letters from members of the public which make some reference to overcrowding.

Autoguide Systems

36. Ms. Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what involvement he expects local highway authorities will have in selecting road networks for use by autoguide systems.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: We are discussing with police representatives and the local authority associations how the police and highway authorities might be involved in the proposed pilot autoguide system in London.

Traffic Congestion

37. Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what new technology is being introduced to alleviate traffic congestion.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: A wide variety of new technology is improving road safety and alleviating congestion.

Motorway signalling, junction control techniques, variable message signs and traffic signal co-ordination systems for urban areas are available and incorporate the latest developments in micro-electronics and information technology.

The Road Traffic (Driver Licensing and Information) Bill will facilitate the introduction of new driver information systems.

Train Accidents

38. Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many significant train accidents per million train miles there were in 1986 and 1987; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: A significant train accident is one that is actually or potentially most dangerous to passengers.

In 1986 the significant accident rate was 0·69 per million train miles and in 1987 it was 0·71 per million train miles.

Roads (London)

39. Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the capacity of the London road system to carry increased numbers of road vehicles.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Many main roads in London are already at or near capacity. Many minor roads are used as rat runs. Forecasts suggest that to the year 2001 road traffic could increase by the order of 1 per cent. to 2 per cent. per annum in outer and inner London, and by less than 1 per cent. per annum in the central area.

The approach to accommodating this growth is based on improving trunk roads to take traffic around London, supporting borough road schemes, promoting new technology to improve traffic management, encouraging better parking controls and promoting efficient and attractive public transport.

These steps are being supplemented by a series of major studies including the London assessment studies, which are looking at four areas with particularly severe transport problems.

The alterations associated with low cost, high return casualty reduction measures affect capacity on roads and at junctions. Over 170 such sites have been identified trunk roads in London, including ex. GLC roads.

West Coast Main Line

40. Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the need for investment on the west coast main line by British Rail.

Mr. Portillo: It is for British Rail, which manages the railway, to assess what investment is needed and put forward proposals. Deliveries are already under way of new class 90 locomotives and driving van trailers which will help to improve the reliability of services on the west coast main line.

Rail Safety

43. Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will next meet the chief inspecting officer of railways to discuss safety on British Rail.

Mr. Portillo: The Secretary of State meets the chief inspecting officer of railways regularly to discuss railway safety.

Ports (Congestion)

44. Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement regarding congestion at the ports.

Mr. Portillo: I refer the hon. Member to the answer which my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State gave to his question on 28 November 1988, Official Report, columns 154-55.

Road Deaths

45. Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many road deaths there were in 1987.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: There were 5,125 people killed in road accidents in Great Britain during 1987. While welcoming the fact that this is a fall of 5 per cent. on the 1986 figures, it still represents too many road deaths during the year.

Accidents

46. Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many people have been (a) killed and (b) injured in major transport disasters in (i) 1986, (ii) 1987, and (iii) 1988.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: There is no clear definition of what constitutes a major transport disaster. To attempt to classify a transport accident as a disaster by the number of deaths involved is an invidious exercise: each fatality is a disaster in its own right. The following accidents are those which have either occurred within Great Britain, or have happened to United Kingdom registered aircraft or United Kingdom registered ships. They are accidents which have attracted particular attention by their severity.

1986

9 killed, 35 injured in a rail crash on a level crossing at Lockington.

45 killed when Chinook helicopter went down in the north sea.

1 killed, 15 injured in crash of twin Otter aircraft in Scotland.

1987

189 killed, 340 injured when the roll-on roll-off ferry 'Herald of Free Enterprise' overturned off Zeebrugge.

4 killed when a train ran off the rails after a bridge was washed away at Glanrhyd in Wales.

31 killed, 29 injured in a fire at King's Cross underground station.

1988

34 killed in a railway accident at Clapham junction.

270 killed in Pan-Am air crash at Lockerbie. Of these, 244 were passengers, 15 were crew, and 11 were on the ground.

Road accidents occur much more frequently, though they do not usually lead to such major loss of life in a single accident.

In 1986, there were 248,000 accidents on public roads in Great Britain, leading to 5,382 deaths and 316,069 injuries. There were 18 accidents in each of which four or more people were killed.

In 1987, 239,000 accidents led to 5,125 deaths and 306,350 injuries. In 17 of these accidents four or more people were killed. Complete figures for 1988 will not be available before the middle of 1989.

Railway Closures

47. Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many proposals to close railway lines have been submitted to him since 1979 by British Rail; how many have been accepted; and how many stations and lines have been opened or reopened in the same period.

Mr. Portillo: Since 1979 British Rail has submitted 42 proposals to close railways lines. A total of 31 of these proposals have been accepted; one proposal has been withdrawn by British Rail; one proposal was unopposed and so did not require ministerial consent; nine proposals are still under consideration (apart from the Settle to Carlisle proposal, none of these concerns a major route or service).

A total of 132 stations and 14 lines have been opened or reopened in the same period.

Drink-Driving Campaigns

48. Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the outcome of the Christmas drink-driving campaign.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The coverage of this year's campaign in the media was impressive and helpful.

We greatly welcome the contribution of the private sector to the campaign, especially the publicans, brewers, soft drink producers, clubs, supermarkets and off-licences.

It is clear that more people are becoming aware of the dangers and that there is a long-term downward trend in the amount of drinking and driving. The test is whether fewer people are being killed and injured. It is too early for a full assessment. We shall publish figures when they are available.

Preliminary police figures suggest that a substantial increase in their enforcement effort during the full holiday period resulted in 4 per cent. more drivers failing the road-side screening test.

It has been reported that 53,000 drivers were tested during this period compared with 37,000 for the same period in 1987—an increase of 43 per cent.

Within the higher numbers of drivers tested, the proportion of those found over the limit was only one in 10 compared with one in four over the year as a whole.

A1 (Northumberland)

49. Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the design standards applied to the A1 in Northumberland include provision for safety.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Safety aspects are included in all the design standards adopted by the Department for all roads in the region.

British Rail (Investment)

50. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of the planned investment in British Rail will be used to replace out-of-date rolling stock and equipment; and how much will be used to raise capacity.

Mr. Portillo: The figures for planned British Rail investment cannot be split between investment to replace existing capacity and investment to raise capacity since most projects will include elements of both, However, about half of British Rail's planned investment in Network SouthEast over the next five years will be spent on buying new rolling stock and refurbishing some of the existing fleet. These investments are being planned to provide sufficient additional capacity to meet the load factor standards on all routes and to cope with forecast increases in peak hour demand.

Clapham Junction

51. Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many trains, and how many passengers, travel through Clapham Junction (a) per day, and (b) per peak hour.

Mr. Portillo: The latest available data indicate that during a 24-hour period approximately 1,900 loaded passenger trains carrying 340,000 passengers pass through Clapham junction. During the peak hour (between 8 and 9 in the morning) approximately 94 London-bound loaded passenger trains carrying 62,000 passengers pass through Clapham junction. Data on trains and passengers from London passing through Clapham junction during the morning peak hour are not available.

Buses (Deregulation)

52. Mr. Ken Hargreaves: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport by how much bus mileage has changed since deregulation.

Mr. Portillo: Local bus mileage in Great Britain (outside London) rose by 14 per cent. between 1985-86 and 1987-88.

82. Mr. Brandon-Bravo: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what change there has been in the number of bus operators since deregulation.

Mr. Portillo: By 1 May 1988 there had been a net increase of 465 operators running local bus services since deregulation.

Traffic (London)

53. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to receive the final report on the inquiry into traffic in London; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: We have not commissioned a report or inquiry on traffic for London as a whole.

Assessment studies are being carried out in four areas of the capital where conditions for movement are particularly severe. We expect to receive reports on options to improve conditions in the summer.

Road Traffic (Delays)

54. Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the cost to industry of road traffic delays.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The Department estimates savings in delay when individual road improvements are considered. The Department has not made an assessment of the total cost of delays on all roads.

Cycling

58. Mr. Fishburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures his Department is taking to encourage cycling.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Our concern is with encouraging safer cycling, primarily by reducing the scope for conflict with other road users.

We are continuing our programme of research and application studies. Publications giving technical advice and engineering standards are available and more are planned. I shall arrange for a set to be sent to my hon. Friend.

We are currently consulting local authorities and other organisations on a further local transport note on planning, design and legal aspects of providing for cyclists. This will give up-to-date guidance based on the results of our recent studies.

Towing Vehicles (Accidents)

59. Mr. Holt: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many accidents involving vehicles towing caravans, horse boxes, and so on, have been recorded in each of the past 10 years.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The following is the information:

Accidents involving vehicles towing caravans, trailers, etc. 1979-87

Number of accidents

Vehicle type	1979	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984	1985	1986	1987
Cars/Minibuses	1,065	1,153	1,138	1,319	1,231	1,237	1,152	1,198	1,130
LGV	246	218	233	329	216	252	292	317	281
HGV	319	243	254	313	281	292	365	359	319
Other motor vehicles[1]	567	580	560	562	564	533	527	531	475
Total	2,197	2,194	2,185	2,523	2,292	2,314	2,336	2,405	2,205

Note:
Data prior to 1979 is not readily available.
[1] Includes agricultural, service, and industrial vehicles but not 2/3 wheeled vehicles or PSVs.

Dartford-Thurrock Crossing

60. Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the financing arrangements for the Dartford-Thurrock crossing will be agreed.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The agreements between Dartford River Crossing Ltd. and the relevant banks and financial institutions were made on 8 April 1987. The concession agreement between Dartford River Crossing Ltd. and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport was signed on 9 April 1987.

Parking

61. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to receive the report of the working party on parking enforcement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Shortly.

Motorways (Accidents)

64. Mr. Irvine: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of road accidents occur on motorways.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: In Great Britain during 1987, 2 per cent. of all road accidents and 5 per cent. of fatal accidents, occurred on motorways. For comparison, motorways carried 15 per cent. of all traffic in 1987.

Roads (Congestion)

67. Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate his Department has made of the level of congestion on roads in London and south-east England over the next 10 years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Brent, East (Mr. Livingstone) on road conditions in London. Forecasts suggest that road traffic in the south-east outside London could increase by the order of 3 per cent. per annum to the year 2001.

Priority is being given in the national trunk road programme to schemes aimed primarily at relieving congestion, providing environmental relief and reducing casualties. Since April 1986 10 major schemes costing approximately £235 million have been completed in London and the south-east. Another 94 schemes costing approximately £2 billion are in the forward national programme at various stages of preparation. A number of smaller schemes are included in my Department's regional programme and we are supporting the Local highway authorities' road building programmes through the transport supplementary grant. A review of the national road programme will be published in the spring.

Disabled People

69. Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress his Department has made in assisting the disabled in their transport needs this year; and what progress he expects to make next year.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Measures in 1988 included the following:

Announcement that from early 1989 all new London taxis must be wheelchair accessible;

Widespread introduction of design features to help elderly and disabled passengers use buses more easily, following guidelines drawn up by the Department and the disabled persons transport advisory committee;
Tours of adapted demonstration bus lent by the Department to 36 operators around the country;
Advice and information to nearly 6,000 disabled people by the Department's mobility advice and vehicle information service (MAVIS);
Practical assessment and advice at the centre for some 400 disabled people on driving and car choice.

The Department will continue to seek further improvements to help people with disabilities in the coming year. Particular priority will be given to encouraging further improvements in bus and coach design. The Department will be organising another mobility roadshow in June 1989.

Motorways (Congestion)

70. Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to relieve traffic congestion in the motorway system; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: By carrying out the road improvements detailed in the roads White Paper "Policy for Roads in England: 1987" as quickly as possible and by aiming to minimise the delays at maintenance sites by careful programming, improved traffic management and by the use of lane rental contracts which give an incentive for early completion.

Barnstaple-Exeter Railway

71. Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make funds available to British Rail to enable the Barnstaple to Exeter line to remain open.

Mr. Portillo: The public service obligation grant payable to British Rail is a block grant, not related to any individual line or service, and I have no powers to earmark funds.

London Rail Study

73. Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will publish the findings of the central London rail study.

Mr. Portillo: We expect to publish the findings of the central London rail study shortly.

Trunk Roads

74. Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will carry out his next review of national trunk roads.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: A review of the trunk road programme is currently in progress. We expect to make an announcement in the spring.

Roads (North-East)

68. Mr. Jack Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any plans to improve the road system in the north-east region.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The northern region has 18 schemes in the national roads programme at a current projected cost of £170 million. Spending on all schemes, national regional and maintenance, in the current year is estimated at over £50 million. The Department is also contributing in this financial year over £12 million in transport supplementary grant to assist local authorities in the region of constructing roads of more than local importance.

75. Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give details of his plans to improve the road system in north-east England.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The Department's plans for developing the road infrastructure in the northern region are concentrated on the provision of a new north-south bypass to the west of Newcastle; the systematic improvement of the A1 north of Morpeth and the two main east-west routes—the A66 and A69; and the improvement of the main national routes into the area from the south. Other important schemes planned to start during the next few years include a western bypass of Durham City on the A167 and a bypass of Kenton Bank Foot and Woolsington on the A696.

Urban Traffic

76. Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has about the likely increase of traffic in urban areas.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The Department prepares forecasts for national traffic growth. Where a trunk road scheme is being assessed, local forecasts are made, reflecting local growth in population and economic activity.

Factors such as availability of public transport, congestion and parking are also taken into consideration for urban schemes. The Department does not produce traffic forecasts for urban areas in general.

London Transport (Safety)

77. Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he next expects to meet the chairman of London Regional Transport to discuss standards of safety on London Buses and Underground services.

Mr. Portillo: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, has asked London Regional Transport to make regular reports to him on their progress in implementing the Fennell report. He and I will meet the chairman as necessary to discuss these matters.

Bypasses

78. Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many bypasses have been built since 1979.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: A total of 95 bypasses and relief roads have been built since 1979, representing 40 per cent. of new national road mileage.

Health and Safety Executive

79. Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many inquiries into accidents which came within his responsibility have been carried out by the Health and Safety Executive in the past 10 years for which records are available.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: None, although I understand that the Health and Safety Executive has provided assistance to my Department on at least 10 occasions when railway accidents were involved.

Roadbuilding

80. Mr. David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures he is taking to cut the time it takes to build roads.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: We have set targets for reducing the average time taken to progress a scheme from entering the road programme to opening for traffic by the order of a quarter. In introducing the changes we have taken care to ensure that the rights of interested parties will not be affected.

Wildlife

81. Mr. Nicholas Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what account he takes of the protection of wildlife when building new roads.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Protecting wildlife is carefully considered in our planning. We consult both national wildlife bodies such as the Nature Conservancy Council and local wildlife groups throughout the process.

The effects of new roads are minimised by careful design. Special measures are taken to protect wildlife including deer runs and badger tunnels to provide for safe crossing, fencing and reflectors to discourage animals from straying onto roads.

Tree and shrub planting, which is a major landscape activity of the Department, creates invaluable wildlife habitat. The Department's publication "Transport and the Environment", which is in the Library, gives further details of some of these measures.

Pavements (Damage)

84. Mr. Fearn: to ask the Secretary of State for Transport what are the figures for the last five years of the cost of pavement damage, caused by heavy goods vehicles.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: National data on the cost of pavement damage are not available. The total road track costs in the United Kingdom and the amounts allocated to heavy goods vehicles are as follows:

£ million

Year	Total road costs	Road costs allocated to heavy goods vehicles
1984-85	3,496	950
1985-86	3,656	1,035
1986-87	3,863	1,060
1987-88	4,058	1,095
1988-89	4,218	1,165

M42 (Extension)

85. Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he anticipates announcing the preferred option for the western orbital route extension to the M42 to the west of the west midlands conurbation.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The work of evaluating the large response to the public consultation is progressing well. We hope to achieve the spring 1989 target for an announcement.

Clapham Train Accident

86. Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the provision of compensation for the families of those who died, and for those who were seriously injured, in the Clapham train disaster.

Mr. Portillo: Compensation is a matter for the British Railways Board, whose policy is that all claims will be considered sympathetically and as quickly as possible. The Board has made immediate payments of £2,000 to next of kin who indicated that they required help, and has announced that it will pay £10,000 for a bereavement under section 1a of the Fatal Accidents Act 1976 rather than the sum of £3,500 which the Act requires.

87. Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he has taken to enhance road safety for children and young people in urban areas.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Cutting child casualties is one of our top priorities. Local authorities, schools and parents all have key parts to play. Initiatives include co-operation with local authorities to foster low-cost engineering measures that have been shown particularly to benefit child cyclists and pedestrians; experiments in two local authority areas to develop effective methods of safety education in schools and the "Lessons for Life" campaign launched in September aimed at helping parents play a full role in enhancing their children's road safety. For older children we have worked with the road safety officers to produce a special highway code and teenagers will particularly benefit from our motorcycle training and testing proposals.

We shall continue to pay particular attention to developing measures to reduce child casualties on the roads.

90. Ms. Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to improve road safety.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Glanford and Scunthorpe (Mr. Morley) earlier today.

92. Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the effectiveness of local authority actions to improve urban road safety.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: We welcome the considerable enthusiasm and activity of many local authorities in carrying out their responsibilities for improving safety on their roads. Our aim is to encourage and assist all local authorities to follow the example of the best.

Local authority initiatives are crucial to urban safety. We agreed last summer with local authority leaders a high priority and joint approach for tackling road casualties.

We work closely with road safety officers and others on publicity campaigns and child safety measures. In co-operation with the institution of Highways and Transportation we plan to publish guidelines for local highway authorities on the application of area-wide urban safety techniques.

Railway Inspectorate

91. Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will initiate a review of the role of the railway inspectorate.

Mr. Portillo: A review of the railway inspectorate's role was commissioned by the Secretary of State in 1986. Its terms of reference included examination of the inspectorate's present role, and the formulation of recommendations as to how improvements could be made to ensure the most efficient and effective way of administering Government railway safety responsibilities in the longer term. A report was presented in 1987 which included numerous recommendations, many of which have already been implemented. A copy of the report is in the Library of the House.

Air Services (Manchester)

95. Mr. Favell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the progress of negotiations for increased air services between Manchester and New York.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: At the most recent negotiations on greater access for United States carriers to serve Manchester airport, held in London between 4 and 6 January 1989, the two sides could not reach a mutually acceptable conclusion.

The Government recognise the importance of these additional services into Manchester airport and are therefore seeking further discussions.

Manchester Air Disaster

96. Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to publish the inquiry report into the Manchester air disaster in 1985.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: A copy of the report was submitted to the Secretary of State on 15 December. Copies have also been sent to the persons whose reputation might be adversely affected by the report, in accordance with the Civil Aviation (Investigation of Accidents) Regulations 1983.

A period of 28 days is being allowed for affected persons to request a review board. Provided no review is requested, the report should be published in March.

Bus Lanes

97. Mr. Roger King: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any proposals to issue guidelines on the introduction of bus lanes in urban areas.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: We published a traffic advisory leaflet in March 1988 giving technical guidelines on the use of with-flow bus lanes. I shall send a copy to my hon. Friend. Further guidance is in course of preparation covering other kinds of bus priority measures.

Braking Lights

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if his Department is aware of any evidence linking the dazzle of rear braking lights fitted on the rear windows of motor vehicles and serious injuries and deaths on British roads;

(2) if his Department has any information on the fitting as standard by manufacturers of rear braking lights in the rear windows of motor vehicles;

(3) if he has any plans to introduce legislation to prohibit the installation of rear braking lights in the rear windows of motor vehicles.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: We are not aware of any serious injuries or deaths on British roads due to dazzle from brake lights fitted in the rear windows of cars.

Volvo fit a centre brake light in the rear window of their cars as standard.

We have issued for consultation revised vehicle lighting regulations which will prohibit the fitting of brake lights in the rear windows of new cars in future unless they are half as bright as normal brake lights. Such a lamp should provide the benefit which the centre brake light can bring without the dangers of unwanted dazzle to which the hon. Member refers.

Crash Helmets

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any plans to encourage the wearing of hard hats by cyclists; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The Department strongly encourages the voluntary use of pedal cycle helmets and will continue to do so.

Over half of all pedal cycle casualties involve head injuries. It is sensible for cyclists to wear a good quality helmet made to the British Standard BS6863. Such helmets are now available nationwide.

Concorde (West Cornwall)

Mr. Mudd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many complaints he has received concerning Concorde's sonic boom from persons living in west Cornwall for each of the years 1985, 1986, 1987 and 1988.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The booms are normally heard during the winter. The figures for the whole of Cornwall for each winter season (November-April) are as follows:

	Number
1984-85	29
1985-86	12
1986-87	14
1987-88	14

Ministerial Advisers

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the ministerial advisers appointed in his Department for each year since 1979, the salary each person received, whether paid directly or to another employer, and the duties undertaken, whether solely in his Department or in conjunction with other Departments; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The following special advisers have been employed in the Department since 1979:

I. Heggie—Special Adviser to the Minister of Transport on transport issues from 1 November 1979 to 31 January 1981. Paid directly.

Sir John Hoskyns—Special Adviser to the Secretary of State for Transport on transport issues from 12 July 1982 to 21 June 1986. Paid directly.

Mrs. K. C. Ramsay—Special (political) Adviser to the Secretary of State for Transport from 1 September 1983 to 21 May 1986. Paid directly.

Miss E. Buchanan—Special (political) Adviser to the Secretary of State for Transport from 1 September 1987 to date. Paid directly.

It is not the practice to reveal the salaries of individual advisers as they are individually negotiated in relation to previous outside earnings and are therefore confidential. The salary spine covers rates from points 1 to 28, £13,975 to £40,520.

Channel Tunnel (London Terminal)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what degree of private sector involvement he anticipates will be involved in the construction of (a) the second London terminal for the Channel tunnel and (b) the fast rail link between the tunnel and terminal through Kent.

Mr. Portillo: This remains to be seen. But I would like to see a significant degree of such involvement in both projects.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his policy with regard to British Rail having sole determination of the location of the second London terminal for the Channel tunnel; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: Government subsidy to British Rail in connection with its Channel tunnel services is prohibited by section 42 of the Channel Tunnel Act 1987. British Rail cannot be expected to choose a location for its second London terminal which it does not consider to be in its best commercial interests based on passenger needs. British Rail's proposal will of course need my approval and that of Parliament.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what representations have been made to his Department against the possible location of the second London terminal for the Channel tunnel at King's Cross;

(2) what representations he has received in favour of (a) Stratford and (b) King's Cross for the location of the second London terminal for the Channel tunnel.

Mr. Portillo: In addition to representations from the hon. Member, I have received a number of representations from local authorities and other interested bodies in favour of Stratford, and again King's Cross, as the site for a second London terminal. Equally, I have received a number of representations from hon. Members and others in the north of England who favour King's Cross as against Stratford on the ground that it will make possible better links to the north. I have explained to all those who have made representations that the choice is British Rail's responsibility.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the consultants were appointed to consider the feasibility of Stratford as a location for the second London terminal for the Channel tunnel; and when they are due to present their report.

Mr. Portillo: I am aware that British Rail has carried out such an assessment, but I do not yet have details.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has regarding the estimated cost of construction of a second London terminal for the Channel tunnel at (a) Stratford and (b) King's Cross.

Mr. Portillo: I understand that it is British Rail's view that a terminal at King's Cross would cost more than one at Stratford, but would be more commercially viable because of its more central location.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects the second London terminal for the Channel tunnel to be operational; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: It is too early to say.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what contribution has been made by his Department to the selection process for the site of the second London terminal for the Channel tunnel; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: None, but the investment will need Government approval and Parliament will consider the necessary Bill.

Channel Tunnel (Kent Link)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to receive British Rail's decision in respect of the Channel tunnel preferred link through Kent.

Mr. Portillo: I understand that British Rail hopes to announce its preferred route corridor in the next few weeks.

Carlisle-Settle Railway Line

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a further statement on the future of the Carlisle to Settle railway line.

Mr. Portillo: I am not yet in a position to do so.

Underground Stations (Radio)

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of London Underground stations use radio underground.

Mr. Portillo: Train radio is in operation throughout the underground network. London Underground Limited is implementing a programme for the introduction of police and staff radio at 42 deep-level stations representing a third of sub-surface stations. Police radio is now in use at 26 of these stations and staff radio at eight. London Underground Limited intends that police radio will be in use at all 42 stations by the end of February and staff radio by the end of April, and is preparing proposals to extend both facilities to all sub-surface stations.

London Underground (Staff Training)

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many days safety training per year staff on London Underground receive.

Mr. Portillo: This is a matter for which London Underground Limited is responsible but I understand that all station and train staff will now receive one and a half days training in fire and emergency procedures a year.

Rail Link (Manchester International Airport)

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on current progress on the rail link to Manchester International airport.

Mr. Portillo: I am awaiting a joint submission from the Greater Manchester PTE and British Rail on the financing of this link.

Rail Services (Gloucester-London)

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will discuss the need to improve the frequency of direct trains between Gloucester and London when he next meets the chairman of British Rail.

Mr. Portillo: This is a matter for the British Railways Board.

Air Services (Manchester-Singapore)

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress he has made in negotiations to increase the number of air services between Manchester and Singapore; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Discussions were held in London this week between United Kingdom and Singapore civil aviation officials on arrangements for the provision of air services between the United Kingdom and Singapore. The discussions made useful progress and they are expected to continue in Singapore within the next two months.

Fennell Report (Implementation)

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much extra funding has been provided so far to implement the findings of the Fennell report.

Mr. Portillo: The external financing limit for London Regional Transport for the current financial year has been increased to allow for £28 million of additional safety-related expenditure following the fire at King's Cross. The Government's public expenditure plans for 1989-90 to 1991-92 make provision in full for the proposals put forward by LRT for spending on Underground safety totalling £266 million.

London Underground (Fires)

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many call-outs the London fire brigade received in each of the last five years for fires on the London Underground.

Mr. Portillo: London Underground Ltd. do not have information available in the form requested for the period specified. I understand that the numbers of fire and smoke incidents recorded by London Underground for the past five years are as follows:

	Number
1984	520
1985	335
1986	505
1987	844
1988	1,248

Changes in reporting arrangements within London Underground during the period mean that one year is not strictly comparable with another. These changes include the ones made after the King's Cross fire, as I indicated in the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Newham, North-West (Mr. Banks) on 10 January.

Written Answers to Questions

Tuesday 17 January 1989

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Exposure Draft 42

Mr. Heddle: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he proposes to make a statement on Exposure draft 42, "Accounting For Special Purposes Transactions".

Mr. Atkins: My Department commented on Exposure draft 42 last summer. My hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Corporate Affairs subsequently made an announcement in August on related matters: changes to the definition of a subsidiary, which are now included in the Companies Bill; and the circumstances in which it may be necessary, in order for group accounts to show the required true and fair view, to treat a body which is not legally a subsidiary as though it were one. I have no plans to make any further statement in connection with Exposure draft 42.

Single Market

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster why, in the single European market literature that has so far been published by Her Majesty's Government, there is no mention of the common agricultural policy for 1992 and onwards.

Mr. Atkins: The Department of Trade and Industry's single market pack describes the available details of the European Community's single market programme. Common policies in the agricultural area are of long standing and the implications of completing the single market for them are generally limited to the agrimonetary system on which the Commission is due to report shortly.

Companies (Wrongful Trading)

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many prosecutions have been brought against companies for wrongful trading under the Insolvency Act 1986; if he will list the companies concerned; and how many of these prosecutions have (a) been completed and (b) resulted in conviction.

Mr. Atkins: Wrongful trading is not a criminal offence under the Insolvency Act 1986. It is a civil remedy available to the liquidator of a company in insolvent liquidation. My Department does not maintain records of wrongful trading actions.

Post Office

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he intends to bring forward legislation to remove the monopoly for postal items under £1; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer that I gave to him on 16 January 1989, Official Report, column 16.

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what discussions he has or proposes to have with the chairman of the Post Office, following the disruption of the post in the London south-west postal districts over the Christmas period; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: My right hon. Friend and I meet the chairman of the Post Office at regular intervals to discuss a range of matters of current interest.

32

Export Licences

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what products exported from the United Kingdom require export licences; and what is the average period of time taken for the issue of such licences.

Mr. Alan Clark: Products requiring export licences are listed in the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1987 (S.I. 1987 No. 2070), as amended. Applications for licences are considered on their merits. The time taken to process these is dependent upon the nature of the product, its destination and possible end use. It is not possible to state an average period of time for the processing of such licences, but for non-sensitive applications my Department would normally expect to issue a licence within three weeks.

Century Newspapers Ltd., Belfast

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on his reasons for not immediately referring the takeover bid for Century Press by Thomson Regional Newspapers to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 16 January 1989]: The application by Thomson Regional Newspapers has been made under the financial urgency provisions in section 58(3)(a) of the Fair Trading Act 1973. This legislation allows the Secretary of State one month in which to consent to the transfer or refer it to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission for inquiry. No decision on the application will be taken until all relevant factors have been taken into account, including representations by third parties.

EC (Structural Funds)

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the areas of Derbyshire which he has submitted for consideration to the European Commission under its review of the European Economic Community's structural funds; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 16 January 1989]: The European Commission is to draw up a list of areas to receive support from the Community structural funds, including the European regional development fund, under the funds' new objective 2 (conversion of industrial regions). We believe that the following parts of Derbyshire satisfy criteria in Council regulation (EEC) No. 20522/88 qualifying them for consideration for selection, and have asked the Commission to include them in the list:

Chesterfield Travel-to-Work Area (TTWA)
The Derbyshire parts of: Mansfield TTWA
Sheffield TTWA
Worksop TTWA
Derby City Urban Programme Area.

The Commission's decision is expected during

EC (Takeover and Merger Policy)

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement setting out the respective powers and responsibilities of his Department, the Monopolies and Mergers Commission and the European Economic Community Commission in relation to the takeover of United Kingdom companies; what will be the impact on these responsibilities of the proposals being considered by the European Economic Community on takeover and merger policy; and if he will make a statement on the implications of these supervisory and control powers for the anticipated bids for GEC.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 16 January 1989]: The powers and responsibilities of my Department and the Monopolies and Mergers Commission are contained in the Fair Trading Act 1973. Under that Act the Director General of Fair Trading has a duty to advise the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on whether a merger or merger proposal should be referred to the MMC for further investigation and report. The EC Commission has power to enforce the competition rules in articles 85 and 86 of the treaty of Rome, which may apply to certain mergers. Regulation of the market conduct of takeovers in the United Kingdom is carried out by the panel on takeovers and mergers. There is currently no provision in EC law in respect of such regulation. Discussions are currently in train on a Commission proposal for an EC merger control regulation, and proposals for an EC takeover directive are due to be published soon. Issues of principle and detail are outstanding. It is too early to assess the implications. Were a bid to be made for GEC, it would be considered under existing procedures, in so far as they may be applicable.

Dish Aerial Receiver Units

Mr. Dykes: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will abolish without delay the currently applicable £10 licence charge payable to his Department at the moment of purchase of satellite television dish aerial receiver units, in view of enhanced consumer demand for such units.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 16 January 1989]: I have nothing to add at this stage to my reply of 20 December 1988 to my hon. Friend at column 154. My right hon. and noble Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry will, however, make a statement as soon as possible.

Net Book Agreement

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what evidence he has about the implications of the net book agreement for the number of independent and chartered booksellers, and their financial viability.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 13 January 1989]: The implications of the net book agreement for independent and chartered booksellers were among the matters taken into account by the restrictive practices court in 1962 when it considered the agreement under the Restrictive Trade Practices Act 1956. The court then judged that the restrictions in the agreement did not operate against the public interest. Under present legislation, it is open to the Director General of Fair Trading to apply to the court for a review of its decision if he considers that there has been a material change in the circumstances on which the original judgment was based. My Department has no role in this process and does not therefore collect the kind of evidence to which the hon. Member refers.

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he intends to publish his Department's review of the net book agreement.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 13 January 1989]: My Department is not engaged in such a review. Under the Restrictive Trade Practices Act 1976 and the Resale Prices Act 1976, the review of voluntary agreements such as the net book agreement is a matter for the restrictive practices court, on application by the Director General of Fair Trading.

EC (Research Council)

Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what progress was made at the meeting of the Research Council of European Community Ministers on 15 December; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: I represented Her Majesty's Government at the meeting of the Community's Council of Ministers (Research) in Brussels on 15 December.

The Council adopted a common position on Joule, a Community programme of research in the field of non-nuclear energy and efficient use of energy supplies with Community funding of 122 million ecu (£79 million) over 39 months. The programme will cover rational use of energy including energy efficiency, conservation and storage, renewable energy sources including solar, wind and geothermal, and research into hydrocarbons and the better use of solid fuels.

The Council also adopted a common position on a new Brite/Euram research programme combining research previously carried out under separate programmes in the fields of industrial technologies and advanced materials. The programme will provide Community funding of 499·5 million ecu (£324 million) over four years with the aim of helping to improve the competitive position of the Community's manufacturing industries. A total of 35 million ecu (£23 million) of the total will be devoted to aeronautical research.

Export Services

Mr. Knapman: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement about the Government's review of export services.

Mr. Alan Clark: Following the export services review foreshadowed in the White Paper "DTI—the department for Enterprise" (Cm. 278), DTI export services have been strengthened to meet exporters' needs more effectively, and simplified in their presentation so that businesses, particularly small and medium-sized enterprises new to exporting, will find them easier to use. As the export initiative, the services form part of the DTI enterprise initiative, a comprehensive package designed to help business improve its competitiveness both at home and overseas.

The main improvements to the export services are as follows:

(a) Introduction of new export advisory service to be administered in co-operation with the Association of British Chambers of Commerce (ABCC), leading regional chambers, and in some cases export enterprise centres. The Government will provide up to £2·25 million of funding on a tapering basis over a maximum of three years. The scheme involves the appointment of 31 export development advisors nationwide who have considerable private sector exporting expertise. They will take a positive role in identifying potential exporters and offering practical assistance tailored to the specific requirements of individual firms.

(b) Greater involvement of the private sector in delivering export services and advice to potential exporters. This includes:

(i) contracting out the administration of the export marketing research scheme to the ABCC for three years from 1 December 1988;

(ii) enabling private sector contractors to compete with the Department for the provision of stand design and installation at overseas trade fairs which the Government support; with effect from the 1989-90 financial year;

(iii) faster delivery of export intelligence information by contracting out to a private sector firm the marketing, sale, and delivery in the United Kingdom of overseas market information provided by diplomatic service posts (and other sources);

(iv) setting up a three-year pilot study in conjunction with The Netherlands-British chamber of commerce to provide new export counselling services to British companies which will complement the work of our diplomatic service posts; if successful, similar schemes could follow elsewhere in Europe.

(c) Improvements to the quality of management of the export services and to staff training. We have introduced a system under which an industrial market research company will monitor standards of export service delivery worldwide, enabling us to ensure that export services remain relevant to customers' needs. A major new training programme for DTI export staff has been implemented. This will be augmented with the support of the CBI, ABCC, and Institute of Export by a new programme of short-term attachments for DTI export staff to gain first-hand experience in exporting companies.

(d) Better marketing of the Government's export services. We are issuing in 17 January 1989 a new introductory guide to exporting designed to help firms new to exporting understand the exporting process, and how the Government can help. It is accompanied by a new promotional video. This will be supported by a sustained campaign in newspapers and technical journals advertising our services.

(e) Rationalisation from 1 April 1989 of the charges made for Government export services. We will extend charges to cover advice and information on overseas markets provided by diplomatic service posts abroad in response to specific requests from British companies. This will enable us to offer a more professional and cost-effective service, and to concentrate resources on the services of most value to exporters. We will introduce at the same time a simplified payments system, based on the use of a servicecard specifically for export services. This will be accepted by all diplomatic service posts overseas and relevant Government offices in the United Kingdom. It will be operated for us by a private sector company.

(f) The introduction from 1 April 1989 of a scheme in which my Department and companies will jointly provide funding for training people from overseas who have, or may in future hold, important procurement responsibilities. The aim will be to give the individuals concerned the opportunity to acquire experience in British companies and of British business and manufacturing methods. This will strengthen ties between our exporting companies and their overseas customers.

Other improvements to the services include closer integration of the export initiative with other elements of the enterprise initiative, particularly the consultancy in export strategy available under the marketing initiative; the development of an export market information centre in the DTI; and restyled Government export publications and trade literature.

The new and improved services will help to ensure that smaller companies and those new to exporting receive better Government support. The strengthened export initiative should also benefit larger and more experienced companies, who make a major contribution to British exports. They play a vital role in retaining a British presence in overseas markets by winning large export contracts which provide considerable numbers of sub-contracts of benefit to smaller and medium-sized firms. To succeed in these highly competitive areas, and to secure the deals which provide such striking advertisements for British technology, consultancy and management skills, our companies must be able to compete on equal terms with their foreign counterparts. The Government offer a wide range of project services to enable them to do so, and have a continuing commitment to winning major projects overseas. These services include the aid and trade provision, which is Government-to-Government aid, within which is the global soft loan facility introduced in November 1985. The Overseas Projects Board will continue to give its valued guidance to us in these activities.

The British Overseas Trade Board will continue to be closely involved in the planning and operation of the export services, in promoting greater awareness of overseas markets and best practices in exporting, and in promoting British business overseas. In addition, it will in future be responsible for helping to develop a corporate plan, ensuring that our export promotion strategy and priorities reflect market developments and businesses' needs.

HEALTH

Salmonella

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he will publish a summary of the evidence in the possession of his Department at the time when the Protein Processing Orders 1981 were drafted about the proportion of poultry affected by salmonella.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Agriculture Ministers carried out a process of consultation on proposals for the control of protein processing in 1978 and again in 1980 before the making of the Diseases of Animals (Protein Processing) Order 1981 and the Importation of Processed Animal Protein Order 1981. The central public health laboratory carried out two surveys of frozen whole chickens the results of which were as follows:

Year	Number of samples	Salmonella from
		Number	Per cent.
1970-73	495	168	33·9
1979-80	100	79	79·0

Consultations took place against the background of growing concern about the increasing incidence of salmonella in livestock.

Since the making of the orders the public health laboratory service has carried out a further survey of frozen whole chickens, the results of which were as follows:

Year	Number of samples	Salmonella from
		Number	Per cent.
1987	101	65	64·4

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give the figures for reported cases of human salmonellosis for December 1988 as soon as they are available; and what were the figures for each of the previous 12 months.

Mr. Freeman: Laboratory reports on identifications of salmonella infections in man are collated weekly. The following table gives provisional four-weekly totals, to week 52, of laboratory reports of salmonellosis submitted to the public health laboratory service in 1988.

1988 (provisional) four-weekly period

Weeks	Reports
1-4	1,072
5-6	779
9-12	788
13-16	776
17-20	1,221
21-24	1,579
25-28	2,143
29-32	2,803
33-36	[1]2,033
37-40	3,585
41-44	3,348
45-48	2,636
49-52	1,360
Total reports	24,123

[1] Postal strike.

NHS Staff (Grading)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many nursing, midwifery and health visiting staff from each of the old grades have been assimilated to each of the new grades in the current clinical grading structure in Nottingham district health authority.

Mr. Mellor: The information requested is given in the table.

The new clinical grading structure for nursing, midwifery and health visitor staff—numbers of old clinical grades assimilated to each of the new clinical grades on the basis of duties and responsibilities on 1st April 1988: Nottingham DHA

Previous grade	Staff in post[1]	A	B	C	D	E	F	G[2]	H	I
Nursing Auxiliary	1,263·58	1,147·18	114·40	2·00	—	—	—	—	—	—
Staff Nursery Nurse	34·50	—	32·00	2·50	—	—	—	—	—	—
Enrolled Nurse[3]	799·75	—	—	131·96	652·83	14·96	—	—	—	—
Enrolled District Nurse[3]	27·30	—	—	—	26·30	1·00	—	—	—	—
Senior Enrolled Nurse[3]	103·45	—	—	1·40	83·55	18·00	0·50	—	—	—
Staff Nurse[3]	1,045·30	—	—	—	215·53	788·18	41·59	—	—	—
Staff Midwife[3]	120·82	—	—	—	23·00	97·82	—	—	—	—
Deputy Sister[3]	50·13	—	—	—	—	2·00	48·13	—	—	—
Nursing Sister II[3]	590·90	—	—	—	—	—	260·86	328·04	2·00	—
Midwifery Sister II[3]	153·10	—	—	—	—	—	23·13	129·97	—	—
District Nurse (Sister II)[3]	112·04	—	—	—	—	—	—	112·04	—	—
Nursing Sister I	6·00	—	—	—	—	—	—	6·00	—	—
Midwifery Sister I	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
Health Visitor	124·45	—	—	—	—	—	—	123·45	1·00	—
Senior Nurse 8	71·60	—	—	—	—	—	2·00	39·60	27·00	3·00
Senior Nurse 8 Midwife	7·00	—	—	—	—	—	—	7·00	—	—
Senior Nurse 7	45·00	—	—	—	—	—	—	5·00	8·00	32·00
Senior Nurse 7 (Midwife)	10·93	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	9·00	1·93
Clinical Teacher	26·16	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	26·16	—
Fieldwork Teacher	14·00	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	14·00	—
Practical Work Teacher	24·00	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	24·00	—
Tutor	38·03	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	38·03
Tutor Midwife	8·00	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	8·00
Post Basic Students
Enrolled	35·00	—	—	35·00	—	—	—	—	—	—
Staff Nurse	183·00	—	—	—	183·00	—	—	—	—	—
Deputy Sister	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
Sister II	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
Others	2·00	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	2·00
TOTALS	4,896·04	1,147·18	146·40	172·86	1,184·21	921·96	376·21	751·10	111·16	84·96

[1] Whole-time equivalents.
[2] Excludes some additional "G" posts which health authorities have indicated they intend to create in future on existing two-aister wards.
[3] Excludes Post Basic Students.

Abortion

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps are taken by his Department to ensure the implementation of his requirement that centres where late abortions are preformed have immediate access to resuscitation equipment in the event that the child is born alive.

Mr. Freeman: Places in the private sector approved to carry out abortions after the 20th week of gestation are required to give additional assurances as to the availability of resuscitation equipment, including suction apparatus, incubator and oxygen supply. These facilities are monitored by the Department's medical/nursing officers during the course of routine unannounced visits.

General Practitioners (Pay)

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he proposes to review the funding arrangements for general practitioners so that they are paid according to the number of patients they attract, and the quality of services they provide.

Mr. Mellor: The White Paper "Promoting Better Health" (Cm. 249) announced a range of changes to the general practitioner's contract with the National Health Service which includes raising the proportion of income which is related to the number of patients on a GP's list and linking pay more directly than at present to service and performance. The Government are currently consulting the GPs' representatives on the arrangements necessary to introduce these changes.

Health and Local Authorities (Co-operation)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give details of plans currently being considered within his Department to improve liaison and co-operation between local authorities and district health authorities.

Mr. Mellor: Our current examination of community care policy following Sir Roy Griffiths report includes consideration of the need for any changes to be made to the current arrangements for joint planning between health and local authorities. We continue strongly to encourage authorities to work and plan together within existing systems to develop a co-ordinated range of services.

Ethnic Monitoring

Ms. Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on ethnic monitoring in mental hospitals.

Mr. Freeman: Information on the ethnic origins of detained mental patients in special hospitals has been recorded for some years. We are now exploring the feasibility of collecting data on the ethnicity of patients in NHS hospitals, including mental hospitals. If feasible, implementation would take some time because of the need to adapt health authorities' current data collection systems and in order to link with any question of ethnicity in the 1991 census.

Hospital Building Programme

Mr. Hind: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the progress of the Government's hospital building programme.

Mr. Freeman: Information held centrally shows there are currently 528 health building schemes, each costing over £1 million, at various stages of planning, design and construction with an estimated total value of £4·1 billion. In the next financial year capital expenditure of £1·2 billion is planned, an increase in real terms of 43 per cent. since 1979.

Health Authority Managers

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the number of bonus payments made to health authority managers since their introduction; if he will list them to date; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: Health authority general managers have been eligible for performance-related increases in salary since 1 September 1987 and senior (second-in-line) managers since 1 September 1988. The numbers of awards notified to the Department to date are as follows:

	1987	1988
General Managers	690	668
Senior Managers	—	601

Individual awards cannot be listed because they are based on confidential assessments of individual performance.

The performance-related pay scheme is working well and we shall shortly be extending it to a wider group of managers at region, district and unit level.

Health Services (Duplication)

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the steps he is taking to reduce the duplication of functions between local government social services departments and family practitioner committees and district health authorities.

Mr. Mellor: Health authorities, local authorities and family practitioners committees are required to co-operate in the planning and delivery of their services. We strongly encourage them to plan and work jointly, and with voluntary organisations, in order to minimise the possibility of any gaps or duplications in their activities and to promote the development of a co-ordinated range of services.

Hospitals (Opting Out)

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he will issue guidelines about the involvement of regional, district and unit general managers in discussion about the possibility of individual hospitals opting out; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The Government's proposals for the future management and structure of the Health Service will be published shortly in a White Paper.

Privatisation

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he will publish any guidelines issued by his own

Department to regional health authorities on the privatisation of their services; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: Health authorities were asked in September 1983 to put their domestic, catering and laundry services out to tender. Detailed guidance has been issued by the Department to authorities on how the process should be carried out. Copies of the most recent guidance (November 1987) which updated and refined earlier guidance have been placed in the library. We encourage health authorities to consider the possibility of competitive tendering in any area of their services where this is seen to offer scope for increased effectiveness and value for money. Progress has been made by authorities in extending the range of services subjected to tendering.

Politically Sensitive Issues

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he will publish any guidelines issued by his Department to regional and district health authorities in the involvement of their employees in public discussion on politically sensitive issues; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: No. All NHS employees are expected to conduct themselves in a manner appropriate to their position. Their conduct is, however, a matter for their employing health authorities and there are no centrally issued guidelines.

Listeria

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Wakefield, Official Report, 8 December, column 339, what procedures exist which would effect the withdrawal of cooked food in sealed packages which contain listeria monocytogenes.

Mr. Freeman: The procedures for dealing with cooked ready-to-eat food contaminated with a pathogenic micro-organism depend upon the circumstances of each case. A locally distributed food can be dealt with by local authorities using powers under the Food Act 1984. More widely distributed food may require rapid communication by the Department to inform and advise all local authorities on the extent and type of local action.

Cook-Chill Catering

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Wakefield, Official Report, 1 December, column 384, on what date Mr. Arthur Pinegar of the Leeds public health laboratory ceased his involvement in private research concerning cook-chill catering.

Mr. Freeman: I refer the hon. Member to the reply to him by my predecessor on 1 December 1988, at column 384.

The public health laboratory service has no further details of when Mr. Pinegar ceased those activities to which the hon. Member refers.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy to ensure that hospital patients in health authorities which introduce cook-chill catering also have the opportunity to consume food produced by conventional methods as an alternative.

Mr. Freeman: Health authorities are responsible for determining the delivery of catering services and take into account the needs of the hospital patients.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if it is possible for cook-chill food from commercial catering companies to be supplied at hospitals with central production units within the requirements of his Department's 1980 guidelines on pre-cooked food in catering.

Mr. Freeman: Yes. Health authorities should satisfy themselves that any cook-chill food from outside sources meets the recommendations in the 1980 guidelines.

Medical Physicists

Mr. Latham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps his Department intends to take to improve morale and pay prospects for medical physicists working in the National Health Service; and what recent representations he has received from the Institute of Physical Sciences in Medicine in that regard.

Mr. Mellor: The management side of the Scientific and Professional Staffs Council has set up a working party to investigate the scale of reported problems of recruitment and retention of medical physicists and other scientists. I have received no recent representations from the Institute of Physical Sciences in Medicine about these matters.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the Yorkshire regional health authority has sought the opinion of district health authorities within the region regarding the implementation of cook-chill catering.

Mr. Freeman: Yes. It consulted on a strategy document between 25 March and 30 June last year.

Radiation (Exeter)

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health who will provide the finance required by the Exeter health authority to provide compensation for its patients given excess doses of radiation;

(2) what additional funds his Department will provide to enable Exeter health authority to pay substantial compensation to patients given excess doses of radiation.

Mr. Mellor: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Devon, North (Mr. Speller) on 20 Decembr 1988, at column 251.

Medical Defence Bodies

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what sum in the current wage settlement for junior doctors has been earmarked to cover their premiums to medical defence bodies.

Mr. Mellor: No specific sum was identified in respect of junior doctors as a group. In 1988-89, £31 million was made available to health authorities in the United Kingdom to meet the estimated full cost of reimbursement of two thirds of the cost of Medical Defence Society subscriptions payable by doctors employed by them.

Cancer (Children)

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of cancer affecting children were reported in the most recent year for which figures are available; and what was the comparable figure 30 years previously.

Mr. Freeman: National registrations of newly diagnosed cases of cancer are not available over a period of 30 years. However, the table shows the number of registrations, and the registration rate per 100,000 population for persons aged under 15 years of age for 1962, 1974 and 1984 (the latest year available) for England and Wales. The statistics should be interpreted with care as the ascertainment of cases has improved over the whole of this period.

Number of registrations of newly diagnosed cases of malignant neoplasms, and rates per 100,000 estimated population, persons aged 0-14 years. 1962, 1974 and 1984. England and Wales.

Year	Number	Rate
1962	966	9·1
1974	1,164	10·1
1984	1,085	11·3

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what factors have been responsible for the alterations in the incidence of cancer in children.

Mr. Freeman: Very little is known generally about the causes of childhood cancer. A great deal of research into this subject is continuing by various groups in this country, including the Childhood Cancer Research Group, which is supported by the Department.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Expenditure

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security by how much expenditure on social security has increased since 1978-79; and what increase in spending is planned for 1989-90.

Mr. Scott: Total spending on the social security programme increased from £16·4 billion in 1978-79 to an estimated £47·6 billion in 1988-89. This represents a 33 per cent. real increase in spending of almost £12 billion over the period.

Social security spending is planned to rise to £51·1 billion in 1989-90. This is £3·5 billion higher than in 1988-89.

Social Fund

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether he will make it his policy to ensure that the social fund budgets allocated to social security offices in Scotland for 1989-90 are not less in total than for 1988-89.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: We are currently considering the allocation of the 1989-90 social fund budgets to local offices and will make an announcement as soon as possible.

Community Care Grants and Loans

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will launch a publicity campaign informing potential claimants of the availability of community care grants and loans, to ensure that the budgets are fully spent by the end of this financial year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Take-up of community care grants has increased significantly over recent months and expenditure is currently running at 77 per cent. of monthly profiled expenditure. However, we are taking action further to improve awareness of the help that can be provided.

Local office managers have been asked to improve and maintain their liaison with local statutory and voluntary organisations since these are often best placed to identify people who may be eligible for help. We are also considering what additional measures might be taken to improve national information material on the scheme. In addition social fund officers have been reminded of the need to be flexible in applying guidance to individual cases and we are currently revising existing guidance in the social fund manual to make this clear.

Expenditure on loans has now reached national monthly profiled levels and we do not consider that further action is required in this area.

Medical Appeals Tribunals (Deafness)

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he has plans to ensure that evoked response audiometry machines will automatically be available at medical appeals tribunals when cases of industrial deafness are under consideration.

Mr. Scott: This is a matter for the president of social security and medical appeal tribunals and the hon. Member may care to contact him direct.

Service Homes

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what discussions he has had with Servite Houses on the funding of its homes for the frail elderly; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: My hon. Friend the Minister for Social Security met representatives of Servite Houses Ltd. on 26 May 1988, and there was a useful discussion of issues of mutual concern. The information provided by Servite Houses Ltd. was taken into account along with evidence provided by other organisations, in the most recent review of the income support limits.

The Government's decisions were announced in October 1988 as part of the general uprating of benefits. From April 1989 additional help will be provided to nearly nine out of 10 income support claimants in homes.

Disablement Income Group

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has had from Mr. Peter Large of the Disablement Income Group in regard to the report entitled, "Being Disabled Costs More Than They Said", a copy of which was sent to him on 3 January; what reply he is sending; if there is any action he will be taking; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: I have received a letter from Peter Large enclosing a copy of the Disablement Income Group's "Being Disabled Costs More Than They Said". Mr. Large's letter summarised the main points of the report and asked the Government to take note of them. In my reply I have made it clear that we will consider carefully the points raised in the report.

Mobility Allowance

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many mobility allowances were granted in 1988; how many were refused; how many went to appeal; and how many of those appeals were successful.

Mr. Scott: The available information is as follows. It relates to decisions given on claims (including renewal claims) during the year, not to claims made during the year.

	Numbers
Claims decided
Awards	127,560
Disallowances	77,305
Appeals and references decided by medical boards
Number decided	20,980
Decisions in favour of claimant	6,122
Appeals decided by medical appeal tribunals
Number decided	6,547
Decisions in favour of claimant	1,846

Departmental Offices

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give details of proposed changes in staff levels at social security offices in the north-west region; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The staffing reductions from the implementation of operational strategy in local offices in the north-west region are currently expected to be 1,575 posts between 1 April 1989 and 31 March 1993. Changes in staffing levels may also be required from time to time to reflect changes in local office workloads.

Heating Costs

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if, pursuant to the statement of 10 January, Official Report, column 814, he will identify the sums incorporated in income support to cover the cost of heating.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The income support rates are intended to provide for all normal day-to-day living expenses, including heating costs. There is no separately identifiable sum included for heating costs. It is for individuals to decide how best to spend their benefit in the light of their own needs and preferences.

TRANSPORT

Public Service Obligation

42. Mr. Prescott: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what amounts of financial resources have been paid to British Rail under public service obligation grants for each year since 1983; and what proportion is given to the south-eastern region of British Rail.

Mr. Channon: The figures for Government support for the British Railways Board taken from the final claims for grant in compensation for the public service obligation under EEC regulation 1191/69 and section 3 of the Railways Act 1974 are given below. 1984-85 is a 15-month period reflecting a change in the board's financial year. The figures for 1986-87, 1987-88 and 1988-89 remain provisional; final claims have not yet been agreed. All figures are cash.

	£ million
1983	853·6
1984-85	1,065·9
1985-86	820·0
1986-87	713·9
1987-88	800·6
1988-89	572·5

Grant is paid to the board in respect of subsidised passenger services as a whole; it is not hypothecated to business sectors. From 1983 to 1987-88 approximately 30 per cent. of the grant was allocated to Network SouthEast (and its predecessor London and South East). It is not yet possible to provide a figure for 1988-89.

Motorways (Private Vehicular Access)

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place in the Library a list of all sites of private vehicular access to each motorway not being motorway junctions; and if he will provide a map to make such sites easily identifiable.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Yes. It will take a little time to prepare the material.

M1-A1 Network

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action he intends to take to ensure that motorists using the M1/A1 networks can travel reasonably quickly and freely; if he envisages increasing the number of carriageways; if he will be implementing charged tolls on sections of these roads; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: There are a number of schemes in the programme to reduce congestion on both the M1 and the A1. The extension of the M40 to Birmingham will provide relief to the M1.

We are currently reviewing the road programme. We expect to make an announcement in the spring.

There are no plans to charge tolls on the M1 or A1.

Irish Sea Ferries

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what are the maximum loadings allowed on each ferry between Ireland and Great Britain; and what action is taken to ensure that these figures are not exceeded.

Mr. Portillo: The maximum loading allowed on ferries corresponds to immersion of the hull up to the clearly visible load-line mark. The maximum number of passengers allowed is stipulated on the passenger ship safety certificate which every passenger ship including ferries must carry. It is the statutory duty of the master to ensure before his ship proceeds on any voyage that the load-line mark is not submerged and that the maximum number of passengers permitted is not exceeded.

Road Transport Cabotage

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures will be taken in the context of the single European market to ensure that road transport cabotage will not infringe the European Community's treaty on the environment.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: All vehicles, whether undertaking cabotage or international journeys, will have to comply with both Community law and the national laws of the countries they are visiting.

NATO (ACTICE Study)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what were the posts, ranks and responsibilities of those attending the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation ACTICE study held at the civil defence college in April 1988.

Mr. Portillo: The Department hosted a training session for the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation agency for the co-ordination of inland surface transport in central Europe (ACTICE) at the civil defence college between 25 and 29 April 1988. The proceedings and details of attendees are classified.

NATO (Transport Planning Conference)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which organisations, departments or individuals have been invited to attend the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation transport planning conference, to be held at the civil defence college in spring 1989.

Mr. Portillo: The department will host a routine meeting of the northern Europe sub-committee of the planning board for European inland surface transport (PBEIST) at the civil defence college in spring 1989. The meeting will be attended by representatives from Norway, Denmark, Germany, Canada, United States of America and the United Kingdom.

Chiltern Line

Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he is yet in a position to announce his response to British Rail's request for additional signalling equipment and rolling stock on the Chiltern line services.

Mr. Portillo: British Rail have only just submitted their proposals to me for renewing the Chiltern line rolling stock. I hope to be able to announce a decision very shortly. Work on modernising the signalling is already making good progress and is expected to be completed in 1990.

West London Line

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will request the chairman of British Rail to publish figures of how many passenger and freight trains, respectively, cross the Thames on the west London line each day; how many passengers are carried; and how many trains use this route between 11 pm and 7 am.

Mr. Portillo: On weekdays there are 12 passenger trains in each direction, on Saturdays 3 in each direction and on Sundays one in each direction. Up to 25 freight trains use the line daily, but separate figures for the 11 pm to 7 am period are not kept. Approximately 1,100 passengers use the line on weekdays, and considerably fewer at weekends.

River Thames (River Buses)

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give the number of public river buses operating on the Thames and the number of passengers carried, for each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Portillo: Thamesline plc began a regular public service in June last year which at the end of the year was using seven vessels and carried about 5,000 passengers a week. Statistics of riverbus services are not available on an annual basis for the last 10 years.

River Thames (Tunnels)

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the tunnels under the Thames, between Kingston and the estuary, giving in each case the present and past use and the width of each.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The information requested is as follows:

Thames tunnels between Kingston and the estuary width in metres

(i) Road tunnels
Rotherhithe	4·9
Blackwall, Old	6·1
Blackwall, New	6·1
Dartford, West	6·4
Dartford, East	7·3
(ii) Railway tunnels
Victoria Line at Vauxhall	3·8
Northern Line at Charing Cross	3·6
Bakerloo Line at Charing Cross	3·7
Waterloo and City at Blackfriars	3·7
Northern Line at London Bridge	3·6
East London Line at Wapping	3·4
(iii) Pedestrian tunnels
Greenwich	1·6-2·8

The use of these tunnels has remained unchanged since they were built.

In addition there are various service tunnels used for purposes other than transport.

EC (Railways)

Mr. Adley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list for each European Economic Community country the mileage of newly constructed railway opened for public service in each of the last five years.

Mr. Michael Portillo: I regret that my Department does not have this information.

Rail Services

Mr. Adley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list for each year since the passing of the Transport Act 1968 the number of rail services which have been withdrawn and for which a substitute bus service has been provided; whether the bus service is still in existence in each case; and, if not, why it was terminated.

Mr. Portillo: I regret that this information is not available. Unlike substitute bus services provided under the Transport Act 1985, earlier replacement bus services did not require ministerial consent before they were withdrawn. No substitute bus services have yet been provided under the new provisions of the 1985 Act.

Fishing Vessel New Dawn

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has about the collision between the fishing vessel New Dawn and the USS Will Rogers on Tuesday 3 January; what investigation or inquiry he proposes into the incident; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: The collision took place at about 0730 on 3 January, some 5 miles south of the Isle of Arran in the Firth of Clyde. Neither vessel was seriously damaged and there were no injuries.

An investigation was ordered on 3 January and is being carried out by one of the Department's marine surveyors.

Motor Vehicles (Clocking)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has considered the proposals of the motor trade working group, chaired by the Director General of Fair Trading, to introduce mileage recordings at the driver and vehicle licensing centre, in order to combat the practice of clocking of motor vehicles.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The implications of the proposal, which involves a DVLC-based mileage recording scheme, are still being considered. An announcement will be made shortly.

Horne Report

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the joint working party established to consider the Horne report's recommendations on diversionary works has completed its deliberations; and when he intends to introduce legislation putting into effect the Horne report's conclusions.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The diversionary works working party, which includes representatives of the utilities, local authority associations and British Railways Board, has recently completed a draft code of practice dealing with the procedures to be followed when highway or bridge works affect utility apparatus, including cost sharing. The code will shortly be referred to the relevant organisations for endorsement. Legislation to implement the recommendations of the Horne Committee will be introduced when a suitable opportunity can be found.

Burley-on-Wharfedale (Relief Road)

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on his plans to allow the building of a relief road around Burley-on-Wharfedale.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Good progress is being made on this scheme which appears in the last roads White Paper for a start of construction in the period April 1989 to March 1991. The decision was announced in December last to proceed with the making of the line and side roads orders. The draft compulsory purchase order is due to be published this spring.

British Airways/British Caledonian Airways (Merger)

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the merger between British Airways and British Caledonian Airways has been implemented consistently with the revised proposals put to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission by British Airways.

Mr. Channon: On 5 January 1988 my noble Friend the Minister for Aviation and Shipping wrote to the chairman of the Civil Aviation Authority asking him to establish monitoring arrangements to ensure that the BA/B-Cal merger proceeded on the basis proposed by British Airways to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission.

The chairman of the CAA has now submitted a full report to me and from the information contained in this report I am satisfied that British Airways has fulfilled its commitments to the MMC during the year under review. I have placed a copy of the CAA's report to me in the Library of the House together with a copy of my reply. The CAA will also be publishing its report in its weekly proceedings.

East Midlands Air Crash (Fund)

Mr. Ashby: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give further details of the Government's contribution to the disaster fund set up by the North West Leicestershire district council for the victims of the east midlands air crash and their families.

Mr. Paul Channon: I have announced that the Government will be making a contribution of £250,000 to the east midlands air crash disaster fund. I very much hope that the Government's example will encourage others to join in helping the bereaved and those who suffered as a result of the accident. Neither the fund nor the Government's donation to it will affect claims for compensation.

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland will donate £100,000 from resources available to him, and £150,000 will be contributed by my Department. Parliamentary approval for these payments will be sought in Supplementary Supply Estimates. Pending that approval, both donations will be met by repayable advances from the respective contingencies funds. As savings are sufficient to meet these sums, there will be no increase in the public expenditure planning total.

United Kingdom-Singapore (Air Services)

Mr. Snape: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the progress of talks between Her Majesty's Government and the Republic of Singapore on increasing air services between the two countries.

Mr. Peter Bottomley [holding answer 12 January 1989]: Discussions were held in London this week between United Kingdom and Singapore civil aviation officials on arrangements for the provision of air services between the United Kingdom and Singapore. The discussions made useful progress and they are expected to continue in Singapore within the next two months.

Airport Security

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what research his Department has commissioned into the use of neutron beam detector systems in relation to airport security; what level of funding is being allocated to this work; and if he will make a statement;

(2) how many companies have been invited to tender for the supply of neutron beam detectors for airport security use; when such tenders were invited; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley [holding answer, 13 January 1989]: Development work on using the thermal neutron activation analysis technique for detecting explosives is taking place both in the United States of America and this country (at Harwell). The technique employs large neutron sources, and this raises considerable radiation protection problems. In both countries the results of tests carried out under laboratory conditions were encouraging, and prototypes are now being tested to establish reliablility and suitability for searching baggage under operational conditions. The United States prototypes have been more extensively tested. They have been on trial at San Francisco airport and the FAA has recently ordered five production models. We and the United States authorities maintain close liaison on such matters.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Child Starvation

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much overseas aid this year is being specifically directed towards ending child starvation and hunger in the Third world; what were the corresponding figures for each of the past three years; and if he will increase this figure for the next financial year.

Mr. Chris Patten: It is not practicable to separate expenditure directed towards ending child starvation and hunger from that designed to benefit the poor of the Third world generally. The object of the British aid programe is to promote sustainable economic development and to alleviate poverty. In 1987 over 80 per cent. of the bilateral aid programme went to the poorer countries—those with annual incomes per head of less than $800—where the incidence of hunger and malnutrition is greatest.

Her Majesty's Government's contributions to key organisations with a specific remit for children and with programmes concerned with child nutrition include the following:

£ million

	1985-86	1986-87	1987-88	1988-89 (to date)	1989-90 (planned)
UNICEF, General Resources	6·3	6·5	7·0	7·5	8·0
UNICEF, Supplementary funded projects	1·338	6·570	8·223	1·880	[1]—
Save the Children Fund, Joint Funding Scheme	0·675	0·905	1·045	1·925	[1]—
Save the Children Fund, Supplementary grants	7·958	1·718	4·787	n/a	[1]—

[1] To be decided.

PRIME MINISTER

GATT

Q27. Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Prime Minister if the European Council will be considering its policy on the future subsidising of agriculture before the next meeting of the general agreement on tariffs and trade.

The Prime Minister: The European Council will next meet on 26-27 June 1989. Negotiations on agriculture in the current GATT round are continuing and the Community will participate in them on the basis of positions agreed in the Agriculture and Foreign Affairs Councils.

European Commissioners

Q96. Mr. Tam Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister if she will meet Señor Felipe Gonzales, chairman of the Council of Ministers, to discuss the criteria for the appointment of European Commissioners.

The Prime Minister: No.

Technology Assessment Unit

Sir Ian Lloyd: To ask the Prime Minister (1) whether she will publish a list of the technology assessments which have been carried out by the technology assessment unit established in the Cabinet Office in 1988;

(2) whether it is her intention to publish any of the technology assessment reports carried out by the technology assessment unit of the Cabinet Office;

(3) whether the technology assessment unit of the Cabinet Office has been asked to undertake an assessment of the scientific validity of the Commission of the European Community's decision to ban the import of beef produced from cattle which have been fed with hormones.

The Prime Minister: The Cabinet Office's science and technology assessment office does not itself undertake assessments of this kind. As explained in the Government response to the first report of the House of Lords Select Committee on Science and Technology, 1986-87 Session (Cm. 185), its role is to encourage the adoption of sound assessment systems by Government Departments and other bodies concerned with publicly funded research and development.

Department of Food and Health

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Prime Minister whether she will now reconsider the proposal to establish a single Department of Food and Health, thereby closing down the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food; and whether she will publish an estimate of the effect on public funds of such a proposal.

The Prime Minister: I have no plans to establish a single Department of Food and Health.

Greenhouse Effect

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on her initiatives to co-ordinate inter-departmental action on the greenhouse effect.

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for South Shields (Dr. Clark) on 16 January 1989, at column 1.

Engagements

Mr. Cran: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 17 January.

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 17 January.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 17 January.

Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 17 January.

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 17 January.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 17 January.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 17 January.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 17 January.

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 17 January.

Mr. Gill: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 17 January.

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House I shall be having further meetings later today.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Fax Machines

Mr. Allen: To ask the Lord President of the Council how many fax machines were purchased by hon. Members for their use in the House; and at what cost.

Mr. Wakeham: The information requested by the hon. Member is not available centrally since the purchase of such equipment is an individual matter for right hon. and hon. Members.

Library Papers

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will ensure that a copy of every Library deposited paper is supplied to the branch library in Norman Shaw North; and if he will monitor the situation in the future.

Mr. Wakeham: About 80 per cent. of papers deposited in the Members' Library are also available in the branch library. Some papers because of their size, format or restricted contents, cannot easily be duplicated. However, I have made arrangements to remind Government Departments of the desirability of sending a second copy to the branch library whenever possible. The Library keeps deposited paper arrangements under constant review.

NATIONAL FINANCE

National Savings

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the total current number of national savings ordinary accounts.

Mr. Lilley: There are approximately 56·2 million ordinary accounts of which only 7·7 million are active, that is, which received a deposit during the last five years.

Drugs

Mr. Mudd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list, according to substance, weight, street value and point of location or interception, major quantities of dangerous drugs seized by Her Majesty's Customs in each of the years 1985, 1986, 1987 and 1988.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 16 January 1989]: I regret that this information is not readily available in the form requested.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Israel (Palestinian Detainees)

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his latest estimate is for Palestinians detained without trial in Israel; how many of these come from the occupied territories; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: We understand that there are just over 900 Palestinian administrative detainees currently held by the Israeli authorities. These are among a total of between 4,000 and 5,000 Palestinians detained so far without trial in Israel and the occupied territories. In addition to the administrative detainees, there are those awaiting trial, under investigation, sentenced for short periods or of as yet undefined status. We have made clear repeatedly to the Israelis our strong opposition to the practice of administrative detention.

Citizenship (European Community)

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Government of Portugal or within the Council of Ministers regarding harmonisation of the citizenship and nationality arrangements for people in dependent territories of each member country of the European Community; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: None.

DEFENCE

Nuclear Weapons

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make it his policy not to agree to North Atlantic Treaty Organisation modernisation of nuclear weapons until the House of Commons has expressed its view thereon.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Government's support for modernisation is well known and is reflected in their endorsement of successive NATO communiqués reiterating the Alliance's determination to keep its forces, nuclear and conventional, effective and up to date. The modernisation issue has already been raised in the House on numerous occasions. Moreover, the Government have undertaken to report to the House on nuclear modernisation as it affects British forces when the appropriate moment comes.

BAOR

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the average number of (a) British land forces, (b) British main battle tanks and (c) British armoured personnel carriers stationed on the mainland of Europe in 1987.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The figures requested by the hon. Member for 1987 were approximately as follows:

	Number
(a) British land forces	[1]60,300
(b) British main battle tanks	[2]650
(c) British armoured personnel carriers	[3]1,900

[1] Includes 3,000 in Berlin.
[2] Does not include reserve stocks.
[3] Includes a number of non-troop carrying vehicles.

These figures include the British Army of the Rhine and forces stationed in Berlin.

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the average number of trained infantrymen in each British Army of the Rhine infantry battalion.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The establishment of infantry battalions in BAOR varies according to role. The current average establishment is approximately 660 officers and soldiers. This figure is subject to change as the re-equipping of infantry battalions with Warrior and Saxon, and the conversion of 6 Brigade from the airmobile role, continue.

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the average number of main battle tanks in each British Army of the Rhine armoured regiment.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It is not our practice to give details of the number of tanks in operational units or formations.

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the average number of anti-tank guided missile systems in each British Army of the Rhine infantry battalion.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It is not our practice to give details of the number of anti-tank guided missiles in operational units or formations.

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the average number of surface-to-air guided missile systems in each British Army of the Rhine air defence regiment.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It is not our practice to disclose the numbers of surface-to-air guided missile systems in operational units or formations.

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the average amount of time spent by each British Army of the Rhine infantry battalion in (a) training and (b) exercise in 1987.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: In 1987, BAOR infantry battalions deployed for up to 26 weeks of training, of which approximately 15 weeks was for battalion level training and 11 weeks for company level training. The form in which records are held does not differentiate between training and exercise deployment and the specific information requested by the hon. Member could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the average amount of time spent by each British Army of the Rhine armoured regiment in (a) training and (b) exercise in 1987.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: In 1987, BAOR armoured regiments deployed for up to 23-25 weeks of training, of which approximately 14 weeks was for regimental training and eight weeks for squadron/troop training. The form in which records are held does not differentiate between training and exercise deployment and the specific information requested by the hon. Member could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Low Flying

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the number of complaints about low-flying aircraft for each training area for each month since January 1980 and give for each month the relative number of sorties involved.

Mr. Neubert: Monthly breakdowns of low-level military training sorties and complaints and inquiries received at the Ministry of Defence about such training are as follows. It should be noted that some of the monthly figures for earlier years were corrected on aggregation and yearly totals calculated by aggregating the monthly figures given may differ slightly from the yearly totals supplied previously to the House.

Monthly sorties in the United Kingdom low-flying system

	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984	1985	1986	1987	1988
January	10,034	9,271	9,567	9,794	8,954	9,723	11,532	8,222	11,179
February	8,373	10,208	9,456	12,197	9,112	10,436	12,264	12,527	14,279
March	9,884	11,854	14,992	12,265	11,505	12,973	10,145	12,515	15,494
April	11,045	10,105	10,759	11,802	12,972	12,793	14,863	13,006	11,733
May	11,716	11,196	12,116	12,520	12,967	12,534	13,366	14,364	12,990
June	11,602	14,124	11,827	15,010	13,715	13,158	13,413	13,787	14,220
July	12,229	12,830	11,443	15,109	13,678	14,267	17,519	14,071	12,653

	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984	1985	1986	1987	1988
August	7,976	10,005	10,366	10,482	10,532	11,634	10,229	11,959	13,182
September	10,714	11,551	10,950	9,768	9,973	11,338	12,847	12,954	11,459
October	11,156	12,476	10,339	11,585	12,421	12,849	12,950	11,950	11,589
November	9,365	11,431	11,053	10,201	9,929	12,993	12,968	12,892	—
December	8,756	6,790	7,477	8,614	7,761	7,064	9,068	8,814	—

Monthly Complaints in the United Kingdom Low Flying System

	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984	1985	1986	1987	1988
January	222	159	142	246	206	145	238	224	283
February	194	228	257	212	145	190	210	227	311
March	170	209	323	288	150	170	164	236	324
April	276	283	367	405	288	224	308	305	449
May	242	329	235	619	370	406	401	405	668
June	383	540	232	589	885	301	569	515	634
July	372	721	405	727	1,009	487	636	777	643
August	389	483	290	814	925	573	1,062	691	917
September	459	724	418	516	480	591	701	723	497
October	328	329	192	211	401	382	454	691	349
November	160	298	276	294	324	390	294	714	—
December	170	199	168	146	186	274	267	187	—

It is not our practice to publish detailed information relating to specific low-flying training areas.

Royal Yacht (Costs)

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will set out the total running costs of the royal yacht Britannia for the year 1987.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The overall running costs for HMY Britannia for financial year 1987-88 were approximately £7·3 million.

Shipping Collision

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has received from the United States Navy about the collision between the USS Will Rogers and the fishing vessel New Dawn on 3 January; what action he proposes to take; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Ministry of Defence was informed on 3 January 1989 that the submarine USS Will Rogers had been involved in a minor collision while on the surface with the 50-ton fishing trawler New Dawn in the Firth of Clyde. The collision occurred at approximately 0730 during USS Will Rogers' passage to Holy Loch. The trawler reported only superficial damage and continued under way. On return to port, an initial hull inspection of USS Will Rogers revealed minor scraping and chipping of paint. The US navy is conducting an investigation regarding the incident.

Trident (Costs)

Mr. John Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the latest estimate of the cost of the Trident programme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Younger: I am pleased to announce that for the third year running I am able to report a reduction in the estimated costs of the Trident programme. The revised estimate at average 1988-89 prices is £9,089 million. The estimate is based on the exchange rate of £1 = $1·76 used for the current long-term costing of the defence programme. The forecast proportion of the programme to be undertaken in the United Kingdom has risen to 68 per cent., the highest level so far. After allowing for the effects of inflation and exchange rate variations, the new estimate represents a real reduction of some £104 million compared with last year's estimate and a real reduction of £1,051 million compared with the original 1982 estimate, over and above the savings of some £784 million resulting from the decision to have United Kingdom missiles processed in the United States facility at King's bay, Georgia.

The Select Committee on Defence previously asked that when announcing the annual revised estimate I should report on the state of the project as a whole. I am pleased to say that the project remains on programme to enter service as planned in the mid-1990s. There has been no slippage in the in-service date since the decision to proceed with Trident II was announced in March 1982. I am, as in past years, sending to the Chairmen of the Select Committee on Defence and the Public Accounts Committee a more detailed report covering the progress of the various elements of the Trident programme. I am also placing a copy of the report in the Library of the House.

HMS Resolution

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what decision has been reached over the refurbishment of HMS Resolution; what is the estimated cost of such refurbishment; and what would be the total defence budget allocation to Polaris for 1988-89 in the event of such refurbishment.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 15 December 1988]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Winchester (Mr. Browne) by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence today. In particular, I refer to the more detailed report mentioned in that reply. It has been placed in the House of Commons library, and states that the Ministry of Defence has decided that a fourth refit for the Polaris submarine HMS Resolution is not required.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Teachers

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many teachers have joined the profession in state schools over each of the last five years; how many have left; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Butcher: The numbers of teachers entering and leaving the maintained nursery, primary and secondary schools sector in England in the last five years for which figures are available were:

Year ending 31 March	Entering	Leaving
1982	22,700	30,800
1983	23,400	29,400
1984	25,600	29,600
1985	24,600	31,100
1986	25,800	30,800

These figures include teachers entering from or leaving to other parts of the maintained sector.

Vandalism

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many schools in the Bolton area were damaged by vandalism, in particular arson, during each of the last five years; what was the cost to the education authority of this damage; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Butcher: Data concerning the number of schools affected by vandalism are not available, but I understand that the majority of schools in the Bolton area have been affected. The cost of damage during each of the last five years is given in the table. Such a level of loss is unacceptable, and I am discussing with the local authority associations a range of measures to improve the security of school premises.

Financial year	Vandalism £	Arson £	Number of fires
1983-84	114,098	18,951	17
1984-85	136,911	85,000	12
1985-86	155,032	85,536	11
1986-87	160,967	14,829	14
1987-88	193,808	153,202	20

Graduates

Dr. Hampson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what proportion of graduates went into industry in the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Robert Jackson: Seventeen per cent. of first degree graduates in Great Britain in 1987 of known destination entered industry.

Records of Achievement

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether his Department has any plans to provide additional funds for the development of records of achievement for pupils in secondary education; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: Specific grant funding will be available in 1989-90, as in 1988-89, to support pilot projects in a number of areas and to support in-service training of teachers in all local education authorities. The final report of the records of achievement national steering committee will be published for consultation shortly. Decisions on future developments will be taken in the light of those consultations.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Fires (Investigation)

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish in the Official Report for each fire authority in England and Wales for each of the last five years (a) the number of domestic fires described as doubtful, where malicious or deliberate ignition is suspected, and (b) the number of domestic fires where malicious ignition has been established beyond reasonable doubt.

Mr. John Patten: The readily available information does not separate suspected deliberate fires from those where it is established beyond reasonable doubt that a fire was started deliberately. A total for the number of deliberate and possibly deliberate fires in occupied buildings for each fire brigade area is published annually in "Fire Statistics United Kingdom", (table 64 for 1986, table 63 for 1985, table 60 for 1984, table 58 for 1983 and table 57 for 1982). Comparable data for 1987 are expected to be published in spring 1989. Provisional estimates for 1987 are given in the following table.

Deliberate or possibly deliberate fires, by brigade area, 1987

	Number
England and Wales Total	15,271
England—Non-metropolitan counties:
Avon	239
Bedfordshire	141
Berkshire	159
Buckinghamshire	130
Cambridgeshire	101
Cheshire	269
Cleveland	236
Cornwall	39
Cumbria	90
Derbyshire	111
Devon	153
Dorset	107
Durham	129
East Sussex	144
Essex	212
Gloucestershire	98
Hampshire	215
Hereford and Worcester	109
Hertfordshire	146
Humberside	314
Isle of Wight	18
Kent	355
Lancashire	365
Leicestershire	207
Lincolnshire	70
Norfolk	130
North Yorkshire	96
Northamptonshire	176
Northumberland	63

	Number
Nottinghamshire	363
Oxfordshire	70
Shropshire	79
Somerset	53
Staffordshire	175
Suffolk	107
Surrey	188
Warwickshire	100
West Sussex	100
Wiltshire	70
England—Metropolitan counties:
Greater Manchester	1,490
Merseyside	1,238
South Yorkshire	302
Tyne and Wear	713
West Midlands	1,295
West Yorkshire	756
Greater London	2,935
Wales:
Clwyd	69
Dyfed	28
Gwent	86
Gwynedd	51
Mid Glamorgan	152
Powys	16
South Glamorgan	146
West Glamorgan	67

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish in the Official Report for each fire authority in England and Wales whether it has a specialist fire investigation team.

Mr. John Patten: Only the London and West Midlands fire and civil defence authorities have full-time specialist fire investigation teams. About half the remaining fire authorities have teams whose members combine their duties with other responsibilities. But all fire authorities now have officers trained in fire investigation techniques and are able to use their services, ad hoc, whether individually or as a team as circumstances demand.

Passport Office, Belfast

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) permanent, (b) temporary and (c) part-time staff have been employed in the Belfast passport office; how many applications for passports have been handled by that office in each of the last five years; and what proposals he has to increase permanent staffing levels at the Belfast passport office.

Mr. Renton: The information requested in respect of the Belfast passport office is as follows:

Year	Number of passports issued	Permanent staff[1]	Casual staff[2]
1984	33,707	15	6
1985	34,655	15	6
1986	45,472	16	6
1987	51,305	18	5
1988	60,248	18	8

[1] The figures for permanent staff include two part-time staff in 1986 and six part-time staff in 1987 and 1988.

[2] The figures for casual staff are the maximum for the year.

Staffing levels at all the United Kingdom passport offices are closely monitored. There are no current plans to increase the permanent staff complement at Belfast.

Prisons

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list the new prison buildings under construction in England and Wales, giving in each case the original date for completion and the present expected completion date:

(2) how many of the prisons now under construction are on target for the scheduled date of completion; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if he will list all current delays in completion of the building of new prisons or the refurbishment of prison wings in England and Wales together with the length of the delays and their reasons.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The contracts for the construction of prisons, as for comparable schemes, customarily allow for the possibility that there may be delay for reasons such as bad weather. Planning is accordingly taken forward on the basis of the target opening of the new establishment. The original target opening date for the prisons now under construction were as follows; it is still expected that these targets will be met.

Prison	Target opening date
Brinsford	September 1990
Bullington	April 1991
Whitemoor	May 1991
Woolwich	April 1991
Lindholme 2	June 1991
Lancaster Farms	July 1992
Milton Keynes	July 1992

Wings are currently being refurbished at the following establishments. Except where indicated, the contracts are in each case expected to be completed on time.

Prison	Delay
Liverpool	—
Risley	—
Stafford	—
Pentonville	Nine months. Contract extended to include provision of low cost integral sanitation.
Wormwood Scrubs	Six to 12 months. Staffing difficulties.

Lay Visitors

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what insurance cover exists for lay visitors visiting magistrates courts or police stations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: There is no insurance cover as such for lay visitors, but lay visitors within the Metropolitan police district have been informed that sympathetic consideration will be given to paying compensation, on an ex gratia basis, to any lay visitor who suffers injury or loss or damage to personal property while carrying out his or her duties as a lay visitor. Claims will be paid out of the Metropolitan police fund. Lay visitors were advised of the arrangements in a circular letter dated 2 March 1988.

Arrangements outside the Metropolitan police district are a matter for the police authority concerned.

Mobile Homes (Parking)

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to tighten the laws on illegal parking and trespass by tinkers and other travellers with mobile homes.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We have no plans to change the laws on illegal parking or trespass.

Football (Arrests)

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many arrests in Football League grounds during season 1987-88 led to convictions.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: This information is not recorded centrally.

Football (Identity Cards)

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received from the Police Federation in respect of the proposed identity cards scheme for spectators at Football League matches; what was the nature of any such representations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Police Federation has made its representations to my hon. Friend the Minister for Sport.

Blasphemy

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consideration he has given to the Law Commission's report on the laws of blasphemy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to the question from the hon. Member for Bolton, South-East (Mr. Young) on 20 December 1988, at column 185.

Mr. Layman (Cardiff Prison)

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to reply to the hon. Member for Caerphilly's correspondence concerning his constituent Mr. Layman, currently held on remand in Cardiff prison.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I hope to reply to the hon. Member within the next two weeks.

Badgers

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received in respect of the publication and distribution of a book entitled "Badger Digging with Terriers"; and if he will make a statement on his proposed response.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: In reply to correspondents who wrote three years ago we explained that if the book openly encouraged people to commit an offence, a charge could be brought of incitement to commit a crime.

Breathalyser Tests

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish information available on the number of motorists breathalysed by the Metropolitan police in the month of December and the proportion of those which were negative.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Provisional figures in respect of the Christmas and new year period (19 to 31 December) indicate that 10,937 motorists were required by the Metropolitan police to provide breath specimens. 980 (8·9 per cent.) of those tests produced positive results.

Full statistics of screening breath tests will be published later this year.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will request the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis to have examined the equipment used by police to administer breathalyser tests to motorists leaving the rugby match at Twickenham on 6 December 1988.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: All breath testing instruments used by the Metropolitan police are checked at frequent and regular intervals.

Terrorism

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will amend his orders banning the broadcasting of terrorist interviews so as to make clear the precedence of the statutory duty laid on the British Broadcasting Corporation and Independent Broadcasting Authority to exercise due impartiality.

Mr. Renton: My right hon. Friend has no plans to amend the notices in this way. They do not affect the impartiality of the BBC and the IBA, which continue to be able to report events and words uttered.

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will amend his orders banning the broadcasting of terrorist interviews so as to permit an elected Sinn Fein councillor to be interviewed on matters to do with (a) housing, (b) the arts, (c) social services, (d) health, (e) planning and (f) local government finance.

Mr. Renton: No. The notices are intended to prevent the broadcasting of direct statements by persons representing those organisations named in the notices.

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether his ban on broadcasting terrorist interviews permits the words of a person representing or purporting to represent a proscribed organisation being spoken by another person while both persons appear on screen.

Mr. Renton: The directions prevent the broadcasting of direct statements by persons representing, or purporting to represent, supporting or inviting support for, the organisations named in the notices. It is for the BBC and the IBA to decide how the directions should be applied in particular circumstances.

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) whether his ban on broadcasting terrorist interviews covers interviews recorded more than 20 years ago;

(2) whether his ban on broadcasting terrorist interviews covers interviews recorded with persons who have since died;

(3) whether his ban on broadcasting terrorist interviews applies to archive material older than 25 years.

Mr. Renton: No time limit has been set on the use of archive material, and the restrictions may apply to the broadcasting of interviews with persons who have since died. But any statement which cannot be broadcast directly under the restrictions can still be reported and drawn upon in the course of a particular programme.

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether it is his intention that a television play should be regarded as a genuine work of fiction for the purposes of his ban on broadcasting terrorist interviews.

Mr. Renton: Works of fiction are not subject to the restrictions. It is for the BBC and IBA to determine which programmes fall into this category.

Magistrates Courts

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has for a review of the management structures of magistrates courts.

Mr. Hurd: The magistrates courts occupy a central position in the criminal justice system. I greatly value the contribution which locally based lay magistrates and their staff make to the effective operation of the courts and the criminal justice system in general. The present arrangements for the management of magistrates courts date substantially from 1949; since then there has been a considerable increase in the volume and complexity of their work and in the resources used by them. Against this background, I think it timely to examine radically the management and organisational structure of magistrates courts and the arrangements which govern their resources and their use with a view to identifying how these might be improved. I have therefore set in hand a scrutiny of magistrates courts with the following terms of reference:

(i) to review the present arrangements governing the distribution, management and control of resources in magistrates courts;

(ii) with due regard to the advantages of a locally based system of summary justice, to make recommendations to ensure that the mechanisms, at national and local level, for determining resource levels and resource management and control are best suited to the efficient, economic and effective discharge of the responsibilities of the magistrates courts;

(iii) to make proposals for any changes in management structures in the magistrates courts service;

(iv) to identify the potential for further action to reduce unit costs in magistrates courts, shorten delays and improve fine enforcement; and

(v) to ensure that recommendations under paragraphs (i) to (iv) above are consistent with the legitimate interests of defendants, parties to civil proceedings, legal representatives, witnesses and the various criminal justice agencies.

The scrutiny will be carried out by a team of officials led by Mr. Julian Le Vay (grade 5, Home Office) under the ministerial supervision of my hon. Friend the Member for Oxford, West and Abingdon (Mr. Patten). The scrutiny will begin in mid-February and I expect to receive its report in June.

Ms. Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been charged under the prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1984 since enactment of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act; and how many of these were charged within 96 hours of arrest.

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will list, for each year since 1975, the number of people who have been detained under the Prevention of Terrorism Act; and if he will give a breakdown of each annual total, specifying the number of people detained for periods of (a) one day or less, (b) two days, (c) three days, (d) four days, (e) five days, (f) six days and (g) seven days and the number of people in each category (a) to (g) who were (i) eventually charged and (ii) found guilty.

Mr. Hurd [holding answers 13 and 20 December 1988 respectively]: The available information, which relates to persons detained under the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1984 during the period 1 January to 30 September 1988 is given in the table. Corresponding information for earlier years could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Information on persons detained is published quarterly in Home Office statistical bulletin, issue 2/87 which gives, in tables 1 and 2, the figures for years up to 1986. Copies of this bulletin are in the Library of the House. I shall write to the hon. Members updating the table to the end of 1988 after the bulletin for the fourth quarter has been published.

Persons detained and charged under the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1984 by length of detention, legislation under which charged and outcome of charge

Number of persons (Great Britain)

Length of detention	Total detained	Number charged		Outcome of charge		Awaiting trial
		Under the Act	Under other legislation	Found guilty	Other outcome
1986
Less than 1 day	73	6	2	8	—	—
1 day and less than 2 days	74	5	8	12	—	1
2 days and less than 3 days	9	—	—	—	—	—
3 days and less than 4 days	14	—	3	3	—	—
4 days and less than 5 days	13	1	6	7	—	—
5 days and less than 6 days	8	1	4	5	—	—
6 days and less than 7 days	7	—	—	—	—	—
7 days	4	—	—	—	—	—
Total	202	13	23	35	—	1
1987
Less than 1 day	66	4	1	5	—	—
1 day and less than 2 days	110	4	4	5	—	3
2 days and less than 3 days	9	—	3	1	2	—

Length of detention	Total detained	Number charged		Outcome of charge
		Under the Act	Under other legislation	Found guilty	Other outcome	Awaiting trial
3 days and less than 4 days	12	—	1	1	—	—
4 days and less than 5 days	9	—	2	2	—	—
5 days and less than 6 days	7	—	2	2	—	—
6 days and less than 7 days	11	1	[1]5	2	[1]4	—
7 days	1	—	—	—	—	—
Total	225	9	18	18	6	3
1988[2]
Less than 1 day	53	2	3	1	—	4
1 day and less than 2 days	57	3	4	7	—	—
2 days and less than 3 days	4	—	—	—	—	—
3 days and less than 4 days	6	—	—	—	—	—
4 days and less than 5 days	7	—	—	—	—	—
5 days and less than 6 days	3	—	—	—	—	—
6 days and less than 7 days	—	—	—	—	—	—
7 days	—	—	—	—	—	—
Total	[2]130	5	7	8	—	4

[1] Includes two persons who were subsequently deported or removed.
[2] 1 January to 30 September.

Racial Discrimination

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases of racial discrimination the Commission for Racial Equality has been unable to pursue, through the courts, in each of the last five years, due to lack of funding; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten [holding answer 12 January 1989]: An estimated 25 in 1988. None in the previous four years.

In the light of increased legal costs and an increase in the number of applications, the Commission for Racial Equality had to adopt a more selective approach in 1988 towards people seeking assistance in pursuing complaints of alleged discrimination.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Ordnance Survey

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland why the price of Ordnance Survey sheets has been increased; when it was increased; what is the percentage increase in price; when the previous increase in price was; and by what means the public was advised that the prices of Ordnance Survey sheets were to be increased.

Mr. Needham: The prices of Ordnance Survey of Northern Ireland map sheets are reviewed annually in comparison with those of Ordnance Survey of Great Britain to ensure broad comparability.

The new prices are effective from 1 January 1989, the average percentage increase was 20 per cent. The last increase was on 1 January 1988.

The latest price list was published in January 1989 and is distributed to major users and to the wholesale and retail trade.

Special Education Needs

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the number of pupils recorded with special educational needs in Northern Ireland primary and secondary schools by board area and by controlled/maintained category.

Dr. Mawhinney: Provisional figures at January 1989 are as follows:

Education and Library Board Area	Controlled	Maintained	Voluntary
Belfast
Primary	8	26	—
Secondary	3	5	3
Western
Primary	57	81	—
Secondary	27	48	8
North-Eastern
Primary	81	24	—
Secondary	97	14	20
South-Eastern
Primary	56	26	—
Secondary	29	10	5
Southern
Primary	137	60	—
Secondary	86	65	2

Note: Figures for secondary schools include both secondary intermediate and grammar schools.

Teachers

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the total number of teachers at September 1988 employed by grant-aided schools in Northern Ireland, and if he will break down the figures by age band and by sex.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information is as follows:

Age groups	Numbers
Under 35
Male	1,698
Female	4,331
35 to 49
Male	3,850
Female	5,938
50 and over
Male	1,217
Female	1,899

Age groups	Numbers
Total Teachers
Male	6,765
Female	12,168

Further Education

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many students attend the further education colleges in Bangor, Newtownards, Newcastle and Downpatrick; and how many full-time and part-time lecturers are at each of these colleges.

Dr. Mawhinney: Available information is as follows:

Further education colleges	Students		Lecturers
	Full-time	Part-time	Full-time	Part-time
North Down	—	—	[1]137	[1]200
Bangor Campus	572	3,522	—	—
Newtownards Campus	198	1,881	—	—
Newcastle[2]	277	993	34	51
Downpatrick[2]	649	2,732	67	125

[1] Appointments are to North Down college of further education, not to an individual campus. These figures include staff who also serve in other centres of the college, that is the Holywood campus and some small outcentres. Figures for students at these centres are not included.

[2] Figures for Newcastle include outcentres and for Downpatrick include also the Ballynahinch campus and outcentres.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland why part of the Ards peninsula is within the area of Downpatrick college of further education; whether the college of further education in Newtownards is more convenient to that part of the Ards peninsula; if he will reconsider this administrative arrangement; if he will seek the opinion of residents in that part of the Ards peninsula; and if he will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: Enrolment policy in the area is a matter for the South-Eastern education and library board. I understand that further education students usually attend the nearest appropriate college and the board would not attempt to direct students from the southern part of the Ards peninsula to Down college of further education, Downpatrick.

Messrs. Montupet (Factory Site)

Mr. John Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he has directed to the attention of Messrs Montupet any sites for a new factory within the constituency of Strangford.

Mr. Viggers: The company is at present considering locations within the Province for the siting of a toolroom factory. I have asked the IDB to encourage the company to examine all areas before it reaches its decision.

Agricultural Land

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what has been the average price paid for agricultural land in Northern Ireland in each year since 1977 showing the sums in cash and real terms.

Mr. Viggers: The average price paid for agricultural land in Northern Ireland in each year since 1977 in current prices and in real terms is as follows:

Calendar Year	At current prices £ per hectare	Index in real terms (Base 1985 = 100)
1977	1,846	121
1978	2,618	158
1979	3,327	177
1980	3,227	146
1981	2,897	117
1982	2,683	100
1983	2,866	102
1984	2,958	100
1985	3,130	100
1986	3,128	97
1987	3,205	95

Farmers

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish in the Official Report a table to show information available to him on the sums on loan to farmers in Northern Ireland by the banks in each year or financial year since 1977 showing the sums in cash and real terms and also indicate in those same terms the interest charges due on those sums for each year or financial year if more convenient.

Mr. Viggers: The annual average level of bank advances for farming purposes and the estimated interest charges due on those sums for each year since 1977 in current prices and in real terms are as follows:

Calendar year	Level of bank advances[1]		Estimated interest charges[2]
	At current prices £ million (1)	Index in real terms (1985 = 100) (2)	At current prices £ million (3)	Index in real terms (1985 = 100) (4)
1977	57·1	63	6·3	46
1978	75·8	77	8·5	58
1979	106·5	95	16·7	101
1980	134·6	102	24·2	124
1981	143·9	97	22·1	101
1982	148·4	92	21·2	89
1983	158·6	94	19·2	77
1984	172·3	98	21·0	81
1985	186·9	100	27·6	100
1986	205·2	106	27·7	97
1987	209·4	104	25·8	87

[1] Adjusted to exclude farmers' estimated borrowings for non-agricultural purchases and for land purchases.
[2] Interest on bank advances as in column (1). This differs from the interest estimates published in "The Statistical Review of Northern Ireland Agriculture", which also include interest on hire purchase and trade credit agreements.

WALES

Infant Deaths

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if his Department is providing financial or other forms of assistance to any private company in the research or development of an early warning temperature monitor for human infants.

Mr. Grist: Financial assistance has been offered by the Department to a private company to help research the market opportunities for an early warning temperature monitor for human infants and the setting up of a manufacturing facility.

Domestic Water Supplies

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many disconnections of domestic water supplies there have been in 1988.

Mr. Grist: The information is not available in the form requested. In 1987-88 the Welsh water authority disconnected 2,067 properties within their area of supply. Of these 1,400 were reconnected after payment of bills.

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he will meet the chairman of the Welsh water authority to discuss a revised code of practice relating to the disconnection of domestic water supplies.

Mr. Grist: The Secretary of State regularly meets with the chairman of the Welsh water authority to discuss a number of issues.

Football Spectators Bill

Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the application of the Football Spectators Bill [Lords] in Wales.

Mr. Peter Walker: The Bill will apply to England and Wales. I will be responsible for licensing grounds and for designating which football matches in Wales will be subject to the national membership scheme. I propose to set up at an early date a working party to advise me in Wales as to whether any particular match should be designated.

ENVIRONMENT

Drinking Water

Mr. Neale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether his Department was under any obligation to notify the European Commission under the terms of directive 80778 Quality of Water Supplied for Human Consumption (article 10); and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: South-West water authority applied to the Department for an emergency derogation under article 10 of the EC drinking water directive (80/778/EEC) on 3 August 1988 as some water samples in the Camelford area were continuing to exceed the directive standard for aluminium. The Department concluded that a derogation to permit the directive standard to be relaxed would not be appropriate. It wanted drinking water quality to return to compliance with the standard as soon as possible. It was also satisfied, on medical advice, that there was no public health risk. On 24 October 1988, by which time the Camelford supply had been complying with the aluminium standard for some weeks, the SWWA withdrew the application. Under the directive member states are required to inform the Commission when they grant a derogation under article 10. Because no derogation was granted, there was no obligation to notify the Commission.

Construction Industry

115. Mr. Wall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he intends to take to control lump labour in the construction industry.

116. Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he intends to take to control lump labour in the construction industry and to reduce the number of fatal accidents among self-employed construction workers.

Mr. Trippier: In construction, the use of self-employed labour is often appropriate because of the industry's fluctuating work loads and the increasing specialisms within it. Contractors and self-employed workers should generally be free to agree on the contractual arrangements that best suit their particular circumstances. Due to the itinerant nature of much of the work force, there have always been special difficulties in collecting the tax properly due from all those engaged in the industry. There is at present a special scheme for collecting tax from self-employed operatives, and this was the subject of an efficiency scrutiny in 1988. Several recommendations have been made for improving the current scheme, and these are now under consideration.

The Government are concerned about the high level of fatalities and serious injuries occurring in the industry. New regulations are being prepared which provide for the management and co-ordination of health and safety on multi-contractor sites, increase the number of safety supervisors in smaller companies and amend the site notification procedure to identify sites where there are high-risk activities. The introduction of regulations to make the wearing of safety helmets compulsory on construction sites is also planned. Inspectors from the Health and Safety Executive will be paying more attention to the quality of site management and its ability to manage health and safety. They will pursue their inquiries and any enforcement action to the highest levels in companies which do not measure up to the standards expected of them. The Government have also provided the Health and Safety Executive with an additional £6·7 million in 1988-89, which will allow an increase in the number of inspectors and raise the number of inspections carried out.

Radiation Monitoring

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment where the nearest (a) permanently and (b)

periodically manned radiation incident monitoring network stations are to Doncaster; and if he will also list the sites of (a) and (b) above along the A1 and A1(M) main road routes.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The nearest Rimnet station to Doncaster is at Finningley. Other sites close to the A1/A1(M) are at Heathrow, Wyton, Leeming, Newcastle and Boulmer. All these stations are permanently manned.

Building Materials (Illegal Tipping)

Mr. Heddle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he has initiated with local authority associations, representatives of the construction industry and others about the illegal tipping of building materials.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: There was very extensive consultation before the Government announcement of 29 June last of their intention to impose on waste producers, including those in the construction industry, a duty to care to ensure the safe and legal disposal of their wastes. The announcement also contained the Government's intention to require the registration of carriers of waste with powers to remove carriers from the register if they are convicted of waste disposal offences, including fly-tipping. Consultation is currently in progress on proposals to make registered keepers of vehicles used in fly-tipping liable to prosecution.

Mr. Heddle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will seek powers to impose tougher penalties to curb the illegal tipping of building materials.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Penalties for fly-tipping include fines of up to £2,000 or, on indictment, unlimited fines and up to two years' imprisonment. We have no plans at present to increase these.

Leasehold Reform

Mr. Heddle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Mid-Staffordshire of 1 November 1988, Official Report, column 564, if he has now considered the responses to the consultation paper on disputes about valuations under the Leasehold Reform Act 1967.

Mr. Trippier: We are still considering the responses to our consultation paper. I will announce our conclusions as soon as possible.

Derelict Land Grant

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much derelict land grant has been paid in respect of the site of the former Ansells brewery in Birmingham; and on what date payment was made.

Mr. Trippier: The Department's west midlands regional office authorised the approval of derelict land grant of £300,000 in October 1986 in respect of this site.

Payment of grant totalling £300,000 was made to Birmingham city council in two instalments—£170,393 on 28 May 1987 and £129,607 on 21 January 1988.

Rating Reform

Mr. Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to publish his proposals for the transitional arrangements for the introduction of the national non-domestic rate.

Mr. Gummer: As soon as possible.

Toxic Waste

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will state by local authority where the 257 toxic waste disposal facilities are in south Yorkshire.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 19 December 1988 at column 40. Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution has a record of 257 waste disposal facilities in south Yorkshire. These are listed by local authority area:

	Number
Barnsley	63
Doncaster	54
Rotherham	59
Sheffield	81

They do not all accept special waste. Details of the type of waste for which each facility is licensed can be obtained from the appropriate waste disposal authority, which is required to keep a public record.

Domestic Property (Compensation Code)

Mr. Heddle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will now publish his proposals for dealing with the compensation code for domestic property which, under current legislation, is based either upon gross, net annual or rateable values for implementation on 1 April 1990, under the Local Government Finance Act 1988.

Mr. Chope: The Department and the Welsh Office will shortly be publishing a consultation paper on compensation issues which will refer inter alia to the implications of the abolition of rateable values for home loss payments.

Housing Land Supply

Mr. Heddle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he takes to verify the returns of planning authorities to establish that they maintain a five-year housing land supply in accordance with the requirements of PPG3.

Mr. Chope: We encourage planning authorities to carry out land availability studies jointly with representatives of the local housebuilding industry. Though my Department is not in a position to check the results in detail, we have no reason to doubt that joint studies give a broadly reliable picture of land availability.

Housing Act 1985

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to publish the outcome of his review of part III of the Housing Act 1985, previously the Homeless Persons Act; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: I shall make a statement when the review is completed.

Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has completed the review of the housing subsidy system as it applies to large-scale disposals of local authority dwellings announced by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State on 11 February 1988 during the Standing Committee on the Housing Act 1988.

Mr. Trippier: The Department and the Welsh Office are today issuing a consultation paper resulting from the review of the housing subsidy system. The review was needed to deal with anomalies in the present housing subsidy system for some authorities upon complete or partial disposal of their stock, and to achieve a more equitable and rational mechanism for taking account of disposals. Under the present rules, authorities may sometimes continue receiving subsidy on dwellings sold even if they incur no further expenditure, or may not be entitled to subsidy where they are left with residual debt.

The new proposals provide for the payment of residual debt subsidy (RDS) in respect of loan charges on any notional residual debt related to the dwellings sold. RDS would be paid at a rate of 75 per cent. of the loan charges for sales under the tenants' choice provisions of the Housing Act 1988, under right to buy, and in respect of individual sales. For all voluntary sales of stock to other landlords it is proposed that the rate of RDS would be 90 per cent. leaving 10 per cent. to be met from the authority's own resources, except in Wales, where it is proposed that RDS should be 90 per cent. in all cases. This arrangement should give authorities an incentive to obtain a keen sale price and to take management decisions which maintain the value of the stock in advance of disposal.

For those local authorities where it is proposed to create a housing action trust (HAT), the Government intend that any losses caused by the disposal to a HAT, which are not covered by subsidy entitlement following disposal, should be met by the Exchequer by means of a safety net. The idea is to ensure that no additional costs resulting from the transfer of the stock to a HAT should fall on the remaining tenants or ratepayers in the form of rent or rate increases.

It is intended that the new rules should come into effect from 1 April 1989. Copies of the paper have today been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Mortgage Interest Rates

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consultations over rehousing are taking place between his Department and local authorities arising from the effect of higher mortgage interest rates on the ability of some families to meet the repayments.

Mr. Trippier: None. If a borrower finds it difficult to make his regular repayment he should immediately contact his lender, who can then offer him appropriate advice. If his house is repossessed by the lender the local authority, which has the responsibility for housing the homeless, must decide on the appropriate housing provision, taking account of all the facts of the case.

Housing (Homeless Persons) Act

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to seek to amend the Housing (Homeless Persons) Act.

Mr. Trippier: I have nothing to add to the reply given to the hon. Member for Gateshead, East (Ms. Quinn) on 6 December at column 198.

Nirex

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he now expects to receive the report from Nirex on suitable sites for the disposal of nuclear wastes; and what timetable he envisages for his decision.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State expects to receive Nirex's proposals for a radioactive waste disposal facility shortly. The Government will respond to the proposals as quickly as possible.

Nationalised Industries (Rating)

Mr. Adley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the annual rates bill, at the latest available date, levied on the nationalised industries; and if he will make a statement on what arrangements he proposes for these industries following the reorganisation of local government finance.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Information on nationalised industries' rate bills is not held centrally. These industries will continue to be rated on a basis comparable with the private sector under the provisions of the Local Government Finance Act 1988. To the extent that rateable values are determined by statutory formula at present, this form of assessment will continue for the 1990 rating lists. The main exception will be the coal industry, all of whose property will be valued by conventional means from 1990.

Housing Act 1988

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether an Italian national living in a council house will be eligible to vote under tenants' choice provisions made under the Housing Act 1988.

Mr. Trippier: Yes, as long as he or she meets the criteria laid down in the Act. British nationality is not a necessary qualification for voting under tenants' choice.

Domestic Water Supplies (Disconnections)

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many disconnections of domestic water supplies there have been in each English water authority in 1988.

Mr. Moynihan: I refer the hon. Member to the reply which I gave to the hon. Member for Cynon Valley (Mrs. Clwyd) on 30 November at column 282.

Waste Disposal Sites

Mr. Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many applications for planning permission for waste disposal sites have been made in the last five years by private sector companies; how many were granted; how many refusals were appealed against; and how many such appeals were successful.

Mr. Chope: The Department does not have information about the number of planning applications for development involving waste disposal. The table gives information from the Department's records about appeals against refusal of planning permission for waste disposal sites since 1 April 1984 (the earliest date for which such information is available):

	1984-85	1985-86	1986-87	1987-88
Appeals received	20	26	30	34
Appeals decided	2	14	29	21
Appeals allowed	0	4	13	11

Mr. Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many deemed applications for planning permission for waste disposal sites have been made in the last five years by local authorities; how many were granted; how many refusals were appealed against; and how many such appeals were successful.

Mr. Chope: Local authorities have powers to grant themselves deemed planning permission for such development; although in certain circumstances they may be required to apply to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for permission. Statistics are not held centrally of the numbers of such permissions and applications.

Mr. Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many applications have been made for waste disposal sites licences under the Control of Pollution Act 1974 in the last five years by private sector companies; how many were granted; how many refused; and how many granted on appeal.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: From information held by Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution, the numbers of waste disposal site licences granted to private sector companies in England and Wales during the period 1983-87 are as follows:

	Number
1983	287
1984	344
1985	367
1986	334
1987	[1]362

[1] 4 of these were granted on appeal.
Figures for 1988 are not yet available.

There is no centrally held information on the number of site licence applications refused by waste disposal authorities.

Mr. Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many waste disposal sites occupied by waste disposal authorities have been authorised by a resolution of those authorities in the last five years.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: From information held by Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution, the numbers of waste disposal sites operated by waste disposal authorities in England and Wales and authorised during the period 1983-87 are as follows:

	Number
1983	39
1984	37
1985	34
1986	40
1987	40

Figures for 1988 are not yet available.

Community Charge (Registration)

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will place in the Library copies of the advice his Department has given to local authorities about drawing up a registration form for the poll tax.

Mr. Gummer: The Government have no plans to introduce a poll tax. Advice on community charge registration was contained in community charge practice note No. 8, copies of which were placed in the Library when it was published on 11 November 1988. The note includes a model registration form.

Planning Applications

Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects the public inquiry to begin its work in determining planning applications by Mr. J. Jackson which are being called in by his Department; how long he expects the inquiry to last; and when he hopes to be in a position to give his final decision on the application.

Mr. Chope: Arrangements are in hand for a public inquiry. I understand that the planning inspectorate will shortly be in touch with Mr. Jackson with dates when an inquiry might begin.

It is impossible at this stage to say how long the inquiry will last or indeed when the Secretary of State is likely to issue his decision. But I can assure my hon. Friend that all steps will be taken to ensure an early decision.

Local Authority Housing

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list for each year since 1978 the number of local authority homes sold to sitting tenants and the number of new local authority homes built (a) in England as a whole and (b) for each local authority in England.

Mr. Trippier: The information requested is as listed. The available information for each local authority has today been laid in the Library: this shows total local authority sales and local authority new building completions for each financial year from 1980-81 to 1987-88. The equivalent for England is as follows:

Local authorities: England: numbers of dwellings

	All sales	Housebuilding completions
1980-81	68,200	65,300
1981-82	128,200	39,700
1982-83	181,200	27,200
1983-84	[1]122,000	28,000
1984-85	91,400	26,800
1985-86	82,300	21,400
1986-87	86,100	17,900
1987-88	[2]110,300	15,300

[1] Includes 3,000 dwellings in Cantril Farm sold to Stockbridge Village Trust.
[2] Includes 5,500 dwellings sold by London Residuary Body to Thamesmead Town Ltd.

Water Supply

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his reply of 12 December, Official Report, column 410, if he will identify areas of London where drinking water supplies have, at any time, exceeded standards set in the European Community drinking water directive in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan [holding answer 10 Janauary 1989]: Some 250,000 analyses a year are carried out in the London area by the Thames water authority and occasionally an analysis will indicate that a standard has been exceeded. This is because of the inherent variability in the nature of water and its supply and the stringency of the standards.

Hazardous and Toxic Wastes (Barnsley)

Mr. Patchett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list in the Official Report the names and addresses of all sites in the Barnsley, East constituency which are used for the disposal and dumping of hazardous and toxic wastes.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 13 January 1989]: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Don Valley (Mr. Redmond) on 19 December 1988 at column 40. Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution has a record of 257 waste disposal facilities in south Yorkshire, of which 63 are located in the Barnsley local authority area. Its records do not allow for segregation at constituency level. I refer the hon. Member to the Waste Disposal Authority for details of which facilities are licensed to accept special wastes.

Watermead Country Park

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has received any representations from Leicestershire county council about the proposed access to Watermead country park; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 16 January 1989]: The Department received representations from Leicestershire county council on 7 December against Leicester city council's proposal for a vehicular access to Watermead country park. The city council decided to deem itself planning consent on 5 December and subsequently sought the Department's views on the validity of that action. A reply to both authorities is in preparation.

Importers and Exporters (EC Regulations)

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when his Department issued its advice supplementary notice to importers and exporters No. 6 on article 6 of the EEC regulation 3626/82; how many cases have been brought to his Department's attention before and since this advice; and what has been the result of the investigations into those cases.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 16 January 1989]: Supplementary notice to importers and exporters No. 6, which superseded advice given in earlier notices to importers and exporters, was issued in April 1987. Comprehensive details of infractions of article 6 of EC regulation 3626/82 brought to the attention of the Department are not available. Since 7 November possible infractions have been brought to the notice of the Department; five have been referred to the enforcement authorities for any appropriate action; and two are under consideration within the Department.

Libraries

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has any plans to require local authority libraries to charge for their services.

Mr. Luce [holding answer 12 January 1989]: As my consultative paper stated, the Government are committed to the continuing provision of a free basic public library service to individuals. Library authorities already have discretionary powers to charge for some services, and as my consultative paper made clear any additional powers which might be introduced would also be discretionary. As I said on 8 December in reply to the hon. Member for Stoke-on-Trent, Central (Mr. Fisher) at column 256 I shall make a statement shortly.

Maerdy Fish Hatchery

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment is he will make a statement on his current plans for the future of the Maerdy fish hatchery in the Clwyd, South-West constituency since the hon. Member for Clwyd, South-West last wrote to him.

Mr. Peter Walker: I have been asked to reply. No decision has yet been taken on the future of the Maerdy fish hatchery.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. French: To ask the Attorney-General how many oral parliamentary questions he has answered by written reply because the question was not reached at Question Time, for the most recent year for which figures are available.

The Attorney-General: In 1988, of a total of 98 oral parliamentary questions, 55 were answered as written questions, because the question was not reached at Question Time.

Obscene Publications Act

Mr. Speller: To ask the Attorney-General if he will meet the Director of Public Presecutions to discuss possible action under the Obscene Publications Act in respect of newspaper photographs showing the corpse of a murder victim in Surrey in the week beginning 12 December.

The Attorney-General: The Crown Prosecution Service has considered possible action under the Obscene Publications Acts in respect of the photographs referred to but has concluded that there is no realistic prospect of a conviction for an offence under those Acts. I agree with that view.

ENERGY

Electricity Boards (Liabilities)

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) if he will identify separately the Central Electricity Generating Board's and the South of Scotland Electricity Board's provisions for (a) decommissioning, (b) reprocessing of irradiated fuel and (c) other liabilities at 1987-88 prices, up to 31 March 1988;

(2) if he will give details of the provisions made by the Central Electricity Generating Board and the South of Scotland Electricity Board for (a) decommissioning, (b) reprocessing of irradiated fuel and (c) other liabilities, on an annual basis from 1977 until 1988.

Mr. Michael Spicer: This is a matter for the Central Electricity Generating Board and I have asked the chairman to write to the hon. Member. The South of Scotland Electricity Board is the responsibility of the Secretary of State for Scotland.

Private Coal Mines

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list by year for the last five years (a) the number of private deep coal mines, (b) their locations, (c) the number of miners employed therein and (d) the number of miners employed by British Coal for the same periods; and what assessment he has made of the implications for private deep coal mines of the proposed privatisation of the electricity industry.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Points (a) to (d) are matters for British Coal, and I have asked the chairman to write to the hon. Member. The privatisation of the electricity supply industry should provide new opportunities for the coal industry as a whole.

Electricity Supply Industry

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what was the level of capital expenditure in the electricity supply industry in 1987-88; and what is his estimate of the level of such capital expenditure in 1988-89 and 1989-90.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Capital expenditure by the electricity supply industry in 1987-88 amounted to £1,089 million. Investment approval for 1988-89 and 1989-90 amounts to £1,474 million and £1,644 million respectively.

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what amount planned expenditure on capital investment to the electricity supply industry during 1988-89 was raised following his decision that electricity prices should be increased from April 1988.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The decision to raise the financial targets of the industry was taken in the light of the forecast disappearance of surplus capacity and the longer-term needs of the industry, not short-term changes in the industry's capital investment programme. The decision on the financial targets did not therefore lead to an increase in the planned capital investment of the industry in 1988-89.

Plutonium

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will provide in separate tabulated form in the Official Report figures for (a) the total annual amount of civil separated plutonium exported, (b) the total annual amount of civil separated plutonium imported, (c) the total annual amount of civil plutonium in spent fuel exported and (d) the total annual amount of civil plutonium in spent fuel imported for each year since May 1979 until the date for which the most recent records are available.

Mr. Michael Spicer [holding answer 30 November 1988]: Total exports and imports of civil separated and unseparated plutonium in the period May 1979 to March 1988 were as follows:

(Kg)	Imports	Exports
Un-separated	13,720	130
Separated	245	2,865
Total	13,965	2,995

I regret that the total export figure of 2,960 kg given in my reply to the hon. Member on 8 November at column 116 should have read 2,995 kg.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

EC Price Agreement

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received from the National Farmers Union on the European Economic Community price agreement for 1989.

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met representatives of the National Farmers Union to discuss the European Community price agreement for 1989.

Mr. MacGregor: The Commission is expected to publish the 1989 price proposals shortly.

Bacon and Meat Industry (Self-regulation)

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will monitor the Bacon and Meat Manufacturers Association's mandatory scheme of self-regulation with a view to assessing its relevance to other sections of the food industry.

Mr. Ryder: I am aware of the initiative taken by members of the Bacon and Meat Manufacturers Association to self-regulate their activities. Each other sector of the food industry must, however, judge for itself the relevance of such a scheme.

Farm Animal Welfare Council

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met representatives of the Farm Animal Welfare Council; and what subjects were discussed.

Mr. Ryder: I met representatives of the Farm Animal Welfare Council on 17 May 1988 to discuss the council's three new studies which are:

(i) evaluation of new husbandry systems, techniques and equipments;
(ii) enforcement of existing welfare legislation and compliance with the welfare codes;
(iii) improvement of welfare by better promotion and education

Sheep Variable Premium

Mr. Pike: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the future of the sheep variable premium.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Proposals from the EC Commission for a review of the Community's sheepmeat regime include one to phase out the variable premium. Negotiations on these proposals have made little progress.

Bovine Somatotropin

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received about separating milk from cows being treated with bovine somatotropin while field trials are carried out; what replies he has given; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I have received a number of representations. My replies have explained that the safety of BST was carefully established before certificates to hold the field trials were granted. Milk from cows treated with BST is entirely safe, so there is no reason for it to be treated differently.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects to receive the recommendations of the veterinary products committee on the possible licensing of bovine somatotropin.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The veterinary products committee will be in a position to make recommendations when the companies manufacturing bovine somatotropin have generated and submitted all data necessary to support their product licence applications and these have been assessed.

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations Her Majesty's Government have had from the veterinary products committee about the use of certain BST products on cows; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I have referred to the veterinary products committee several applications from companies interested in developing and marketing BST products for use in milk production. Following the committee's advice that the data relating to the products' safety and quality are satisfactory, permission for field trials has been granted.

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what advice he has received about the health consequences of the use of BST in milk production; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The advice that I have received is that BST is safe for use in milk production.

Listeria

Mr. Gregory: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action his Department is taking to deal with the problem of listeria in food.

Mr. MacGregor: My Department is jointly responsible with the Department of Health for regulations under the Food Act. The Department of Health has already issued a statement on 12 January 1989 on the evidence available to it from routine monitoring of human cases of listeriosis.

As part of our continuing review of the impact of new technology on the safety of food, MAFF has in hand work which we have commissioned on the cooking conditions required to kill listeria monocyctogenes in poultry meat. A major study, jointly funded by industry, on physical aspects of microwave cooking is also under way.

I can assure my hon. Friend that as soon as the appropriate scientific information is available from these studies, we will immediately consider with the Department of Health what further action is required if any is revealed to be necessary. We shall also take into account evidence from other outside studies.

Meanwhile my Department, together with the Department of Health, and industry representatives, is considering current food processing, distribution, retailing and labelling of cooked and chilled ready-to-eat products to ensure that safety margins are satisfactory.

Animal Feedstuffs

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what organisations he is consulting in his preparation of the code of practice on the production of animal feedstuffs containing processed animal products; and when he intends making his code of practice public.

Mr. Donald Thompson [holding answer 16 January 1989]: Proposals for the code of practice on the production of animal feedingstuffs will be discussed with those organisations whose members will be affected. Officials have already discussed the matter with the United Kingdom Agricultural Supply Trade Association (UKASTA) and will consult others, including the British Poultry Federation (BPF) and the National Farmers Union (NFU).

Parallel discussions are also being conducted with other organisations to consider a code of practice for manufacturers of animal protein used in animal feedingstuffs. The codes will be published when the consultations have been completed and the points made in those consultations have been properly assessed.

Tuberculosis

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (a) how many animals and (b) what types of animals have been subject to movement restrictions applied under article 15 of the Tuberculosis (England and Wales) and (Scotland) Orders 1984 for each year since 1984; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson [holding answer 16 January 1989]: Under articles 15 in both the Tuberculosis (England and Wales) Order 1984 and the Tuberculosis (Scotland) Order 1984 notices may be served on occupiers of premises where animals are or may be infected with tuberculosis. Details of the numbers of notices served and types of animals to which they applied for each of the last five years are as follows:

	[1] Number of notices served on occupiers of premises	Types of animals
1984	Nil	—
1985	5	Deer
1986	Nil	—
1987	Nil	—
1988	12	Deer
	1	Alpacas and Guanocos

[1] As notices served can apply to a number of animals it is not possible to say how many animals were involved.

Protein Processing Plants (Salmonella)

Mr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer to the hon.

Member for South Shields of 14 December, Official Report, columns 579-80, what statutory restrictions there are on the release of the identity of the 21 protein processing plants that were found to contain salmonella in 1987; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson [holding answer 16 January 1989]: There is no statutory prohibition on the release of the information. However details about protein processing plants are collected by my Department in order to carry out inspections as provided for under the Diseases of Animals (Protein Processing) Order 1981. It would be wrong to disclose such data for purposes other than those for which they were collected.

SCOTLAND

Dornoch Rail Bridge

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will reassess the Dornoch rail bridge project as a result of recent developments in possible financial support.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: No. Rail investment is a matter for British Rail. However, the Government's commitments to improved transport in the area are shown by the substantial investment of over £100 million in improving the A9 north of Inverness. British Rail's commitment to the rail line is shown by new signalling investment and the introduction of sprinter units.

Health Boards (Delegation of Functions)

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland under what statutory authority health boards delegate functions to their committees.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Section 2(10) of the National Health Service (Scotland) Act 1978 and paragraph 11 of part II of schedule 1 to that Act; and regulation 8 of the National Health Service (Health Boards: Membership, Procedure and Payment of Subscriptions) (Scotland) Regulations 1975 (SI 1975 No. 197 (S 16)).

Water

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people resident in Scotland live in areas of Scotland which receive their water services from an authority based in England.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: No part of Scotland receives water services from an authority based in England.

Fishing

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if there are any prosecutions pending or in progress concerning the use of monofilament net; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Proceedings in respect of three such cases have been raised but have yet to be concluded.

YTS

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many YTS places are available for 17 and 18-year-olds in the travel-to-work areas for Girvan, Ayr and Cumnock; how many of them have registered for places; how many have been placed; and how many of those remaining without placement have had benefit withdrawn, for each of the above areas, in the last 12-month period for which figures are available.

Mr. Lang: The information sought either does not exist or is unavailable in the form requested. Information on YTS places is not available by travel-to-work area; nor is it possible to count how many places are filled by young people of a particular age. Information on young people registered with the careers service cannot distinguish between those seeking work only and those seeking a YTS place; nor is it available centrally for separate areas within Ayrshire. Information on numbers of young people who have no benefit and have not been placed on YTS is not available. All 18-year-olds however are entitled to income support.

Health Service Managers

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the value of the money spent on merit awards to Health Service managers.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: This information is not held centrally.

Parliament House, Edinburgh

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the cost of terminating the services of employees providing security services at Parliament House, Edinburgh.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: To date, no such costs have been incurred.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the annual cost of the private security service now in operation at Parliament House, Edinburgh; and if he will indicate the contractors to whom payments are made.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: A joint contract for the provision of security services at Parliament House and Edinburgh sheriff court was awarded from 1 January 1989 for a period of three years to Burns International Security Services (UK) Ltd. The annual cost of the contract is confidential for commercial reasons, but the lowest tender for the service required was accepted.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the annual cost of providing security services at Parliament House, Edinburgh, in 1987-88; and how many people were employed to provide the security services.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The cost of providing security services at Parliament House in the year ending 31 December was £137,000. Eleven staff were employed.

Education Reform

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the total spending on the preparation of the recently launched school boards video.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The cost of production was £31,000.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has recently met representatives of the Scottish Council of Independent Schools.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: No.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has received any representations since June 1987 from the Scottish Council of Independent Schools.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Yes.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many representations he has received from parents' organisations regarding opting out of the local education authority system.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Two since we published our paper "Self-Governing Schools" on 7 December.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many representations he has received from teachers unions regarding opting out of the local education authority system.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: One.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many representations he has received from the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities regarding opting out of the local education authority system.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: None.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many representations he has received from local education authorities regarding opting out of the local education authority system.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: None.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has received any requests from non-maintained or independent schools to opt-in to the state sector since 22 November 1988.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: No.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has contacted the Audit Commission regarding the financial aspects of schools opting out.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: No. The remit of the Audit Commission does not extend to Scotland.

Grant Maintained Trust

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if an application for financial assistance has been received from the grant maintained trust.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: No.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has met or received representations from the grant maintained trust.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Yes.

Lockerbie Air Disaster

Sir Hector Monro: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the Government's contribution towards the Lockerbie air disaster appeal.

Mr. Rifkind: The sum of £150,000 has been contributed to the appeal fund. Parliamentary approval for this will be sought in a supplementary Supply Estimate for the prisons, hospitals and community health services, etc., Scotland Vote (Class XVI, Vote 14). Pending that approval this expenditure has been met by a repayable advance from the contingencies fund.

Ayrshire and Arran Health Board

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what appointments or reappointments he has recently made to the Ayrshire and Arran health board; whether each has any known political affiliation; and what such affiliation is in each case.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 16 January 1989]: The only recent appointment (in July 1988) was that of Mrs. J. A. C. McNally of Ayr, who is a qualified nurse and was appointed to fill a vacancy left by a nurse. Members are appointed according to the individual contributions which they can bring to the board.

Teachers

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has received any representations regarding section 88 of the Education Act; and how many teachers were dealt with under such provisions in each of the years 1985-86 to the most recent date for which information is available.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Following the issue to all schools and further education colleges in October 1988 of an explanatory paper about the proposed repeal of section 88 of the Education (Scotland) Act 1980, the following bodies have responded:

Convention of Scottish Local Authorities;
Teachers' Side of the Scottish Joint Negotiating Committee for School Education;
Scottish Secondary Teachers Association;
National Association of Schoolmasters/Union of Women Teachers (Scotland);
Central Regional Council;
Borders Regional Council;
Orkney Islands Council;
The views of two individuals have also been received.

Information on the number of cases in which education authorities have invoked section 88 of the Act is not held centrally.

The main committee of inquiry, which reported in October 1986, provided details for the period from 1975 in an appendix to its report.

EMPLOYMENT

Equal Pay

12. Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he has met the chairman of the Equal Opportunities Commission to discuss changes to equal pay legislation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: My right hon. Friend has not discussed changes to equal pay legislation with the EOC chairman. I understand that the commission will shortly be publishing a consultative document about the legislation.

Labour Statistics

13. Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the current levels of employment in the United Kingdom.

14. Mr. Roger King: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the size of the employed labour force in December 1983, December 1986 and December 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Fowler: The work force in employment in the United Kingdom was 25,739,000 in June 1988—the highest level on record. This compares with 24,041,000 in December 1983 and 24,982,000 in December 1986. In December 1979 the work force in employment was 25,486,000—about a quarter of a million less than latest estimates.

18. Mr. Ken Hargreaves: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the current level of unemployment in Lancashire.

Mr. Lee: In November 1988 the level of unemployment in Lancashire was 48,039—a fall of 14,787 over the last 12 months.

20. Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment in how many parliamentary constituencies unemployment fell by 50 per cent. or more between September 1983 and September 1988.

Mr. Nicholls: Between September 1983 and September 1988 unemployment fell by 50 per cent. or more in 44 parliamentary constituencies in Great Britain.

30. Mr. Summerson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people classed as long-term unemployed were without jobs in December 1988 and December 1983; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: Unemployment figures are analysed by duration quarterly. In October 1988 the number of unemployed claimants who had been unemployed for one year or more in the United Kingdom was 885,504 compared with 1,142,899 in October 1983—a fall of 257,395 over the period. This comparison is slightly affected by changes in the coverage of the count.

41. Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what percentage of those in employment in the north-west are in manufacturing industries; and what was the comparable figure in 1979.

Mr. Lee: Estimates of the civilian work force in employment in manufacturing industries in regions are not available as the self-employed and work-related Government training programmes statistics are not analysed in this way.

In June 1988, the latest date for which figures are available, 23 per cent. of the total civilian work force in employment (which is the sum of employees in employment, the self-employed and participants in work-related Government training programmes) in the north-west region were employed as employees in employment in manufacturing industries. The comparable figure for June 1979 was 34 per cent.

50. Mr. David Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many 16 to 18-year-olds were unemployed in December 1983 and December 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope: In November 1988, the latest date for which figures are available, there were 5,826 people aged under 18 claiming unemployment-related benefits. The recent extension of the guaranteed offer of a YTS place to all those aged under 18 not in full-time education or employment means there is now no need for these young people to be unemployed. Consequently, only a few now remain entitled to unemployment-related benefits following the associated change from September 1988 in the benefit regulations for under 18-year-olds. In December 1983 an estimated 199,600 people under 18 were claiming unemployment-related benefits.

52. Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the rate of change in unemployment levels in the last 12 months in East Anglia.

Mr. Lee: In November 1988 the level of seasonally adjusted unemployment in the East Anglia region was 43,500, compared with 61,100 in November 1987, a fall of 17,600 or 28·8 per cent. over the last 12 months.

53. Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the current level of unemployment in London.

Mr. Lee: In November 1988 the level of seasonally adjusted unemployment in Greater London was 259,800, a fall of 67,000 over the last 12 months.

54. Sir Marcus Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the current levels of unemployment in Yorkshire and Humberside.

Mr. Lee: In November 1988 the level of seasonally adjusted unemployment in the Yorkshire and Humberside region was 209,800, a fall of 41,500 over the last 12 months.

65. Mr. Neil Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people were self-employed in the United Kingdom in December 1988 and December 1979, respectively; and if he will make a statement.

106. Mr. Robert B. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people are currently self-employed in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: In June 1988, the latest date for which estimates are available, there were 2,985,000 self-employed in the United Kingdom. In June 1979 there were 1,906,000. Currently 12 per cent. of the work force in employment are self-employed.

69. Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the levels of unemployment in the south-west of England.

Mr. Lee: In November of 1988 the level of seasonally adjusted unemployment in the south-west region was 118,700, a fall of 37,200 over the last 12 months.

70. Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the levels of unemployment in the east midlands.

Mr. Lee: In November 1988 the level of seasonally adjusted unemployment in the east midlands region was 130,900, a fall of 31,100 over the last 12 months.

85. Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the percentage change in the level of unemployment in Barnsley since 1985.

Mr. Lee: In November 1988 the number of unemployed claimants in Barnsley local authority areas was 12,649, compared with 16,739 in November 1985, a fall of 4,090, or 24·4 per cent., over the three-year period. The figures are affected by the change in the compilation of the count in March 1986 to reduce over-recording and by the change in the coverage from September 1988 due to new benefit regulations for young people aged under 18.

98. Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give the unemployment figures for (a) one year ago, (b) two years ago, (c) three years ago and (d) the latest available date.

Mr. Lee: The table shows seasonally adjusted unemployment in the United Kingdom for November 1985, 1986, 1987 and 1988.

Unemployed claimants[1]

November	Number
1985	3,052,900
1986	3,086,700
1987	2,604,400
1988	2,108,800

[1] Seasonally adjusted, consistent with the current coverage.

103. Mr. Holt: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the current levels of unemployment in the northern region of England.

Mr. Lee: In November 1988 the level of seasonally adjusted unemployment in the northern region of England was 163,800, a fall of 23,300 over the last 12 months.

104. Mr. Knapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the current levels of employment in the west midlands.

Mr. Lee: In June 1988, the latest date for which figures are available, there were 2,354,000 people in the civilian work force in employment in the west midlands region. This represents an increase of 234,000, or 11 per cent. since June 1983. The civilian work force in employment is the sum of employees in employment, the self-employed and participants in work-related Government training programmes.

107. Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what are the three industries or services in the United Kingdom which have provided the largest increase in employment over the most recent 12-month period for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: Between June 1987 and June 1988, the most recent 12-month period for which figures are available, the largest increase in employees in employment in the United Kingdom were observed in the following industries:

	Number	Per cent.
Business Service	+ 93,000	+ 7·3
Hotels and Catering	+ 49,000	+ 4·4
Education	+ 34,000	+ 2·0

110. Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment which travel-to-work area had the lowest level of unemployment and which had the highest level of unemployment at the most recent available date; what were their respective levels of unemployment; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: In November 1988 Crawley travel-to-work area had the lowest rate of unemployment at 1·8 per cent. and Cookstown travel-to-work area had the highest rate of unemployment at 29·5 per cent.

112. Mr. William Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the current levels of employment in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Lee: Between March 1983 and June 1988 the work force in employment in the United Kingdom increased by 2,178,000 to 25,739,000, the highest level on record. This rising trend has now continued for more than five years. The figures have been adjusted for the effects of seasonal variations. The work force in employment is the sum of employees in employment, the self-employed, Her Majesty's forces, and participants in work-related Government training programmes.

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what he will do in 1989 to help reduce unemployment in north Devon in general and the Ilfracombe areas specifically.

Mr. Lee: My Department operates a wide range of employment, enterprise, and training measures and offers services in support of small firms and tourism, all of which are available to people throughout north Devon, including Ilfracombe.

During the 12 months to November 1988 unemployment in the Devon, North constituency fell by 909—26 per cent. of the November 1987 figure. In the same period unemployment in the Barnstaple and Ilfracombe travel-to-work area has fallen by 713—24 per cent. of the November 1987 figure.

Construction Industry

15. Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what steps he intends to take to reduce fatalities in the construction industry in the London area.

Mr. Nicholls: In my answer to the hon. Member for Aberdeen, South (Mr. Doran) earlier today, I set out the action being taken to improve safety in the construction industry on a national basis. As regards London, the action being taken is the same.

47. Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what action he intends to take to reduce deaths and crippling injuries in the construction industry.

66. Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what steps he intends to take to reduce fatalities in the construction industry caused by the use of crane excavators and dumpers.

Mr. Nicholls: New regulations are being prepared which provide for the management and co-ordination of health and safety on multi-contractor sites, increase the number of safety supervisors in smaller companies and amend the site notification procedure to identify sites where there are high-risk activities. The introduction of regulations which would make the wearing of safety helmets compulsory on constructions sites is also planned.

In addition to concentrating on the inspection of the more hazardous activities in the industry. Health and Safety Executive inspectors will also be paying more attention to the quality of site management and its ability to manage health and safety. They will be looking at the level of training and supervision that has been provided and the precautions that have been taken to prevent accidents. They will pursue their inquiries and any enforcement action to the highest levels in companies which do not measure up to the standards expected of them.

55. Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what action he intends to take to ensure that health and safety law is enforced more stringently on those who have charge of others on construction sites.

Mr. Nicholls: I am confident that the law is already being enforced stringently. However, new regulations are being prepared which provide for the management and co-ordination of health and safety on multi-contractor sites and increase the number of safety supervisors in smaller companies.

The Health and Safety Commission has also recently published two booklets aimed at improving safety management in the construction industry and in future the Health and Safety Executive inspectors will be paying special attention to the quality of site management and its ability to manage health and safety.

Inspectors will also be looking at the level of training and supervision that has been provided and the precautions that have been taken to prevent accidents. They will pursue their inquiries and any enforcement action to the highest levels in companies which do not measure up to the standards expected of them.

62. Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what action he intends to take to protect those members of the public who stray on to construction sites.

Mr. Nicholls: At visits to construction sites, inspectors of the Health and Safety Executive will continue to remind employers and contractors of their obligation under section 3 of the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974 to ensure that the health and safety of persons not in their employment, including members of the public, is not affected by the way in which they carry out their operations. Enforcement action will be taken in appropriate cases where this duty is not met.

The Health and Safety Executive is currently revising its published guidance to the industry on the safety of children at construction sites and will continue to use the media to remind contractors, children, parents, teachers and members of the public before major school holidays of the dangers of construction sites.

91. Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what steps he intends to take to reduce fatalities in the construction industry due to poor maintenance of plant and equipment.

Mr. Nicholls: New regulations are being prepared which provide for the management and co-ordination of health and safety on multi-contractor sites, increase the number of safety supervisors in smaller companies and amend the site notification procedure to identify sites where there are high-risk activities.

In addition to concentrating on the inspection of the more hazardous activities in the industry, Health and Safety Executive inspectors will also be paying more attention to the quality of site management and its ability to manage health and safety.

They will be looking at the level of training and supervision that has been provided and the precautions that have been taken to prevent accidents such as those arising from poor maintenance of plant and equipment. They will continue to draw attention to Health and Safety Executive published guidance on the maintenance of plant and equipment.

Inspectors will pursue their inquiries and any enforcement action to the highest levels in companies which do not measure up to the standards expected of them.

96. Mr. McKelvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what steps he intends to take to reduce fatalities in the construction industry due to electrical hazards.

Mr. Nicholls: New electricity at work regulations have recently been proposed to the Secretary of State by the Health and Safety Commission and are currently being considered. They are directed at the prevention of injury due to electrical hazards at all places of work including construction sites.

Other new regulations are being prepared which provide for the management and co-ordination of health and safety on multi-contractor sites, increase the number of safety supervisors in smaller companies and amend the site notification procedure to identify sites where there are high-risk activities.

In addition to concentrating on the inspection of the more hazardous activities in the industry, health and safety executive inspectors will also be paying more attention to the quality of site management and its ability to manage heath and safety.

They will be looking at the precautions that have been taken to prevent accidents, such as those arising from electrical hazards, and will continue to draw attention to HSE published guidance. A new guidance note "Avoiding Danger from Underground Services" will be published in the near future.

Inspectors will pursue their inquiries and any enforcement action to the highest levels in companies which do not measure up to the standards expected of them.

102. Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what action he intends to take to reduce the number of deaths from construction accidents.

Mr. Nicholls: New regulations are being prepared which provide for the management and co-ordination of health and safety on multi-contractor sites, increase the number of safety supervisors in smaller companies and amend the site notification procedure to identify sites where there are high-risk activities. The introduction of regulations which would make the wearing of safety helmets compulsory on construction sites is also planned.

In addition to concentrating on the inspection of the more hazardous activities in the industry, HSE inspectors will also be paying more attention to the quality of site management and its ability to manage health and safety.

They will be looking at the level of training and supervision that has been provided and the precautions that have been taken to prevent accidents.

They will pursue their inquiries and any enforcement action to the highest levels in companies which do not measure up to the standards expected of them.

105. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what steps he intends to take to reduce fatalities in the construction industry caused by fires and explosions.

Mr. Nicholls: New regulations are being prepared which provide for the management and co-ordination of health and safety on multi-contractor sites, increase the number of safety supervisors in smaller companies and amend the site notification procedure to identify sites where there are high-risk activities.

In addition to concentrating on the inspection of the more hazardous activities in the industry, Health and Safety Executive (HSE) inspectors will also be paying more attention to the quality of site management and its ability to manage health and safety.

They will be looking at the precautions that have been taken to prevent accidents such as those arising from fires and explosions and will continue to draw attention to HSE published guidance on fire and explosion risks. A new guidance note "Avoiding Danger from Underground Services" will be published in the near future.

Inspectors will pursue their inquiries and any enforcement action to the highest levels in companies which do not measure up to the standards expected of them.

109. Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what steps he intends to take to reduce fatalities in the construction industry caused by falling materials or objects.

Mr. Nicholls: New regulations are being prepared which provide for the management and co-ordination of health and safety on multi-contractor sites, increase the number of safety supervisors in smaller companies and amend the site notification procedure to identify sites where there are high-risk activities. The introduction of regulations which would make the wearing of safety helmets compulsory on construction sites is also planned.

In addition to concentrating on the inspection of the more hazardous activities in the industry, Health and Safety Executive (HSE) inspectors will also be paying more attention to the quality of site management and its ability to manage health and safety.

Inspectors will be looking at the level of training and supervision that has been provided and the precautions that have been taken to prevent accidents such as those caused by falling materials and objects and will continue to draw attention to HSE published guidance on this subject. They will pursue their inquiries and any enforcement action to the highest levels in companies which do not measure up to the standards expected of them.

"Employment for the 1990s"

16. Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what representations he has received following the publication of the White Paper, "Employment for the 1990s", and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Fowler: To date, over 300 organisations and individuals have made representations about the White Paper "Employment for the 1990s". The overwhelming majority have expressed interest in and support for the establishment of the new training and enterprise councils.

Tourism

17. Mr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many representations he has received in response to his tourism review; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: The review team has spoken to almost 150 individuals and organisations in the tourism industry in preparing the report. In addition, I have received a number of written submissions which have also been seen by the review team. I have also received a number of representations on matters of tourism policy which I shall be considering in addition to the report from the review team.

21. Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when he last met the chairman of the British Tourist Authority to discuss the promotion of tourism in the north-west of England.

Mr. Lee: I last met the chairman of the British Tourist Authority on 9 November 1988. Discussions related to the promotion of tourism in all parts of the country.

22. Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people were employed in tourism and tourism-related employment in the United Kingdom in December 1988 and December 1983; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: The latest available estimate for employment in tourism-related industries relates to September 1988, when there were 1·4 million employees in employment in tourism-related industries. The equivalent estimates for September and December 1983 are 1·2 million and 1·1 million respectively.

23. Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the progress of the tourism review.

Mr. Fowler: I hope to consider the report on this shortly.

24. Mr. Butterfill: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what action he is taking to support tourism and leisure industries within traditional seaside resort towns.

Mr. Lee: The development of the tourism and leisure industries in seaside towns is primarily a matter for the private sector and the local authorities. The national and regional tourist boards provide support and advice through a range of marketing and development activities.

34. Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many applications were received by the tourist boards for section 4 tourist grant; what were the total funds awarded in 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: In 1988, 694 applications were considered for assistance by the English tourist board under section 4 of the Development of Tourism Act 1969. The total value of assistance offered during this period was £12·3 million.

Rural Areas

19. Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what specific proposals he has to reduce unemployment in rural areas.

Mr. Cope: Specific measures introduced by my Department and others to help rural areas are described in "Action for Rural Enterprise" available to Members from the House of Commons Library. Since this was published, our adult training provision has been reorganised and enhanced by the introduction of employment training and we are currently examining ways of further improving rural access to our programmes and services.

Employment Training

25. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement about the progress of the employment training scheme in inner city areas.

Mr. Nicholls: Employment training is progressing well in inner city areas, as it is elsewhere. Information on the numbers in training in inner city areas will be available at the end of January.

36. Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he will provide the latest available figures for (a) the numbers of places and (b) the numbers of trainees in employment training.

Mr. Nicholls: There is provision for up to 300,000 places on employment training once the programme is fully operational. At 6 January there were 111,000 people training on the programme.

42. Mr. Stevens: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people are currently undertaking training on the employment training scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: The number of people training on employment training at 6 January 1989 was 111,000. This is a tremendous achievement after just four months of the programme's operation and is a reflection of the considerable interest shown by unemployed people in getting quality training to help them get back into a job.

48. Mr. Ground: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the progress of the employment training programme.

Mr. Nicholls: Employment training has made a tremendous start. On 6 January, just four months after the programme's launch, there were already 111,000 people training on the programme.

58. Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what proportion of places on employment training have been taken up by workers aged 50 years or more; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: The information available is for those aged 51 years and over. So far, about 5 per cent. of all those joining the programme have been in this age group. The programme will continue to provide opportunities for unemployed people over 50 who want to improve their prospects of getting a job through quality training.

81. Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what plans he has to meet the general secretary of the Trades Union Congress to discuss the employment training scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: I have no plans to do so. Employment training has made a very successful start with over 100,000 people training after just three months. The policy adopted at the last conference of the Trades Union Congress towards the programme cannot help long-term unemployed people to get back into jobs.

83. Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on his proposals to meet the skill shortages currently encountered by British industry and commerce.

Mr. Cope: I refer my hon. Friend to the training section of the White Paper "Employment for the 1990s", published last month. About 100 training and enterprise councils are to be established with this as one of their prime goals. The business growth through training programme also announced in the recent White Paper will help employers to develop strategies for the training and development of their staff in line with business objectives.

The Training Agency plays a strategic role in helping employers to plan and take action to develop occupationally specific skills. It seeks to develop young people and to help reskill unemployed adults with programmes to meet labour market needs. Both YTS and employment training are delivered in close collaboration with local industry and commerce.

88. Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he will publish estimates of the effects of his White Paper, "Employment for the 1990s", on employer-based training; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope: The aim of the new framework for training set out in the White Paper is to ensure that training is carried out to the scale and to the quality our economy will require in the 1990s.

97. Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what representations he has received from Bury council on the employment training scheme.

Mr. Nicholls: My right hon. Friend has not received any representations from Bury metropolitan borough council about employment training. Bury college had a contract with the Training Agency to operate as a training agent for employment training. The decision of the borough council to terminate this contract following threatened industrial action by the local branch of NALGO is most deplorable. This cannot possibly be of any help to unemployed people in Bury.

113. Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he will provide the latest available figures for those transferring to employment training from the community programme.

Mr. Nicholls: By the end of October 1988, the latest date for which information is available, a total of about 6,000 people had transferred from the community programme to employment training.

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what percentage of employment training places are employer based.

Mr. Nicholls: At 6 January there were 111,000 people training on employment training. Information on the percentage of trainees in employer based training is not yet available, but will be available at the end of this month.

Employer Networks

26. Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what role he proposes for employer networks in the training and employment councils proposed in his White Paper, "Employment in the 1990s"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope: In some areas local employer networks might form the nucleus of a training and enterprise council. In other areas training and enterprise councils might absorb their functions or link with them in a constructive way.

Job Clubs

27. Mr. Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the progress of job clubs.

92. Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the current number of job clubs in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: There are currently 1,220 job clubs open. Since April 1986, when central records began, 121,494 people participating in the job club programme have found jobs and a further 31,268 have gone into other positive outcomes, such as training, a place on the community programme or the enterprise allowance scheme. Currently, 71 per cent. of all those leaving a job club do so having achieved a positive outcome. The shape of the programme for 1989-90 is currently under consideration as part of the employment service's annual planning round.

I am pleased that job clubs are continuing to give such positive help to long-term unemployed people who are at a disadvantage in the labour market.

EC (Ministerial Meetings)

28. Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he has any plans to meet the other Employment Ministers of the European Economic Community countries to discuss unemployment; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope: The next full meeting of European Community Labour and Social Affairs Ministers will be on 6 March at an informal meeting of the Labour and Social Affairs Council. The United Kingdom will continue its efforts to ensure that trainig and employment growth are Community priorities. Meanwhile, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and I also have frequent bilateral meetings with other Community Ministers.

Lost Working Days

29. Dr. Michael Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many working days were lost through strikes in 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: The estimate of the number of working days lost through stoppages of work due to industrial disputes in 1988 is not yet available. The most recently available figure for a 12-month period is for the period ending October 1988 during which it is provisionally estimated that 3,719,000 working days were lost.

33. Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what action he intends to take to reduce the incidence of injuries causing people to be off work for over three days.

Mr. Nicholls: Responsibility for ensuring the health and safety of people at work is laid upon employers by the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974. The efforts of the Health and Safety Commission and Executive are targeted on those areas of work where people are at the greatest risk from death, injury or disease.

For 1988-89 the Government increased provision to the commission by £6·7 million gross above the level previously planned. In 1989-90 planned provision will be raised by a further £8·8 million gross, allowing for gross expenditure of £118·3 million. The planned provision for 1989-92 allows for real growth in the HSE's activities. This will enable the executive to increase the number of inspectors and the amount of inspection planned to promote and secure compliance with the law in order to help prevent occupational fatalities, injuries and diseases.

56. Mr. Kirkhope: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many working days were lost through strikes in December 1987 and December 1978; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: The number of working days lost through stoppages of work due to industrial disputes in December 1987 was 60,000; the comparable figure for December 1978 was 542,000.

YTS

31. Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give details of the number of vacancies on the YTS in the Norwich area.

Mr. Cope: At 16 December 1988, of 2,920 agreed YTS places in the Norwich local authority district 787 were unfilled.

35. Mr. Grocott: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether the Government are in a position to carry out their commitment of a guaranteed YTS place; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope: Yes. There are more than sufficient unfilled YTS places available in all areas of the country to fulfil the guarantee of the offer of a suitable YTS place to all who apply.

77. Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is his estimate of the number of unemployed 16 and 17-year-olds who have not been offered a YTS place.

Mr. Cope: This information is not available. Once young people leave full-time education they are not required to tell the local authority career service what they are doing. There are a number of options open to 16 and 17-year-olds. Those who chose other options will not, of course, be offered a YTS place. However there are more than sufficient YTS places available in all areas of the country for all who apply.

79. Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the effects on the 16 to 17-year-old group of the operation of the YTS placement scheme.

Mr. Cope: YTS has been a resounding success for young people and employers alike, providing good quality structured vocational training in the foundation skills which young people need at the start of their working lives.

87. Mr. Andrew MacKay: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a further statement on the progress of two-year YTS.

Mr. Cope: The scheme continues to play a major role in meeting the training needs of young people and employers. Over 2 million young people have been in YTS since its inception and around three quarters of trainees currently find employment or go into further education or training. We shall continue the drive for positive outcomes through YTS, in particular nationally recognised vocational qualifications for all trainees and employment on completion of their training.

90. Mr. Couchman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many young people are currently training on two-year YTS; and if he will make a statement.

108. Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many young people are currently on YTS training schemes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope: At the end of December 1988 there were 419,900 young people in training on YTS.

As the Government made clear in the recent White Paper "Employment for the 1990s", YTS has been a resounding success. The task now is to increase still further the contribution which YTS can make to meeting the needs of the changing labour market.

111. Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he has any plans to improve the safety of YTS training; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope: Health and safety remain of paramount importance in YTS. There is a contractual requirement on all managing agents to secure the health, safety and welfare of trainees both in work placements and in off-the-job training. In addition, a positive commitment to health and safety is one of the criteria which have to be fulfilled by managing agents as a condition of approved training organisation status.

We constantly try to improve health and safety and we have in hand improved training materials for both young people and trainers.

Pre-entry Closed Shop

32. Mr. Batiste: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what recent representations he has received about the pre-entry closed shop; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: Ministers and officials in the Department of Employment continue to receive letters from employers and employees describing difficulties that they have experienced as a result of the operation of pre-entry closed shops. As announced in our recent White Paper, "Employment for the 1990s", the operation of the pre-entry closed shop will be examined over the coming months and we will take any further legislative steps that are needed on this or any other aspects of industrial relations which constitute a barrier to employment.

Small Businesses

37. Mr. Marland: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many counselling sessions were provided by the small firms service during the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope: In 1987-88 the small firms service in England conducted 39,138 counselling sessions.

57. Mr. Franks: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he has any plans to meet the director general of the Confederation of British Industry to discuss the development of small businesses.

Mr. Cope: My right hon. Friend and I are in regular contact with the CBI to discuss issues affecting small firms and other matters.

59. Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he has any plans to meet the British Venture Capital Association to discuss the development of small businesses.

Mr. Cope: I met Mr. John Nash, chairman of the British Venture Capital Association when I opened the BVCA financial forum on 1 December. I have no immediate plans to meet representatives from the BVCA again in the near future but I do have regular contact with the association.

Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make it his policy to provide the House with an annual report on the state of small businesses in Britain.

Mr. Cope: The annual report of the small firms service is published and is also sent to hon. Members and placed in the Library each year.

Consideration is being given to the possibility of including in the report in future material covering a wider range of small firm's matters. Reports and discussions on various aspects of small businesses appear in the Employment Gazette.

Skill Shortages

38. Mr. Beaumont-Dark: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what plans he has to deal with skill shortages in British industry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope: I refer my hon. Friend to the training section of the White Paper "Employment for the 1990s", published last month. Some 100 training and enterprise councils are to be established with this as one of their prime goals. The business growth through training programme also announced in the recent White Paper will help employers to develop strategies for the training and development of their staff in line with business objectives.

The Training Agency plays a strategic role in helping employers to plan and take action to develop occupationally specific skills. It seeks to develop young people and to help to reskill unemployed adults with programmes to meet labour market needs. Both YTS and employment training are delivered in close collaboration with local industry and commerce.

Enterprise Allowance Scheme

39. Mr. Bright: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people in 1988 joined the enterprise allowance scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: In the period from 1 January to 20 December 1988, 100,435 people joined the enterprise allowance scheme. Since the scheme began early in 1982, more than 400,000 unemployed people have been helped to start their own business.

Safety at Work

40. Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what action he intends to take to preserve the lives of people at risk of being killed during simple routine work.

Mr. Nicholls: Responsibility for ensuring the health and safety of people at work is laid upon employers by the Health and Safety at Work, Act 1974. The efforts of the Health and Safety Commission and Executive in promoting compliance with the Act are targeted on those areas of work where people are at the greatest risk, regardless of whether the activity is simple and routine or complex and varied.

For 1988-89 the Government increased provision to the commission by £6·7 million gross above the level previously planned. In 1989-90, planned provision will be enhanced by a further £8·8 million gross, allowing for gross expenditure of £118·3 million. The planned provision for 1989-90 allows for real growth in HSE's activities over the next three years. This will enable the executive to increase the number of inspectors and the amount of inspection planned to promote and secure compliance with the law in order to help prevent occupational fatalities, injuries and diseases.

Disabled People

43. Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what new proposals he has to improve the employment prospects for disabled people.

Mr. Lee: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Mid-Kent (Mr. Rowe) on 6 December 1988 at column 141.

71. Mr. Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement about the number of disabled people in employment training.

Mr. Nicholls: Comprehensive information on the number of disabled people on employment training is not yet available. Early indications suggest that about 6 per cent. of those joining the programme have disabilities.

Accident Prevention (HSE Report)

44. Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what action he intends to take in response to the recent report published by the Health and Safety Executive's accident prevention advisory unit.

Mr. Cope: The Health and Safety Commission has recently published two booklets aimed at improving safety management in the construction industry and in future HSE inspectors will be paying special attention to the quality of site managment and its ability to manage health and safety.

New regulations are also being prepared which provide for the management and co-ordination of health and safety on multi-contractor sites, increase the number of safety supervisors in smaller companies and amend the site notification procedure to identify sites where there are high-risk activities. It is intended to introduce soon regulations which would make the wearing of safety helmets compulsory on construction sites.

Industrial Training Boards

45. Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many representations he has received on the future of the industrial training boards; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: We have received several representations from industrial training boards and interested organisations about the future of ITBs since the publication of our White Paper "Employment for the 1990s". The Government believe that the voluntary commitment of employers to independent sectoral bodies will yield better results than regulation based on statutory powers. Independent industry-level training organisations have an important role to play in setting standards and forecasting skill needs for their industries. We shall, therefore, be consulting each industrial training board and the appropriate employers' organisations with a view to drawing up a timetabled programme for each board to become an independent non-statutory body.

Wages Councils

46. Mr. Janman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many representations he has received on the future of wages councils following the publication of his White Paper, "Employment in the 1990s"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: Fifteen such representations have been received up to 10 January. Final decisions on the future of wages councils will be taken in the light of responses to the 1988 consultation document on wages councils, published with the White Paper, which invites comments by 3 February.

Training and Vocational Experience

49. Mrs. Gillian Shephard: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on progress of the training and vocational education initiative.

Mr. Cope: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Stevenage (Mr. Wood) on 6 December 1988 at column 142.

Inner city Initiative

51. Mr. Carrington: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on his Department's contribution to the inner city initiative.

Mr. Cope: My Department makes a substantial contribution to inner city regeneration through its employment. Training and enterprise programmes which bring an estimated expenditure of £1·1 billion to the 57 urban programme authorities. Our aim is to ensure that inner city residents share in the growing prosperity of their cities and, in particular, to help them acquire the self-confidence, training and motivation to enable them to compete on equal terms in the jobs market, or in setting up and running their own businesses.

In addition to existing programmes we have, as part of the action for cities programme, committed £3·25 million this year towards the development of 30 schools/industry compacts which guarantee jobs or training to school-leavers. We have opened six new inner city offices of the small firms service and appointed specialist inner city business advisers.

We have established a £600,000 loan fund to support projects by local enterprise agencies in inner cities and extended the guarantee on Government loans to small firms in task force areas to 85 per cent. We have provided extra training and advice for enterprise allowance scheme participants and given special help to unemployed people with language, literacy and numeracy difficulties. We continue to improve access to information on jobs and training opportunities and on my Department's programmes.

Productivity

60. Mr. Waller: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the increase in productivity in (a) 1987 and (b) 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: Productivity in manufacturing, as measured by output per person employed, was 7·3 per cent. greater in 1987 than in 1986. Figures for the first 10 months of 1988 show an increase of 7·2 per cent. over the corresponding period of 1987. Productivity for the economy as a whole was 2·8 per cent. higher in 1987 than in 1986. Figures for the first half of 1988 show a 3·4 per cent. increase over the first half of 1987.

Labour Market Information System

61. Mr. Favell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement about the development of the computer-assisted local labour market information system.

Mr. Cope: The computer-assisted local labour market information system is based in each of the Training Agency's 57 area offices, and holds information on local employers and their skills and training needs. It is used in planning training and vocational education provision, to help ensure that local labour market needs are met effectively.

CALLMI was introduced in 1986. A database of, on average, about 1,000 employers per area office has been built up and the labour market analyses produced have made an important contribution to the planning of work-related further education, YTS and employment training.

Further developments will focus mainly on exploring the most effective means of co-operation with other collectors and users of local labour market information, such as chambers of commerce and local authorities. It is expected that training and enterprise councils, as they are set up, will take over responsibility for local aspects of LMI including CALLMI.

VAT

63. Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many new registrations were made for value added tax in 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope: In 1987, the latest year for which figures have been published, the estimated number of new registrations for value added tax was 205,000. The net increase in the number of VAT-registered businesses in 1987 was 45,000, or nearly 900 a week on average. The indications are that the rate of increase during 1988 has been faster.

Wages

64. Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what discussions he has had with trade union leaders regarding wage increases.

Mr. Nicholls: My right hon. Friend has had none. Pay is primarily a matter for employers and employees, or their representatives, to determine in the light of their own circumstances.

93. Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the current level of wage increases; what was the figure for the same month in 1988; and if he will make a statement on his Department's policy in relation to the level of wage increases.

Mr. Nicholls: Latest available figures show that the underlying increase in average earnings in the 12 months to October 1988 was 9 per cent. over the economy as a whole. This compares with 8 per cent. in the 12 months to October 1987. The average earnings index reflects all movements in pay, including those related to output and productivity, as well as basic pay settlements.

The Department's approach to pay is set out in chapter 3 of the White Paper "Employment in the 1990s", a copy of which has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will update the information on establishments underpaying and prosecutions for under-payment given in his answer of 2 December, Official Report, columns 431-32.

Mr. Nicholls: The information given in my answer of 2 December was incorrect in that, for the years 1979 and 1982, it included prosecutions which were not for underpayment offences. Revised figures, with those for 1988 updated to include the whole of that year, are given in the following table.

	Establishments underpaying	Prosecutions[1]
1979	10,969	9
1980	12,154	8
1981	10,074	8
1982	9,269	4
1983	9,842	2
1984	9,461	2
1985	9,064	2
1986	8,205	2
1987	4,443	4
1988	[2]5,597	10

[1] For failing to pay not less than the legal minimum.
[2] Provisional.

Industrial Relations (Industry and Commerce)

67. Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he has any plans to meet the chairman of the Advisory Conciliation and Arbitration Service to discuss industrial relations in the private sector of British industry and commerce; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: My right hon. Friend has no such plans. Ministers of the Department meet the chairman of ACAS from time to time to discuss matters of mutual interest.

Vocational Qualifications

68. Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many qualifications have been accredited to date under the National Council for Vocational Qualifications scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope: The National Council for Vocational Qualifications has accredited 80 qualifications to date and is making good progress towards the objectives set by the Government in 1986. The council is on target to have the first four levels of the national vocational qualification framework in place by 1991.

95. Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when he will be in a position to publish findings of the National Council for Vocational Qualifications inquiry into vocational qualifications; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope: The National Council of Vocational Qualifications was established in September 1986, following the report of the review of vocational qualifications working group, to develop a national vocational qualification framework covering all occupations and to improve qualifications themselves by basing them on the standards of competence required in employment. Good progress is being made on both fronts and the council is on target to have levels 1-4 of the framework in place by 1991. A copy of the council's first annual report has been placed in the House of Commons Library.

100. Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he has any plans to draw up a scheme of comparable competence for vocational qualifications on completion of the European Community internal market in 1992; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope: The Training Agency is already co-ordinating the United Kingdom's response to the European community's initiative to establish the comparability of vocational qualifications in the Community. It is expected that this work will continue beyond 1992 and that the results of the first qualifications to be compared will be published this year.

Long-term Unemployment (London)

72. Mr. Fishburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many representations he has received following the publication of the survey of long-term unemployed in London.

Mr. Lee: My right hon. Friend has received no representations following the publication of the surveys of vacancies and longer-term unemployed people in London.

Business Growth Through Training Programme

73. Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many representations he has received on his proposals to introduce the business through training programme outlined in the White Paper, "Employment for the 1990s."

Mr. Cope: No representations on the proposal to introduce the business growth through training programme has been received so far.

Employer-School Compacts

74. Mrs. Maureen Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many areas have applied for development funding for employer-school compacts to date; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope: Forty-six areas applied for funding to establish a compact. Partnerships of employers and education authorities in 30 of these areas are currently preparing applications for operational funding. I have been pleased by the positive response from both employers and the education service and I look forward to the establishment of the first compacts later in the spring.

Training and Enterprise Councils

75. Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when he will announce the formation of the first training and enterprise council.

Mr. Cope: The first training and enterprise council is likely to be approved before the end of 1989.

78. Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many representations he has received on his proposals to create training and enterprise councils contained in the White Paper, "Employment for the 1990s"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope: Since the White Paper was published on 5 December over 300 individuals and organisations have written to this Department to inquire about training and enterprise councils. I am very pleased about the positive response from employers who, throughout the country, are already meeting to discuss the formation of training and enterprise councils in their local area.

TUC

76. Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he has any plans to meet representatives of the Trades Union Congress to discuss the effect of his Department's policies and legislation on trade unions.

Mr. Nicholls: My right hon. Friend has no current plans for such a meeting.

National Training Task Force

80. Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what representations he has received on his proposals to introduce the national training task force contained in his White Paper, "Employment in the 1990s"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Fowler: I refer my hon. Friend to my earlier reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Derby, North (Mr. Knight).

Computerisation

82. Mr. Day: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many organisations are currently using the national on-line manpower information system; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: The national on-line manpower information system (NOMIS) is a computer system which gives fast and flexible access to a wide variety of official statistics covering topics such as population, employment and unemployment. It is run for the Employment Department: Training Agency to assist in labour market analysis and planning, but access by other Government Departments and a range of outside users is also encouraged.

Currently, about 160 organisations use NOMIS. Just under half of these are local government organisations, a third are academic institutions, and the remainder are split between Government Departments and commercial users. The House of Commons Library has had a terminal giving access to the system since 1985. Use of NOMIS is growing rapidly. During 1988 the number of registered users doubled.

Retail Prices Index

84. Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he has any plans to ask the retail prices index advisory committee to undertake a further review of any methodological issues.

Mr. Lee: The committee is currently considering the effect of the abolition of domestic rates on the construction of the retail prices index, and a report is expected on this shortly. It will then go on to consider the way in which expenditure on holidays should be taken into account in the index and to review progress on implementing longer-term recommendations made in its last report in 1986.

Loan Guarantee Scheme

86. Dr. Hampson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many applications have been made following the new incentives for loans under the loan guarantee scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope: The rate of applications under the loan guarantee scheme has almost doubled since 1987, to over 180 a month. This follows the introduction in January 1988 of simplified administrative procedures for loans up to £15,000 and the increase in the maximum guarantee for businesses in the 16 inner city task force areas from June 1988.

I have recently announced that the scheme is to be continued and that the maximum guaranteed loan will be increased from £75,000 to £100,000.

Enterprise Agencies

89. Mr. Colin Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the progress and number of enterprise agencies currently operating in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Cope: We know of 429 local enterprise agencies operating in the United Kingdom. Of these, 389 are approved under provisions of the Income and Corporation Taxes Act 1988 (previously under provisions of the Finance Act 1982) which allows business sector sponsors tax relief on their contributions to such bodies.

The local training and enterprise councils announced in the White Paper "Employment for the 1990s" will provide a means for ensuring that the provision of small firms counselling and training relevant to local needs is extended and co-ordinated. I would expect enterprise agencies and others to be able to bid for sub-contracts for counselling, training and enterprise councils themselves. This will rest with training and enterprise councils themselves. This will be an important opportunity for local enterprise agencies.

Skills Unit

94. Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement about the work of the skills unit.

Mr. Cope: The Training Agency skills unit was established in 1986 to gather, analyse and interpret information on overall skills supply and demand, and disseminate that information to those concerned in training and vocational education. The main focus of its work is changes brought about by new technology, changing work practices and new materials. The skills unit produces a regular skills bulletin, a skills monitoring report, and research reports. Copies are held in the Library. It also provides a reference and library service and mounts seminars, workshops and conferences. Its output is being used by industry and commerce, including chambers of commerce and employers' organisations, by the education service, by training providers, and by other Government Departments.

Health and Safety Executive

99. Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what action he intends to take to ensure that contractors comply with the law and report deaths, major injuries and three-day accidents to the Health and Safety Executive.

Mr. Nicholls: Inspectors of the Health and Safety Executive will continue to remind contractors of the requirement under the Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations 1985 to report deaths, major injuries and "over three-day" injury accidents to the appropriate enforcing authority. They will continue to take prosecutions for failure to report accidents in appropriate cases.

Hotels

101. Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the number of new hotel developments completed in the United Kingdom in 1988.

Mr. Lee: The English tourist board's survey of investment in major tourism projects shows that during 1988, 58 new hotel developments with a value of greater than £500,000 were completed in England.

Industrial Action (Ballots)

114. Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many representations he has received on changing the balloting rules to be followed by trade unions before industrial action; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: The statutory requirements which must be satisfied if a trade union organising industrial action is to protect itself against legal action by an employer, customer or supplier, or by a member, are set out in part II of the Trade Union Act 1984 as amended by the Employment Act 1988, and in section 1 of the Employment Act 1988. There have been a number of representations, in a variety of forms, about changes to these requirements.

A draft statutory code of practice to promote desirable practices in relation to the conduct by trade unions of ballots on industrial action was published last November. The consultation period on the draft code continues until 3 February. Some representations received on the draft code have also included suggestions for further changes to the relevant primary legislation.

Workers Charter

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if there are any plans to introduce within the context of the European single market a workers charter, providing for the rights of workers to be involved in discussions regarding mergers and closures of companies.

Mr. Nicholls: My right hon. Friend has no such plans.

Training Agency

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he has any plans to reduce the number of staff employment by the Training Agency: and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 11 January 1989]: The staffing levels of the Training Agency, as of other Government organisations, are under constant review in the interests of improving efficiency and effectiveness. The major programmes for which the Training Agency is responsible are for the most part demand led; and as unemployment falls there may be some reduction in the total staff required.

Playground Accidents

Mr. Robert G Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the number of children who turn up at hospital because of playground accidents for every month since his Department started collecting figures; and if he will make a statement about those figures.

Mr. Nicholls: [pursuant to his reply, 9 December 1988, c. 381]: My earlier reply gave details, in a table, of injuries to children 18 years of age or younger as reported to the Health and Safety Executive's factory and agricultural inspectorates. I regret that the table contained an error.

There were no fatal accidents to children in playgrounds other than school playgrounds in 1987-88.

The following table gives the correct figures.

Injuries to children, 18 years of age or younger, reported to the Health and Safety Executive's factory and agriculture inspectorates for years beginning 1 April.

	1986-87		1987-88[1]
	Fatal	Major[2]	Fatal	Major[2]
Resulting from sports activities in school playgrounds	0	995	2	765
Resulting from indoor and outdoor play activities in school	0	2,161	1	1,234
In playgrounds other than those in schools	1	87	0	84

[1] Provisional.
[2] Major injuries as scheduled under the Reporting of Injuries' Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations, 1985 (RIDDOR).

Young People

Mr. Flannery: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what representations he has received regarding the Health and Safety Commission's view on the need for control of young persons' hours of work.

Mr. Nicholls: My right hon. Friend has had none.

Mr. Flannery: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is his policy with regard to the continuation in force of section 74 of the Factories Act restricting the employment of young people on specific operations.

Mr. Nicholls: The restrictions on the employment of young people in certain lead processes should remain.

Skillcentres

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what would be the estimated cost of closing down all the skillcentres, including redundancy payments.

Mr. Cope: The White Paper "Employment for the 1990s" explains that the Skills Training Agency must become more competitive and more viable, and that it would be in a better position to seize opportunities for business if it were in the private sector where it could adopt best commercial practices. My right hon. Friend's reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Stamford and Spalding (Mr. Davies) on 21 December, at column 331, announced the appointment of Deloitte, Haskins and Sells to advise on the feasibility of such a move. Its terms of reference do not cover the cost of closure of all skillcentres, and we have no plans to ask it for such an estimate.

Restart Interviews

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Battersea, Official Report, 22 December, column 465, what investigations he has made into the non-attendance at restart interviews of 1·5 million out of the 6·5 million called for interview since 1 July 1986.

Mr. Lee: Everyone who fails to attend a restart interview is followed up. Some people do not attend for acceptable reasons—for example, they may have started or be about to start work. However, those people who, after two invitations, fail to attend their restart interviews are investigated further to find out their reasons for not attending. If claimants still do not attend an interview without a valid reason their benefits are withdrawn until they agree to attend.

Written Answers to Questions

Wednesday 18 January 1988

TRANSPORT

Motorways (Matrix Indicators)

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish in the Official Report those motorways, or sections of motorways, that are fitted with matrix indicators which permit written messages to be conveyed on them; and what plans he has for extending this facility to all motorways.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Matric indicators are now fitted on almost all sections of motorway in England. The few remaining sections will have similar facilities as soon as practicable. The messages that the indicators currently display for incidents and occasionally for inclement weather are advice on recommended speeds and lane closures.

Enhancements are under way to add some written text messages, within the limits of the indicator size. These include replacing the 'end of restriction' symbol with the word "End" and the automatic display (on the M25) of the word "Fog" when visibility is automatically detected to have fallen below pre-determined limits.

Recent developments in sign technology offer the opportunity to display longer written text messages on variable message signs. These are now being used at specific locations where this ability is worth while.

Information about the position on motorways in Wales and Scotland is a matter for my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Wales and for Scotland respectively.

Design Stage Work (Local Authorities)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the local authorities that have been allowed to bid for design stage work under section 6 of the Highways Act; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: My right hon. Friend has agreements with more than 90 local highway authorities under which they carry out design work on trunk roads as agents under section 6 of the Highways Act 1980. The authorities do not bid for this work. Standard terms and conditions for all agency agreements are negotiated nationally with the local authority associations.

Motorboat and Yachting Accidents

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many accidents involving (a) motorboats and (b) yachts were reported in British territorial waters in each of the past five years; and how many instances in each year were fatal.

Mr. Portillo: Records kept by Her Majesty's coastguard classify such incidents under the headings of (a) powered pleasure craft and (b) sailing craft. The totals below reflect incidents occurring within the United Kingdom search and rescue region for the last five years for which information is available.

	Number of incidents	Lives lost
1983
Powered pleasure craft	621	9
Sailing craft	774	5
1984
Powered pleasure craft	579	9
Sailing craft	551	23
1985
Powered pleasure craft	659	18
Sailing craft	720	9
1986
Powered pleasure craft	722	27
Sailing craft	710	7
1987
Powered pleasure craft	738	15
Sailing craft	686	2

Irish Sea Ferries

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether contingency plans exist to deal with serious accidents involving ferries on routes across the Irish sea; what arrangements are made to test these plans; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: Contingency plans exist at all coastguard regions to deal with serious maritime incidents, including ferry accidents in the Irish sea. The plans are frequently reviewed and tested from time to time with the full co-operation of the other emergency services including MOD, local authorities and the ferry companies.

The plans are tested using both live scenarios and simulated exercises, the last exercise taking place on the Holyhead-Dun Laoghaire route in September 1988 and the next scheduled for Belfast-Liverpool in the spring of 1989.

Exhaust Emissions

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to ensure that exhaust emission standards agreed by the European Community are fully implemented in the United Kingdom; and what efforts are currently being made by his Department to encourage the fitting of catalytic devices to all motor vehicles sold within the United Kingdom.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: We shall be consulting in the next few months on draft regulations which will fully implement the new European Community standards in the United Kingdom.

Catalysts are a valuable aid to achievement of these standards. We expect most new petrol engined cars over 1·4 litres that comply with the limits will use them. The standards for cars under 2 litres have also been set so as not to inhibit the further development of lean burn technology, which has the dual benefit of improving fuel economy and minimising carbon dioxide emissions.

Aircraft Noise

Mr. Wells: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has received the report of the Stansted noise preferential routes working group; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: My noble Friend Lord Brabazon has received the report and is arranging for it to be published. It should be available early next month. My noble Friend will arrange for copies to be placed in the House Libraries.

The group endorses the present policy of concentrating aircraft along routes overflying the smallest number of people and recommends:

(i) a change to the route which goes to the south and west of Bishop's Stortford which would move it from its present position roughly halfway back towards the line proposed by the Department in December 1987;

(ii) no change to the other routes presently being flown but with revisions to instructions to pilots to improve track keeping on several of these routes;

(iii) an early change to pilots' instructions, introducing a different turning point for non-jet aircraft on the Bishop's Stortford route, both to provide some relief from overflying of the town by these aircraft and to assist preparation of appropriate instructions for (i) and (ii); and

(iv) further measures aimed at assisting better track keeping and avoiding overflying of noise-sensitive areas around Dunmow, Thaxted and St. Elizabeth's Home.

My noble Friend is minded to accept the proposed change to the route around Bishop's Stortford. However, moving a route to relieve someone of noise means someone else will suffer. There will therefore be further public consultation and the further views of local people will be taken into account before he decides whether any substantial change should be implemented.

My noble Friend is arranging for an exhibition of the proposals to be held as part of this consultation. The exhibition will open at Dunmow on 7 March, moving thereafter to Thaxted, Sheering and Bishop's Stortford. Full details of dates and opening times will be publicised in due course.

Suzuki SJ Model

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement about his Department's tests on Suzuki SJ models and his discussions with Suzuki and the Consumers Association.

Mr. Peter Bottomley [holding answer 16 January 1989]: As indicated in my answer to the hon. Member for Pembroke (Mr. Bennett) on 14 December at column 659, the transport and road research laboratory recently completed a series of stability tests. The results have been placed in the Library of the House. These covered a range of multi-purpose four-wheel drive vehicles, not just Suzukis. The tests were part of a continuing process by the Department to understand the vehicles' handling characteristics and to contribute to international discussions.

Results from the tests were brought to the attention of the manufacturers and the Consumers Association. The tests indicated that none of the vehicles exhibited handling characteristics which could automatically be regarded as unsafe, or that would justify the calls from the Consumers Association to ban any one model.

The Department is advising drivers that they should realise that multi-purpose vehicles cannot be expected to handle on road as well as modern passenger cars; that sudden and excessive steering manoeuvres should be avoided; and that seatbelts should be worn by rear seat passengers, as well as those in front seats, wherever possible.

Manufacturers can reduce the risks of injuries to occupants through improvements to the handling and secondary safety characteristics of the vehicles and through offering clear and improved advice to owners and drivers of the limitations of their vehicles. This advice can also cover safe road driving techniques as well as advice on other aspects such as the most appropriate replacement tyres. The Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders has been asked to provide a list of action on these lines which manufacturers are planning to take. The Department has drawn the attention of the Motor Agents Association to the need for dealers to offer clear advice to customers about the characteristics of the vehicles.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

University Salary Scales

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what discretion is allowed to individual universities in determining academic salary scales.

Mr. Jackson: Acceptance of the salary scales for academic and related staff notified by the UGC to universities is voluntary. The salary structure for non-clinical academic and related staff provide flexibility to reward merit and special responsibilities and to counter problems of recruitment and retention. The salaries of clinical academic staff are broadly comparable with NHS doctors and dentists.

Teachers (Salaries)

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what discretion is allowed to local education authorities in determining teachers' salaries.

Mrs. Rumbold: The 1988 school teachers' pay and conditions document gives LEAs discretion in certain circumstances over the scale point on which an individual teacher should be paid. It also allows LEAs to award incentive allowances, which may be given to teachers in shortage subjects or hard to fill posts, in relation to the assumption of extra responsibilities or in recognition of classroom excellence.

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will give the present salary scales for secondary school teachers.

Mrs. Rumbold: All qualified teachers except head and deputy head teachers are paid on a single incremental scale as follows:

Scale point	Salary (£)
1	7,920
2	8,235
3	8,547
4	8,859

Scale point	Salary (£)
5	9,591
6	10,422
7	11,049
8	11,673
9	12,351
10	13,134
11	13,863

A teacher may, in addition, receive one of five incentive allowances:

Rate	Amount (£)
A	801
B	1,200
C	2,400
D	3,201
E	4,401

Source: School Teachers' Pay and Conditions Document 1988

Teachers of the Deaf

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) how many people need to qualify annually as teachers of the deaf, according to his Department's figures, in order to maintain the supply of qualified teachers of the deaf;

(2) how many people who qualified as teachers of the deaf during the academic year 1987-88 were seconded under the grant-related in-service training scheme;

(3) how many people training as teachers of the deaf in the academic year 1988-89 are seconded under the grant-related in-service training scheme;

(4) if current training arrangements will ensure that sufficient qualified teachers of the deaf are available to teach hearing-impaired children in ordinary and special schools.

Mrs. Rumbold: In 1987-88, the first year of the local education authority training grants scheme, funding for those qualifying as teachers of the deaf was not identified separately from that for teachers of other special educational needs. For 1988-89, we have made separate provision through the scheme to support the in-service training of 110 specialist teachers of the deaf. With the numbers qualifying through initial training this is estimated to be sufficient to maintain the supply of qualified teachers of the deaf.

PRIME MINISTER

International Agriculture Trade

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Prime Minister which Department has primary responsibility for representing consumers' interests in matters of international agricultural trade.

The Prime Minister: My right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture is responsible for all aspects of agricultural policy. He works closely with other ministers including my right hon. and noble Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, who is responsible for United Kingdom policy on international trade negotiations and has overall responsibility for consumer affairs. The views of consumers and of bodies representing them are welcomed by the Government at all stages of policy formation, and consumer bodies are regularly consulted about developments in the Uruguay round of negotiations which is currently under way in the general agreement on tariffs and trade.

Pensioners

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Prime Minister what response she made to the Manchester Trades Union Council Pensioners and Trades Unionists Association's letter concerning charges for eye tests and dental checks, the pensioners' Christmas bonus and the means testing of prescription charges.

The Prime Minister: The private secretary to my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Health has replied on my behalf setting out the Government's policy on these matters.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Republic of Ireland (Court Cases)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Attorney-General on how many occasions witnesses have refused to travel to the Republic of Ireland to give evidence in cases where the Criminal Law Jurisdiction Act 1976 has been employed.

The Attorney-General: Assessment of the evidence necessary to initiate proceedings in the Republic of Ireland under the 1976 Act, and of the availability of such evidence, is a matter falling within the responsibility of the Irish prosecuting authorities.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Biological Weapons (Iraq)

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what evidence there is concerning the development of biological weapons by Iraq; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: I refer to the answer given by my noble Friend the Minister of State, Lord Glenarthur, on 3 February 1988 to Lord Kennet in another place, in which he state that as Iraq is a party to the 1972 biological weapons convention which prohibits the development or possession of biological weapons, any evidence that they might be developing such a capacity would be a matter of serious concern.

Human Rights (Burma)

Mr. Lester: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made on the re-establishment of human rights in Burma following recent disturbances.

Mr. Eggar: In statements on 9 and 20 September 1988, we deplored the shooting of unarmed demonstrators and called for greater freedom and multi-party democracy. The Twelve issued similar statements on 19 August and 23 September. My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State reiterated our concern in his speech to the United Nations General Assembly on 28 September.

In addition, aid to Burma has been suspended and dealings with the State Law and Order Restoration Council (SLORC) confined to essential business only. Further steps are under consideration.

Mr. Lester: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of Thailand over the position of refugees from Burma who are not currently being assisted by the United Nations High Commission for Refugees.

Mr. Eggar: None.

Military Training (Burma)

Mr. Lester: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what facilities are offered to the Burmese Government in the field of military training.

Mr. Eggar: None.

Free Elections (Burma)

Mr. Michael Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what help he is giving towards the holding of free elections in Burma; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: With our partners in the Twelve, we have made it clear—in a series of statements and EC demarches to the Burmese State Law and Order Restoration Council (SLORC)—that a lasting solution to Burma's problems can come about only if the Burmese people's manifest desire for greater freedom and multi-party democracy is met. In addition, aid has been suspended and dealings with the SLORC confined to essential business only. Further steps are under consideration.

Fax Facilities

Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many United Kingdom consulates and embassies (a) have and (b) do not have fax facilities.

Mr. Eggar: There are:

(a) 119 posts with fax facilities; and a further 38 posts are about to install facsimile equipment.

(b) 70 posts without fax.

Chemical Weapons

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his estimate of the number of countries which either currently possess chemical weapons or are likely to do so before the end of 1989 if international agreement to control or discourage the holding of such weapons is not achieved.

Mr. Waldegrave: It is not possible to provide a precise figure. Very few countries provide information on activity in this area. It is believed that between 15 and 20 countries either possess or are actively seeking to acquire chemical weapons.

WALES

Water Act 1973

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list directions made by his Department to the Welsh water authority under section 30(6) of the Water Act 1973, giving the dates and the nature of each such direction.

Mr. Grist: None. This section has subsequently been repealed by the Public Utility Transfers and Water Charges Act 1988.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what directions he has made under the provisions of section 31(3) of the Water Act 1973, to the Welsh water authority, at any time since the coming into force of this Act, giving the date and nature of any such directions.

Mr. Grist: None.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on what dates since the coming into force of the Water Act 1973 he has made any regulations under section 32(2) of the Act in relation to the installation of meters.

Mr. Grist: There were no regulations made under section 32(2) of the Water Act 1973. This section has subsquently been repealed by the Public Utility Transfers and Water Charges Act 1988.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many applications have been made to the Welsh Office since the implementation of the Water Act 1973 for permitting a new discharge into a river in Wales; and, of these, how many have been approved and how many have been rejected.

Mr. Grist: Approximately 300 applications for new or altered discharges into rivers, including storm water and emergency overflows, have been received by the Welsh Office since June 1985. None has been rejected, although many have been approved with more stringent conditions than were originally sought. Prior to this, water authorities were not obliged to apply formally for consent unless specifically requested to do so by the Department and comparable figures are therefore not available.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

World Development Movement

Mr. Mills: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the cost of answering letters enclosing printed slips sent to hon. Members and sent on to him on behalf of the current lobby by the world development movement.

Mr. Chris Patten: Answering letters about aid is an integral part of the work of the Overseas Development Administration. To isolate the cost of answering this particular group of letters would involve disproportionate cost, but if I had to make a rough calculation I would estimate that the cost has been about the same as that of a small NGO development project financed under our joint funding scheme in a developing country.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Members' Income and Allowances

Mr. Allen: To ask the Lord President of the Council what was the value of (a) the office and secretarial allowance and (b) the salary of hon. Members for each of the years for which figures are available, taking the latest year as 100.

Mr. Wakeham: The information requested is given in the tables.

Office costs allowances in actual and real terms since 1969

	Office costs allowance[1] Actual £ PA	Real terms[2] £ PA	Real term OCA as a percentage of January 1988 OCA
1 October 1969	500	2,936	13·8
1 January 1972	1,000	4,916	23·1
1 April 1974	1,750	6,722	31·6
1 April 1975	3,200	10,101	47·4
13 June 1976	3,512	9,174	43·1
13 June 1977	3,687	8,184	38·4
13 June 1978	4,200	8,679	40·7
13 June 1979	4,600	8,536	40·1
14 February 1980	6,750	11,056	51·9
13 June 1980	8,000	12,270	57·6
13 June 1981	8,480	11,683	54·8
13 June 1982	8,820	11,131	52·3
13 June 1983	12,000	14,611	68·6
13 June 1984	12,437	14,403	67·6
1 April 1985	13,211	14,399	67·6
1 April 1986	20,140	21,301	100·0
1 April 1987	21,302	21,616	101·5
1 January 1988	21,302	21,302	[3]100·0
1 April 1988	22,588	22,054	103·5

[1] Formerly the Office, Secretarial and Research Allowance.
[2] At January 1988 prices (RPI).
[3] The rate of OCA in force in January 1988 was introduced on 1 April 1987.

Parliamentary salary in actual and real terms: 1911 to date

	Parliamentary Salary Actual £ PA	In Real Terms[1] £ PA	Real Term Salary as a per cent. of January 1988 salary
1 April 1911	400	n/a	—
17 July 1937	600	11,071	49·1
1 April 1946	1,000	14,088	62·4
1 July 1957	1,750	15,077	66·9
16 October 1964	3,250	23,543	104·4
1 January 1972	4,500	22,121	98·1
13 June 1975	5,750	17,091	75·8
13 June 1976	6,062	15,836	70·2
13 June 1977	6,270	13,917	61·7
13 June 1978	6,897	14,253	63·2
13 June 1979	9,450	17,537	77·8
13 June 1980	10,725	16,450	73·0
13 June 1980[3]	11,750	18,022	79·9
13 June 1981	13,150	18,117	80·3
13 June 1981[3]	13,950	19,219	85·2
13 June 1982	14,510	18,312	81·2
13 June 1983	15,308	18,638	82·7
1 January 1984	16,106	19,158	85·0
1 January 1985	16,904	19,146	84·9
1 January 1986	17,702	18,999	84·2
1 January 1987	18,500	19,111	84·7
1 January 1988	22,548	22,548	100
1 January 1989	24,107	[2]	[2]

[1] At January 1988 prices (RPI).
[2] Not available until the January 1989 Retail Prices Index (RPI) is published in February.
[3] Pensionable rate.

DEFENCE

Royal Navy Armaments Depot, Trecwn

Mr. Geraint Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the long term future of the Royal Navy armaments depot at Trecwn, Pembrokeshire.

Mr. Neubert: The consultative document which promulgated our decision in principle to close the Royal Navy armaments depot at Milford Haven, referred to the need for further consideration of the future of RNAD Trecwn. I have now commissioned an in-depth Ministry of Defence study into the future role and task of the depot which will commence in late February. The final study report should be submitted to management by the summer of 1989. There will be a full consultation with the trade unions and local authorities during the review period.

Challenger Tank

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if, pursuant to his statement of 20 December 1988, Official Report, columns 283-84, he will state the dates of the intermediate milestones at which Vickers Defence Systems will have to demonstrate satisfactory progress on developing Challenger II mark 2.

Mr. Sainsbury: The intermediate milestones referred to by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence in statement of 20 December 1988, Official Report, columns 283-4, for the Challenger II mark 2 demonstration phase, are September 1989 and March 1990, respectively.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the fire control system of the Challenger I will be improved to meet the same specifications as the fire control system that is planned to equip the Challenger II mark 2.

Mr. Sainsbury: The fire control system proposed for Challenger II mark 2 will certainly be significantly superior to that currently fitted to Challenger I. Improvements to the latter are under development, but full comparability with Challenger II mark 2 could not be achieved cost effectively.

Aldermaston and Burghfield (Programme Audits)

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if, pursuant to his answer 22 of December 1988, Official Report, column 380, he will state the nature and contents of the written communication from the BNFL team carrying out the programme audit at Aldermaston and Burghfield received by the Ministry of Defence on 15 November 1985.

Mr. Sainsbury: The communication from the BNFL team, received on 15 November 1985, confirmed the scope of the audit to be conducted.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many meetings were held between his officials and the BNFL team carrying out the programme audit at Aldermaston and Burghfield; and on what dates they occurred.

Mr. Sainsbury: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 15 December 1988 at column 686. Within the consultation and communication referred to therein were eight formal meetings held between 20 November and 18 December 1985.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Homosexual Offences

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many men aged between 16 and 21 years were (a) prosecuted, (b) convicted and (c) imprisoned for consensual sexual acts with other males aged 16 to 21 years in each of the years 1986 and 1987; and in the case of those imprisoned, what were the maximum, minimum and average sentences served by such men;

(2) how many men were imprisoned in the United Kingdom in each of the years 1986 and 1987 for consensual homosexual acts with males between the ages of 16 and 21 years; and what were the maximum, minimum and average sentences served by such men.

Mr. John Patten: The available information, which may be incomplete, is given in the following table. This information relates to cases where the victim was aged 16 or over and it is not possible from the information held centrally to isolate cases where the victim was aged 16-20. Comparable information for Scotland and Northern Ireland is not readily available.

Males proceeded against for consensual homosexual acts[1]
England and Wales

	Year
	1986	1987
Offenders aged 16-20
Proceeded against	26	41
Found guilty	21	35
Sentenced to custody	[2]1	[3]1
Offenders aged 21 and over
Sentenced to custody	34	32
Maximum sentence imposed	4 years	5 years
Minimum sentence imposed	2 months	3 months
Average sentence imposed	18·8 months	18·3 months

[1] Buggery or attempted buggery with a male person aged 16 or over with consent; indecency between males.
[2] One month youth custody.
[3] One year youth custody.

Dogs

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the representations he has received from Nottingham city council regarding legislation to make it an offence for the owner of a dog to allow it to stray; and what has been his response.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Nottingham city council has written twice about a bylaw which would make it an offence to allow a dog to stray. The council's first letter proposed the idea and the second was a response to a request for further information. Subsequently we have been engaged in consultations and will be writing again to the council shortly.

Correspondence

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he is taking on correspondence from Mrs. Ann Marie Parker of 43 Moor road, Strelley estate, Nottingham, regarding her son Andrew, currently in Glen Parva young offenders centre.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The governor of Glen Parva remand centre was asked to reply to Mrs. Parker's letter of 31 December and did so on 13 January.

Rule 43 Prisoners

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to review the ruling that allows those sent to prison for child abuse immediately to seek to go on rule 43 when in prison.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Any prisoner may ask to be removed from association with other prisoners under rule 43. It is for the prison governor to decide, in the light of any evidence of danger to the prisoner, whether to grant such a request. We have no plans to change this procedure.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to receive the report on rule 43 prisoners; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We expect the report to be available for wider consideration within the Department during February and March and to receive proposals by April 1989.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he is taking to reduce the number of prison inmates at present in prisons in England and Wales who are on rule 43 at their own request.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: This question is among matters being considered by the prison department working group on the management of vulnerable prisoners which is expected to report shortly.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the longest period of time that a prison inmate has been on rule 43 at his or her own request.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: As far as we can ascertain without disproportionate cost, the longest current period is 21 months.

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give the number of (a) men and (b) women of ethnic minority backgrounds who are working in (i) the prison service and (ii) the police service in England and Wales.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: For the prison service the available information is not in the form requested and derives from a survey conducted in 1986. Of some 11,500 members of the service (including staff in headquarters and regional offices) who responded to the survey, 111 stated that they were of ethnic minority origin. The results of a more recent survey of those who did not respond are currently being analysed.

On 30 September 1988 there were 942 male and 236 female police officers of ethnic minority background in police forces in England and Wales. There is no central record of the ethnic background of civilian police staff.

Broadcasting

Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will introduce amendments to the existing broadcast receiving legislation to enable domestic consumers to share satellite receiving single dish aerials without seeking official approval as licensable cable services.

Mr. Renton: A satellite receiving system serving two or more homes (commonly known as a SMATV system) is generally a licensable diffusion service for the purposes of the Cable and Broadcasting Act 1984 and thus requires a licence from the cable authority. A system carrying only the services of an IBA DBS contractor would not, however, require a licence. We are considering the future arrangements for such systems as part of the follow-up to our recent White Paper, "Broadcasting in the '90s: Competition, Choice and Quality".

Drink Driving

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list, for each police force area in England and Wales, the number of drivers given the breath test, and the percentage where the test proved positive, in respect of (a) the 1988 Christmas period and (b) Christmas 1987.

Mr. John Patten: Information on screening breath tests required and results by police force area for 1987 was published in Home Office statistical bulletin 23/88, "Statistics of Breath Tests, England and Wales", copies of which are in the Library. The official statistics for 1988 will be published later this year.

The Association of Chief Police Officers has, however, collected provisional figures for the number of screening breath tests required, and the number of positive results, in each police force area between 19 December 1988 and 1 January 1989. These are given in the following table:

Police Force Area	Number of Breath Tests	Per cent. positive
Avon and Somerset	499	22·6
Bedfordshire	361	12·5
Cambridgeshire	1,919	2·4
Cheshire	415	22·4
City of London	189	7·9
Cleveland	321	15·9
Cumbria	414	10·9
Derbyshire	1,041	7·5
Devon and Cornwall	1,284	17·9
Dorset	665	8·6
Durham	172	41·9
Dyfed-Powys	139	32·4
Essex	1,640	9·1
Gloucestershire	265	18·9
Greater Manchester	4,980	8·5
Gwent	1,529	3·8
Hampshire	1,026	16·6
Hertfordshire	544	15·4
Humberside	784	10·3
Kent	641	20·3
Lancashire	1,293	10·8
Leicestershire	886	8·9
Lincolnshire	841	7·4
Merseyside	370	36·5
Metropolitan	10,937	8·9
Norfolk	2,942	1·1
Northamptonshire	772	5·8
Northumbria	217	63·1
North Wales	1,540	5·9
North Yorkshire	470	15·1
Nottinghamshire	3,214	3·1
South Wales	351	30·8
South Yorkshire	1,012	11·9
Staffordshire	812	14·9
Suffolk	406	10·6
Surrey	757	10·0
Sussex	941	8·6
Thames Valley	2,850	7·5
Warwickshire	396	11·6
West Mercia	616	19·6
West Midlands	1,249	20·7
West Yorkshire	422	43·1
Wiltshire	548	13·3
TOTAL	41,706	10·26

NATIONAL FINANCE

Rating Revaluation

Mr. Alexander: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects to publish the findings of the Inland Revenue survey into the likely effects of the 1990 revaluation for the introduction of the national non-domestic rate.

Mr. Major: I expect that an announcement covering this point will be made shortly.

National Savings

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the numbers of deposits of less than £5 made annually in national savings ordinary accounts.

Mr. Lilley: Some 3·2 million deposits of less than £5 were made in the financal year 1987-88. These accounted for less than 1 per cent. of total deposits over that period.

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the total current number of national savings investment accounts.

Mr. Lilley: There are about 4·3 million investment accounts.

Interest Rates

Dr. Reid: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the extra borrowing costs to industry incurred by a rise of 1 per cent. in interest rates.

Mr. Major: The cost to industrial and commercial companies of a one percentage point rise in United Kingdom short-term interest rates maintained for a full year is estimated to be about £400 million. The estimate is based on their holdings of financial assets and liabilities at the end of the second quarter of 1988, the latest period for which comprehensive data are available.

Economic Model

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last reviewed the operation of the Treasury economic model.

Mr. Major: The performance of the Treasury economic model is continuously monitored and the relationships updated. It is also subject to periodic scrutiny by the Treasury academic panel.

ENVIRONMENT

Factory Building

59. Mr. Hind: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the extent of factory building in the United Kingdom in 1988.

Mr. Trippier: In the first nine months of 1988 the value of factory building in Great Britain was £1,675 million at current prices. New orders in the first 10 months of 1988 are significantly higher than the same period of 1987 which should lead to higher output.

Home Improvement Grants

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many home improvement grants were approved last year by local authorities (a) nationwide and (b) in Nottingham; and what comparable figures he has for previous years.

Mr. Trippier: Numbers of renovation grant approvals for private owners and tenants, by local authorities in England from 1985 to June 1988 appear in table 2.16 of "Housing and Construction Statistics, Part 2", No. 34. A copy is in the Library.

The available information reported by Nottingham is:

Renovations: number of grant approvals

	Conversion and improvement	Repairs	Intermediate
1985	590	568	65
1986	332	442	77
1987[1]	248	253	25
1988 Q1	n/a	n/a	n/a
Q2	n/a	n/a	n/a

[1] March and September quarters only.

Derelict Land

Mr. Heddle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a schedule giving the address and the local authority of each of the areas of urban derelict land in Staffordshire.

Mr. Trippier: Information about the location of individual plots of land is not collected by the Department. Aggregate figures for derelict land in each district or borough in England have been provided to the Department by local authorities in the course of the 1988 survey of derelict land. The report of the survey is due to be published in the summer.

Development and Conservation

Mr. Heddle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish in the Official Report a list of local authorities which have responded positively to his request to publish local plans setting out their policies and proposals for development and conservation; and what action he proposes to take to ensure that those local authorities which have not acted in response to PPG12 do so forthwith.

Mr. Chope: I am aware that many planning authorities have responded positively to PPG12 and are starting work on preparing or updating local plans. The full impact of PPG12 will not, however, be apparent for some time, as several months are normally required for plan preparation and public participation before a plan can be formally placed on deposit.

Though my right hon. Friend has powers of direction, I believe that the message to planning authorities should be a positive one—that it is in their own interests to ensure that local plans are prepared or brought up to date as quickly as possible.

Housing Development

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will state, for each year since 1980, the number of schemes for housing development for which he has refused planning permission on appeal and the numbers of homes involved.

Mr. Chope: The table gives the information recorded by the Department on planning appeals relating to housing development.

S.36 planning appeals—housing schemes

Scale of residential development	Appeals decided	Appeals dismissed	Percentage appeals dismissed
1984
Major housing[1]	527	358	68
Minor housing[2]	4,813	3,658	76
Total	5,340	4,016	75
1985
Major housing[1]	685	397	58

Scale of residential development	Appeals decided	Appeals dismissed	Percentage appeals dismissed
Minor housing[2]	6,269	4,516	72
Total	6,954	4,913	71
1986-87
Major housing[1]	906	532	59
Minor housing[2]	6,852	4,777	70
Total	7,758	5,309	68
1987-88
Major housing[1]	1,105	708	64
Minor housing[2]	8,942	6,290	70
Total	10,047	6,998	70

[1] 10 and over.
[2] Under 10 houses.

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will state, for each year since 1980, the number of schemes for housing development for which local authorities have refused planning permission and the number of homes that would have been built if planning permission had been granted.

Mr. Chope: The table gives information about decisions on planning applications for residential development. This does not indicate the number of dwellings permitted or refused because information about this is not collected centrally.

Thousands

	Minor residential developments (1–9 dwellings)			Major residential developments (10 or more dwellings)
	Decisions	Refusals	Per cent. refused	Decisions	Refusals	Per cent. refused
1979-80	73·8	24·6	33	9·5	3·2	34
1980-81	75·3	25·6	34	9·5	3·6	38
1981-82	66·7	19·5	29	9·1	3·1	35
1982-83	61·9	15·7	25	7·4	1·6	22
1983-84	69·4	17·0	24	8·2	1·8	22
1984-85	69·6	18·5	27	8·5	2·0	24
1985-86	73·9	20·4	28	9·3	2·3	24
1986-87	81·9	24·3	30	10·3	2·7	26
1987-88	92·8	29·7	32	11·4	3·2	28

House Building

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will now state the annual number of completions, for the most recent 20 year-period for which figures are available, of (i) private sector houses and flats, (ii) council and new town houses and flats and (iii) housing association houses and flats.

Mr. Trippier: The total numbers of dwellings completed in England between 1977 and 1987 by local authorities, new towns, housing associations and the private sector are published in table 6.1(a) of "Housing and Construction Statistics: 1977-1987". Figures for 1969 to 1976 are published in table 56 of "Housing and Construction Statistics: 1969-1979". Figures for 1968 are published in "Housing and Construction Statistics No. 4".

Copies of these publications are available in the Library.

Empty Housing

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list, for the most recent 20-year period for which figures are available (i) the 20 local authorities which have had the most empty council properties at the end of each year, (ii) the corresponding figures for each authority's spending on housing in (a) cash and (b) real terms and (iii) each authority's total spending in (a) cash and (b) real terms on (a) statutory functions and (b) non-statutory functions.

Mr. Trippier: I regret that information for the last 20 years, which is not in every case available in the form requested, could be provided only at disproportionate expense. Available figures for the last two years are given in the table.

Local authority	Number of vacant local authority dwellings at 1 April 1987	1986-87 Total housing expenditure £ million	Number of vacant local authority dwellings at 1 April 1988	1987-88 Total housing expenditure £ million
Birmingham	2,718	143	2,339	152
Bradford	1,490	28	1,262	33
Hackney	3,113	99	2,692	105
Islington	1,850	89	1,403	95
Kingston upon Hull	1,389	35	[1]—	[1]—
Kirklees	[1]—	[1]—	1,402	33
Lambeth	[1]—	[1]—	1,156	115
Leeds	1,644	64	1,486	67
Leicester	[1]—	[1]—	1,220	44
Lewisham	1,331	68	[1]—	[1]—
Liverpool	6,955	96	5,416	92
Manchester	4,847	71	5,166	104
Newcastle upon Tyne	1,565	41	1,651	49
Newham	2,777	57	1,961	54
North Tyneside	1,537	25	[1]—	[1]—
Nottingham	1,625	49	[1]—	[1]—
Oldham	[1]—	[1]—	1,129	29
Salford	2,221	35	1,993	37

Local authority	Number of vacant local authority dwellings at 1 April 1987	1986-87 Total housing expenditure £ million	Number of vacant local authority dwellings at 1 April 1988	1987-88 Total housing expenditure £ million
Sandwell	2,799	42	3,062	49
Sheffield	3,390	67	2,856	89
Southwark	1,952	99	1,910	87
Sunderland	2,141	34	2,106	41
Tower Hamlets	2,825	84	2,526	95
Wolverhampton	1,927	39	1,737	38

[1] Not among the 20 authorities with most vacants this year.
Note: It is not possible to provide a breakdwon into statutory and non-statutory expenditure.

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will provide an estimate of the number of council and new town properties which were empty at the end of each year for the most recent 20-year period for which figures are available.

Mr. Trippier: The available information, derived from local authorities' annual housing investment programme returns, is as follows:

Vacant council dwellings at 1 April

	thousands
1978	92
1979	100
1980	100
1981	97
1982	100
1983	114
1984	113
1985	117
1986	113
1987	112
1988	103

Note: From 1983 the figures include vacant dwellings which have been closed or acquired for demolition under the Housing Acts and, from 1987, dwellings owned by authorities outside their areas (eg overspill estates).

Corresponding information for earlier years is not available and similar information about new town dwellings is not held centrally.

Accommodation Rental

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish an estimate of the number of private sector flats and houses which have been withdrawn from use as rented accommodation each year for the most recent 20-year period for which figures are available.

Mr. Trippier: This information is not available.

Habitat Loss Surveys

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish any information which has been made available to his Department by the Nature Conservancy Council concerning habitat loss surveys which have been commissioned by the Nature Conservancy Council from Edinburgh university since 1970.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: A confidential study commissioned by the Nature Conservancy Council in 1980 from Edinburgh university was used to produce a methodology for the national countryside monitoring scheme. The first report in this series, "Changes in the Cumbrian Countryside" was published by NCC in 1987. I will arrange for copies of this report to be placed in the Library as soon as it has been reprinted.

Right-to-buy Legislation

Mr. Batiste: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he is satisfied with the response time of the Leeds metropolitan district council to applications by council tenants under the right-to-buy legislation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: I have become increasingly concerned in recent months that Leeds city council, in common with many other local authorities throughout the country, have been unable to deal with the very large volume of right-to-buy applications within the statutory timescales laid down by the Housing Act 1985. Because of my concern over such delays, several measures were introduced in the Housing Act 1988 to help prospective purchasers. Future applicants may be compensated for undue delays by having their rent held by their landlord as an advance payment on the purchase price. Assistance has also been given to authorities by enabling them to use the proceeds of sales to defray their administrative costs.

I am encouraged to learn that Leeds city council has recently increased the number of staff working on right-to-buy sales and have improved the system for dealing with applications. Efforts are being made to clear the large backlog of cases. Once this has been achieved the council is confident that normal response times will be met.

Council Tenants (Torbay)

Ms. Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has had any discussions with Torbay council about deceased persons who were council tenants and who were counted as voting in favour of the transfer of council housing.

Mr. Trippier: We received one letter from a tenant and Torbay borough council, about a deceased person receiving a ballot form. When the council was asked about this it reported that a joint tenant of a house had died without the surviving joint tenant notifying the council of the death. When the occurrence was brought to its attention the council duly amended the list of tenants and reduced by one the number of tenants entitled to be consulted.

Rent Arrears (Brent)

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the latest figure for rent arrears in the London borough of Brent; and what is the percentage of total rents payable that this figure represents.

Mr. Trippier: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Hendon, South (Mr. Marshall) on 10 November 1988, indicating for Brent as at 31 March 1988 combined arrears of rent, rates, water rates and heating service charges of approximately £16·7 million. The council has not given a separate figure for rent only, but my estimate is £8·1 million representing about 47 per cent. of the 1987-88 rent roll.

Planning Applications

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consideration he has given to compelling planning authorities to advise parish councils and adjacent owners of planning applications in their area.

Mr. Chope: Parish councils have a statutory right to be consulted on planning applications if they so wish. Local planning authorities are not required to notify the owners of adjacent property about planning applications, because those authorities are best placed to decide on appropriate publicity for particular development proposals.

Toxic Wastes

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has on the current levels of imports of toxic wastes.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: It is estimated that in 1987-88 a total of 83,000 tonnes of special waste was imported into the United Kingdom. This is estimated to represent 5 per cent. of the special waste produced in the United Kingdom.

Council House Sales

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many council house sales were completed in the Bolton local authority area during 1988 and each of the previous years; what revenue this accrued for the local authority; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: The latest table showing sales for each local authority for each year from April 1979 to June 1988 was placed in the Library in November 1988; since then we have received Bolton's September return which shows sales of 165 dwellings in the first six months of 1988-89. The following information is available for the capital value of dwellings sold in each year in Bolton.

	£ thousands
1979-80	1,733
1980-81	4,131
1981-82	2,728
[1]1982-83	1,724
1983-84	1,961
1984-85	2,374
[1]1985-86	2,177
1986-87	2,244
1987-88	2,596
[2]1988-89	1,328

[1] First three quarters only.
[2] First half only.

Rent Arrears

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a table showing the levels of rent arrears for each month in 1987 and 1988.

Mr. Trippier: English local authorities report cumulative rent arrears annually; monthly figures are not available. Estimated total arrears were £226 million at 1 April 1988, compared with £195 million a year earlier, an increase of 16 per cent. Two thirds of this increase is accounted for by the 10 authorities—all Labour controlled—with the highest cumulative rent arrears as a percentage of rent roll.

Irish Sea (Discharges)

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the name and location of the sites discharging (i) cadmium, (ii) mercury and (iii) halogenated hydrocarbons into the Irish sea and the volume of those discharges in each year from 1978 to the present.

Mr. Moynihan: Further to my answer of 10 January, the provisions of the European Community's framework directive on the discharge of dangerous substances to the aquatic environment (76/464/EEC) prohibit the disclosure of information relating to particular undertakings acquired by my Department specifically for the purposes of transmission to the European Commission under that directive. However, much of the information requested is likely to be available on the public register maintained by the North West water authority, in whose area all of the discharges referred to occur.

Planning Law

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he now expects to publish proposals for the revision of planning law.

Mr. Chope: My right hon. Friend hopes to publish a White Paper shortly containing proposals for the future of the development plan system.

Animal Welfare

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Caerphilly of 12 January, Official Report, column 745, under what circumstances the welfare of animals is a material consideration for planning decisions under article 18 of the Town and Country Planning General Development Order 1988.

Mr. Chope: The welfare of animals is material to planning decisions to the extent that it is a land-use planning consideration. Article 18 of the General Development Order does not seem relevant: it lists types of planning application on which local planning authorities must consult certain bodies before granting planning permission.

Lowermoor Water Treatment Works

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action has been taken by Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution with regard to the poisoning of fish subsequent to the incident at Lowermoor water treatment works on 6 July 1988.

Mr. Ridley: I have received reports from the South West water authority on the pollution of the rivers Camel and Allen. These have been passed to the Crown Prosecution Service and action now lies with them.

Estate Action Schemes

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much each local authority was allowed to borrow to carry out improvements under the estate action schemes; and what percentage of that money was allowed for providing additional heating facilities in their houses; for each of the last three years.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 13 January 1989]: The estate action provision since 1986-87 has been:

	£ million
1986-87	45
1987-88	75
1988-89	140

Figures for individual local authorities on the proportion of the allocations spent on heating facilities are not readily available. The proportion of the total Estate Action allocations devoted to heating and insulation improvements and associated works is estimated at 25 per cent. in 1986-87 and 24 per cent. in 1987-88. We expect a similar proportion in the current year.

Trent Valley Garden Centre (Planning Application)

Dr. Hampson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he is now in a position to decide whether or not he will call in for determination by himself a planning application in the name of Stephen Smith of Trent Valley garden centre, Doncaster road, Gunness, Scunthorpe.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 22 December 1988]: I have now directed that this application be referred to me for decision. Arangements are now being made to hold a local inquiry as soon as possible. I shall write to my hon. Friend as soon as the date of the local inquiry has been fixed.

ENERGY

Offshore Construction Industry

63. Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what assessment he has made of the ability of the United Kingdom offshore construction industry to compete with rival industries in south east Asia.

Mr. Parkinson: United Kingdom companies are constantly demonstrating their ability to compete effectively both at home and in export markets.

Electricity

Mr. Carrington: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how many units of electricity per person per annum are consumed in the United Kingdom, and in other northern European industrialised nations.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The average consumption of domestic electricity per person per annum in a range of northern European countries in 1986 was as follows:

	Domestic consumption (GWh)	Population (millions)	Average consumption (KWh)
Denmark	8,739	5	1,748
France	89,814	55	1,633
West Germany	97,570	61	1,600
England and Wales	79,154	50	1,583
Belgium	13,835	10	1,384
Holland	16,200	15	1,080

(Source of figures for domestic consumption: Handbook of Electricity Supply Statistics, Electricity Council).

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Subsidies

Mr. Allen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has investigated the possibility of fraudulent claims for European Economic Community subsidies in connection with the recent consignment of rotten meat imported from Ireland.

Mr. Donald Thompson: This is a matter for the Irish authorities and we have encouraged them to investigate this.

Butter

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the impact on United Kingdom consumers of further European Economic Community restrictions on New Zealand butter imports.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The European Commission has made proposals on the future of imports of New Zealand butter, which were debated on 30 November. The Government believe that these proposals represent a reasonable balance between the interests involved, including those of consumers.

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 10 January, Official Report, column 520, what information is available on the distribution of European Economic Community butter under European Community Regulation 2191/81; which body is responsible for administering the distribution; how institutions apply to receive it; and what records are kept of these applications.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The scheme is administered in the United Kingdom by the Intervention Board for Agricultural Produce. The board maintains registration details of 4,000 eligible institutions, of which 2,400 are currently active. Records are kept of total sales of butter under the scheme. Once registered, organisations apply to the board for monthly certificates which permit the purchase of authorised quantities of butter from suppliers. In 1988 about 20,000 certificates were issued, details of which are held by the board.

Abattoirs

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish a list of abattoirs in Britain, indicating which were inspected by his Department or its agents; how many times, and on what dates.

Mr. Donald Thompson: In 1987, the most recent year for which figures are available, each exporting abattoir received an average of nine visits from officials of my Department and each non-exporting abattoir an average of two visits. Further details could be provided only at disproportionate cost to public funds.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish a list of abattoirs in Britain, indicating which are acceptable sources for meat and meat produce exports to other countries of the European Economic Community and which are not.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I am placing in the Library of the House a list of all slaughterhouses in England and Wales which identifies those approved for the production of meat for export to other member states of the European Community.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how any enforcement actions were taken in each year since 1980 to ensure that his standards for the conduct of abattoirs are met; how many of these enforcement actions involved prosecution; and what proportion of the total number of abattoirs were subject to such enforcement actions in each year since 1980.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Enforcement of slaughterhouse hygiene legislation is the responsibility of local authorities. No records of enforcement actions are collected.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the standards and guidance given for the running of abattoirs.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The hygiene and inspection standards applicable to abattoirs in England and Wales are set out in the Food Act 1984 and the following secondary legislation:

The Slaughterhouse Hygiene Regulations 1977 as amended SI 1977 No. 1805, SI 1987 No. 2235
The Meat Inspection Regulations 1987 SI 1987 No. 2236
The Fresh Meat Export (Hygiene and Inspection) Regulations 1987 SI 1987 No. 2237

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many of his Department's staff, full-time equivalent, were involved in the supervision of abattoirs in each year since 1980.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Officers of my Department visit all abattoirs to advise on hygiene and welfare standards and, in relation to exporting premises, to ensure that Community requirements are observed. The manpower involved, for the years for which figures are available, was:

	Years
1983-84	53 man
1984-85	52 man
1985-86	56 man
1986-87	45 man
1987-88	45 man

Foxes

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research has been undertaken or commissioned by his Department relating to predation by foxes upon lambs and other farm animals; whether any such research has been published; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: My Department has not undertaken or commissioned any research relating to specifically to predation by foxes upon lambs or other farm animals as this has not been considered to be of sufficient priority compared with the other demands on our research programme.

Fish Farms

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what guidelines his Department has issued or proposes to issue concerning the siting of marine fish farms in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: My Department has issued no such guidelines. However, marine fish farms require consent from the Crown Estate Commissioners. The commissioners have introduced consultation procedures for all applications which involve a range of national and local interests including conservation bodies. Discharge, navigation and planning consents may also be required from the appropriate authorities.

Salmonella

Mr. Lord: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the action he is taking on salmonella in eggs.

Mr. MacGregor: Since the summer of 1988 we have been preparing and adopting a series of measures designed to tackle the salmonella problem at each point along the chain from poultry feedingstuffs, through the breeding flocks and hatcheries to the laying houses, and then on into the home. I am now proposing a number of further measures to reinforce the action already taken.

To minimise the risk of salmonella in poultry feedingstuffs, my Department has doubled the rate of inspections in protein processing plants so that samples are now taken annually from 20 days production from each plant instead of 10 days production as previously. I propose shortly to bring in new statutory provisions requiring protein processors to take samples from each day's production, to have them tested at MAFF-listed laboratories, and to notify MAFF immediately of positive results. I also propose to take powers to stop the supply of products from processing plants where salmonella is found, until action has been taken to ensure that uncontaminated products are being produced.

New arrangements for imported animal protein are currently being introduced. These will involve a graded series of controls reflecting our previous experience of contamination levels in material from particular sources.

To minimise the risk of infection through breeding stock, two codes of practice have been introduced for poultry breeders and hatcheries. I propose to introduce secondary legislation requiring the registration of breeding flocks and hatcheries, requiring breeders to arrange regular bacteriological monitoring of their birds and of the hatcheries, and requiring breeders to supply MAFF with veterinary certificates setting out the results of that monitoring. This legislation will also enable Ministry officers to restrict sales of poultry and hatching eggs when invasive salmonellae are found.

For commercial laying flocks, similarly, a code of practice has been introduced. I propose now to introduce a requirement on operators to carry out regular bacteriological monitoring, together with strengthened statutory requirements about the control of rodents, with provision for compulsory cleansing and disinfection and requirements for the hygienic handling of eggs.

In order to underline the importance of hygienic handling of food in the home, a major education campaign will be launched early this year. This campaign is designed to reduce the incidence of food poisoning generally. Salmonella is an international problem, so I have also been consulting colleagues in Europe and the United States.

I believe that this range of measures amounts to one of the most comprehensive programmes for dealing with salmonella in any country in the world.

Tuberculosis

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much he has spent, or will spend, on research and development to improve the diagnosis and control of tuberculosis in cattle and wildlife, including badgers and deer for the years 1984-85 to 1988-89; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: [holding answer 16 January 1989]: During the current financial year, and for the past four financial years, the amounts spent on research and development to improve the diagnosis and control of tuberculosis in cattle, badgers and deer have been:

Year	£'000
1984-85	466
1985-86	627
1986-87	552
1987-88	602
1988-89	[1]593

[1] Estimated.

SCOTLAND

Public Relations Firms

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the private sector public relations firms which are currently employed by his Department or have been in the last three years, the projects for which they were engaged and the sum paid to each firm on each of these projects.

Mr. Rifkind: PR Consultants (Scotland) Ltd. of Edinburgh were appointed for the period of 1 June, 1987 to 12 September, 1988 for the purpose of marketing and organisation of the Scottish road safety campaign road show. The total amount paid to the company in respect of that period was £20,000.

In addition, I expect shortly to be in a position to announce the appointment of public relations and marketing consultants to advise on the privatisation of the electricity supply industry in Scotland.

Health Board Membership

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give for each health board the individuals, excluding chairmen, who either are or have been elected local authority members, including their political affiliations.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information in departmental records is as follows:

Health Board and Local Authority Members	Political affiliation
ARGYLL AND CLYDE HEALTH BOARD
Current Local Authority Members
Mr. G. McMillan, Strathclyde Region, previously Argyll and Bute District	Labour
Mr. R. R. Reid, Argyll and Bute District	Independent
Past Local Authority Members
Mrs. E. W. Riddell, Strathclyde Region until 1986	Liberal/SDP
Mr. L. Capaldi, Dumbarton District until 1980	Labour
AYRSHIRE AND ARRAN HEALTH BOARD
Current Local Authority Members
Mr. R. Campbell, JP, Strathclyde Region	Labour/Co-operative
Mr. T. Dickie, JP, Cunninghame District	Labour
Past Local Authority Member
Mrs. A. Dunbar, Cunninghame District until 1980	Labour
BORDERS HEALTH BOARD
Current Local Authority Member
Mr. A. S. Watt, Borders Region	Independent
Past Local Authority Member
Mr. R. W. Jack, Roxburgh District until 1984	Liberal/Alliance
DUMFRIES AND GALLOWAY HEALTH BOARD
Current Local Authority Member
Mr. W. Service, Dumfries and Galloway Region	Independent
Past Local Authority Members
Mrs. M. D. Dick-Smith, Dumfries and Galloway Region until 1986	Independent
Mrs. A. R. Murdoch, Stewartry District until 1988	Independent
Mr. G. Willacy, Annandale and Eskdale District until 1988	Independent
FIFE HEALTH BOARD
Current Local Authority Member
Mr. J. McMurdo, Fife Region	Labour
Past Local Authority Members
Mr. J. S. Edmiston, Kirkcaldy District until 1980	Conservative
Mr. I. A. McCrone, Fife Region until 1982	Conservative
FORTH VALLEY HEALTH BOARD
Current Local Authority Members
Mr. K. Harding, Stirling District	Conservative
Mrs. E. D. Kennedy, Central Region	Labour
Past Local Authority Members
Mr. A. B. Cruickshank, Clackmannan District until 1977	Unknown
Mrs. J. I. D. Isbister, Stirling District until 1984	Conservative
GRAMPIAN HEALTH BOARD
Current Local Authority Member
Mrs. R. Kemp, Grampian Region	Liberal/Alliance
Past Local Authority Members
Mr. N. Donald, Gordon District until 1988	Independent
Mr. J. Sorrie, Grampian Region until 1986	Conservative
GREATER GLASGOW HEALTH BOARD
Current Local Authority Members
Mrs. J. E. Cameron, JP, Bearsden and Milngavie District	Conservative
Mrs. A. Jarvis, Strathkelvin District	Conservative
Mrs. M. McGarry, Clydebank District	Labour
Past Local Authority Member
Mr. B. A. Maan, Glasgow District until 1984	Labour

Health Board and Local Authority Members	Political affiliation
HIGHLAND HEALTH BOARD
Current Local Authority Member
Mrs. V. MacIver, Ross and Cromarty District	Independent
Past Local Authority Members
Rt. Hon. Lord G. J. Macdonald of Sleat, Skye and Lochalsh District until 1984	Independent
Mr. A. I. MacDonald, Caithness District until 1988	Independent
LANARKSHIRE HEALTH BOARD
Current Local Authority Member
Mr. J. P. Robinson, Strathclyde Region	Labour
Past Local Authority Member
Mr. W. J. O'Brien, JP, Cumbernauld and Kilsyth District until 1984	Labour
LOTHIAN HEALTH BOARD
Current Local Authority Member
Mr. W. B. Herald, Lothian Region	Labour
Past Local Authority Members
Mrs. G. Barton, Edinburgh District until 1984	Labour
Dr. M. McGregor, Grampian Region until 1986	Conservative
Mrs. W. E. Donaldson, Lothian Region until 1986	Conservative
ORKNEY HEALTH BOARD
Current Local Authority Members
Mrs. M. J. B. Crichton, Orkney	Independent
Mrs. J. Marwick, Orkney	Independent
SHETLAND HEALTH BOARD
Current Local Authority Member
Mr. W. A. Smith, BEM, Shetland	Labour
Past Local Authority Member
Mr. R. R. Bentley, until 1986	Independent
TAYSIDE HEALTH BOARD
Current Local Authority Members
Mr. E. W. Cameron, OBE, Perth and Kinross District	Conservative
Mr. A. H. Lynch, Dundee District	Labour
Past Local Authority Members
Mr. J. Campbell-Smith, Perth and Kinross until 1980	Independent
Mrs. S. D. R. Kydd, Tayside Region until 1986	Conservative
Mr. I. W. Stevenson, Tayside Region until 1986	Conservative
WESTERN ISLES HEALTH BOARD
Current Local Authority Members
Mr. A. A. Macdonald	Independent
Captain J. MacIntyre	Independent
Mr. A. Matheson	Independent

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the current employment or, if retired, previous employment of all health board chairmen.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information requested is as follows:

Health board	Present chairman	Occupation
Argyll and Clyde	Mr. J. D. Ryan CBE	Dental Surgeon
Ayrshire and Arran	Mr. W. S. Fyfe OBE	Company Chairman and Business Consultant
Borders	Mr. J. Gibb CBE	Retired Solicitor
Dumfries and Galloway	Mr. J. A. McIntyre JP	Farmer
Fife	Mrs. A. H. Ferguson	Engineer and Company Director
Forth Valley	Mr. L. J. M. Hynd OBE	Retired Director and Company Secretary
Grampian	Mr. C. W. Ellis OBE	Retired Senior Lecturer/Head of School of Social Studies, Robert Gordon's Institute of Technology
Greater Glasgow	Dr. T. J. Thomson CBE	Retired Consultant Physician
Highland	Mr. J. McWilliam OBE	Retired Rector, Lochaber High School
Lanarkshire	Mrs. B. M. Gunn OBE JP	Housewife
Lothian	Mr. R. B. Weatherstone TD	Formerly Company Director now Non-Executive Director
Orkney	Mr. J. D. M. Robertson OBE	Company Director
Shetland	Mrs. F. B. Grains JP	Housewife/Part-time National Farmers' Union Branch Secretary
Tayside	Mr. D. B. Grant TD	Retired Chartered Accountant
Western Isles	Mrs. M. A. MacMillan	Housewife

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give any local government elected positions held by the person who will be health board chairmen as from 1 April, including their political affiliations.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Mrs. F. B. Grains, chairman of Shetland health board, is a member (Independent) of Shetland islands council. No other chairman holds elected office in a local authority.

Health Care International Hospital, Clydebank

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects Health Care International to secure funding for its hospital at Clydebank; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: Health Care International has secured financial backing to take the project to its present stage. I understand that the company's financial advisers are currently structuring finance for the next stage of the development.

Retirement Homes

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list, by local authority area, the number of approved places in (a) private, (b) voluntary and (c) local authority nursing homes for the elderly, for each year since 1980.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Nursing homes are registered by health boards. Information is therefore only readily available by health board area. The information available centrally is given in the table. Information for years before 1986 was not collected centrally.

Number of beds in private nursing homes and hospitals[1] admitting elderly patients, by Health Board at 31 March.

Health Board	1986	1987	1988
Argyll and Clyde	508	633	[2]749
Ayrshire and Arran	450	670	939
Borders	81	82	254
Dumfries and Galloway	63	66	127
Fife	38	45	137
Forth Valley	165	207	351
Grampian	183	360	544
Greater Glasgow	478	452	537
Highland	216	259	365
Lanarkshire	231	541	832
Lothian	758	920	1,008
Orkney	—	—	—
Shetland	—	—	—
Tayside	132	166	307
Western Isles	—	—	—
Scotland	3,303	4,401	6,230

[1]Private nursing homes and hospitals subject to the Nursing Homes Registration (Scotland) Act 1938 or the Mental Health Acts 1960/1984.

[2]Data for the Princess Louise Scottish Hospital and Sir Gabriel Wood's Mariners' Home relate to 1987.

Rent Arrears

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table showing the levels of rent arrears for each month in 1987 and for each month in 1988.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 16 January 1989]: Information on local authority, new town development corporation and SSHA rents and rent arrears is collected centrally on an annual basis at 30 September each year. Total rent arrears at 30 September 1987 amounted to £26,658,649. Information on the position at 30 September 1988 is incomplete, but returns submitted to date indicate that total rent arrears will be higher than in 1987. No information is available on rent arrears in the private sector.

Education Reform

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when was the last time a Scottish Education Minister met the chairman of the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities education committee.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 17 January 1989]: I met the chairman and the vice-chairman of the convention's education committee in February 1988.

SSHA

Mr. Ron Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will name the private landlords expressing an interest in ownership of houses currently controlled by the Scottish Special Housing Association; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 13 January 1989]: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Govan (Mr. Sillars) on 10 January at columns 558-60.

Rural Areas

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the outcome of the discussions between his officials and the Highlands and Islands Development Board and the Scottish Development Agency initiated in 1984, with a view to working out practical measures of encouragement and support for rural retailers, following the report and recommendations submitted by the Scottish Consumer Council in July 1983 on consumer problems in rural areas; and what further steps he now proposes to take to ensure that some such scheme is introduced.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 13 January 1989]: Following consideration of the Scottish Consumer Council report by the Scottish Office, Scottish Development Agency and Highlands and Islands Development Board, the Scottish Development Agency introduced a scheme to assist single shops serving rural areas. This scheme offers specialist counselling services in conjunction with small local authority grants and operates in Tayside region, Dumfries and Galloway region and East Lothian district. Its extension to other areas is currently being considered. In addition to this scheme and its normal advisory services to small businesses, the agency is assisting two village projects (at Creetown and Newcastleton) aimed at attracting additional visitors. These projects, undertaken in partnership with local trade groups, involve shop front renovations and promotional activity.

The Highlands and Islands Development Board is also willing to give assistance in the form of grants and loans and advisory and training support to shops in remote rural areas, where these meet an important community need, and provides advisory services for retail businesses in its area.

The SDA, HIDB and SCC have recently commissioned consultants to investigate the changes in the provision of services in the parishes previously studied. It will be for the agency and the board to determine any action to be taken following completion of this study.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Strangford (New Industries)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many new industries were announced by the industrial development boards in the constituency of Strangford during 1988; how many new jobs they are expected to provide; and what is the present availability of advance factory space in the constituency.

Mr. Viggers: While no new companies were established with the assistance of the IDB during 1988 in the constituency of Strangford, the board supported expansion plans by eight existing companies which are intended to provide 294 new jobs. The local enterprise development unit does not maintain job statistics on the basis of parliamentary constituencies; however, in 1988 it assisted 20 entrepreneurs to establish new businesses in the Castlereagh and Ards borough council areas. These together with expansion projects supported by LEDU have promoted 96 new jobs in these areas in 1988. There are no vacant advance factories at present in the constituency, but a small refurbished factory is available in Newtownards.

Orlit Houses

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to his reply on 22 December, Official Report, column 459, in which newspapers and on which dates advertisements, inviting contractors to tender for the replacement of Orlit houses at Darragh road, Comber, were published.

Mr. Needham: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive. The chief executive has advised me that advertisements were placed in the Belfast Telegraph, News Letter and Irish News on 26 July 1988.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to his reply on 22 December, Official Report, column 459, in which newspapers and on which dates advertisements inviting contractors to tender for the replacement of Orlit houses at Barnagh park, Donaghadee, were published.

Mr. Needham: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive. The chief executive has advised me that advertisements were placed in the Belfast Telegraph, News Letter and Irish News on 13 October 1987.

ACE

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he has budgeted for the replacement of the ACE workers who will resign from the employment of Donaghadee Community Association before 1 April; what is the budget for ACE employment in Donaghadee for the next 12 months; whether he proposes to reduce ACE funding in any district during the next 12 months; and if he will make a statement on the future of the ACE scheme.

Mr. Viggers: The budget for the Donaghadee community work force ACE project for the current agreement year is £365,388. A new budget will be agreed prior to renewal of the agreement from 1 April 1989.

I have no plans to reduce ACE funding in any district during the next 12 months. Indeed, I have recently announced additional funding of £10·274 million to allow the ACE programme to be increased to 10,000 places during the 1989-90 financial year.

Fair Employment Act

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what statistics the Fair Employment Agency has gathered or been provided with on employment in the Post Office in Northern Ireland; and if he will place any information he has in the Library.

Mr. Viggers: The Fair Employment Agency is currently investigating the religious composition of the work force and the employment practices of the Post Office in Northern Ireland under section 12 of the Fair Employment (Northern Ireland) Act 1976. Any relevant employment statistics obtained for this purpose will eventually form part of a report of the investigation, when completed, but it is not the agency's practice to disclose such information beforehand in public.

When the report is published a copy will be placed in the Library.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many staff are presently provided by the Department of Economic Development to service (a) the industrial tribunals board and (b) the fair employment appeals board.

Mr. Viggers [holding answer 12 January 1989]: There is no industrial tribunals board. However, the Department provides 15 staff to service industrial tribunals. These staff also service the fair employment appeals board.

Mr. Kevin McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what has been the annual cost over the last 10 years of (a) the Industrial Appeals Tribunal and (b) the Fair Employment Appeal Boards in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Viggers [holding answer 12 January 1989]: There is no industrial appeals tribunal. However, the annual cost over the last 10 years of (a) industrial tribunals is as follows:

Year	Fees and expenses of president, chairman and panel members	Departmental staff costs	Totals
1979-80	64,000	n.a.
1980-81	110,000	n.a.
1981-82	165,000	n.a.
1982-83	189,000	n.a.
1983-84	203,000	n.a.
1984-85	202,000	n.a.
1985-86	243,000	n.a.
1986-87	276,000	129,000	405,000
1987-88	273,000	143,000	416,000
1988-89	[1]282,000	[1]170,000	452,000

[1] Estimate.

The figures for departmental staff costs for the years 1979-80 to 1985-86 are not readily available.

The total cost of (b) the fair employment appeals tribunal since its establishment is £500.

Farmers

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish a table in the Official Report to show his estimate of the (a) net income and (b) gross income of farmers in Northern Ireland in cash and in real terms for each year or, if more convenient, financial year since 1977.

Mr. Viggers [holding answer 17 January 1989]: Information is not available in the form requested but details of a pre-tax net farm income series and of gross output are given in current prices and in real terms:

	Net farm income[1]		Gross output[2]
Calendar year	At current prices £ million	Index in real terms (Base 1985 = 100)	At current prices £ million	Index in real terms (Base 1985 = 100)
1977	64·4	177	443·0	121
1978	61·1	155	496·1	125
1979	33·5	75	526·4	117
1980	14·3	28	544·6	103
1981	58·0	98	601·2	101
1982	87·8	137	662·7	103
1983	91·2	136	730·9	108
1984	132·7	189	774·5	109
1985	74·5	100	750·4	100
1986	60·9	79	751·8	97
1987	113·8	142	779·3	96

[1] Net farm income measures the returns to farmers and their spouses for their own labour and management effort and on their own capital investments. It is the residual after deducting from gross output variable input costs, depreciation, interest on borrowed capital and labour costs.

[2] Gross output is the value of sales of farm produce outside the agricultural sector i.e. it excludes inter-farm sales. Production grants and subsidies paid on sale are included. Also, an adjustment is made for changes in stocks of livestock and crops on farms between the beginning and the end of the year.

A forecast net farm income figure for 1988 will be published by the Department of Agriculture for Northern Ireland at the beginning of February 1989.

Apprenticeships

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many individuals are currently employed under a contract of service or of apprenticeship in Northern Ireland; and of these how many are employed under a contract which normally involves employment for less than 16 hours weekly.

Mr. Viggers [holding answer 12 January 1989]: The total number of employees in employment in Northern Ireland at September 1988 was 497,550. Information on the number of hous worked by these employees is not available.

HEALTH

Radiotherapy

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he has made a decision about South East Thames regional health authority's proposals for radiotherapy in mid-Kent; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I have today announced my decision to approve South East Thames regional health authority's proposal to build a new radiotherapy unit at Maidstone district hospital, costing nearly £11 million. The development of the new unit will involve the closure of two smaller units at St. William's hospital, Rochester and Pembury hospital, near Tunbridge Wells.

I considered the proposal and two counter proposals very carefully and Ministers received three deputations as well as representations from Members of Parliament, community leaders and members of the public. I paid particular attention to concerns about standards of service, about accessibility, about the continuity of existing services and the strong local support for existing units. However, I was also guided by the recommendations of a review by my expert advisers on cancer, announced last year, on 24 February 1988 at column 251, on the organisation of radiotherapy services and the importance of having units of a sufficient size, whenever possible. In this case, I have concluded that the catchment area would best be served by a central unit at Maidstone. A central unit will bring together expertise and high technology equipment which should ensure the pest possible standard of care and this was strongly supported by the professional advice I received. Its location at Maidstone will minimise travelling time for the greatest number of people and will take full advantage of the possibilities of integrating the service with the full range of facilities available at the new DGH in Maidstone.

Community Care

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps he has taken to ensure that adequate funds are being made available to ensure that a sufficiently high level of community care exists to cater for those patients being discharged from mental hospitals;

(2) whether he has any proposals to monitor the level of funding being made available for community care catering for those patients being discharged from mental hospitals.

Mr. Mellor: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Eddisbury (Mr. Goodlad) on 28 November 1988 at columns 143-44. We have no plans to monitor the level of funding being made available for community care.

Sexually Related Diseases

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list by sex and by age the number of children 16 years and under who have been examined and diagnosed for a sexually related disease in the county of South Yorkshire during the last year, showing the type of disease; what are the comparable national figures; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: We do not hold information in the form requested. The latest available data are for Yorkshire regional health authority in 1986 for syphilis and gonorrhoea only, as in the table, with England figures for comparison.

New cases seen at genito-urinary medicine clinics—1986

	Male	Female	Total
Yorkshire Regional Health Authority
Primary and secondary syphilis under 16	1	0	1
Post pubertal gonorrhoea under 16	8	34	42
England
Primary and secondary syphilis under 16	2	1	3
Post pubertal gonorrhoea under 16	83	227	310

Source: Department of Health form SBH60

Salmonella

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if, pursuant to his reply of 10 January to the hon. Member for East Lothian, he will list the locations of the outbreaks of salmonella food poisoning connected with eggs referred to in that answer.

Mr. Freeman: The following table gives a breakdown by NHS region of the reported outbreaks of salmonellosis associated with eggs to the end of October 1988. The outbreaks involved those cases listed in my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State's reply to him on 10 January at columns 612-13.

Regional health authority (RHA)	Number of outbreaks reported
Northern	4
Yorkshire	5
Trent	4
Thames Regions	14

Regional health authority (RHA)	Number of outbreaks reported
Wessex	4
South Western	4
West Midlands	2
North Western	4
Wales	5

Management Bulletin

Mr. Ted Garrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the cost of publishing the NHS Management Bulletin; and how many have been printed.

Mr. Mellor: The cost of each issue is currently £3,094 for printing and £1,247 for distribution, including postage. Since the bulletin was launched in July 1986, 17 issues have been published. Approximately 12,000 copies of each issue are printed.

Cervical Cancer (Liverpool)

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what changes in cervical cancer screening procedures have taken place since the cervical cancer smear mistake at the Women's hospital, Liverpool, in 1987.

Mr. Freeman: Various changes took effect following an inquiry held by Liverpool health authority and the procedures are now in line with the national guidance in health circular (88)1, which was issued in January 1988. A copy of this circular has been placed in the Library.

Hearing Therapists

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the number of hearing therapists employed by each health authority in each year since 1980 and the proportion per 100,000 population; what is his estimate of the optimum number of hearing therapists per 100,000 population; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: We do not hold centrally information in regard to hearing therapists employed by particular health authorities in specific years but I understand that 55 are now in post. The total number required will depend on needs perceived by health authorities and the way in which they organise their audiology services.

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people have completed training as hearing therapists in each year since 1980; what steps he has taken to ensure that the provision of trained hearing therapists is adequate to meet the demand; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The following numbers of people have successfully completed training as hearing therapists since 1980:

	Number
1980	10
1981	11
1982	9
1983	10
1984	9
1985	10
1986	11
1987	11
1988	10

Provision of hearing therapists was initially funded by the Department but it is now the responsibility of individual health authorities. The Department is keeping in touch with the National Health Service training authority in regard to future training provision.

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of hearing aid centres employ, or use the services of, a hearing therapist; what research he has undertaken to monitor the decrease in wastage of hearing aids supplied by the National Health Service as a result of the employment of hearing therapists; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: We do not hold centrally information on the numbers of hearing therapists made available by health authorities to particular hearing aid centres. No such research has been undertaken nationally.

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he is taking to improve the pay and career structure of hearing therapists; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: There are at present no pay and grading arrangements specifically for hearing therapists. The pay of most of them is linked to that of senior physiological measurement technicians which is negotiated in the professional and technical B Whitley council. The general Whitley council is currently considering what formal arrangements might be made within the Whitley council system for determining the pay of this group.

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he is taking to ensure the future training of hearing therapists following the abolition of the Inner London education authority; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The hearing therapist training course at the City Literary Institute continues and the National Health Service training authority is considering future requirements.

Brook Hospital (Neurosciences Unit)

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he now expects to make a decision on the proposed removal of the neurosciences unit from the Brook hospital, Woolwich.

Mr. Freeman: We hope to make a decision in the very near future.

War Injuries (Far East)

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many people receive continuing medication through the National Health Service as a result of injuries sustained whilst being Japanese prisoners of war during the second world war;

(2) what is the annual cost to the National Health Service of the medication people receive as a result of their serving in the Far East as British or Commonwealth troops during the second world war;

(3) what is the annual cost to the National Health Service of the medication people receive as a result of injuries sustained whilst being Japanese prisoners of war during the second world war;

(4) how many people receive continuing medication through the National Health Service as a result of their serving in the far east as British or Commonwealth troops during the second world war.

Mr. Freeman: I regret that this information is not held centrally.

Cyclotron Trust

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if his Department consulted the Co-ordinating Committee for Cancer Research before making a grant to the Cyclotron Trust; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: No, but I met representatives of the committee on 11 January.

Lowermoor (Water Contamination)

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give further details of the terms of reference of the investigation into the incident at Lowermoor treatment works on 6 July 1988.

Mr. Freeman: As stated in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Cornwall, North (Mr. Neale) on 13 January at column 775 the terms of reference of the Lowermoor incident health advisory group are

"to advise the Cornwall and Isles of Scilly District Health Authority on the implications for the health of the population in the Camelford area following contamination of their drinking water in July 1988".

The Group will be asked to consider the interpretation to be place on reports of persistent symptoms and the likelihood of ill effects persisting or recurring in the long term. They will be asked also to consider whether any further monitoring or research ought to be proposed. They will not be asked to inquire into the incident at Lowermoor treatment works, which was the subject of an earlier independent inquiry set up by the board of the South West water authority and whose report was published.

Tobacco

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his Department's current policy towards European Community draft regulations on tar yields and tobacco labelling.

Mr. Freeman: We wish to maintain our well-established and effective voluntary arrangements in the areas covered by the European Commission proposals. We also believe that the labelling proposals are counter productive in being too prescriptive. Discussions on the proposals are continuing in the Council health working group.

Household Formation

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will state for the most recent 20 year period for which figures are available the annual rate of household formation.

Mr. Trippier: I have been asked to reply.

We estimate that the number of households in England and Wales in 1968 was 16·2 million, and 19·5 million in 1988. This represents an approximate average net growth of about 0·9 per cent. per year.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Overseas Markets (Motor Vehicles)

3. Mr. Cash: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what action his Department has taken to ensure access of British-made motor vehicles to overseas markets.

Mr. Alan Clark: My Department takes whatever action is necessary to ensure British-made motor vehicles have unhindered access to overseas markets.

Inner Cities (Church Contact)

4. Mr. Bowis: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what contact his Department has had with church organisations on inner city matters.

Mr. Newton: I met the Bishop of Willesden on 19 December to discuss joint action with the Church in the inner cities. I was able to inform him that I had just agreed to extend our financial support for "Linking-Up", a project to develop church-based action for cities in a number of task force areas. We are also working with Evangelical Enterprise, and have set up a churches liaison group. Mr. Terry Drummond, an officer of the Church Army, has been seconded to work in our Spitalfields task force.

Building Industry (Local Labour)

14. Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what discussions he has had with representatives of the building industry regarding the employment and training of local labour in inner city areas.

Mr. Newton: I am frequently in contact with representatives from the building industry, and take every opportunity to emphasise that helping to train local people on local building projects is one important way of giving them a sense of commitment to improving their own environment as well as increasing the availability of important skills for the industry.

Bottle Bank Scheme

19. Mr. Illsley: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether he has any proposals to extend the bottle bank scheme to increase the proportion of United Kingdom recycled glass.

Mr. Atkins: On 2 July 1986 a conference was held on glass recycling at which a commitment was made by the glass industry, packaging industry, supermarkets, local authorities and central Government to work towards doubling the number of bottle banks over a five-year period. Progress is being made towards meeting this target.

Machine Tool Industry

20. Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he last met representatives of the machine tool industry; and what was discussed.

Mr. Atkins: I attended the annual dinner of the Machine Tool Trades Association on 16 November 1988. On that occasion the discussion was of a general nature.

Whisky (South Korea)

21. Mr. John Townend: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on current restrictions on the importation of Scotch whisky into the republic of South Korea; and what progress the Government is making in persuading the Government of that country to remove these restrictions.

Mr. Alan Clark: We continue to press the Korean authorities on all appropriate occasions, both bilaterally and through the European Community, to remove Korean restrictions on the import of Scotch whisky. The issue was high on the agenda at recent United Kingdom-Korea trade policy talks, when the Korean side proposed certain steps towards liberalisation. These are welcome, but not enough.

British-made Products

22. Mr. Marlow: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what powers he has to encourage the purchase of British-made products.

Mr. Alan Clark: The greatest encouragement to buy British is the availability of competitive British goods and services. My Department's policies are geared to helping businesses achieve this.

Manufacturing Investment (North-West)

23. Mr. Pike: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will state the level of investment in manufacturing industry in the north-west in constant prices for the latest year for which figures are available, as a percentage of 1979.

Mr. Atkins: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Corporate Affairs on 19 October 1988, at column 953 of the Official Report.

Fibre Optic Network

24. Mr. Hardy: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what consultations he has had on research and development on educational applications of a broadband fibre optic network.

Mr. Forth: Various aspects of this issue have been considered and in some cases supported by my Department over the last few years. Most recently PA Consulting Group were asked to comment on the area of education and broadband technology when reporting on "The Evolution of the United Kingdom Communications Infrastructure". Its report is available in the Library of the House.

Manufacturing Output

25. Mr. Rowe: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what are the latest figures he has for the output of manufacturing industry; and what were the comparable figures for 1974 and 1979.

Mr. Atkins: In the three months to October 1988 the output of manufacturing industry averaged 116·4, based on 1985 equal to 100, its highest-ever level. The comparable figures for the same three months in 1974 and 1979 were 109·9 and 103·6 respectively.

38. Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what are the latest figures he has for manufacturing output.

Mr. Atkins: Manufacturing output in the three months to October 1988 is provisionally estimated at 116·4, based on 1985 equal to 100. Manufacturing output is at its highest ever level.

46. Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster by how much the output of manufacturing industry has increased since 1979.

Mr. Atkins: In the three months to October 1988 the output of manufacturing industry was 10 per cent. higher than the 1979 average level. Manufacturing output is at its highest ever level.

Single Market

26. Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many inquiries his Department has now received from those requesting information about the effects of the single market in 1992; and what proportion of these have come from firms in the north-west.

Mr. Alan Clark: A total of 160,000 requests for information have been received since the Europe "Open for Business" campaign was launched in March 1988. Requests from firms in the north-west totalled nearly 13,000.

Inner City Regeneration

27. Mrs. Maureen Hicks: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what contact he has had with private sector organisations involved in inner city regeneration.

Mr. Newton: I have frequent contacts with a wide range of private sector organisations. The Government welcome the increasing role being played by business and industry in the regeneration of the inner cities.

Japanese Markets

28. Mr. Yeo: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what representations he has received regarding access for British firms to Japanese markets.

Mr. Alan Clark: The Government attach great importance to Britain's trade with Japan. Representations on market access are received from British companies from time to time and, where appropriate, we take them up vigorously with the Japanese authorities, both directly and through the European Commission.

Export Promotion

29. Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on progress on recent initiatives in export promotion.

Mr. Alan Clark: We have completed the export services review foreshadowed in the White Paper "DTI-the department for Enterprise". Its constituent parts are detailed in the written reply given on 17 January by myself to my hon. Friend the Member for Stroud (Mr. Knapman) at columns 106-108.

Manufacturing (Productivity)

30. Mr. David Evans: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what are the latest figures he has for the productivity of manufacturing industry; and what were the comparable figures one year ago.

Mr. Atkins: Productivity in manufacturing industry, as measured by output per person employed, in the three months to October 1988 averaged 121·2, based on 1985 equal to 100. This is an increase of nearly 7½ per cent. on the average level of 113·0 in the same three months of 1987.

37. Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is the productivity growth in manufacturing industry in (a) Britain and (b) other major industrialised countries.

Mr. Atkins: Since 1980 manufacturing productivity, as measured by output per head, has grown faster in the United Kingdom than in all other major industrialised countries. Over the previous two decades the United Kingdom was at the bottom of the league. Between 1980 and 1987 the annual average growth rate in percentage terms was:

	Per cent.
United Kingdom	5·3
United States of America	4·1
Japan	2·3
Germany	2·0
France	2·5
Italy	3·7
Canada	3·2

Source: OECD, IMF, CSO.

Overseas Companies

31. Mr. William Powell: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many overseas companies have set up operations in Britain over the past year.

Mr. Alan Clark: According to the latest figures known to the Invest in Britain Bureau, during the first three quarters of 1988, 260 inward investment decisions were made to locate in the United Kingdom. These include the establishment of a new business, expansion or acquisition of an existing business and involvement in joint venture.

Cordless Telephones

32. Mrs. Roe: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he expects to announce the award of the licences for the next generation of cordless telephones.

Mr. Atkins: My right hon. and noble Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry expects to make an announcement shortly.

Overseas Investment

33. Mr. Janman: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many jobs have been created or safeguarded by overseas investment since 1979.

Mr. Alan Clark: The following are the Invest in Britain Bureau figures for the numbers of jobs expected to be created or safeguarded, by inward investment projects, for each year since 1979 to 1987 and for the first three quarters of 1988. The figures are based upon information provided by the companies themselves.

Year	New jobs	Safeguarded jobs
1979	14,310	n/a
1980	18,662
1981	16,417
1982	10,529
1983	15,546	15,257
1984	27,102	19,294
1985	15,584	18,721
1986	16,274	10,760
1987	19,914	17,015
[1]1988	18,805	11,978

[1] January to September 1988.

British Shipbuilders

34. Mr. Mullin: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he last met the chairman of British Shipbuilders; and what was discussed.

Mr. Newton: I last met the chairman of British Shipbuilders on 12 January. We discussed matters of current interest to the corporation.

Newspaper Distribution

35. Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what representations he has received from newsagents about recent developments in newspaper distribution; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: My Department has received a number of representations from newsagents about recent developments in newspaper distribution. They have been referred to the Director-General of Fair Trading who is monitoring such developments.

Exports

36. Mr. Beith: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the current rate of growth of United Kingdom exports.

Mr. Alan Clark: On a seasonally adjusted basis total export volume in the three months ended November 1988 is provisionally estimated to have been 3½ per cent. higher than in the previous three months.

Commercial Vehicles

39. Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on (a) the market share and (b) export performance of the British-based commercial vehicle manufacturing industry.

Mr. Atkins: In 1988 British commercial vehicle manufacturers took 60 per cent. of the United Kingdom market. In the first 11 months of 1988 they produced over 76,000 vehicles for the export market, compared with some 56,000 vehicles in the corresponding months of 1987.

European Space Industry

40. Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he last had discussions about space policy with his counterparts in the European space industry.

Mr. Atkins: Department of Trade and Industry Ministers have periodic contacts with their European counterparts on space matters. Most recently my right hon. and noble Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry was in touch with Dr. Riesenhuber, the Federal German Technology Minister, on the issue of the European Space Agency science programme. It was subsequently possible to reach agreement in ESA on this question.

Communications Satellites

41. Mr. Stern: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what information he has as to how many United Kingdom manufactured communications satellites are now orbiting the earth.

Mr. Atkins: Nine, on the basis of satellites with a still operable payload.

"The Infrastructure for Tomorrow"

42. Dr. Bray: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the communications steering group report "The Infrastructure for Tomorrow".

55. Mr. Stott: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the MacDonald report on a national wide-band cable network.

Mr. Newton: The communications steering group, sometimes referred to as the Macdonald committee, was established in the spring of 1987 to advise DTI Ministers on prospective developments of the electronic communications infrastructure of the United Kingdom.

My right hon. and noble Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry received the group's report in the summer 1988 and it was published on 15 December 1988 as a contribution to the discussion about the United Kingdom's future communications infrastructure needs. We are grateful to the members of the group for their work.

Balance of Trade Deficit

43. Mr. Wareing: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the balance of trade deficit in manufactured goods.

Mr. Alan Clark: In the first 11 months of 1988 the provisional estimate of the seasonally adjusted deficit on trade in manufactured goods was £13·5 billion.

49. Mr. Cryer: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is the current level of deficit in the balance of trade; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: The current account is provisionally estimated to have been in deficit by about £13·4 billion on a seasonally adjusted basis in the first 11 months of 1988.

Internal Market

44. Mr. Dykes: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he next expects to attend a meeting of the European Economic Community Council of trade and industry ministers to discuss further steps in the creation of the internal market.

Mr. Alan Clark: My hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Corporate Affairs plans to attend the next meeting of the Internal Market Council to be held on 27 February.

Regional Aid

45. Mr. Robert Hicks: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many projects have been supported by regional aid over the past year.

Mr. Atkins: In 1988, the Department of Trade and Industry made 1,330 offers of regional selective assistance and 470 offers of regional enterprise grant, and approved 6,820 projects under the revised regional development grant scheme. In addition, payments under the original regional development grant scheme were made in respect of some 330 projects. All these figures are provisional.

Enterprise Initiative

47. Mr. Ward: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many applications have so far been received for the consultancy support under the enterprise initiative.

Mr. Forth: As my right hon. and noble Friend the Secretary of State announced yesterday on the first anniversary of the enterprise initiative, response to the consultancy initiatives has been excellent from across the whole range of small and medium sized business. I am pleased to say that over 17,000 applications for assisted consultancy have been received.

Post Office Counter Services

48. Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he last met representatives of the Post Office Users Council to discuss the restructuring of Post Office counter services.

Mr. Forth: No meetings have been held with representatives of the Post Office Users Council for Scotland to discuss the restructuring of Post Office counter services.

Barrow-in-Furness

50. Mr. Franks: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he next intends to visit Barrow-in-Furness.

Mr. Atkins: I am hoping to visit British Nuclear Fuels plc's Sellafield facility and VESL at Barrow on 11 May 1989.

Debt Problems

51. Mr. Michael: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what means his Department is using to monitor the scale of personal and family debt problems; what is his latest estimate of the scale of such problems and what is his policy on the provision of advice and counselling for people with debt problems.

Mr. Newton: My Department has access to information on debt problems from a variety of sources. Under section 1(2) of the Consumer Credit Act 1974 the Director-General of Fair Trading has a statutory duty to advise on social and commercial developments relating to the provision of credit. I have carefully considered the views expressed by the Director-General from time to time, for example in the introduction to his most recent report to Parliament.

My Department has also been informed of the results of the survey on the use of credit which was commissioned by the Office of Fair Trading and was published in August 1988. Information on debt problems is available from sources such as major organisations of lenders, the National Association of Citizens Advice Bureaux, the National Consumer Council and Familybase. The information available suggests that while a significant number of individuals have encountered debt problems, from a variety of causes, the proportion of users of consumer credit who encounter such problems remains small.

A great deal of advice and help on debt problems is provided free of charge by citizens advice bureaux. The National Association of Citizens Advice Bureaux (NACAB) and Citizens Advice Scotland (CAS) are funded by my Department. Their budget in the current financial year is £9·365 million. They have been encouraged to seek additional funding money advice services from the finance industry and already money has been pledged for four

Industrial Scholarships

52. Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what advice is provided by his Department to firms contemplating offering industrial scholarships and other incentives to those going on to further and higher education.

Mr. Forth: Advice to firms contemplating various kinds of link with higher education, including sponsorship, will be included in a guide to good collaborative practice which the Department, in conjunction with the Council for Higher Education, will be publishing later this year.

Nissan

53. Mr. Brazier: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the export of vehicles manufactured by Nissan UK to the European Economic Community.

Mr. Alan Clark: My right hon. and noble Friend has recently received a letter from the Commission stating its view that, in the present state of Community law, there would be no justification, as far as the free circulation of goods is concerned, for treating Nissan UK production differently from other cars produced in the Community. United Kingdom-built Nissan cars are currently being distributed without obstruction in all their EC markets, and I trust that, in the light of the Commission's statement, exports will continue to go ahead smoothly.

Confederation of British Industry

54. Mr. Riddick: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he last met representatives of the Confederation of British Industry; and what was discussed.

Mr. Newton: I last met the CBI on 24 November when I spoke at its conference on business opportunities in urban regeneration.

Standard Industrial Trade Classification

56. Mr. Favell: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many of the standard industrial trade classification divisions within manufactured trade are currently (a) in surplus and (b) in deficit.

Mr. Atkins: Of the 35 divisions within sections 5-8 of the standard international trade classification (which correspond to manufactures), for the 10 months to October 1988, 12 are in surplus and 23 in deficit.

Society of British Aerospace Companies

57. Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he last met representatives of the Society of British Aerospace Companies; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Atkins: I last met representatives of the Society of British Aerospace Companies on 14 December 1988. We discussed export opportunities for the industry.

Life Assurance Policies

58. Mr. Butterfill: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether he has received the new Securities and Investment Board disclosure rules relating to the sale of life assurance policies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: The Securities and Investments Board has not published any new disclosure rules relating to the sale of life assurance policies. I have, however, received a copy of the consultative document "Life Assurance and Unit Trust Disclosure: the regime for 1990" published by the SIB on 14 December 1988. It will be for the SIB to draw up rules in the light of this consultation. Any such rules will be subject in the usual way to the competitive scrutiny by the Director General of Fair Trading and the Secretary of State provided by the Financial Services Act.

Central Selling Organisation for Diamonds

Mr. Nelson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many complaints the Office of Fair Trading has received this year about the activities of the Central Selling Organisation for Diamonds operating in London; when he will be replying; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: I understand that the Office of Fair Trading has received two complaints about the activities of the Central Selling Organisation for Diamonds. These are matters for the Director-General of Fair Trading to consider under the competition legislation for which he is responsible.

Value Added Tax

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what was the number of businesses registered for value added tax in (a) 1978 and (b) 1988 in the City of Durham district; and how many deregulations took place in 1988.

Mr. Atkins: Reliable estimates are not available before 1979. At the end of that year the total number of businesses registered for value added tax in the City of Durham district was 1,222. The latest reliable estimate is 1,368 for the end of 1987; there were 118 deregistrations during that year.

Footwear Imports

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) whether he will meet with his European counterparts to discuss what action can be taken to deal with the level of imports of footwear from South Korea;

(2) whether he will introduce measures further to restrain imports of footwear from South Korea.

Mr. Alan Clark: The Commission is currently carrying out a Community-wide investigation into imports of footwear from South Korea and Taiwan. We shall need to see the Commission's findings and recommendations before deciding our position. I have no plans, at this stage, to discuss this issue with my European colleagues.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what representations he has received from Millers Footwear of Cockermouth on the level of South Korean imports into the United Kingdom of South Korean footwear.

Mr. Alan Clark: I have not received any representations from the company on this subject.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the arrangements that exist in each member country of the European Community for controlling imports of footwear from South Korea.

Mr. Alan Clark: As far as we are aware, the following restrictions exist on South Korean exports to particular member states:

France voluntary restraint arrangements on most types of footwear

Italy voluntary restraint arrangements on most types of footwear

Portugal certain quantitative restrictions: the details are not known

Spain certain quantitative restrictions: the details are not known

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether he will meet with representatives of the British Footwear Federation to discuss the level of imports of footwear from South Korea.

Mr. Alan Clark: I met two MP's and representatives of the footwear industry, including the British Footwear Manufacturers' Federation, in February 1988 to discuss footwear imports from the Far East. We have had no request for a further meeting with the federation. This might be appropriate when we know the EC Commission's findings and recommendations following its current investigation of footwear imports from Taiwan and South Korea.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether he will consider the introduction of selective aid to the footwear industry to alleviate the damage to employment arising from the level of imports from South Korea of footwear.

Mr. Alan Clark: Regional selective assistance is available for eligible investment projects in the assisted areas undertaken by firms of all sizes in the footwear and other sectors. Also, my Department's enterprise initiative offers eligible firms a nationwide self-help package to improve management practice.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether he would set up a footwear imports review group to evaluate the effect of South Korean imports into the United Kingdom on the British footwear industry.

Mr. Alan Clark: I have no plans to set up a review group for this purpose. The results of the investigation being undertaken by the EC Commission will be studied closely by my Department and the trade associations concerned.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what evidence he has as to the diversion of South Korean footwear from the American market to European markets due to a fall in the value of the dollar.

Mr. Alan Clark: Total exports of footwear by Korea have increased by 140 per cent. in United States dollar terms since 1985. The proportion taken by the United States of America has declined from 73 per cent. to 63 per cent. while the shares taken by the EC and the rest of the world have increased. It is not clear how much of this change is due to exchange rate movements and how much to other factors.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what impact he expects Her Majesty's Government's strategy for the exchange rate to have on the level of footwear imports into the United Kingdom from South Korea.

Mr. Alan Clark: It is not Government policy to depreciate the exchange rate to try to maintain competitiveness. Restraint of unit costs, which is in industry's own hands is the key to improved competitiveness. In fact, the South Korean won appreciated by 10 per cent. against sterling between the first and second halves of 1988.

Meat Exports

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what was the volume and value in current and standard prices of meat exports, other than live animals, in each year since 1983, distinguishing between exports to the European Economic Community, North America and elsewhere.

Mr. Alan Clark: Exports of meat and meat preparations for 1983-87 by volume and value (which is only available in current prices) are given in the following table:

United Kingdom exports of meat and meat preparations

Volume in thousand metric tonnes
Value in £million

	1983		1984		1985		1986		1987
	Volume	Value	Volume	Value	Volume	Value	Volume	Value	Volume	Value
EEC	283·7	433·9	267·2	403·0	268·5	422·9	267·4	446·0	309·7	536·3
North America	0·3	0·4	0·2	0·4	0·2	0·3	0·2	0·5	0·5	1·2
Rest of the World	57·7	61·4	79·8	87·6	64·6	74·2	83·5	75·5	68·1	88·4

Source: Overseas Trade Statistics.
Notes: EEC includes all Member States as at 1 January 1989 throughout;
Value on a fob basis;
Meat and meat preparations defined as Standard International Trade Classification Revision 2 Division 01.

Internal Market Council

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the Internal Market Council held on 21 December.

Mr. Maude: The Council, at which I represented the United Kingdom, reached agreement on 32 individual measures which contribute towards completion of the single market. This has brought the total number of single market measures agreed under the Greek Presidency to more than 50.

Important decisions reached by the Council included the final adoption of directives on the mutual recognition of higher education diplomas; trade marks; construction products; and a package of three directives relating to food law harmonisation (on quick-frozen foodstuffs, food additives and materials and articles intended to come into contact with foodstuffs). It also reached agreement on common positions on directives on the official inspection of foodstuffs; two directives to cut barriers to trade in pharmaceutical products (blood products and radiopharmaceuticals); and on the safety of machines under the Commission's "new approach" to technical harmonisation.

On the initiative of the United Kingdom the Council invited the Commission to bring forward a paper on the subject of barriers to takeovers in member states. It also discussed the proposal for an EC merger regulation.

At the Council Germany withdrew its reserve on the Italian plan for state aid to its steel industry.

Television Licensing

Mr. Grylls: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether he will make a statement about future activities of the Television Licensing Organisation (TVLO).

Mr. Newton: I have given my consent under section 61(2) of the British Telecommunications Act 1981, to a subsidiary of the Post Office, Barton House Services Ltd., contracting to provide subscription management and monitoring services on behalf of the Post Office's TV licensing organisation to organisations providing satellite TV services. This will enable the Post Office to complement its current TV licensing activities and to use TVLO's expertise and resources in taking advantage of the new opportunities offered by the Government's framework for broadcasting which was set out in the White Paper "Broadcasting in the 90s: Competition, Choice and Quality," CM 517, November 1988. Any service provided by TVLO in this respect will be on a strictly commercial contractual basis and without any cross-subsidy from the services it performs for Government in respect of TV licensing itself.

House of Fraser

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the investigations into the purchase of the House of Fraser.

Mr. Newton: On 29 September my right hon. and noble Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry announced his intention to publish the report of the inspectors as soon as circumstances permit and on 25 November he announced his decision not to refer the takeover to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission. As the hon. Member will be aware both these decisions are the subject to proceedings for judicial review and it would not be appropriate for me to comment further on these matters at this stage.

Foam-filled Furniture

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the consumer safety implications of the use of sprays marketed for the purpose of treating covers on flammable foam-filled furniture to make such furniture less flammable.

Mr. Forth [holding answer 17 January 1989]: Most of the spray fire-retardant treatments for furnishings now on the market can be quite effective, but they have limitations. The effectiveness depends on the amount taken up and this in turn depends on the fibre of which the fabric is made. Whilst a cotton fabric will absorb the requisite amount of fire retardant in water solution, the same fabric with a stain resistant finish may not, nor will many synthetic fibre fabrics. The feel of the fabric may be affected by the presence of the fire retardant salts. Because these treatments are water based they can be removed by spillage or by sponging. Treatment of the cover fabric will not affect the flammability of the foam. In consequence, use of such sprays to treat curtains is likely to be more reliable than treatment of furniture. Thorough and even treatment is required to ensure effectiveness, and in this respect professional treatments may be more reliable than do-it-yourself products.

There is now greater public awareness than formerly of the fire risks of furniture and furnishings. But for some years to come the furniture in most people's homes will not be made to the requirements of the new regulations. So people are likely to show increased interest in spray fire-resistant treatments. This makes it very important that they should not be misled about the effectiveness of such treatments, and we look to the trade to ensure that their instructions are adequate and their claims accurate.

Iran

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what restrictions are at present imposed on exports to Iran; and what restrictions are imposed by other members of the European Economic Community.

Mr. Alan Clark [holding answer 17 January 1989]: Licences are required for export to Iran of goods which are subject to control under the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1987 (S.I., 1987, No. 2070), as amended.

Applications for such licences are examined in particular against the guidelines on the export of defence equipment to Iran and Iraq announced to the House by my right hon. Friend the Foreign and Commonwealth Secretary on 29 October 1985, (Official Report, Vol. 84, column 454). The Guidelines are being kept under constant review in the light of the ceasefire and developments in the peace negotiations.

There is no common EC policy on sales of controlled goods to Iran, and I am unable to comment on the national export policies of other EC member countries.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Pensioners

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many retirement pensioners (i) aged 65 to 79 years and (ii) aged 80 years and over both pay income tax and receive housing benefit.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The latest available information is as follows:

(i) 130,000
(ii) 30,000

Source: Family Expenditure Survey 1986.

Notes:

1. Based on the "Impact of the reformed structure of Income Related Benefits" published in October 1987 and adjusted to take account of the 1988 Budget.
2. Married and unmarried couples count as one unit.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what number and what proportion of pensioner households are in receipt of (i) occupational pension payments, (ii) income support, (iii) housing benefit and (iv) income support and housing benefit.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 5 December 1988]: The latest information, taken from the family expenditure survey, indicates that in 1986 approximately 3·4 million (50 per cent.) pensioner tax units[1] were in receipt of occupational pension payments. The May 1988 Quarterly Statistical Enquiry indicates that approximately 1·7 million pensioners[2] were in receipt of income support. The latest information for housing benefit is for autumn 1987 when the estimated total number of pensioner households[3] in receipt of benefit was 3·8 million which included 1·3 million who were also receiving supplementary benefit. Up to date information is not available to enable income support or housing benefit recipients to be shown as a proportion of all pensioners households.

[1] A pensioner tax unit—a single person of pensionable age, or a married couple where the head is of pensionable age.
[2] Pensioners receiving income support are defined as those in receipt of a pensioner premium.
[3] A pensioner household—a single household of pensionable age or a married couple where at least one of the partners is of pensionable age.

National Insurance

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the estimated full-year revenue effect in 1988-89 and 1989-90 of (a) abolishing the upper earnings limit for employees' national insurance contributions, (b) allowing personal allowances against such contributions and (c) (a) and (b) together.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The estimated full year revenue effects are as follows:

	1988-89 £ billion	1989-90 £ billion
(a)	+1·50	+1·65
(b)	−4·85	−5·15
(c)	−3·35	−3·50

These estimates assume that—

(i) The lower and upper earnings limits are retained for the purpose of assessing contracted-out contributions so that contracted-out rebates are unaffected.
(ii) Employers' secondary contributions are not subject to personal allowance.
(iii) Personal allowances are not transferable, and consist of the single person's allowance (in 1988-89 £2,605) except for married men who are all assumed to be entitled to married man's allowance (in 1988-89 £4,065).
(iv) Lower rates of contribution (5 per cent. and 7 per cent. compared with the standard NIC rate of 9 per cent.) are retained for the lower paid earning in excess of personal allowances.

Community Care Grants and Loans

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the percentage of the cash budget paid to date to claimants using the two Doncaster social security offices seeking assistance from community care grants; what percentage of claims have been refused; what percentage of claimants were recommended to apply for social security loans; what percentage of the loan budget has been spent; what percentage of the national budgets have been spent to date; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Information on the numbers of applicants for social fund loans and grants processed and awarded, listed by local office, including information on budget allocations and expenditure, is available from the details held in the Library.

Information is available on the social fund application form to assist people in deciding whether to apply for a grant or a loan. Social fund officers are also available to provide additional information and help with form completion, but they do not recommend applicants to apply for loans in preference to grants. Upon receipt of an application the social fund officer will determine whether a grant or loan is appropriate.

Benefit Fraud

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if, pursuant to his answer of 20 December, Official Report, column 214, he will state the number of officers and their grades who are carrying out the investigation into benefit fraud in Doncaster; and what has been the cost to date.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Three officers of Departmental grade LOI are currently involved in the investigation into benefit fraud in Doncaster. The cost to date has been about £18,000. The benefit savings yield to date is £56,974 gross.

Reduced Earnings Allowance

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people in the Easington constituency, by ward, receive reduced earnings allowance at present, how many will receive reduced earnings allowance after April 1989; and what are the current amounts paid in reduced earnings allowance and the amounts expected to be paid out in reduced earnings allowance after April 1989.

Mr. Scott: Easington is served by Peterlee and Seaham local offices, although their boundaries are not coterminous with the constituency; information by ward is not available. At 12 January, 1,471 people were receiving reduced earnings allowance from the Peterlee office and 686 from Seaham. I regret that information relating to wards and the amounts of benefit paid could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what criteria are used in assessing levels of reduced earnings allowance; what effect the receipt of other benefits, including invalidity benefit, has on the level of reduced earnings allowance; what plans there are to change such criteria; and if these changes have been advertised.

Mr. Scott: Entitlement to reduced earnings allowance arises where an industrial accident or disease causes disablement of at least 1 per cent. and a person's capacity to earn is reduced as a result. The level of benefit is calculated by comparing pre- and post-disablement earnings and is subject to a maximum of £26·88 a week at today's rates; it is not affected by receipts of other benefits. There are no plans to change the criteria for assessing the level of benefit. Information about the allowance is available in the Department's leaflet on industrial injuries disablement benefit.

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what safeguards are being introduced for those people who currently receive reduced earnings allowance, especially those on other social security benefits, when the proposed ending of the reduced earnings allowance takes place;

(2) how the proposed ending of the reduced earnings allowance will affect people over retirement age; and whether safeguards are being incorporated to ensure that retired persons do not lose out as a result of the April 1989 changes.

Mr. Scott: People in receipt of reduced earnings allowance who are of pensionable age and who retire on or after 10 April will no longer be entitled to the allowance. The vast majority of them will become automatically entitled to a new benefit, retirement allowance, which will be paid at 25 per cent. of the former entitlement to reduced earnings allowance. Retirement allowance will be uprated annually in line with prices. Beneficiaries of reduced earnings allowance who retire before 10 April will retain their entitlement, although the rate will not be reviewed. No special safeguards are being introduced. The change removes the long-standing and widely recognised anomaly by which compensation for loss of earnings can continue beyond retirement when earnings would normally have ceased in any case, and takes effect on retirement, when most people expect a reduction in their income.

Departmental Publications

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether, pursuant to his answer of 21 December to the hon. Member for Derbyshire, North East, Official Report, column 308, he will make it his policy to ensure that all statements in his Department's official publications are objective and factual.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I have nothing further to add to that reply.

Income Support

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average time for adjudicating decisions on reduced income support cases arising from leaving a job without reason in the Nottingham area.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I regret that the information requested is not collected. However, in the four Nottingham offices —Castlegate, David lane, Shakespeare street and Station street—the average clearance time for all income support claims in the months April to November 1988 (the latest available figure) has been provisionally calculated as 5·2 days.

Mr. Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the cash figure included in the April 1988 income support rates to represent the average water rate payment by an income support claimant.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: No specific amount is included in the income support rates for April 1988 for the payment of water rates.

Family Credit

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he is now in a position to provide information on the number of single parent families in receipt of family credit.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: At the end of November, approximately 98,000 lone parent employees received family credit. No information is available about how many lone parents were among the 20,000 recipients of family credit where the parent was in self-employment.

Retirement Homes

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many places in residential homes for the elderly are supported by payments from his Department; what is the cost; and if he will provide the equivalent figures for each year since 1980.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Payments by the Department of Social Security are not made for the purpose of supporting places in residential homes. Income support is available to help individuals with insufficient resources of their own to meet their fees in independent residential care and nursing homes.

The table sets out the number of people in independent homes receiving income support (formerly supplementary benefit), and the estimated annual cost, for each year since 1980. Information specifically about residential homes for elderly people is not available.

Supplementary Benefit (Income Support from April 1988) to people in independent residential care and nursing homes

	Number of claimants (000s)	Estimated expenditure (current prices (£ million)
December 1980	13	18
December 1981	13	23
December 1982	16	39
December 1983	26	104
December 1984	42	200
December 1985	70	348

	Number of claimants (000s)	Estimated expenditure (current prices (£ million)
February 1986	90	459
May 1987	117	671
May 1988	147	878

Benefits (North-East)

Mr. Garrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people are receiving income support, and how many of these are under the age of 25 years, from each office at Wallsend, North Shields and Saxon house, Newcastle upon Tyne.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The number of people in receipt of income support by local office is:

	Number
Wallsend	7,787
North Shields	10,183
Newcastle East (Saxon house)	14,269

Source: Manual count of cases in action. The data are provisional and subject to revision.

I regret that information is not available on the number of these claimants who are under the age of 25 years.

Mr. Garrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people are receiving grants and loans, and how many are under the age of 25 years, from each office at Wallsend, North Shields and Saxon house, Newcastle upon Tyne.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Information on the numbers of applications for social fund loans and grants processed and awarded, listed by local office, including information on budget allocations and expenditure, is available from the details held in the Library.

Separate statistics on the numbers of applicants under the age of 25 years are not collected. I regret, therefore, that this information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Transitional Payments

Mr. Ashdown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many applications for transitional payments more than two months old are now outstanding (a) for south Somerset and (b) for the United Kingdom as a whole.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The transitional payments unit processes applications as soon as the necessary information is received from the relevant local authority. A number of cases have not been processed because the inquiry forms have not been returned by local authorities. There are 70 inquiry forms, which have been outstanding for over two months, with South Somerset district council. Information on inquiries outstanding for over two months, in the United Kingdom as a whole, is not readily available.

Young People (Care)

Mr. Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether he has studied the recent report produced by Barnardo's entitled "I Can't Go Back To Mum And Dad"; and if he will make a statement about the effect of recent social security changes on young people leaving care who cannot return to their families.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: We have studied the Barnardo's report closely. We are monitoring the effects of the reformed social security system on all client groups, including the youngsters covered by this report. Once this monitoring has been completed we shall decide what, if any, action is needed.

Unemployment Benefit

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people in receipt of unemployment benefit have been unemployed for (a) less than two weeks, (b) between two weeks and six months and (c) for over six months, at the latest available date.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The table shows the number of people in receipt of unemployment benefit analysed by duration of their current spell of unemployment. The figures relate to May 1988, the latest date for which they are available.

Duration of current spell of unemployment	Number of claimants
less than 2 weeks	12,683
between 2 weeks and six months	380,653
more than six months	242,480

Source: 5 per cent. sample.

Retirement Age

Mr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, what proposals he has for the equalisation of the retirement age for men and women under the state pension schemes; what progress is being made towards their implementation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Proposals for the equalisation of state pension age continue to be under consideration. Negotiations have begun on the EC directive completing the implementation of the principle of equal treatment for men and women in statutory and occupational social security schemes.

Agency Benefits Unit

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give the average time and the range of times which it takes the agency benefits unit to process claims from patients seeking help with National Health Service charges; whether separate details are available in respect of dental claims; and whether there are any proposals to make the claim form AG1 shorter.

Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give the average time taken by the agency benefits unit to complete and return form AG1; if he has any plans to improve this situation; and why dentists are not informed about the decision reached.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 13 January 1989]: In the five weeks ending 9 December 1988 claims were, on average, cleared within six working days; 50·8 per cent. of claims were cleared within five working days and 91·4 per cent. within 10 working days. Since 5 December, a further 21 staff have been recruited for the agency benefits unit. Furthermore, the completion of claim form AG1 is being monitored with a view to improving its effectiveness. Form AG1 is used to claim help with the whole range of NHS charges. Claims in respect of dental charges are not separately identifiable.

Margaret Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, if he will publish in the Official Report the figures given in his answer on social security benefits on 7 December, Official Report, column 182, at 1988 prices.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information is as follows:

	1978-79	1979-80	1980-81	1981-82	1982-83	1983-84	1984-85	1985-86	1986-87
Widow's allowance
average number of beneficiaries (thousands)	36	37	34	34	33	32	31	30	30
expenditure (£ million)	142	140	126	120	107	106	103	97	97
Widowed mother's allowance
average number of beneficiaries (thousands)	123	119	117	114	110	105	100	93	88
expenditure (£ million)	340	308	296	[2]296	[2]287	[2]283	[2]268	[2]248	[2]239
Death grant (by calendar year)
awards (thousands)	583	593	593	591	597	600	[1]600	601	[1]600
expenditure (£ million)	35	30	25	24	23	22	21	21	20
Maternity grant
awards (thousands)	622	659	654	[1]640	653	662	[1]700	694	[1]560
expenditure (£ million)	35	30	25	23	21	22	22	20	16

[1] Estimates
[2] Records of expenditure on widowed mother's allowance include amounts of additional pension payable.

Mr. Brian Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list by local authority area the number of approved places in (a) private, (b) voluntary and (c) local authority residential homes for the elderly, for each year since 1980.

Mr. Roger Freeman: The information readily available over the period relates to the number of places for elderly and younger physically handicapped people in local authorities own homes and places registered in private and voluntary homes under the Registered Homes Act 1984. the information for the years ending 31 March 1981 to 1986 is published in "Residential Accommodation for Elderly and Younger Physically Handicapped People: All Residents in Local Authority, Voluntary and Private Homes Year ending 31 March 1981 to Year ending 31 March 1986 England", a copy of which is available in the Library. The provisional information for year ending 31 March 1987 is given in the table.

Number of places in residential care homes for the elderly and for younger physically handicapped people as at 31 March 1987 (provisional)

Local authority	Places in local authority homes	Places in voluntary homes[1]	Places in private homes[1]	Total places in all homes[1]
Northern Region	9,297	1,019	4,531	14,847
Cleveland	1,494	104	367	1,965
Cumbria	1,672	127	1,245	3,044
Durham	1,883	137	560	2,580
Northumberland	852	173	564	1,589
Gateshead	649	52	107	808
Newcastle upon Tyne	886	228	393	1,507
North Tyneside	509	63	738	1,310
South Tyneside	511	10	194	715
Sunderland	841	125	363	1,329
Yorkshire/Humberside	14,465	1,749	9,854	26,068
Humberside	2,325	187	2,625	5,137
North Yorkshire	2,004	821	2,893	5,718
Barnsley	698	0	243	941
Doncaster	748	77	345	1,170
Rotherham	677	16	73	766
Sheffield	1,813	44	282	2,139
Bradford	1,425	93	1,418	2,936
Calderdale	702	32	438	1,172
Kirklees	1,163	43	534	1,740
Leeds	2,165	382	709	3,256
Wakefield	745	54	294	1,093
North Western Region	17,347	4,673	15,337	37,357
Cheshire	2,134	775	1,083	3,992
Lancashire	3,985	691	6,768	11,444
Bolton	706	74	405	1,185
Bury	462	392	181	1,035
Manchester	1,842	233	700	2,775
Oldham	671	0	528	1,199
Rochdale	608	0	329	937
Salford	831	201	194	1,226

Local authority	Places in local authority homes	Places in voluntary homes[1]	Places in private homes[1]	Total places in all homes[1]
Stockport	637	36	588	1,261
Tameside	459	83	319	861
Trafford	521	122	613	1,256
Wigan	824	16	216	1,056
Knowsley	222	0	63	285
Liverpool	1,441	719	496	2,656
Sefton	705	1,075	1,816	3,596
St. Helens	316	84	92	492
Wirral	983	172	946	2,101
West Midlands Region	11,768	2,289	9,483	23,540
Hereford and Worcester	1,207	417	2,131	3,755
Shropshire	1,128	31	1,360	2,519
Staffordshire	2,147	370	1,740	4,257
Warwickshire	918	372	885	2,175
Birmingham	2,509	747	1,358	4,614
Coventry	677	45	601	1,323
Dudley	563	42	581	1,186
Sandwell	909	0	158	1,067
Solihull	324	166	82	572
Walsall	697	0	261	958
Wolverhampton	689	99	326	1,114
East Midlands Region	9,210	1,732	6,652	17,594
Derbyshire	2,116	431	1,717	4,264
Leicestershire	2,159	423	1,066	3,648
Lincolnshire	1,437	203	1,778	3,418
Northamptonshire	1,309	337	1,004	2,650
Nottinghamshire	2,189	338	1,087	3,614
Thames/Anglia Region	14,426	5,344	11,791	31,561
Bedfordshire	1,145	172	754	2,071
Berkshire	1,158	635	1,060	2,853
Buckinghamshire	1,029	874	507	2,410
Cambridgeshire	1,378	316	942	2,636
Essex	3,389	1,168	2,565	7,122
Hertfordshire	1,753	826	1,318	3,897
Norfolk	1,896	514	2,738	5,148
Oxfordshire	1,183	340	476	1,999
Suffolk	1,495	499	1,431	3,425
Inner London Region	6,785	2,173	874	9,832
Camden	578	206	71	855
Greenwich	560	0	109	669
Hackney	523	137	0	660
Hammersmith	461	106	16	583
Islington	651	58	32	741
Kensington	300	249	51	600
Lambeth	702	302	172	1,176
Lewisham	790	18	237	1,045
Southwark	682	300	0	982
Tower Hamlets	441	125	0	566
Wandsworth	568	636	186	1,390
Westminster	529	36	0	565
City of London	0	0	0	0
Outer London Region	9,156	4,392	4,655	18,203
Barking	379	0	38	417
Barnet	544	1,003	534	2,081
Bexley	437	5	45	487
Brent	437	159	72	668
Bromley	475	646	330	1,451
Croydon	608	320	698	1,626
Ealing	599	389	302	1,290
Enfield	550	56	354	960
Haringey	457	360	140	957
Harrow	412	134	396	942
Havering	514	0	303	817
Hillingdon	505	96	57	658
Hounslow	473	136	5	614
Kingston upon Thames	253	18	370	641
Merton	262	165	165	592
Newham	616	109	24	749
Redbridge	481	174	231	886
Richmond upon Thames	353	434	85	872
Sutton	338	176	299	813
Waltham Forest	463	12	207	682

Local authority	Places in local authority homes	Places in voluntary homes[1]	Places in private homes[1]	Total places in all homes[1]
Southern Region	13,658	7,759	26,655	48,072
Dorset	1,380	673	4,256	6,309
Hampshire	2,854	962	5,850	9,666
Isle of Wight	316	126	1,253	1,695
Kent	2,807	1,226	2,525	6,558
Surrey	2,016	1,845	1,962	5,823
East Sussex	1,491	1,527	5,465	8,483
West Sussex	1,602	1,135	4,086	6,823
Wiltshire	1,192	265	1,258	2,715
South Western Region	8,077	2,844	16,276	27,197
Avon	2,538	829	2,295	5,662
Cornwall	1,044	251	2,621	3,916
Devon	2,217	1,035	8,929	12,181
Gloucestershire	1,164	480	1,058	2,702
Somerset	1,114	249	1,373	2,736
England Total	114,189	33,974	106,108	254,271

[1] Includes homes exempt from registration under Section 1(5)(j) of the Registered Homes Act 1984.

EMPLOYMENT

Hotels (Standards)

60. Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he has any plans to introduce minimum statutory standards for hotels.

Mr. Lee: No. Government regulation in this area would be costly. Bureaucratic, and unresponsive to the changing needs of the hotel industry and its customers. The national tourist boards are developing a voluntary classification scheme which has attracted widespread support. Consultations with the industry on the future shape of the scheme are continuing.

Labour Statistics

61. Mr. Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment by how much unemployment has fallen in inner city areas over the past year.

Mr. Lee: The number of unemployed claimants in inner city areas has fallen by almost 21 per cent. from 1,015,098 to 806,466 in the year to November 1988.

The comparison is affected by the change in the coverage of the unemployment count from September 1988, due to the new benefit regulations for young people aged under 18.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will meet the director of the Unemployment Unit to discuss the calculation of accurate unemployment totals; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: My right hon. Friend has no plans to do so and is satisfied that the official unemployment totals calculated by the Department of Employment are accurate.

Mr. Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the latest estimate of the number of vacancies for skilled and semi-skilled workers in the Greater London area.

Mr. Lee: Information is not available in the form requested. However, a survey conducted in June 1988 which revealed around 150,000 vacancies in total in London, identified skilled and semi-skilled manual vacancies separately. The results have been published by this Department in a report, "The London Labour Market", a copy of which is in the Library.

Business in the Community

62. Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what plans he has to meet representatives from Business in the Community to discuss future plans for local enterprise agencies.

Mr. Lee: I recently met representatives of Business in the Community to discuss the opportunities for local enterprise agencies arising from the White Paper "Employment for the 1990s" published on 5 December. Officials of my Department are having more detailed discussions with Business in the Community and local enterprise agency directors, and I will be speaking on the subject in April at a conference of local enterprise agency chairmen organised by Business in the Community.

Construction Industry

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he has any plans to seek to improve the safety record in the demolition section of the construction industry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: New regulations are being prepared which provide for the management and co-ordination of health and safety on multi-contractor sites, increase the number of safety supervisors in smaller companies and amend the site notification procedure to identify sites where there are high risk activities. The introduction of regulations which would make the wearing of safety helmets compulsory on construction sites is also planned.

In addition to concentrating on the inspection of the more hazardous activities in the industry such as demolition and roofwork, Health and Safety Executive (HSE) inspectors will also be paying more attention to the quality of site management and its ability to manage health and safety.

Inspectors will be looking at the level of training and supervision that has been provided and the precautions that have been taken to control the risks posed by demolition activities and will continue to draw attention to

HSE published guidance on this subject. They will pursue their inquiries and any enforcement action to the highest levels in companies which do not measure up to the standards expected of them.

YTS

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he proposes to make any changes in the YTS in 1989-90.

Mr. Cope: The Government want to ensure that more trainees are able to gain vocational qualifications on completion of YTS training to enable them to get jobs. We want YTS to set an example of training based on achievement of standards of performance. YTS will therefore increasingly encourage the achievement of nationally recognised vocational qualifications and managing agents with particularly successful records. Paperwork will be simpler.

The Government's guarantee of an offer of a suitable place to all young people under 18 who do not have a job remains unchanged.

From April 1989, a new five-tier system of premium grants for special training will come into effect. These grants, payable over and above the basic YTS grant, will provide a more sensitive and selective approach to the funding of special training for groups of young people with particular needs. Each of the five levels of payment will have a value of £500 per filled place per year, giving a maximum of £2,500.

There are to be no other changes in YTS funding, or of the first and second year trainee allowances. These decisions reflect the Government's policy of ensuring suitable provision for young people with special training needs, while encouraging employers to contribute an increasingly larger share of the costs of YTS training.

Loan Guarantee Scheme

Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement about the future of the loan guarantee scheme.

Mr. Cope: I have recently announced the continuation of the loan guarantee scheme which was due to end on 31 March this year. In addition, the maximum loan available will be increased from £75,000 to £100,000.

There continues to be a demand for the LGS from firms that could not otherwise raise finance. On average in 1988, 180 loans per month were authorised. The survival rates of LGS borrowers have improved throughout the period that it has operated. We shall continue to keep under review the level of use of the scheme and whether firms could have obtained finance without using the LGS.

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what proportion of technical and vocational education initiative pupils stay on until 18 years of age.

Mr. Cope: In England and Wales, 21 per cent. of pupils who entered TVEI pilot projects stayed on until 18 in 1987; and 22 per cent. in 1988. In Scotland, where many pupils complete their highers at the age of 17, 13 per cent. of pupils stayed on until 18 in 1988.

Written Answers to Questions

Thursday 19 January 1989

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Conference on Security and Co-operation

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish in the Official Report the finally agreed text of the conference on security and co-operation in Europe in Vienna; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: The Vienna concluding document will be published as a White Paper, as will my right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary's speech at the concluding session of the Vienna CSCE meeting.

In the meantime, copies of both the document and the speech will be placed in the Library of the House and issued to members of the public on request.

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonweath Affairs if he will make a statement on the terms of the concluding document of the Vienna CSCE review conference.

Mr. Waldegrave: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer that I gave to him on 11 January, at column 830. The Vienna concluding document contains greatly improved commitments on human rights and contacts, including an important new mechanism for the regular review of human rights abuses, and provides for increased co-operation in economic, scientific, environmental, information, cultural and educational fields. It contains a substantial programme of follow up activities including an information forum in London in April/May 1989 and opens the way to negotiations in March on conventional arms control and confidence and security building measures.

Cyprus

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the Government still consider, as indicated to the House on 23 October 1987, that the 1986 United Nations plan for a binational federal Government of Cyprus in which the two communities share power as equal political partners forms a good basis for settlement.

Mrs. Chalker: We continue to believe that the United Nations Secretary-General's draft framework agreement of March 1986 formed a good basis for a Cyprus settlement. But events have moved on. The leaders of the two communities, President Vassiliou and Mr. Denktash, accepted the Secretary-General's proposal last August that, without any pre-conditions, they should make a fresh attempt to negotiate a comprehensive settlement by 1 June 1989. Their talks continue, with the aim of agreeing the basis for a settlement in present circumstances. We have encouraged each side to negotiate constructively, taking the basic concerns of the other fully into account.

Iran

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received of executions in Iran in the last three months; and if he will list them.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have received regular press releases and reports of political executions from a variety of sources including Amnesty International.

We have also received reporting on this subject from our mission in Tehran.

We examine all such reports with great care.

Turkey

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations the Government have made to the Turkish Government concerning improvements in human rights in Turkey; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. Friend the Minister of State raised the subject of human rights with the Turkish ambassador on 12 December 1988. We continue to urge the Turkish Government to maintain the improvement in human rights there has been in recent years and to respect and abide by the terms of the relevant international human rights conventions to which Turkey is a signatory.

Foreign Compensation (China)

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress is being made in implementing the Foreign Compensation (People's Republic of China) Order 1987.

Mr. Eggar: Very good progress is being made. 2,032 claims in respect of bonds and 989 claims in respect of property had been received by the Foreign Compensation Commission (which is being assisted with regard to the administrative aspects of the work by the private accountants Ernst and Whinney) by the two deadlines of 30 June and 31 August 1988 laid down in the 1987 order. Of these, 1,488 claims in respect of bonds and seven in respect of property had been determined by the commission by 13 January.

Adjudication of property claims takes time. The issues raised by many claims are complex. It is hoped, however, that the final distribution from the China fund can be made by late 1990.

In the meantime, my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State has directed that an interim payment of 5 per cent. of the value assigned to a bond should be paid to successful claimants in respect of bonds as from the end of January.

PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMISSION

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. French: To ask the Member answering for the Public Accounts Commission how many oral parliamentary questions he has answered by written reply because the question was not reached at Question Time, for the most recent year for which figures are available.

Sir Peter Hordern: None, during 1988.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. French: To ask the Lord President of the Council how many oral parliamentary questions he has answered by written reply because the question was not reached at Question Time, for the most recent year for which figures are available.

Mr. Wakeham: Twenty two, during 1988. Fifteen of which I answered on behalf of my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Departmental Job Dispersal

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to move jobs in his Department to locations in the Nottingham, North constituency; and if he will make it his policy to inform the hon. Member for Nottingham, North of any developments.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: For our plans for relocating some work from sone London local social security offices I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Epping Forest (Mr. Norris) on 16 January, at columns 44-45.

A team of officials are considering options for moving some headquarters work out of London and are investigating all possible locations which will allow us to improve efficiency. We shall make a full announcement of our conclusions in due course.

Maintenance Orders

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services whether the arrangements for diversion of maintenance orders for women receiving income support are still as described in paragraphs 13.20-22, "Supplementary Benefits Handbook 1984."

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The arrangements are generally the same. There is a slight change in that claimants are no longer invited to arrange for the court to pass their court order payments to the Department, rather than direct to them, where the order is paid with complete regularity.

Unemployment Benefit

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people in Blyth Valley had their unemployment benefit stopped because they were considered not to be available for work in January 1988.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I regret that information is not available in the form requested. Statistics on adjudication officers' decisions are compiled quarterly for the areas covered by adjudication offices, each of which cover a number of benefit offices. For the quarter ended 31 March 1988, the records for the adjudication office area of Newcastle, which includes the constituency of Blyth Valley, show that 246 adverse decisions on availability for work were given.

Mr. S. W. Brass

Mr. Heddle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when his Department's Central Office at Longbarton, Newcastle, will provide the information requested by Mr. S. W. Brass of 58 Sandy lane, Rugeley, Staffordshire, on behalf of Mrs. D. E. Brass regarding non-receipt of her retirement pension for the weeks commencing 7 and 14 November, Reference 02707276 ZT.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Non-payment of retirement pension in respect of Mrs. Brass for the weeks commencing 7 and 14 November 1988 has now been confirmed and immediate payment of the amount due will be made by the Cannock local office.

Children (Access Visits)

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what guidance is issued to local offices on payment of fares to a parent who is seeking to make an access visit to his or her child;

(2) whether financial help is available to a mother who has to travel long distances for an access visit to her child in order to comply with a custody order;

(3) what help is available to parents seeking help with transport costs in order to pay access visits to their children.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: A community care grant from the social fund may be awarded to a parent receiving income support to cover travelling costs to visit a child who is in the care of the other parent pending a custody decision. Once custody has been decided help can not be given.

Guidance and directions for the award of such payments appear in the "Social Fund Manual". A copy is in the Library.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Public Expenditure White Paper

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects to publish the 1989 public expenditure White Paper.

Mr. Major: The 1989 public expenditure White Paper will be published at 3.30 pm on Monday 30 January, and copies will be made available in the Vote Office.

West German Minister

Ms. Quin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last met his West German counterpart; and what was the content of their discussions.

Mr. Lilley: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor meets his counterparts in other countries from time to time to discuss a range of issues of mutual interest.

Interest Rates

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the current level of interest rates.

Mr. Lilley: Bank base rates are 13 per cent.

Crown Estate Commissioners

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what matters were discussed when the Crown Estate Commissioners met him to present their annual report.

Mr. Lawson: I met the commissioners on 13 July 1988. We discussed the performance of the Crown Estate in 1987-88 and their broad programme for the future years. I regret that I cannot disclose the specific issues discussed as they are subject to commercial confidentiality.

Mortgage Interest Rates

Mr. Grocott: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information he has as to how many households have their mortgage interest payments adjusted annually.

Mr. Lilley: Figures released by the Building Societies Association in July 1988 showed that 37 per cent. of borrowers with the largest 14 building societies had their mortgage payments adjusted once a year. No information is available for banks and other mortgage lenders.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Hanley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the growth of (a) self employment and (b) part-time employment in the United Kingdom since 1979.

Mr. Major: Between June 1979 and September 1988 the number of self-employed people in Great Britain rose by 60 per cent. to nearly 3 million. Over the same period, the part-time workforce in employment rose by 30 per cent. to over 6 million.

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer in which regions adult unemployment has fallen over the past year.

Mr. Major: Adult unemployment has fallen in every region of the United Kingdom over the last year, and fastest in the west midlands, the north-west and Wales.

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the fall in the number of long-term unemployed aged 18 to 24 years since October 1986.

Mr. Major: The latest available figures for October 1988 show that the number of long-term unemployed aged between 18 and 24 has fallen by one half since October 1986.

Private Shareholders

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of the number of private shareholders in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The joint Treasury and stock exchange survey carried out in January and February 1988 estimated that approximately 9 million people own shares, 20 per cent. of the adult population. This represents a threefold increase since 1979.

Anti-Dumping Duties

Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how much in anti-dumping duties on electronic typewriters was collected by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise in the last year for which figures are available;

(2) how much in anti-dumping duties on daisy wheel printers was collected by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise in the last year for which figures are available;

(3) how much in anti-dumping duties on dot matrix printers was collected by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise in the last year for which figures are available;

(4) how much in anti-dumping duties on photocopiers was collected by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise in the last year for which figures are available;

(5) how much in anti-dumping duties on microchips was collected by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 16 January 1989]: The following information is in respect of duty collected in the 12 months to November 1988:

Category	Anti-dumping duty (£000's)
Electronic typewriters	238
Daisy wheel printers and dot matrix printers[1]	140
Photocopiers	5,186
Microchips	[2]

[1] Separate figures for daisy wheel and dot matrix printers are not available. Anti-dumping duty was imposed on dot matrix printers in May 1988 and on daisy wheel printers in July 1988.
[2] Anti-dumping duty is not levied on microchips.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Land Registration

Mr. Heddle: To ask the Attorney-General if he will investigate the reasons for the delay regarding registration No. WSX 131547; and when the district land registrar of Her Majesty's Land Registry, Weymouth, will conclude this matter.

The Attorney-General: The registration of title number WSX131547 was completed on 6 January 1989. Completion of the registration was delayed because replies to requisitions raised by the Land Registry in respect of prior applications, which affected the land in title number WSX131547, had not been received.

Latent Damage Act

Mr. Heddle: To ask the Attorney-General if he has any plans to monitor the working of the Latent Damage Act; and if he will make a statement upon the aspect of deliberate concealment.

The Attorney-General: The Lord Chancellor has no plans to do so at present since it is too early to say whether such an exercise is necessary.

The Latent Damage Act 1986 provides that the overriding time limit of 15 years in an action for negligence is not to apply where there has been deliberate concealment of any fact by the defendant. A defendant will therefore not be able to take advantage of his own wrongdoing by relying on the lapse of time.

Freehold

Mr. Heddle: To ask the Attorney-General when he plans to introduce legislation embodying the Law Commission working group's recommendations contained in "Commonhold Freehold Flats and Freehold Ownership of Other Independent Buildings"; and if he will make a statement on the position of existing flat leaseholders' rights to conversion to any such commonhold system.

The Attorney-General: The Lord Chancellor announced on 8 June 1988 that the Government have arranged for legislation to be prepared at the Law Commission giving effect to the recommendations made in the working group report (Cm. 179).

Decisions on the implementation of the recommendations, and the circumstances in which leaseholds of flats should be convertable into freeholds within commonholds are being considered and will be announced in due course.

PRIME MINISTER

Space Debris

Q53. Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Prime Minister if she will take steps to mount a space mission to investigate the extent of space debris in the earth's orbit.

The Prime Minister: This is an area in which it is natural to work through the European Space Agency and where the United Kingdom and other member states are due shortly to consider a working party report. There are, however, no immediate United Kingdom or ESA plans for a space mission to study space debris.

Newport, Gwent

Q87. Mr. Flynn: to ask the Prime Minister if she intends to pay an official visit to the Duffryn area of Newport, Gwent.

The Prime Minister: I have at present no plans to do so.

Cabinet Ministers (Share Dealings)

Mr. Roberts: To ask the Prime Minister what are the guidelines for Cabinet Ministers' dealings in shares.

The Prime Minister: A memorandum by the then secretary of the Cabinet, which included the guidance given to Ministers on this matter, was submitted in evidence to the Royal Commission on standards of conduct in public life in 1975. A copy is in the Library. The current guidance is to all intents and purposes the same and continues to be based on the principle that Ministers must so order their affairs that no conflict arises, or appears to arise, between their private interests and their public duties.

Engagements

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 19 January.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 19 January.

Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 19 January.

Mr. Cran: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 19 January.

Mr. Gill: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 19 January.

Mr. Stern: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 19 January.

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 19 January.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House I shall be having further meetings later today, including one with the Premier of Quebec.

Government Legal Services

Mr. Key: To ask the Prime Minister whether Sir Robert Andrew's report of his review of the Government legal services is to be published; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: Last year I asked Sir Robert Andrew to undertake a review of Government legal services and to make recommendations on what legal services the Government need, how they can be provided most effectively and economically and what changes are needed in the management of legal staff so as to make best use of them. Sir Robert's report is being published today. Copies have been placed in the Library of the House. I am grateful to Sir Robert Andrew for the work he has put into the report.

Sir Robert Andrew concludes that the Government continue to need a wide range of legal services provided to a high standard and that the need for them is likely to go on increasing. He considers it likely that the bulk of these services will continue to be provided within Government, but Departments should decide on cost-effectiveness grounds whether to meet their needs in Government or outside. He suggests that some of the bodies providing services of a legal nature to the public might usefully become executive agencies and that the relocation of some work out of London should prove cost-effective. The Government accept these conclusions.

The report proposes some adjustments in organisation to improve the effectiveness of legal services. In the light of these recommendations, I have decided to make the following changes in England and Wales. Under the ministerial direction of the Attorney-General, the Treasury Solicitor will become the head of the Government legal service. As head of profession he will advise on the personnel management of lawyers across Departments, and will be supported in this by a new lawyers management unit. The present Law Officers Department will be renamed the Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers, and the legal departments for which the Attorney-General is the ministerial head (the Treasury Solicitor's Department, the Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers, the Crown Prosecution Service, and the Serious Fraud Office) will be known collectively as the Law Officers Departments. The Lord Chancellor's Department will take over responsibi-lity for the Statutory Publications Office from the Treasury Solicitor's Department, probably in April 1990.

The report makes a number of recommendations aimed at improving the management of lawyers. The Government accept these recommendations and agree that greater effort needs to be put into recruitment and that the areas of recruitment should be broadened. They believe that the Government legal service as a whole will benefit from more co-ordinated personnel management and from improved training and career management. The new lawyers management unit will have a key role in helping the Treasury Solicitor as head of profession work with Departments in implementing the report's recommendations.

Sir Robert Andrew also makes a number of recommendations to improve the pay of lawyers. The Government welcome his emphasis on the need for selectivity in considering special pay treatment for lawyers, which is consistent with the Government's policies on pay. The report also recognises the Government's comparatively greater difficulties of recruiting and retaining lawyers in London, which have already led to the establishment of special London pay scales for lawyers at grades 6 and 7 from April 1988.

Lawyers at grades 2 and 3 form part of the senior open structure, whose pay is decided by the Government on the recommendations of the Top Salaries Review Body. The Government are consulting the TSRB about the recommendations which affect these grades and will respond to this part of the report when they have received the TSRB's views.

Subject to consultations with the unions, the Government propose to respond to the recommendations of the pay of grades below the senior open structure as follows.

Around £2,500 a year will be added to the pay of all lawyers in grades 4 and 5 working in London. For grade 5 this will take the form of two points on the pay scale. Staff at grade 4 will receive a £2,500 allowance.

In addition, it is proposed that up to three points on the scale should be made available as personal pay points for certain grade 5 lawyers selected on the basis of their skills, experience, marketability and value to the Department. Broadly similar treatment will be applied to grade 4.

The Government regard it as important that all at grade 5 should be eligible for performance pay. For lawyers (including those in London) without personal pay points, up to four performance points will continue to be available. For those on the highest personal point, it is proposed that two should be available.

Lawyers in grades 5 to 7 are covered by the long-term pay agreement of July 1988, under which these grades will receive pay increases of 4 per cent. from 1 April 1989 and a further review from 1 August 1989 informed by a survey of pay levels in the private sector.

The Government do not propose to make personal pay points available at grades 6 and 7. But grade 6 lawyers in London will receive an additional scale point, worth around £1,100.

It is proposed to make these changes to pay in response to Sir Robert Andrew's recommendations from 1 April 1989.

THE ARTS

Museums Training

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Minister for the Arts what developments there have been on museums training following his statement on 17 March 1988.

Mr. Luce: In my statement of 17 March 1988 I welcomed the Museums and Galleries Commission working party report on museums training and career structure, which was published in July 1987.

I was pleased to announce that my Department, with the MSC, was providing support and financial assistance for a museums skills needs assessment study to identify key skills and competencies. This study, for which the principal agent is the Museums Association, is now almost completed and will result in the production of new modules for the training of those currently or prospectively working in museums.

In my 17 March statement I said that it was not my intention to set up a Museums Training Council with regional panels in the form recommended by the MGC report. I considered it appropriate that the primary responsibility for museums training should rest with the museums industry itself, and that the continuing developments in this area should be overseen and guided by a consortium representing the main sectors of the museums industry. I indicated that I would be consulting further about the composition of such a consortium.

I am pleased to announce that discussions with interested parties, including the representatives of museums interests on the steering committee for the training needs assessment study, have resulted in a proposal that the Museums Association should establish a museums training institute, which would be a subsidiary charitable company of the association. The museums training institute would be responsible for forming a view on the museum industry's training needs, identifying standards for occupations in the industry, reviewing the content and delivery of training, promoting the provision of training, providing training in selected areas and validating training courses. It is the intention that the board of the institute will consist of an independent chairman, members representing the Museums Association, the national, local authority and independent museums, the Museums and Galleries Commission, the area museum councils, and a number of independent members.

If this proposal is to be developed, as I hope it will be, it is important that the interested parties, including the museums industry and museums organisations, work together to ensure its success. The Office of Arts and Libraries will be contributing £25,000 towards the initial start-up costs of the museums training institute, and towards the preparation of a business plan. Looking beyond the information of the institute, I am prepared to provide limited funding on a pump-priming basis for a period of up to five years. I shall look to the museums industry and employers to contribute a progressively increasing share of the costs of the institute following the substantial public investment in the development of museums training by the Office of Arts and Libraries and the Training Agency.

In the past 18 months considerable progress has been made in the development of museum training. The analysis of key skills and competencies has provided a sound basis for further progress and I shall continue to take a close interest in progress towards the establishment of a lead industry body for the museums sector which will carry forward and develop these initiatives.

CIVIL SERVICE

Foreign and Commonwealth Office (Disbursements)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service, pursuant to his reply of 10 January, Official Report, column 482, where information relating to the £209,756 of disbursements made by his Department to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in 1987-88 is to be found; and in what form.

Mr. Luce: I have nothing further to add to the answer I gave to the hon. Member on 7 November 1988, at column 40.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Nursery Education

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) what is his policy on the education of under-fives; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he has any plans for earmarked grants for the development of education for the under-fives; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend has no plans affecting the funding arrangements for the education of the under-fives. The Government will make a full statement of its policies on the education of the under-fives when responding to the report of the Education, Science and Arts Committee on educational provision for the under-fives, published on 11 January.

Expenditure (Late Claims)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) pursuant to his reply of 10 January, Official Report, column 483, to the hon. Member for Southwark and Bermondsey, how late claims for 1987-88 expenditure by local education authorities are treated in relation to the allocations of grant expenditure between local education authorities for the current year; whether the allocations for the current year were set in the light of expected late claims by some authorities; and if he will make a statement;

(2) pursuant to his reply of 10 January, Official Report, column 483, to the hon. Member for Southwark and Bermondsey, if he will publish a list of the late claims for 1987-88 made to date by local education authorities, showing the amount claimed by each authority; what further information is available to his Department about any other outstanding claims for that year; and if he will make a statement;

(3) when 1988-89 allocations under the local education authority training grants scheme were determined; what steps were taken to provide carry forward arrangements to compensate individual authorities for any failure to claim money under the scheme in 1987-88; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: Claims submitted to date in the current financial year, which were due in the 1987-88 financial year, are as follows:

Local Education Authority	Amount £	Claim for Quarter[1]
Barnet	358,880	2
Barnsley	66,134	2
Barnsley	205,430	3
Croydon	159,675	3
Ealing	120,400	1
Ealing	121,800	2
Ealing	176,900	3
Hertfordshire	658,466	3
Salford	250,537	3
Waltham Forest	134,670	3
Wiltshire	222,940	2
Wiltshire	359,805	3

[1] Claims to cover estimated expenditure were due on the following dates:

Quarter 1	1 June	1987
Quarter 2	1 September	1987
Quarter 3	1 December	1987

In addition, Barnet, Harrow and Hillingdon LEAs did not submit separate claims for one or more of these quarters and Liverpool LEA has not yet submitted a claim for the third quarter.

Authorities were asked to make provisional end of year claims for expenditure incurred in 1987-88 as soon as possible after the end of the financial year. The following authorities have not yet done so:

Dorset, Liverpool, Sunderland and Waltham Forest.

The maximum amounts of expenditure in 1988-89 which would be grant-aided under the local education authority training grants scheme were notified provisionally to authorities in August 1987 and confirmed in December 1987. These amounts were based on proposals made by authorities and relative pupil and student numbers. They took no account of lateness of claims as eligible claims for 1987-88 will continue to be met from authorities' allocations for that year even when submitted late.

Cash Limits

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will give details of the end year flexibility scheme for his Department's 1987-88 cash limits, showing (a) eligible expenditure, (b) maximum carry-forward and (c) actual carry-forward in each case.

Mrs. Rumbold: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 21 July 1988, at columns 725-28, to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Hornchurch (Mr. Squire). The increases in provision for 1988-89 arising from capital underspend in 1987-88, allowed under the end-year flexibility scheme, were £2·180 million on class XII, vote 1, where the eligible expenditure was £43·606 million; and £0·370 million on class XII, vote 3, where the eligible expenditure was £153·640 million. In each case the carry-forward was the maximum permitted under the end-year flexibility scheme.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will give details of 1987-88 underspending of his Department's 1987-88 cash limits for items in class XII, vote 1, which were outside the end of year flexibility scheme showing (a) expenditure authorised in the Vote and (b) the amount underspent in each case and of the adjustments that have been made to expenditure plans for later years to compensate for the underspending in 1987-88.

Mrs. Rumbold: The cash limit for class XII, vote 1 in 1987-88 was £378·9 million. Expenditure was £348·5 million. Of the total underspend of £30·4 million, £25·6 million was accounted for by the level of claims for the LEA training grant scheme and £1·8 million by the level of claims for education support grants. The remaining underspend arose from a variety of causes across the Vote. The level of provision for the LEA training grant scheme and for education support grants in 1988-89 has been set to allow for claims arising in respect of earlier years.

Halls of Residence

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) what arrangements the University Grants Committee is making to continue to meet the rating bills of halls of residence of universities in England, Wales and Scotland for the financial year 1989-90; and what representations he is making to the University Grants Committee to ensure that it does not cease to meet the costs of commercial rates in Scottish halls of residence while halls in England and Wales receive monies to cover their rates;

(2) if he will meet representatives of local authorities to discuss the impact on their revenues of any reduction in tourism arising out of the withdrawal of university halls of residence from commercial letting as a result of University Grants Committee funding changes accompanying the introduction of the community charge;

(3) what calculation he has made of the impact on tourism of the possible withdrawal of university halls of residence from commercial letting as a result of any reduction in University Grants Committee funding of the commercial rates paid by halls to local authorities;

(4) if he will meet representatives of local authorities to discuss the impact on their revenues of any reduction in tourism arising out of the withdrawal of university halls of residence from commercial letting as a result of University Grants Committee funding changes accompanying the introduction of the community charge.

Mr. Jackson: Rates paid in respect of university halls of residence are not currently reimbursed by the University Grants Committee. A decision by the Universities Funding Council not to reimburse the cost of business rates payable, after the introduction of the community charge, in respect of halls of residence used for commercial letting would effectively maintain the present position and therefore should not affect the commercial letting of university halls of residence or have an adverse impact on tourism or revenue received by local authorities.

Open University

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he has discussed with officials of the Open university the impact of the under supplementation against inflation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: An additional £12·9 million is being made available to the Open university over the next three years. Recurrent grant for 1989 of £68·4 million is over 7 per cent. higher than in 1988. Decisions on grant take full account of advice received from the Open university visiting committee, and of regular discussions with officers of the university.

WALES

Wrexham Water Works Company

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether the Wrexham Water Works Company is above or below the £30 million assets line; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: The total assets less current liabilities are given in the company's annual report for 1987 as £5,528,000.

Community Care

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he now proposes to implement the recommendation of the Griffiths report on community care; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: This report relates explicitly to England. My right hon. Friend is considering its implications for services in Wales, in the light of our separate strategies and initiatives to promote the development of effective community care. He will bring forward proposals as soon as possible.

EC Free Food Scheme

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what is the total amount of (a) butter and (b) beef allocated to each county in Wales under the European Community free food scheme for 1988-89;

(2) what is the total amount of (a) butter and (b) beef distributed in each county in Wales under the European Community free food scheme for 1988-89 to date;

(3) how much (a) butter and (b) beef was allocated to Wales under the European Community free food scheme for 1988-89; and how much is undistributed at present.

Mr. Peter Walker: In Wales 176 tonnes of butter and 332 tonnes of beef were allocated to and distributed by designated organisations under the EC free food scheme in 1988. Figures are not available on a county basis. Local distribution arrangements were a matter for the designated organisations to determine within the rules of the scheme. Consultations on the scheme for 1989 will take place soon.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales from whom applications have been received in each county in Wales to distribute beef and butter in the 1988-89 free food scheme; and which of the applications have been granted.

Mr. Peter Walker: All nine organisations which applied for designation under the EC free food scheme in Wales had their applications accepted. A list of the organisations was placed in the Library of the House on 21 April 1988 by my right hon. Friend the Minister of State, Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food.

Water Act 1973

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a list of orders made by him and his predecessors under section 29 of the Water Act 1973 requiring the Welsh water authority to seek a specified rate of return on its net assets, giving the date of each such order, and the date of return specified in that order.

Mr. Grist: The orders made under section 29 of the Water Act 1973 are as follows:

Statutory Instrument Number	Effective dates	Rate of return per cent.
1981/826	6 July 1981 to 31 March 1982	0·30
1982/1087	31 August 1982 to 31 March 1983	0·95
1983/782	13 July 1983 to 31 March 1984	1·20
1984/1470	24 October 1984 to 31 March 1985	1·25
1985/78	1 April 1985 to 31 March 1986	1·45
1985/1805	1 April 1986 to 31 March 1987	1·65
1986/1952	1 April 1987 to 31 March 1988	1·95
1987/2022	1 April 1988 to 31 March 1989	2·35

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on how many occasions since 31 March 1978 his Department made a charges option order under the provisions of section 19 of the Water Act 1973, giving the date of any such order and the location to which it applied.

Mr. Grist: None. The section has been replaced by section 62 of the Land Drainage Act 1976.

Breast Cancer Screening

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many general practitioners have facilities for screening for breast cancer; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: In view of the specialised mammography equipment and radiological expertise required, breast screening in Wales is to be carried out by specialist units and not individual general practitioners.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Disasters (Emergency Funds)

Mr. Caborn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will give a breakdown of the amount diverted from the Government's overseas aid budget to provide emergency funds to the following countries in the wake of recent disasters (a) the Sudan, (b) Bangladesh, (c) Nicaragua, and other Latin American countries affected by Hurricane Joan, (d) Jamaica and (e) Mexico.

Mr. Chris Patten: The funds provided for these recent disasters were allocated from contingency provision within the overseas aid budget; none of the money was diverted from planned aid programme expenditure.

The amounts spent on emergency relief in the countries named in 1988-89 have been:

	£ million
(a) Sudan (floods, refugees etc)	12·4
(b) Bangladesh (floods)	2·5
(c) Nicaragua and Costa Rica (hurricane)	0·27
(d) Jamaica (hurricane)	0·55
(e) Mexico (hurricane)	0·015

Aid Statistics

Mr. Caborn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if Her Majesty's Government will set a timetable by which they will attain the United Nations recommendation that donor countries' aid to the Third world should constitute 0·7 per cent. of gross national product.

Mr. Chris Patten: Like previous administrations, Her Majesty's Government are not able to set a timetable for attaining this target. Progress towards the target depends on developments in the economy and other claims on resources. We have a substantial aid programme which is now growing in real terms.

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are the estimated amounts of (a) principal and (b) interest due to be remitted to the Government by overseas aid debtor countries in 1989-90; and what were the amounts actually remitted for the last three years for which figures are available.

Mr. Chris Patten: In 1989-90, repayments of past aid loans due to Her Majesty's Government amount to £63,148,015 (principal) and £11,424,790 (interest). Actual receipts for the latest three financial years for which figures are available are:

	Principal £	Interest £
1987-88	53,121,271	9,463,464
1986-87	53,349,990	10,247,424
1985-86	56,077,690	11,139,158

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the planned overseas aid budget of £1,430 million in 1989-90 includes or excludes the estimated amounts of (a) principal and (b) interest due to be remitted to the Government by overseas aid debtor countries in that year.

Mr. Chris Patten: The planned overseas aid budget of £1,430 million in 1989-90 excludes any principal repayment or interest payment due to Her Majesty's Government from past aid loans in that year.

South Africa

Mr. Caborn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much assistance has been granted by the EEC to the Church organisations in South Africa that have been subject to recent bomb and arson attacks; and what form this assistance has taken.

Mr. Chris Patten: The European Community has channelled some 22 mecu (over £14 million) through the South African Council of Churches and the South African Catholic Bishops Conference (SACBC) under the special programme of assistance for victims of apartheid which began in 1986. The United Kingdom's share of this total amounts to some £3 million. The EC programme has financed 70 separate projects implemented by many non-governmental organisations throughout South Africa. The EC has also approved projects to help replace some of the SACBC equipment destroyed, and to help provide new accommodation and facilities for a number of affected organisations, including Church groups.

Mr. Caborn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much assistance has been given by Her Majesty's Government to the Church organisations in South Africa that have been subject to recent bomb and arson attacks; and what form this assistance has taken.

Mr. Chris Patten: Britain's contribution to the needs of the Church organisations in question has been through the share we contribute to the European Community's programme. In addition Britain has provided modest assistance to replace equipment for some of the other organisations based in the same buildings.

India (Water Project)

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much aid is being provided to India for drilling rigs for the Indian Government's water project; and how much aid the Indian Government requested to finance the original programme.

Mr. Chris Patten: We were discussing with the Indian authorities finance for a water drilling project costing about £25 million. Unfortunately the project did not pass our appraisal, designed to ensure that it was likely to achieve sustainable benefits. We are considering alternative approaches with the Government of India.

Brazilian Rain Forests

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance the United Kingdom is giving to international efforts to halt the destruction of Brazilian rain forests; and what information he has on their effectiveness.

Mr. Chris Patten: We are among those who have raised this issue with the Government of Brazil. There have been reports that President Sarney is to seek international assistance on environmental matters; if these are correct, that would be a welcome development. The World bank already has under discussion a loan of up to $150 million to strengthen the Brazilian Government's national environmental programme. Environmental conditions attached to earlier World Bank and Inter-American Development bank loans have helped to increase awareness of the issues. As signatories of the international tropical timber agreement, both Brazil and the United Kingdom are pledged to encourage the development of international policies aimed at sustainable utilisation and conservation of tropical forests.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Speeding Offences

Dame Elaine Kellett-Bowman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many speeding offences in which no other offence was alleged were proceeded against either by fixed penalties or through the courts by the Lincolnshire police in each of the last five years for which statistics are available; and what was the average for England and Wales in these years.

Mr. John Patten: The available information on all speeding offences dealt with by court proceedings or fixed penalty notices is published annually by police force area in "Offences relating to motor vehicles, England and Wales, Supplementary tables" (tables 16 and 20 of the issue for 1987); copies are in the Library. Information on how many of these offences were the only ones alleged on a particular occasion is not available. However, Home Office guidelines are that a fixed penalty notice should not be issued where an officer is also reporting other offences for consideration of summons, and it is believed that in the vast majority of cases a prosecution for speeding is not accompanied by a prosecution for another offence.

Prison Construction

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is (a) the original agreed contract price and (b) the current contract price for each of the new prisons under construction.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Construction contracts are awarded on the basis of an accepted tender price excluding variations of price (VOP). The contract value (which is the current contract price) is adjusted during the course of the contract to take account of VOP. VOP is calculated from the NEDO (National Economic Development Organisation) formula which is a nationally recognised formula for the calculation of cost increases for projects under construction. In the case of two of the five prisons listed, adjustments have also been made to take account of the application of VAT to building contracts since June 1988.

Contract	Original agreed main contract price —tender price (excluding VOP and VAT) £ millions	Current contract value (including VOP incurred to date and VAT) £ millions
Brinsford Prison (awarded June 1987)	23·12	25·18
Bullingdoe Prison (awarded June 1988)	33·10	38·00
Lindholme II Prison (awarded September 1988)	31·23	40·98
Milton Keynes Prison (awarded December 1988)	57·17	71·96
Whitemoor Prison (awarded February 1988)	28·85	31·27

There are two other new prisons currently under construction. Advance works are taking place at Lancaster Farms young offender institution, where the main contract has not yet been awarded. At Woolwich prison work is proceeding on the basis of a construction management contract. This involves a number of indivdual contract packages for the completion of the project instead of a single lump sum contract. It is not possible to provide comparable estimated cost figures as all the individual contract packages have not yet been let.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the number of complaints made by boards of visitors as to the standard of workmanship and delays in completion of all major modernisation programmes of prison building work; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Since 1 January 1988 letters have been received from three boards of visitors about delays in the completion of major modernisation programmes at existing prison establishments. It is our objective to proceed as fast as is practicable with the programmes already under way and with those planned.

Albany Prison, Isle of Wight

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the present number is of empty cells in the Albany prison, Isle of Wight.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: On Monday 16 January there were nine unoccupied cells in the living accommodation at Her Majesty's prison, Albany.

Remand Prisoners

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the number of remand prisoners being held in police station cells on 9 January; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: On Monday 9 January, 152 prisoners, most of whom would have been on remand, were held in police cells in England and Wales. This is 571 fewer than a month previously. Efforts to secure reductions are continuing.

Leeds Prison

Mr. Irving: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the estimated cost, and the expected completion date, of the building programme to redevelop Leeds prison.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: It is expected that work on the redevelopment of Her Majesty's prison Leeds will be completed by 1997. The estimated cost at 1988 price levels is approximately £48 million, including VAT.

Feltham Remand Centre

Mr. Irving: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the cost of building Feltham remand centre.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The final cost of building Her Majesty's young offenders institution and remand centre Feltham is likely to be in the order of £29 million subject to the determination of a number of outstanding claims.

British Summer Time

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will make a statement on the response he has received to his consultation document regarding British summer time; and whether he has yet reached any conclusions.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: A consultation note was sent to Government Departments last year with a request that they seek the views of interested bodies on the options set out in that note for future summer time arrangements.

The results of this survey are being studied and will form the basis of a consultation document to be published in the near future with the intention of stimulating wider public debate on the matter.

Sunday Trading

Sir Bernard Braine: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has received the consultative document entitled "The Rest Proposals", published by the Keep Sunday Special Organisation in connection with the reform of the Shops Act 1950.

Mr. Renton: Yes. We are considering these together with the other proposals we have received.

Nigerian Prisoners

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the number of Nigerian citizens currently serving sentences in Her Majesty's prisons on immigration offences.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: According to the records held centrally, which may be incomplete, on 30 November 1988 no Nigerian citizens were serving sentences in Prison Service establishments in England and Wales for offences under the Immigration Act 1971.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the number of Nigerian citizens currently held in prisons in England and Wales pending a Home Office decision on deportation or permission to stay in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Renton: According to information available centrally, a total of 36 Nigerian citizens were detained as at 31 December 1988 under Immigration Act powers in Prison Service establishments in England and Wales. These include those being dealt with under deportation powers, as illegal entrants and after being detained at ports of entry.

Prison Works (Vacancies)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the number of vacancies for prison works craftsmen or women at each of the London prisons on 1 January.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Vacancies for civilian craftsmen or women at the London prisons as at 1 January are set out in the following table.

Prison	Complement	Vacancies
Brixton	(24)	2
Holloway	(15)	2
Pentonville	(15)	2
Wandsworth	(19)	12
Wormwood Scrubs	(18)	11

Prisons (London)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much money has already been allocated in the current financial year for repair or modernisation at each of the London prisons.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The amount of money allocated for the current financial year to each of the London prisons is as follows:

	£
Brixton	1,288,000
Feltham	1,312,000
Holloway	267,000
Latchmere House	195,000
Pentonville	3,140,000
Wandsworth	1,125,000
Wormwood Scrubs	2,057,000
Total	9,384,000

Prison Hospitals

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when a senior member of the prison department last visited each of the London prison hospitals; and on what dates the visits took place; what reports of general conditions within those hospitals were made to his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The last visits by senior members of the Prison Department to the hospitals of prison service establishments in the London area were as follows:

Establishment	Date of visit	Officer visiting	Whether report made of hospital conditions
Ashford	9 January 1989	Regional Principal Medical Officer	No
Brixton	2 December 1988	Regional Principal Medical Officer	No
Feltham	28 August 1988	Regional Principal Medical Officer	No
Holloway	13 December 1988	Director Prison Medical Services	No
Pentonville	6 December 1988	Regional Principal Medical Officer	No
Wandsworth	15 July 1988	Regional Principal Medical Officer	No
Wormwood Scrubs	13 January 1989	Director Prison Medical Services	Yes

The Director of Prison Medical Services, following his visit to the temporary hospital facility at Wormwood Scrubs prison, has reported that he supports a decision by the managing principal medical officer to close the facility in the interests of health and hygiene. Consideration is being given to means of remedying the defects identified. Provision for a fully equipped hospital is included in the urgent redevelopment scheme for this establishment. Building is scheduled to start in two years' time.

Proxy Votes

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will seek to amend the law to enable one person to attest the proxy vote of more than one other person in elections.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We hope shortly to issue a consultation paper on absent voting, which will explore the various options for change, including that mentioned by my hon. Friend.

Shotgun Licences

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the arrangements for the granting of shotgun licences to minors.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Under section 28 of the Firearms Act 1968 it is open to a chief officer of police to refuse to grant a shotgun certificate if he has reason to believe that an applicant is prohibited by the Act from possessing a shotgun, or cannot be permitted to possess one without danger to the public safety or to the peace. In relation to shotguns there are no specified age restrictions, but age is one factor which the chief officer may take into account in reaching a decision.

New, stricter controls for the issue of shotgun certificates will come into force under the Firearms (Amendment) Act 1988 later this year. The Act changes the emphasis so that a chief officer has to be satisfied that the applicant can be permitted to possess a shotgun without danger to the public safety or to the peace. It also contains a new provision to the effect that a certificate shall not be issued if the chief officer is satisfied that the applicant does not have a good reason for possessing, purchasing or acquiring a shotgun.

Burglaries

Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many burglaries were committed in Derbyshire in 1983; and how many were committed in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. John Patten: The information is published annually in table S3.1 of "Criminal statistics, England and Wales, Supplementary Tables, Volume 3", a copy of which is in the Library.

Football Matches (Arrests)

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many arrests took place at Luton police station of Luton Town supporters following the Ipswich Town v Luton Town Littlewoods cup tie on 17 November 1987; and under the name of which club these arrests appear in the 1987-88 season arrest totals.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Fifty-two Luton supporters were arrested in connection with damage to a coach on which they were returning to Luton from Ipswich after this match. All were subsequently released without charge. None of these arrests was included in the totals of arrests at football grounds compiled by the Association of Chief Police Officers.

Pirate Decoders

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the proposed Independent Television Commission will have responsibility for policing pirate decoders.

Mr. Renton: No.

Football Matches (Policing Costs)

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether, pursuant to the answer of 19 December 1988 on football statistics, Official Report, columns 56-60, he will publish similar tables to the 1987-88 English Football League season showing the costs of policing matches and the costs per spectator at each ground, with clubs being listed in the order of those with the cheapest costs per spectator.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: This information is not collected from individual forces by the Association of Chief Police Officers.

DEFENCE

Challenger Tank

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what impact he expects his announcement on the Challenger tank will have on jobs in the Nottingham travel-to-work area.

Mr. Sainsbury: Subject to Vickers Defence Systems winning the production contract for the Challenger 2 Mk

II there will clearly be a beneficial effect on employment opportunities generally, especially when the downstream effects on subcontractors are taken into consideration. It is, of course, for the companies concerned to decide precisely where this work will be carried out. However, traditionally Royal Ordnance, Nottingham has been involved in the manufacture of tank main armament.

Mess Stewards

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many Royal Marine service men are permanently assigned as stewards to Royal Marine messes; and whether those service men who are not permanently assigned as mess stewards and occasionally act as waiters at officers' messes volunteer for these duties;

(2) whether those service men who are not permanently assigned as mess stewards and occasionally act as waiters at officer' messes receive additional pay for fulfilling such duties; and what are the general criteria concerning the use of servicemen who are not permanently assigned as mess stewards as waiters at mess nights.

Mr. Neubert: Royal Marine service men are not permanently assigned as stewards. Within the corps steward billets are filled by volunteers, who serve a normal draft, or by others for a period normally not exceeding six months. Acting as waiter at an officers' mess may form part of a steward's duties and this does not attract additional pay. As far as possible only volunteers perform waiters' duties at mess nights.

Chipmunk Aircraft

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Chipmunk aircraft the RAF operates; what is their average age; how much per hour they cost to fly; what is the availability of spares; what plans the RAF has to replace the Chipmunks; if he will list the aeroplanes that have been considered as suitable replacements; and whether the RAF has flown the ARV Super Two manufactured at Sandown. Isle of Wight.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Royal Air Force operates a total of 77 Chipmunk aircraft. Their average age is 35 years. Their basic operating cost (including spares and servicing to normal RAF standards) is about £120 per hour; the availability of spares is satisfactory, and on current plans, the Chipmunk is expected to remain in RAF service until about the turn of the century. The RAF has not flown the ARV Super Two, though it has been used at the Empire test pilots school at the Aeroplane and Armament Establishment, Boscombe Down in the training of student test pilots.

Royal Arsenal Sports and Recreation Association

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he is taking to ensure the continuation of the Royal Arsenal Sports and Recreational Association after the construction of the east London river crossing.

Mr. Sainsbury: The Ministry of Defence has no formal responsibility for the Royal Arsenal Sports and Recreational Association. Part of the Manor Way sports ground will be lost as a result of the construction of the east London river crossing, but sufficient land will remain to constitute a viable sports ground. We shall of course be discussing with the association whether it wishes to retain most of the site on licence from MOD for recreational purposes.

Pindar Project

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the estimated date when the Pindar project will be completed; what requirements it is expected to fulfil when it is fully operational; and what is its total estimated cost.

Mr. Sainsbury: Project Pindar is a facility to improve the effectiveness of higher levels of command and control. It is not the practice to disclose the planned completion dates or estimated costs of projects which are not yet in service.

Boxer System

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the estimated date on which the Boxer system is expected to be operational; what requirements it is expected to fulfil; and what is its total estimated cost.

Mr. Sainsbury: I refer the hon. Member to paragraph 317 and table 3 of volume 1 of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1988". The Boxer 2 communications bearer system will provide a nationwide secure and survivable communications system using new fibre-optic technology. It is not the practice to disclose the planned completion dates or estimated costs of projects which are not yet in service.

Fastnet Project

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the estimated date on which the Fastnet project is expected to be completed; what requirements it is expected to fulfil when it is fully operational; and what is its total estimated cost.

Mr. Sainsbury: Fastnet is a phased programme to replace and upgrade the Army's aging telephone exchange system with modern digital equipment. It is not the practice to disclose the planned completion dates or estimated costs of projects which are not yet in service.

Opcon System

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the estimated date on which the Opcon system is expected to be operational; what requirements it is expected to fulfil; and what is its total estimated cost.

Mr. Sainsbury: The Opcon system has been in successful operational use since 1986. It is an automated message handling system and database for use by Commander in Chief's maritime headquarters at Northwood. It is based on commercial ADP equipment, and the capital cost of the equipment was of the order of £40 million.

Mapper System

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the estimated date on which the Mapper system is expected to be operational; what requirements it is expected to fulfil when it is fully operational; and what is its total estimated cost.

Mr. Sainsbury: The Mapper system, also known as the United Kingdom land forces automated management information system (AMIS), provides information technology facilities to the HQ UKLF linking with nine District Headquarters and other key agencies, including the HQ BAOR and the MOD, to assist in the planning and execution of operations during the transition to war and on peacetime exercises. The system also provides an electronic mail, word processing and management information facility.

The system was first installed in mid-1985 and is continually being enhanced and expanded to meet the evolving HQ UKLF requirement for better command and control in the UKLF theatre, in support of home defence and NATO reinforcement.

Total procurement costs to date for the installation and subsequent enhancements and expansions of the system have been in the order of £9 million.

Battlefield Helicopters

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what troop carrying capacity for battlefield helicopters has been considered by the airmobility working group;

(2) when the report of the airmobility working group will be completed.

Mr. Sainsbury: We have no record of an airmobility working group within the Ministry of Defence.

Guided Weapons (Expenditure)

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of the £624 million variation between expenditure and grant of item J6 (Guided Weapons) noted on page 14, Appropriation Accounts 1987-88, HC 17-1 was caused by (a) over-provision arising from the provisional allocation of carry forward from 1986-87 and (b) slower progress.

Mr. Sainsbury: Some 96 per cent. of the £624 million variation on Item J6 (Guided Weapons), noted on page 14 of the Appropriation Account 1987-88, related to the provisional allocation of the carry forward from 1986-87 and the remaining 4 per cent. was caused by slower progress.

Nuclear Safety

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make it his policy to facilitate the release of information on nuclear safety to the general public living in the Rosyth dockyard area.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Rosyth public safety scheme is available in public libraries in the Rosyth area. All future revisions will also be made available to the public. In addition, the Rosyth local liaison committee provides a forum for exchanges of information between the Royal Navy and the community on nuclear safety matters.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has made to the United States Navy authorities following reported incidents involving the discharge of radioactive coolant from United States Navy submarines into Scottish waters.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: None. Her Majesty's Government are satisfied that United States practice in United Kingdom waters, which has been governed by a written arrangement since 1958, has always remained within established national and international standards on release of radioactivity.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he is taking to avoid future accidental or deliberate discharges of radioactive coolant into Scottish waters from (a) Royal Navy and (b) United States Navy submarines.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Our operating, maintenance and safety standards for submarine nuclear reactors are exacting, and we are satisfied that the practice of the United States Navy is equally rigorous. Royal Navy submarines are never authorised to discharge significant levels of radioactivity into the sea. We are assured that the same is true of United States nuclear-powered warships in United Kingdom waters.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when his Department's contingency plans for an accident involving a nuclear-powered or nuclear-armed submarine in the Clyde or Rosyth areas were last revised; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: All Ministry of Defence contingency plans for accidents involving nuclear reactors or nuclear weapons are kept constantly under review. Exercises are held regularly to test our plans.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will take immediate action to withdraw the existing ROSPUBSAFE scheme and replace it with a safety scheme based on full consultation with local community representatives.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: A review of the Rosyth public safety scheme, in full consultation with local authorities and emergency services, has been in progress for some time. The existing scheme will not be withdrawn until the revision is issued.

Army Stables

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what measures are taken to enforce the ruling relating to the stabling in Army stables of privately-owned horses set out in his answer to the hon. Member for Northampton, North on 13 January, Official Report, column 783.

Mr. Neubert: The costs of stabling privately owned horses in Army stables are recovered from the owners each month on the presentation of a bill by the unit concerned. Failure to settle the bill promptly would result in appropriate action being taken against the individual concerned; this could include the removal of the horse from official premises.

EMPLOYMENT

Community Programme

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many of the individuals in Nottingham who were on community programme schemes when employment training was introduced are now (a) still on community programme schemes, (b) on an employment training scheme, (c) in work, (d) unemployed and (e) in any other relevant category, both as a number and as a percentage.

Mr. Nicholls: At the end of August 1988, there were about 1,800 people on the community programme in Nottingham. On 12 January 1989, 800 people remained on the programme. Information on the destinations of the 1,000 people leaving the community programme is not available, although some of the participants would have transferred to employment training.

Employment Training

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give the lastest available figures of how many of the employment training programme's filled places are (a) extended placements from the community programme, (b) new public authority placements, (c) new placements in the voluntary sector and (d) new placements in the private sector: (i) nationally and (ii) in north Staffordshire.

Mr. Nicholls: The information is not available.

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the number of filled places on the employment training programme (a) nationally and (b) in north Staffordshire.

Mr. Nicholls: At 6 January 1989 there were 111,000 trainees on employment training in Great Britain. Figures are not separately available for north Staffordshire, but there were approximately 2,100 filled places in Staffordshire as a whole on the same date.

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many applications for the ET child care allowance have been received by his Department; how many have been granted and refused; how much has been paid out in child care allowances; and how many ET trainees are currently receiving child care allowances.

Mr. Nicholls: The information requested is not available. Information on the number of employment trainees for whom child care payments are made will be regularly collected from March, with the first results available at the end of April 1989.

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what new arrangements he has made for claiming back the 100 per cent. advance funding given to ET training managers; how many training managers have applied for deferment because paying back the advances would cause them severe financial hardship; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: Repayments of advances for the first three months of ET operations commenced from 1 January 1989. However, where a training manager can demonstrate that this would cause substantial cash flow difficulties, they may now defer the start of the repayments for two months, although the advances still have to be repaid over the period of their contract. Information on the number of training managers taking up this option is not collected separately and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people transferred from the community programme to employment training.

Mr. Nicholls: By the end of November 1988, the latest date for which information is available, a total of about 11,000 people had transferred from the community programme to employment training.

Jobstart Allowance

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many applications for the jobstart allowance have been received; how many have been granted and refused; how many are currently receiving the allowance; and if he will give a breakdown of the wages of the jobs covered by successful applications.

Mr. Lee: In the period from July 1986 to November 1988, 36,791 people applied for jobstart allowance, 27,844 were accepted and 8,947 were rejected because they were not eligible. There are currently 3,966 people receiving the allowance.

The information requested about the wages of the jobs covered by successful applications is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Training Agents (Investigation)

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he will list the training agents currently under investigation by his Department with details of the reason for such investigation.

Mr. Nicholls: No training agents in employment training are under investigation by Training Agency officials. All training agents and training managers are subject to financial and operational monitoring.

Mining Regulations

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many miners should be present in a development roadway with only one means of entry and egress under current mining regulations.

Mr. Nicholls: Section 24 of the Mines and Quarries Act 1954 prohibits the employment of more than nine persons in a place from which there are not two separate means of egress unless a notice of exemption has been given by the inspector for the district.

Qualifications

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) if he will give, based on the preliminary findings of the 1988 labour force survey (a) the total number of people of working age and (b) the percentage with (i) A level or equivalent or higher, (ii) O level or equivalent, (iii) below O level and (iv) no vocational or educational qualification for each standard English region, Wales and Scotland;

(2) if he will give, based on the preliminary findings of the 1988 labour force survey, the total number of graduates in employment as a percentage of all in employment in each of the standard English regions, Wales and Scotland;

(3) if he will give based on the preliminary findings of the 1988 labour force survey, the total numbers of graduates in employment in each of the standard English regions, Wales and Scotland.

Mr. Lee: Results from the 1988 labour force survey are not yet available.

High Moor Colliery (Accident)

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give details of the rescue operation at High Moor colliery on 13 January leading to the freeing of 10 trapped miners.

Mr. Nicholls: The widely reported operation involved overcoming the hazard presented by a fall of roof extending over a length of approximately 30 metres, resulting in the need to mount the recovery in potentially hazardous conditions.

The rescue operation at High Moor, which led to the freeing of the 10 trapped men, demonstrated the traditional expertise and bravery of miners in dealing with such a hazardous situation. The co-operative efforts of all concerned, led by the colliery manager and colliery TU officials, to save life even at great personal risk, was the main factor in the success of the operation.

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement of the medical and other types of assistance which were given to the 10 miners who were rescued following an accident at High Moor colliery on 13 January.

Mr. Nicholls: During the operation the full range of medical services provided by the south Yorkshire area of British Coal were readily available at the mine, and a mine nursing sister was present underground to give any necessary assistance.

After the trapped men were freed and brought to the surface, they were examined at the colliery medical centre before being allowed home. No major injuries were suffered by any of the men.

Mine rescue teams with specialised rescue equipment made a rapid response to the emergency. A district inspector from the Health and Safety Executive's mine and quarries inspectorate was underground during the rescue. A principal district inspector was also at the mine to assist in the organisation of the rescue, together with senior officials of both British Coal and the trade unions.

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give details of the action he has taken to ensure the safety of operations at High Moor colliery following the accident on 13 January in which 10 miners were trapped following a collapse of 30 m of the roof in its main gate heading.

Mr. Nicholls: The Health and Safety Executive's mines and quarries inspectorate began its investigation on 16 January 1989. Due to the need to ensure safe conditions for this investigation it will be some time before the cause of the roof collapse can be established. Any action necessary as a result of the investigation will be taken by the Health and Safety Executive.

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list accidents and other reportable incidents at High Moor colliery since 1985.

Mr. Nicholls: The information tabled is for the last four calendar years.

	Fatal	Major injuries	Dangerous occurrences	+3-day accidents
1985	—	2	1	—
[1]1986	—	5	—	[1]85
1987	—	8	2	53
1988	1	4	—	29

[1] The introduction of the Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations on 1 April 1986 required the recording of "plus three-day" accidents. The 1986 figure for these accidents represents a nine-month period only.

Tourism

Mr. Allen McKay: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what period will be allowed for consultation by interested bodies following publication of the report on the review of tourism before any Government action is taken.

Mr. Lee: A wide range of individuals and organisations have been consulted during the preparation of the review team's report.

Mr. Allen McKay: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when he expects to publish the report on the review of tourism.

Mr. Lee: My right hon. Friend has no plans to publish the report.

Mr. Allen McKay: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will take steps to ensure the continuing existence and uprating of section 4 grant aid assistance for the promotion of tourism.

Mr. Lee: A review of tourism policy by my Department was announced by my right hon. Friend in July. The section 4 scheme of assistance is being considered as part of this review.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what calculation he has made of the impact on tourism of the possible withdrawal of university halls of residence from commercial letting as a result of any reduction in University Grants Committee funding of the commercial rates paid by halls to local authorities.

Mr. Jackson: I have been asked to reply.

Rates paid in respect of university halls of residence are not currently reimbursed by the University Grants Committee. A decision by the Universities Funding Council not to reimburse the cost of business rates payable, after the introduction of the community charge, in respect of halls of residence used for commercial letting would effectively maintain the present position and therefore should not affect the commercial letting of university halls of residence or have an adverse impact on tourism or revenue received by local authorities.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many oral parliamentary questions he has answered by written reply because the question was not reached at Question Time, for the most recent year for which figures are available.

Mr. Nicholls: In 1988, a total of 829 oral questions were tabled to the Secretary of State for Employment, of which 719 received a written reply. These figures do not include oral questions which were subsequently withdrawn, unstarred or transferred to other Departments.

Benefit Offices

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many part-time unemployment benefit offices there are; how long they are open; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: There are at present 318 small, part-time benefit offices which are open for between one hour and several mornings each week. In the light of falling unemployment and the smaller number of people now requiring the services of the employment service, we have been considering whether there is still a need to retain all of these. We are, as a result, proposing the closure of 43 part-time offices in areas where demand for their services is low and there is alternative provision. None of the offices concerned is open for more than eight hours a week.

The employment service is keen to offer an effective service to the public, and particularly to people who are unemployed. This can best be achieved in offices which are large enough to offer a comprehensive range of facilities and by postal signing. It is usual when we consider closure of small part-time offices to write to hon. Members in whose constituencies the offices are, to explain the proposals in detail, and I am doing so in this case.

SCOTLAND

Set-aside Scheme

66. Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if there is any provision in the set-aside scheme to assist farmworkers whose employment is reduced or lost as a result of the scheme.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I refer the hon. Member to the reply which I gave him on 15 December, at column 672.

Glasgow District Court

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the average time between the lodging of a plea of not guilty and the resultant trial diet in the Glasgow district court for the latest available period for which this figure is available; and if he will give the same information for the same period for cases going for trial before a stipendiary magistrate.

Mr. Rifkind: The average time for cases dealt with in November 1988 was 14 weeks for Glasgow district court, excluding the stipendiary magistrate's court, and 25 weeks for cases heard by a stipendiary magistrate.

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the number of cases in which trial diets are set in Glasgow district court for the latest period for which figures are available and the percentage of those cases where a plea of guilty was presented when the trial was called.

Mr. Rifkind: Figures are not available in the precise form requested, but in 1987, 63 per cent. of the 13,368 persons called to court in Glasgow district court pled guilty at some stage in the proceedings.

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the number of cases called in Glasgow district court for the latest year in which figures are available and the same figures three and five years ago.

Mr. Rifkind: The information requested is given in the table:

Persons called to court: Glasgow District Court

Year	Number
1984	16,704
1986	14,892
1987	13,368

Council House Sales

Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list for each local government area the number of council houses sold to tenants under the Housing Acts; and if he will express this as a proportion of the total housing stock in each such area.

Lord James Douglas-hamilton: The available information is set out in the table.

Local authority houses sold to sitting tenants from 1 April 1979 to 30 September 1988

Area	Houses sold to sitting tenants from 1 April 1979 to 30 September 1988	Percentage of stock sold to sitting tenants[1]
Scotland	95,023	10·63
Borders
Berwickshire	521	18·18
Ettrick and Lauderdale	941	18·89
Roxburgh[2]	913	14·57
Tweeddale[2]	270	16·58
Central
Clackmannan	1,143	11·84
Falkirk	4,250	12·68
Stirling	1,680	12·79
Dumfries and Galloway
Annandale and Eskdale[2]	989	19·95
Nithsdale	1,610	18·74
Stewartry	632	24·83
Wigtown	879	18·67
Fife
Dunfermline	4,196	18·09
Kirkcaldy	4,620	17·37
North East Fife[2]	1,988	24·85
Grampian
Aberdeen	3,721	9·72
Banff and Buchan[2]	2,158	17·06
Gordon	1,291	21·18
Kincardine and Deeside	666	18·37
Moray	2,147	20·24
Highland
Badenoch and Strathspey	288	26·89
Caithness[2]	690	16·04
Inverness	1,107	15·78
Lochaber	515	15·30
Nairn	212	19·12
Ross and Cromarty	671	10·73
Skye and Lochalsh	140	20·00
Sutherland	226	13·06
Lothian
East Lothian	2,621	16·13
Edinburgh[2]	7,228	12·71
Midlothian	2,308	17·54
West Lothian	2,130	9·45
Strathclyde
Argyll and Bute	950	11·45
Bearsden and Milngavie	369	20·20
Clydebank	944	7·98
Clydesdale	608	6·29

Area	Houses sold to sitting tenants from 1 April 1979 to 30 September 1988	Percentage of stock sold to sitting tenants[1]
Cumbernauld and Kilsyth	460	10·49
Cumnock and Doon Valley[2]	639	6·17
Cunninghame	2,496	10·59
Dumbarton[2]	854	6·51
East Kilbride	324	19·95
Eastwood	426	21·00
Glasgow	8,055	4·60
Hamilton	1,991	8·71
Inverclyde	1,543	7·69
Kilmarnock and Loudoun	1,620	8·91
Kyle and Carrick	2,977	16·23
Monklands[2]	1,396	4·89
Motherwell[2]	1,941	4·86
Renfrew	4,076	10·32
Strathkelvin	1,623	14·81
Tayside
Angus	2,332	16·00
Dundee	2,668	6·65
Perth and Kinross	2,923	17·93
Orkney Islands[2]	243	16·76
Shetland Islands	331	13·66
Western Isles	483	20·21

[1]Stock as at 30 September 1979.
[2]Complete figures are not available for this period, due to outstanding returns.

Rating Reform

Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if, in respect of the local authority areas of Tayside region, Angus district, Dundee district and Perth and Kinross district, he will list the details of the figures he used to calculate (a) the estimate of the total revenue expenditure, (b) the amount of revenue support grant, (c) the amount of non-domestic rates, (d) the amount attributable to the poll tax, (e) the amount of revenue balances he expects each to use and (f) the effective number of registerd persons for each.

Mr. Lang: The Secretary of State has not calculated the figures mentioned under (a), (d) and (e). These are matters for the local authorities concerned. Details of calculations of (b), (c) and (f) are given in the "Report on the Revenue Support Grant (Scotland) Order 1988", a copy of which has been placed in the House of Commons Library.

Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will list the full details of how the calculations were arrived at and the assumptions which were made in calculating (a) the poll tax for Tayside region, (b) the water poll tax for Tayside region, (c) the district poll tax for Angus district, (d) the district poll tax for Dundee district and (e) the district poll tax for Perth and Kinross district;

(2) if he will list the full details of how he calculated the total amount of poll tax payable in each district in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: For Scotland as a whole the 9·8 per cent increase means that if local authorities increase their expenditure by no more than 6 per cent., plus allowances for the cost of community charge and school board administration, the amount raised in community charges need be no more than that raised in domestic rates this year. The first stage of the calculation of a community charge for each area was therefore to calculate the personal community charge for each local authority, which would raise the same amount as domestic rates did this year. It was assumed that exemptions and losses in collection for community charges would be at a level corresponding to present reliefs and losses for domestic rates.

The resulting community charge figure for each area was then adjusted to take account of the extent to which the individual authorities' grant increase was larger or smaller than the average for the class of authority.

The community water charge was calculated as the community charge equivalent to this year's domestic and public water rates, increased for inflation.

The approach was applied to all local authority areas in Scotland.

Mylnefield Research Establishment

Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the representations he has received regarding the future of the Mylnefield research establishment; and if he will make a statement on its future.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: My right hon. and learned Friend has received 11 letters from growers and others, including one from my hon. Friend the Member for Tayside, North (Mr. Walker) expressing concern about proposed reductions in Government funding of near market horticultural R and D, on the possible outcome of a review currently in hand on the organisation of horticultural R and D throughout Great Britain, and the implications for the future of the Scottish crop research institute at Mylnefield. No final decisions have been made on the future levels of public expenditure on horticultural R and D, or on the organisation of this work, but the continued existence of the Scottish crop research institute is not in question. Horticultural R and D accounts for around £820,000 out of the institute's current budget of £5,650,000.

Football Matches (Arrests)

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will detail for the 1987-88 season the total number of arrests within Scottish league grounds during league and cup matches as a percentage of total attendances.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The overall figure is 0·0163 per cent. Details for individual grounds are not held centrally.

Employment Training

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the number of employment training places filled in September, October, November and December of 1988 for each regional and island council area.

Mr. Lang: This information is not available in the form requested except at disproportionate cost.

However, as a result of an earlier exercise filled employment training places were calculated by region as at 25 November 1988. The results are shown in the table.

Filled places on 25 November 1988

Region	Number
Borders	157
Central	1,008
Dumfries and Galloway	442
Fife	1,826
Grampian	802
Highlands and Islands	644
Lothian	3,079
Strathclyde	10,432
Tayside	1,183
Total	19,573

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the total number of places in employment training (a) authorised and (b) filled for each of (i) private sector, (ii) local government, (iii) public sector and local government and (iv) voluntary sector.

Mr. Lang: This information cannot be provided other than at disproportionate cost.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many oral parliamentary questions he has answered by written reply because the question was not reached at Question Time for the most recent year for which figures are available.

Mr. Rifkind: In the 1987-88 parliamentary Session, approximately 362. It is not possible to extract from this figure the number of questions withdrawn on the day on which they were due for answer.

Motorways (Crash Barriers)

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proportion of motorway in (a) Scotland, (b) the United Kingdom and (c) England has central reservation crash barriers; and if he has any plans to increase the proportion of motorway in Scotland which has such barriers.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: 28 per cent. of trunk road motorway in Scotland currently has central reserve safety fencing. I understand that the English motorway network is fully equipped with central reserve fencing, except where the carriageways are widely separated, and that the position is the same in Wales and Northern Ireland. Our policy is to achieve this position in Scotland as quickly as resources and opportunities permit.

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on how many miles of existing motorway in Scotland crash barriers will be provided by the end of (a) 1989, (b) 1990 and (c) 1991

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 16 January 1989]: It is Scottish Office policy to instal central reserve safety fencing on all new sections of motorway. So far as existing motorway is concerned, central fencing will be provided as quickly as resources and opportunities permit until all sections have been completed. The work is ongoing and I would not wish to speculate over annual rates of progress.

Hospital Buildings (Sale)

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the current arrangements in force regarding the application of funds raised by the sale by health boards of hospital buildings surplus to their requirements.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I refer the hon. Member to the answer which I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Eastwood (Mr. Stewart) on 11 November, at column 345.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Business Premises (Greater London)

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he has any information on the change in numbers of (a) greengrocers', (b) butchers', (c) bakers', (d) estate agents' and (e) building societies' trading premises in the Greater London area over the last 10 years.

Mr. Forth: The following is the information:

Heading	End 1979	End 1987
Greengrocers	1,092	1,004
Butchers	1,148	1,073
Bakers	570	712
Property Owning Etc.[1]	1,837	2,575
Other Financial Institutions[2]	796	1,256

[1] Includes estate agents.
[2] Includes building societies.

Separate figures are not available for estate agents or for building societies. The figures for bakers include those classified to manufacturing and retail bread and flour confectionery.

GATT

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what consultation he had with consumer organisations before the recent GATT mid-term review in Montreal; and if there are to be any consultations with such groups as a result of the breakdown of the review.

Mr. Alan Clark: My officials regularly consult consumer organisations about the GATT round of trade negotiations. Such a meeting was held shortly before the Montreal mid-term ministerial meeting and another will take place next week.

Fireworks (Injuries)

Dame Janet Fookes: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he is yet able to announce the statistics for fireworks injuries for 1988.

Mr. Forth: Information from most but not all hospitals has now been received, and the usual reminders are being sent. Busy hospitals are of course doing us a favour in providing the figures. We hope to announce the firework injury statistics, as usual, some time in March.

Japanese-owned Businesses

Mr. Amos: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many Japanese-owned businesses have located in (a) the south east, (b) the north east, (c) the north west, (d) the south west, (e) Scotland and (f) south Wales, for the most recent year period for which figures are available.

Mr. Forth: Comprehensive statistics on foreign-owned businesses are not available, but the numbers of Japanese-owned manufacturing companies known to have located between January 1979 and December 1988, in the stated regions, are as follows:

	Number
(a) South East	14
(b) North East	10
(c) North West	4
(d) South West	2
(e) Scotland	11
(f) South Wales	9

Mr. Amos: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many Japanese-owned businesses have located in the United Kingdom in the most recent 10-year period for which figures are available.

Mr. Forth: Comprehensive statistics on foreign-owned businesses are not available, but the DTI is aware of 79 Japanese manufacturing companies that have set up in the United Kingdom between January 1979 and December 1988.

Water

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what other information, other than that contained in the Water Bill and the forthcoming amendments, notice of which was given on 11 January, he will be sending to, or he expects to be requested by, the Commission of the European Economic Community in respect of prospective legislation relating to take over bids and golden shares in the water industry.

Mr. Forth: None. Responsibility for the Water Bill lies with the Secretary of State for the Environment.

European Single Market

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on progress towards completing the European single market in 1992.

Mr. Alan Clark: We are continuing to make rapid progress towards the goal of completing the single market by the 1992 target date. This was emphasised in the report produced by the European Commission in November, assessing the position at the half-way point in the single market programme.

Over 50 separate measures aimed at removing barriers to trade in Europe were agreed during the Greek Presidency which ended in December. This brings the total number of single market measures agreed to date to some 275, including 128 from the Commission's White Paper programme.

The Government are strongly committed to the completion of the single market: it will provide major opportunities for business and benefits for consumers.

TRANSPORT

Heavy Goods Vehicles (Tests)

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place in the Library a detailed analysis for each of the past five years of all roadside tests carried out by his Department's engineers on heavy goods vehicles specifying where and when these tests occurred; and what were the results.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Information on the results of roadside spot checks is contained in the vehicle inspectorate's annual report and accounts 1987-88. Specific information on the results of roadside checks in each traffic area is contained in the annual reports of the licensing authorities for the five years up to 1987-88. Copies of these reports are in the House Library. Information on the results of individual checks could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Borough Junction, London

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action he is taking with British Rail in respect of the Borough junction which serves the London termini of Cannon street, Charing Cross and London bridge, to ensure that there will be no repeat at this junction of the recent incident at Clapham junction.

Mr. Portillo: Statutory responsibility for the safe operation of its services rests with British Rail. I know, however, that in the light of the findings of its internal inquiry into the Clapham accident, it initiated urgent investigations to confirm that signalling systems elsewhere on its lines are in order. I understand that London bridge signal box, which controls operations at Borough junction, has been checked as part of this exercise.

Public Utilities Street Works Act 1950

Mr. Batiste: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to update and amend the Public Utilities Street Works Act 1950 in line with the recommendations of the Horne committee.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: We have accepted most of the recommendations in the Horne report. Work is progessing well, in collaboration with the highway authorities and utilities, to produce specifications for reinstatements, a code of practice for diversionary works, arrangements for training and certification of workmen and a computerised street works register. Proposals for legislation are being drawn up with the benefit of advice from the street works advisory committee. A Bill will be introduced as soon as a suitable opportunity can be found.

Oil Pollution

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps are being taken to identify the vessel responsible for the oil pollution in the English channel.

Mr. Portillo: Samples of beached oil and contaminated bird feathers have been obtained from various locations along the south coast. These are being analysed by the Laboratory of the Government chemist to try to determine in the first instance whether the pollution stemmed from a single incident or a series of incidents, and the precise nature of the oil involved. Whether or not further action will be possible will depend on the results obtained.

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what were the patrol patterns of the anti-oil pollution aircraft over the Christmas and new year holiday periods.

Mr. Portillo: Anti-oil-pollution aerial surveillance patrols took place over the North sea on 24 and 31 December, and over the English Channel on 27 December, 30 December and 5 January.

Railway Stations

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will estimate how many people in mainland Britain live more than 10 miles from the nearest railway station.

Mr. Portillo: This information is not available.

A38 (Saltash)

Mr. Robert Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport why the A38 Saltash road is to be closed to traffic; what is the period when it will be closed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Contrary to recent erroneous press reports, the A38 Saltash tunnel will be closed from 0001 hours to 12 noon on Sunday 22 January 1989 only, for the first of its planned regular maintenance services. This comprises washing the tunnel walls and lighting, changing lighting tubes and bulbs and minor routine maintenance. We expect to close the tunnel overnight at three-monthly intervals to undertake this regular maintenance.

British Transport Police

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his reply of 10 January, Official Report, column 624, if he will state the form in which information of incidents reported to British Transport police is kept.

Mr. Portillo: Information is held by the British Transport police on its central computer on a police divisional basis. Information by individual railway stations is not readily available. The hon. Member should approach the BTP for further information.

Channel Tunnel Terminal

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will ask British Rail to make available to right hon. and hon. Members their assessment of Stratford as a possible location for the second London terminal of the Channel tunnel.

Mr. Portillo: I will pass on the hon. Member's request.

Road Accidents

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he will list the road traffic accidents involving death or serious injury which have taken place on the A1 in Northumberland in the past three years.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The road traffic accident figures for the period 1 January 1986 to 31 December 1988 are as follows:

Year	Fatal	Serious	Total
1986	5	24	29
1987	5	29	34
1988	5	24	29
	—	—	—
	15	77	92

Tyre Treads

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research has been done on the effect of low tyre tread depth on tyres to road grip.

Mr. Peter Bottomley [holding answer 17 January 1989]: The following reports by the Transport and Road Research Laboratory have been placed in the Library:

Results on wet cornering done in 1985;

Supplementary report 672 published in 1981 on straight line grip;

Leaflet 593 published in 1979—Vehicle Defects and their Contribution to Accidents.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of road accidents are caused by insufficient tyre tread.

Mr. Peter Bottomley [holding answer 17 January 1989]: Well-maintained and properly inflated tyres are important for road safety. Our standards for tyre-tread depth were drawn up with particular regard to necessary adhesion and safety. Accident surveys have shown that although vehicle defects were a main cause in under 10 per cent. of accidents, faulty tyres featured in nearly a third of these. The main problems were blow-outs and wrong pressures. Inadequate tyre depth was a factor in less than 0·8 per cent. of the cases.

Air Services (North America-Manchester)

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the progress of negotiations for direct services between North America and Manchester International airport.

Mr. Peter Bottomley [holding answer 16 January 1989]: At the most recent negotiations on greater access for US carriers to serve Manchester airport, held in London between 4 and 6 January 1989, the two sides could not reach a mutually acceptable conclusion.

The Government recognise the importance of these additional services into Manchester airport and are therefore seeking further discussions.

Transport Infrastructure

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what moneys have been received from the European Community specifically for transport infrastructure investment since 1980; and what projects such moneys have been used to finance.

Mr. Portillo [holding answer 17 January 1989]: About £930 million is expected to have been received by the Department from the European Community between 1980-81 and 1988-89 to finance transport infrastructure investment, as follows:

Recent major projects included in totals	£ million
National roads
Newcastle Western bypass, A38 Manadon-Tamar Bridge, A30 Marsh Mills-Manadon	430

Recent major projects included in totals	£ million
Rail
East coast main line electrification, Windsor rail link in Manchester	220
Local roads
Manchester/Salford inner relief route, Bradford City ring road, A456 Bewdley bypass, A30 Penzance primary distributor road	180
Ports	50
Bus stations, airports etc.	50

HEALTH

South East Thames RHA

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much rental is being paid annually for the office accommodation in Randolph house, Wellesley road, Croydon; if he will break the figure down into rental per square foot; to whom the rent is being paid; and when was the last time that the area rented was (a) used by any South East Thames regional health authority staff and (b) fully used by South East Thames regional health authority staff.

Mr. Freeman: South East Thames regional health authority pays a gross rent of £525,000 annually for office accommodation in Randolph house. The net rent, after taking into account accommodation which has been sub-let, is £304,400. This equates to just under £7 per square foot. Rent is paid to Sun Life Properties Ltd. as required by the terms of the lease, which expires on 16 August 1990, and the terms of the lease do not allow sub-letting at a lower rent. The accommodation was fully utilised by regional health authority staff until April 1984 and vacated by them in July 1984.

Leptospirosis

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list by year for the last five years by district health authority the number of cases of leptospirosis, Weil's disease, that have been reported; how many were fatal; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: Cases of infectious diseases are notified by the doctor in attendance to the proper officer for each local authority area. Notifications of leptospirosis are therefore not generally available at the district health authority level. However, the table shows the number of notifications of leptospirosis (including Weil's disease) for regional health authorities for the latest five years available. Evidence from the identifications of the disease by the public health laboratory service indicates that there is undernotification and that perhaps only about one in three cases is formally notified. Also given are the number of deaths registered with underlying cause of death assigned as leptospirosis for RHA of usual residence. From the registration of the death alone, it is not possible to determine whether the case had been formally notified.

Numbers of (a) notifications of and (b) deaths registered with underlying cause as: Leptospirosis (including Weil's disease)
ICD (9)[1] 100 Regional Health Authority 1983-1987

	1983	1984	1985	1986	[2]1987
(a) Notifications
RHA Area of notification
Northern	—	—	3	1	2
Yorkshire	1	—	2	1	2
Trent	4	3	2	1	3
East Anglian	1	2	2	—	1
North West Thames	2	—	3	2	2
North East Thames	—	—	1	2	1
South East Thames	2	—	—	—	—
South West Thames	2	1	—	1	1
Wessex	1	2	1	2	5
Oxford	2	1	1	1	—
South Western	2	5	5	8	2
West Midlands	1	2	2	1	2
Mersey	—	—	1	—	2
North Western	2	2	3	1	2
(b) Deaths
RHA of usual residence
Northern	—	—	—	—	—
Yorkshire	—	—	—	—	—
Trent	—	—	—	1	—
East Anglian	—	—	—	—	—
North West Thames	—	—	—	—	—
North East Thames	1	—	—	—	1
South East Thames	—	—	—	—	—
South West Thames	—	—	—	—	—
Wessex	—	—	—	—	—
Oxford	—	—	—	—	—
South Western	—	—	1	—	—
West Midlands	—	—	1	—	—
Mersey	—	—	—	—	—
North Western	—	—	—	—	—

[1] International Classification of Diseases 9th Revision.
[2] Provisional.
Note: Figures for deaths from 1986 exclude those at age under 28 days.

Organ Transplants

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish comparable figures on (a) the United Kingdom's heart transplant programme and (b) that in other countries in the European Community.

Mr. Freeman: For details of the United Kingdom heart transplant programme I refer my hon. Friend to the statement made by my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Health on 14 December 1988 at column 602. I regret that we do not collect statistics on heart transplantation in other countries in the European Community.

Diet

Mr. Adley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the nation's health in relation to dietary matters.

Mr. Freeman: The nation's nutritional health can best be assured if people eat a balanced diet, not too much or too little of any food.

There is evidence that some people do not eat a balanced diet. For instance the Government accept that the current rates of cardiovascular disease might be lessened if people's intakes of fat and particularly saturated fatty acids, were to be reduced.

Further information about the national diet is emerging from the results of the dietary and nutritional survey of British adults, undertaken by OPCS in association with the Department of Health and the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, which are now being analysed.

Hospital Cleaning

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what type of information is centrally gathered by his Department regarding the impact in National Health Service hospitals in (a) England, (b) Scotland and (c) Wales of the privatisation of cleaning services; and whether such information refers to (i) the present standards of cleaning works, (ii) savings for health boards in England, Scotland and Wales and for the United Kingdom as a whole and (iii) working conditions of the cleaning staff of such private contractors.

Mr. Mellor: Since the launch of the competitive tendering initiative in 1983, health authorities in England have been required to put their cleaning services out to tender. Information collected centrally, following the initiative, concerned the progress made by authorities in implementing the policy, the award of contracts and the savings generated. Virtually all domestic services have now been tendered with about 80 per cent. of the tenders being won in-house. Savings on these services total over £80 million.

No information is held centrally on standards, which is a matter for health authorities, or on conditions of service for staff of private contractors, which is a matter for the companies concerned and their employees.

Information about Scotland and Wales is a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Post-operative Treatment

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what National Health Service post-operative treatment is available, similar to that found in other European countries; in which areas post-operative treatment can be obtained under the National Health Service; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: Any post-operative treatment which the responsible doctors deem to be clinically necessary is normally provided on the National Health Service. If the hon. Member knows of difficulties which have been experienced with any particular form of such treatment perhaps she would let me know.

Nurses' Pay

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the median level of earnings for nurses expressed as a proportion of average earnings in each year from 1983-84 to the most recent available date.

Mr. Mellor: We cannot derive the information requested from the data on earnings which are held centrally.

Cancer Screening

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on his further plans for the screening of women for cervical cancer.

Mr. Freeman: Comprehensive guidance to health authorities and family practitioner committees on cervical cancer screening services was issued in January 1988. All district health authorities in England have now implemented computerised call and recall systems. All women aged 20 to 64 are to be invited for screening by March 1993—unless their general practitioner has indicated that they should be excluded—and recalled at least every five years. We shall continue to monitor progress.

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received concerning the psychological effects on patients of the current system of cervical cancer screening.

Mr. Freeman: None. Nevertheless we recognise the importance of minimising the anxieties women might have about participation in the cervical cancer screening programme. We have asked health authorities to aim their local health education programmes at encouraging women to respond positively to their screening invitations and to ensure that women who require treatment following their test are offered counselling and support.

Midwives (Cornwall and Isles of Scilly)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received regarding the regrading of midwives in the Cornwall and Isles of Scilly health authority.

Mr. Mellor: The Department has received some 50 written representations, including a petition from the Cornwall branch of the Royal College of Midwives.

Salaries

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discretion is allowed to regional health authorities in determining clinical and nursing salary scales.

Mr. Mellor: The salaries of nurses employed in the National Health Service are determined by reference to national salary scales, with appropriate supplements for staff working in London. These are set in the light of the recommendations of the independent nurses pay review body and health authorities currently have no discretion to vary these salary scales.

Protection Orders (Northumberland)

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children were regarded as under protection orders on a month to month basis in Northumberland in 1988.

Mr. Mellor: Information about the number of children removed to a place of safety is collected centrally on an annual basis only. The number in 1988 in Northumberland was 25 and is given in the provisional feedback "Children removed to a place of safety, year ending 31 March 1988, England"; copies are available in the Library of the House.

School Nurses (Statistics)

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many nurses are engaged in educational medicine and the care of children in hospitals; and if he will give similar figures for the last five years.

Mr. Mellor: The total number of nursing staff employed in the school health service in England at 30 September each year from 1983 to 1987 was:

Year	Wholetime equivalents
1983	2,890
1984	2,910
1985	2,920
1986	2,810
1987	2,790

Note: These figures exclude nursing staff employed in special schools.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many nurses in educational medicine and the care of children in schools were in each grade before and after the recent grading review.

Mr. Mellor: We do not hold this information centrally.

Certificate of School Nursing

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what pay enhancements were offered to nurses acquiring the certificate of school nursing in each of the last five years, and before and after the recent grading review.

Mr. Mellor: The new clinical grading structure is designed to recognise and reward the possession of post basic nursing qualifications, including the certificate of school nursing. The Department's guidance to health authorities is that the minimum grade appropriate for posts which require first level registration and the school nursing certificate is scale E.

Possession of the certificate was not a factor in grading prior to the introduction of the new structure. No additional allowances are or were payable to those who have acquired the certificate.

Listeriosis

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if, in any of the notified cases of listeriosis in 1987 and 1988, there was any evidence of a vector other than food.

Mr. Freeman: Three of the 546 listeria cases reported to the public health laboratory service in 1987 and 1988 were microbiologically confirmed as being food associated. No vector was identified in the other cases.

Food Poisoning

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he is taking to reduce the incidence of food poisoning.

Mr. Freeman: Apart from regular liaison with the food industry and enforcement agencies, action is being taken on a number of fronts. The Department of Health and the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food have a number of studies under way on a range of subjects; the public health laboratory service, in addition to its routine monitoring of laboratory reports, also has in train a number of specific studies. The Department is working with the manufacturing and retail sectors of the food industry on the prevention and control of contamination in foods.

On a wider front, the Department is jointly responsible with the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food for the Food Act and legislation made under it. A review of both the Act and the food hygiene regulations is under way. We are considering what further action is necessary.

Elderly Persons' Homes (Calderdale)

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total cost, and to which Government Departments, of funding private and voluntary homes for the elderly in Calderdale in each year from 1979.

Mr. Freeman: Private and voluntary homes are not funded directly by the Government.

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many places there were in (a) local authority elderly persons homes and (b) private homes for elderly persons in Calderdale in each year since 1979.

Mr. Freeman: The information readily available for the period relates to the number of places in homes for elderly people and younger physically handicapped people. Information for the years ending 31 March 1981 to 1986 is published in "Residential Accommodation for Elderly and Younger Physically Handicapped People: All Residents in Local Authority, Voluntary and Private Homes Year ending 31 March 1981 to Year ending 31 March 1986 England", a copy of which is available in the Library. The information for the year ending 31 March 1980, and provisional information for the year ending 31 March 1987, is given in the table.

Number of places in residential care homes in Calderdale local authority for elderly people and for younger physically handicapped people, as at 31 March, 1980 and 1987

Year	Local authority homes	Voluntary homes	Private homes	All homes
1980	656	91	131	878
1987[1]	702	32	438	1,172

[1] Provisional.

Operations (Waiting Lists)

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people waiting for operations (a) nationally and (b) in Calderdale, have been removed from waiting lists because they became ill, in each year since 1979.

Mr. Mellor: We do not collect the information requested centrally.

Private Health Sector (Calderdale)

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many private beds were available, and how many consultant hours were worked, in the private health sector in Calderdale in each year since 1979.

Mr. Mellor: The only available information centrally is given in the table.

Number of beds in private hospitals, homes and clinics registered under section 33 of the Registered Homes Act 1984—Calderdale health authority

Year	Total beds
1982	141
1983	145
1984	168
1985	272
1986	340

Cook-Chill Food

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps his Department has taken to ensure the public can safely consume cook-chill food from supermarkets that store such food in systems that contravene his Department's 1980 guidelines.

Mr. Freeman: This Department, in consultation with the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the food industry, is drawing up guidelines for cooked-chilled manufactured food sold from retail outlets. The proposed guidelines will cover storage and display conditions and will take account as appropriate of the recommendations in the Department's existing guidelines on pre-cooked chilled catering foods.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he is taking following the publication of the results of a survey into food hygiene in National Health Service hospitals in England and Wales undertaken by the Institution of Environmental Health Officers which indicated that the cook-chill processes in 19 per cent. of the hospitals surveyed between 1 April 1987 and 31 March 1988 did not comply with his Department's 1980 guidelines.

Mr. Freeman: Health authorities have been asked to provide information on standards of hygiene in their kitchens including those involving cook-chill and this will be carefully considered for further action.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many members of the Yorkshire regional health authority have declared a pecuniary interest in cook-chill catering; and when these interests were declared;

(2) how many members of the Wakefield district health autority have declared a pecuniary interest in cook-chill catering; and when these interests were declared.

Mr. Freeman: None. But as recorded in the DHA minutes, one member of Wakefield health authority gave notice on 25 November that he had received an invitation to join/advise a company specialising in 100 per cent. sterile food. I understand the company currently operates on the continent but has plans to undertake marketing trials in the United Kingdom.

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice he is giving to Calderdale health authority on cook-chill in the light of the recent new evidence on listeria.

Mr. Freeman: The advice contained in the 1970 guidelines on cook-freeze catering, as amended by the guidelines on pre-cooked chilled foods published in 1980, is still operational. As my right hon. and learned Friend the Minister of Health said in his reply of 14 December to the hon. Member for Stoke-on-Trent, South (Mr. Ashley) at column 601 we are satisfied that provided these guidelines are carefully followed, microbiologically sound food will be produced.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, if it is possible for cook-chill food to be supplied from the private sector to National Health Service hospitals with food production units within the requirements of his Department's 1980 guidelines on cook-chill food.

Mr. Freeman: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to him on 17 January at column 114

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Wakefield of 16 January 1988, the public health laboratory service of cook-chill food has included food supplied to hospital patients.

Mr. Freeman: The public health laboratory service survey referred to in my reply of 16 January at column 43 includes cook-chill food supplied by NHS hospitals.

Water Fluoridation

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what action his Department intends to take in the light of the proposals by the Severn-Trent water authority to give notice to terminate the agreement by which fluoridated water is supplied from the Elan valley reservoir to Birmingham, Solihull and adjacent areas unless by 1 February his Department and the Water Authorities Association resolve the current dispute over the terms of the indemnity granted to water suppliers;

(2) what are the terms of the indemnity granted to water suppliers who have previously agreed to requests for fluoridation schemes; how the indemnity offered to water suppliers for new schemes has been implemented since the Water (Fluoridation) Act 1985; how such indemnities were implemented before that Act; and what extensions to the existing indemnity have been offered to the Water Authorities Association in recent negotiations with his Department.

Mr. Freeman: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Perry Barr (Mr. Rooker) on 16 January at columns 41-42 which said that a copy of the terms of the indemnity for water undertakers had been placed in the Library. The only major change to the indemnity since the passage of the Water Fluoridation Act 1985 has been the withdrawal of cover in the event of a legal challenge to the powers of water undertakers to add fluoride to the water supply. This is because the Act itself removed any doubt about these powers.

We are considering the terms of the indemnity following representations from the Water Authorities Association.

Cyclotron (Expenditure)

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what grounds he made his decision to spend £6 million on a cyclotron to be sited at St. Thomas's hospital; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: On 7 June 1988 Ministers approved a grant of £6 million to the Cyclotron trust as a contribution towards the charitable funds it is raising to install a Cyclotron at St. Thomas's hospital. The decision was made on the understanding that the Neutron therapy the cyclotron can provide, can give relief from the effects of certain cancers. Ministers decided to support the voluntary fund raisers in order to make such treatment more widely available to NHS patients.

Hospital Pharmacists and Pharmacy Technicians

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list, by regional health authority the number of vacant posts in 1988 for hospital pharmacists grade 1 and grade 2 and pharmacy technicians.

Mr. Mellor: We do not collect this information centrally.

ENVIRONMENT

Housing Finance

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make available to hon. Members any evidence collected from local authorities which supports his answer of 19 December, Official Report, column 42, that his proposals on housing finance will not significantly affect council house rents either in Nottingham or nationally.

Mr. Trippier: My earlier reply explained that my right hon. Friend's proposals for capital expenditure and finance were not expected to have any impact on council house rents. We have made separate proposals on housing finance, suggesting new machinery for subsidising local authority housing revenue accounts. The effect these proposals will have on council rents will depend partly on the way we choose to operate the system year by year, and partly on the decisions taken by individual local authorities, who will retain ultimate responsibility for setting their own rents.

Water Act 1973

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will list the directions made by his Department under section 30 of the Water Act 1973 since the implementation of the Act, giving the date of each such direction, the authority to which it applied and the nature of the change to which the direction referred;

(2) what directions he has made for the charges schemes under the provisions of section 31(3) of the Water Act 1973 since that Act came into force, giving the date and the authorities subject to such directions in each instance.

Mr. Moynihan: No directions were given under section 30(5) and none have been given under section 3(4) of the Public Utility Transfers and Water Charges Act 1988 which has replaced it.

No directions have been given under section 31(3).

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment on what dates since the implementation of the Water Act 1973 he has made regulations under section 32(2) of that Act with respect to the installation of meters.

Mr. Moynihan: No regulations were made under section 32(2) of the Water Act 1973, which was repealed by the Public Utility Transfers and Water Charges Act 1988. Two sets of regulations have been made under section 5 of the 1988 Act: the Water (Meters) Regulations 1988 No. 1048 and the Water (Meters) (Amendments) Regulations 1988 No. 1288. These were made on 14 June 1988 and 25 July 1988 respectively.

Alexander Fleming House

Mr. Heddle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will publish details of any plans to carry out a scheme of refurbishment to Alexander Fleming house, London SE1;

(2) if he has any plans to list Alexander Fleming house, Elephant and Castle, London SE1 under the Town and Country Planning Acts as a building of architectural significance.

Mr. Chope: Alexander Fleming house is a leased building and the landlord has yet to take a final decision about a major refurbishment. I have no plans to list this building under the Town and Country Planning Acts.

Housing Starts

Mr. Heddle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish in the Official Report the figures for private sector housing starts for each year since 1979.

Mr. Trippier: Figures of private sector housing starts appear in table 6.1(a) of "Housing and Construction Statistics, 1977-1987", a copy of which is available in the Library.

Inner City Regeneration

Mr. Heddle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he proposes to take to encourage local authorities to use simplified planning zones to facilitate private sector investment in inner city regeneration.

Mr. Chope: My Department has already issued advice on the preparation of SPZ schemes (PPG5), on the statutory procedures (circular 25/87), and on the application of environmental assessment procedures in these areas (circular 24/88). Promotional literature has been widely circulated to local planning authorities, businesses and other organisations involved in regenerating inner city areas. SPZ schemes have already been established at Derby and Corby and other schemes in preparation include those at Birmingham, Enfield, Rotherham, Cleethorpes and Glanford/Scunthorpe.

Economic Development Projects

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if the proposed new economic development power will contain restrictions to prevent local authorities assisting in providing wages or salaries for staff in economic development projects.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Restrictions on the use of the new power will be set out in regulations on which we shall consult local government. The Government do not believe that local authorities should be giving long-term direct subsidies to wages and salaries of private-sector firms.

Water (Privatisation)

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans his Department has developed to ensure adequate investment in the sewage system infrastructure after the privatisation of the water supply industry.

Mr. Moynihan: Capital programmes costing £900 to £1,000 million have been developed by water authorities, aimed at bringing substandard sewage treatment works into compliance with their discharge consents by March 1992. It will be for the proposed National Rivers Authority to ensure that these programmes are satisfactorily implemented, and to monitor the performance of sewage treatment works to ensure an acceptable standard of continuing performance.

Housing (New Towns)

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether the Government intend to continue with the management agency agreement to take over the running of all housing in new towns.

Mr. Trippier: The management of their rented housing stock is entirely a matter for new town development corporations. The decision to offer a management agency agreement to anyone is taken by the board of the development corporation. The Government have no standing in these matters.

Fire Service and Civil Defence

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much in percentage terms ratepayers pay for their fire service in each of the fire and civil defence authority areas outside London.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: In 1987-88 the precept incomes of fire and civil defence authorities expressed as percentages of rates paid by all ratepayers in each metropolitan area are as follows:

Area	per cent.
Greater Manchester	4·3
Merseyside	2·9
South Yorkshire	3·9
Tyne and Wear	4·4
West Midlands	3·4
West Yorkshire	4·8

Estate Action

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the increase in provision for the Estate Action programme for 1989-90.

Mr. Trippier: The Estate Action provision for 1989-90 has been increased by £40 million to £190 million, which is 36 per cent. more than the current year's provision.

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when was the last time a code of guidance as to sites of special scientific interest was issued.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The code of guidance was issued in November 1982. A revised code is in preparation and it is expected to be submitted for approval by Parliament later this year.

Water

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which of the 31 water supplies subject to action programmes agreed by his Department now comply with the European Community drinking water directive limiting the levels of aluminium in the water supply; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: Two of the 31 drinking water supplies subject to remedial programmes for aluminium now comply with the European Community drinking water directive. These are Tunstall (Northumbrian water authority) and parts of Halifax served by Thrum Hall treatment works (Yorkshire water authority).

Most of the remaining 29 supplies should comply by 1990.

Rents and Rates

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a table showing the projected rise in local authority (a) rents and (b) rates for each year between 1988-89 and 1990-91 in current prices and 1987-88 prices.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 18 January 1989]: We cannot say what local authorities will choose to do in future years. For 1988-89, however, local authorities in England increased their rents by an average of £1·57 per week over the previous year. (£1·48p at 1987-88 prices). The average increase in general rates in 1988-89 was 17·10p in the £, or 16·09p at 1987-88 prices.

Lowermoor Water Treatment Works

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many requests for a drinking water derogation order were made to his Department by the South West water authority with respect to the incident at Lowermoor water treatment works on 6 July 1988; and on what dates they were received.

Mr. Ridley [holding answer 18 January 1989]: South West water authority submitted to my Department on 3 August 1988 an application for an emergency derogation under article 10 of the EC drinking water directive. Letters from SWW dated 15 August, 31 August and 14 September requested extension of its application.

I refer the hon. Member to the reply my hon. Friend the Minister for Water and Planning gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Cornwall, North (Mr. Neale) on 17 January, [Official Report Vol. 145, col. 147].

Pollution

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give for the latest available year and for each of the previous five years the volume of chemical waste and the volume of waste material dumped off the British coast.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the replies that I gave on 10 January to the two questions from the hon. Member for Cynon Valley (Mrs. Clwyd) concerning industrial waste, dredge spoil and sewage sludge at columns 527-28.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Bees

12. Mr. Allen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent representations he has received regarding bee diseases.

Mr. Donald Thompson: During 1988, I received representations from twelve beekeeping associations and from 15 individual bee interests about bee diseases and related matters.

Food (Microbiological Research)

13. Dr. Moonie: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on his Department's programme of microbiological research into food produced in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Ryder: The Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food undertakes an extensive programme of research in food microbiology, hygiene related methodology development, costing about £1·9 million in the current financial year. The research is carried out at many establishments including universities, the Food Research Institute, and research associations. The programme of research is aimed at improving the safety and quality of food for the community. A list of individual projects within this programme has already been given in my reply of 22 December 1988 to the right hon. Member for Stoke-on-Trent, South (Mr. Ashley).

Green Pound

14. Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has made to the European Economic Community regarding devaluation of the green pound as part of the 1989 price proposals.

Mr. MacGregor: Following United Kingdom pressure during the 1988 price fixing, the Council and the Commission agreed that the completion of the internal market required the progressive dismantlement of all MCAs, and monetary gaps. The Commission is committed to making proposals for further steps, and I expect to see the 1989-90 price proposals shortly.

46. Mr. Marland: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has assessed the likely impact of the green pound rate changes which come into effect on 18 January on farm incomes.

Mr. MacGregor: The green pound devaluations agreed at the 1988 price fixing came into effect on 1 January this year. Taken on their own, they would increase aggregate farm income (the value of United Kingdom agricultural output) by some £120 million in a full year.

Horticulture (Market Research)

15. Mr. Cran: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received concerning the level of research and development funding in near market research in horticulture.

Mr. Ryder: We have received representations on the level of funding for near market research in horticulture from all the main organisations with an interest in horticultural research as well as from other interested parties.

Common Agricultural Policy

16. Mr. McKelvey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent discussions he has had with the National Farmers Union about the common agricultural policy.

Mr. MacGregor: I meet representatives of the National Farmers Union frequently to discuss agricultural matters.

Eggs

18. Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his estimate of the United Kingdom's present capacity for production of hens' eggs.

Mr. Ryder: It is not possible to make a precise estimate of the United Kingdom's total capacity for production of hens' eggs. In 1988, approximately 12 billion hens' eggs were produced in the United Kingdom, but this may not have reflected the use of all the capacity for production that was available.

19. Mr. Bradley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about the number of egg laying poultry that have been culled under his scheme announced on 19 December.

Mr. Ryder: Latest available information is that some 200,000 birds have been culled so far under the slaughter of hens scheme.

21. Mr. Clelland: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about the future of egg production in the United Kingdom.

28. Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about the future of egg consumption in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Ryder: The two schemes which my hon. Friend the Minister announced on 19 December have helped to restore stability to the egg market. The further measures to improve animal health and hygiene in the egg industry should enable public confidence to be restored in eggs as a safe and nutritious food. Egg producers should now be able to use their commercial judgment to draw up their future plans.

34. Mr. Ashley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on what date he expects salmonella in poultry to be so reduced as to permit old and young people to eat eggs safely again and other people to use them in mayonnaise and similar products.

Mr. Ryder: I regret that it is not possible to give a precise answer. Salmonella infection is a highly complex issue involving a great number of factors. It would be misleading to state that it can definitely be eradicated. No country to our knowledge has salmonella-free flocks, but we are working urgently to tackle the problem at every point in the production chain to reduce incidence. In the meantime, consumers should continue to follow the chief medical officer's advice about the use of eggs.

37. Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his latest estimate as to the true extent of infection by salmonella enteritidis in eggs and poultry in Britain.

Mr. Ryder: It is not possible to make a precise estimate as to the extent of infection by salmonella enteritidis in eggs or in poultry. As far as eggs are concerned, I agree with what my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health told the House on 5 December 1988 at column 19, that the risk to any individual is small and the risk to the healthy adult small indeed. As for poultrymeat, thorough thawing of frozen poultry, thorough cooking of poultry and proper handling of poultrymeat in the kitchen should remove any risk.

40. Mr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the number of jobs likely to be lost in the poultry industry as a result of the culling of 4 million hens under the proposals he announced on 19 December 1988.

Mr. Ryder: The schemes which my right hon. Friend announced on 19 December to assist the disposal of surplus eggs and to help the industry to reduce the size of the laying flock have helped to stabilise the market and to restore a degree of confidence.

I have no firm information about the number of people who may have lost employment in egg production and packing plants following the sudden drop in demand which occurred last month. I regret if any jobs have been lost and hope that with the recovery of the market they will soon be restored.

It would be quite wrong to suggest that the Government's schemes have been responsible for job losses. Quite clearly, the schemes have helped to sustain employment in the industry.

48. Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will give his estimate of the size of the United Kingdom laying hen flock at the present date.

Mr. Ryder: The annual agricultural census at June 1988 recorded a total of 37·1 million laying fowls in the United Kingdom. In addition, it is estimated that there are a further 250,000 laying fowls on those very small holdings which are not required to make annual returns under the census. The census results will be published shortly.

51. Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he most recently met representatives of the United Kingdom poultry industry to discuss the emergency measures to assist egg producers.

Mr. Ryder: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend to the hon. Member for Rother Valley (Mr. Barron) earlier today.

59. Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much compensation he now estimates will be paid to egg producers following his statement of 19 December.

Mr. Ryder: The latest available information is that up to £2·6 million will be paid in the United Kingdom for the destruction of eggs under the eggs industry scheme and about £800,000 for the culling of hens under the slaughter of hens scheme.

64. Mr. Colvin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what were the total imports of foreign eggs to the United Kingdom in December 1988 and 1987.

Mr. Ryder: In December 1987, 55,700 boxes of eggs in shell (containing 360 eggs/box) were imported into the United Kingdom. The provisional figure for December 1988 is 21,575 boxes.

Mr. Adley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what evidence he has of the quality of British eggs and those of the other 11 European Economic Community countries.

Mr. Ryder: All hens' eggs marketed in the European Community must comply with Council regulation 2772/75 and Commission regulation 95/69 which lay down common requirements for quality, weight, labelling and marking throughout the production chain.

Mr. Adley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many eggs have been tested for salmonella since the statement of the former Under-Secretary of State for Health, the hon. Member for Derbyshire, South (Mrs. Currie); what the results have been; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder: The information is not available in the form requested. However, during the period 23 November to 13 January a total of 9,425 eggs from 320 flocks or units were tested for salmonella by Ministry of Agriculture officials. None were found to be infected. The PHLS has, of course, continued to monitor outbreaks of food poisoning some of which may be related to eggs.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

17. Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the incineration of bovine spongiform encephalopathy infected cattle carcases.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Incineration is a safe and effective method of disposing of carcases of cattle suspected of having BSE.

20. Mr. Cousins: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many cases of bovine spongiform encephalopathy were identified in December 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: In December 1988, 339 cases of BSE were confirmed by the laboratory examination of brain tissue.

31. Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions he has had with the British Veterinary Association about the control of bovine spongiform encephalopathy.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Ministry officials have frequent discussions with the British Veterinary Association on a range of topics, including BSE.

Farm Walls and Hedges

22. Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the amount of money paid out by his Department as grants for maintenance, repair or construction of farm walls and hedges, for each of last three years and for the current year.

Mr. Ryder: The amount of grant paid in England each year since 1985 for repair or construction of walls and the planting of hedges and hedge laying was:

	£ million
1985	0·75
1986	0·87
1987	1·97
[1]1988	1·26

[1] To June.

Routine maintenance operations are not grant aided.

Beef Cattle

23. Mr. Livsey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received about present prices for beef cattle; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I have received no recent representations about prices for beef cattle. Throughout 1988 prices have been markedly above those for 1987. Producers' expectations of higher prices have also been reflected in prices for calves and store cattle.

Vegetables (Pesticides)

24. Mr. Hardy: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to revise the official standards in regard to pesticide and other chemical residues in vegetables.

Mr. Ryder: The use of all pesticides is rigorously controlled in the United Kingdom by the Control of Pesticides Regulations 1986. In addition to those controls on use, the House recently approved the setting of over 800 statutory maximum residue levels for pesticide residues in fruit and vegetables. These MRLs will be revised as and when appropriate.

Beef and Sheepmeat

25. Mr. Amos: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the progress to date of his discussion with the European Community on the future of the beef and sheepmeat regimes.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The Council of Ministers has only briefly discussed proposals from the EC Commission for a review of the sheepmeat regime. Little progress has been achieved in these discussions. Regarding beef, no decision on the proposed reform of the regime was reached at the December Agriculture Council. The existing arrangements have therefore been extended until 5 March with a view to discussions continuing.

Dairy Farming

26. Mr. Knox: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he is next due to meet the president of the National Farmers Union to discuss the dairy sector.

Mr. Donald Thompson: My right hon. Friend the Minister and I have regular contacts with the president of the National Farmers Union to discuss issues affecting the farming industry.

Food (Purity)

27. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what new initiatives he intends to take to improve the purity of food.

Mr. Ryder: Both the nutritional value and the safety of food are kept under close and continuous review by an expert advisory committee, whose most recent report, entitled "Food Surveillance 1985 to 1988" was published last November. The report is available in the Library of the House.

Intervention Stock

29. Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he expects falls in the level of intervention stocks in the coming year.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Intervention stock levels are influenced by a wide range of factors, notably harvest size, market demand and EC support arrangements. The measures agreed by the European Council in February 1988 exert downward pressure on surplus production and thus help to limit intervention.

Livestock Sector

30. Mr. Geraint Howells: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to help the livestock sector of the industry during the coming year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I shall continue to make appropriate provision to support the livestock sector during 1989. Actual levels of support will be dependent upon the outcome of this year's price-fixing negotiations; and, in the beef and sheep sectors, the results of the current negotiations on the future of the relevant CAP regimes.

Agricultural Research

32. Mr. Hunter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a further statement on the future of agricultural research.

Mr. Ryder: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Dorset, North (Mr. Baker) on 1 December 1988 at column 324.

Board of Agriculture

33. Mr. Favell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether his Department plans to mark the centenary of the creation of the Board of Agriculture.

Mr. MacGregor: A number of celebratory events have been planned for 1989. The principal ones are: the launch in January of a centenary appeal for the Save the Children Fund; the publication in March of a specially commissioned history of the Ministry; a reception at Lancaster house to be attended by Her Majesty the Queen; and a major exhibition of the Ministry's work in Hyde park in May as part of the festival of food and farming.

Deer (Tuberculosis)

35. Mr. Grocott: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he is taking to prevent the spread of tuberculosis in farmed deer; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I refer the hon. Member to the announcement I made in the House on 15 December 1988 at columns 674-75.

53. Ms. Mowlam: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions he is having with the Deer Farmers Association about tuberculosis in farmed deer.

Mr. Donald Thompson: In my announcement to the House on 15 December 1988 (Hansard columns 674-75) I explained the discussions I was having with the British Deer Farmers Association. I met the Association again on 21 December to discuss these matters further. My officials have also written to a wide range of organisations with an interest in deer farming, inviting their comments on the proposed new measures.

65. Mr. Haynes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimates he has for the extent of tuberculosis in farmed and wild deer.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Since the beginning of 1986 tuberculosis in farmed deer has been confirmed in six out of an estimated 250 deer farming premises in Great Britain. Since 1971 only eight wild deer have been found to have been infected with tuberculosis out of a total of 734 carcases inspected in connection with official operations in areas where there is a high risk of infection from badgers.

The extent of tuberculosis in farmed deer will become more clear when legislation, to be introduced shortly, will make the disease notifiable in farmed deer.

EC Conversion Grants

36. Mr. McWilliam: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he intends to meet representatives of the National Farmers Union to discuss the new European Community conversion grants.

Mr. MacGregor: My Department is in regular touch with the union on the Commission's most recent proposals.

Mr. Ray McSharry

38. Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) when he intends to meet the new European Community Agriculture Commissioner, Mr. Ray McSharry;

(2) when he plans to meet the new European Community Commissioner for Agriculture.

Mr. MacGregor: I expect to meet Mr. McSharry at the meeting of the Agriculture Council on 23-24 January.

Country Landowners Association

41. Mr. Hind: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met the president of the Country Landowners Association; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Ryder: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Leicestershire, North, West (Mr. Ashby) on 1 December 1988 at column 325.

British Poultry Federation

42. Mr. Hanley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met the president of the British Poultry Federation; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Ryder: My right hon. Friend the Minister met the president of the British Poultry Federation on 5 May 1988 at the lunch following the federation's annual general meeting. They discussed a number of issues of interest to the industry.

GATT (Agricultural Trade)

43. Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress he expects to be made in the general agreement on tariffs and trade discussions on agricultural trade over the next few months following the mid-term review in Montreal.

Mr. MacGregor: It was agreed in Montreal that a further meeting of senior trade policy officials should take place in Geneva in April to resolve the outstanding issues and bring the mid-term review of the GATT negotiations to a positive conclusion. Meanwhile, the director general of the GATT will be holding bilateral consultations with the major participants in the negotiation and agriculture will be one of his main concerns.

The Government will be working with our partners in the Community to resolve the differences of view, notably with the United States, over how to carry forward reform of agricultural trade policies so that the April meeting can agree a clear and detailed framework for the subsequent conduct of the negotiation. All parties to the negotiation will need to take a flexible and constructive approach for progress in this direction to be achieved.

Women's Farming Union

44. Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met the chairman of the Women's Farming Union; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. MacGregor: I met the chairman of the Women's Farming Union on 23 November 1988 when I addressed the union's annual general meeting on various subjects, including the opportunities and challenges facing the marketing boards.

Countryside Commission

45. Dr. Twinn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he next intends to meet the chairman of the Countryside Commission; and what issues he expects will be discussed.

Mr. Ryder: I met the chairman of the Countryside Commission on 7 November, when we had a very useful discussion on a wide variety of issues. I expect to have similar meetings in future whenever we have matters of mutual concern to tackle.

Poultry Feed

47. Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has any plans to stop the use of recycled animal protein in poultry feed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I have no plans to do so. The Diseases of Animals (Protein Processing) Order 1981 requires all protein material for animal feeding stuffs to be manufactured free from salmonella. My officials routinely inspect all premises producing such protein to ensure that this requirement is met.

In addition, discussions are under way between my officials and representatives of the animal feedingstuffs industry to consider the application of the present controls and any further measures which may be needed to reduce salmonella contamination in feeding stuffs.

Set-aside Scheme

49. Mr. Nicholas Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions he has had with his European counterparts about the setting up of an effective set-aside scheme.

Mr. Richard Ryder: Set-aside is operating effectively in the United Kingdom and I understand that the majority of member states have now introduced schemes. I welcome the European Commission's declared intention to open infraction proceedings under the treaty against member states which had not, by the end of 1988, met their obligations to apply set-aside schemes.

Potato Marketing Board

50. Mr. Harris: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met the chairman of the Potato Marketing Board; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Ryder: Ministers meet the chairman of the board from time to time when necessary to discuss various aspects of the potato marketing arrangements.

Farming (Diversification)

52. Mr. Riddick: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action his Department proposes to take to help farmers understand the impact of their attempts to diversify their business.

Mr. Ryder: On 9 January we launched "Planning Permission and the Farmer", which has been prepared jointly by MAFF, DOE and the Welsh Office and can be obtained through HMSO bookshops. This guide explains how the planning system works; describes some of the relevant provisions of planning legislation, and how to find out whether or not a project is likely to need planning permission; and suggests what can be done before, during and making a planning application to present a convincing case. Copies of a free leaflet will be sent with the February edition of the ADAS divisional bulletins. Any farmer in England and Wales who does not receive an ADAS bulletin and wishes to obtain a copy of the leaflet should contact their local divisional office. The leaflet will contain a brief description of the guide and also explain how to obtain a copy. Copies of the guide and the leaflet will be placed in the Vote Office.

Wool Board

54. Mr. Patnick: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met the chairman of the Wool Board; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I met the chairman of the British Wool Marketing Board on 24 October 1988 to inform him of the Government's intention to abolish the guarantee price agreements for wool.

Small Farmers Association

55. Mr. Conway: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he next intends to meet the chairman of the Small Farmers Association; and what issues he expects will be discussed.

Mr. Ryder: I have no plans to do so at present, though I have frequent contact with all sections of the farming community.

Unpasteurised Milk

56. Mr. Martlew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will ban the retail sale of unpasteurised milk.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I have no such plans at present.

Farm Woodland Scheme

57. Mr. Charles Wardle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will indicate what the initial reaction of farmers has been to the farm woodland scheme; and whether he expects his Department's uptake targets to be met.

Mr. Ryder: There has been a good level of interest shown by farmers in the farm woodland scheme. However, the scheme only opened on 1 October 1988 and it is too early to say whether the maximum total areas for planting over the three-year experimental period will be reached. My right hon. Friend will be issuing more details on the pattern of uptake later this month.

Environmentally Sensitive Areas

58. Mrs. Gillian Shephard: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how farming practices have changed in areas of the United Kingdom covered by ESA's since the scheme's inception.

Mr. Ryder: Farmers participating in ESAs agree to use farming practices which conserve the environmental features of the area. It is too early to make a full assessment of the effects of the scheme but I expect to publish a report shortly which will explain how the scheme is intended to affect farming practices in each area and indicate progress made so far.

GATT (Review)

60. Mr. Knowles: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the outcome of the general agreement on tariffs and trade mid-term review in Montreal.

Mr. MacGregor: I refer my hon. Friend to the statement made to the House on 12 December 1988 by my right hon. Friend, the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, at column 400.

Cod Quotas

61. Mr. David Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has had about the 1989 North sea cod quotas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I took full account of the views of the Members of this House and the industry when I gave my agreement to the total allowable catch (TAC) for cod in 1989 at the December Fisheries Council. I made quite clear that this agreement was subject to the TAC being reviewed if the biological assessment of the Advisory Committee on Fisheries Management in May 1989 indicates that this might be appropriate.

Tenant Farmers Association

62. Mr. Summerson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met the chairman of the Tenant Farmers Association; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Ryder: Although I have not yet met the chairman of the Tenant Farmers Association, I am glad to say that I shall be addressing the association's annual conference in February. In the meantime, the Department is in regular touch with the association on a wide range of issues.

Common Agricultural Policy

63. Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions he has had with European Community Agriculture Ministers about the future of the common agriculture policy.

Mr. MacGregor: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Norfolk, South-West (Mrs. Shephard) on Tuesday 20 December 1988 about Agriculture Council discussions on a number of Commission proposals including the reform of the beef and sheepmeat regimes. These discussions continue.

European Community Farm Animal Convention

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what evidence he has as to disparity in practice in implementing the EEC farm animal convention in member states of the Community.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I take it that the hon. Member is referring to the European convention on the protection of animals kept for farming purposes, elaborated in the Council of Europe rather than the European Community. It contains very general provisions, which contracting parties are free to implement in their own way, and I have no information about disparities in the steps they have taken.

Farm Animals (Definition)

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what representations he has received concerning the proposed designation of farm animals as sentient under the treaty of Rome;

(2) what plans he has to propose to the Council of Ministers that the treaty of Rome be amended in order to designate farm animals as sentient creatures;

(3) what plans he has to press for a reappraisal of the status of farm animals within the EEC in the context of a single European market in 1992.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I am aware of suggestions that farm animals should be given a new status under the treaty, but have received no representations about this. It is clear, however, that the treaty already provides power to adopt farm animal welfare measures, and the European Commission is working on a number of new regulations within the context of the single European market. I therefore see no need to press for a change in the status of farm animals.

Slaughterhouses

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proportion of slaughterhouses in the United Kingdom conform to EEC standards for meat export; what proportion conform to United States Department of Agriculture standards for meat export; and what steps are being taken to raise United Kingdom slaughterhouse standards to the appropriate levels.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Approximately 10 per cent. of red meat slaughterhouses are currently approved for export to other EC member states. At present, these account for nearly 40 per cent. of the national throughput. All licensed poultry slaughterhouses have to comply with the relevant EC directive.

As yet, no red meat slaughterhouses have formally applied for USDA approval although a number of companies have expressed an interest. One poultrymeat establishment has applied for, and been granted, approval to export to US.

Officials of my Department are ready to advise all slaughterers on the conditions necessary for intra-Community trade or for export to the USA of any other country.

Chlorine

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he is taking on the three reports he is studying on the effects of chlorine on food and drink.

Mr. Ryder: I assume that the question refers to the possible occurrence of dioxins in food as a result of migration from paper-based packaging materials made from wood pulp bleached with chlorine.

The data currently available indicate that the levels of dioxins in feed are extremely small and do not pose a hazard to health. However, as I indicated in an earlier answer to the hon. Member, my Department is presently carrying out a thorough investigation into this issue, including a programme of laboratory analysis. When the reports referred to are completed, we shall decide what further action is necessary.

River Pollution

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the number of incidents of river pollution caused by farms' slurry in 1988.

Mr. Ryder: This information is not yet available, but will be contained within the 1988 report on water pollution from farm waste being compiled jointly by my Department and the Water Authorities Association. I will write to the hon. Member at the time of publication.

Agrochemicals

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what current restrictions there are on tank-mixes of agrochemicals which farmers may apply to their crops; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder: Ministers responsible for the control of pesticides have recently agreed that certain tank-mixes of pesticides should be prohibited. I refer my hon. Friend to the revised consent on use of pesticides which will be published in the London Gazette tomorrow.

Food Acts

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to seek to amend the Food Acts; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor: In October 1987 my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary announced, on behalf of our colleagues in the Department of Agriculture for Scotland, DHSS and DHSS (Northern Ireland) our intention to update and streamline food legislation. Since then officials have been holding consultations with a wide variety of interested organisations to consider revisions to existing legislation. Consultations are now at an advanced stage and officials will shortly be reporting back to Ministers. Of course, the timing for the introduction of any new legislation must be subject to the other pressures on the parliamentary timetable.

Rats (Farms)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what advice he is giving to farmers to control rats in their farm buildings; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder: Advice on rat control in farm buildings is provided by the Ministry's Agricultural Development and Advisory Service. Rat control is needed in order to prevent dangerous structural damage to electrical cables and buildings, to prevent damage to or contamination of stored foodstuffs and, particularly, to reduce risks of diseases being spread to people and livestock.

Farmers should be aiming to remove any existing rats and to reduce the likelihood of further infestations. ADAS can provide advice on effective rat control practices including the appropriate choice of anti-coagulant pesticides, proper surveying of infestations, correct baiting procedures and measures for protecting non-target species. Additionally, farmers are advised on suitable preventative action including proofing of buildings and removal of harbourages. Ministry advisory publications on the subject are: "Keeping rats and mice out of farm buildings" (leaflet 627) "Control of rats on farms" (leaflet 608).

Listeria

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the research projects he is funding into listeria monocytogenes and the research establishments where these projects are undertaken; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder: My Department is funding research projects on listeria monocytogenes. These projects form part of the extensive on-going research programme on food safety which my Department undertakes.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he is taking to reduce the incidence of listeria monocytogenes in raw poultry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for York (Mr. Gregory) on 17 January 1989 at column 159.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he will be in a position to report on the results of his Department's studies into the temperature sensitivity of listeria monocytogenes.

Mr. Ryder: My Department expects to receive a report of this work next month.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will provide details of the studies commissioned by his Department into the temperature sensitivity of listeria monocytogenes.

Mr. Ryder: We have a substantial research project in hand on the heat treatment required to kill listeria monocytogenes in a variety of foods, in particular white poultry meat, red meat and carrots. Results of this work will enable us to ensure that the cooking conditions used in the manufacture of these foods are appropriate and allow adequate safety margins to be maintained.

Sheepmeat Regime

Mr. Beith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the implication for sheep farming in (a) Northumberland and (b) similar areas of current proposals for the European Economic Community sheepmeat régime.

Mr. Donald Thompson: It is not possible to evaluate in precise details how the proposals would affect Northumberland or other areas in the locality.

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list his statutory duties with regard to the provision of advice and information to owners and occupiers of sites of special scientific interest.

Mr. Ryder: Under section 33 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981, I am required to prepare, jointly with other Ministers, a code of guidance on sites of special scientific interest for the benefit of the relevant authorities and for persons affected, that is, owners and occupiers of land in SSSIs.

I have many other powers and duties to advise and inform owners and/or occupiers of agricultural land, which will include those that occupy land in SSSIs.

US Secretary for Agriculture

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he met the new United States Secretary for Agriculture; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. MacGregor: I have met Mr. Yeutter, the Agriculture Secretary-designate, on a number of occasions in his capacity as United States trade representative, most recently at the mid-term meeting of the GATT round negotiations in Montreal in December. I look forward to meeting him in new capacity at an early date.

Food and Farming Year

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans his Department has to take part in the Hyde Park festival of food and farming, to celebrate Food and Farming Year.

Mr. MacGregor: We are preparing a major exhibition for this festival, with the title "Our Land, Our Food". It will include the Ministry's own centenary exhibition, with the emphasis on quality and safety, and will demonstrate the inextricable links between the agriculture and fishing industries and food consumers.

Chickens (Feedstuffs)

Mr. Wray: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list each one of the plants processing and producing feeding stuffs for chickens which has been the subject of inspection by health officials, and indicate where such inspections took place, for each year since 1980.

Mr. Donald Thompson [holding answer 17 January 1989]: My officials routinely visit and inspect plants producing animal protein for incorporation into animal feedingstuffs including feedingstuffs for chickens, and take samples of their products for laboratory testing. Information on the identity of plants is held by my Department in order to carry out these operations as provided for by statute. It would be wrong to disclose such data for purposes other than those for which it was collected.

Free Food Scheme

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the total amount of (a) butter, and (b) beef allocated to each region of England under the European Community free food scheme for 1988-89, the total amount distributed to date and the total amount still undistributed.

Mr. Ryder: The allocation of produce in England for 1988, which was made to designated organisations rather than on a regional basis was 1,677 tonnes of butter and 570 tonnes of beef, all of which has been withdrawn from intervention store for distribution. The arrangements for local distribution is a matter for the organisations. For 1989, the Commission has recently notified member states of their allocations. In the United Kingdom up to 4,075 tonnes of butter and 2,975 tonnes of beef is available within a financial allocation of about £14·5 million. We expect to be consulting designated organisations soon.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list (a) the total number of applications and (b) the local authorities which made applications to distribute beef and butter under the European Community free food scheme for 1988-89 in each region of England.

Mr. Ryder: Excluding parish councils, there are approximately 400 local authorities in England, of which seven applied to participate in the surplus food scheme.

Salmonella

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether there is a minimum acceptable percentage of salmonella contamination in poultry carcasses; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: It is desirable that any bacterial contamination should be kept to a minimum, although salmonella is destroyed if poultry is cooked properly. Two codes of practice have been introduced for poultry breeders and hatcheries to minimise the risk of transmission of salmonella. In my reply to my right hon. Friend the Member for Suffolk, Central (Mr. Lord) on 18 January I set out the further measures I am proposing to reduce the risk of transmission through breeding stock. Statutory hygiene controls are designed to avoid contamination during processing.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many investigations of salmonella species in poultry flock have been carried out in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr Donald Thompson: The Zoonoses Order 1975 requires that all isolations of salmonella from food poisoning animals are reported. Since April 1988, in response to the emerging human health problem associated with salmonella enteritidis, all reports of this salmonella have been investigated. The number of investigations carried out in flocks of fowls in each of the last five years is as follows:

	Number
1984	3
1985	3
1986	4
1987	5
1988	[1]182

[1]. provisional

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which species of salmonella have been found in the ovaries of poultry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Of the very many known salmonella species only the following species have been isolated from ovaries of poultry:

Salmonella typhimurium
Salmonella typhimurium var Copenhagen
Salmonella enteritidis
Salmonella heidelberg
Salmonella menston
Salmonella gallinarum
Salmonella pullorum

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of vaccinating poultry against salmonella species; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: A vaccine can only be effective against an individual species of salmonella, of which there are many hundreds. Vaccines are available against salmonella pullorum and salmonella gallinarum; both have been virtually eradicated from this country but the vaccines are used in other countries with some degree of success. Vaccines are not available for the control of other species of salmonella.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research his Department is carrying out into (a) the identification of salmonella species in poultry and (b) the vaccination of poultry against salmonella species; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: My Department is currently funding a number of research projects including the development of a quick and simple blood test to detect salmonella enteritidis in live birds and the investigation of factors determining intestinal colonisation by salmonella. This includes studies of oral and systemic immunisation of poultry against salmonella.

Research work on the development of a salmonella enteritidis vaccine is being carrid out under a commercial contract at the central veterinary laboratory of my Department.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food under what criteria egg producers are able to label eggs salmonella free; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: As it is not feasible for the health status of individual eggs to be tested in a way which does not destroy them, claims that eggs offered for sale are free from salmonella may be open to legal challenge.

Written Answers to Questions

Friday 20 January 1989

TRANSPORT

Security (Heathrow)

Mr. Prescott: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on airport security at Heathrow.

Mr. Channon: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave to the right hon. Member for Manchester, Wythenshawe (Mr. Morris) on 16 January at column 23.

Britannia Bridge

Ms. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the estimated cost of reconstruction of the Britannia bridge, on the Commercial road (A13) at Limehouse; what are the likely dates of commencement and termination of the works; what is the estimated period when three traffic lanes will be in operation; and what are the estimated additional costs of providing (a) four traffic lanes throughout the period, and (b) tidal flow facilities for the three-lane time span.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The estimated cost is £510,000. The works should start in February 1989 and take about eight months. A fourth lane will be provided in the summer.

Site restrictions and the need to maintain safety make it impracticable either to provide a fourth lane for the whole works period or to operate tidal flow facilities.

Civil Airports

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list in the Official Report the names and addresses of the companies or individuals who own each of the civil airports in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: There is no comprehensive list. The names of those owning most United Kingdom civil airports of any significance are shown in the Aerodrome Owners Association handbook 1988. I will arrange for copies to be placed in the Library.

East London River Crossing

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has yet received a response from the consultants for the east London river crossing to his request for a redesign of the cable-stayed bridge over the Thames; and when he now expects work on the scheme to be started.

Mr. Channon: The consultants report on the review of the design of the bridge is due by the end of this month. The start of works will depend on the outcome of the review.

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement about Greenwich London borough council's application to the High Court to quash the orders in respect of the east London river crossing.

Mr. Channon: The London borough of Greenwich application to the High Court was heard on 19 December 1988. The decision, given on 20 December, was not in its favour.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Teacher Vacancies

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list by region and number of vacancies currently existing in secondary schools for (a) mathematics teachers and (b) science teachers.

Mr. Butcher: In January 1988 (the latest date for which figures are available) the numbers of vacancies in maintained secondary schools for full-time mathematics and science teachers were:

Region	Mathematics	[1] Science
North	4	4
Yorkshire and Humberside	14	18
North West	21	33
East Midlands	10	15
West Midlands	11	20
East Anglia	3	4
Greater London	71	90
Other South East	56	63
South West	15	16
England	205	263

[1] Science includes chemistry, physics, biology, other specific sciences, and combined, integrated or general science.

Local Pay Additions

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the number of staff in his Department, by grade, in receipt of local pay additions outside London and the south east economic planning region; what are the different amounts paid to staff, by grade; whether this figure varies due to location; what qualifying period of scale-related criteria is used; and whether this varies by location.

Mrs. Rumbold: No DES staff outside the London and south-east are in receipt of local pay additions. Inside London and the south-east additions are as follows:

£300 : AOs and AAs on entry to the grade
£400 : AOs and AAs after completing one year in the grade
£500 : AOs and AAs after completing two years in the grade
£300 : typing and secretarial staff in Inner London in addition to the previous £400 special allowance
£450 : typing staff in Croydon and Isleworth

Records of Achievement

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how he intends to proceed with the report on the national steering committee on records of achievement.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales and I are jointly publishing the records of achievement national steering committee report today. Copies have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

We have asked the School Examinations and Assessment Council to consider next steps in the context of its wider remit to advise on assessment and reporting in support of the national curriculum.

The test of the letter is as follows:

P. Halsey Esq. CB LVO
Chairman & Chief Executive
School Examinations and Assessment Council
Newcombe House
45 Notting Hill Gate
London W11 3JB

RECORDS OF ACHIEVEMENT

In my letter to you of 28 September last I invited SEAC to advise the Secretary of State for Wales and me on the arrangements for the provision of information on the assessment of pupils under Section 22 of the Education Reform Act 1988, taking account of the report of the Records of Achievement National Steering Committee (RANSC) once available; and to advise us more generally on the development, implementation and operation of the National Curriculum assessment system.

2. RANSC have now reported: I enclose a copy of their Report. I write on behalf of the Secretary of State for Wales and myself to indicate our initial reactions to the Report; and to invite SEAC to consult on its recommendations and, in the light of those consultations, to advise on the next steps in the context of my letter of 28 September. I would be grateful for the Council's advice by the end of June.

3. RANSC's remit was to report on the experience gained in developing Records of Achievement on the ground and on the implications for introducing such records for all pupils in secondary education in England and Wales; and to prepare draft national guidelines for such records and recording systems. Since the Committee embarked on their work, the context has changed considerably. With the passage of the Education Reform Act, we now have in prospect the introduction of a National Curriculum with its associated assessment and reporting arrangements. Meanwhile, Records of Achievement have been developed in a variety of forms across secondary schools in the majority of LEAs. The Committee have sought to relate that development work to the new context afforded by the National Curriculum.

4. I would be grateful if SEAC would now take forward this work. In doing so, the Council should bear the following considerations in mind.

5. RANSC offer guidelines on the form and content of documents to be given to pupils at 16-plus. They also advocate the production of similar documents through the earlier years of secondary education. The Committee's remit did not extend to primary schools. Subject to your advice, I envisage that there will need to be a consistent basis for the presentation of national assessment results for pupils at each of the key ages of 7, 11, 14 and 16; and that annual if not more frequent reports to parents should include information about pupils' progress in a form to be prescribed in Regulations under Section 22. I look to the Council for advice on whether:

(a) we should use the Regulations under Section 22 to prescribe the format of a document summarising each individual pupil's achievements at the age of 16;

(b) such Regulations should cover the reporting of subjects and activities beyond the National Curriculum; and

(c) the form and content of reports for (i) primary and (ii) secondary age pupils prior to the age of 16 should be similarly prescribed.

6. RANSC also offer advice on the process leading to the preparation of such documents. Much of what they recommend is accepted good practice by teachers. I would see it as for each LEA and for each school to determine its own procedures to underpin the preparation of Records of Achievement.

7. RANSC recommend the establishment of accreditation machinery for Records of Achievement. Bearing in mind the cost and complexity involved, it is not clear to me that any accreditation machinery separate from the support structure needed for the national assessment system is justified.

8. RANSC recommend 1990 as the date by which secondary schools should have schemes which comply with national guidelines; and 1995 as that by which all pupils at 16-plus should receive summary documents complying with the guidelines. I confirm that it is the Government's intention to see early progress on Records of Achievement in all secondary schools. I look to the Council for advice on what should be the precise timetable for the implementation of national requirements, taking account of the need to develop appropriate arrangements for primary schools, and of the timetable for the introduction of National Curriculum assessments.

9. There are issues on which I would expect that SEAC will wish to consult the NCC and CCW. I am therefore sending copies of this letter to Duncan Graham and Hywel Evans.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Solicitors

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Attorney-General what action the Government are proposing to ensure that the Law Society implements the recommendations made in the 13th annual report of the lay observer 1987 that solicitors should account to their clients for interest on moneys held on behalf of their clients.

The Attorney-General: The 13th report of the lay observer was published and laid before Parliament on 28 July 1988. Since then the Law Society has made new deposit interest rules. The rules set out a specific timetable for the minimum time certain sums of money may be held before payment of interest need be made. The rules also include an obligation on a solicitor to account for any sum of money exceeding £10,000 held for less than one week, if it is fair and reasonable in all the circumstances that such interest should be paid. The rules do not extend to solicitors acting as stakeholders, or to money held by solicitors as trustees, since the relevant primary legislation does not permit this.

Infant Life Preservation Act 1929

Mr. Cash: To ask the Attorney-General when was the last prosecution under the Infant Life Preservation Act 1929.

The Attorney-General: The last prosecution conducted by the Director of Public Prosecutions under the Infant Life Preservation Act 1929 was in 1987. I regret that in my written answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Batley and Spen (Mrs. Peacock) on 15 December 1988 at column 600 I erroneously stated that the last prosecution conducted by the director under the Act was in 1980.

PRIME MINISTER

Human Rights

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Prime Minister if she will say what further improvements in human rights performance in the Soviet Union will satisfy the criteria of Her Majesty's Government for attending a human rights conference in Moscow in 1991.

The Prime Minister: We have agreed in principle to a Moscow human rights conference in 1991, provided that recent progress in the Soviet human rights performance is maintained and consolidated, but obviously much remains to be done. If we are to attend such a conference the promised changes in Soviet criminal legislation must have been implemented, including the abolition or amendment of the political and religious articles; there must be effective guarantees of free speech, freedom of religion and freedom to emigrate, as well as of genuine judicial independence; there must be no political or religious prisoners and no long-term refuseniks; the Moscow conference must be held under exactly the same conditions as the CSCE meetings in the West; there must be no going back on the improvements which have already taken place and which made it possible for us to agree in principle to a Moscow conference.

All this assumes that nothing has happened in the meantime seriously to undermine the greatly improved state of East-West relations.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. French: To ask the Prime Minister how any oral parliamentary questions she has answered by written reply because the question was not reached at Question Time for the most recent year for which figures are available.

The Prime Minister: According to the available records I gave 179 such replies in 1988.

Buildings (Cleaning Grants)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Prime Minister whether she will initiate and co-ordinate a programme of Government grants or tax relief to enable the outsides of buildings to be regularly kept clean; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: No.

Cabinet Office (Staff)

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Prime Minister what is the number of staff in the Cabinet Office, by grade, in receipt of local pay additions outside London and the south-east economic planning region; what are the different amounts paid to staff, by grade; whether this figure varies due to location; what qualifying period of scale-related criteria is used; and whether this varies by location.

The Prime Minister: None.

Irish Citizens

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list those benefits available to Irish citizens in terms of financial, educational, migrational and other services available through local or central Government agencies which are not available to other European Economic Community nationals; which of these benefits are not reciprocally available to United Kingdom citizens within the Republic of Ireland; and if she will publish an estimate of the numbers and costs of British citizens receiving these benefits in the Republic of Ireland and Irish citizens receiving these benefits in the United Kingdom.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 13 January 1989]: I cannot answer for arrangements made by individual local authorities. As far as central Government is concerned, there are no benefits available to Irish citizens which are not available to the citizens of other EC member states. Irish nationals, but not other EC nationals, are permitted to vote in elections in the United Kingdom. This provision is now reciprocal. There are no available statistics about the numbers involved.

Citizenship is not a condition for the payment of social security benefits. Contributory benefits are awarded on the basis of the claimant's contribution record, and other benefits are available to those who meet the conditions of eligibility provided that they are legally present in the United Kingdom.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

EC (Consumer Policy)

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if there have been any further EEC Commission reports on the integration of consumer policy in the other common policies since the submission to the EEC Council of COM(87)616 final; on what occasions since December 1987 the EEC Council has discussed this topic; what conclusions were reached; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: At its last meeting, on 7 June 1988, the Consumer Council considered the Commission's first report (COM(87)616 final) on progress towards implementation of the 1986 resolution on taking the consumer interest into account in other policy areas. The council agreed conclusions which called on the Commission to step up its efforts and to report further to the council by June 1989.

Japanese-owned Businesses

Mr. Amos: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many Japanese-owned businesses which have located in the United Kingdom during the most recent 10-year period for which figures are available have located (a) in green field sites; (b) on derelict land; (c) within inner city areas and (d) other.

Mr. Forth [holding answer 19 January 1989]: Comprehensive statisics on foreign-owned businesses are not available, but the numbers of Japanese-owned manufacturing companies which have set up in the United Kingdom between January 1979 and December 1988, in the stated types of locations, are as follows:

	Number
(a) in greenfield sites:	39
(b) on derelict land:	0
(c) within inner city areas:	4
(d) other:	38

Some Japanese manufacturers have more than one production site.

Mr. Amos: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how much central Government assistance has been spent to encourage Japanese-owned businesses to local in (a) the south-east, (b) the north-east, (c) the north-west, (d) the south-west, (e) Scotland and (f) south Wales for the most recent 10-year period for which figures are available.

Mr. Forth [holding answer 19 January 1989]: Information in respect of the regional development grant schemes spent to encourage Japanese-owned manufacturing companies to locate in the United Kingdom is available only at disproportionate cost. However, the amount of regional selective assistance paid or offered to Japanese manufacturers between January 1979 and December 1988, in the stated regions, is as follows:

Regions	£ millions
(a) South East:	nil
(b) North East:	54·6
(c) North West:	0·3
(d) South West:	1·02
(e) Scotland:	18·3
(f) South Wales:	20·6

NASDIM

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how much time elapsed between the recognition of NASDIM membership on 31 December 1983 as an alternative to licensing by his Department and the establishment of the system in which his Department automatically contacted NASDIM when he received new applications for licensing under the terms of the financial services legislation.

Mr. Newton [holding answer 16 January 1989]: My Department automatically contacted NASDIM over new applications for licences under the Prevention of Fraud (Investments) Act 1958 from 1 January 1985. In the intervening year there was regular although not automatic contact between my Department and NASDIM concerning licence applications.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether the application in 1984 by Barlow Clowes for licensing by his Department was received during that period when his Department did not as a matter of course seek to notify NASDIM of new applicants; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton [holding answer 16 January 1989]: The first papers concerning Barlow Clowes and Partners licence applications were received by my Department on 7 November 1984. Although at that date it was not the Department's practice automatically to consult NASDIM, the Department maintained contact with NASDIM on the progress of the application in the period following that date until licences were issued in October 1985.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement explaining why his Department (a) went for a period without contacting NASDIM as a matter of course about new applications received for licences under the financial services legislation and (b) subsequently decided to establish a system of such contacts.

Mr. Newton [holding answer 16 January 1989]: It was my Department's practice before 1 January 1985 to consult NASDIM when the circumstances of a particular case made it appear desirable to do so. On 1 January 1985, a procedure was adopted whereby NASDIM was consulted automatically. This was because NASDIM's membership and activities had expanded significantly during 1984.

Barlow Clowes

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will call for a full report through the Securities and Investments Board from all self-regulatory organisations into the numbers and names of their members who have been suspended from membership following dealings with Barlow Clowes companies, giving the reasons for those suspensions.

Mr. Newton [holding answer 16 January 1989]: This is a matter for the Securities and Investments Board and the self-regulating organisations.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if, at their next meeting with the Securities and Investments Board, officials of his Department will ask for a report on the scale of the business between Christine Leach, a council Member of FIMBRA, and the Barlow Clowes companies.

Mr. Newton [holding answer 16 January 1989]: This is a matter for the Securities and Investments Board and the self-regulating organisations.

Self-regulatory Organisations

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if at his next meeting with the Securities and Investments Board he will ask for a list of the officers and members of the governing body of that organisation and of all the self-regulatory organisations which it has authorised; and if he will make that information available in the Official Report.

Mr. Newton [holding answer 16 January 1989]: The members of the Securities and Investments Board and its senior management were set out in the board's report, laid before Parliament under section 117(2) of the Financial Services Act on 28 July 1988. Since that date Professor Budd has left the board and Mr. D. Fellows and Mr. G. Ross Russell have been appointed to the board. The arrangements for publishing details of the members of the governing bodies of recognised self-regulating organisations and of the staff of those organisations are matters for the SIB and the organisations concerned.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what information he has concerning the numbers of officers or council members of self-regulatory organisations who have been suspended from membership of those organisations.

Mr. Newton [holding answer 16 January 1989]: This is a matter for the Securities and Investments Board and the self-regulating organisations.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether he will call for a report from the Securities and Investments Board into the different treatment received from self-regulatory organisations by companies or individuals who did business with the Barlow Clowes companies.

Mr. Newton [holding answer 16 January 1989]: This is a matter for the Securities and Investments Board and the self-regulating organisations.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether he will take steps to prevent an individual partner, proprietor or director of a trading entity suspended from membership of a self-regulatory organisation from continuing to operate in the financial services industry through his position as a partner, proprietor or director of a second trading entity licensed by the same or another self-regulatory organisation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton [holding answer 16 January 1989]: It is open to the Securities and Investments Board and the recognised self-regulating organisations to refuse authorisation to, or withdraw from, a business on the grounds of matters concerning a director, partner, controller or employee of that firm. Those matters may include the fact that such an individual has been subject to regulatory action by the same or another regulator or was connected with a firm subject to such action. In addition, the SIB has powers under section 59 of the Financial Services Act to prohibit individuals from being employed in connection with investment businesses by an authorised or exempted person. The way in which these powers are exercised is a matter for the Securities and Investments Board and the self-regulating organisations concerned.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what provision his Department makes to ensure that an individual who invested funds through a financial services company which has subsequently been suspended from membership of a self-regulatory organisation can continue to receive advice about that investment.

Mr. Newton [holding answer 16 January 1989]: It is open to any regulatory body operating under the Financial Services Act, when it suspends a firm regulated by it, to impose conditions concerning services provided to existing clients. Whether such conditions are imposed, and what form they take, are matters for the body concerned to judge according to the circumstances of a particular case.

Financial Services

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether his Department will be represented on the new committee established under the chairmanship of Christine Leach to consider education of FIMBRA members and competence testing in the financial services industry.

Mr. Newton [holding answer 16 January 1989]: No.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether his Department was consulted about the appointment of Christine Leach to the chairmanship of the joint committee of the Chartered Insurance Institute, the College for Financial Planning and the Life Assurance Association to consider education of FIMBRA members and competence testing in the financial services industry.

Mr. Newton [holding answer 16 January 1989]: No.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Armagh Girls' High School

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the royal school, Armagh, will vacate the premises of the former Armagh girls' high school; what his plans are for the future use of these premises; and if he will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: The anticipated date for vacating the premises of the former Armagh girls' high school is June 1990. The southern education and library board has plans to use the vacated premises to accommodate Armagh secondary school.

Foreign Language Teaching

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the total number of Northern Ireland secondary schools in which foreign language teaching is available, showing the number of schools which offer French, German, Italian Spanish and Russian.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information is as follows:

	Number
French	245
German	80
Spanish	73
Italian	16
Russian	3

Roads

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many motor accidents there were in 1988 on the Ballyrainey road, Nowtownards; why the surface of the road is not cleaned; what is its average width; how many 40-foot lorries travel along it as shown by recent traffic surveys; and what proposals he has to improve this roadway.

Mr. Needham: Two "damage only" and one personal injury accident were recorded on the Ballyrainey road during 1988. The road surface is being cleaned as roadside drainage work is completed. The average width of the carriageway is 4·7m and recent traffic surveys have shown that between 19 and 70 40-foot lorries travel along this road on a working day.

The Department of the Environment's roads service is currently carrying out drainage and verge reconstruction work.

Training School (Jordanstown)

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he has taken to ensure that there is no conflict of interest within the Department of the Environment, Northern Ireland regarding an application No. 0175 for planning permission in respect of the proposed residential training school-depot at Jordanstown from the Northern Ireland Fire Authority, for which the transportation section of the Department of the Environment has responsibility; and if he will make available to objectors a copy of the report on the noise levels carried out by Dr. Crawford for the Northern Ireland Fire Authority when this is received by the Department of Environment planning service.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 12 January 1989]: None. There is no conflict of interest within the Department of Environment (Northern Ireland) in respect of a planning application from the Northern Ireland Fire Authority (NIFA) for a residential training school in Jordanstown. This application is being handled in accordance with normal planning procedures.

The release of the report on noise levels to objectors is a matter for NIFA.

Housing Associations

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what capital expenditure has been authorised to be undertaken by each invididual housing association which is currently receiving Government grant aid in Northern Ireland in the eight months ended 30 November 1988: and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 13 January 1989]: The amount of new capital expenditure authorised for each individual housing association in the eight-month period ended 30 November 1988 was:

	£
Abbeyfield (Northern Ireland) Development Society Ltd.	224,565
Ballynafeigh Housing Association Ltd.	68,203
Baptist Union of Ireland Housing Association Ltd.	148
Belfast Community Housing Association Ltd.	15,970
Belfast Improved Houses Ltd	774,120
Ben Madigan Housing Association Ltd.	1,505
Botanic Housng Association Ltd.	22,500
Broadway Housing Association Ltd.	36,000
James Butcher Housing Association (Northern Ireland) Ltd.	79,550
Church of Ireland Housing Association (Northern Ireland) Ltd.	42,900
Clonard Housing Association Ltd.	20,540
Connswater Housing Association Ltd.	18,526
Covenanter Residential Association Ltd.	6,101
Craigavon and District Housing Association Ltd.	559,704
Craigavon Housing Association Ltd.	103,895
Derry Housing Association Ltd.	210,797
Dungannon and District Housing Association Ltd.	960,252
Fold Housing Association	870,624
Gosford Housing Association (Armagh) Ltd.	20,943
Grove Housing Association Ltd.	14,080
Habinteg Housing Association (Ulster) Ltd.	240,000
Hearth	10,122
Latharna Housing Association Ltd.	51,100
Malone Housing Association Ltd.	6,633
Masonic Housing Association (Northern Ireland) Ltd.	15,121
Newington Housng Association (1975) Ltd.	551,433
Nih Housing Association Ltd.	63,593
Open Door Housing Association (Northern Ireland) Ltd.	147,067
Presbyterian Housing Association (Northern Ireland) Ltd.	776,269
Royal British Legion Housing Association (Northern Ireland) Ltd.	141,873
St. Matthews Housing Association Ltd.	10,578
Students Housing Association Co-op Ltd.	3,329,650
Tennent Street District Housing Association Ltd.	39,030
Triangle Women's Housing Association Ltd.	40,940
Ulidia Housing Association Ltd.	59,611
Willowfield Parish Church Housing Association Ltd.	20,341
Woodvale and Shankill Housing Association Ltd.	232,500

Nine registered housing associations did not receive any authorisation for new capital expenditure during this period. Capital expenditure of £31·47 million will be incurred by housing associations during 1988-89. This expenditure is related to projects approved over the last few years, but now under construction, in addition to projects approved during 1988-89.

Fair Employment

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will implement the recommendations contained in paragraphs 15.5 to 15.110 and 15.112 to 15.123 of the Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights' report on fair employment, Cm. 237; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Viggers [holding answer 16 January 1989]: The Fair Employment (Northern Ireland) Bill contains provisions which reflect the main recommendations of the SACHR report on fair employment in Northern Ireland. The Bill's provisions will implement, in whole or in part, well over half the 123 recommendations. In addition, the Government have broadly accepted a number of recommendations whose implementation does not require legislation.

DEFENCE

GEC—Siemens (Plessey Bid)

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if, in considering his evidence on the GEC—Siemens proposed bid for the Plessey company, he will seek assurances from the predator companies that their proposed collaboration with Plessey will not jeopardise his Department's range of choice in defence procurement.

Mr. Sainsbury: As my hon. Friend will appreciate, the proposed bid has been referred to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission. All interested parties, including the MOD, have been asked for their view and we shall, of course, take into account all relevant factors before making our submission to the MMC.

Defence Procurement Contracts

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy with regard to maximising competition in the letting of defence procurement contacts.

Mr. Sainsbury: As part of our commercial approach to defence procurement, we use competitive tendering, wherever practicable, in the letting of contracts. The proportion by value of contracts let on a competitive basis in 1986-87 was 53 per cent., reflecting a sustained improvement on the 38 per cent. of contracts let in this way in 1983-84. Where work has to be placed without the benefit of competition, we negotiate taut contract terms and conditions. On all contracts, whether competitive or not, we also encourage our prime contractors to make maximum use of competition in placing work. On all contracts over £1 million in value we review with the prime contractor his plans for sub-contract competition.

ELF Transmitter Station, Glengarry Forest

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what area, in hectares, will be covered by the ELF transmitter station at Glengarry Forest.

Mr. Sainsbury: This will not be known until the summer of 1989 when the results of surveys to determine the position of the ELF demonstrator aerial will have been evaluated.

SCOTLAND

Beef and Veal

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which Scottish local authorities were in receipt of levy-free beef and veal under the provisions of European Community Council regulation 3929/86; in what quantities; and under what conditions.

Mr. Michael Forsyth The European Community Council regulation 3929/86 allocated quotas of frozen beef and veal for 1987. Those Scottish local authorities which applied to participate in the scheme were allocated the following amounts:

Local authority	Tonnes
Central Regional Council	2·935
Lothian Regional Council	8·009
Strathclyde Regional Council	25·509
Orkney Islands Council	0·204

Local authorities are required to ensure that the produce is used in institutional catering in their areas and that the allocations represent an economic benefit to them. Successful applicants must allow their uptake of quota to be monitored by the member state.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which firms in Scotland are licensed to receive and distribute levy-free beef and veal; and what records are kept as to the ultimate destinations of the carcases or finished products.

Mr. Michael Forsyth Information about the firms licensed to receive and distribute levy free beef and veal is a matter of commercial confidentiality. No records are kept centrally as to ultimate destinations of the carcases or finished products.

Football Matches (Arrests)

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many football-related arrests took place outside grounds during Scottish league and cup matches in the 1987-88 season.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: This information is not available centrally.

Nurse Grading

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give for each health board the movement of nurses from the old grades to the new grades.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 10 January 1989]: Details of the numbers of nurses in each health board assimilated to each of the new grades are given in the tables, in terms of whole-time equivalent.

	Auxiliaries		NNEB			Enrolled Nurse
	A	B	A	B	C	B	C	D	E
Argyll and Clyde	1,542·48	49·81	—	23·04	—	—	353·27	318·60	—
Ayrshire and Arran	881·17	53·40	—	16·34	—	—	298·19	159·18	—
Borders	329·20	10·30	—	2·00	—	—	108·48	52·18	3·72
Dumfries and Galloway	466·12	23·56	—	10·39	—	—	139·53	112·87	—
Fife	894·00	17·40	—	20·69	3·50	—	384·03	309·23	—
Forth Valley	1,133·05	110·00	—	14·13	—	—	141·80	292·83	0·25
Grampian	1,514·02	52·02	2·60	27·55	—	—	596·03	399·78	17·19
Greater Glasgow	3,731·23	175·40	—	85·11	9·00	1·00	872·68	996·17	1·00
Highland	517·59	10·60	—	3·96	—	—	95·16	197·76	40·48
Lanarkshire	1,195·00	22·00	—	31·00	—	—	625·00	502·00	—
Lothian	2,239·40	173·79	—	40·45	7·45	—	361·11	815·25	—
Orkney	35·10	2·00	—	—	—	—	56·82	7·67	—
Shetland	42·58	2·04	—	—	—	—	41·80	5·00	2·00
Tayside	1,535·07	44·33	—	22·50	—	—	624·19	393·97	—
Western Isles	54·77	—	—	—	—	—	28·30	13·20	2·80
Scotland total	16,110·78	746·65	2.60	297·16	19·95	1·00	4,726·39	4,575·79	67·44

	Enrolled Dist Train			Senior Enrolled				Staff Nurse
	C	D	E	C	D	E	F	D	E	F	G
Argyll and Clyde	—	28·15	—	—	33·70	9·20	—	106·93	545·64	75·49	—
Ayrshire and Arran	—	—	—	0·70	16·6	—	—	175·61	449·43	88·67	—
Borders	—	—	—	—	2·00	1·00	—	—25·59	167·84	16·36
Dumfries and Galloway	—	5·42	2·60	2·59	8·00	8·00	—	124·04	260·85	43·24	—
Fife	1·50	41·53	0·50	1·00	13·59	—	—	114·01	518·74	16·66	1·00
Forth Valley	—	12·77	—	—	13·73	—	—	135·51	479·66	2·53	4·00
Grampian	—	33·45	—	—	25·85	2·00	—	455·11	481·35	25·94	—
Greater Glasgow	1·00	73·39	—	2·00	139·83	3·00	—	831·68	1,175·34	18·00	—
Highland	1·88	13·27	—	4·00	6·80	7·00	—	30·47	447·51	44·41	4·15
Lanarkshire	—	—	—	—	2·00	29·00	—	92·00	802·00	17·00	—
Lothian	—	31·30	—	—	13·26	38·90	1·00	367·12	1,700·07	18·96	—
Orkney	—	3·00	—	—	—	—	—	—	15·98	1·18	—
Shetland	—	—	—	—	—	—	8·20	24·15	8·44	—
Tayside	—	8·00	—	—	19·33	33·80	—	121·04	949·07	36·32	—
Western Isles	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	8·19	45·32	3·14	—

	Enrolled Dist Train			Senior Enrolled			Staff Nurse
	C	D	E	C	D	E	F	D	E	F	G
Scotland total	4·38	250·28	3·10	10·29	289·11	131·90	1·00	2,595·50	8,662·95	416·34	9·15

	Staff midwife				Deputy sister			Sister II
	D	E	F	G	E	F	G	F	G	H	I
Argyll and Clyde	—	80·61	61·45	—	—	15·16	1·74	135·92	325·15	15·53	—
Ayshire and Arran	0·56	76·01	62·30	—	—	—	—	109·43	169·80	5·00	—
Borders	—	26·25	—	—	—	—	—	73·31	57·53	—	—
Dumfries and Galloway	—	38·61	0·79	—	—	19·00	—	23·10	108·72	5·00	—
Fife	—	84·03	9·24	—	—	—	—	78·13	157·27	1·00	—
Forth Valley	—	69·55	11·91	—	10·13	—	—	70·99	191·93	—	—
Grampian	—	98·80	54·62	—	136·00	1·0	—	155·27	317·96	6·00	—
Greater Glasgow	3·06	299·93	37·32	—	61·41	9·64	—	1,039·23	387·94	21·93	—
Highland	—	45·55	36·48	—	—	9·10	—	99·33	106·63	2·00	—
Lanarkshire	—	65·00	75·00	—	125·00	3·00	—	106·00	331·0	2·00	—
Lothian	—	126·81	93·42	—	—	31·18	—	156·60	658·25	21·53	1·00
Orkney	—	3·00	—	—	—	—	—	—	10·90	—	—
Shetland	—	6·00	—	—	—	0·80	—	—	25·00	4·00	—
Tayside	—	102·54	40·34	1·00	—	3·13	—	245·92	293·73	5·00	—
Western Isles	—	10·20	6·50	—	—	—	—	7·80	18·30	—	—
Scotland total	3·62	1,132·89	489·37	1·00	332·54	92·01	1·74	2,301·03	3,160·11	88·99	1·00

	Sister II Midwife			District Nurse Sister II			Sister I			Sister I Midwife
	F	G	H	F	G	H	F	G	H	G	H
Arygll and Clyde	6·80	97·24	5·40	—	89·46	1·00	—	4·00	20·27	1·00	—
Ayrshire and Arran	21·41	78·27	—	—	100·09	—	—	—	—	—	—
Borders	8·54	3·00	—	1·67	36·96	—	—	—	—	—	—
Dumfries and Galloway	11·07	17·00	2·00	—	19·03	—	—	—	—	24·60	4·00
Fife	—	54·17	—	1·00	67·98	—	—	—	—	—	—
Forth Valley	22·26	12·83	—	10·93	97·14	—	—	4·00	5·00	—	8·00
Grampian	22·82	57·56	3·00	3·75	131·39	2·39	—	2·00	—	1·00	—
Greater Glasgow	107·64	71·03	1·00	22·53	386·21	2·66	—	1·00	5·00	4·00	—
Highland	9·76	58·60	—	16·73	65·04	—	2·00	2·00	—	7·00	—
Lanarkshire	19·00	67·00	—	3·00	139·00	—	—	1·00	—	—	—
Lothian	3·33	110·52	2·00	—	195·53	—	—	—	2·00	—	—
Orkney	—	4·35	—	1·75	15·06	—	—	2·00	—	—	—
Shetland	3·80	—	—	1·00	—	—	—	—	—	3·80	—
Tayside	6·00	37·80	—	2·54	101·66	1·00	—	1·37	7·53	—	1·00
Western Isles	—	—	—	12·62	29·48	2·00	—	2·00	—	—	—
Scotland Total	242·43	669·37	13·40	77·52	1,474·03	9·05	2·00	19·37	39·80	41·40	13·00

	Health Visitor			Senior Nurse 8			Senior Nurse 8 Midwife			Senior Nurse 7
	G	H	I	G	H	I	G	H	I	G	H	I
Argyll and Clyde	108·10	—	—	2·00	12·00	37·00	—	3·00	7·00	—	1·00	21·00
Ayrshire and Arran	78·20	—	—	1·00	3·00	25·00	—	4·00	2·00	—	—	10·00
Borders	33·09	—	—	—	1·00	5·00	—	—	—	—	9·00	8·00
Dumfries and Galloway	23·86	1·00	1·00	—	13·00	13·00	17·00	4·00	1·00	—	2·00	9·00
Fife	98·19	—	—	—	42·00	—	—	2·00	—	—	11·00	—
Forth Valley	77·56	—	—	3·00	4·00	—	—	—	—	—	11·00	3·00
Grampian	138·09	7·60	—	—	8·00	1·00	—	—	—	—	5·0	49·00
Greater Glasgow	288·92	—	—	15·00	153·53	16·53	2·00	28·00	2·00	1·00	42·00	4·00
Highland	71·00	—	—	2·00	5·50	15·50	—	—	3·00	—	1·50	20·50
Lanarkshire	143·00	1·00	—	7·00	69·00	1·00	1·00	8·00	—	—	20·00	4·00
Lothian	188·78	1·00	—	5·00	61·00	1·00	3·00	13·00	—	—	—	71·00
Orkney	8·00	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	2·00
Shetland	13·00	1·00	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	1·00	1·00
Tayside	104·05	2·00	—	—	69·00	4·00	—	12·00	—	—	8·00	19·00
Western Isles	11·00	—	—	—	—	—	—	0·50	1·00	—	—	2·00
Scotland Total	1,384·84	13·60	1·00	35·00	441·03	119·03	23·00	74·50	16·00	1·00	111·50	223·50

	Senior Nurse / Midwife	Clinical Teacher		Field-work Teacher	Practical Teacher	Tutor		Tutor Midwife
	H	I	G	H	H	H	G	I	I
Argyll and Clyde	—	3·00	—	17·00	12·00	9·00	—	23·00	—
Ayrshire and Arran	—	1·00	2·00	14·00	16·00	14·00	—	13·00	3·00
Borders	—	—	—	6·00	4·00	8·00	—	4·00	—
Dumfries and Galloway	—	—	—	8·00	5·00	6·00	1·00	8·00	1·00
Fife	—	—	—	—	17·00	24·00	—	18·00	—
Forth Valley	—	—	—	15·00	12·00	12·00	—	14·80	4·00
Grampian	—	—	—	32·78	27·00	24·80	—	26·30	4·00
Greater Glasgow	5·00	3·00	—	73·30	36·00	35·97	—	104·36	18·00
Highland	—	1·00	—	15·00	7·00	14·80	—	7·00	—
Lanarkshire	1·00	2·00	—	18·00	16·00	16·00	—	37·00	4·00
Lothian	—	3·00	—	60·60	28·28	31·00	—	69·50	12·00
Orkney	—	—	—	—	1·00	1·00	—	—	—
Shetland	—	—	—	2·00	—	2·00	—	—	—
Tayside	—	—	—	35·00	13·00	10·00	—	28·60	6·00
Western Isles	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
Scotland Total	6·00	13·00	2·00	296·68	194·28	208·57	1·00	353·56	52·00

Post Basic Students

	Enrolled			Staff Nurse			Deputy Sister				Sister II
	C	D	E	D	E	F	D	E	F	G	D	E	F	G
Argyll and Clyde	46·00	—	—	89·00	14·00	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	4·00	—
Ayrshire and Arran	36·00	—	—	81·00	5·00	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	3·00	5·00
Borders	7·00	—	—	2·00	—	2·00	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	4·00
Dumfries and Galloway	14·00	—	—	43·00	6·70	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
Fife	40·00	—	—	90·00	—	—	1·00	3·00	2·00	3·00	2·00	2·00	—	—
Forth Valley	16·00	—	—	97·00	5·00	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	1·00
Grampian	85·00	—	—	131·00	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
Greater Glasgow	244·00	—	—	194·00	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
Highland	3.00	10·00	1·00	24·00	2·00	—	1·00	—	—	—	5·00	—	—	1·00
Lanarkshire	57·00	—	—	38·00	6·00	—	—	—	2·00	—	—	—	—	9·00
Lothian	77·00	—	—	275·00	26·00	7·00	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	9·00
Orkney	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
Shetland	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	2·00
Tayside	62·00	—	—	43·00	11·00	1·00	—	0·80	—	—	—	—	2·00	2·00
Western Isles	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
Scotland Total	687·00	10·00	1·00	1,107·00	75·70	10·00	2·00	3·80	4·00	3·00	7·00	2·00	9·00	33·00

ENERGY

Wave Power

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make it his policy to direct officials at Harwell to instruct their wave energy consultants to reveal cumulative failure rate figures for wave energy devices to the designers of those devices, and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Failure rate data for all wave energy devices assessed were made available to the device teams. A report from 1983 by Yard summarising this data entitled "Review of Yard's Studies of the Reliability and Maintainability of Wave Energy Devices" is available and copies have been placed in both Houses of Parliament.

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) what is his Department's estimate of the failure rate, in terms of kilometre years per fault, of the North of Scotland Hydro-Electric Board electrical cable crossing the Pentland Firth from Caithness to Orkney;

(2) what is his Department's estimates for the failure rate, in terms of kilometre years per fault, of the rigid sea bed connections assessed by wave energy consultants in their series of reports to his Department;

(3) if his Department has ever consulted the North of Scotland Hydro-Electric Board about the failure rates of sea bed cables; and what steps he has taken to assess whether the rates quoted by his Department's consultants, Rendel, Palmer and Tritton, are realistic.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I am informed that various data were collected by the wave energy consultants on reliability of cables and related components from the North of Scotland Hydro-Electric Board and other sources in their assessment of large-scale wave energy. Typical failure rates for conventional submarine power cables were in the range 0·3-1·0 per 100 km per year. These data were not directly used in the estimation of the reliability of large scale wave energy power collection and transmission systems because of the complex nature of the systems assessed. It was accepted however that loss in availability due to transmission systems unreliability was unlikely to be large and 6 per cent. for fixed devices and 9 per cent. for floating devices were finally assumed based on previous work and engineering judgments of the independent consultants.

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on the outcome of discussions between his officials and the costing department of the civil engineering company Whessoe concerning the application of parametric costing techniques to the prediction of the capital cost of offshore wave power devices; and what conclusions have been reached as to why his Department's estimate was greater than that calculated by Whessoe.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The parametric costing technique is a useful tool in assisting the assessment of the costs of the various renewable energy technologies including wave energy. The total cost estimated by parametric techniques for a component when fully integrated into a system will inevitably be higher than the cost of that single component estimated by a company such as Whessoe. Systems costs include such factors as system design, installation, commissioning, quality assurance and project management and these extra costs have to be added to the "off the shelf" component cost in order to derive the full system cost used in the parametric method of costing.

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if the decision to close the offshore wave energy programme was made unanimously by the members of the Advisory Council on Research and Development.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The collectively agreed view of the Advisory Council on Research and Development on the wave energy programme and other renewable energy sources was made availalbe to the Libraries of both Houses on 27 April 1982.

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will initiate a reassessment of the technical quality of the advice which led to the closure of the first offshore wave programme.

Mr. Michael Spicer: A major input to the discussion in 1982 by the Advisory Council on Research and Development of the renewable energy programme was a strategic review by the chief scientist's group at ETSU. This review was subsequently published as ETSU R13. Information and advice on wave energy for the review was supplied by the device teams. Subsequent work and a report by consultants confirmed that large offshore wave energy was unlikely to be cost effective. I am satisfied that advice on the wave energy programme was the best available at that time and no useful purpose would be served by reviewing the decision procedure then used.

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will establish an inquiry to determine whether the programe for wave energy of the energy technology support unit, made all the relevant papers on the methods of reliability calculation written by Professor Stephen Salter available to his Department's wave energy steering committee.

Mr. Michael Spicer: All relevant papers on reliability calculations by Professor Salter were circulated to members of the wave energy steering committee. Indeed in 1984, Professor Salter gave a presentation to that committee putting the Edinburgh university device team's case for the duck device, and a summary of his presentation including such matters as availability and reliability was circulated to the committee members after the meeting.

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will take steps to ensure that the memorandum by Dr. Roy Taylor of the energy technology support unit dated 25 April 1985, relating to the costs of an offshore wave device is communicated to the appropriate Advisory Council on Research and Development committee.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The memorandum for Dr Roy Taylor dated 25 April 1985 was a partial calculation in support of other work which was made available to the wave energy steering group and summarised in "Wave Energy—The Department of Energy's R&D Programme 1974-1983", published as ETSU R.26 in 1985.

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list the assignments given to Mr. Peter Davies subsequent to his work as manager of the wave energy programme.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Mr. Peter Davies was the programme manager of the electricity producing renewable technologies at the Department's energy technology support unit. This included the technologies of wind, hydro, and wave energy. Mr. Davies was appointed to ETSU after the decision to close the large-scale wave energy programme was made and was charged with the difficult job of running down the programme and completing the various contracts satisfactorily.

In 1985, Mr. Davies was transferred to the northern division of the UKAEA at Risley. Since that time his work has included leading the authority inquiry team for the European demonstration reprocessing plant public inquiry. He is currently head of the technical policy division in the UKAEA Risley technical services at Risley.

Departmental Staff (Pay)

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is the number of staff in his Department, by grade, in receipt of local pay additions outside London and the south-east economic planning region; what are the different amounts paid to staff, by grade; whether this figure varies due to location; what qualifying period of scale-related criteria is used; and whether this varies by location.

Mr. Parkinson: None.

Coal Prices

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether the cost of pensions paid to disabled ex-miners plays any part in British Coal's determinations over the price of coal.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The price of coal sold by British Coal is a commercial matter for the corporation.

Oil Installations (Inspectors)

Mr. Flannery: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how many times petroleum engineering directorate inspectors have arrived unannounced at a heliport or airport in order to travel offshore for an unannounced inspection of oil installations.

Mr. Parkinson: A short period of notice is normally given by my inspectors when they intend to visit offshore installations.

Mr. Flannery: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how many times petroleum engineering directorate inspectors have carried out unannounced inspections of offshore oil installations.

Mr. Parkinson: It is impossible for an inspector to arrive on an offshore installation unannounced. During 1988, however, my inspectors carried out a total of four inspections of offshore installations when the installation to be visited was notified only when the inspector checked in for the helicopter flight.

Petroleum Engineering Directorate (Inspectors)

Mr. Flannery: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how many of the existing inspectors in the petroleum engineering directorate have had previous experience working offshore in the employment of an oil company; and what was the duration of the experience for each inspector.

Mr. Parkinson: Of my Department's 32 inspectors 10 were previously employed by oil companies, the majority of whom have had experience of working offshore. Records are not kept of the duration of offshore experience for each inspector.

High Moor Colliery (Accident)

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether he will send a message of thanks to the men and management of High Moor colliery for their response to the accident that occurred on Friday 13 January.

Mr. Parkinson: I sent a message on the day of the accident to the chairman of British Coal. I should like to take this further opportunity to express my admiration of the efforts of all those involved in the rescue operation.

WALES

Water Act 1973

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many members of the Water Space Amenity Council, other than the chairman of the Welsh water authority, have been appointed by him under section 23(1) of the Water Act 1973 since the enactment of that Act.

Mr. Peter Walker: None. This section has been repealed by the Water Act 1983.

Local Pay Additions

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the number of staff in his Department by grade, in receipt of local pay additions outside London and the south-east economic planning region; what are the different amounts paid to staff, by grade; whether this varies due to location; what qualifying period of scale-related criteria is used; and whether this varies by location.

Mr. Peter Walker: None.

Welsh Language Teaching

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what action has been taken by his Department to increase the number of teachers of Welsh in order that the provisions of the national curriculum can be fulfilled; and if he will make a statment.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: A quantification of the future requirement for Welsh language teachers is being prepared. Meetings have been held with local education authority representatives to explore the scale and nature of retraining that will be needed. Discussions are also taking place with the higher education sector about the provision of suitable in-service training courses for serving teachers to equip them to teach Welsh as a second language. The Welsh Office is also liaising closely with the Curriculum Council for Wales about the training needs created by the introduction of the national curriculum.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he and the Welsh working party have received about the inclusion of Welsh as a foundation subject in the national curriculum by (a) 1990 and (b) 1992; and how many schools in each local education authority and parliamentary constituency have indicated that they will seek exemption.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The Education Reform Act make Welsh a foundation subject in the national curriculum in Wales. Around 100 responses to the interim report of the Welsh working group have been received to date and more are still coming in. The majority have addressed the question of timing of implementation, but only a small minority have indicated that they will consider seeking exemptions.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what estimates he has as to the additional cost of providing sufficient teachers of Welsh to enable the requirements of the national curriculum to be implemented in every school in Wales by (a) 1990 and (b) 1992;

(2) what estimates he has as to the additional number of teachers of Welsh who would be needed if the national curriculum requirements for the teaching of Welsh were to be implemented in every school without exemptions by (a) 1990 and (b) 1992.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: We do not expect any significant increase in the overall number of teachers needed to deliver the national curriculum. In the case of Welsh the results of the primary and secondary staffing surveys suggest that there are sufficient teachers in Wales as a whole; but there are shortages in certain parts of Wales and a programme of in-service teacher training will be necessary. The Department is currently considering detailed teacher requirements and will be conducting a survey of secondary staff shortly, which will help establish more precise estimates of numbers and costs.

ENVIRONMENT

Sewerage

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the sewage works in South Yorkshire that are to be allowed relaxation in breaching the legal limits on effluent set by him; what is the time scale for this relaxation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: We have confirmed that applications for temporary variations in consent conditions will continue to be considered in cases where improvements to sub-standard sewage treatment works are in hand or are programmed for completion by March 1992. Applications will be considered over the coming months and it is not, therefore, possible to indicate at this stage in which cases they will be approved.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list by water authority the public funds being used to improve the sewerage system prior to the proposed privatisation of the water industry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: Improvements to water authorities' sewerage and sewage treatment works are generally financed by charges and borrowing. In a small number of cases, this investment is assisted by EC funding. Grants are also available under the Rural Water Supplies and Sewerage Acts 1944-1971 towards the first-time provision of mains water and sewerage in rural areas and under the Industrial Development Act 1982 in assisted areas. It is not possible, however, to say to what extent authorities will be financed in these ways prior to privatisation.

Notts County Football Club

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has received an invitation to visit Notts County football club at Meadow lane.

Mr. Moynihan: Notts County football club has invited me to attend a match at Meadow lane and I hope to take up the invitation this season or early in the 1989-90 season.

Council House Sales

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many local authority houses sold to tenants under the right-to-buy legislation have subsequently been found to be defective.

Mr. Trippier: We know that some 31,000 ex-public sector properties, of types designated under the housing defects legislation, were sold before the defects became generally known; and that those owners are therefore likely to be eligible for assistance, under that scheme. If the hon. Member has a specific point in mind, perhaps he could write to me.

Radioactivity

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if there have been any occasions since May 1979 when information on radioactivity released from nuclear facilities has been withheld for reasons of national interest.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Radioactive Substances Act 1960 provides in section 8(5)(b) for restriction of knowledge of an authorisation for disposal of radioactive waste should the Minister or Ministers concerned consider it necessary for reasons of national security. It is not Government policy to reveal the existence of any such restricted authorisation.

Rating Reform

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to undertake (a) newspaper, (b) radio or (c) television advertising at the time when he plans that most community charges registration officers will be undertaking a canvass in order to construct a register; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ridley: I have no plans to undertake paid advertising on television or radio at the time of canvassing to compile the registers. My Department will, however, commission some newspaper advertising to draw attention to the information leaflet which we intend to send to all households in England in May, to coincide with canvassing.

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has received any complaints about alleged, factual inaccuracies or misleading statements in "You and the Community Charge"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ridley: We have received a very positive response to the booklet, reflected in the high level of demand. We have received one representation on a few very detailed points.

Football Clubs (Membership Scheme)

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has any plans to designate Berwick Rangers football club under the football identity card scheme.

Mr. Moynihan: No.

Water

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has on the source of funding for the series of television commercials currently being made for the water industry.

Mr. Ridley [holding answer 19 January 1989]: I understand that the advertisements are being paid for by the Water Authorities Association out of funds provided by the individual water authorities.

Docklands

Ms. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the total amount of capital allowances claimed so far in the Isle of Dogs enterprise zone.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I have been asked to reply.

Information on expenditure qualifying for enterprise zone allowances in the Isle of Dogs up to 1985-86 is given in the HMSO publication "Enterprise Zone Information 1985-86 Great Britain". Some further information will be published shortly in "Enterprise Zone Information 1986-87 Great Britain", but commercial confidence will preclude giving the full details.

Ms. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many of the jobs lost in Docklands since 1981 were held by residents of Tower Hamlets, Southwark, Newham, Lewisham and Greenwich; (2) if he will give an estimate of the proportion of construction jobs in the London Docklands Development Corporation area in 1988 that are held by residents of Tower Hamlets, Southwark, Newham, Lewisham and Greenwich; (3) how many of the newly created jobs in the London Docklands Development Corporation area since 1981 have been taken by (i) women, (ii) people from ethnic minority groups and (iii) people who were previously unemployed; and how many are part-time jobs.

Mr. Trippier: This information is not collected, or could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Canary Wharf

Ms. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the total amount of capital allowances that the developers of Canary wharf are eligible to claim.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I have been asked to reply.

No information on expenditure is yet available for this development but commercial confidentiality will almost certainly preclude publication of figures.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prisons

Mr. Irving: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was (a) the original estimated cost and (b) the actual cost of Wayland, Stocken, Thorn Cross, Full Sutton, Littlehey, Mount, Swaleside and Garth prisons.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The information requested is set out in the table. Figures for original estimated construction cost vary from establishment to establishment in the light of location, individual requirements and the date of assessment. No uprating of these figures for inflation has been made. By contrast, actual costs take account of inflation, as well as changes in price during the course of the contract, changes in content, or circumstances such as bad weather which may cause delay.

Prison	Original Estimated Cost £ millions	Actual Cost £ millions
Wayland	15·10	22·60
Stocken	11·92	13·16
Thorn Cross	7·80	11·56
Full Sutton	17·80	29·85
Littlehey	12·96	29·80
Mount	17·60	24·90
Swaleside	21·73	27·34
Garth	20·70	41·15

Mr. Irving: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the estimated cost of Brinsford, Lindholme II, Whitemoor, Bullingdon, Woolwich, Lancaster Farms, Milton Keynes, Swaleside II, Banstead, Ashford, Doncaster, Hewell Grange, Teesside, Kirkham and Rochdale prisons.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The information requested is set out in tables A and B. Table A refers to those projects where the main construction contract has been let and where it is thus possible to provide a reasonably accurate estimate of costs. Table B relates to projects where the main construction contract has yet to be let and consequently the estimated costs shown are liable to fluctuate depending on the price levels pertaining at the time the contract is let. The cost estimates in both tables which are at current 1988-89 price levels include, where appropriate, VAT and site purchase costs and are subject to adjustment to reflect agreed cost increases in the construction industry.

Table A

Prison	Current estimated cost (£ million)
Brinsford	27·03
Lindholme II	40·98
Whitemoor	33·80
Bullingdon	45·50
Woolwich	88·90
Milton Keynes	74·50

Table B

Prison	Current estimated cost (£ million)
Lancaster Farms	45·00
Swaleside II	65·00
High Down (Banstead)	75·00
Doncaster	65·00
Hewell Grange	55·00
Holme House Farm (Teesside)	45·00

Ashford, Kirkham and Rochdale—These projects are at an early stage of planning and it is not possible to estimate with accuracy overall project costs. However, as these projects are to be modelled on the new prison design brief they are likely at current price levels (excluding any site purchase costs) to cost in the region of £55-60 million each.

Missing Persons

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the estimated number of missing persons under 18 years of age.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to a question from the hon. and learned Member for Leicester, West (Mr. Janner) on 5 December 1988 at column 30.

Criminal Injuries (Compensation)

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average current delay in dealing with criminal injuries compensation claims.

Mr. John Patten: Information in this form is not available, but the percentage of cases resolved by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board within certain periods of registration is shown in paragraph 6 of its latest annual report (Cm. 536), copies of which are in the Library.

The figures for 1987-88 are:

	Per cent.
Up to three months	1·5
Three to six months	2·6
Six to nine months	6·7
Nine to 12 months	20·0
Over 12 months	69·2

Metropolitan Police (Property)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the number of properties in the Greater London area owned by the Metropolitan police which are empty; how many are surplus to requirements; how many are being repaired; how many are planned to be sold; how many are leased to local councils, giving the figures by London borough; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that on 1 January 1989 there were 409 empty properties owned by the Metropolitan police in the Metropolitan police district. Of these, 102 were surplus to requirements and are planned to be sold. The remaining 307 are either being repaired or are due for repair.

Fifteen other properties are leased by the Metropolitan police to London borough councils as follows:

	Number
Bromley	1
Greenwich	1
Harrow	8
Kingston upon Thames	2
Sutton	2
Wandsworth	1

Wandsworth Prison (Rule 43)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the number of inmates on rule 43 in Wandsworth prison on 1 January.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The number was 391.

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many times the forensic science service has refused to carry out tests on samples and tissue from suspected AIDS sufferers.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: None.

Ayten Mete

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will give full details of the reasons for the refusal of the immigration officer to allow Ayten Mete (EAT/RLE/135/89) from Turkey to visit her relatives;

(2) if he wil instruct the immigration officer to reconsider his refusal to allow Ayten Mete to visit her relatives in Britain;

(3) if he will make a statement about the immigration officer's refusal to allow Ayten Mete from Turkey to visit her relatives in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Renton: Ayten Mete was refused entry at Gatwick in accordance with the immigration rules because the immigration officer was not satisfied that she was genuinely seeking entry for the period of her visit as stated by her. It will be open to her to exercise her right of appeal abroad.

Following the introduction on 3 January of new guidelines on the handling of representations by right hon. and hon. Members in immigration cases which were fully debated in this House on 10 November, I am not prepared to instruct the immigration officer to reconsider his decision, nor to take any other action not in accordance with those guidelines.

Mr. Ishan Barbouti

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the residential status in the United Kingdom of Mr. Ishan Barbouti.

Mr. Renton: He has refugee status and has been settled here with no conditions attached to his stay since 1984.

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he is in possession of the contract for the building of a pharmaceutical plant at Rabta, Libya lodged by Mr. Ishan Barbouti with his Department along with an application for citizenship in June 1987.

Mr. Renton: No.

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what inquiries he has received from the Government of the Federal Republic of Germany in relation to Mr. Ishan Barbouti.

Mr. Renton: None.

Passengers (Embarkation Cards)

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department under what powers he requires passengers leaving the United Kingdom to complete embarkation cards; what questions passengers are required to answer; what penalties are imposed on those passengers who refuse to answer all or any of the questions; what officials issue and collect these cards; and how the information collected is stored.

Mr. Renton: The power to require passengers embarking in the United Kingdom to produce an embarkation card is contained in paragraph 5 of schedule 2 to the Immigration Act 1971, as applied by the Immigration (Landing and Embarkation Cards) Order 1975. The embarkation card asks passengers to give their full name, sex, date and place of birth, nationality, occupation, address in the United Kingdom and passport number. Immigration officers require certain passengers to produce to them completed cards upon embarkation. To this end, an officer may issue a card to a passenger on his arrival in the United Kingdom; cards are also available from other sources such as carrying companies. A person who, without reasonable excuse, fails to complete and produce an embarkation card if so required is liable on conviction to a fine of up to £1,000, or to imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. The information contained on cards filled in by passengers in controlled categories is initially stored on computer and is retained on microfiche.

Citizenship

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department why he does not allow those who assist applicants to apply for British citizenship also to act as referees for their application; when this ruling was reached; and what action was taken to advise applicants and their representatives of the ruling.

Mr. Renton: It has always been a requirement that referees should be independent of the applicant. Solicitors and agents are excluded. This is explained in the guide given, with the applications form, to all applicants for naturalisation.

Drink-driving

Mr. Hind: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he has reviewed the continuing need for the non-statutory blood or urine option in drink-drive cases; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: The average take-up rate for the non-statutory option fell from 36 per cent. in April 1984 to around 14 per cent. by the end of 1985, and has remained at about that level ever since. The last full year for which statistics are available is 1986, when almost 8,000 motorists exercised the non-statutory option. Of these, only some 20 or so cases have been identified where the analysis of the blood or urine specimen produced a reading below the prescribed limit. This can largely be attributed to delays between providing the breath and blood or urine samples. As Sir William Paton found in his report on the monitoring of evidential breath testing machines in 1986, there is nothing to suggest that evidential breath testing machines are not reliable. I have therefore decided that the non-statutory option should be discontinued. This should allow significant savings in police costs.

Attacks on Women

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many crimes of (a) rape, (b) sexual harassment of women and (c) sexual attacks on women have been committed in the county of South Yorkshire during 1987 and 1988 to date; on how many such occasions the victims were attended to by a woman police surgeon; and if he has any plans to increase the number of women police surgeons employed.

Mr. John Patten [holding answer 19 January 1989]: There is no legal offence of sexual harassment; the available information on recorded sexual offences is given in the following table. Such information is published annually in table 3.1 of "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales", supplementary tables, volume 3, a copy of which is in the Library. I understand from the South Yorkshire police that 22 victims in 1987 and 11 victims in 1988 were attended by women police surgeons. The employment of civilian staff is a matter for individual chief officers of police.

Certain sexual offences recorded by the police in South Yorkshire

Number

Offence	1987	1988[1]
Rape	73	51
Indecent assault on a female	357	272

[1] January to September.

Football Matches (Arrests)

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will detail the total number of arrests within English and Welsh grounds during league and cup matches as a percentage of total attendances;

(2) if he will detail the arrests which took place at English and Welsh football matches during 1987-88 on the same basis as in the reply of the Secretary of State for Scotland to the hon. Member for Cunninghame, North (Mr. Wilson) of 13 January, Official Report, columns 785-86;

(3) if he will arrange for the statistics of arrests within English and Welsh football grounds to be compiled on the same basis as those for Scotland.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 19 January 1989]: The available figures for arrests at matches in England and Wales do not distinguish between those made in and near the grounds; and they relate only to Football League matches. For these I refer the hon. Member to the reply by my hon. Friend the Minister for Sport on 19 December to a question from the hon. Member for Derbyshire, North-East (Mr. Barnes) at columns 55-58. The total number of arrests as a percentage of those attending Football League matches in England and Wales during the 1987-88 season was 0·03. I do not propose to ask the Association of Chief Police Officers to change the basis of their collection of statistics. It would result in the loss of comparative data for earlier seasons and exclude arrests directly connected with matches where they did not occur within the confines of grounds.

THE ARTS

Departmental Staff

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Minister for the Arts what is the number of staff in his office, by grade, in receipt of local pay additions outside London and the south-east economic planning region; what are the different amounts paid to staff by grade; whether this figure varies due to location; what qualifying period of scale-related criteria is used; and whether this varies by location.

Mr. Luce: None. The Office of Arts and Libraries is located in central London.

Royal Opera House

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Minister for the Arts what was the average subsidy per individual attending performances at the royal opera house, Covent Garden, during 1988.

Mr. Luce: The overall average subsidy per capita was £21·81 in the financial year 1987-88. The Royal Opera gave 147 performances to a total audience of 284,000 at an average subsidy per capita of £22·94. The Royal Ballet gave 113 performances to a total audience of 203,000 at an average subsidy per capita of £20·25.

HEALTH

Medical Negligence and Accidents

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he plans to meet representatives of the British Medical Association to discuss the treatment of victims of medical accidents and medical negligence.

Mr. Mellor: They have not requested such a meeting.

Silicosis

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the incidence of silicosis per 1,000 population in (a) County Durham, (b) west midlands and (c) Surrey in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Freeman: Information about the incidence of silicosis is not available centrally. Silicosis is not separately identified within hospital in-patient inquiry data but is included under pneumoconiosis. In 1985 the estimated number of in-patient cases treated in NHS hospitals with a main diagnosis of pneumoconiosis was 640. Sample numbers are too small for reliable estimates to be made below national level.

The annual report of the Health and Safety Commission in its tables of cases of occupational diseases awarded benefit includes figures on those suffering from pneumoconiosis. A copy of the report is in the Library.

NHS Technical Staff

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he has any plans to review the salaries of technical staff working within the National Health Service.

Mr. Mellor: The pay of technical staff is a matter for negotiation in the professional and technical staffs B Whitley council. We understand that the management side of the council is currently reviewing the grade structures of a number of technical staff groups.

Listeria

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research he has commissioned on the increase in listeriosis.

Mr. Freeman: The public health laboratory service is conducting a national survey of retailed and National Health Service cooked chilled food for the presence of listeria, and is undertaking detailed studies to assess the role of contaminated food in causing human cases of listeriosis. In addition, the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food have commissioned urgent research into areas such as the cooking conditions required to kill listeria monocytogenes in poultry meat, and the physical aspects of microwave cooking.

As soon as the appropriate scientific evidence is available from these and other outside studies, we will consider together with MAFF whether any further action is required.

General Practitioners (London)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general practitioners there are in each of the regional health authorities covering Greater London.

Mr. Mellor: The information requested is collected for family practitioner committees, which are not necessarily conterminous with health authority boundaries, and aggregated by region. Figures for the Thames regions at 1 October 1987 are as follows:

Number of unrestricted general medical practitioners

	Number
South-East Thames	1,933
South West Thames	1,537
North East Thames	1,992
North West Thames	1,971

Exhaust Fumes

Mr. Bidwell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he has any estimate of National Health Service costs due to lung disease cases attributable to inhaling exhaust fumes.

Mr. Freeman: Information on cases of lung disease resulting from inhalation of exhaust fumes is not collected centrally; no estimate of costs is therefore available.

Radiation

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many representations he has received since the publication of the report on the incident in radiotherapy department at the Royal Devon and Exeter hospital and the implementation of the recommendations contained in it concerning (a) the grading of the post of the head of department, (b) the number of physicists employed and (c) levels of supervision required to maintain safety; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: None. It is for Exeter health authority to make appropriate arrangements for the effective management of the radiotherapy department at the Royal Devon and Exeter hospital.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many oral parliamentary questions he has answered by written reply because the question was not reached at Question Time, for the most recent year for which figures are available.

Mr. Mellor: Since it was created in July 1988 the Department of Health has answered oral questions on two occasions. Up to the end of 1988, 161 oral questions were tabled to the Secretary of State for Health, of which 137 received a written reply.

Prior to the division of the Department of Health and Social Security, a total of 950 oral questions were tabled to the Secretary of State for Social Services during the 1987-88 Session. Of these, 822 received a written reply.

These figures do not include oral questions which were subsequently withdrawn, unstarred or transferred to other Departments.

Oswestry District Hospital

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether there are any proposals to sell the Oswestry district hospital.

Mr. Freeman: We understand that officers of Shropshire health authority have been approached by a number of parties interested in purchasing the Oswestry district hospital when it is closed. Disposal of the site is a matter for the district and regional health authorities. The hon. Member may wish to write to the chairman of Shropshire health authority for further information.

Abortions

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many private sector clinics and hospitals performing late abortions were inspected to ensure that they have immediate access to resuscitation equipment in the event that the child is born alive in each year since 1967; and how many in each year were found to be contravening this requirement;

(2) how many National Health Service clinics and hospitals performing late abortions were inspected, to ensure that they have immediate access to resuscitation equipment in the event that the child is born alive, in each year since 1967; and how many in each year were found to be contravening this requirement.

Mr. Freeman: Inspection of equipment within NHS premises is a matter for individual health authorities.

In the private sector formal requirements that resuscitation equipment should be available on the premises were introduced in 1976 and since that time places approved to perform late abortions have received at least one visit a year from departmental medical and nursing officers in which its availability is monitored. We have no record of any contravention of this requirement.

In addition, health authorities have a statutory duty under the Nursing Homes and Mental Nursing Homes Regulations 1984 to inspect private hospitals not less than twice in every period of 12 months to ensure that they provide and maintain adequate medical, surgical and nursing equipment.

AIDS

Mr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he has yet received the second report on AIDS and drug misuse from the Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The council submitted its report on 10 January. We intend to publish the report quickly and make copies widely available.

Thalassaemia

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money is given by his Department for research into the prevention and treatment of thalassaemia.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 16 January 1989]: The Department is not directly funding research into the prevention and treatment of thalassaemia.

The main agency through which the Government support medical and related biological research is the Medical Research Council (MRC), which receives a grant-in-aid from the Department of Education and Science. I understand that the MRC is funding a number of research projects into the prevention and treatment of thalassaemia.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Personal Allowances

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the rise in real terms of the married man's personal allowance during the period 1974 to 1979, and the period 1980 to 1988.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Between 1973-74 and 1978-79, the married man's income tax allowance fell, in real terms, by just over 5 per cent. Since then it has been increased by almost 28 per cent. The real increase since 1979-80 has been 25 per cent.

Personal Taxation

Mr. Allen: To as the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much a person on average earnings pays as a proportion of his total income in all direct and indirect taxes including value-added tax and national insurance.

Mr. Norman Lamont: It is estimated that a married man on average earnings with no children currently pays 39.5 per cent. of his earnings in income tax, national insurance contributions and indirect taxes (excluding local authority rates).

Budget (Representations)

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received in advance of the Budget.

Mr. Norman Lamont: My right hon. Friend has received a large number of representations covering a variety of proposals.

Heavy Fuels Duty

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total revenue received, in the last year for which figures are available, from the duty on heavy fuels used in power stations.

Mr. Lilley: I regret that the information is not readily available.

Exchange Rate Policy

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the latest exchange rate policy.

Mr. Lilley: The Government's policy is unchanged. The need to reduce inflation is paramount and a firm exchange rate is essential to achieve this objective.

Inflation

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many countries in the European Community have a lower rate of inflation than the current rate in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Lilley: The latest available figures suggest that nine European Community countries have a lower rate of inflation than the current rate in the United Kingdom.

European Monetary System

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the main advantage to the United Kingdom of joining the exchange rate mechanism of the European monetary system.

Mr. Lilley: The United Kingdom will join the exchange rate mechanism of the European monetary system when the Government consider that the time is right and because of the advantages that it will bring to the conduct of anti-inflationary policy.

Mortgage Repayments

Mr. Wray: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will urgently take steps to assist first-time home buyers affected by high interest rates on their mortgage repayments.

Mr. Lilley: No.

Household Savings Ratio

Mr. Butler: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the savings ratio in the household sector.

Mr. Lilley: The household sector saving ratio has fallen in recent years. However, this has been largely offset by rises in saving by companies and the public sector, leaving total national savings broadly unchanged as a share of gross domestic product. Rises in interest rates in recent months will encourage more saving and less borrowing by households.

Investment

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the level of investment in the economy during the last 12 months.

Mr. Lilley: In 1988 total investment was forecast in the Autumn Statement to grow by 12 per cent.

Taxation (Restrictions)

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the cost in 1988-89 and 1989-90 of restricting (a) personal allowances and (b) mortgage interest tax relief to the standard rate of tax.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Sunderland, North (Mr. Clay) on 22 December 1988 at column 425.

Canary Wharf

Mr. Soley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the total tax allowances for which the developers of the Canary wharf scheme in London docklands are eligible.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The precise tax treatment will depend on individual circumstances. A developer who builds property for sale incurs his expenditure on revenue account and is entitled to relief under the normal business expense rules for costs incurred wholly and exclusively for the purposes of his trade. A special 100 per cent. initial allowance is available for construction costs of business buildings within an enterprise zone which are incurred on capital account.

Ishan Barbouti

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has any plans to prosecute Mr. Ishan Barbouti for breach of export controls in relation to his activities in constructing a plant at Rabta, Libya, alleged to be for the manufacture of chemical weapons.

Mr. Lilley: Customs have no evidence of any breach of United Kingdom export controls to support proceedings against Mr. Ishan Barbouti.

Capital Gains Tax

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the reduction in annual liability to (a) capital gains tax and (b) capital transfer tax in 1988-89 and 1989-90 as against the 1978-79 indexed regime, specifying in each case the total and average reduction per taxpayer as well as the number of taxpayers in each year.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 16 January 1989]: The information requested is given in the table:

		Capital gains tax	Capital transfer tax/ Inheritance Tax
Reduction, compared with indexed 1978-79 regime, in:
Total liability (£m):	1988-89	1,250	610
	1989-90	1,150	670
Average liability1:	1988-89	1,450	7,200
	1989-90	1,500	7,700
Taxpayer numbers (thousands)
1978-79 indexed regime:	1988-89	850	85
	1989-90	760	87
Present regime:	1988-89	155	25
	1989-90	145	26

[1] The reduction in the average liability is calculated using the numbers of taxpayers under the 1978-79 indexed regime.

The figures for capital gains tax exclude capital gains realised by companies and taxed within corporation tax. The figures for 1989-90 for the "present regime" assume the same tax structure as in 1988-89 except for indexation of allowances. For each tax, the 1988-89 and 1989-90 tax bases are taken as given. It is not possible to determine to what extent changes to the taxes between 1978 79 and the present may have affected the levels of transfers and disposals.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Housing Benefit

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the additional cost to the housing benefit scheme of the changes to Rent Acts which have recently come into effect.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The public expenditure White Paper, which will be published shortly, will as in previous years set out our working assumptions about the rent levels of people receiving housing benefit. These will take account of a number of factors including the potential effects of the provisions of the Housing Act 1988.

Family Credit

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the number and proportions of claimants of family income supplement who were one and two-parent families; and if he will give the equivalent data for the family credit.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: In April 1987, the latest date for which information is available, approximately 92,000 (41·8 per cent.) one-parent families and 128,000 (58·2 per cent.) two-parent families received family income supplement. The only similar information available for family credit is for 97 per cent. of families and, of them, for those where the parent is an employee. At the end of November 1988 there were approximately 98,000 (42·1 per cent.) one-parent families and 135,000 (57·9 per cent.) two-parent families. There were a further 20,000 families where the parent was self-employed, but no breakdown of this figure is available between one and two-parent families.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Rhizomania

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions have taken place between his Department and the rights of way review committee, Ramblers Association and others about changes to plant health orders which may lead to temporary closure of footpaths where rhizomania is found.

Mr. Ryder: My officials have attended meetings of the rights of way review committee and my noble Friend has been in correspondence with its chairman, my hon. Friend the Member for Saffron Walden (Mr. Haselhurst), about this matter. Public access to any premises declared infected with rhizomania has to be restricted in order to prevent the spread of this serious disease. We accept that it is desirable to use powers under plant health legislation to restrict access and we intend to make appropriate provision shortly.

Potato Marketing Board

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list by percentage sum of money the four main elements in the Potato Marketing Board's annual costs in each year since 1970.

Mr. MacGregor: This information can be derived from the board's annual reports.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proposals he had for improving the efficiency and organisation of the Potato Marketing Board; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor: Responsibility for efficiency and organisation rests primarily with the Potato Marketing Board itself. However, some of the replies to the Government's recent consultation paper on future potato market policy address these topics, and are currently being considered along with other comments.

Eggs

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on his scheme to assist egg producers.

Mr. Ryder: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given yesterday by my right hon. Frend to my hon. Friend the Member for Daventry (Mr. Boswell) at column 473.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Falkland Islands Ferry

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what were the circumstances surrounding the incident involving the Falkland Islands ferry on Monday 16 January; if he will consider the suspension of service until a proper agreement on it can be reached; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: The Indiana I is a Bahamian-registered cargo vessel which entered Montevideo on 16 January on commercial business with a cargo from the Falkland Islands. A small number of Argentine nationals staged a demonstration. We understand that the Indiana I is operated, and conducts her business, in accordance with normal shipping law and practice. She is not operating a regular ferry service and no separate agreement has been entered into or is required. While we have no standing in the matter, we welcome any normalisation of links between the Falkland Islands and the south American mainland.

Kayed Tameize

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made to the Palestine Liberation Organisation about its assassination of Kayed Tameize.

Mr. Waldegrave: None.

Mayor of Bethlehem

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made to the Palestine Liberation Organisation about its threat to assassinate the mayor of Bethlehem.

Mr. Waldegrave: None.

Boris and Galina Lifshitz

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made to the Soviet authorities about Boris and Galina Lifshitz who first applied for an exit visa in 1979.

Mr. Waldegrave: We can see no justification for the Soviet authorities' continued refusal to allow Boris and Galina Lifshitz to emigrate. Her Majesty's embassy in Moscow raised the case with the Russians in December and we will be raising it again at the UK-USSR bilateral human rights talks on 26 January.

Mr. Raoul Wallenberg

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many (a) oral, and (b) written questions have been addressed to his Department about Mr. Raoul Wallenberg in each session since 1979.

Mr. Waldegrave: The information requested is available in the Official Report.

According to our records the details are as follows:

Parliamentary Questions on Raoul Wallenberg

Session	Oral questions	Written questions	Total
1979-80 (15 May 1979-13 November 1980	0	0	0
1980-81 (20 November 1980-30 November 1981)	1	0	1
1981-82 (4 November 1981-28 October 1982)	0	0	0
1982-83 (3 November 1982-13 May 1983)	0	1	1
1983-84 (15 June 1983-31 October 1984)	0	1	1
1984-85 (6 November 1984-30 October 1985)	1	9	10
1985-86 (6 November 1985-6 November 1986)	0	13	13

Session	Oral questions	Written questions	Total
1986-87 (12 November 1986-15 May 1987)	0	0	0
1987-88 (25 June 1987-15 November 1987)	0	7	7
1988-89 (22 November 1988-to date)	0	21	21

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish in the Official Report, a table showing how many (a) oral and (b) written questions have been addressed to his Department about Mr. Raoul Wallenberg in each month since 1983.

Mr. Waldegrave: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply that I gave to his earlier question on the same subject.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he raised the case of Mr. Raoul Wallenberg at the Foreign Affairs Council held on 19 December 1988; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will raise the case of Mr. Raoul Wallenberg at the United Nations; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what information he has of the case of Mr. Raoul Wallenberg being raised at the United Nations; and if he will make a statement;

(4) what information he has of the case of Mr. Raoul Wallenberg being raised at the European Parliament.

Mr. Waldegrave: I have recently written to my hon. Friend about Mr. Raoul Wallenberg.

Rights of Children

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish or place in the Library the Government's response to the questionnaire about the rights of children submitted to them in June 1988 by the legal affairs committee of the Council of Europe parliamentary assembly.

Mrs. Chalker: We hope to submit our response to this questionnaire on the rights of children shortly. Copies of our response will be placed in the Library of each House.

Japanese Prisoners of War

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if, in his recent talks with the Japanese Foreign Minister, he raised the question of Japanese compensation for the relatives of British troops who died in captivity whilst Japanese prisoners of war during the second world war, and if he will make a statement;

(2) if, in his recent talks with the Japanese Foreign Minister, he raised the question of Japanese compensation to British troops who were ill-treated in captivity whilst Japanese prisoners of war during the second world war; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: No. The question of compensation was dealt with in the 1951 treaty of peace with Japan. Under the terms of the treaty £4,816,473 was made available to the United Kingdom. The bulk of this was paid out, between 1952 and 1956, to approximately 58,000 former prisoners of war, civilian internees and dependants of those who died in captivity.

Visas

Mr. Neil Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will take steps to reduce the cost to Hungarian nationals of obtaining a visa for entry into the United Kingdom.

Mr. Eggar: No. It is our intention that visa fees should remain the same for all applicants irrespective of their nationality.

EC (Social Dimension)

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what is the legal basis for the EEC's social dimension;

(2) what are the main issues under the social dimension which fall to be dealt with by qualified majority voting, and which by unanimity under the Single European Act.

Mr. Cope: I have been asked to reply.

The legal base of any proposal in the social area depends on the substance of that proposal. This will determine the voting procedures. The main issues currently under consideration are in the field of health and safety at work and fall to be dealt with by qualified majority voting.

EMPLOYMENT

Unemployment Benefit

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people in Nottingham had unemployment benefit stopped because they were considered unavailable for work for each of the months for which figures exist.

Mr. Lee: Monthly information is not readily available about the number of persons whose entitlement to unemployment benefit is disallowed because they are considered not to be available for work. It could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

However, the table below shows, over the period for which figures are available, the quarterly number of claims disallowed by adjudication officers, in the adjudication office area of Nottingham, on the grounds that claimants were not availble for work.

3 month ending	Disallowed
31 March 1986	61
30 June 1986	71
30 September 1986	122
31 December 1986	96
31 March 1987	125
30 June 1987	45
30 September 1987	109
31 December 1987	122
31 March 1988	109
30 June 1988	89
30 September 1988	90
31 December 1988	54

Minimum Wages

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what minimum wage provision exists in each of the 12 EEC countries.

Mr. Nicholls: Five countries—France, Netherlands, Spain, Portugal and Luxembourg—have a statutory national minimum wage. In Ireland, as in the United Kingdom, a statutory minimum wage applies only in certain industries. Two countries—Belgium and Greece—have a general minimum wage laid down in national level collective agreements which are binding in law. Three countries—West Germany, Italy and Denmark—set minimum rates of pay by industry level collective agreements applying in all sectors and binding in law.

Mining Regulations

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what are the dimensions of a development roadway in a single entry system under the current mining regulations.

Mr. Nicholls: No dimensions are specified for a development roadway in a single entry system under current mining regulations.

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what would be the minimum dimensions of a development roadway with only one means of entry and egress in the proposed changes in mining regulations.

Mr. Nicholls: The proposed Mines (Safety of Exit) Regulations 1988, which were laid before Parliament on 29 November 1988 set out the facilities and conditions necessary for safe exit to the surface and include requirements on the construction and maintenance of roads in mines. Under these regulations the normal minimum height of a roadway along which persons walk to or from their places of work will be 1·7m but in certain circmstances this may be reduced to 1·2m.

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many miners would be allowed in a roadway with only one means of entry and egress under the proposed changes in mining regulations.

Mr. Nicholls: The proposed Mines (Safety of Exit) Regulations 1988, which were laid before Parliament on 29 November 1988, set out the facilities and conditions necessary for safe exit to the surface and includes requirements placing limits on the number of persons working in a place where there is only one way out.

The regulations allow for no more than nine persons to work in a place where it is not reasonably practicable to provide two different ways out. However, there are also strictly defined circumstances under which up to 18 persons may be allowed to work in a place with only one way out. In both cases, the mine manager has a duty to make suitable arrangements to ensure, so far as is practicable, that persons can leave the work place safely and that their safety is not endangered by the lack of two ways out.

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how much air, oxygen, would be available (a) for 10 trapped miners in a situation such as occurred on 13 January at High Moor colliery and (b) if the maximum number of miners were present, under the proposed changes in mining regulations.

Mr. Nicholls: The volume of air available for trapped miners in a situation such as occurred at High Moor colliery would be equal to that volume of roadway between the inbye end of the fall and the face of the heading. In this particular case, it would measure approximately 7,350 cu m.

Under the proposed changes in mining regulations the maximum number of men allowed to be present without prior notice to an inspector of the mines and quarries inspectorate and workmen's representatives would be nine plus a maximum of three additional persons on limited inspection duties.

Wages Councils (Document)

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give details of those places where it is possible to obtain the document, "Wages Councils: 1988 Consultation Document."

Mr. Nicholls: Copies of the document are available in the Vote Office or may be obtained from V. Patterson, Department of Employment, (IRE 2), room 310, Gatliff house, 93 Ebury Bridge road, London SW1W 8RE; the secretary, Office of Wages Councils, Steel house, Tothill street, London SW1H 9NF; divisional offices of the wages inspectorate and the Department of Employment's press office, Caxton house, Tothill street, London SW1H 9NF.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment why it is not possible to obtain the document, "Wages Councils: 1988 Consultation Document", at Her Majesty's Stationery Office.

Mr. Nicholls: Her Majesty's Stationery Office bookshops do not stock free publications.

Departmental Publications

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement as to the criteria used in deciding where to place his Department's publications.

Mr. Nicholls: The criteria used in deciding where to place my Department's publications vary according to a number of factors including the nature of the publication and the audience for which it is intended; the scale and cost of distribution; and whether or not the document is priced.

Tourism

Mr. Allen McKay: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what will be the role of local authorities in the promoting of tourism following the findings of the Government's review on tourism.

Mr. Lee [holding answer 19 January 1989]: I am sure that local authorities will wish to continue to play a part in supporting the development of tourism in their areas.

Written Answers to Questions

Monday 23 January 1989

PRIME MINISTER

Food Inspection (Ministerial Responsibilities)

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list the respective responsibilities of the Department of Health and the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food for food inspection.

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Tiverton (Mr. Maxwell-Hyslop) on 7 December 1988 at column 163 concerning the division of responsibility between the Department of Health and the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food. Food inspection under the Food Act 1984 is a local authority responsibility. The district councils, including London boroughs, are responsible for food hygiene and safety inspections. The county councils and the London boroughs are responsible for inspections for the composition and labelling of food.

Interviews (Transcripts)

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Prime Minister if she will arrange for transcripts made by the Central Office of Information of interviews she gives to be placed in the Library after publication of the interviews.

The Prime Minister: No.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Security Services

35. Mr. Allen: To ask the Attorney-General how many of (a) his staff and (b) those in the Crown Prosecution Service are devoted to matters relating to the security services.

The Attorney-General: None.

Director of Public Prosecutions

36. Mr. Holt: To ask the Attorney-General when he next plans to meet the Director of Public Prosecutions; and what will be discussed.

The Attorney-General: On Thursday 9 February, 1989. We plan to discuss a variety of matters of departmental interest.

Irish Attorney-General

37. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Attorney-General when he last met the Irish Attorney-General; and what subjects were discussed.

The Attorney-General: On Thursday 29 September 1988. We had a constructive meeting in regard to matters of concern to our respective responsibilites, in particular extradition between the United Kingdom and the Republic of Ireland.

Guildford Four

38. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Attorney-General what representations he has received on the conduct of the Guildford Four case.

The Attorney-General: None. As the hon. Member will know, my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary has now decided to refer the case to the Court of Appeal (Criminal Division) under section 17 of the Criminal Appeal Act, 1968.

Abortion

39. Mr. Amess: To ask the Attorney-General how many prosecutions were brought in 1987 by the Crown Prosecution Service under the Infant Life Preservation Act 1929; and if he will make a statement.

41. Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Attorney-General how many prosecutions were brought by the Crown Prosecution Service under the Infant Life Preservation Act 1929 in 1987; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Attorney-General how many prosecutions were brought by the Crown Prosecution Service under the Infant Life Preservation Act 1929 in 1987; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: The Crown Prosecution Service brought one prosecution in 1987 under the Infant Life Preservation Act 1929.

Live Births

40. Mr. Hind: To ask the Attorney-General how many prosecutions were brought in 1988 by the Crown Prosecution Service for failure to register live births; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: None.

Director of Public Prosecutions

42. Mr. Janner: To ask the Attorney-General when he last met the Director of Public Prosecutions; and what matters were discussed.

The Attorney-General: I refer the hon. and learned Member to the answer I gave today to the hon. Member for Sunderland, South (Mr. Mullin).

Mr. Brian Clough

Mr. Adley: To ask the Attorney-General if he will ask the Crown Prosecution Service to undertake proceedings against Mr. Brian Clough of Nottingham for common assault.

The Attorney-General: No. It is for the police to decide whether or not to institute criminal proceedings. If proceedings are instituted, the matter is then passed to the Crown prosecution service for independent consideration. It will employ the criteria set out in the code for Crown prosecutors.

"The Guardian" (Prosecution)

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Attorney-General pursuant to his written reply to the hon. Member for Birmingham,

Erdington on 16 January, Official Report, column 11, whether proceedings are to be instituted against Mr. Richard Norton-Taylor of The Guardian, and its editor Mr. Peter Preston, arising from the publication on 4 January of the name and background of the new head of the Secret Intelligence Service.

The Attorney-General: No.

Justices of the Peace

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Attorney-General how many justices of the peace there are now; how many there were five, 10, 15 and 20 years ago; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: The total numbers of active justices of the peace in England and Wales, in January of the years mentioned and rounded to the nearest hundred, was as follows:

1989 — 28,200
1984 — 25,800
1979 — 24,000
1974 — 21,500
1970 — 19,300 (the earliest year for which the figures are available)

I welcome the opportunity to record the Lord Chancellor's appreciation of the voluntary work done by increasing numbers of justices, drawn from all ages, communities and backgrounds up and down the country. They make an essential and much appreciated contribution to the administration of justice.

Magistrates (Selection Committees)

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Attorney-General how many advisory panel members for magistrates' selection committees have requested that they remain anonymous.

The Attorney-General: Advisory committees have until the end of 1992 to make their membership known. Whether, and if so when, they do so before that time is a matter for each advisory committee to decide.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Food and Agriculture Organisation

47. Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met officials of the Food and Agriculture Organisation; and what issues were discussed.

Mr. Chris Patten: I met the director-general on 13 December 1988. We discussed the locust situation in Africa and the threat to the world's tropical rain forests. I received a report on progress of the review of the Food and Agriculture Organisation's objectives and functions.

India

50. Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the current level of aid given by the Government to India; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: Our gross bilateral aid expenditure on India was estimated to be about £90 million in the financial year 1987-88. We are awaiting final confirmation of the figures. At that level, India remains our largest bilateral aid programme.

Eggs

51. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has any plans to ship eggs to Eritrea, the Sudan and other countries with a food supply problem; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: I have no such plans. Eggs and egg products are not suitable for general distribution as food aid. They can only be used under very strict control.

Developing Countries (Debt Burden)

52. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he is taking to reduce the debt burden of developing countries.

Mr. Chris Patten: We have made the major contribution to the interest subsidy account of the IMF's enhanced structural adjustment facility. We have converted nearly £1 billion of old aid loans into grants. The Paris Club is now implementing the special Toronto terms based on the sub-Saharan African initiative first proposed by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer in 1987. These are all very significant contributions towards lessening the debt burden on the poorest countries—and widely recognised as such.

World Bank

53. Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next expects to meet the president of the World bank; and what matters he expects to discuss.

Mr. Chris Patten: I understand that the president of the World bank plans to visit London in April, when I would expect to see him to discuss a range of policy issues of mutual interest and concern.

"State of the World's Children"

54. Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's response to the recent UNICEF report, "State of the World's Children".

Mr. Chris Patten: I welcome the publication of this report. It examines the problems faced by women and children in developing countries and is an example of the work of UNICEF in advocacy for children.

Our contributions to UNICEF increased from £7·64 million in 1985-86 to over £15 million in the last financial year.

Send a Cow Project

55. Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the progress of the Send a Cow project.

Mr. Chris Patten: The project, with support from our joint funding scheme, is progressing well. About half of the 54 cows sent to Uganda so far have already calved and the remainder are expected to calve within the next few weeks. Those chosen to receive the cows, including widows of the recent conflicts and others with large families and low incomes, both Moslem and Christian, are now starting to benefit from the extra milk yields.

Aid (Effectiveness)

56. Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about current methods of assessing the effectiveness of overseas aid.

Mr. Chris Patten: We have developed well-tried systems both for ensuring and assessing the effectiveness of our aid. These include annual country review and objectives papers; project appraisal and monitoring; project completion reports; and the full evaluation of a sample of projects. A full account will be given in this year's public expenditure White Paper, to be published shortly.

Caribbean Dependencies

57. Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on British aid to the Caribbean dependencies.

Mr. Chris Patten: In the most recent year for which figures are available (1987), British aid disbursements to the four Caribbean dependencies in receipt of aid were £8,767,000, or £214 per head.

I visited the Turks and Caicos Islands, the largest recipient of our aid, from 5 to 8 January and subsequently chaired in Barbados a meeting of dependent territory governors to review aid policy in the dependencies.

Vietnam

58. Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what aid the United Kingdom is currently giving to Vietnam.

Mr. Chris Patten: We do not provide bilateral aid to Vietnam. We are, however, contributing our share (about £540,000) of the cost of emergency food aid supplied through the European Community.

India (Primary Education)

59. Mr. Summerson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what contribution Britain is making to the development of primary education in India.

Mr. Chris Patten: We have contributed £1·3 million to a pilot project in the state of Andhra Pradesh. Two hundred classrooms have been built to improved designs which provide a better educational environment; and teachers and teacher educators have been trained in child centred learning techniques. We are now considering a proposal to extend the project throughout the state, at a cost of abou £30 million.

Lomé Renegotiations

60. Mr. Knapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to discuss the Lomé renegotiations with African, Caribbean and Pacific countries.

Mr. Chris Patten: Negotiations on a successor to the 3rd Lomé convention, which expires in February 1990, were opened formally in October last year.

The first EC/ACP Ministerial negotiating meeting is in Brazzaville next month. I plan to attend this and subsequent Ministerial negotiating meetings. I also intend to continue to raise Lomé issues on my bilateral visits to Africa, Caribbean and Pacific countries.

Southern Africa Development Co-ordination Conference (Support)

61. Sir Fergus Montgomery: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on British support for the Southern Africa Development Co-ordination Conference.

Mr. Chris Patten: The United Kingdom is a firm supporter of the Southern Africa Development Co-ordination Conference (SADCC). Pledges of British bilateral assistance for SADCC projects now amount to some £60 million. I shall attend the SADCC annual conference in Angola next month.

Armenian Earthquake

62. Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received regarding British aid in response to the Armenian earthquake.

Mr. Chris Patten: I have received a great many representations from organisations, commercial companies and individuals offering donations, cost price relief supplies and personal help. It has been a magnificent and spontaneous response. The Soviet authorities have gone out of their way to express their gratitude for all the help provided from Britain.

63. Sir Trevor Skeet: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about Britain's contribution to the earthquake disaster relief operation in Armenia.

Mr. Chris Patten: Of the £5 million emergency aid which I announced on 9 December 1988, some £1·4 million has been allocated in response to specific requests from the Soviet authorities for assistance with emergency relief and search-and-rescue measures. This phase of the relief operation is now over. The balance of our £5 million will be used for rehabilitation and reconstruction activities which are now under consideration by the Soviet authorities.

Sudan (Debt)

64. Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will undertake a study of the implications of the debt for development swap in Sudan with UNICEF, whereby Midland bank's debt exposure has been donated to finance development programmes for the Kordofan region, and as to what opportunities this precedent opens up for charitable work in the third world with the support of Her Majesty's Government.

Mr. Chris Patten: We warmly welcome the Midland bank's voluntary decision to reduce Sudan's debt obligations and the arrangements under which this will facilitate development work in the Sudan.

ACP Countries

65. Mr. Colin Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on future aid and trade relations with the African, Caribbean and Pacific group of countries.

Mr. Chris Patten: Aid and trade relations between the European Community and the African, Caribbean and Pacific countries are governed by the Lomé conventions. Negotiations on a successor to the third Lomé convention, which expires in February 1990, were opened formally in October last year. We will be actively involved throughout the renegotiation.

Nigeria

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if, following the announcement of a grant of $100 million being made available for Nigeria, he will publish the revised figures for the net aid programme including aid administration costs, for the financial years 1988-89 and 1989-90; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: For the financial years 1988-89 and 1989-90, the net overseas aid budget, which includes aid administration, stands at £1,387 million and £1,430 million respectively. Assuming the conditions are met for the disbursement of the $100 million aid grant for 1989 pledged as part of our Nigeria initiative, I would at present expect, on the basis of current exchange rates, that some £47 million would be added to the aid programme in 1989-90 for this purpose.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Departmental Staff (Pay)

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the number of staff in his Department, by grade, in receipt of local pay additions outside London and the south-east economic planning region; what are the different amounts paid to staff by grade; whether this figure varies due to location; what qualifying period of scale-related criteria is used; and whether this varies by location.

Mrs. Chalker: All grades currently in receipt of local pay additions are employed in Central London and at Croydon. Details were contained in the answer to the hon. Member for Knowsley South (Mr. Hughes) of 20 October 1988 at column 984.

Disarmament Policy

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his policy on the internationally monitored system of on-site inspections following a pre-emptory challenge of the nature of the work, or of materials stored, in relation to verification of chemical and biological disarmament; and what is his policy towards the formation of international inspection teams.

Mr. Waldegrave: The concept of challenge on-site inspection currently under discussion at the conference on disarmament in Geneva in the negotiations for a comprehensive convention banning chemical weapons is largely drawn from a United Kingdom proposal tabled in 1986. However, much work remains to be done to elaborate the detailed procedures which will be required to make the regime effective.

It is agreed in the negotiations that on-site inspections will be carried out by international inspection teams drawn from the technical secretariat of the international organisation which will be established to oversee and administer the implementation of the convention.

The development, production, stockpiling and use of biological weapons is already banned by the 1972 biological weapons convention to which over 100 states (including the United Kingdom) are party. This convention has no specific provision for on-site inspections, either routinely or on challenge.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Taxation

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the level of income at which the following should have a lower overall tax burden in real terms now than in 1979 (a) a single man, (b) single woman, (c) married man, (d) married woman, (e) married man with wife not working and with one child, (f) married man with wife not working and with two children, (g) married man with wife not working and with three children and (h) married man with wife not working and with four children.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Available information is contained in the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Hornchurch (Mr. Squire) on 10 January at columns 633-56.

Foreign Investment

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on current foreign investment and capital flows into the United Kingdom.

Mr. Major: Inflows of direct and portfolio investment into the United Kingdom are estimated to have been £6·8 billion in the first three quarters of 1988. Net capital inflows into the United Kingdom are estimated at £2·2 billion.

Competitive Tendering

Sir David Price: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will ensure that all public departments in determining the award of contracts under competitive tendering procedures give proper consideration to the maintenance of professional standards.

Mr. Brooke: The award of contracts for goods and services is primarily the responsibility of individual Departments. However, the Government's "Guidelines on Public Purchasing Policy", last issued by the Treasury in January 1987, require that such goods and services should be acquired by competition unless there are convincing reasons to the contrary. The guidelines provide that the assessment of value for money should take account of other factors as well as price, including the financial, technical and professional status of tenderers. At the same time, part of the function of the Treasury's central unit on purchasing is to increase the professionalism of Government purchasing, by working with Departments to improve their organisation and systems and the training and professional skills of purchasing staff.

Personal Savings

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the trend in personal savings.

Mr. Lilley: The personal sector saving ratio has fallen in recent years. However this has been largely offset by rises in saving by companies and the public sector, leaving total national savings broadly unchanged as a share of gross domestic product. Rises in interest rates in recent months will encourage more saving and less borrowing by households.

Labour Costs (Manufacturing)

Mr. Janman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest information on the growth of unit labour costs in manufacturing industry.

Mr. Major: In the three months to November 1988, manufacturing unit wage costs increased by 0·5 per cent. on the same period a year earlier.

Tax Yield

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the expected yield of total taxes in 1988-89; and what were the comparable figures for 1978-79, using 1988-89 prices.

Mr. Major: Total taxes on income, expenditure and capital in 1988-89 are expected to yield £143·8 billion, as published in the autumn statement. The comparable figure for 1978-79 is £105·4 billion at 1988-89 prices.

Inflation

Mr. Michael: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest forecast for the rate of inflation in 1989.

Mr. Lilley: The autumn statement contains the latest published forecast for RPI inflation in 1989.

Government Expenditure

Mr. David Evans: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the outlook for general Government expenditure as a percentage of gross domestic profit.

Mr. Major: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer's autumn statement to the House on 1 November 1988 set out the Government's plans for public spending. It noted that general Government expenditure (excluding privatisation proceeds) in 1988-89 is expected to be below 40 per cent. of GDP for the first time in over 20 years; and that over the next three years it is expected to fall further.

Economic Growth

Mr. Riddick: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the current level of economic growth.

Mr. Major: Gross domestic product is likely to have grown by around 4·5 per cent. in 1988. This would be the fourth consecutive year of growth in excess of three per cent., a performance unmatched since the war.

Private Shareholders

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of the number of private shareholders in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The joint Treasury and Stock Exchange survey carried out in January and February 1988 estimated that approximately 9 million people own shares, 20 per cent. of the adult population. This represents a threefold increase since 1979.

Taxation Statistics

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the current figure would be if the £8,500 salary threshold after which tax is levied on the value of benefits such as company cars were to be raised to keep it in line with its real value when that £8,500 figure was set.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The earnings threshold at which benefits like a company car provided for private use becomes taxable was raised to £8,500 in 1979-80. If this threshold had been indexed in line with inflation according to the statutory formula for increasing personal allowances and thresholds, the threshold in 1988-89 would be £17,000.

Taxation Changes

Mr. Cox: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the average individual cumulative gain to those earning £25,000 a year as a result of changes in taxation since 1979.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The information for individuals with no reliefs other than the main personal allowance is as follows:

Tax Liability in 1988-89 on earnings of £25,000

	1978-79 tax regime indexed for inflation £	1988-89 tax regime £	Reduction in tax liability £
Single person	8,012·50	6,063·00	1,949·50
Married man	7,423·75	5,467·00	1,957·00

Income Tax

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people are currently excluded from payment of income tax.

Mr. Norman Lamont: In 1988-89, it is estimated that some 11·3 million single people and married couples are not liable to income tax.

Capital Gains Tax (Residential Property)

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what amounts were collected in capital gains tax on the sale of residential property in each of the last five years; and what numbers of properties were involved.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I regret that no information is available centrally about sales by companies. For individuals and trusts, limited information is available about assessments relating to sales in 1985-86. The capital gains tax on sales of properties identified as residential was about £100 million payable by about 40,000 taxpayers. In addition tax may have been paid on other residential property not identified as such.

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what audit safeguards are currently in place to ensure that all payments of capital gains due on sales of residential property are properly made.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Most such sales are made by owner occupiers and are exempt from tax. Sales by developers and investors are picked up through the ordinary process of examining taxpayers' returns and business accounts, a proportion of which are checked against information supplied by third parties.

Mortgage Interest Relief

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many prosecutions in respect of fraudulent mortgage interest relief at source claims have been instituted in each year since the inception of the scheme; and with what result.

Mr. Norman Lamont: There were three criminal prosecutions by the police in 1987-88, all of which were successful. There have been another 10 so far this year of which eight were successful. Further prosecutions are pending.

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many civil servants are currently employed in administering and calculating mortgage interest relief at source entitlements; and what were the numbers in each year since the inception of the scheme.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The estimated current number in terms of full time staff equivalents is 820. The numbers on the same basis in the earlier years were:

	Numbers
1983-84	1,000
1984-85	1,125
1985-86	1,000
1986-87	950
1987-88	950

Staff Numbers

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will tabulate in respect of both numbers employed and civil service grades those engaged in administering and calculating (a) mortgage interest relief at source entitlements and (b) capital gains tax on residential property.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The estimated figures in terms of full time staff equivalents are as follows:

A: Mortgage interest relief at source

Grade	Numbers
Inspector (P)	1
Inspector	28
Tax Officer (Higher Grade)	250
Tax Officer	290
Revenue Assistant	170
SEO	1
HEO	12
Executive Officer	7
Administrative Officer	1
Typists	60
Total	820

B: Capital gains tax on residential property

Grade	Numbers
Senior Legal Assistant	1
Inspector (SP)	1
Inspector	20
Tax Officer (Higher Grade)	11
Tax Officer	5
Revenue Assistant	19
Principal Valuer	12
Senior Valuer	30
Valuer	18
Valuation Technician	1
Valuation Clerk	4
Typists	3
Total	125

Atlantic Salmon Conservation Trust (Scotland)

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will review the charitable status of the Atlantic salmon conservation trust (Scotland) in the light of evidence which was submitted to him by the hon. Member for East Lothian on 6 Septembr 1988.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The question of whether any particular body has charitable status is not one for Treasury Ministers.

In Scotland, the Inland Revenue is responsible for deciding whether a body or trust which is claiming tax exemption as a charity is established for charitable purposes only. This is a matter of law.

Responsibility for determining a particular taxpayer's liability lies with the Inland Revenue, subject to his rights of appeal to independent appeal commissioners and to the courts. As I explained in my letter of 26 September to the hon. Member, it is well recognised that Ministers do not seek to influence the Inland Revenue's decisions on particular cases. It would not be right therefore for me to intervene in this case.

Local Pay Additions

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what, in respect of the payment of local pay additions in the Central Computer and Telecommunication Agency, is the number of staff by grade, in respect of local pay additions outside London and the south-east economic planning region; what are the different amounts paid to staff, by grade; whether this varies due to location; what qualifying period of scale-related criteria is used; and whether this varies by location.

Mr. Brooke: There are no CCTA staff outside London and the south-east economic planning region in receipt of local pay additions.

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the number of staff in Her Majesty's

Stationery Office, by grade, in receipt of local pay additions outside London and the south-east economic planning region; what are the differing amounts paid to staff, by grade; whether this figure varies due to location; what qualifying period of scale-related criteria is used; and whether this varies by location.

Mr. Lilley: None.

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the number of staff of Her Majesty's Customs and Excise, by grade, in receipt of local pay additions outside London and the south-east economic planning region; what are the differing amounts paid to staff by grade; whether this figure varies dues to location; what qualifying period of scale-related criteria is used; and whether this varies by location.

Mr. Lilley: None.

"Using Private Enterprise in Government"

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether any progress has been made in implementing the recommendation in paragraph 34(c) in "Using Private Enterprise in Government", on pooling information about contractors between Departments and inviting certain Departments to take responsibility for compiling data about the performance of contractors in certain industries.

Mr. Brooke: The central unit on purchasing maintains a data base of activities subjected to competitive tendering in Departments. This information is distributed annually to all Departments so that those contemplating market testing a particular activity can benefit from the experience of others who have already tested that activity. The CUP has also issued general guidance to Departments, which includes advice on contractor appraisal.

VAT (Scotland)

Mr. Darling: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what were the net value added tax receipts raised from Scotland in 1987-88.

Mr. Lilley: Information about value added tax receipts is not available on a regional basis.

Taxpayers (Scotland)

Mr. Darling: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the number of individual taxpayers resident in Scotland, and the approximate amount of tax raised from them in 1987-88.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The latest available information covers residents of Scotland liable to tax for 1986-87. Including married women whose earned income exceeded the wife's earned income allowance, as well as their husbands and single people, the total was about 2,070,000 individuals, with income tax liability of about £3,250 million.

Corporation Tax (Scotland)

Mr. Darling: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the corporation tax raised from taxpayers having their seat in Scotland.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I regret that information on which to base an estimate is not available centrally.

Personal Savings

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what studies his Department has carried out into the effect on personal savings of a reduction in the higher rate of capital gains tax to 25 per cent.; and if he will publish the results of such studies.

Mr. Norman Lamont: We examine a large number of options covering the whole range of the tax system as part of the Budget process. It is not customary to publish the results of studies into the effects of tax rate changes.

Private Schools

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the concessions available to private educational establishments in Scotland with charitable status.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I assume that the hon. Member has in mind tax reliefs.

Private education establishments in Scotland which have charitable status are entitled to the same direct tax reliefs as any other charity in the United Kingdom. Charities are generally exempt from income tax, corporation tax and capital gains tax, provided that their income and gains are applied for charitable purposes only.

The provision of education in a registered school is exempt from VAT.

Budget Statement

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received about the contents of his forthcoming Budget Statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont: My right hon. Friend has received a large number of representations covering a variety of proposals.

Personal Disposable Income

Mr. Raison: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the percentage change in real personal disposable income broken down into the top 1 per cent., next 9 per cent., next 40 per cent. and bottom 50 per cent. quartiles for every year since 1959.

Mr. Lawson [holding answer 10 January 1989]: I regret that information in the form requested is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Pensions

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of the work force has opted for personal pensions or is in money purchase schemes contracted out.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I have been asked to reply. The latest available figure (June 1988) for the work force* of the United Kingdom is 28,164,000 Over 800,000 people have opted for a personal pension since they were introduced in July 1988. Over 6,500 contracted-out money purchase (COMP) schemes have been set up: no figures are available on the number of individuals involved.

* Employment Gazette January 1989. Work force in employment plus claimant unemployed.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Student Awards

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what was the average award received by students from Durham local education authority in their first year at university, polytechnic or other institution of higher education.

Mr. Jackson: The average amounts received by students in higher education from Durham local education authority for the 1986-87 academic year were £1,451 per award holder in maintenance and £641 per award holder in fees. Data are not collected separately for first-year students.

Fees

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he has any proposals for introducing changes in the administration of fees in higher education.

Mr. Jackson: We are considering the possibility of increasing the impact of student enrolments through some shift in the public funding of higher education from the grant to be disbursed by the Universities Funding Council and the Polytechnics and Colleges Funding Council towards students' fees met under the mandatory awards arrangements. When we have a clear proposal, we shall consult the various interests before taking a decision.

Natural Environment Research Council

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received about staff redundancies in the Natural Environment Research Council.

Mr. Jackson: The Department has received 166 representations about staff redundancies in the NERC. Staffing levels are for the council itself to determine. I am informed that areas of high priority science have been safeguarded, and I understand that only about 41 compulsory redundancies are now expected, less than half the number originally announced. The redundancies arise from the council's planning to reflect changing scientific priorities and to keep within its projected budget following a reduction in income for commissioned research.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what research is now undertaken by the Natural Environment Research Council in respect of the greenhouse effect; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: Such research spans many NERC fields of activity. Major relevant projects in the marine sciences directorate include the biogeochemical ocean flux study, the fine Resolution Antarctic model, and the world ocean circulation experiment, while the terrestrial and freshwater directorate's work includes improving global climate model predictions. The British Antarctic Survey does long-term meteorological and climate studies, and the ocean drilling programme improves understanding of past global climate. NERC also administers four CEGB-funded fellowships relating to greenhouse gases, and supports the United Kingdom universities' global atmospheric modelling project and the tropical ocean and global atmosphere project.

School of Peace Studies, Bradford University

Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how much grant was provided for the school of peace studies at Bradford university by the University Grants Committee for each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Jackson: The public funding of universities is not earmarked in this way. It is for each university to decide how to fund its departments from the UGC block grant and the other income at its disposal.

Schools (Vandalism)

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps he is taking to ensure that all local education authorities collect statistics on the incidence of arson and vandalism in schools and colleges on a uniform basis.

Mr. Butcher: I am discussing with the local authority associations the best way of collecting these statistics on a uniform basis, as part of an information-gathering exercise to support the efforts of the special action squad in vandalism and arson in schools.

Edinburgh University

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what response he is making to the representations of Sir David Smith FRS, in relation to the financing of the university of Edinburgh.

Mr. Jackson: University lecturers' pay has increased by 24 per cent. since 1986 and negotiations for a 1989-90 settlement are in progress. Government grant to universities is to be increased by about 5 per cent. in 1989-90 and it is for them to assess what pay increase they can afford.

School Governors

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he intends to take steps to prevent the unreasonable removal of school governors by local authorities; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: It is for local authorities to decide who to appoint to the places on school governing bodies reserved for them. But they must exercise their powers reasonably, and we would consider very carefully any complaint that an authority had not done so in a particular instance.

School Libraries

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on school library provision.

Mr. Jackson: It is for individual institutions to decide what library and other provision to make from the total funds at their disposal. However, an additional £9 million has been allocated to universities through the University Grants Committee for the period 1987-88 to 1989-90 specifically for the purchase of books and periodicals, together with £2 million provided in 1987-88 and 1988-89 to enable university libraries to link with computer networks to improve access.

City Technology Colleges

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what prior undertaking on capital expenditure he can give to city technology college promoters planning to establish city technology colleges in the premises of existing maintained schools before proposals are made for those purposes under section 12 of the Education Act 1980 or section 14 of the Education Act 1944.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: My answer of 28 July 1988 to my hon. Friend the Member for Wyre Forest (Mr. Coombs) at column 402 set out the factors I would take into account in deciding proposals which came to me under the provisions of section 12 of the Education Act 1980 and which had as an objective making premises available for the establishment of a city technology college. Should the governors of a voluntary school seek my leave to give notice of their intention to discontinue the school under the provisions of section 14 of the Education Act 1944, for a similar objective, I shall take the same factors into account, in addition to the other requirements laid down in that section.

I made it clear in that statement that, in considering any such proposals, I should need to satisfy myself specifically that the sponsors' plans were sufficiently clear, considered and developed; and that, subject to my approval of the proposals, I had reached agreement in principle with the promoters on a funding agreement. A key aspect of the latter is the grant I am prepared to make available towards the capital costs involved in the establishment of all CTCs. Clearly promoters will need to have a firm indication from me of the level of that grant in order to prepare plans that are sufficiently well developed to satisfy the LEA or governors that the closure or discontinuance of the existing school is justified.

In order to be able to give such a firm undertaking I shall need to consider what expenditure on the premises is likely to be required for a CTC established there to meet the basic requirements of the programme, but in giving any such indication I shall make clear that any capital grant is subject to a detailed feasibility study and to my decision on the statutory proposals or applications, which will be treated strictly on their merits.

Cash Limits

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will give details of any revisions to cash limits on his Department's Votes in 1988-89.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, where appropriate, cash limits for the following votes will be revised as follows:

Class and Vote	Current cash limit £'000s	Increase/ reduction £'000s	Revised cash limit £'000s
XII. 1	481,457	−547	480,910
XII. 3	1,849,624	+40	1,849,664
XII. 4	67,735	−10	67,725
XII. 5	60,179	+979	61,158

An increase of £410,000 is being sought on class XII, vote 3 for expenditure originally included in provision on class XII, vote 1 in respect of outstanding liabilities for Goldsmiths' College. The increase on class XII, vote 3 reflects the inclusion of this expenditure following the college's incorporation as part of the University of London. A matching and offsetting reduction on class XII, vote 1 is also sought.

A reduction of £370,000 to the cash limit for class XII, vote 3 is also sought to reflect the decision not to seek supplementary provision in respect of the carry forward of capital underspend under the end year flexibility scheme as previously announced by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 21 July 1988 at columns 725-728.

A further reduction of £137,000 is also sought to the cash limit on class XII, vote 1 to reflect the transfer of complete responsibility for trade union education and training to the Department of Employment. A matching increase will be made to the Department of Employment's cash limit on class VII, vote 1.

A reduction of £10,000 is sought to the cash limit on class XII, vote 4 to reflect the transfer of £4,000 to the Office of Minister for the Civil Service for the cost of recruitment under the direct entry grade 7 competition 1988, and of £6,000 to the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys to reflect increased costs of a commissioned survey. Matching increases will be made to the cash limits on class XX, vote 1 and class X, vote 16 respectively.

My Department's running cost limit will also decrease by £10,000 from £66,203,000 to £66,193,000.

The increase on class XII, vote 5 reflects two changes to the vote of the Agricultural and Food Research Council. An increase of £1,760,000 is being sought to assist the AFRC in meeting the costs of restructuring made necessary by the reductions in research commissioned by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food. This increase is offset by a reduction of £781,000 to reflect the reduction in grant from the AFRC to the Institute of Plant Science Research to take account of receipts from the sale of the assets of the Plant Breeding Institute.

Any net increase in expenditure on these votes as a result of these changes will be charged to the reserve. The overall planned total of expenditure will therefore remain unchanged.

School Leavers

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish a table showing the proportion of school leavers in (a) England, (b) Wales and (c) Northern Ireland who continued into (i) university education and (ii) other higher education for each year since 1979.

Mr. Jackson: The information is as follows. The figures reflect the intended destination of school leavers.

Proportion of school leavers intending to proceed to university or other higher education

	Academic years
	1978-79	1979-80	1980-81	1981-82	1982-83	1983-84	1984-85	1985-86	1986-87
England[1]
Universities	6·1	6·2	6·1	5·9	5·5	5·5	5·4	5·5	5·5
Other institutions[2]	2·1	2·1	2·8	2·9	2·7	2·9	2·9	2·8	2·7
Wales[1]
Universities	6·2	6·3	6·5	5·4	6·0	5·6	5·7	6·1	5·5
Other institutions[2]	2·5	2·7	2·7	3·9	3·3	3·5	3·7	4·0	3·3
Northern Ireland[3]
Universities	—	9·6	—	9·7	—	12·2	—	12·3	12·1
Other institutions	—	5·7	—	5·9	—	3·0	—	4·5	4·6

[1] Based on 10 per cent. sample of pupils in each school.
[2] Including only those courses of higher education which are readily identifiable from the school leavers survey.
[3] Figures available biennially only until 1985-86.

TRANSPORT

Airport Security

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make it his policy to put into effect the 21 recommendations made in 1986 by the Select Committee on Transport, particularly the proposals in relation to air security which requested a special security fund to finance airport safety, and the introduction of banding machines for baggage in the wake of the Lockerbie disaster; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The response published in November 1986 made it clear that the Government accepted most of the Select Committee's recommendations, either wholly or in part.

The response explained what further action would be taken on each recommendation. Work has been carried forward as promised.

The particular recommendations mentioned by the hon. Member were not amongst those accepted. Banding machines can make a limited contribution to security, because of the high proportion of soft bags, and bags with outside compartments.

An aviation security fund has already been tried. It was abandoned because it was bureaucratic, complicated and costly to administer. It provided little incentive to efficiency.

The current arrangements for financing aviation security do not suffer from such problems. They do not inhibit the maintenance of proper security measures.

Railway Development

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he now expects to announce the main findings of the central London rail study; whether any proposals from Her Majesty's Government will be announced at the same time; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: My right hon. Friend expects to make an announcement on the findings of the central London rail study shortly.

M40 (Extensions)

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether further extensions to the M40 will be to a three-lane standard.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The M40 extension north of Wendlebury is being built as a dual three-lane motorway. Decisions following the inquiry into the final section between Wendlebury and Waterstock will be announced shortly.

United Kingdom Decca Chain and Loran C (Options)

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to issue a letter of consultation about the available options for the United Kingdom Decca chain and Loran C; if he will list the parties who will be consulted; if he will list the Decca Radio and power supply equipment transmitter sites which need replacing in the next five years; and who will be representing the United Kingdom at the relevant discussions in Dublin in February.

Mr. Portillo: My right hon. Friend intends to issue a consultation document in the spring on the options for marine radio navigation systems in United Kingdom waters. He intends to consult bodies with marine and related interests, including those representing users and the general lighthouse authorities. The question of equipment renewals for the existing Decca Navigator system is a matter for Racal Decca Marine Navigation Limited under the company's current contract with the general lighthouse authorities, which runs to 1994. At the Dublin meeting of the international Loran C policy group, which is considering the feasibility of establishing a North West European Loran C system, the United Kingdom will be represented by officials from the Department and the general lighthouse authorities.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Allan Roberts: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if his Department will commission a report on the feasibility of the construction of a Liverpool land bridge for traffic moving between north America and the continent when the Channel tunnel opens in 1993.

Mr. Portillo: I refer the hon. Member to the answer which I gave on 16 January to the question by the hon. Member for Liverpool, Riverside (Mr. Parry) at column 81.

Motor Cycles

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what are the criteria for the proposal to limit newly qualified motor cycle drivers to 400 cc machines; whether high brake horsepower output machines will be included; for what period this limitation will apply; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The EC Commission is expected to propose that, as part of its plans for further harmonisation of driver licence categories, inexperienced riders should be limited to motor bikes below a certain size or power. The limit is likely to be 400 cc or 35 kw. It remains unclear how these would relate to each other. We agree with the Commission's objective. We are still considering the details of the proposals.

The Commission is also expected to propose a separate test before motor cyclists may ride more powerful machines. We believe that two years riding experience would be a sufficient safeguard. We shall continue to argue for this and against introducing a new special test. Unfortunately, our position has not been made clear in some press reports on this issue.

East London River Crossing

Mrs. Rosie Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what value per hectare was given to land lost in Oxleas wood to the construction of the east London river crossing in his Department's cost bearing analysis of that scheme.

Mr. Channon: This information is not available.

For the purpose of the cost benefit analysis, the district valuer provided an overall estimate of the cost to all land and property required for the scheme, including 8·3 hectares in Oxleas wood. The estimate also included the cost of land to be acquired and dedicated as open space in exchange for the land taken for the wood.

Autoguide

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement about the introduction of Autoguide in London.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The Government believe that advanced driver information systems such as autoguide can do much to ease congestion and so make better use of our roads. The Road Traffic (Driver Licensing and Information Systems) Bill, now before Parliament, demonstrates our commitment to this exciting new technology.

The Government have today invited the private sector to make proposals for installing a pilot autoguide scheme in the London area. A copy of the guidelines has been placed in the Library. Subject to a satisfactory proposal being received, and to the Road Traffic Bill becoming law, we hope that a licence can be issued this year.

We envisage that the pilot scheme will involve around 1,000 vehicles. Its operation will be closely monitored by the Department of Transport working in collaboration with the autoguide operator. We are discussing with local authority associations and the police how they might be involved in monitoring the pilot scheme.

Provided that the pilot scheme demonstrates the satisfactory performance of autoguide it is our intention that the operator should be authorised to upgrade the scheme to a fully commercial autoguide system, to which the public would be able to subscribe. This would mean that motorists could have autoguide equipment in their cars by the early to mid-1990s.

London Docklands

Mr. Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what further steps he is taking to improve transport for London docklands; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Channon: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment and I, together with the private sector, are investing heavily to improve access to docklands.

London Regional Transport is taking steps, in co-operation with GEC, to ensure that the docklands light railway fully meets its performance specification. The Government are supporting a major programme of upgrading and extension of the docklands light railway. The service to Bank will be open next year and will be fully operational by 1991. The carrying capacity of the railway will then be more than three times its present level. Further enhancement is planned to meet the needs of the full development at Canary wharf. A Bill to authorise extension of the railway to Beckton is currently before Parliament.

To accommodate the rapid pace of development in docklands, the Government believe that additional rail infrastructure will be required to supplement the docklands light railway. I have therefore established an east London rail study which is examining the best options for improving rail access from central London to docklands and east Thames-side. The study will include Olympia and York's proposal for a new underground railway between Waterloo and Greenwich peninsula via the Isle of Dogs, and the options canvassed in the docklands access consultation document on which LRT and the LDDC are currently seeking views. The work is being carried out by Halcrow Fox and Associates for my Department, the Department of the Environment and LRT. It would take into account the benefits which new rail links will provide to property owners and developers and the contributions which they should be expected to provide. It will also take into account the potential for new housing development in East Thames-side. Subject to the conclusions of the east London rail study and to the negotiation of satisfactory contributions from all developers concerned, the Government would wish to see a new line built and the deposit of a Bill in November this year.

In parallel with these improvements in the public transport network, a substantial programme of work is in hand to give docklands an effective internal road network and link it to the strategic road system. The LDDC is proceeding, subject to the statutory procedures, with its plans for Limehouse link road to be completed by 1993 and with other new schemes to serve docklands traffic. Within my own programme, I am developing the strategic road network in east London through improvement to the A13, the Hackney/M11 link, upgrading the north circular road and extending it to the A2 via the east London river crossing.

In order to carry forward the improvement of transport to and within docklands, I am asking my hon. Friend the Minister of State to take the lead in co-ordinating the activities of the various agencies involved and to ensure an adequate level of service while construction work is being carried out. He will be supported by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Environment with special responsibility for inner cities.

Public Service Vehicles (Failures)

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will publish in the Official Report the information his Department now collects on the failure rates of public service vehicles; and if he will specify the levels of disaggregation;

(2) what information his Department now collects on the pass rates of public service vehicles at the annual Department of Transport tests; and if he will indicate the levels of disaggregation at which he will make this information available.

Mr. Peter Bottomley [holding replies 18 and 19 January 1989]: The Department's vehicle inspectorate executive agency collects information on the results of all public service vehicles at annual test. National and regional analyses of this information are contained in the inspectorate's annual report and accounts 1987-88, a copy of which is held in the statistical section of the House of Commons library.

Further analysis of the information on a sub-regional basis is also available and can be sent to the hon. Member if required.

International Maritime Organisation

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he foresees any potential adverse effects upon safety legislation in the United Kingdom if any deliberations of the International Maritime Organisation are delayed as a result of members' contribution defaults; what steps are being taken to remedy the default situation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo [holding reply 13 January 1989]: No adverse effect on the United Kingdom's safety legislation programme is foreseen, given that the International Maritime Organisation's maritime safety committee is to meet in 1989 as originally planned. At its November meeting, the IMO council requested the secretary general to remind member states of their obligation to pay their assessments on time. This is being reinforced by direct approaches by the secretary general, and individual member states, to those governments currently in default, including Panama which has the largest accumulation of arrears. In addition, the council has established a Working Group to examine and advise on the organisation's longer-term financial solution.

HOME DEPARTMENT

DNA Tests

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to announce the outcome of his review of the cases of over-age applicants for entry certificates as dependent children who were refused entry before they were 18 years old and have since proved they were wrongly refused by the use of DNA tests.

Mr. Renton: I am not yet in a position to announce any conclusion on this matter, but I hope to be able to do so before long.

Criminal Injuries

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will arrange for statistics on criminal injuries to include information on the number of such injuries sustained by people during their working time.

Mr. John Patten: Statistics on criminal injuries are held centrally by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board but only in relation to applications made for compensation. The board publishes figures relating to police officers injuries on duty (paragraph 7.1 of their latest annual report, Cm. 536) but has no plans to collect such information for other occupations.

Race Relations

Ms. Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to being about an increase in the numbers of black people applying to join the prison service.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Recent advertising campaigns have specifically highlighted the need for recruits from the ethnic minorities, and recruitment material emphasises the service's commitment to racial equality. In addition, several initiatives have been taken to improve contacts with ethnic minority groups to explain the work of the prison service, and these will continue.

Ms. Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will take steps to ensure that boards of visitors comment on race relations in their annual reports.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Advice on the format and content of annual reports, which specifically lists race relations as an item for comment, was reissued on 21 December to all board chairmen in anticipation of the preparation of reports for 1988.

Football (Arrests)

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether, pursuant to his answer of 19 December 1988 on football statistics, Official Report, columns 56 to 60, he will publish similar tables for the 1987-88 English Football League season showing the number of arrests of home and away supporters on each ground plus the numbers of each team's supporters who were arrested on away grounds.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department

(1) how many of the 6,147 arrests at Football League matches last season took place within football grounds;

(2) how many of the 6,147 people arrested at Football League matches during the last season were convicted as a result.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The information collated by the Association of Chief Police Officers on arrests at Football League matches in England and Wales does not distinguish between arrests made inside grounds and arrests directly connected with those matches made outside the grounds. Nor does the information detail the outcome of arrests and distinguish between home and away supporters.

Viraj Mendis

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what legal expenses have been incurred by his Department in court cases pertaining to Viraj Mendis.

Mr. Renton: The estimated costs to date (but not including the costs incurred in the court proceedings on Thursday, 19 January) incurred by Treasury Solicitor's Department and in fees for Counsel in representing Home Office interests before the courts in the case of Viraj Mendis are about £8,000 excluding VAT. Any costs incurred within the Home Office cannot be separately identified from those incurred on other cases.

Firearms

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many additional appointments are being made of (a) civilian, and (b) police staff to deal with shotgun licence and firearm certificate applications following the enactment of the Firearms (Amendment) Act 1988.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Firearms (Amendment) Act received Royal Assent on 15 November 1988, but its provisions have not yet come into force. The appointment of civilian and uniformed staff to process applications for certificates is a matter for individual chief officers of police, who are responsible for the administration of the Firearms Acts. Information on the number of such appointments is not kept centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Transmitters

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will publish a table showing how many transmitters are sited in each ITV region.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I understand from the IBA that ITV transmitters are situated as follows:

	Main Stations	Relays
Anglia	3	18
Border	2	58
Central	5	58
Channel	1	6
Grampian	7	74
Granada	1	56
HTV (Wales)	6	157
HTV (West)	1	52
LWT/Thames	1	39
STV	4	76
TVS	6	59
TSW	5	72
TTT	3	35
UTV	3	40
YTV	2	52

Transmission Costs

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will publish a table showing the transmission cost per head of the population for each ITV region.

Mr. Renton: I understand from the Independent Broadcasting Authority that this information is not at present available. I hope that information about costs of transmission in different areas will emerge from the study on privatisation of the transmission system which my right hon. Friend announced on 30 December.

Metropolitan Police

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has for improving the accountability and financial control of the Metropolitan police and the information provided to Parliament.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Home Office and the Metropolitan police seek continually to make improvements in these areas. The steps that have been taken will be set out in a memorandum which will be put to the Committee of Public Accounts shortly.

Rugby Match (Twickenham)

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many motorists leaving a rugby match at Twickenham on 6 December 1988 were stopped by the Metropolitan police; how many were asked to take a breathalyser test; how many were subsequently re-tested at a police station; and, of those, how many were charged.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to a question by my hon. Friend the Member for Havant (Sir I. Lloyd) on 12 December 1988 at column 463.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the estimated cost to police funds of the operation mounted by the Metropolitan police to check motorists leaving the rugby match at Twickenham on 6 December 1988; and how many officers of what rank were involved and for what period.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that the operation involved three sergeants and 23 constables for four hours (two hours at the scene). Since the operation took place in normal police time no additional costs were incurred.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Home Affairs pursuant to his answer of 17 January to the hon. Member for Stretford (Mr. Lloyd), Official Report, column 139, whether he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis upon when the functioning and efficiency of breath testing instruments used on motorists leaving the rugby match at Twickenham on 6 December 1988 was last tested.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I am advised by the Commissioner that the breath testing instruments used at Twickenham on 6 December 1988 were tested on 30 November 1988.

Immigration

Mr. Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Office Department on how many occasions since the Immigration Act 1971 came into force he has used his power under section 21 of that Act, to refer matters for consideration to the appellate authorities; in how many of those instances he accepted the opinion of the adjudicator or tribunal on the matter referred; and if he will identify the cases in which he has used these powers.

Mr. Renton: There is no record that the powers under section 21 have ever been used.

Crime Statistics

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many convictions arose in 1988 from admissions made by prisoners currently serving sentences for other crimes; how many of these were multiple admissions of guilt; and what were the comparable figures for 1978.

Mr. John Patten: This information is not available.

Remand

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he is taking to reduce the number of people held on remand.

Mr. John Patten: We are taking steps to reduce both the number of people remanded in custody and the time taken to deal with cases. In many areas, the probation service is providing Crown prosecutors with better information on defendants through bail information schemes. This will help prosecutors to decide whether they need oppose bail. Resources are being provided over three financial years for the creation of about 500 new bail places at approved hostels.

Magistrates and their clerks have been urged to concentrate on reducing delays. A management information system is being introduced to help magistrates' courts monitor their performance. We intend to extend further the operation of custody time limits later this year.

My noble and learned Friend the Lord Chancellor has taken steps to tackle delays in the Crown court through the provision of more resources and improved management. Additional judges have been appointed and new court rooms have been opened. The reclassification of certain offences under the Criminal Justice Act 1988 should help to ease pressure on the Crown court.

Greater Manchester Police

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has met the Chief Constable of the Greater Manchester police authority to discuss the recruitment of extra officers to combat the increasingly high crime rate.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My right hon. Friend is aware of the chief constable's wish to have more police officers for the Greater Manchester police and my right hon. and noble Friend the Minister of State met the chief constable on 9 November, when police manpower was discussed. Decisions on applications for increases in force establishments from police authorities, including Greater Manchester police authority, will be announced shortly.

Broadcasting (Council of Europe Convention)

Mr. Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made towards a Council of Europe convention on broadcasting.

Mr. Renton: Substantial progress towards finalising the convention was made at a conference of Council of Europe Broadcasting Ministers in Stockholm last November, at which I led the United Kingdom delegation. The remaining work on the draft text is now being undertaken by the Ministers' deputies of the Council of Europe in Strasbourg, and we hope that the convention will be opened for signature later this year.

Dog Fights

Dr. Glyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for reports from chief constables as to the steps they are taking to discover the sites of organised dog fights.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: No. It is for chief officers to decide what steps to take in their own force area.

Charity Commissioners

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he is in a position to announce the appointment of two part-time Charity Commissioners.

Mr. Hurd: I have today appointed Mrs. Diane Yeo and Mr. Michael Webber to act as Charity Commissioners on a part-time basis. The appointments will be for three years initially, with a possibility of extension to a maximum of five years.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Child Care Facilities

Mr. Allen: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will introduce on-site child care facilities for children of hon. Members and staff of the House.

Mr. Wakeham: The Accommodation and Administration Sub-Committee has the possible provision of child-care facilities under consideration and, pending any decision on the principle, has drawn the attention of the New Building Sub-Committee to the possible need to accommodate such a facility in phase II of the new parliamentary buildings.

ENERGY

Unleaded Petrol

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he has set the petroleum retailing companies a date by which unleaded petrol must be available on the forecourts of all filling stations either owned or serviced by them.

Mr. Peter Morrison: No such date has been set.

EC Directive 85/210/EEC requires member states "to ensure the availability and balanced distribution within their territories of unleaded petrol from 1 October 1989".

By the end of last year, unleaded petrol was available at more than 3,000 United Kingdom petrol stations, about 15 per cent. of the total. Current conversions of petrol stations to unleaded are continuing at about 60 per week.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Identity Cards

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether his Department has investigated, or is currently studying, the usefulness of a national identity card to his departmental responsibilities; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Ian Stewart: As I made clear in my reply of 28 July 1988 to my hon. Friend the Member for Stockport (Mr. Favell) at columns 524-525, we keep this matter under review.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many oral parliamentary questions he has answered by written reply because the question was not reached at Question Time, for the most recent year for which figures are available.

Mr. Tom King: During 1988, of a total of 323 oral parliamentary questions, 241 were answered as written questions.

Gleneyre and Burnside Children's Home (Inquiry)

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the re-opened inquiry into alleged sexual assaults at the Gleneyre and Burnside children's home, referred to in his answer to the hon. Member for Brent, East of 23 May, Official Report, columns 35-36, has been completed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ian Stewart [holding answer 10 January 1989]: The police investigation referred to has been completed. A file was forwarded to the Director of Public Prosecutions (Northern Ireland), who directed that no prosecutions should be brought.

Police Stations (Stolen Weapons)

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to the written answer of 15 December to the hon. Member for Brent, East, in what form information on weapons stolen from police stations is kept.

Mr. Ian Stewart [holding answer 10 January 1989]: This is a matter for the Chief Constable. I understand, however, that centralised records do not differentiate between the actual sources of theft, but cover weapons stolen from (a) members on and off duty; (b) members' homes; (c) official and private vehicles; (d) officers injured and killed; and (e) police stations.

Grants

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the types of financial assistance by way of grant or otherwise which may be given at the discretion of a Northern Ireland Department, where the moneys required for giving the assistance (a) are payable out of the Consolidated Fund of Northern Ireland, or (b) may be appropriated by Northern Ireland Assembly measure.

Mr. Ian Stewart [holding answer 12 January 1989]: All payments by Northern Ireland Departments of grants and other assistances are contained in the various Northern Ireland departmental votes and are funded from the Northern Ireland Consolidated Fund. The Northern Ireland Estimates 1988-89", a copy of which is in the Library contains detailed spending plans for Northern Ireland Departments, which include details of such grants and assistance.

Public Authority Contracts

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland in what circumstances a public authority invites the submission of offers before entering into a contract.

Mr. Ian Stewart [holding answer 12 January 1989]: Under normal circumstances, all public authorities invite the submission of offers before entering into a contract.

Firearms and Explosives

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish in the Official Report a table to show how many finds of (a) firearms, (b) explosives and (c) ammunition were made in (i) Londonderry city, and (ii) the Royal Ulster Constabulary, N division, in each of the years from 1984 to 1988.

Mr. Ian Stewart [holding answer 17 January 1989]: The information is as follows:

(i) Weapons, ammunition and explosives[1] recovered in areas covered by Londonderry city RUC stations[2] (1984-88)

Year	Weapons	Ammunition (rounds)	Explosives (lbs)
1984	31	889	1,279·2
1985	11	242	1,414·1
1986	26	774	867·2
1987	32	1,868	487·1
1988	29	2,218	2,476·5

(ii) Weapons, ammunition and explosives[1] recovered in the Royal Ulster Constabulary N division (1984-88)

Year	Weapons	Ammunition (rounds)	Explosives (lbs)
1984	37	2,444	1,499·7
1985	21	2,234	1,415·2
1986	38	1,660	1,670·6
1987	83	1,894	666·8
1988	41	2,837	3,584·9

[1] Figures for explosives do not include recoveries from neutralised devices.

[2] Londonderry city RUC stations: Strand road, Shantallow, Rosemount and Waterside—include some rural territory.

Housing Discrimination

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on what date he hopes to publish the report carried out by the Policy Studies Institute on housing discrimination; and why this report has hitherto been withheld from publication.

Mr. Tom King: The Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights, which is an independent body, stated in its report on fair employment (Cm. 237) that it had commissioned from the Policy Studies Institute some research on housing patterns and policies. I am advised that this research is not yet complete.

SCOTLAND

Health Service (Grading)

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many nursing and midwifery staff from each of the old grades have been assimilated to each of the new grades in the clinical grading structure by each health board.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave the hon. Member for Strathkelvin and Bearsden (Mr. Galbraith) on 20 January 1989 at column 338.

Rating Reform

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) whether he will introduce regulations that oblige charging authorities to inform community charge payers that the extract of the community charge register containing their names and addresses can be inspected and copied by debt collectors, police, Government Departments and mail order companies;

(2) whether any of his recent publications informing community charge payers about the new financial arrangements for Scotland tells them that the extract of the community charge register containing their names and addresses can be inspected and copied by debt-collectors, police, Government Departments and mail order companies.

Mr. Lang: I refer the hon. Member to my reply of 10 January to his earlier question. I do not consider that any further formal notification or other guidance to individuals of the present position as regards inspection of the register is required.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what arrangements his Department has made to allow community charge payers the option of whether they can remove their names from the extract of the community charge register available for public inspection.

Mr. Lang: Any registered person in respect of whom there is reasonable cause to believe that he or she is, or may be, at risk of physical violence or threats of physical violence can apply to the appropriate community charges registration officer to have his name excluded from the parts of the register open to public inspection.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will introduce regulations that bring the same arrangements for the inspection of the extract of the community charge register as outlined by his right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for the Environment, Official Report, column 493, 14 November 1988 and Official Report, column 426, 28 November 1988.

Mr. Lang: No.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received relating to the collection of the date of birth of every community charge payer; and whether any of those representations object to indiscriminate collection of dates of birth.

Mr. Lang: The requirement was included in response to representations made by local authority practitioners during the passage of the Abolition of Domestic Rates Etc. (Scotland) Act 1987. A number of individuals and organisations have made representations against it.

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make it his policy to publish a full list of the community charge figures set by each council as soon as the figures are available, setting out the district, regional or island and water community charge for each area and in equivalent terms the forecast of these figures he published on 4 November 1988 and the figures which would have resulted without safety net adjustments to the revenue support grant.

Mr. Lang: I intend to publish in due course a full list of personal community charges and to set alongside these details of each authority's planned expenditure increase over the present year. This will allow community charge payers to see in appropriate cases the extent to which their charges are inflated by overspending.

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what land he has designated under paragraph 11 of schedule 1A to the Abolition of Domestic Rates (Scotland) Act 1987; and how many persons he estimates will be exempt from community charge as a result of any such designation.

Mr. Lang: Following discussions with the Ministry of Defence it is proposed to designate Glencorse and Milton Bridge camps near Penicuik as places where the pattern of residence of army personnel is so transient as to make individual registration for the personal community charge impracticable. A contribution equivalent to the personal community charge for the area will be required from service personnel who are solely or mainly resident in the camps in respect of each day of their residence. The Ministry of Defence will then pay the levying authority an amount equal to the total of the personal community charges. It is estimated that at any one time there will be about 100 service men resident in the camps.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will introduce regulations to specify that the date of birth of community charge payers need be collected only when there are two or more people living at the same address with the same name and initials.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 22 December 1988]: Section 13(1)(d) of the Abolition of Domestic Rates Etc. (Scotland) Act 1987, as amended by the Local Government Finance Act 1988, requires that the community charges register must specify the date of birth of each person registered in it. There is no power to remove this requirement by regulations.

Local Authorities (Staff Increases)

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list in the Official Report for each local authority in Scotland the staff increases they have experienced in each of the last three years for which figures are available.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is contained in the joint manpower watch quarterly returns which are compiled jointly by the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities and the Scottish Office. Copies of these quarterly returns are available in the Library.

Set-aside

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many applications and registrations he has received under the set-aside scheme (a) within and (b) outside, less favoured areas; and within each category how many applications he has received for (i) permanent fallow, (ii) rotational fallow, (iii) farm woodland and (iv) non agricultural use.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I refer the hon. Member to the reply which I gave on 19 December 1988 to the hon. Member for Angus, East (Mr. Welsh) at columns 81-82. Provisional figures indicate that about 31 per cent. of the land in Scotland proposed for set-aside has less-favoured area classification, that is, about 5,000 hectares with the total of 16,183 hectares.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many applications and registrations he has received under the set-aside scheme on a county by county basis; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I refer the hon. Member to the two replies which I gave on 19 December 1988 to the hon. Member for Angus, East (Mr. Welsh) at columns 81-82.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table showing his Department's actual expenditure since 1979-80 and planned expenditure to 1991-92 (a) in cash terms, (b) in constant 1988-89 prices and (c) as a percentage of the United Kingdom planning total.

Mr. Lang: The information is given in the table. Column (d) shows the ratio of Scottish "block" services to comparable expenditure in England, and is more meaningful than column (c) as the United Kingdom planning total includes expenditure in Scotland on services, for example defence and social security, which are not included in my right hon. and learned Friend's responsibilities. The figure for 1991-92 in column (d) is not available pending decisions on individual programmes.

Scotland programme in cash terms, constant 1988-89 prices and as a percentage of the United Kingdom planning total

	(a) Cash	(b) Constant prices	(c) (a) as a percentage of the United Kingdom planning total	(d) Block services as a percentage of comparable services in England
1979-80	4,552	8,492	5·9	14·4
1980-81	5,383	8,478	5·8	14·4
1981-82	5,841	8,375	5·6	14·9
1982-83	6,509	8,710	5·7	14·7
1983-84	6,842	8,757	5·7	14·5
1984-85	7,114	8,667	5·5	14·0
1985-86	7,215	8,340	5·4	14·5
1986-87	7,732	8,649	5·6	14·7
1987-88	8,212	8,725	5·6	14·7
1988-89	8,506	8,506	5·4	14·7
1989-90	8,970	8,540	5·4	14·3
1990-91	9,140	8,410	5·1	14·2
1991-92	9,680	8,650	5·1	—

Higher Education

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table showing the proportion of school leavers in Scotland who continued into (a) university education and (b) other higher education for each year since 1979.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information for each year since 1979 is not readily available. The most recent information from the biennial Scottish young people's survey relating to the destination of school leavers was published by the Scottish Education Department in its statistical bulletin "School Leavers' Destinations (No 12/E1/1988)" published in December 1988 which is available in the Library.

Colleges of Education

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many staff are employed in each of the Scottish colleges of education (a) on part-time contracts, (b) re-employed after taking premature retirement compensation under the appropriate PRC scheme and (c) those in category (b) who were granted PRC on grounds of redundancy.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: According to information provided by the colleges, the numbers of staff currently employed in each of the categories is as follows:

	(a) on part-time contracts	(b) re-employed after receiving PRC	(c) those in column b re-employed after receiving redundancy compensation
Craigie	2	None	—
Jordanhill	5	None	—
Moray House	1	None	—

	(a) on part-time contracts	(b) re-employed after receiving PRC	(c) those in column b re-employed after receiving redundancy compensation
Northern	12	8	4
St. Andrew's	5	None	—

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what changes he proposes to make in the negotiating machinery for salaries and conditions of service of staff in centrally funded colleges of higher education; and what steps will be taken to protect the negotiating rights of staff.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Cumbernauld and Kilsyth (Mr. Hogg) on 24 June 1988 at column 749.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many staff are employed by colleges of education on a freelance basis in the provision of in-service education for Scottish teachers.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Department does not collect information about the colleges' use of self-employed individuals.

Nursery Education

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the total expenditure on nursery education in each of the years 1977-78 to 1987-88 in cash terms and in real terms based on 1987-88 prices using the gross domestic product deflation (i) in Scotland and (ii) for each local education authority area.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The following tables show the available information on nursery expenditure in cash and real terms by education authority for the period requested.

£000

	Scotland		Borders		Central		Dumfries and Galloway		Fife		Grampian
	(a)	(b)	(a)	(b)	(a)	(b)	(a)	(b)	(a)	(b)	(a)	(b)
1977-78	12,000	27,258	[1]	[1]	288	654	57	129	[1]	[1]	385	875
1978-79	12,000	24,623	[1]	[1]	418	858	61	125	[1]	[1]	858	1,761
1979-80	12,548	22,031	[1]	[1]	479	841	80	140	77	135	920	1,615
1980-81	15,714	23,294	[1]	[1]	640	949	102	151	233	345	1,155	1,712
1981-82	17,806	24,028	[1]	[1]	770	1,039	99	134	227	306	1,222	1,649
1982-83	21,779	27,430	182	229	885	1,115	109	137	2,066	2,602	1,196	1,506
1983-84	22,343	26,915	182	219	1,051	1,266	118	142	1,121	1,350	1,325	1,596
1984-85	23,854	27,351	192	220	1,105	1,267	121	139	2,525	2,895	1,352	1,550
1985-86	25,599	27,849	203	221	1,242	1,351	136	148	2,291	2,492	1,437	1,563
1986-87	27,201	28,636	221	233	1,347	1,418	151	159	2,316	2,438	1,522	1,602
1987-88	30,689	30,689	250	250	1,542	1,542	186	186	2,131	2,131	1,755	1,755

[1] Not shown separately.

£'000

	Highland		Lothian		Strathclyde		Tayside		Orkney		Shetland		Western Isles
	(a)	(b)	(a)	(b)	(a)	(b)	(a)	(b)	(a)	(b)	(a)	(b)	(a)	(b)
1977-78	53	120	1,860	4,225	6,957	15,803	522	1,186	0·3	0·7	[1]—	[1]—	39	89
1978-79	91	187	2,237	4,590	5,994	12,299	746	1,531	0·5	1	12	25	41	84
1979-80	157	276	2,640	4,635	7,204	12,649	902	1,584	2	4	34	60	53	93
1980-81	187	277	3,355	4,973	8,831	13,091	1,096	1,625	3	4	45	67	67	99
1981-82	213	287	3,803	5,132	10,105	13,636	1,238	1,671	2	3	43	58	84	113
1982-83	322	406	4,552	5,733	11,046	13,912	1,289	1,623	11	14	47	59	74	93
1983-84	328	395	4,770	5,746	11,839	14,261	1,462	1,761	14	17	45	54	88	106
1984-85	310	355	4,612	5,288	12,133	13,912	1,400	1,605	15	17	45	52	44	50
1985-86	316	344	4,996	5,435	13,371	14,546	1,542	1,678	15	16	50	54	[1]—	[1]—
1986-87	334	352	5,411	5,697	14,179	14,927	1,650	1,737	18	19	52	55	[1]—	[1]—
1987-86	385	385	5,871	5,871	16,603	16,603	1,884	1,884	25	25	57	57	[1]—	[1]—

[1] Not shown separately.

Source: local financial returns.

Notes:

1. Column (a) represents cash outturn, column (b) real terms calculated by applying GDP deflator, base year 1987-88.
2. Figures cover local authority current expenditure on nursery education. Information on capital expenditure is not broken down by educational sector.
3. Where figures are not available this is because authorities' returns have not broken down expenditure between the various sectors.

Pupil Numbers

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the number of pupils attending (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in each of the years 1978-79 to 1987-88 inclusive.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The numbers of pupils (in thousands) in education authority schools at September of each year are set out in the table.

	Primary	Secondary
1978	569·1	410·4
1979	545·2	410·2
1980	518·5	407·8

	Primary	Secondary
1981	492·6	404·6
1982	468·0	399·1
1983	448·0	390·4
1984	437·5	376·1
1985	435·5	360·6
1986	433·5	344·4
1987	430·9	327·2

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the total number of pupils in S5 and S6 and as a percentage of all in the age group for each year 1979-80 to 1987-88 inclusive and for each local education authority area.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The figures for pupils aged 16 and 17 in all schools at September of each of the years for which information is available and the figures for each education authority at September 1987 are set out in the table:

	Pupils aged 16	Pupils aged 17	Pupils aged 16 as a percentage of population aged 16	Pupils aged 17 as a percentage of population aged 17
1979	47,080	16,550	51·5	18·4
1980	49,810	17,160	53·9	19·0
1981	51,560	19,840	54·3	21·3
1982	51,080	20,680	57·0	21·9
1983	50,550	20,060	56·3	22·6
1984	49,970	19,540	56·6	21·9
1986	48,550	19,230	58·8	22·6
1987	48,890	19,420	59·5	23·7
Borders	830	370	52·5	23·3
Central	2,630	1,000	59·5	22·5
Dumfries/Galloway	1,300	580	54·3	25·0
Fife	2,950	1,350	54·2	23·6
Grampian	4,920	1,920	61·3	25·3
Highland	2,010	900	60·7	28·1
Lothian	7,080	3,140	64·2	28·3
Strathclyde	22,550	8,060	58·8	20·8
Tayside	3,900	1,770	62·1	28·9
Orkney	200	100	64·0	34·3
Shetland	180	80	45·1	23·5
Western Isles	350	160	64·2	28·9

The ages of the pupils are as at December and of the population as at June of each year.

Figures for 1985 are not available due to industrial action by teachers.

School Books

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the total expenditure on text and library books in (a) primary schools and (b) secondary schools at the end of each year since 1978-79 in cash terms and in real terms, using 1987-88 prices.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information requested, taken from local authority financial returns, is as follows:

Expenditure on text and library books

£ million

Year	Primary at outturn prices	Secondary at outturn prices	Primary at 1987-88 prices	Secondary at 1987-88 prices
1978-79	2·584	3·411	5·302	6·999
1979-80	2·994	3·944	5·257	6·925
1980-81	3·026	3·790	4·486	5·618
1981-82	3·026	3·953	4·318	5·334
1982-83	3·290	4·004	4·444	5·043
1983-84	4·027	5·214	4·851	6·281
1984-85	4·178	5·173	4·791	5·931
1985-86	3·882	4·857	4·223	5·284
1986-87	4·734	5·740	4·984	6·043
1987-88 (provisional)	5·031	5·975	5·031	5·975

Over the same period expenditure per pupil in primary and secondary schools increased in cash and in real terms.

Pig Farming

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the information he has on the number of pig farmers that have gone into liquidation in Scotland in the past 12 months.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Information is not available centrally on the number of pig farmers going into liquidation. The number of holdings with at least 500 pigs rose from 199 in June 1987 to 209 in June 1988.

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the subsidies that Scottish pig farmers currently receive from the Government.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Government pay no subsidies directly to pig farmers. However, there are

Community measures which assist the industry: export refunds to the USA and Canada were substantially increased in December 1987 and private storage aids were made available from February to July 1988. In addition, we secured in the course of last year's price fixing negotiations a reduction in the pigmeat monetary compensatory amount which, combined with the strengthening of sterling, has had the effect of reducing this to zero as from 1 January 1989.

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has on the effect of the failure of the United States of America soya bean crop on the Scottish pig industry, and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The price of soya bean meal rose last summer because of the drought in the United States of America and this led to feed compounders increasing their pig ration prices. However, pig prices increased significantly towards the end of the year to stand at their highest level for 30 months in December 1988. This has helped to offset the effect of the increased feed prices.

Housing Support Grant

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what is the percentage change in equivalent housing support grant for Edinburgh for each year from 1978 to 1989-90;

(2) what is the percentage change in equivalent housing support grant for Edinburgh for each year from 1978 to 1989-90 adjusted for inflation;

(3) what is the percentage change in equivalent housing support grant for Scotland for each year from 1978 to 1989-90;

(4) what is the equivalent housing support grant figure for Edinburgh for each year from 1978 to 1989-90;

(5) what is the equivalent housing support grant for Scotland for each year from 1978 to 1989-90;

(6) what is the equivalent housing support grant for Scotland for each year from 1978 to 1989-90, adjusted for inflation;

(7) what is the equivalent housing support grant for Edinburgh for each year from 1978 to 1989-90, adjusted for inflation;

(8) what is the percentage change in equivalent housing support grant for Scotland for each year from 1978 to 1989-90, adjusted for inflation.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is shown in the following table:

Housing support grant payments	[1]1978-79	1979-80	1980-81	1981-82	1982-83	1983-84	1984-85	1985-86	1986-87	1987-88	[2]1988-89	[3]1989-90
Edinburgh
1.1 Actual payments (£ million)	—	11·269	12·518	7·869	2·328	0	0	0	0	0	0	0
1.2 Percentage increase on previous year	—	—	+11·1	−37·1	−70·4	−100·0	—	—	—	—	—	—
2.1 Percentage adjusted using GDP deflators (£ million)	—	22·074	20·701	11·847	3·271	0	0	0	0	0	0	0
2.2 Percentage increase on previous year	—	—	−6·2	−42·8	−72·4	−100·0	—	—	—	—	—	—
Scotland
3.1 Actual payments (£ million)	—	213·4	228·2	161·9	104·6	72·1	67·2	64·2	44·5	41·9	54·6	60·4
3.2 Percentage increase on previous year	—	—	+6·9	−29·1	−35·4	−31·1	−6·8	−4·5	−30·7	−5·7	+30·3	+10·5
4.1 Percentage adjusted using GDP deflators (£ million)	—	418·0	377·4	243·7	147·0	96·9	86·0	77·9	52·2	46·8	57·4	60·4
4.2 Percentage increase on previous year	—	—	−9·7	−35·4	−39·7	−34·1	−11·3	−9·4	−32·9	−10·5	+22·7	+5·3

[1] Information not readily available.
[2] Provisional.
[3] Estimated.

Tied Housing

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many police officers are residing in tied housing at present.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: As at 31 December 1987, the latest date for which information is readily available, 2,266 police officers in Scotland occupied housing owned or rented by police authorities. This represented 16·8 per cent. of the total police strength.

Forestry Commission Land (Sales)

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what guidelines have been issued (a) to the Forestry Commission and (b) from the Forestry Commission to each of its conservancies on procedures to be followed on the sale of Forestry Commission land and plantations.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The then Secretary of State for Scotland, the right hon. Member for Ayr (Mr. Younger), wrote to the chairman of the Forestry Commission on 28 May 1981 stating that the Commissioners would be responsible for selecting areas for disposal and setting out the main considerations which Forestry Ministers would wish them to take into account in the selection process; the letter was reproduced as appendix V to the commission's 1981-82 annual report. On 8 November 1984, the Secretary of State announced changes to the Forestry Commission's disposals objectives in a written reply in the House (Official Report, columns 6-7); this announcement was reproduced in the commission's 1984-85 annual report at appendix V.

Instructions have been given to each of the commission's conservancies which embody the above, as well as a statement on the commission's policy and practice on disposals which was published as appendix VI to its 1984-85 annual report.

Copies of the Forestry Commission's annual reports are held in the Library of the House.

Lennox Castle Hospital

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any plans to allocate additional monies to the Greater Glasgow health board in order to fund improvements at Lennox Castle hospital; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I refer the hon. Member to my announcement today giving my approval to plans submitted by Greater Glasgow health board in November 1988 for the redevelopment of Lennox Castle hospital at a cost of £4·56 million. This follows the opening in May 1988 of two upgraded villas and two new 12 bed intensive care units at a cost of £4·4 million.

US Submarines (Coolant Discharge)

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what effect the discharging of radioactive primary coolant by United States' submarines has had on radioactivity levels in the Holy Loch since 1960.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Holy Loch has been monitored regularly both by the Ministry of Defence and the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food since the United States base was established. The results have confirmed that any radioactivity present in the environment arising from the operation of the base has been small and of low significance in radiological terms.

Further Education

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the total number of 16 to 18 year-olds in non-advanced further education and as a percentage of all in that age group for each year from 1979-80 to 1987-88 inclusive and for each local education authority area.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information requested is not readily available in the form requested.

Regional Assistance

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give for regional selective assistance the total number of applications (a) received and (b) processed from 1 April 1988 to 31 December 1988; the total amount paid out in that period and the total estimated expenditure for the year 1 April 1988 to 31 March 1989.

Mr. Ian Lang: The information requested is shown below for the period 1 April to 31 December 1988.

Regional Selective Assistance

	Totals £ million
Number of applications received	188·0
Number of applications processed	171·0
Payment authorisations made	23·5

The provision of the financial year 1988-89 is £60·4 million. Expenditure under this scheme is normally concentrated in the last quarter of the financial year.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total estimated expenditure on regional development grant and regional selective assistance in each of the years 1988-89, 1989-90 and 1990-91.

Mr. Lang: The provision for regional development grant and regional selective assistance for the financial year 1988-89 is £60·3 million and £60·4 million respectively. Figures for 1898-90 and 1990-91 will be published in the Scottish Commentary in February 1989.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give for regional development grants (a) the number of applications outstanding on 31 March 1988, (b) the number of those applications processed by 31 December 1988, (c) the number currently outstanding and (d) the total amount of money paid out since 31 March 1988 in regional development grants to those applications.

Mr. Lang: The figures requested for applications in Scotland under the revised regional development grant scheme are as follows:

	Totals
Number of applications outstanding at 31 March:	5,117
Number of these processed by 31 December:	3,297
Number still outstanding at 19 January:	1,678
Payment authorisations made by 19 January on these applications:	£13·1 million

Glasgow District Court

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the numbers of cases reported to the procurator fiscal for possible prosecution in the Glasgow district court and the percentage which were marked "no proceedings" for the latest period for which such figures are available.

Mr. Rifkind [holding answer 19 January 1989]: A total of 54,819 cases were reported for possible prosecution in Glasgow district court in 1988. No proceedings were instructed in 16,213 cases (30 per cent.).

Cumbernauld Development Corporation

Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish in the Official Report the names of the persons appointed to serve on the board of Cumbernauld development corporation, along with the date of their original appointment and the date their appointment terminates.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 20 January 1989]: The information required is as follows:

Chairman/Deputy Chairman
David W. Mitchell CBE

Appointed Member 1 January 1985-31 December 1986
Appointed Chairman 1 January 1987-31 December 1990

Tom M. Barrie JP
Appointed Deputy Chairman 1 January 1979-31 December 1982
Re-Appointed Deputy Chairman 1 January 1983-31 December 1986
Re-Appointed Deputy Chairman 1 January 1987-31 December 1989

Members

Professor John A. Dawson BSc PhD
Appointed 1 January 1987-31 December 1989

Gerard McElroy Esq
Appointed 1 January 1987-31 December 1990

Provost Rosemary McKenna
Appointed 1 January 1985-31 December 1988
Re-Appointed 1 January 1989-31 December 1992

T. Eric Miller Esq MA CA JP
Appointed 1 January 1985-31 December 1988
Re-Appointed 1 January 1989-31 December 1990

John S. Moreland Esq BSc MI MechE
Appointed 1 February 1976-31 December 1978
Re-Appointed 1 January 1979-31 December 1982
1 January 1983-31 December 1986
1 January 1987-31 December 1989

Patrick Lockett Esq
Appointed 1 January 1989-31 December 1991

John M. Simpson FRICS FCI Arb
Appointed 1 January 1983-31 December 1986
Re-Appointed 1 January 1987-31 December 1990

Development Corporation Houses

Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many houses from development corporation stock have been sold in each of the new towns since vesting day, expressed as a percentage of the total stock.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 20 January 1989]: the information is set out in the table:

	Total stock	Total sales	Percentage sales
East Kilbride[1]	22,585	9,794	43·4
Glenrothes[1]	12,095	5,216	43·13
Cumbernauld[1]	21,063	6,857	32·6
Livingston[2]	12·120	2,780	22·9
Irvine[1]	5,264	1,016	19·3

[1] As at 31 December 1988.
[2] As at 30 September 1988.

HEALTH

Food Poisoning

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on food poisoning attributed to chickens and eggs in the 12 months to December.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: There were over 12,000 isolations of salmonella enteritidis, phage type 4, reported to the public health laboratory service in 1988. This was more than double the number reported in 1987. Other salmonella serotypes did not increase comparably. PT4 is associated predominantly with poultry and eggs and the number of food poisoning outbreaks linked to eggs also showed a marked increase in 1988. Provisional data now available show that up to the end of 1988 there were 60 outbreaks of salmonella food poisoning involving about 1,600 people in England and Wales attributed to the consumption of eggs. These figures probably underestimate the number of people affected.

I will reply separately on outbreaks of food poisoning associated with chickens.

Meningitis

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement about recent cases of meningitis in the area of the North Derbyshire health authority.

Mr. Freeman: The provisional numbers of cases notified to the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys for 1988 are as follows:

	Total	Rate per 100,000 population
England and Wales	1,309	2·61
Trent RHA	110	2·37
Derbyshire County (nearest area available	12	1·31

Notifications of meningococcal meningitis normally rise to a peak during the winter months, and the disease also appears in unexplained "clusters" of cases.

Dental Health

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans the Health Education Authority has for an advertising campaign designed to improve the dental health of the nation; and if he will ensure that any campaign takes account of the recommendations shortly to be made by the COMA committee on sugars and diseases.

Mr. Freeman: Following publication of the White Paper "Promoting Better Health" the Government have made funds available to the Health Education Authority to run a pilot campaign to promote dental health in the north-west. It is likely that the campaign will be under way before the recommendations of the COMA panel on dietary sugars are published, but they will be taken into account in any further development of the campaign.

Medical Physicists and Scientists

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he has any plans to review policy on pay settlements for medical physicists and scientists; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: Pay of National Health Service scientists, including physicists, is a matter for negotiation between the management side of the scientific and professional staffs council, and the staff side representing these groups.

Physicists

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he has any plans to issue directives to health authorities on the levels of medical physicists required to meet the demands of the number of patients and the amount and type of equipment in use.

Mr. Mellor: No. These matters are for individual health authorities.

Royal Devon and Exeter Hospital (Radiotherapy)

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps have been taken to ensure that the disciplinary procedures taken by the regional health authority after the incident in the radiotherapy department at the Royal Devon and Exeter hospital are adequate, and that all persons culpable have been disciplined.

Mr. Mellor: Responsibility for operating disciplinary procedures and determining action in individual cases is for the employing health authority.

Cook-Chill Food

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he has taken to ensure that the non-statutory controls to which hospital cook-chill catering is subject are sufficient to ensure the proper protection of public health.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Health circular HC(86)14 sets out the requirements for hygiene that we expect health authorities to achieve on their premises. More specific guidance is given in the Health Service catering hygiene manual which requires health authorities to consult appropriate experts before a cook-chill system is introduced. I know of no cases so far reported where those requirements have not been observed and public protection not secured in National Health Service hospitals using cook-chill catering.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what action he is taking to ensure there is a legal requirement for retail cook-chill food to be kept refrigerated at appropriate temperatures throughout the period of its production, distribution, storage and sale;

(2) if he has any plans to extend the provisions of regulation 27 of the Food Hygiene (General) Regulations to cover other foodstuffs which require to be kept under strict temperature control.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The food hygiene regulations are currently under review as part of the review of the Food Act 1984. We are considering the wider application of the temperature controls in regulation 27 of the regulations as it applies only to catering premises at the moment.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what evidence he has that listeria which is not eliminated by the first cooking of food can recover and multiply under refrigeration and not be destroyed by the final reheating.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Should listeria survive because of inadequate cooking, correct refrigerated storage will prevent any significant growth. Evidence clearly indicates that inadequate temperature control is one of the main contributory factors in outbreaks of food poisoning from any of the causative organisms. It is therefore important that good practice is observed at all stages of food production and distribution.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action his Department have taken comprehensively to assess the significance of listeria in National Health Service cook-chill systems.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: An expert group recently reviewed my Department's guidelines for pre-cooked chilled food catering in use in the NHS and elsewhere. The group concluded that provided the guidelines are closely followed, the meals produced will be safe and microbiologically sound. My Department will continue to assess the results of studies into various aspects of listeriosis.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the evidence he received between publication of the 1970 guidelines on cook-freeze catering and publication of the subsequent 1980 guidelines which led him to reconsider his policy on the appropriateness of cook-chill food for community catering.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Advances in catering technology in the 1970s indicated that a cook-chill catering system could be safely operated on a large scale. An expert group considered that these technological advances in, for example, blast chilling, allowed such a system to be properly controlled in terms of the times and temperatures required to produce microbiologically sound food. The 1980 guidelines give detailed recommendations to help ensure this.

General Managers

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if it is normal practice for his Department to be represented on the appointment boards for district health authority general manager posts.

Mr. Mellor: No. Normal practice is for the district health authority to convene an appointments board consisting of its chairman, a small number of members, and two independent professional assessors, one of whom is nominated by the regional health authority.

Post Codes

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many post code areas contain three householders or less; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The information is not available. No record is held centrally of the number of households in each unit post code. The number of delivery points in each unit post code is held by the Post Office, but a delivery point may serve more than one household.

Primary Health Care

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he intends to take to raise standards of primary health care and make services more responsive to the needs of the consumer.

Mr. Mellor: The proposals in the White Paper "Promoting Better Health" are designed to do this. For example, in the case of family doctors, changes to the terms of service and remuneration system will encourage doctors to raise standards nearer to those of the best practices and to make services more sensitive to the needs of the consumer. Training and teamwork in primary care will be developed and improved. Health promotion and the prevention of disease will be a priority. We will also strengthen family practitioner committees' management role with the aim of ensuring continued development in the provision of cost-effective family practitioner services which are responsive to patients. More information will be made available to consumers about services and practitioners in their area. The procedures for making complaints against practitioners will be simplified, and existing restrictions on changing doctor will be removed.

Wagner Report

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action has been taken by his Department in response to the recommendations made in the Wagner report "Residential Care: a Positive Choice".

Mr. Mellor: The report of the committee chaired by Lady Wagner brings together a number of issues which affect the well-being and quality of life of people in residential care.

Some of the recommendations in the report relate to the matters dealt with in Sir Roy Griffiths' report on community care and are being considered in that context. Others are clearly addressed primarily to local agencies, statutory and independent, providing care and we hope they are giving full consideration to the action they can take within the resources available. Finally, there are certain recommendations which might usefully be followed up centrally within the current statutory framework, including such matters as the registration and inspection of homes, complaints procedures, contacts between residents and local communities, the supply of information for users and standards of care. We are considering promoting activity in these fields. The report also draws attention to the importance of training for people working in homes. Those recommendations are being considered in relation to the strategy we are now developing to improve training for all personal social services staff.

Paracetamol

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will refer to the Committee on Safety of Medicines the matter of risks to vegetarians of the use of paracetamol.

Mr. Mellor: We have no evidence to suggest that vegetarians using paracetamol suffer any increased risks provided that they eat a well-balanced diet. It is important that they and other paracetamol users follow the dosage instructions set out on the label.

Mental Health Review Tribunals

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many mental health review tribunals were held (i) in the five years preceding the enactment of the Mental Health Act 1983 and (ii) in all subsequent years for which he has information (a) in special hospitals and (b) in other mental hospitals and units.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is held centrally but is not readily available in the form requested. I will reply to the hon. Member shortly.

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many of the mental health review tribunals held in special hospitals, other mental hospitals and units, arose as a result of (a) requests from patients and (b) as a consequence of statutory procedures under the Mental Health Act.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many of the mental health review tribunals held since 1983 were (a) under section 2 of the Mental Health Act, (b) under section 3 of the Mental Health Act and (c) under other sections of the Act.

Mr. Freeman: The information is not available in the form requested but the table shows, for each year 1983 to 1987, the number of cases determined in respect of (i) patients detained under section 2 of the Mental Health Act 1983; (ii) other non-restricted patients and (iii) restricted patients.

Mental health review tribunals
Cases determined (all hospitals)

	Section 2 patients	Unrestricted patients	Restricted patients
1983	125	914	773
1984	711	635	787
1985	890	800	713
1986	918	1,178	733
1987	1,061	1,108	759

SOCIAL SECURITY

Pensioners (Nottingham)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many pensioners in Nottingham are (a) financially better off and (b) worse off after the social security changes in April.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I regret that statistically reliable estimates for Nottingham cannot be provided.

Income Growth

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will state the average growth in incomes in each of the last 10 years of (a) households in the bottom decile group and (b) pensioner households in the bottom decile group of pensioner households.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I regret that figures are not available on the requested basis.

Benefit Claimants (Living Standards)

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what research his Department has commissioned or carried out on or related to the living standards of claimants or the adequacy of the scale rates of supplementary benefit or income support in each year since 1979.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: There have been two major surveys on living standards during the period. "The Survey of Living Standards During Unemployment" was commissioned in 1983 and is to be supplemented by a case study, "The Living Standards of Thirty (Unemployed) Families", commissioned in 1987. "The Financial Circumstances of Disabled Households—Report Two of the OPCS Disability Survey" was commissioned in 1985.

A number of related studies have also been carried out during the period. These are, by date of commissioning: 1978, "For Richer for Poorer", a DHSS cohort study of unemployed men; 1979 (publication date) "Social Security Research—The Definition and Measurement of Poverty", the report of a seminar; 1981, "Study of the 1980 Reform of Supplementary Benefit"; 1986, "Elderly Claimants in Residential Care and Nursing Homes"; 1986, DSS in-house study of the incomes and expenditure of disabled people using data from the family expenditure survey.

In addition, the Department has had the benefit of several studies on these subjects, commissioned by other organisations.

Availability for Work Test

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average length of time taken by an appeal from a claimant denied benefit because of the availability for work test; and what proportion of these appeals is successful.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: For the quarter ended 31 March 1988, the average length of time was 22½ weeks. A total of 36·6 per cent. of appeals were found in the appellants' favour.

Benefits (Lothian Region)

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what is the number of claimants in (a) the Edinburgh Leith local office and (b) at each of the other local offices in Lothian region (i) who received a transitional addition at April 1988, (ii) who have lost this since due to a change in circumstances, giving the average amount lost, (iii) who will lose protection at April 1989, and (iv) who will at that stage still be receiving some element of protection, giving average payments, showing in each case those required to register, those not required to register, and pensioners;

(2) what is the number of 16 and 17-year olds at (a) the Edinburgh, Leith local office and (b) each of the local offices in Lothian region who (i) lost benefit on 12 September 1988 and (ii) had at that time been on benefit since prior to April 1988, broken down by those who had been classed as (1) householders and (2) non-householders; and how many of these people have (x) not so far been placed on YTS, or (y) have been refused a place on a YTS scheme due to their or its unsuitability.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I regret that the information requested is not available.

Local Pay Additions

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the number of staff, by grade, in receipt of local pay additions outside London and the south-east economic planning region; what were the different amounts paid to staff by grade; whether this sum varies due to location; what qualifying period of scale-related criteria is used; and whether this varies by location.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: There are no Department of Social Security staff in receipt of local pay additions outside London and the south-east economic planning region.

Income Support

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many people are claiming income support in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) Scotland, (c) Wales and (d) England; what are the corresponding figures for each year since 1979; and what was the actual percentage increase between the figures for 1979 and the latest figures;

(2) what proportion of people living in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) Scotland, (c) Wales and (d) England is dependent upon income support; and what are the corresponding figures for each year since 1979.

Mr. Scott: The information for Great Britain is as follows:

Number of claimants in receipt of supplementary benefit or income support

Year	Great Britain	England	Wales	Scotland
1979	2,855,000	2,396,000	172,000	286,000
1980	3,118,000	2,627,000	186,000	304,000
1981	3,723,000	3,131,000	221,000	371,000
1982	4,267,000	3,590,000	253,000	423,000
1983	4,349,000	3,649,000	260,000	440,000
1984	4,609,000	3,866,000	275,000	468,000
1986	4,938,000	4,141,000	291,000	506,000
1987	4,896,000	4,073,000	287,000	535,000
1988	4,354,000	3,596,000	259,000	499,000
Percentage increase between 1979 and 1988
	52·50	50·08	50·58	74·48

Note: All figures are rounded to the nearest thousand and may not therefore sum.

Total number of persons dependent upon supplementary benefit or income support since 1979 as a proportion of the total population[1]

Year	Great Britain	England	Wales	Scotland
1979	0·08	0·08	0·10	0·09
1080	0·09	0·09	0·10	0·09
1981	0·11	0·11	0·13	0·12
1982	0·13	0·13	0·15	0·14
1983	0·13	0·13	0·16	0·14
1984	0·14	0·14	0·17	0·15
1986	0·15	0·15	0·18	0·16
1987	0·15	0·15	0·17	0·17
1988	0·13	0·13	0·16	0·16

[1] Includes claimants, their partners and dependent children.

Source for both tables:

1979-1987 Annual Statistical Inquiry.

1988 May Quarterly Statistical Inquiry.

Information for Northern Ireland is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security in how many cases income support has been paid under regulation 8(3) of the Income Support (General) Regulations to persons not treated as available for employment.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I regret that the information is not available.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the changes since 1979 and the dates when they occurred (i) in the conditions of entitlement to supplementary benefit and income support of persons aged 19 years in non-advanced education and (ii) in the circumstances in which extra-statutory payments in lieu of benefit can be made to such persons.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 13 January 1989]: The supplementary benefit regulations were amended from 18 October 1982 to extend entitlement to benefit to persons aged 19 years in relevant education who were single parents, severely handicapped, orphans or estranged from their parents.

In 1985 that amendment was found to be defective and a circular was issued in November 1985 authorising extra-statutory payments to be made until the regulations were amended.

Amendment regulations corrected the defect from 6 April 1987 and also extended entitlement to certain young people aged 16 to 19 inclusive who were not estranged from their parents but could not be supported by them because their parents were chronically sick, or in prison, or could not enter the country.

From 11 April 1988 an upper limit of 19 years was set in all the income-related benefits for the payment of benefit to young people in full-time non-advanced education.

There have been no changes in the circumstances in which extra-statutory payments in lieu of benefit can be paid to 19 year olds in relevant education. Extra-statutory payments can be made only where claimants are deprived of all or part of their entitlement in a way not foreseen or intended when the law was drawn up.

Barlow Clowes International

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the criteria applied by his Department in dealing with applications from Barlow Clowes International investors for social security on hardship grounds.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 16 January 1989]: Investments in Barlow Clowes International are treated in the same way as other investments for income support purposes. Where the current market value, less 10 per cent. if there are expenses of sale, together with any other capital exceeds £6,000, no benefit is payable. A crisis loan may be available where the investment cannot be realised immediately and there is serious risk to the health and safety of the applicant or his family.

Mr. N. Quinn

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when his Department expects to settle the claim by Mr. N. Quinn of Birmingham, in respect of the motor accident of 20 September 1988, when the uninsured Ford Sierra registration number D378 JML belonging to his Department hit Mr. Quinn's car.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 16 January 1989]: The Department's solicitor has been in correspondence with Mr. Quinn and his insurers since 6 October 1988, following the accident when Mr. Quinn's car collided with a Crown vehicle. The Department does not subscribe to the normal third party cover afforded by insurance companies, because section 143 of the Road Traffic Act 1972 does not apply to the Crown. The Department, therefore, in common with most other Departments of State, carries its own risks and has its own insurance arrangements. I am sure that all concerned want to see the matter resolved as soon as possible.

Special Needs Hostels

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the organisations (a) which submitted evidence urging the Government to allow special needs hostels to continue being funded on a board and lodgings basis and (b) who proposed different funding arrangements.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 19 December 1988]: A list of the 346 organisations which made individual submissions considered following the issue of the consultative paper "Help With Hostel Charges" has been placed in the Library. Details of individual organisations' submissions are not normally published, but the responses varied between those who agreed that there was a need for change, those who favoured keeping the present system, those who put forward proposals of their own and those who did not have a preferred solution.

EMPLOYMENT

New Earnings Survey

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what categories of people are likely to be excluded from the coverage of the new earnings survey; and what estimate can be given about the total number of people involved.

Mr. Lee: The new earnings survey is a sample survey covering 1 per cent. of employees in Great Britain who are members of pay-as-you-earn schemes.

The main categories of the work force in employment excluded from its coverage are self-employed persons, Her Majesty's forces, those on work-related Government training programmes, without a contract of employment and those employees, mainly part-time women and young people, who earn below the income tax threshold and are not in a PAYE scheme. Exempted categories include private domestic servants, husband/wife working for spouse, company directors who do not receive a salary and those working abroad. A full description of the survey and its coverage is contained in part B of the annual new earnings survey report.

It is estimated that 5·4 million of the work force in employment in Great Britain were not covered at the time of the latest survey in April 1988.

Ethylene Dibromide

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will take action to reduce the occupational exposure limit for ethylene dibromide in the light of the recently published British Journal of Industrial Medicine article "Semen quality in papaya workers with long term exposure to ethylene dibromide".

Mr. Nicholls: The Health and Safety Commission recently reduced the occupational exposure limit for ethylene dibromide in air from 1 part per million to 0·5 ppm to measured as an eight-hour time-weighted average. That limit came into effect on 1 January 1989.

The HSC's advisory committee on toxic substances will shortly be considering proposals for translating that limit into a maximum exposure limit under the new Control of Substances Hazardous to Health Regulations. I will ensure that the article referred to by the hon. Member is brought to the attention of the committee.

Manufacturing Industry

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Employmemt if he will publish a table showing employment in manufacturing industry by county and region for each year since 1979 and for each quarter month in 1988.

Mr. Lee: Figures for the standard economic regions can be provided but employment statistics for smaller areas are available only for dates when censuses of employment are taken.

The available information for counties and the Scottish region and island areas, taken from the September 1981 and September 1984 censuses of employment, is given in table 1.

The information for standard economic regions is given in table 2.

TABLE 1

Employees in employment[1] in manufacturing industries (Divisions 2 to 4 of the Standard Industrial Classification 1980)

Counties[2]	September 1981 Thousand	September 1984 Thousand
South East
Bedfordshire	71·5	67·8
Berkshire	85·4	76·5
Buckinghamshire	65·7	66·8
East Sussex	36·4	32·7
Essex	140·4	119·5
Hampshire	153·3	146·7
Hertfordshire	132·4	118·1
Isle of Wight	9·0	8·8
Kent	118·3	103·5
Oxfordshire	47·6	43·8
Surrey	77·4	74·5
West Sussex	61·1	58·3
Greater London	684·6	569·0
East Anglia
Cambridgeshire	60·7	68·2
Norfolk	63·3	63·2
Suffolk	61·9	58·3
South West
Avon	94·9	89·2
Cornwall	23·6	22·3
Devon	68·9	69·1
Dorset	44·3	41·2
Gloucestershire	65·2	57·6
Somerset	46·0	45·6
Wiltshire	52·6	51·2
West Midlands
Hereford and Worcester	67·9	64·3
Shropshire	32·0	33·0
Staffordshire	144·3	141·9
Warwickshire	61·6	56·3
West Midlands	494·8	413·7
East Midlands
Derbyshire	133·2	122·2
Leicestershire	150·5	140·9
Lincolnshire	44·3	40·7
Northamptonshire	73·7	69·5
Nottinghamshire	131·5	115·1
Yorkshire and Humberside
Humberside	92·1	81·9
North Yorkshire	53·5	49·7
South Yorkshire	158·6	122·4
West Yorkshire	274·6	230·8
North West
Cheshire	116·7	105·9
Lancashire	182·5	153·6
Greater Manchester	345·8	291·3
Merseyside	154·7	119·8
North
Cleveland	74·9	53·3
Cumbria	56·9	49·6
Durham	62·1	54·7
Northumberland	19·5	19·3
Tyne and Wear	126·0	99·0
Wales
Clwyd	33·7	32·5
Dyfed	17·1	15·9
Gwent	52·8	46·1
Gwynedd	11·5	9·3
Mid-Glamorgan	52·5	44·7
Powys	7·0	6·9
South Glamorgan	26·6	25·2
West Glamorgan	36·9	28·8
Scotland (Region and Islands Areas)
Borders	12·9	12·6
Central	31·1	22·8
Dumfries and Galloway	12·2	11·3
Fife	40·0	35·8
Grampian	36·8	35·2
Highland	12·4	10·2
Lothian	66·2	55·3
Strathclyde	249·8	215·4
Tayside	37·1	32·1
Orkney Islands	0·7	0·5
Shetland Islands	1·1	1·2
Western Isles	1·5	1·2

[1] The figures exclude the self-employed.

[2] The areas are defined in terms of ward boundaries as at 1981.

Table 2

Employees in employment[1] in Manufacturing Industries (Divisions 2-4 of the Standard Industrial Classification 1980) by region

Thousand

Standard Region	September									March	June	[2]September
	1979	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984	1985	1986	1987	1988	1988	1988
South East	1,880	1,796	1,677	1,589	1,522	1,486	1,463	1,408	1,374	1,353	1,321	1,328
Greater London (included in South East)	n.a.	n.a.	681	637	598	569	556	526	514	506	477	487
East Anglia	209	197	185	181	181	190	199	205	211	213	218	220
South West	440	421	398	381	367	376	377	371	367	362	364	367
West Midlands	983	901	800	747	714	709	709	698	696	689	697	702
East Midlands	611	573	533	509	489	488	496	493	494	487	493	493
Yorkshire and Humberside	708	649	580	536	502	485	484	461	453	443	443	448
North West	970	894	803	740	692	671	655	628	609	600	600	601
North	411	374	340	314	287	276	279	266	262	261	261	262
Wales	317	278	239	223	214	212	211	205	211	210	213	218
Scotland	602	550	502	471	442	434	430	409	392	386	385	387
Great Britain	7,123	6,629	6,058	5,691	5,411	5,327	5,302	5,142	5,069	5,004	4,995	5,025

[1] Excludes the self-employed.
[2] Latest available.
n.a. = Not available.

Young Employees (Overtime)

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what arrangements have been made to permit or discourage excessive overtime working by younger employees (a) on employment training schemes and (b) elsewhere; and what steps he has taken to ensure that employees are given adequate advice in regard to this matter.

Mr. Cope: Trainees in employment training who are receiving practical experience with an employer are not expected to attend for any period which could normally attract over-time or premium payments in the case of employees. The hours of attendance for the youth training scheme are limited to 40 per week, taking one week with another. In employment generally hours of work are a matter for negotiation between employer and employees or their representatives. Section 2 of the Health and Safety at Work Act, etc. 1974 requires every employer to ensure so far as is reasonably practicable the health, safety and welfare of all his employees at work. This does not permit excessive hours likely to lead to fatigue induced accidents or ill health.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) what was the level of unemployment, expressed as (a) a percentage and (b) in numbers of claimants for (i) the Hexham constituency, (ii) the Newcastle upon Tyne travel to work area, (iii) the Greater London travel to work area and (iv) England and Wales for the most recent month for which figures are available and for February 1985;

(2) if he will estimate the number of unfilled vacancies expressed as (a) a percentage and (b) in numbers of claimants for (i) the Hexham constituency, (ii) the Newcastle upon Tyne travel to work area, (iii) the Greater London travel to work area and (iv) England and Wales for the most recent month for which figures are available and for February 1985.

Mr. Lee: The following is the available information. Table A gives the total unfilled vacancies notified to jobcentres at December 1988 and February 1985. Table B shows unemployment level and percentage rates for December 1988 and February 1985. It is not meaningful to calculate a ratio of unemployed claimants to unfilled vacancies at jobcentres, since only about a third of all vacancies in the economy are notified to jobcentres.

Table A

Unfilled vacancies at jobcentres for December 1988 and February 1985

	February 1985 level	December 1988 level
Newcastle TTWA	1,851	3,134
Greater London TTWA	19,726	23,712
Hexham TTWA	79	125
England and Wales	122,877	202,614

Table B

Unemployment claimants for December 1988 and February 1985

	February 1985		December 1988
	level	[1]rate	level	[1]rate
Newcastle TTWA	65,551	17·5	45,293	12·0
Greater London TTWA	370,377	10·7	232,323	6·7
Hexham TTWA	1,537	9·8	987	6·0
Hexham PCA	2,479	n/a	1,562	n/a
England and Wales	2,843,546	13·0	1,675,587	7·7

[1] Unemployed claimants expressed as a percentage of claimants plus employees in employment only.

The figures are affected by the change in the compilation of the count in March 1986 to reduce over-recording and by the change in the coverage from September 1988 due to the introduction of new benefit regulations for young people aged under 18.

Qualifications

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give, based on the labour force survey (a) the total number of people of working age and (b) the percentage with (i) A level or equivalent or higher, (ii) O level or equivalent, (iii) below O level and (iv) no vocational or educational qualification for each standard English region, Wales and Scotland for 1983, 1984, 1985, 1986 and 1987.

Mr. Lee [holding answer 19 January 1989]: Estimates from labour force surveys, as requested, are shown in the following table:

Regional variations in highest qualification held be persons of working age[1]—Great Britain, Spring estimates

Thousands and per cent

Standard Region	Total (000's)	of which: percentage possessing highest qualification
		'A' level or equivalent or higher	'O' level or equivalent	Below 'O' level[2]	No vocational or educational qualificition
1983
Northern	1,876	27	13	11	49
Yorkshire and Humberside	2,939	29	13	9	49
East Midlands	2,329	28	13	10	49
East Anglia	1,137	29	14	12	46
South East (except Greater London)	6,143	35	17	11	37
Greater London	4,145	34	16	9	42
South West	2,564	32	17	10	41
West Midlands	3,143	26	13	10	51
North West	3,825	30	14	9	46
Wales	1,659	25	15	10	50
Scotland	3,102	37	13	4	46
Great Britain	32,861	31	15	9	45
1984
Northern	1,879	32	14	8	46
Yorkshire and Humberside	2,956	31	14	9	46
East Midlands	2,355	33	15	9	43
East Anglia	1,151	32	16	10	43
South East (except Greater London)	6,228	37	18	11	34
Greater London	4,166	37	17	9	38
South West	2,594	37	18	10	35
West Midlands	3,162	30	14	10	46
North West	3,849	34	15	19	42
Wales	1,665	31	16	8	46
Scotland	3,119	41	13	3	43
Great Britain	33,125	35	16	9	41
1985
Northern	1,879	32	13	10	45
Yorkshire and Humberside	2,964	33	15	10	42
East Midlands	2,377	34	15	10	42
East Anglia	1,170	32	16	11	40
South East (except Greater London)	6,292	38	19	10	33
Greater London	4,170	39	17	10	35
South West	2,629	37	18	11	35
West Midlands	3,175	30	14	9	46
North West	3,846	35	16	9	40
Wales	1,673	32	16	8	44
Scotland	3,127	41	14	3	42
Great Britain	33,301	36	16	9	39
1986
Northern	1,877	34	15	10	41
Yorkshire and Humberside	2,969	33	16	10	40
East Midlands	2,398	34	15	11	40
East Anglia	1,185	33	16	13	37
South East (except Greater London)	6,344	38	20	12	31
Greater London	4,180	38	16	11	35
South West	2,660	36	18	12	33
West Midlands	3,179	31	15	11	42
North West	3,850	33	16	11	40
Wales	1,681	32	17	9	42
Scotland	3,102	41	14	3	42
Great Britain	33,425	35	17	10	38
1987
Northern	1,878	35	16	12	38
Yorkshire and Humberside	2,977	34	17	11	39
East Midlands	2,418	32	16	12	40
East Anglia	1,201	35	18	13	35
South East (except Greater London)	6,391	39	20	12	29
Greater London	4,179	38	18	11	34
South West	2,697	37	18	12	32

Standard Region	Total (000's)	of which: percentage possessing highest qualification 'A' level or equivalent or higher	'O' level or equivalent	Below 'O' level[2]	No vocational or educational qualification
West Midlands	3,194	31	16	11	42
North West	3,858	35	16	10	38
Wales	1,694	31	17	10	42
Scotland	3,133	42	14	4	40
Great Britain	33,620	36	17	11	36

[1]Men aged 16-64, women aged 16-59.
[2]Includes those with CSE (below grade 11) or "other" qualifications.

Graduates

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) if he will give, based on the labour force survey the total number of graduates in employment as a percentage of all in employment in each of the standard English regions, Scotland and Wales and for each of the years 1983, 1984, 1985, 1986 and 1987.

(2) if he will give based on the labour force survey, the total number of graduates in employment in each of the standard English regions, Wales and Scotland and for each of the years 1983, 1984, 1985, 1986, and 1987.

Mr. Lee [holding answer 19 January 1989]: Estimates from labour force surveys as requested, are shown in following table:

Regional variations in graduate employment of persons of working Age [1] Great Britain, Spring estimates.

	1983		1984		1985		1986		1987
	Graduates of working age in employment (000)'s	Graduate share[2] per cent.	Graduates of working age in employment (000)'s	Graduate share[2] per cent.	Graduates of working age in employment (000)'s	Graduate share[2] per cent.	Graduates of working age in employment (000)'s	Graduate share[2] per cent.	Graduates of working age in employment (000)'s	Graduate share[2] per cent.
Region
South East	671	9·2	682	9	743	9·7	777	10·1	774	9·8
of which
London	326	11·3	331	11·2	379	12·7	367	12·5	387	13·0
Rest of South East	345	7·8	352	7·6	363	7·8	409	8·6	386	7·9
East Anglia	43	5·3	45	5·4	47	5·7	54	6·3	59	6·7
South West	95	5·3	115	6·3	114	5·9	116	6·1	125	6·3
West Midlands	94	4·6	104	5·0	106	5·0	115	5·3	122	5·6
East Midlands	76	4·7	86	5·2	91	5·5	98	5·7	90	5·3
Yorkshire and Humberside	99	5·0	96	4·8	90	4·5	111	5·5	116	5·7
North West	147	5·9	132	5·2	145	5·6	137	5·3	174	6·6
Northern	57	4·8	58	4·9	49	4·2	63	5·3	73	5·8
Wales	50	3·0	56	3·4	55	3·3	73	7·0	60	5·6
Scotland	144	7·1	124	6·2	136	6·6	132	6·6	120	5·9
Great Britain	1,474	6·6	1,498	6·6	1,576	6·8	1,675	7·2	1,711	7·3

[1] Men aged 16-64. Women aged 16-59.
[2] Graduates as a percentage of all persons of all working age in employment.
Source: Labour Force Surveys.

High Moor Colliery (Accident)

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give details of the last section 123, and other inspections of 91s heading at High Moor colliery prior to the 30 m fall of roof on 13 January.

Mr. Nicholls: [holding answer 19 January 1989]: The last report of an inspection under section 123 on 91s heading at High Moor colliery was made on 9 January 1989. A copy of this report would have been required to be displayed at the mine.

The details of other statutory inspections made at the heading are still being gathered in the process of the investigation of the incident.

YTS Training Centre, Cyprus

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the cost of the YTS training centre in Cyprus; who is eligible to attend the centre; and how many trainees have made use of the centre for the most recent period for which figures are available.

Mr. Sainsbury: I have been asked to reply by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Employment. The current staff cost of running the centre is £32·5K per annum, and all dependants of armed forces and Civil Service personnel in Cyprus between the ages of 16 and 19½ years of age are eligible to attend. Since February 1987, 150 trainees have used the centre.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Set-aside

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) how many applications and registrations he has received under the set-aside scheme on a county-by-county basis; and if he will make a statement;

(2) how many applications and registrations he has received under the set-aside scheme (a) within and (b) outside, less-favoured areas; and within each category how many applications he has received for (i) permanent fallow, (ii) rotational fallow, (iii) farm woodland and (iv) non agricultural use;

(3) how many set-aside agreements his Department has finalised by county in England and Wales; what is the total hectareage for each county taken out of production by such means; and what is his estimate by county of the total cost of this scheme.

Mr. Ryder: I shall shortly be announcing further details of the first year's uptake of the scheme.

Departmental Committees

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list all his departmental committees onto which he appoints outside representatives.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Public bodies, including advisory committees, sponsored by my Department, are listed in "Public Bodies 1988" of which a copy is in the Library. I also appoint representatives from outside the Government service to the Agricultural Development and Advisory Service and regional management board.

Pigmeat Imports

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the effect of the monetary compensatory amounts system on Dutch and Danish pigmeat imports into the United Kingdom.

Mr. Donald Thompson: United Kingdom, Dutch and Danish pigmeat monetary compensatory amounts are currently all zero; so that their effect on Dutch and Danish pigmeat imports into the United Kingdom is neutral.

Fish Foods

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he intends the code of practice on the production of animal feeding stuffs containing processed animal products to apply to the production of fish foods.

Mr. Donald Thompson: It is my intention that the code of practice on the production of animal feedingstuffs will apply to feedingstuffs and their ingredients, including animal protein, intended for feeding to food animals and poultry but not to fish.

Salmonella

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the locations of reports of salmonella under the Zoonoses Order 1975 during 1988; and if he will indicate in each case who reported it and what was the method by which it was identified.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The reporting of isolations of salmonella in food producing animals is required under the Zoonoses Order 1975. 2,167 reports have been submitted so far for 1988 for Great Britain. As there is a delay between finding an isolate and submitting a report, this figure must be regarded as provisional. Of these reported isolations, 1,559 were in England, 269 in Scotland and 339 in Wales.

Under the Zoonoses Order, any person who knows or has reason to believe that an animal or bird is or was a carrier of a salmonella organism is required to make a report. Those making reports include owners of animals, private veterinary surgeons; or reports can be made as a result of the isolation of a salmonella organism in a laboratory. It is not possible to give details of who reported the incidents, the methods by which they were identified or precise locations except at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what procedures exist for the monitoring of the code of practice for poultry health scheme members for the control of salmonella.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Since the poultry health scheme code was introduced, veterinary officers of my Department have been assessing compliance with it in the course of visits which they make to the premises. Further checks are carried out if visits are made following the reporting of isolations under the Zoonoses Order 1975.

As part of the recently announced further measures the majority of the requirements at present in the code of practice will be made statutory.

Chicken Food

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Caerphilly of 13 January, Official Report, column 795, (1) how many (a) feed processing plants and (b) feed processing plants producing chicken food there were in each of the years from 1984 to 1988;

(2) if he will give (a) the number of inspections per feed processing plant and (b) the number of cases, by plant and by sample, where resampling revealed salmonella contamination in each of the years from 1984 to 1988.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The number of plants in Great Britain can vary from year to year as new ones opened and others closed down. Furthermore, not all operate on a continual basis.

The total numbers of protein processing plants producing animal protein for incorporation into animal feedingstuffs, known to have been operational in each year from 1984 to 1988 were:

	Number
1984	109
1985	112
1986	102
1987	86
[1]1988	85

[1] Provisional.

The numbers visited and sampled during the year, and the numbers of batches inspected each year were:

	Number of plants visited	Number of batches inspected
1984	107	251
1985	106	224
1986	99	212
1987	84	185
[1]1988	74	157

[1] Provisional.

The number of cases where re-sampling revealed salmonella contamination in each of the years from 1984 to 1988 were:

	1st sample	2nd sample
1984	10	2
1985	13	3
1986	13	5
1987	6	1
[1] 1988	4	0

[1] Provisional.

Notes:
1. 1988 figures are provisional and may understate the final level because there is a delay between inspection and the final recording of results.
2. In continuous production plants a batch comprises a series of samples collected over a five days production. The number of samples taken each day is proportional to the output.

Sub-standard Beef

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when his Department was first notified of imports of sub-standard beef arriving at Mid Cornwall Meatpackers.

Mr. Donald Thompson: On 24 November, Carrick district council's environmental health service sent a report to the Ministry's office at Truro. As soon as this was received, further details were requested in order that the matter could be raised with the authorities of the Republic of Ireland. These details were received on 19 December 1988.

Contaminated Meat

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he has any evidence that recent consignments of meat originating from Ireland which have been condemned in this country as unfit for human consumption had previously been the subject of cross-border trading between the Republic of Ireland and Northern Ireland for the purpose of fraudulently obtaining EEC export subsidies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: This is a matter for the Irish authorities, and we have asked them to investigate it.

Deer (Tuberculosis)

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps are taken by his Department when an outbreak of tuberculosis is confirmed in farmed deer herds.

Mr. Donald Thompson: When an outbreak of tuberculosis is confirmed in farmed deer herds a notice is served under article 15 of the Tuberculosis (England and Wales) Order 1984 or the Tuberculosis (Scotland) Order 1984 preventing movement of deer on or off the premises. These restrictions are maintained until the herd has undergone two consecutive comparative tuberculin tests, at least 120 days apart, with negative results at severe interpretation. The first of these tests is carried out at least 120 days after removal of reactors or infected animals.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what consideration he has given to the introduction of a tuberculocis eradication scheme for farmed deer; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I announced my proposals for the control of tuberculosis in farmed deer on 15 december 1988 at columns 674-75. A consultation letter on the proposals was sent to interested organisations on 21 December 1988. Consideration is now being given to the comments they have made.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many cases of tuberculosis have been confirmed in deer herds in the past 12 months in England and Wales, and in each of the preceding three years.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The numbers of deer herds in which tuberculosis has been confirmed are as follows:

	Number
1985	3
1986	—
1987	—
1988	6

WALES

Hospital Waiting Lists

14. Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his latest estimate of (a) in-patient and (b) out-patient waiting lists in the Mid-Glamorgan health authority area and in Wales as a whole; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: At 31 March 1988, the number of people waiting for in-patient treatment was 7,112 in Mid Glamorgan and 41,648 in Wales as a whole. The numbers waiting for a first out-patient appointment were 16,842 and 82,319 respectively.

Translation Costs

15. Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the income and expenditure involved for the commemoration of the translation of the Bible into Welsh and the "Travels of Gerald of Wales"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The Welsh Office contributed £25,000, over a three-year period, to support the work of the committee which co-ordinated arrangements for the numerous events to mark the 400th anniversary of the Welsh translation of the Bible. Celebration of the 800th anniversary of the travels of Gerald of Wales involved a number of events, including a major exhibition at the national museum of Wales. The final income and expenditure figures will take some time to establish.

M4

16. Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales in which month tenders will be invited for the four sections of the unfinished part of the M4; and when a decision on the successful tenderers will be announced.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: I hope shortly to be in a position to advertise my intention to invite tenders for the first phase of the Baglan-Lonlas section of the M4. Work on this is planned to start towards the end of 1989-90.

Gresford to Pulford Bypass

17. Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the cost of the Gresford to Pulford bypass.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The total cost of this joint Welsh Office-Department of Transport scheme, including all works and land costs, is estimated to be £25 million. The Welsh Office share will be about £20 million.

Severn Bridge

18. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what are the implications for the travel costs for officials to be borne by his Department of the location of the inquiry into the proposed increase in tolls on the Severn bridge.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Varying the location of the inquiry would have only marginal implications for such travel costs.

Eggs

19. Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has had from farming unions in Wales on the recent statement on compensation for egg producers.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: None.

28. Sir Raymond Gower: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his latest information regarding the level of egg production in Wales; and what variations have occurred in the past two months.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: 315 million eggs were produced in Wales for human consumption in 1987. Prior to the recent disruption of the market, it was expected that 1988 production would be about 339 million. No information is yet available concerning recent fluctuations.

Mudiad Ysgolion Meithrin

20. Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make it his policy to increase the headquarters grant to Mudiad Ysgolion Meithrin to a level sufficient to enable it to purchase an appropriate headquarters building.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: A core grant is made to Mudiad Ysgolion Meithrin each year, under section 64 of the Health Services and Public Health Act 1968 as a contribution to its headquarters expenditure. Careful consideration will be given to the application which Mudiad Ysgolian Meithrin has submitted for grant aid next year in the light of its needs, including its need for a new headquarters, the resources available and the demands from other organisations for grant assistance.

Phurnacite Plant, Cynon Valley

21. Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a further statement on the proposed mild heat treatment process at the phurnacite plant in the Cynon Valley.

Mr. Peter Walker: I have nothing to add to the reply I gave the hon. Lady on this matter in the House on 5 December.

Welsh Language Teaching

22. Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received in recent months on the compulsory teaching of Welsh as a foundation subject in the national curriculum.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Since the Education Reform Act received Royal Assent last July, I have received a small number of letters about the teaching of Welsh. The majority have been supportive of the place of Welsh in the national curriculum, although several have had reservations about resource implications or about the impact on the teaching of other subjects, particularly in the later years of secondary school.

Economic Prospects

23. Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give an assessment on the prospects for the Welsh economy for 1989.

Mr. Peter Walker: There is every reason to suppose that the current year, like 1988, will be extremely successful for Wales and the Welsh economy.

NHS Land

24. Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what are the total proceeds from the sale of National Health Service land and property in (a) Wales and (b) West Glamorgan since 1979.

Mr. Grist: Proceeds from the sale of surplus NHS land and property in Wales from 1979-80 to 1987-88 have amounted to £10·722 million, of which £0·722 million arose from sales by West Glamorgan Health Authority.

Government policy encourages district health authorities in Wales to dispose of surplus land and property; the receipts from which may be reinvested to the benefit of patient care.

Housing Need

25. Mr. Foot: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of present housing need in Blaenau Gwent and in Wales as a whole; and what impact the valleys initiative will have in meeting those needs.

Mr. Grist: Local authorities have the statutory responsibility for assessing the housing needs of their area. Blaenau Gwent will benefit substantially from the Programme for the Valleys which in total ought to provide 10,000 new homes with a further 32,000 homes improved.

Training and Enterprise Councils

26. Mr. Raffan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the establishment of the proposed training and enterprise councils in Wales.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The Government will shortly be inviting local groups, led by employers, to submit proposals for the establishment of training and enterprise councils in England and Wales. A national training task force will advise on the establishment of TECs in England and Wales, and my right hon. Friend will be appointing a separate body to advise him on training and related enterprise and education matters, including the establishment of TECs, in the Principality.

Interest Rates

27. Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the likely effect on Welsh industry of the recent rises in interest rates.

Mr. Peter Walker: The impact of high interest rates in other parts of the United Kingdom may well make firms carefully consider their overhead costs and take advantage of the very positive regional policies that are being pursued in Wales. I am much encouraged that the regional assistance offers made in 1988 provide the promise of 31,500 new jobs, and inward investment in 1988 has been at an all-time high, promising 13,600 jobs.

Potato Marketing Board

29. Mr. Geraint Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he is satisfied with the operations of the Potato Marketing Board in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: The Government are considering the industry's response to the recent consultation paper about the future of the Potato Marketing Board. Welsh interests will be fully taken into account.

Water Privatisation

30. Sir Anthony Meyer: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what arrangements he has made for the privatisation of water so as to ensure the protection of the environment of Wales and the interests of Welsh consumers.

Mr. Peter Walker: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Ogmore (Mr. Powell), earlier today.

Hormone Replacement Therapy

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he proposes to make available hormone replacement therapy on a Wales-wide basis; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: Hormone replacement therapy is already prescribable through the NHS by registered medical practitioners in circumstances which in the exercise of clinical judgment they consider appropriate.

Cervical Cancer Screening

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures he is taking to extend facilities for screening for cervical cancer; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: Computerised call and recall for cervical screening is now operational in all parts of Wales. The Welsh Office has allocated over £800,000 a year of recurring funds to district health authorities in support of the screening programme. Subject to parliamentary approval, we shall be announcing the allocation of further significant funding later this year.

Lamb

Sir Raymond Gower: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what success has attended the measures taken to improve the marketing of Welsh lamb; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: In an expanding United Kingdom market for lamb over recent years, Welsh lamb has increased its market share and quality Welsh lamb continues to command a price premium.

Welsh lamb producers are also taking advantage of the export opportunities which have arisen through improved marketing.

Set-aside

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many applications and registrations he has received under the set-aside scheme (a) within and (b) outside, less favoured areas; and within each category how many applications he has received for (i) permanent fallow, (ii) rotational fallow, (iii) farm woodland and (iv) non agricultural use.

Mr. Peter Walker: The number of applications and registrations received under the set-aside scheme in Wales are as follows:

	Within LFA	Outside the LFA	Total
Number of applications	9	26	[1]35
Number of registrations	132	201	333
For each category the number of applications received is:
(i) Permanent Fallow	8	17	25
(ii) Rotational Fallow	2	7	9
(iii) Woodland	—	1	1
(iv) Non-agricultural use	—	6	6
			[1]41

[1] Some applications include more than 1 category.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many applications and registrations he has received under the set-aside scheme on a county by county basis; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: The number of applications and registrations received under the set-aside scheme in Wales on a county by county basis is as follows:

	Applications	Registrations
Clwyd	1	14
Dyfed	18	111
Gwynedd	6	46
Powys	2	51
South Glamorgan	1	12
Mid Glamorgan	—	12
West Glamorgan	1	7
Gwent	6	50

Agriculture (Divisional Offices)

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he has any plans to reduce the number of Welsh Office Agriculture Department and the Agricultural Development Advisory Service divisional offices in Wales.

Mr. Peter Walker: No.

Regional Grants

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total number of applications (a) received and (b) approved for innovation grants from 1 April 1988 to 31 December 1988 and the total estimated expenditure planned for that period.

Mr. Peter Walker: Under the regional enterprise grant scheme, 84 applications for innovation projects were received by my Department and 21 offers of grant made in the period 1 April 1988 to 31 December 1988. The total provision for the 1988-89 financial year is £600,000.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total number of applications (a) received and (b) approved for investment grants from 1 April 1988 and 31 December 1988 and the total estimated expenditure planned for that period.

Mr. Peter Walker: Under the regional enterprise grant scheme 186 applications for investment projects were received by my Department and 78 offers of grant made in the period 1 April 1988 to 31 December 1988. The total provision for the 1988-89 financial year is £1·8 million.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total estimated expenditure on regional development grant and regional selective assistance in each of the years 1988-89, 1989-90 and 1990-91.

Mr. Peter Walker: Total provision in 1988-89 for expenditure on regional development grants and regional selective assistance in Wales is £109·4 million. Expenditure plans for 1989-90 and 1990-91 will be shown in the 1989 public expenditure White Paper and details of the regional selective assistance and regional development grants provision for 1989-90 in the Supply Estimates published in March.

Note:

(1) The figures given for 1988-89 are net of recoveries and domestic receipts, but gross of EC receipts.

(2) RSA includes industrial and training grants, and expenditure under the business improvement services and exchange risk guarantee scheme.

Rate Support Grant

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will show for each local authority in Wales the rate support grant paid in each year since 1978-79, expressed in (a) cash terms and (b) real terms at 1988-89 prices; and what percentage of each council's total expenditure in each year this represented.

Mr. Peter Walker: The information requested is given in the following tables for all years from 1981-82 to 1988-89. It is not possible to provide meaningful figures for 1978-79 to 1980-81 on a comparable basis as the arrangements for paying rate support grant to each tier of local authorities in Wales were different and these grants were not directly linked to the expenditure of individual councils. Rate support grant comprises a block grant paid to individual county and district councils, and domestic rate relief grant, which is a direct subsidy to ratepayers, paid to district councils in order to reduce total domestic rate poundages, including county precepts, by 36p in 1981-82 and 18·5p from 1982-83 onwards. Domestic rate relief grant cannot sensibly be compared with districts' total expenditure. Block grant entitlements are compared with individual district expenditure figures in table (c) and rate support grant entitlements are compared with expenditure for county areas in table (d).

(a) Rate Support Grants in cash terms (£000s)

Local authority	1981-82	1982-83	1983-84	1984-85	1985-86	1986-87	1987-88	1988-89
Counties:
Clwyd	76,600	84,833	84,772	85,581	89,887	92,747	99,993	106,781
Dyfed	67,940	75,714	79,272	79,625	81,719	88,529	97,665	106,385
Gwent	87,682	99,536	101,052	102,740	102,098	111,319	116,782	123,768
Gwynedd	49,040	53,398	55,662	54,334	54,557	59,546	62,731	68,580
Mid Glamorgan	131,173	141,148	142,405	144,489	152,107	159,068	173,220	188,728
Powys	30,790	35,945	36,700	35,966	36,587	38,390	41,389	43,773
South Glamorgan	61,364	71,332	70,776	69,536	69,354	71,153	76,781	81,281
West Glamorgan	68,467	79,659	78,868	81,220	85,767	88,647	94,437	98,416
Districts:
Alyn and Deeside	3,621	3,222	3,220	3,297	3,217	3,404	3,464	3,460
Colwyn	3,062	2,724	2,765	2,604	2,549	2,611	2,525	2,839
Delyn	4,491	3,915	3,930	4,010	3,933	4,156	4,285	4,384
Glyndwr	2,340	2,010	2,149	2,000	2,013	2,187	2,165	2,185
Rhuddlan	3,469	2,944	3,310	3,246	3,239	3,342	3,806	4,270
Wrexham Maelor	6,664	5,397	5,671	5,751	6,080	6,182	6,044	6,113
Carmarthen	3,106	2,569	2,769	2,700	2,820	3,049	3,221	3,268
Ceredigion	3,381	3,035	3,154	3,020	3,193	3,401	3,710	3,747
Dinefwr	1,922	1,840	1,767	1,781	1,801	1,852	1,979	1,987
Llanelli	5,053	4,429	4,724	4,686	4,814	4,932	4,984	5,018
Preseli	3,157	2,809	3,184	3,194	3,268	3,492	3,821	4,045
South Pembrokeshire	1,398	1,361	1,305	1,040	1,446	1,478	1,936	1,742
Blaenau Gwent	6,098	6,012	6,240	6,359	7,271	7,193	7,304	7,591
Islwyn	4,443	3,929	4,294	4,238	4,495	5,293	5,457	5,734
Monmouth	3,739	3,236	3,375	3,226	3,123	3,251	3,129	3,038
Newport	7,125	6,237	6,755	7,017	6,435	7,473	6,999	7,073
Torfaen	5,841	4,875	5,015	5,325	5,250	5,230	4,692	4,970
Aberconwy	3,459	2,841	2,990	2,963	2,849	2,779	2,723	2,767
Arfon	3,545	3,406	3,436	3,016	2,781	2,966	2,810	2,617
Dwyfor	1,674	1,681	1,859	1,789	1,847	1,933	2,006	2,184
Meirionydd	1,691	1,754	1,956	1,780	1,907	2,027	2,062	2,094
Ynys Môn	3,797	3,399	3,820	3,528	3,447	3,487	3,629	3,746
Cynon Valley	4,861	4,853	4,743	4,696	4,837	5,127	5,345	5,839
Merthyr Tydfil	4,967	4,710	4,665	5,014	5,197	5,397	5,440	5,564
Ogwr	8,152	7,312	6,779	7,590	7,559	7,574	7,983	8,158
Rhondda	6,664	7,596	7,939	7,352	8,231	8,703	9,028	9,045
Rhymney Valley	7,991	6,967	6,810	7,306	6,866	6,971	7,096	7,425
Taff Ely	5,446	5,234	4,989	4,823	4,580	4,699	4,522	4,835
Brecknock	2,324	1,881	1,935	1,983	1,965	2,099	2,085	2,258
Montgomeryshire	2,377	2,197	2,517	2,384	2,325	2,535	2,590	2,525
Radnor	1,158	1,008	1,062	999	966	992	1,172	1,078

Local authority	1981-82	1982-83	1983-84	1984-85	1985-86	1986-87	1987-88	1988-89
Cardiff	16,903	15,677	16,702	16,356	16,545	17,982	18,916	19,453
Vale of Glamorgan	5,745	4,889	4,778	4,464	4,357	5,036	5,778	6,154
Port Talbot	2,360	2,391	2,173	2,922	2,572	2,782	2,863	3,257
Lliw Valley	3,274	3,187	3,316	3,274	3,309	3,451	3,508	3,697
Neath	3,652	3,145	3,210	3,131	3,076	2,874	3,403	4,125
Swansea	12,814	11,076	12,755	12,905	14,128	14,184	14,525	14,918
Wales	744,820	797,313	811,568	814,360	836,369	881,524	940,004	1,000,915

(b) Rate Support Grants in real terms at 1988-89 prices (£000s)

Local authority	1981-82	1982-83	1983-84	1984-85	1985-86	1986-87	1987-88	1988-89
Counties:
Clwyd	109,829	113,524	108,500	104,263	103,900	103,747	106,242	106,781
Dyfed	97,412	101,320	101,460	97,007	94,459	99,028	103,769	106,385
Gwent	125,718	133,199	129,336	125,168	118,015	124,521	124,081	123,768
Gwynedd	70,314	71,457	71,142	66,196	63,036	66,609	66,652	68,580
Md Glamorgan	188,076	188,884	182,264	176,031	175,821	177,933	184,047	188,728
Powys	44,147	48,102	46,972	43,817	42,291	42,943	43,976	43,773
South Glamorgan	87,984	95,456	90,586	84,716	80,166	79,592	81,580	81,281
West Glamorgan	98,168	106,600	100,943	98,950	99,138	99,160	100,339	98,416
Districts:
Alyn and Deeside	5,192	4,312	4,122	4,017	3,719	3,808	3,681	3,460
Colwyn	4,390	3,645	3,539	3,173	2,946	2,920	2,682	2,839
Delyn	6,439	5,239	5,030	4,885	4,546	4,649	4,553	4,384
Glyndwr	3,355	2,690	2,750	2,437	2,327	2,447	2,300	2,185
Rhuddlan	4,974	3,940	4,236	3,954	3,744	3,738	4.044	4,270
Wrexham Maelor	9,555	7,222	7,258	7,006	7,027	6,915	6,421	6,113
Carmarthen	4,453	3,438	3,544	3,290	3,260	3,410	3,423	3,268
Ceredigion	4,848	4,061	4,037	3,679	3,691	3,804	3,942	3,747
Dinefwr	2,756	2,462	2,262	2,169	2,082	2,072	2,103	1,987
Llanelli	7,245	5,972	6,047	5,710	5,565	5,517	5,295	5,018
Preseli	4,527	3,759	4,075	3,891	3,778	3,907	4,059	4,045
South Pembrokeshire	2,004	1,821	1,670	1,267	1,671	1,654	2,057	1,742
Blaenau Gwent	8,743	8045	7,987	7,748	8,404	8,046	7,761	7,591
Islwyn	6,370	5,258	5,496	5,163	5,196	5,921	5,799	5,734
Monmouth	5,361	4,330	4,320	3,930	3,610	3,636	3,324	3,038
Newport	10,216	8,346	8,646	8,549	7,438	8,359	7,437	7,073
Torfaen	8,375	6,524	6,418	6,487	6,069	5,850	4,986	4,970
Aberconwy	4,960	3,802	3,826	3,609	3,293	3,109	2,893	2,767
Arfon	5,083	4,558	4,397	3,674	3,214	3,318	2,986	2,617
Dwyfor	2,400	2,250	2,379	2179	2,135	2,162	2,132	2,184
Meirionydd	2,425	2,347	2,503	2,169	2,204	2,268	2,191	2,094
Ynys Mon	5,444	4,549	4,889	4,298	3,984	3,901	3,856	3,746
Cynon Valley	6,970	6,494	6,070	5,721	5,591	5,735	5,679	5,839
Merthyr Tydfil	7,122	6,303	5,971	6,109	6,007	6,037	5,780	5,564
Ogwr	11,688	9,785	8,677	9,247	8,738	8,472	8,482	8,158
Rhondda	9,555	10,165	10,161	8,957	9,514	9,735	9,592	9,045
Rhymney Valley	11,457	9,323	8,716	8,536	7,936	7,798	7,540	7,425
Taff Ely	7,808	7,004	6,386	5,876	5,294	5,256	4,805	4,835
Brecknock	3,332	2,517	2,477	2,416	2,271	2,348	2,215	2,258
Montgomeryshire	3,408	2,940	3,221	2,905	2,688	2,835	2,752	2,525
Radnor	1,660	1,349	1,359	1,217	1,116	1,109	1,245	1,078
Cardiff	24,236	20,979	21,377	19,926	19,124	20,115	20,098	19453
Vale of Glamorgan	8,237	6,542	6,115	5,438	5,037	5,634	6,139	6,154
Port Talbot	3,384	3,200	2,782	3,560	2,973	3,112	3,042	3,257
Lliw Valley	4,694	4,265	4,244	3,989	3,825	3,860	3,727	3,697
Neath	5,236	4,209	4,108	3,815	3,555	3,215	3,616	4,125
Swansea	18,373	14,822	16,325	15,722	16,331	15,866	15,433	14,918
Wales	1,067,923	1,066,964	1,038,726	992,865	966,759	986,072	998,754	1,000,915

(c) Block Grant expressed as a percentage of total expenditure[1]

Local authority	1981-82	1982-83	1983-84	1984-85	1985-86	1986-87	1987-88	1988-89
Counties:
Clwyd	59	61	58	57	57	55	56	55
Dyfed	63	67	66	63	63	60	61	60
Gwent	59	65	63	62	59	60	58	56
Gwynedd	64	65	64	60	58	59	57	57
Mid Glamorgan	72	72	69	66	70	67	67	67
Powys	74	77	74	70	69	68	70	67
South Glamorgan	51	55	51	49	47	44	44	42
West Glamorgan	54	58	56	56	57	54	54	51

Local authority	1981-82	1982-83	1983-84	1984-85	1985-86	1986-87	1987-88	1988-89
Districts:
Alyn and Deeside	55	58	61	58	52	53	50	47
Colwyn	57	60	56	54	51	49	43	47
Delyn	63	65	63	67	64	64	63	60
Glyndwr	61	66	67	62	61	65	61	56
Rhuddlan	57	55	61	60	56	56	60	62
Wrexham Maelor	59	57	58	60	62	57	50	47
Carmarthen	70	67	75	70	68	70	70	66
Ceredigion	70	75	76	70	68	69	75	66
Dinefwr	75	74	84	80	78	73	75	69
Llanelli	66	70	69	67	63	64	61	58
Preseli	58	63	66	63	62	64	68	69
South Pembrokeshire	29	43	37	28	39	36	47	39
Blaenau Gwent	69	68	68	73	70	73	75	73
Islwyn	72	76	77	77	75	73	74	70
Monmouth	60	61	59	57	48	49	44	38
Newport	42	49	50	52	40	53	44	41
Torfaen	60	48	55	61	60	58	46	47
Aberconwy	57	57	60	58	53	49	46	43
Arfon	66	71	68	59	52	56	49	40
Dwyfor	63	66	70	65	63	61	60	61
Meirionydd	47	58	62	54	56	54	51	48
Ynys Mon	60	58	62	59	54	48	48	47
Cynon Valley	75	74	79	78	77	76	76	76
Merthyr Tydfil	72	75	73	76	73	70	67	68
Ogwr	65	69	58	68	65	60	61	58
Rhondda	83	84	85	80	84	84	84	84
Rhymney Valley	72	66	75	74	72	71	65	64
Taff Ely	60	59	57	57	53	55	48	49
Brecknock	72	69	78	64	65	62	56	56
Montgomeryshire	78	75	76	69	64	78	71	62
Radnor	59	67	65	59	54	58	72	57
Cardiff	56	63	63	61	60	66	65	64
Vale of Glamorgan	48	55	52	46	43	49	56	57
Port Talbot	29	38	32	46	38	44	43	49
Lliw Valley	70	63	68	67	66	67	65	65
Neath	59	68	69	67	65	47	62	79
Swansea	58	52	62	64	64	60	60	59
Wales	61	64	62	61	60	58	58	57

[1] Total expenditure figures for 1986-87, 1987-88 and 1988-89 are calculated in accordance with the rules set out in schedule 1 to the Rate Support Grants Act 1988.

(d) Rate Support Grants as a percentage of Total Expenditure by county area[1]

County area	1981-82	1982-83	1983-84	1984-85	1985-86	1986-87	1987-88	1988-89
Clwyd	64	63	61	60	60	57	57	57
Dyfed	67	69	68	65	64	62	63	62
Gwent	63	66	64	64	60	62	59	57
Gwynedd	67	67	66	61	59	60	57	57
Mid Glamorgan	75	74	70	69	71	68	69	68
Powys	77	78	76	72	70	70	71	68
South Glamorgan	57	59	55	53	51	49	49	48
West Glamorgan	58	59	58	59	59	56	56	54
Wales	65	66	64	62	62	60	60	59

[1] Percentages are based on totals for the county council and all district councils within the relevant county boundaries.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Justices of the Peace

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the number of justices of the peace in Stockport and Tameside by electoral ward and sex.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his answer, 22 December 1988 c. 390-91]: Following is the information for Tameside:

	Male	Female
South Tameside PSD
Dukinfield	2	2
Dukinfield Stalybridge	4	1
Hyde Godley	—	1
Hyde Newton	4	1
Hyde Werneth	7	1
Longdendale	11	6
Stalybridge North	2	1
Stalybridge South	2	7
Within North Tameside PSD
Aston Hurst	—	2
Denton West	1	—
Mossley	—	2
Outside both PSDs	9	9
	42	33
North Tameside (Ashton-Under-Lyne PSD)
Ashton St. Michael's	4	1
Ashton St. Peter's	4	1
Ashton Waterloo	2	2
Ashton Hurst	7	7
Audenshaw	3	—
Denton South	1	2
Denton West	4	3

	Male	Female
Denton West	4	3
Denton North East	4	1
Droylsden West	5	1
Droylsden East	1	1
Mossley	4	2
Within South Tameside PSD
Dukinfield	1	1
Dukinfield Stalybridge	—	1
Hyde Werneth	—	1
Longdendale	2	2
Stalybridge South	7	7
Outside both PSDs	11	10
	60	43

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

GATT

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will set out details of the agreement on tropical agricultural products reached at the recent GATT mid-term review in Montreal; and if he will specify decisions taken about the treatment of processed agricultural products from less-developed countries.

Mr. Alan Clark: Provisional agreement was reached among 32 developed and developing countries* to contribute to an initial package of measures liberalising trade in tropical products. This, like the other provisional agreements reached in Montreal, is subject to confirmation by the trade negotiations committee of the GATT meeting in Geneva early in April. In the meantime some importing countries are implementing parts of the tropical products package unilaterally.

The European Communities' contribution to the package covers the reduction of elimination of duty in 153 product categories including cut flowers, tropical fruits and nuts, tea, coffee, spices, vegetable oils for industrial purposes, fruit juices, essential oils, tropical woods, ropes and cordage and jute products. Elimination of import duties is proposed for certain raw materials, and reductions of up to 50 per cent. are proposed for others and for processed and semi-processed products. Import quotas will also be ended for woven fabrics of jute and other bast fibres. These concessions will apply equally to all GATT member countries. The EC offer also included reductions in import duty on tobacco products from developing countries. Those reductions, together with reductions in duty on fresh pineapples and mixtures of tropical fruits and nuts from the least developed countries, were implemented on 1 January 1989 through the Community's generalised scheme of preferences for developing countries.

* Australia, Austria, Brazil, Canada, the Central American Countries (Costa Rica, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua), Colombia, the members of the European Communities, Finland, Japan, Malaysia, Mexico, New Zealand, Norway, Philippines, Sweden, Switzerland, Thailand.

Malta

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on current trading relations with Malta.

Mr. Alan Clark: United Kingdom-Malta trade relations are very good. Provisional trade figures for January-November 1988 show United Kingdom exports of £110 million and imports of just over £37 million.

Takeovers

Mr. Robert B. Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether he will set out in the form of a table for the most recent available 12-month period, the information he has on the value and number of companies acquired (a) in the United Kingdom by European companies, (b) in Europe by United Kingdom companies, (c) in the United States of America by United Kingdom companies and (d) in the United Kingdom by United States companies.

Mr. Alan Clark: The information required in respect of United Kingdom cross-border acquisitions and mergers for the latest available 12 month period is as follows:

	Quarter 4 1987 Value £ million	Quarter 3 1988 Number
(a) European acquisitions in the United Kingdom	4,111	30
(b) United Kingdom acquisitions in Europe	1,587	184
(c) United Kingdom acquisitions in the United States	9,046	260
(d) United States acquisitions in the United Kingdom	649	17

An article on cross-border acquisitions and mergers in the third quarter of 1988 was published in British Business on 9 December 198.

Motor Vehicles

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will publish a table showing the number and value of motor vehicles imported into the United Kingdom by country of origin and manufacturing company in respect of manufacturers importing over 1,000 motor cars into the United Kingdom for each of the last 15 years' and the overall total for all those manufacturers importing fewer than 1,000 motor cars.

Mr. Alan Clark: The information is not available.

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is his estimate of (i) the proportion of United Kingdom imports, (ii) the trade deficit represented by such imports, and (iii) the deficit in the trade, of motor vehicles and accessories in the current year; and what are the comparable figures for the previous 15 years.

Mr. Alan Clark: The required information is given in the following tables:

United Kingdom imports of motor vehicles and accessories 1973 to November 1988
Table 1
Division 78 as percentage of total imports

	per cent.
1973	4·2
1974	2·9
1975	3·8
1976	4·6

	per cent.
1977	5·9
1978	7·1
1979	8·4
1980	6·7
1981	6·7
1982	7·9
1983	8·7
1984	7·5
1985	8·0
1986	9·2
1987	9·4
[1]1988	10·6

[1] January to November.

Table 2

Value in £ millions

	Exports		Imports
	Total trade	Division 78	Total trade	Division 78	Crude balance of trade	Crude balance of trade for division 78
1973	12,087·0	1,168·7	15,723·6	668·1	−3,636·6	+500·6
1974	16,309·2	1,397·6	23,138·9	668·7	−6,829·7	+728·9
1975	19,606·9	1,854·0	24,046·4	909·8	−4,439·5	+944·2
1976	25,276·6	2,376·9	31,084·1	1,431·6	−5,807·5	+945·3
1977	31,990·1	2,871·9	36,219·1	2,133·5	−4,229·0	+738·4
1978	35,380·3	3,070·3	39,533·0	2,796·9	−4,152·7	+273·4
1979	40,637·0	3,148·1	46,924·9	3,943·2	−6,287·9	−795·1
1980	47,357·1	3,158·0	49,772·9	3,351·6	−2,415·8	−193·6
1981	50,998·1	3,170·5	51,168·6	3,408·1	−170·5	−237·6
1982	55,557·8	3,109·0	56,978·2	4,489·6	−1,420·4	−1,380·6
1983	60,684·3	3,092·2	66,101·1	5,753·8	−5,416·8	−2,661·6
1984	70,488·3	3,318·8	78,967·4	5,957·6	−8,479·1	−2,638·8
1985	78,391·8	3,910·6	85,027·0	6,800·6	−6,635·2	−2,890·0
1986	72,987·7	3,953·5	86,175·5	7,938·8	−13,187·8	−3,985·3
1987	79,851·4	4,876·8	94,015·7	8,807·2	−14,164·3	−3,930·4
1988[1]	74,029·1	4,457·1	97,874·4	10,328·0	−23,845·3	−5,870·9

[1] January to November.
Source: Overseas Trade Statistics.
Notes:
1. Motor vehicles and accessories defined as Division 78 of the Standard International Trade Statistics.
2. Imports cif, exports fob.
3. 1987 and 1988 data are provisional.

Sarin (Sales to Iraq)

Mr. Peter Hardy: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many kilos of Sarin methyl phosphonyl difluoride were sold (a) to Iran and (b) to Iraq; whether this substance is known to be a nerve gas of lethal character; and what controls there are on such sales.

Mr. Atkins: Methyl phosphonyl difluoride is not itself a nerve gas of lethal character: it can however be used in the preparation of the nerve gas Sarin.

Following the first confirmation in March 1984 of the use of chemical weapons in the Gulf conflict, controls were imposed on exports of methyl phosphonyl difluoride from the United Kingdom to all destinations under the Export of Goods (Control) Order. No licences have been issued for the export of this substance to Iran or Iraq since the imposition of controls in 1984.

Betting

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if, in the light of the recent takeover in the off-course betting market, the Director General of the Office of Fair Trading will look again at the monopoly position of the big three bookmakers.

Mr. Maude: I understand that the Director General of Fair Trading is continuing to monitor developments in the off-course bookmaking market under the competition legislation for which he is responsible.

Libya

Mr. Ron Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what was the value of British goods and services exported to Libya in 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: For the 11 months January to November 1988 the United Kingdom exported goods to the value of £209·3 million. Information on the value of services is not available.

House of Fraser plc

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he now expects to hear from the serious fraud office about the inquiries which it has initiated into the implications of the report on the acquisition of House of Fraser plc; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude: I cannot say.

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is the last day on which he can refer the House of Fraser acquisition report to the Monopolies and Merger Commission; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude: Sunday 22 January 1989.

Innovation and Investment Grants

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) what is the total estimated expenditure on (a) innovation grants and (b) investment grants for each of the years 1988-89, 1989-90 and 1990-91;

(2) if he will give for innovation grants and investment grants the total number of applications (a) received and (b) approved from 1 April 1988 to 31 December 1988, and the total estimated expenditure for that period.

Mr. Atkins: Between 1 April 1988 and 31 December 1988 my Department received 1,054 applications, and made 509 offers of regional enterprise grants. The offers are valued at £4·1 million, and payments of £331,217 have been made.

Current Estimates provision for regional enterprise grants is £12·3 million in 1988-89. This figure is gross of any receipts, or expected receipts, from the European regional development fund. Information about planned expenditure on regional assistance in 1989-90 and 1990-91 will shortly be published in the Public Expenditure White Paper.

Business Development Consultancy Initiative

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what was the total estimated expenditure on the business development consultancy initiative in each of the years 1988-89, 1989-90 and 1990-1991 for England, Scotland and Wales.

Mr. Newton: The current Estimates provision for 1988-89 for the consultancy initiatives in England, Scotland and Wales is £74 million. Details of estimated expenditure for 1989-90 and 1990-91 will shortly be published in the Public Expenditure White Paper.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what was the total number of applications (a) received and (b) approved for business development consultancy initiatives from 1 April 1988 to 31 December 1988, the total amount of expenditure involved and the total estimated expenditure for that period for Scotland, Wales and and each of the standard regions.

Mr. Newton: In the period from 1 April to 31 December 1988 a total of 13,461 applications was received for the six business development consultancy initiatives. In the same period 10,352 applications were approved for consultancy. The Department's contribution to the cost of completed consultancies totalled £5·9 million. It is estimated that those consultancies not completed by 31 December 1988 will cost the Department £21·3 million. A breakdown of numbers and cost for each DTI region* and for Scotland and Wales is as follows:

DTI Region[1]/Country	(a) No. of applications received	(b) No. of applications approved for consultancy	(c) DTI Expenditure on completed consultancies (£'000)	(d) Estimated expenditure on outstanding consultancies (£'000)
North East	659	529	282	1,125
North West	2,093	1,783	1,159	4,115
Yorkshire and Humberside	1,351	990	671	2,234
West Midlands	1,399	993	672	2,497
East Midlands	785	657	400	1,594
South West	1,337	852	353	1,498
South East:
Cambridge	943	688	247	1,147
London	1,432	1,124	582	1,918
Reading	772	631	224	1,322
Reigate	724	580	282	983
Scotland	1,105	903	724	1,770
Wales	861	622	288	1,110
TOTAL	13,461	10,352	5,884	21,313

[1] Data is collected for DTI regions and for Scotland and Wales. DTI regions are similar to standard economic regions except that DTI north west includes Cumbria and the High Peak district which are in the north and east midlands standard economic regions respectively, and DTI south east includes the East Anglia standard economic region.

Regional Assistance

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what was the total estimated expenditure on regional development grant and regional selective assistance in England for each of the years 1988-89, 1989-90 and 1990-91.

Mr. Atkins: Department of Trade and Industry current Supply Estimates provision for expenditure on regional development grant (RDG) and regional selective assistance (RSA) in England in 1988-89 is £157·9 million and £154·2 million, respectively. The RDG figure covers both the original and revised schemes. The RSA figure incorporates expenditure on industrial and training grants, as well as assistance under the business improvement services and exchange risk guarantee schemes. Both figures are net of domestic receipts but gross of expected receipts from the European regional development fund.

Information about planned expenditure on regional assistance in 1989-90 and 1990-91 will shortly be published in the Public Expenditure White Paper.

Asian Community Radio

Mr. Cox: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what action has been taken by his Department over the last 12 months against the radio station broadcasting in south London called Asian Community Radio.

Mr. Atkins: No action has been taken by my Department's radio investigation services (RIS) in the last 12 months against an unlicensed broadcasting station in south London calling itself Asian Community Radio. However, on 16 January a station of that name broadcasting in north London was raided and the transmitter seized.

DEFENCE

Emergencies (Food Distribution)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence under what circumstances military personnel are used to distribute food to the civil population during disasters or emergencies.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Under the military aid to the community scheme, the use of military personnel to distribute food to the civil population during a disaster or civil emergency would be considered where there is a danger to life and no alternative means of food distribution are available. An example might be the use of service helicopters to reach a community cut off by flooding or a heavy snowfall.

Emergencies (Liaison)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what liaison is undertaken by military personnel with the police, fire service, health authorities and local government in the event of civil emergencies.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The precise form of liaison would depend on the circumstances, but when service assistance is provided, a liaison officer from the operational headquarters which is co-ordinating the service response would be sent as soon as possible to the incident centre set up by the civil emergency services. Advice on the initial point of contact for any request for service assistance is contained in a pamphlet issued for the guidance of civil authorities; I shall place a copy of this pamphlet in the Library of the House.

Lockerbie Air Disaster

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the estimated cost to date of the use of military personnel in the Pan Am Lockerbie air disaster.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We are not yet able to calculate the additional costs of providing military assistance to the police and the air accident investigation branch in the Lockerbie air disaster as returns from many participating units and establishments are not yet complete.

Disaster and Emergency Training

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of training for service men is devoted to training for disasters or emergencies.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Apart from specialist search and rescue units, service men do not train specifically for civil disaster relief or non-military emergencies, as responsibility for dealing with these lies with the civil authorities. On occasions, however, the particular skills and equipment which the services possess can be of assistance, and established procedures exist for the civil authorities to call upon such assistance in certain circumstances.

Quality Assurance

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he received the results of the investment appraisal on the future location of the directorate general of defence quality assurance; and when he expects to be able to announce a decision.

Mr. Sainsbury: My right hon. Friend received the results of the investment appraisal on the future location of the directorate general of defence quality assurance in October last year, and we are continuing to have discussions with interested parties.

Procurement Expenditure

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will indicate for each year since 1974 the annual expenditure on defence procurement at (a) cash and (b) constant 1988-89 prices; and if he will express these figures as a proportion of the total defence budget for each year since 1974.

Mr. Sainsbury: Defence equipment expenditure is shown each year in volume 2 (table 2.2) of the "Statement of Defence Estimates" and, since 1981, it has also been shown as a percentage of total defence expenditure. Figures are not yet available at 1988-89 prices and the figures in column (c) of the table are given at Estimates 1988-89 prices. These figures have been calculated using a measure of inflation based on movements in the price of defence equipment.

(a) Financial year	(b) Equipment expenditure at cash	(c) Column (b) at Estimates 1988-89 prices	(d) Column (b) as a percentage of defence expenditure
	£ million	£ million
1974-75	1,030	5,754	31·3
1975-76	1,792	6,418	33·5
1976-77	2,138	6,306	34·7
1977-78	2,565	6,448	37·8
1978-79	2,984	6,695	40·0
1979-80	3,640	7,003	39·7
1980-81	4,885	7,924	43·7
1981-82	5,638	8,078	44·7
1982-83	6,297	8,575	43·7
1983-84	6,939	8,901	44·8
1984-85	7,838	9,441	45·8
1985-86	8,193	9,336	45·7
1986-87	7,885	8,474	43·4
1987-88	8,270	8,555	43·9

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what is his policy on authorising foreign air force units to fly at less than 250 ft over the United Kingdom;

(2) if any foreign air forces have been authorised to fly at less than 250 ft over the United Kingdom at any time since 1979.

Mr. Neubert: There are no records of foreign military aircraft having been authorised to carry out low-flying training in the United Kingdom at less than 250 ft. Any such requests to operate in a tactical training area would be considered on a case-by-case basis on their merits.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what types of flying at less than 250 ft other than work-up training for Flag exercises in the United States of America and Canada take place in the Borders tactical training area.

Mr. Neubert: Training in the Borders tactical training area consists mainly of work-up training for operational low-flying exercises in the United States and Canada. Occasional continuation training may also be carried out to maintain aircrew skills between such exercises, thereby reducing the quantity of work-up training required.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will list the proportions of flying at less than 250 ft over the United Kingdom since 1979 which have taken place (a) between 7 am and 7 pm, (b) between 7 pm and 11 pm and (c) between 11 pm and 7 am; and what plans exist to increase the amount of such flying in the evenings and at night;

(2) if he will ban low flying at less than 250 ft between the hours of 7 pm and 7 am.

Mr. Neubert: Activity within the three tactical training areas has been confined to the hours between 7 am and 7 pm although the vast majority takes place from mid-morning to mid-afternoon. We do not at present envisage any change in this practice or any significant increase in the requirement for low-flying training below 250 ft as a whole.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) on what date sorties at less than 250 ft took place for the first time in low flying area 20 (T) west;

(2) on what date the ministerial decision was made to extend the Borders tactical training area by the creation of low flying area 20 (T) west;

(3) on what date the westward extension of the Borders tactical training area, known as low flying area 20 (T) west, was first marked on the low flying chart covering southern Scotland.

Mr. Neubert: Ministerial approval to extend the Borders tactical training area was given in March 1988. Following that, the extension was first marked on the low flying chart which became current on 27 May 1988, and the first sorties at less than 250 ft in the new extended area took place on 29 June 1988.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what date the military low flying management group first discussed proposals to create a new 100 ft low flying area in south-west Scotland.

Mr. Neubert: The records currently available indicate that such proposals were first discussed on 27 September 1985.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the locational requirements for the training of fighter pilots in terms of the ground facilities needed and the terrain necessary for low-flying practice.

Mr. Neubert: I will write to the hon. and learned Member.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the occasions on which flights at less than 250 ft took place over the western portion of the Borders tactical training area in 1988, giving the dates, number of sorties on each date, and types of aircraft and units involved.

Mr. Neubert: The information requested cannot be provided without disproportionate effort.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what research is being conducted by his Department on the medical effects of exposure to the noise levels from military jet aircraft flying at 100 ft above ground level.

Mr. Neubert: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my predecessor on 27 July 1988 at column 350. The NATO working group on noise is expected to report on its proposals toward the end of 1989.

Artillery

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the numbers of artillery, mortars and multiple rocket launchers currently possessed by the British Army and the number of these that are currently held in storage.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: On 1 January 1988, a total of 394 pieces of equipment of these types were in use, excluding mortars of a calibre less than 100 mm. Since the number held in storage is directly related to reserve stocks, it is not our practice to disclose this figure.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many anti-aircraft artillery and fixed and mobile surface-to-air missile launchers are currently possessed by Her Majesty's Forces; how many are presently in storage; and what percentage are currently located in Great Britain.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: On 1 January 1988, a total of 350 pieces of equipment of these types were in use. Since the number of equipments held in storage is directly related to reserve stocks, it is not our practice to disclose this figure. I refer the hon. Member to Annexes B and C of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1988" (Cm 344-I) for the proportion of our air defence forces which are located in Great Britain.

Military Carriers

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the numbers of (a) armoured personnel carriers and (b) military support carriers presently in use by the British Army.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The term "military support carriers" is not a term used within the British Army, but on 1 January 1988 the Army had a total of 5,048 armoured vehicles in service which were not main battle tanks, armoured vehicle bridge layers, armoured infantry fighting vehicles, artillery pieces or air defence launchers.

Search and Rescue

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many search and rescue operations were carried out during the hours of darkness and from which defence establishments in the last five years for which information is available.

Mr. Neubert: Central records are held in a form which distinguishes between search and rescue missions which begin in daylight and those which begin in darkness. For the latter, the figures are:

Station	Number of callouts commencing in darkness
	1984	1985	1986	1987	1988
RAF Helicopters[1]
Boulmer	6	7	12	4	6
Brawdy	12	5	12	9	14
Chivenor	3	1	—	1	2
Coltishall	7	—	6	5	6
Leconfield	5	4	—	—	5
Leuchars	12	7	4	6	9
Lossiemouth	12	11	12	11	17
Manston	8	2	5	6	2
Valley	11	7	6	5	11

Station	Number of callouts commencing in darkness 1984	1985	1986	1987	1988
RN Helicopters
Culdrose	5	2	8	5	9
Lee on Solent[2]	1	2	1	2	—
Portland	—	—	—	—	2
Prestwick	1	3	1	—	1
Fixed Wing Aircraft
St. Mawgan	6	8	6	14	7
Kinloss	7	6	5	3	12
Mountain Rescue Teams
Leuchars	—	—	1	—	—
Kinloss	—	—	—	1	—
Valley	4	3	—	1	—
St. Atan	—	—	1	1	1
Stafford	—	—	2	—	1
Linton on Ouse	—	—	1	—	—

Notes:

[1] The figures exclude a small number of callouts undertaken by units which are not assigned to the search and rescue (SAR) role.

[2] The statistics for Lee on Solent cover the period up to 15 May 1988, when the military SAR service was withdrawn. A temporary RAF flight operated from Lee between 31 March (when the RN flight was withdrawn) and 15 May.

Armoured Vehicles

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration he has given to purchasing armoured infantry fighting vehicles for the British Army; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: The new warrior vehicle currently being purchased is an armoured infantry fighting vehicle, sometimes also known as a mechanised infantry combat vehicle. The first battalion's worth of vehicles entered service in 1988 and, on current plans, a total of 13 battalions will eventually be equipped with Warrior.

Defence Communications Centre

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has any plans to move the defence communications centre from its present position under his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: There are no plans to move the defence communications centre from its present position.

Monetary Rewards

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what is the maximum monetary reward currently allowed as a payment to soldiers for actions beyond the normal call of duty; and when this amount was last reviewed;

(2) what regulations officers in the British Army must follow in order to obtain a monetary reward for their men in return for actions beyond the normal call of duty; and when these regulations were last reviewed.

Mr. Neubert: My reply to the hon. and learned Member on 16 January 1989 at column 28 explained the justification for paying the x factor to service men. Articles 228 and 485 of the Army pay warrant provide for officers and soldiers to receive an extra 90p a day whilst engaged in work of an objectionable nature. Under the regulations, Ministry of Defence approval has to be sought before payment is made. This payment is reviewed annually by the armed forces pay review body, and was last increased from 1 April 1988. In addition the armed forces pay review body reviews the case for this type of payment periodically—normally every five years. The last such review was in 1986.

United States Submarines (Discharges)

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has regarding the discharging of radioactive primary coolant by United States submarines into Scottish waters since 1960.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Her Majesty's Government are satisfied that any releases of radioactivity have not breached established national and international standards.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when United States Polaris submarines were ordered not to discharge radioactive primary coolant into Scottish waters; and on whose initiative this action was taken.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I cannot comment about specific orders given to United States Navy Polaris submarines, which are a matter for the United States Government.

Accommodation Charges

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will publish in the Official Report the annual charges for married and single quarters made to service men and women in respect of quarters in (a) Scotland in 1988-89 and 1989-90 and (b) England, in 1988-89 and 1989-90;

(2) what amount of charges made for married and single quarters for service men and women reflects the Treasury calculations in lieu of rates on Crown property.

Mr. Neubert: Accommodation charges for 1988-89 in Scotland and England are as in the table; the figures in brackets are a composite element within these charges, covering rates and water rates. Charges for 1989-90 will be set in the light of recommendations from the armed forces pay review body, and have yet to be determined. In Scotland they will not include elements for rates.

The rates and water rates elements of married and single accommodation charges are recommended by the armed forces pay review body on the basis of the total amounts payable as contributions in lieu of rates and the estimated cost of water supplies. No further breakdown is available.

Type	Grade 1		Grade 2		Grade 3		Grade 4
Married Quarters
Other ranks
A	810	(243)	730	(219)	558	(168)	369	(111)
B	1,212	(442)	1,085	(401)	840	(307)	551	(202)
C	1,354	(513)	1,226	(464)	945	(358)	621	(235)
D	1,518	(591)	1,372	(534)	1,066	(415)	690	(268)
Officers

Type	Grade 1		Grade 2		Grade 3		Grade 4
V	1,924	(751)	1,745	(681)	1,329	(519)	891	(348)
IV	2,219	(867)	2,008	(784)	1,555	(608)	1,011	(395)
III	2,566	(1,039)	2,321	(940)	1,778	(720)	1,172	(474)
II	2,894	(1,138)	2,613	(1,028)	2,000	(786)	1,318	(518)
I	3,223	(1,267)	2,916	(1,147)	2,230	(877)	1,471	(578)
Single Accommodation
Rank
Young servicemen	299	(96)	266	(85)	204	(67)	139	(44)
Cpl and below	398	(128)	361	(116)	274	(90)	183	(58)
WO/SNCO	745	(256)	675	(232)	515	(179)	339	(117)
Capt and below	1,040	(376)	938	(342)	719	(259)	485	(174)
Major and above	1,256	(434)	1,135	(392)	869	(304)	573	(198)

(Annual charges rounded to the nearest £)

Rating Reform

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what guidance has been issued in respect of liability for community charge as to whether a service men has his sole or main residence in Scotland if he is stationed in Scotland but has married quarters in England.

Mr. Neubert: Decisions on sole or main residence in Scotland will be made by community charge registration officers, and subject to the right of appeal to the sheriff. Service personnel who have a married quarter in England but are stationed in Scotland for more than six months are expected to be regarded as solely or mainly resident in Scotland for that time, and guidance has been issued to this effect.

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what instructions he has issued to commanding officers in relation to registering service personnel, their dependants and others living in military accommodation for community charges in (a) Scotland and (b) England and Wales.

Mr. Neubert: Commanding officers in Scotland have been instructed to nominate a responsible person or persons to provide community charge registration officers with the information required by the Abolition of Domestic Rates Etc. (Scotland) Act 1987, to enable them to compile and maintain the community charges register. Similar instructions will be issued in due course for England and Wales.

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has made arrangements in Scotland for the liability for community charge for service personnel and their dependants to be paid by way of direct deductions from service pay.

Mr. Neubert: Army personnel who so elect to pay their personal community charge, and that of their dependants by direct deduction from service pay under standard allotment procedures. Because Royal Navy and Royal Air Force personnel are normally paid by direct credit transfer to their bank or other accounts, they will be expected to make their own arrangements for paying their personal community charge direct to the relevant local authority.

Challenger Tank

Mr. Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to place the demonstration phase contract with Vickers Defence Systems for the Challenger II mark 2 tank.

Mr. Sainsbury: Contractual negotiations have been successfully concluded between MOD and Vickers Defence Systems and a contract for the demonstration phase of the Challenger II mark 2 tank was placed on Friday 20 January, in accordance with the procurement strategy set out by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence in his statement on 20 December 1988 columns 283-84 and with the precise criteria as set out in the answer given by my right hon. Friend to the hon. Member on 20 December at column 259.

Grooms

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the rate charged for military personnel employed as grooms when tending privately owned horses.

Mr. Neubert: Since service men are not permitted to tend privately owned horses as part of their military duties, any reimbursement which they may receive for doing so in their own time is by private arrangement.

ENVIRONMENT

Heritage (Protection)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what legislation he intends to introduce to protect Britain's archaeological sites from destruction by developers in the light of forthcoming directives from the EEC; if he will be providing for archaeological surveys to be made before developers commence work; and what further protection he will give to save Britain's heritage.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The regulations which brought the EC directive on environmental assessment on 15 July 1988, require environmental statements to be prepared.

Water Authorities

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he will take against water authorities which do not meet the legal requirements he has set out by the year 1992; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: I understand that the question relates to consents for discharges from sewage treatment works. The Water Bill proposes that the National Rivers Authority will have the responsibility for ensuring compliance with these and other discharge consents. It will be for the authority to set out its policy on enforcement of consent conditions when it is established.

Rivers (Classification)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list by rivers the classification grades of rivers in Yorkshire; what are the comparable grades for rivers (a) in southern England and (b) nationally; what the classifications represent; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: The 1985 river quality survey for England and Wales reported the water quality classification of river lengths in each water authority area. The classification of river lengths in the Yorkshire, Southern and Thames water authority areas, together with overall results, are as follows:

Percentage

	Class 1 Good quality	Class 2 Fair quality	Class 3 Poor quality	Class 4 Bad quality
Yorkshire Water Authority	77	12	8	3
Southern Water Authority	75	22	2	0·2
Thames Water Authority	65	28	7	0·1
England and Wales	68	22	9	2

The classifications of different rivers are best illustrated in the map which formed part of the report on the 1985 survey and I am sending the hon. Member a copy of this, together with details of the river classification scheme on which the 1985 survey was based. Further details are contained in the survey report, copies of which are available in the Library.

Radon Radiation

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) in what form records are kept of public buildings in England and Wales that are affected by radon radiation; and if he will state their locations;

(2) in what form records are kept of the action readings of public buildings affected by radon radiation; and if he will state the action readings and the location of buildings so affected.

Mr. Chope: Occupational exposure to Radon in public buildings, in common with other workplaces, is subject to the provisions of the Ionising Radiations Regulations 1985, which are administered by the Health and Safety Executive. The obligation to measure Radon levels in public buildings and maintain records rests with employers, including Government Departments. There is no centrally held records of public buildings affected by Radon radiation.

Water Act 1973

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment on how many occasions his Department has made any orders under section 23 of the Water Act 1945 or section 67 of the Water Resources Act 1963 in connection with the construction or operation of a reservoir in England, giving the date of any such order and the location to which it applied.

Mr. Moynihan: A large number of orders have been made under both provisions. The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Football Clubs (Membership Scheme)

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many representations he has received to date about Government proposals for a scheme of identification cards for football supporters.

Mr. Moynihan: I have received over 1,800 representations relating to the idea of a scheme. In addition I have received a large number of proposals to implement the scheme from computer companies and others.

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will provide details of the membership scheme operated by Torquay United and give details of his Department's contacts with the club to examine the operation of its scheme.

Mr. Moynihan: I am aware that Torquay United introduced a 100 per cent. home only membership scheme in November 1986 and that the club considers that this has played an effective part in curbing hooliganism. I congratulate the club on introducing the scheme.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment with which football authorities in other countries the Under-Secretary of State with responsibility for sport has discussed his proposals for a national membership scheme for attendance at football matches; what their response has been; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan [holding answer 19 January 1989]: The British Government is a member of the Council of Europe standing committee on spectator violence. Through this committee, we have kept other European Governments in close touch with developments on a national membership scheme in England and Wales. A number of other Governments have expressed an interest in our proposals.

We have also kept the European Union of Football Associations (UEFA) informed of developments.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the computer firms with whom the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, the Minister for Sport, has discussed his proposals for the introduction of a national membership scheme for attendance at football league matches.

Mr. Moynihan [holding answer 19 January 1989]: I have received proposals from a number of computer and other companies concerning the implementation of a national membership scheme. I have discussed the proposals with some of them. It would not be appropriate for me to list individual companies by name without their consent.

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many representations he has received from Halifax about Government proposals for a scheme of identification cards for football supporters.

Mr. Moynihan [holding answer 19 January 1989]: The hon. Member wrote to me on 16 November about the proposed membership scheme for football supporters. I have also received a letter from the chairman of Halifax Town football club and one from a resident of Halifax about the idea of a scheme.

County Hall

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether, in deciding the distribution of the proceeds from the sale of County hall, he will make it his policy to take into account the fact that Inner London ratepayers have met the full debt charges and running costs of that part of the building used for educational administration.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: No. The Greater London council's general debt liabilities were distributed pro rata to population at abolition.

The Department is at present consulting all London authorities about London residuary capital money matters including the distribution of the County hall receipt. I am sending a copy of the consultation letter to the hon. Member.

Local Authorities (Wages)

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discretion is allowed to local authorities in determining wage rates for local authority employees.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Subject to certain statutory exceptions, a local authority is free to employ staff on such reasonable terms and conditions as the authority thinks fit. In practice the pay rates of approximately 75 per cent. of local authority employees are determined in national negotiations between the local government employers and the appropriate unions. The Government will continue to urge individual local authorities to take greater control of their own payroll costs by moving away from national agreements and adopting local pay bargaining.

Docklands

Ms. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many firms or businesses have moved out of the London Docklands Development Corporation area since 1981; and how many firms or businesses operating in the urban development area in 1981 have subsequently ceased to trade.

Mr. Trippier: Information on firms which move out of the urban development area is not collected (other than for firms which relocate with LDDC assistance). A total of 41 firms employing 10 or more people closed between 1981 and 31 March 1988.

Ms. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will give an estimate of the proportion of construction jobs in the London Docklands Development Corporation area in 1988 that are held by residents of Tower Hamlets, Southwark, Newham, Lewisham and Greenwich;

(2) how many of the newly created jobs in the London Docklands Development Corporation area since 1981 have been taken by (i) women, (ii) people from ethnic minority groups and (iii) people who were previously unemployed; and how many are part-time jobs;

(3) how many of the jobs lost in Docklands since 1981 were held by residents of Tower Hamlets, Southwark, Newham, Lewisham and Greenwich.

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the business establishments in the London Docklands urban development area that have been relocated by the London Docklands Development Corporation; and for each of these establishments what is (a) the date of relocation, (b) the employment level at relocation, (c) the location prior to relocation, (d) the reason for relocation, (e) the predicted costs to the London Docklands Development Corporation of relocation, (f) the actual costs to the London Docklands Development Corporation of relocation, (g) the level of compensation paid, (h) the location after relocation and (j) the current level of employment if still operating.

Mr. Trippier: This information is not collected, or could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Ms. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) from which economic sectors jobs have been lost in the London Docklands Development Corporation area since 1981;

(2) how many of the jobs newly created in the London Docklands Development Corporation area since 1981 have been taken by the residents of Southwark, Tower Hamlets, Newham, Lewisham and Greenwich;

(3) what is the breakdown of newly created jobs in the London Docklands Development Corporation area since 1981, by economic sector;

(4) what is the breakdown of transferred jobs in the London Docklands Development Corporation area since 1981, by economic sector;

(5) if he will give a breakdown by type of industry of new jobs in London Docklands since 1981;

(6) how many new jobs in London Docklands since 1981 have been in the construction sector;

(7) how many of the jobs created in Docklands since 1981 are located in the Isle of Dogs enterprise zone.

Mr. Trippier: Most of this information will be available shortly, when the corporation completes work on a survey of employment in docklands. I shall write to the hon. Member when details are available.

Ms. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many jobs have been lost in the London Docklands Development Corporation area since 1981;

(2) what is the latest estimate of net job creation in the London Docklands Development Corporation area since 1981;

(3) how many jobs have been created in the London Docklands Development Corporation area since 1981; how many are transfers from outside the urban development area; and how many are newly created.

Mr. Trippier: The information requested is as follows:

London Docklands Urban Development Area 1981-87

	Number
Jobs lost to the area	11,145
Jobs created and attracted	20,315
Net increase in jobs	9,172

Details of the breakdown between jobs created and those transferred will be available shortly. I shall write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many business establishments, with what levels of employment, the London Docklands Development Corporation is currently attempting to relocate; and how many it proposes to relocate by the end of 1992.

Mr. Trippier: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Isle of Dogs

Ms. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the total amount of rate allowance claimed so far in the Isle of Dogs enterprise zone.

Mr. Trippier: Schedule 32 of the Local Government, Planning and Land Act 1980 provides that my right hon. Friend shall make grants to rating authorities who lose revenue from properties within enterprise zones that are exempt from the payment of rates. To date, the rating authorities affected by the Isle of Dogs enterprise zone have claimed £37,764,136.

Amusement Arcades

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent discussions he has had with London borough councils as to granting such local authorities greater control over the operation of amusement arcades in their borough; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: I have not discussed this subject with any London borough council. Powers to regulate the operation of amusement arcades are primarily the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has as to when the Nuclear Industry Radioactive Waste Executive will publish its report on sites for the storage of radioactive waste; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State expects to receive a report from Nirex shortly. No decision has yet been taken on publication.

Rating Reform

Sir Eldon Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what indications he has to date of local authorities increasing or decreasing the number of staff they employ to collect community charge as compared with the number they employed to collect rates;

(2) how he intends to monitor the progress of implementation by local authorities of their arrangements for the collection of community charge; and if the timetable and checklists to be sent to all authorities following receipt of part II of the Price Waterhouse report on this matter are the basis for this monitoring.

Mr. Gummer: We are monitoring progress through visits and other contacts with charging authorities, and have asked for a short summary of progress so far from each community charges registration officer. This will be followed up with a more detailed questionnaire in the spring. The timetable and checklist in the Price Waterhouse report will be of assistance in the monitoring process. It is hoped that the summaries of progress which have been requested will give a preliminary indication of charging authorities' proposals for the use of staff in comparison with the numbers of staff now working on rating.

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what a typical ward sister would pay (a) in rates, (b) in community charge and (c) in a system of capital value rates plus local income tax paid in the proportions of 80-20, respectively, if she lived in a typical one bedroom flat in Streatham.

Mr. Gummer: A ward sister earning £15,000, living in a flat in Streatham worth £60,000 with a rateable value of £250, would pay a rates bill of £648, a community charge of £490 (disregarding the transitional safety net), and £1,325 under a system of capital value rates plus local income tax.

Dr. John Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what response he has had to his Department's letter of December 1988 to chief finance officers of metropolitan and non-metropolitan districts and London boroughs asking for a progress report on the implementation of the community charge; and whether he will (a) publish the results of his survey and (b) place copies of the individual responses in the Library.

Mr. Ridley: We have so far received responses from around half of the 366 charging authorities. When a more complete set of responses has been analysed, I shall place a summary in the Library. Authorities were not informed that the responses themselves would be made public and it will be necessary to ask them, at the next suitable opportunity, whether they are content for them to be placed in the Library.

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he took into account from Scotland's poll tax registration process undertaken during April-May 1988 when deciding to defer the commencement date of the community charges regulations to 22 May 1989.

Mr. Ridley [holding answer 20 January 1989]: The equivalent Scottish regulations came into force on 1 April 1988, and Scottish registers had to be compiled by 1 October, a period of exactly six months. Registers in England and Wales have to be compiled by 1 December 1989. Bringing the regulations into force on 22 May will therefore allow a slightly longer period for registration than in Scotland. I have no doubt that the registration process can be carried out as successfully in England and Wales as it has been in Scotland.

Housing

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list by year for the last 15 years for which figures are available the annual number of completions, within North East Derbyshire district council area of (a) private sector houses and flats, (b) council houses and flats and (c) housing association housing and flats.

Mr. Trippier: Housebuilding completions, as reported by North East Derbyshire district council, for years as from 1980 appear in table 1 of "Housebuilding in England by Local Authority Areas: 1980 to 1987". For earlier years figures appear in the following issues of "Local Housing Statistics":

	Issue number	Table
1974	33	5
1975	37	5
1976	41	5
1977	45	5
1978	49	5
1979	59	4(a)

Copies of these publications are available in the Library.

Comparable figures for 1973 are not available because of the reorganisation of local government in 1974.

Planning Permission

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he intends to seek to make it an offence to start building works prior to obtaining planning permission.

Mr. Chope: This is one of the issues being considered by Mr. Robert Carnwath QC in his current review of local planning authorities' planning enforcement powers. My right hon. Friend will consider whether any amendment should be made in the light of Mr. Carnwath's recommendation on this issue.

Caravan Sites Act 1968

Mr. Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent representations he has received about the Caravan Sites Act 1968; and if he has any plans to seek to repeal the Act.

Mr. Trippier: I receive occasional correspondence on the subject. I have no plans to repeal the Act. A review of policy was completed only two years ago and the conclusions were announced by my right hon. Friend in a reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Hornsey and Wood Green (Sir H. Rossi) on 6 February 1987.

Nuclear Waste (Liverpool Bay)

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has on the Nuclear Industry Radioactive Waste Executive proposal to site a dump for nuclear waste in Liverpool bay; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment is not aware of any proposal by Nirex to site a radioactive waste repository in Liverpool bay. Until Nirex's proposals have been received and a decision is made, no part of the country can be ruled out.

Dogs

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will bring forward proposals to achieve a reduction in the numbers of dogs that are at present destroyed annually in the United Kingdom.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: There are no plans to do so.

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to exercise the powers granted to him under the Local Government Act 1988 to introduce a national dog registration scheme.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We have no plans to do so.

"Deadline"

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has received a copy of the RSPCA film entitled, "Deadline"; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: No copy has been received.

Football Spectators Bill

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will seek to exempt Wales from the Football Spectators Bill; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales on 17 January to my hon. Friend the Member for Cardiff, North (Mr. Jones) at column 146.

Spectator Control

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if his Department has made any study examining methods used for spectator control at large sporting events in the United States of America, or any other foreign country; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: No. We have studied the final report of the committee of inquiry into crowd safety and control at sports grounds, chaired by Mr. Justice Popplewell. I commend it to the hon. Member.

Water

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the cost and proportion of annual expenditure spent on advertising and publicity by each water authority for the last five years.

Mr. Ridley [holding answer 19 January 1989]: This information is not held centrally. I suggest that the hon. Gentleman writes to each water authority.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment in the light of his policy for comparative competition within the water industry, if he will indicate the main financial indicators of cost comparison he has already applied to regional water authorities, and if he will publish a table in the Official Report showing their respective performance for the latest convenient financial year, in pence per thousand gallons.

Mr. Moynihan [holding answer 19 January 1989]: The Government have set performance aims for the water authorities' real terms operating costs for three consecutive three year periods, the last ending in 1989-90. Performance against the aims is reported in the authorities' annual reports and accounts which are laid before Parliament. In setting the Performance aims the Government make use of a series of performance indicators which standardise operating cost measures in terms of equivalent population in each water authority.

The performance indicators are published as a five-year rolling series in the water authorities' annual reports and in Waterfacts which is also available in the Library. Performance indicators in terms of pence per thousand gallons are not available.

Ms. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he intends to take to reduce the aluminium content in the water supplied to consumers in Halifax.

Mr. Moynihan [holding answer 19 January 1989]: Last year three of the water supplies to Halifax exceeded the aluminium standard in the EC drinking water directive. One of these supplies now complies and the other two should comply by 1990. Current aluminium concentrations are not considered to be a health risk.

Housing (London)

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has on the relative efficiency in terms of price and build time of the private sector and direct labour organisations building houses in inner London.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 19 January 1989]: This information is not available in the form requested. Under the Local Government, Planning and Land Act 1980 direct labour organisations are required to make a rate of return of 5 per cent. on capital employed, my right hon. Friend has given directions to Lambeth and Hackney borough councils to cease from undertaking works of new construction in the light of their failure to achieve this rate of return.

Protection of Birds

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his reply of 10 January, Official Report, column 510, if he will report on the progress made by the RSPCA and RSPB in rescuing birds affected by the recent oil pollution in the Channel; and what is his latest estimate of damage caused to seabird populations.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 19 January 1989]: I understand that so far this month the RSPCA, assisted by local volunteer members of the RSPB, have in the course of sea and beach patrols responded to five separate incidents involving a total of about 500 birds affected by oil. Many of the affected birds have been taken for cleaning at RSPCA and private centres. It is estimated that while up to 1,000 birds may have died, a further 1,000 affected birds will survive.

Domestic (Water Supplies Disconnections)

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will meet the chairmen of the water authorities to discuss improvements to a code of conduct relating to the disconnection of domestic water supplies.

Mr. Moynihan [holding answer 17 January 1989]: My right hon. Friend regularly meets the chairmen of the water authorities to discuss a number of issues. His officials are at present discussing with the water industry additional customer safeguards that might be inserted into the code of practice relating to the disconnection of domestic water supplies.

Football Statistics

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if, pursuant to his answer on football statistics, Official Report, 19 December 1988, columns 55 to 60, he will show in similar tables the average arrests per match by division in conjunction with the average arrest figures for football clubs in the Professional Footballers Association community programme scheme.

Mr. Moynihan [holding answer 13 January 1989]: The following information relates to Football League matches played in the 1987-88 season. The clubs listed are those which operated the PFA community programme scheme throughout that season.

	Average arrests per match
Division 1
Everton	1·20
Liverpool	1·65
For Division	5·3
Division 2
Blackburn Rovers	3·6
Manchester City	1·59
Oldham Athletic	0·86
For Division	4·2
Division 3
Blackpool	1·6
Bury	0·2
Chester City	0·96
Preston North End	0·9
Wigan Athletic	0·17
For Division	1·5
Division 4
Bolton Wanderers	0·9
Burnley	3·9
Crewe Alexandra	1·9
Rochdale	1·4
For Division	1·7

Football Matches (Arrests)

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will obtain details from the Association of Chief Police Officers of the categories of offences under which people were arrested at football league matches in England during the 1987-88 season, and the numbers in each category.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 10 January 1989]: I have been asked to reply.

This information is not collected from individual police forces by the Association of Chief Police Officers.

Pollution

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what figures he has for the volume of waste deposits dumped in internal waters behind the Oslo convention baselines in each of the last five years in the North sea.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I have been asked to reply.

The amount of material dumped in internal waters behind the Oslo convention baselines in the North sea by the United Kingdom in the last five years for which figures are available, are as follows:

000's tonnes	Dredged spoil	Colliery minestone
1983	7,391	3,830
1984	10,371	564
1985	16,791	2,262
1986	12,429	2,264
1987	13,029	2,037

Comparable figures are not available for other North sea states as the Oslo convention does not yet include dumping in internal waters and there is therefore no common control and reporting procedure for such dumpings.

The United Kingdom has been actively supporting proposals to extend the coverage of the Oslo convention to include internal waters and we hope that agreement on this will be reached soon.

Written Answers to Questions

Tuesday 24 January 1989

TRANSPORT

Severn Bridge

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any plans to end the imposition of tolls on the Severn bridge; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: No.

Vehicle Weights

Mr. Ward: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has any plans to require that all commercial vehicles entering the United Kingdom by sea pass over a weighbridge before travelling on the public roads; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: We are about to install automatic equipment in the main ferry ports which will indicate whether incoming vehicles are overloaded. This will supplement the existing weighbridges used by the Department's traffic examiners.

Air Traffic Control

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what was the number of air traffic controllers employed at each of Heathrow, Gatwick and Manchester airports for each of the past 20 years;

(2) what was the number of new air traffic controllers employed in positions in England in each of the past 20 years;

(3) what was the total number of air traffic controllers employed in England in each of the past 20 years;

(4) what has been the capital investment in air traffic control systems for each of the past 20 years;

(5) what was the capital expenditure on air traffic control facilities at Heathrow airport, both on general facilities and on computer systems, in each of the 10 years prior to privatisation.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: These matters have all been within the responsibility of the Civil Aviation Authority and the National Air Traffic Services since 1972. I suggest the hon. Member writes to the chairman of the authority.

Heathrow Airport

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the capital expenditure on general facilities at Heathrow by the airport authority itself in each of the 10 years prior to privatisation.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The Department does not hold this information.

For the years 1977-78 to 1983-84 such information was given in the authority's annual report and accounts, which are in the Library; for the three subsequent years I suggest the hon. Member approaches BAA plc direct.

M3 Extension

Mr. Ward: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether contracts have yet been let for the southern section of the M3 extension.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Necessary works in advance of the main contract for the Compton to Bassett section of the M3 are under way. We hope to invite tenders for the main contract shortly to enable work to start this summer.

Mr. Ward: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has now received the independent inspector's report on the latest public inquiry about the final link between the M27 and M3 motorways; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Yes. The inspector's report of the reopened inquiry into the Bar End to Compton section of the M3 extension was received at the end of November. It will be considered together with that of the 1985 inquiry inspector. The reports cover the many complex issues covered at the inquiries. My right hon. Friends will announce their joint decisions as quickly as they can.

Dangerous Cargoes

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what permission needs to be sought by the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority, British Nuclear Fuels Limited or commercial handlers of nuclear materials to transport by air radiotoxic materials such as plutonium or tritium within the United Kingdom, or from the United Kingdom.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The consignors of all radioactive materials by air must satisfy the Department of Transport that the arrangements comply fully with the national and international regulations.

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make it his policy to review the safety of air transportation of dangerous toxic cargoes, including radio isotopes, depleted uranium, radioactive wastes and plutonium.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The transport of radioactive materials by all modes of transport must comply fully with the national and international regulations which are under continuous review by the International Atomic Energy Agency.

The IAEA is currently undertaking a special review to decide whether any regulatory changes are needed to cover the particular circumstances of air transport.

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if, during the next meeting of the Council of European Transport Ministers, he will make it his policy to initiate an EEC review of the hazards of the air, sea, road and rail transport of radiotoxic nuclear materials.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The transport of all radioactive materials must comply with the international regulations of the International Atomic Energy Agency, which is a United Nations body. These are under continuous review. All EEC countries are member states of the IAEA, and there is no need for a special EEC review.

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make it his policy to set up a review study of the rail transport of spent nuclear fuel on the north and south London rail network lines, to study the appropriateness of the routeing and the preparedness of emergency plans in the event of an accident involving the significant release of radioactivity.

Mr. Portillo: All movements of spent nuclear fuel must comply with regulations of the International Atomic Energy Agency. The required design of the steel flasks ensure that even in the event of a severe railway accident there would be no significant release of the contents.

Long-standing and well-rehearsed emergency arrangements exist to provide a rapid response to any incident involving nuclear materials in transit.

Boeing 757 (Safety)

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has as to the time and date when the Boeing Aircraft Company first became aware of wiring problems in their 757 aircraft; when the Federal Aviation Authority was notified; when the federal authority gave instructions that the aircraft were to be checked; what the time and date was when the Civil Aviation Authority was notified; and when the Civil Aviation Authority notified United Kingdom airlines operating these aircraft.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: I understand that the United States Federal Aviation Administration and the Boeing Company are investigating the chronology of the notification of wiring faults in the hold fire warning and extinguishing system of the Boeing 757.

My information is that the Civil Aviation Authority was notified by the FAA, by telephone, at 5.30 pm on Friday, 13 January, that an airworthiness directive was being issued which concerned the wiring of the B757 hold fire warning and extinguishing system. By 7.30 that evening the CAA had notified all United Kingdom operators of the forthcoming airworthiness directive.

On Saturday morning, 14 January, the full airworthiness directive was received by the CAA by telex. The CAA confirmed immediately that all United Kingdom operators of the aircraft had received the telex. Action was by then under way and by the end of the morning British Airways, for example, had already inspected and cleared 12 of their B757s.

Urban Programme

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his provision for the urban programme for 1988-89 and for the next three years at cash prices and at 1987-88 constant prices.

Mr. Portillo: The Department of Transport's cash provision for the urban programme in 1988-89 and each of the succeeding three years is £11 million. This is £10 million per annum at 1987-88 constant prices.

In addition to the urban programme works, which are administered by the Department of the Environment, urban areas receive substantial benefit from the Department of Transport's other programmes, including those for trunk road construction, local authority roads and public transport.

Cash Limits

Mr. Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what changes he proposes to make to the cash limits on his votes and to his Department's running costs limit.

Mr. Channon: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimates, the cash limits for my votes are to be changed as follows:

£'000

		Current cash limit	Change	Revised cash limit
Class VIII Vote	1	1,027,307	14,145	1,041,452
	2	215,838	3,390	212,448
	4	122,453	1,130	123,583

The increase in class VIII, vote 1 will be charged to the Reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure. This increase takes account of a reduction of £1,585,000 to compensate for an overspend of the cash limit in 1987-88. This follows the normal practice of reducing the cash limit for one financial year by the amount of the previous year's overspend.

The reduced cash limit on class VIII, vote 2 takes account of transfers of:

(a) £1,130,000 to class VIII, vote 4 to offset an equivalent increase on that vote;
(b) £2,110,000 to class VIII, vote 5 as a partial offset to increased public expenditure on rural bus grants on that vote; and
(c) £150,000 to class XI, vote 3 in respect of a transfer of civil defence provision to the Home Office.

The balance of the increased requirement for rural bus grants will be offset by savings on class VIII, vote 5 and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

The running costs limit of the Department of Transport has been reduced by £38,000 from £257,017,000 to £256,979,000. This amount will be transferred to the running costs limit of Her Majesty's Treasury to cover the cost of additional work incurred in respect of the forthcoming transfer of the Department of Transport payroll to the Chessington computer centre.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Sales Practices

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) whether he intends to introduce further measures to curb the practice known as telephone cold calling;

(2) how many representations he has received since 1 January 1988 regarding the sale practice known as telephone cold calling; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: My Department has received 39 complaints from consumers about unsolicited telephone sales calls since 1 January 1988. The Office of Fair Trading, the Office of Telecommunications and local authority trading standards departments have also received complaints about this practice.

The British Direct Marketing Association is planning to introduce a telephone preference service which would enable telephone subscribers to choose to have their details excluded from lists used by direct selling organisations. Discussions about the form of such a service are taking place with the Office of Fair Trading and other interested Government bodies. My Department is keeping in touch with these developments.

Local Pay Additions

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is the number of staff in his Department, by grade, in receipt of local pay additions outside London and the south east economic planning region; what are the different amounts paid to staff by grade; whether this figure varies due to location; what qualifying period of scale-related criteria is used; and whether this varies by location.

Mr. Forth: Nine administrative officers, four administrative assistants and two personal secretaries are receiving local pay additions in offices of the Department of Trade and Industry in Cambridge, which is outside London and the south-east economic planning region. The annual salaries of the administrative officers and administrative assistants are increased to £300 above the national rate in the first year of service in the Department; thereafter annual salaries are increased to £600 above the national rate, except where staff are on the maximum of their salary scale, when the annual salaries are increased to £400 above the national rate. The annual salaries of personal secretaries are adjusted in the same manner, except that they are increased to £600 above the national rate in the first year of service. The criteria for payment of these additions do not vary between offices.

Aircraft (Research)

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what progress has been made in the review of support for civil aircraft and aero engine research.

Mr. Atkins: In the White Paper "DTI—The Department for Enterprise" (CM 278, January 1988) my right hon. and noble Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry announced that the Government intended to review during 1988 the Department's support for civil aircraft and aeroengine research and demonstration.

A comprehensive review has now been carried out by officials of my Department and implementation of the recommendations is under way. It concluded that there is a continuing need for the Government to fund research in support of the United Kingdom civil aircraft industry in view of the particular circumstances of this international market. At the same time, the review recommended that the Government should seek measures in the international arena to reduce the market distortions which play their part in making such Government support necessary. We are considering further how to take this forward.

As a result of the review, we shall be taking a number of steps and introducing procedures that are designed both to bring the support in line with wider Government and departmental research objectives and to ensure that we obtain good value for money from the funding. These include withdrawing near market support and encouraging more collaborative research. Because of the particular nature of the industry we shall continue, exceptionally, to make available support for longer-term single company research projects in the airframe, aeroengine and helicopter sectors, limited to a maximum funding of 25 per cent. of total project costs. Also, for research carried out either in Government research establishments or agencies, we shall in future expect aerospace companies, as major beneficiaries of the work, to contribute to the funding, usually by seconding staff to the research teams.

Century Newspapers Ltd., Belfast

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many days he has allowed for consultation between the date of the announcement of the proposed takeover of Century Newspapers Ltd., Belfast, by Thompson Regional Newspapers and the date when the submissions must be received by him before a decision on referral to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission, what is the normal period for such consultation; and whether he has received any representations from the National Graphical Association and the National Union of Journalists about the possibility of a monopoly of newspaper ownership being created in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Maude [holding answer 16 January 1989]: On 10 January my Department issued a press notice inviting comments on the proposal by 17 January.

The Department's procedures for a formal consultation period were introduced in October 1988. This is the first application for consent to a newspaper merger under the financial urgency provisions received since then. I have received seven representations on the proposal including a full submission from the National Graphical Association.

Net Book Agreement

Mr. Adley: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will set up an inquiry into the working of the net book agreement with a view to examining its effect on booksellers, publishers and book purchasers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth [holding answer 19 January 1989]: The Restrictive Practices Court has considered the net book agreement on two occasions and has found it not to be contrary to the public interest. Under the relevant legislation, the Director General of Fair Trading may apply to the court for a review of its decision if at any time he considers that there has been a material change in circumstances on which the original judgment was based. It is not open to Ministers to make such an application.

In the circumstances it would serve no useful purpose for the Government to set up an inquiry. However, the Government have proposed fundamental reforms to restrictive trade practices legislation under which, among other things, it is intended that arrangements such as the net book agreement which have been cleared under existing legislation should be reconsidered in due course by the appropriate competition authority under criteria laid down in the new legislation.

Inner Cities Initiative

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is the allocation for the inner cities initiative for 1988-89 and each of the next three years at cash prices and at 1987-88 constant prices.

Mr. Newton: The inner cities unit of my Department has an allocation of £21·3 million for 1988-89 (£20·0 million in 1987-88 constant prices). Information about planned expenditure in the following three years will shortly be published in the public expenditure White Paper.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Eritrea

Mr. Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether, in view of the greater use now being made of the United Nations Security Council in the sphere of conflict resolution, the Government have raised the issue of Eritrea in informal contacts in Security Council circles; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: We are concerned about the continuing conflict in Eritrea and take every opportunity to urge all those involved to reach a solution by negotiation. We do not believe it would be helpful to raise the issue in the Security Council.

British Embassies and High Commissions

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the total number of British embassies and high commissions; what is the number of staff employed in them, and what is the total annual cost.

Mr. Waldegrave: There are 130 embassies and high commissions, and 78 subordinate and miscellaneous other posts. The total running cost in financial year 1987-88 was £241·4 million.

UN Security Council

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will give for the last full year for which figures are available the number of meetings of the United Nations Security Council; and the number of times it voted.

Mr. Eggar: Between 16 June 1987 and 15 June 1988 (the last full year for which figures are available), the United Nations Security Council held 67 meetings, and voted 33 times.

British Antarctic Territory

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he proposes to take with regard to the administration of the British Antarctic Territory; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: The British Antarctic Territory was established as a separate dependent territory in 1962. Since then, as a matter of convenience, the territory has been administered by an high commissioner resident in Stanley. Following consideration of the future administrative needs of the territory, we have decided that from 1 July this year the administration of the BAT will be repatriated to London and that the commissioner will be a senior official of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. The present high commissioner has been informed and is informing the Falkland Islands Councillors. The British Indian Ocean Territory has been similarly administered from London since 1977.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Capital Allocation (Warwickshire)

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will set out in the Official Report his Department's capital allocation in real terms to Warwickshire county council for each year since 1978-79.

Mr. Butcher: The information requested for the years 1981-82 to 1989-90 is set out in tables 1 and 2. Before 1981-82 local education authorities did not receive block allocations but were notified annually, in the context of a rolling programme, of a limit on the value of building starts in the following year.

Table 1
Warwickshire Lea: Prescribed capital expenditure 1981-82 to 1989-90

	Cash Prices £000s	[1]Constant Prices £000s
1981-82	1,366	1,843
1982-83	1,367	1,722
1983-84	1,991	2,398
1984-85	1,428	1,637
1985-86	1,703	1,853
1986-87	1,236	1,301
1987-88	1,162	1,162
1988-89	1,375	1,294
1989-90	1,729	1,550

[1] These figures are calculated at 1987-88 prices using the GDP deflator.

Table 2
Allocations for capital expenditure by Governors of Aided Schools in Warwickshire 1981-82 to 1989-90

	Cash prices	Constant prices
1981-82	—	—
1982-83	259	326
1983-84	346	417
1984-85	110	126
1985-86	245	267
1986-87	19	20
1987-88	80	80
1988-89	715	673
1989-90	631	566

Notes:
1. Allocations for 1981-82 and earlier years were made on a different basis and have therefore been omitted.
2. The allocations shown are those announced before the start of the financial year in question and do not reflect subsequent revision.
3. These figures are calculated at 1987-88 prices using the GDP deflator.

Teacher Numbers

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will give the figures for the total number of teachers employed in schools maintained by the local education authorities of Derbyshire, Staffordshire, Nottinghamshire and Hereford/Worcester.

Mr. Butcher: The total number of full-time equivalent teachers in January 1988 were as follows:

LEA	Qualified teachers within schools[1]	Total number of teachers paid by the local education authority[2]
Derbyshire	7,859	8,353
Staffordshire	8,124	8,746
Nottinghamshire	8,315	8,702
Hereford and Worcester	4,894	5,273

[1] Full-time equivalent qualified teachers within maintained nursery primary and secondary schools.
[2] The total number of full-time equivalent teachers including qualified teachers, student teachers and instructors employed for service in maintained nursery, primary and secondary schools.

Pupil Numbers

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will give the figures for the total number of pupils attending schools maintained by the local education authorities up to the age of 19 years, in Derbyshire, Staffordshire, Nottinghamshire and Hereford/Worcester.

Mr. Butcher: The total number of pupils up to and including those aged 19 and over attending maintained schools in January 1988 were as follows:

LEA	Pupil Numbers[1]
Derbyshire	143,000
Staffordshire	160,998
Nottinghamshire	154,699
Hereford and Worcester	96,527

[1]Total number of pupils in maintained nursery, primary, middle, secondary and special schools. Includes those attending part-time.

Superannuation (Compensation)

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he has made compensation regulations under section 24 of the Superannuation Act 1972.

Mr. Butcher: My right hon. Friend has made the following compensation regulations under section 24 of the Superannuation Act 1972

1. The Colleges of Education (Compensation) Regulations 1975.
2. The Teachers' (Compensation for Redundancy and Premature Retirement) Regulations 1985.

Special Educational Needs

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if his Department has plans to increase funds available for the education of children with special educational needs.

Mr. Butcher: The Government's expenditure plans for 1989-90 provide for local authorities to spend £59 million, or over 10 per cent., more in cash on maintained special schools than was allowed for within the 1988-89 plans, at a time when pupil numbers in special schools are declining. Expenditure on pupils with special educational needs in ordinary schools cannot be separately identified.

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps his Department is taking to safeguard special educational needs after the implementation of the Education Act 1988.

Mr. Butcher: The Education Act 1988 contains many safeguards for children with special educational needs. The National Curriculum Council and the Schools Examination and Assessment Council are fully aware of the particular difficulties faced by such children. The Government believe that all children, including those with special educational needs will benefit from the provisions of the 1988 Act. Nevertheless, provision for children with special educational needs will continue to be monitored after the implementation of the Act, as it is at present, by Her Majesty's inspectorate.

Glandular Fever

Sir David Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what research he is supporting into infectious mononucleosis—known as glandular fever; and what are the prospects of developing a successful anti-body to the Epstein-Barr virus.

Mr. Jackson: The Medical Research Council, which receives its grant-in-aid from this Department, is currently supporting a virological study of Paul-Bunnell negative glandular fever at the communicable diseases division of the MRC clinical research centre. In addition, the MRC and university departments and medical schools support a range of basic research which may have relevance to glandular fever.

The council's sub-committee on herpes virus vaccines has recently concluded that it is now possible to undertake studies of whether an Epstein-Barr virus antigen will stimulate immunity in humans. Proposals for such studies are presently being formulated.

Viraj Mendis

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has as to the cost to public funds of Mr. Viraj Mendis's maintenance and tuition at the University of Manchester Institute of Science and Technology between 1973 and 1979.

Mr. Jackson: I understand that Mr. Mendis is recorded as having supported himself during his attendance at the university of Manchester Institute of Science and Technology between 1973 and 1979. However, the tuition fees charged to overseas students at that time were subsidised and an element of the cost of Mr. Mendis' tuition will therefore have been met through the public funding of higher education institutions. It is not possible to quantify this element.

List 99

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list in the Official Report for each academic or calendar year since 1970 (a) the total number of teachers on list 99, (b) the number included on the list under each of the four principal reasons for inclusion, (c) the number removed and granted permission to resume teaching and (d) the number subsequently relisted; and if he will make a statement on the operation of the list 99 process.

Mr. Butcher: The table shows the number of persons added to list 99 in each financial year from 1 April 1970 to 31 March 1988 categorised as requested, and the number of persons removed from the list in each year. The total number of persons on list 99 at present is 1,471. The other information requested is not available.

List 99 contains the names, dates of birth, and departmental reference numbers, of teachers, youth workers, and others whom the Secretary of State has directed should be excluded wholly or partially from teaching or work with children or young persons under the age of 19, on grounds of misconduct, in accordance with the Education (Teachers') Regulations 1982. Copies of the list are held on a confidential basis by local education authorities and certain other employers and national bodies concerned with the employment of teachers or workers with children or young people.

Year	Number of persons included on list 99 categorised by type of misconduct					Total	Number of persons removed from list 99
	(1)	(2)	(3)	(4)	(5)
1970-71	55	3	19	4	2	83	19
1971-72	49	8	7	2	4	70	6
1972-73	53	2	10	3	3	71	14
1973-74	21	1	3	—	1	26	9
1974-75	44	1	7	—	—	52	14
1975-76	32	—	5	1	5	43	7
1976-77	30	2	3	—	3	38	10
1977-78	22	1	—	1	1	25	11
1978-79	16	1	1	1	4	23	10
1979-80	31	1	4	—	1	37	6
1980-81	29	—	4	1	4	38	4
1981-82	34	2	7	—	2	45	7
1982-83	28	1	7	—	3	39	1
1983-84	25	2	5	—	7	39	6
1984-85	35	2	6	—	1	44	6
1985-86	31	7	9	—	4	51	3
1986-87	47	7	10	—	1	65	8
1987-88	28	7	2	3	7	47	6

Categories:

1. Sexual misconduct.
2. Drugs cases.
3. Financial cases.
4. False claims as to qualifications.
5. Others.

University Lecturers (Pay)

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when was the last independent review of university lecturers' pay; what it recommended; and to what extent its findings have been implemented.

Mr. Jackson: Since 1970 the pay of university lecturers has been settled by negotiations between employers and employees under an independent chairman. The last such settlement was in 1987: it provided for pay rises of 16·6 per cent. with effect from 1 December 1986 and a further 7·4 per cent. with effect from 1 March 1988. Those increases have been implemented.

Urban Programme

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is his provision for the urban programme for 1988-89 and for the next three years at cash prices and at 1987-88 constant prices.

Mr. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend has made provision for education projects under the urban programme of:

£ million

	Cash	1987-88 prices
1988-89 forecast outturn	44	41
1989-90 plans	45	42
1990-91 plans	46	43
1991-92 plans	47	44

Under-fives

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the relevant current expenditure on schools for under-fives in 1988-89 and for the next three years.

Mrs. Rumbold: Information for local authority actual spending on education in 1988-89 is not yet available. Provisional outturn spending on under-fives in 1988-89 is £495 million, a 25 per cent. increase in cash over spending in 1986-87. The Government's plans for spending in 1989-90 provide for £536 million to be spent on the under-fives, a further cash increase of over 8 per cent. over provisional outturn in 1988-89. The information requested on spending on under-fives beyond 1990 is not available.

Schools (Opting Out)

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he expects to be able to make his first decisions about the applications by schools to opt out under the Education Reform Act 1988.

Mr. Butcher [holding answer 23 January 1989]: The first schools have now published proposes for grant-maintained status, and a number of others are preparing to do so. My right hon. Friend will determine such proposals as quickly as the statutory procedures and his consideration of all the relevant factors permit.

WALES

Hospital Equipment

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list those hospitals in Wales which have (i) echo cardiagrams, and (ii) lithotripsy machines; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: Information on the acquisition of echo cardiagram equipment by NHS hospitals in Wales is not held centrally. No NHS hospital in Wales has yet acquired a lithrotripter. The Welsh Office is currently considering proposals for the provision of a lithotripsy service in Wales.

Education (Special Needs)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement concerning his plans to safeguard the schooling of children with special needs.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The Education Act 1981 and the Education Reform Act 1988 make comprehensive provision to safeguard the schooling of children with special educational needs. The Department is also issuing this week for consultation a draft circular on procedures for assessments and statements of special educational needs.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the impact of the Education Reform Act upon the professional activity of those teachers engaged at primary and secondary school level in the special needs section; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The Education Reform Act offers the opportunity for a significant improvement in the provision made for children with special educational needs. The entitlement of all children to a basic curriculum from five to 16, together with the extensive flexibility which the Act provides for this to be tailored to the needs of individual children, sets a framework which should encourage a better educational experience for many children with special needs. Further work is being undertaken to provide their teachers, with helpful guidance in the light of the Act.

Pupil-teacher Ratios

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a table in the Official Report showing pupil-teacher ratios in schools in each Welsh local education authority by type of school for the latest available date for which such information is available; and if he will give the figures for the previous 10 years.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Pupil-teacher ratios within maintained schools are shown by type of school in the following tables:

Nursery Schools[1]

Welsh counties	1977-78	1978-79	1979-80	1980-81	1981-82	1982-83	1983-84	1984-85	1985-86	1986-87	1987-88
Clwyd	15·3	16·7	18·3	19·6	20·8	20·1	19·9	19·7	19·6	18·6	16·5
Dyfed	19·0	16·8	15·4	17·7	18·9	20·1	18·5	18·9	22·4	22·4	22·7
Gwent	18·3	20·7	19·9	21·2	21·6	23·6	23·0	22·8	22·5	22·8	23·1
Gwynedd	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
Mid Glamorgan	17·8	18·9	19·4	18·9	18·8	19·1	19·2	19·2	18·7	20·4	19·4
Powys	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
South Glamorgan	20·2	20·3	20·4	17·9	18·8	19·1	18·8	18·1	18·4	19·5	18·6
West Glamorgan	19·2	21·0	18·5	16·0	23·5	23·7	22·7	24·0	29·1	23·4	23·4

Primary Schools[1]

Welsh counties	1977-78	1978-79	1979-80	1980-81	1981-82	1982-83	1983-84	1984-85	1985-86	1986-87	1987-88
Clwyd	23·2	23·0	23·1	22·9	23·3	23·2	23·2	23·4	23·8	24·1	24·0
Dyfed	19·0	19·3	18·4	18·8	19·1	19·2	19·0	19·7	20·7	20·6	20·8
Gwent	23·8	22·7	22·8	22·8	22·8	22·1	22·3	22·3	22·2	21·9	22·5
Gwynedd	21·3	21·0	20·5	19·9	19·5	19·8	19·7	20·0	20·2	20·4	20·3
Mid Glamorgan	23·8	23·3	23·6	23·6	23·5	23·5	22·3	22·9	22·9	23·3	22·9
Powys	18·3	18·1	18·7	18·7	19·5	18·8	18·6	19·5	19·5	19·3	19·3
South Glamorgan	23·2	23·4	23·2	22·8	22·9	22·9	22·9	22·8	22·9	22·9	22·7
West Glamorgan	21·8	21·2	21·1	20·7	21·2	21·4	21·5	21·7	21·6	21·2	21·3

Secondary schools[1]

Welsh counties	1977-78	1978-79	1979-80	1980-81	1981-82	1982-83	1983-84	1984-85	1985-86	1986-87	1987-88
Clwyd	16·9	16·9	17·0	17·0	17·2	16·9	16·7	16·8	16·7	16·5	15·9
Dyfed	17·9	17·1	16·8	16·6	16·4	16·4	16·1	16·1	16·0	15·8	15·5
Gwent	16·7	16·5	16·1	16·6	16·4	16·1	15·8	15·8	15·5	15·3	15·0
Gwynedd	17·3	16·8	16·2	16·1	16·0	16·0	15·5	15·6	15·2	15·3	14·8
Mid Glamorgan	17·2	16·9	16·8	16·8	17·6	17·4	16·6	16·7	16·7	16·5	16·0
Powys	16·3	16·2	16·0	15·9	15·7	15·9	15·5	15·2	14·9	14·8	14·5
South Glamorgan	17·2	17·0	16·8	16·9	16·9	16·7	16·7	16·6	16·5	16·5	16·4
West Glamorgan	16·7	16·4	16·4	16·1	16·0	15·8	15·7	15·9	15·6	15·3	14·8

Special schools[1]

Welsh counties	1977-78	1978-79	1979-80	1980-81	1981-82	1982-83	1983-84	1984-85	1985-86	1986-87	1987-88
Clwyd	8·6	7·3	8·5	8·6	8·6	8·4	8·5	8·2	7·9	7·7	7·2
Dyfed	7·6	7·2	7·5	7·5	7·2	7·2	7·5	6·7	6·8	6·8	6·7
Gwent	8·4	8·9	8·6	8·3	8·5	7·8	7·1	7·2	7·3	7·6	6·8

Welsh counties	1977-78	1978-79	1979-80	1980-81	1981-82	1982-83	1983-84	1984-85	1985-86	1986-87	1987-88
Gwynedd	7·7	6·9	7·7	7·8	[2]7·7	7·6	7·0	6·6	6·9	7·3	7·3
Mid Glamorgan	10·2	7·8	7·9	8·1	8·5	8·6	[2]8·4	8·0	7·9	7·7	7·4
Powys	7·6	7·2	7·3	6·5	5·9	6·5	6·5	6·3	5·7	6·1	6·0
South Glamorgan	7·4	7·0	7·0	7·2	7·0	6·7	6·5	6·1	6·2	6·1	6·2
West Glamorgan	7·3	7·0	7·3	7·1	7·3	7·3	7·2	6·9	6·2	6·1	5·9

[1] At January for each academic year.
[2] Estimated figure.

Second Homes

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimates he has as to the number of second houses liable for community charge in each district council area.

Mr. Grist: The Welsh Office is presently consulting on where the boundary between domestic and non-domestic properties should be drawn and thus which properties should be subject to the standard community charge. It is therefore not yet possible to provide the figures requested. General information on second homes is, however, available, and table 2.7 of the 1986 Welsh intercensal survey, a copy of which is in the Library, provides estimates of their distribution among districts. These figures can only provide a broad indication of this distribution as they are derived from a sample survey of about 60,000 Welsh households and there are some difficulties in distinguishing between second homes and other categories of housing in a general survey of this type.

Retirement Homes

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list for the Pembroke constituency the number of registered places in residential homes for the elderly in (a) each local authority home and (b) each privately owned home; and if he will indicate in each case the number of beds provided for people requiring nursing care.

Mr. Grist: The information requested is given in the following tables.

Local authority homes for the elderly in the Pembroke constituency as at 31 March 1988

Home	Number of residential[1] places
Heywood	18
Havenhurst	38
Prendergast House	36
Riverside Home	40
Merlin House	41
Sunnybank Home	58

[1] Local authority homes do not provide nursing beds.

Private Homes for the Elderly in the Pembroke Constituency as at 31 March 1988

Home	Number of Residential Places	Number of Nursing Places[1]
Bangeston Hall	27	—
Ridgeway Home for the Elderly	25	20
Glenwood House	16	—
Parc-y-Llyn	11	15
Montrose	12	—
Nightingales	10	—
Cartref	24	—
Brooklands	7	—
Rostley	8	—
Apley Lodge	8	—
Maesteg House	6	2
Roschill Country Home	17	—
Belvedere Residential Home	15	—
Ashdale Residential Home	30	—
Lynnefield	6	—
Canterbury House	12	—
Castle View	12	—
Woodfield House	15	—

[1] Registered with the health authority under Part II of the Registered Homes Act 1984. Nursing places are not included in the residential places shown in this table.

Environmental Research

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was Welsh Office expenditure on environmental research in Wales in each year since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: The information is as follows:

	£000s cash
1979-80	93
1980-81	80
1981-82	126
1982-83	165
1983-84	187
1984-85	205
1985-86	270
1986-87	887
1987-88	367

The increase in expenditure in 1986-87 was due to payments for studies relating to: the redevelopment of Cardiff bay, the staging of a national garden festival in Wales, and the intensive monitoring of sheep and other agricultural produce following the Chernobyl accident in 1986.

Environmental Health Services

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the total expenditure on local authority environmental health services in Wales and the number of environmental health officers employed, in each year since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: Expenditure on local authority environmental health staff and the staff employed in each financial year since 1979-80 is shown in the following table:

	Current expenditure (£000)	Capital expenditure (£000)	Environmental health officers and support staff (fte)[1]
1979-80	12,373	508	1,258
1980-81	16,142	746	1,253
1981-82	18,111	608	1,235
1982-83	20,368	580	1,238
1983-84	22,011	750	1,292
1984-85	23,093	721	1,407
1985-86	24,312	609	1,353
1986-87	25,511	1,071	1,342

[1] In March each financial year.

Information on the number of Environmental Health Officers alone is not held centrally.

Doctors (Working Hours)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many junior hospital doctors work (a) more than 104 hours a week in (i) Wales, (ii) Clwyd health authority, (iii) East Dyfed health authority, (iv) Gwent health authority, (v) Gwynedd health authority, (vi) Mid Glamorgan health authority, (vii) Pembrokeshire health authority, (viii) Powys health authority, (ix) South Glamorgan health authority, and (x) West Glamorgan health authority and (b) more than 112 hours a week in (i) Wales, (ii) Clwyd health authority, (iii) East Dyfed health authority, (iv) Gwent health authority, (v) Gwynedd health authority, (vi) Mid Glamorgan health authority, (vii) Pembrokeshire health authority, (viii) Powys health authority, (ix) South Glamorgan health authority, and (x) West Glamorgan health authority.

Mr. Ian Grist: Information about the hours worked by junior hospital doctors is not available centrally. The numbers of junior doctors who are contracted for the standard working week and to be available on standby or on-call together totalling more than 104 hours is eight out of a total of approximately 1,400 junior doctors in Wales.

Exhaust Emissions

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has of the scale of pollution in Wales from road vehicle emissions of (a) carbon monoxide, (b) hydrocarbons, and (c) nitrogen oxides; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Information about emissions from road vehicles is not held in this form but total United Kingdom figures are published annually in the Department of the Environment's "Digest of Environmental Protection and Water Statistics".

Nitrogen dioxide figures can be taken as an adequate indicator of the level of road vehicle pollution. A United Kingdom wide survey of Nitrogen dioxide made for the Department of the Environment by Warren Spring laboratory in 1986 showed levels in Welsh cities to be generally below the average for the United Kingdom.

Noise Pollution

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what information he has on the number of noise pollution complaints received by environmental health officers in Wales; what are the sources of that noise pollution; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: The information is not maintained centrally.

Water Pollution

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the number of water pollution incidents in Wales for each year since 1979 and the sources of that pollution; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: The annual reports of the Welsh water authority, copies of which are in the Library, contain some references to the number of pollution incidents affecting water in the Welsh water authority's area.

The detailed information is not held centrally, so I have asked the chairman of the Welsh water authority to write to the hon. Gentleman.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what are the numbers of lakes in Wales without fish due to pollution or acid rain; what steps he is taking to improve the situation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: There is no definite evidence to show that any lake in Wales has become fishless because of the effect of acid rain. However, it is generally accepted that acidic deposition can bring about the acidification of lakes in areas with sensitive strata. The Welsh Office, with the Department of the Environment, funds an extensive programme of research with the aim of assessing the relative contribution which air pollution, afforestation, land type, land use and practice makes to the acidification of Welsh lakes and the effect that acidification has on fish populations.

Hospital Waiting Lists

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what are the latest waiting list figures for (a) in-patients for each Welsh health authority, (b) in-patients for each Welsh health authority (i) waiting more than one month for an urgent operation and (ii) waiting more than one year for a non-urgent operation and (c) out-patients.

Mr. Grist: All the information requested by the hon. Gentleman is contained in the 10th issue of the "Welsh Hospital Waiting List Bulletin," a copy of which is in the Library.

PRIME MINISTER

President Bush

Q27. Mr. Latham: To ask the Prime Minister when she next expects to meet President Bush.

The Prime Minister: I met Mr. Bush in November. On present plans, we shall next meet at the economic summit in Paris.

Ash-cum-Ridley

Q66. Mr. Dunn: To ask the Prime Minister if she has any plans to pay an official visit to Ash-cum-Ridley.

The Prime Minister: I have at present no plans to do so.

Food

Q72. Mr. Devlin: To ask the Prime Minister if she will transfer all responsibility for matters relating to food to the Ministry of Health.

The Prime Minister: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply which I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Holland with Boston (Sir R. Body) on 17 January 1989, at column 128.

Engagements

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 24 January.

Mr. Hind: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 24 January.

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 24 January.

Mr. Cran: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 24 January.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 24 January.

Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 24 January.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 24 January.

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 24 January.

Mr. Stern: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 24 January.

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with Ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

Windscale Fire 1957

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Prime Minister if she will now review the decision not to release all the documents in respect of the fire at Windscale in 1957.

The Prime Minister: The release of public records is governed by the requirements of the Public Records Acts. I have nothing to add to the replies that I gave the hon. Gentleman on 19 January 1988 at column 597 and to the hon. Member for Copeland (Dr. Cunningham) on 14 January 1988 at column 353.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Aid (Cash Limits)

Mr. Sims: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what change has been agreed in the 1988-89 cash limits for overseas aid.

Mr. Chris Patten: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary spring supplementary estimate the cash limit for the overseas aid vote (class II, vote 5) will be increased by £51,204,000 from £1,223,114,000 to £1,274,318,000. The change includes allowance for the increase in the overall provision for overseas aid announced on 14 November 1988 (at column 371). Voted provision is being further increased by £1,400,000 for emergency assistance provided in the current financial year following the earthquake in Armenia. The increase will be charged to the reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure. The running costs limit for the Overseas Development Administration within the voted provision will be reduced by £1,000 to £42,932,000. This decrease will be matched by an increase in the running costs limits for the Office of the Minister for the Civil Service (class XX, vote 1) and reflects the transfer of costs for recruitment under the direct entry grade 7 competition, 1988.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. French: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby, as representing the Church Commissioner, how many oral parliamentary questions he has answered by written reply because the question was not reached at Question Time, for the most recent year for which figures are available.

Mr. Alison: In 1988, of a total of 38 oral questions, 10 were answered as written replies because the question was not reached in the time allotted.

Clergy

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby, as representing the Church Commissioners, if he will make a statement about the number of (a) clergy who are likely to retire and (b) ordination candidates during the next 15 years.

Mr. Alison: It is estimated that the number of clergy retiring over the next 15 years will average 410 per year. Taking into account the numbers likely to move in and out of the parochial ministry in mid career, it is estimated that to produce a stable total number of full-time male clergy over the same period would require an ordination rate of about 375 a year. This would represent an increase over the recent steady average, which is about 320 a year. However, any shortfall could be made up, at least in part, by the increased numbers of women entering the ministry.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Land Registry

Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Attorney-General what is the number of (a) the Land Registry Office's backlog of substantive searches, (b) its backlog of preliminary searches and (c) the extra staff who have been taken on to deal with the backlog.

The Attorney-General: The total number of applications held at the Land Registry at the various stages of processing at the end of December 1988 was 1,171,402. Preliminary searches have always received priority. 90 per cent. of these searches are processed within four working days. Since April 1988 over 2,000 staff have been recruited and trained. An additional authorisation in August of 900 posts was approved to meet the high intakes.

Viraj Mendis

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Attorney-General what estimates he has as to the cost of court proceedings in the case of Mr. Viraj Mendis.

The Solicitor-General: The costs of court proceedings in the case of Viraj Mendis include the costs of Mr. Mendis's original application to the Queen's Bench Divisional Court and the Court of Appeal, and his two recent applications for judicial review relating to his deportation to Sri Lanka. He received legal aid for all these applications.

The fees payable to Mr. Mendis's legal advisers have not yet been finally assessed by the court. The legal aid administration has not, therefore, yet received any claims in respect of those costs. My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary has provided details of the legal costs incurred by the Home Office, in answer to a question from the hon. Member for Halifax (Mrs. Mahon) on 23 January 1989.

CIVIL SERVICE

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. French: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service how many oral parliamentary questions he has answered by written reply because the question was not reached at Question Time, for the most recent year for which figures are available.

Mr. Luce [holding answer 19 January 1989]: In 1988 a total of 60 questions were tabled to the Minister for the Civil Service, of which 18 received a written reply. These figures do not include oral questions which were subsequently withdrawn, unstarred or transferred to other Departments.

THE ARTS

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. French: To ask the Minister for the Arts how many oral parliamentary questions he has answered by written reply because the question was not reached at Question Time, for the most recent year for which figures are available.

Mr. Luce [holding answer 19 January 1989]: In 1988 a total of 222 questions were tabled to the Minister for the Arts, of which 186 received a written reply. These figures do not include oral questions which were subsequently withdrawn, unstarred or transferred to other Departments.

Museums and Galleries (Attendances)

Mr. Faulds: To ask the Minister for the Arts whether he will publish in the Official Report the attendance figures for 1988 reported by the national museums and galleries in England for which he is responsible, broken down into the individual institutions but including their outstations, with figures in each case of the percentage increase or decrease on the attendance figures for 1987.

Mr. Luce [holding answer 16 January 1989]: The estimated number of visitors during 1988 to the 11 national museums and galleries for which I am responsible are as follows:

	Estimated attendance in 1988	Percentage change from 1987
British Museum	4,172,472	+4·1
British Museum (Natural History)	1,671,380	−16·4
Imperial War Museum	1,086,587	−8·3
National Gallery	3,228,153	−9·5
National Maritime Museum	707,399	+60·0
National Museum and Galleries on Merseyside	1,525,672	+14·8
National Portrait Gallery	638,595	+8·1
Science Museum	3,861,433	−18·4
Tate Gallery	[1]2,091,267	+20·0
Victoria and Albert Museum	1,430,637	+2·3
Wallace Collection	157,524	−6·3
TOTAL	20,571,119

[1] Figure includes Tate Gallery Liverpool which opened in May 1988.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Competitive Tendering (Merit Pay)

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether there have been any instances of rewarding staff through merit pay for carrying through a successful competitive tendering exercise.

Mr. Brooke: Merit pay is awarded by individual Departments and the information requested is not available centrally. Personal salary details, as opposed to the pay rate for the job are, however, normally confidential to the individual concerned.

Developing Countries (Debt)

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give the information relating to official debts by all developing countries outstanding at the end of 1987 in the same format as that given as at the end of 1986 to the hon. Member for Eccles (Miss Lestor) on 18 April 1988, Official Report, columns 328-30.

Mr. Lawson: I regret that this information is not yet available.

Oil and Gas (Taxes and Royalties)

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table, similar to table 18 on page 72 of the current edition of "Development of Oil and Gas Resources of the United Kingdom", showing taxes and royalties attributable to United Kingdom and United Kingdom continental shelf oil and gas, at constant prices.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 23 January 1989]: The figures are as follows:

Taxes and Royalties attributable to United Kingdom and UKCS oil and gas (and gas levy) at 1978-79 [1] prices

£ million

Financial Year	1978-79	1979-80	1980-81	1981-82	1982-83	1983-84	1984-85	1985-86	1986-87	1987-88
Royalty	289	537	716	917	1,000	1,117	1,365	1,092	471	490
Supplementary Petroleum Duty	—	—	—	1,331	1,468	—	—	—	—	—
Petroleum Revenue Tax[2]	183	1,228	1,740	1,570	2,006	3,529	4,039	3,384	609	1,120
Total Corporation tax before ACT set-off	93	214	246	447	319	514	1,365	1,545	1,372	680
ACT set-off	40	67	70	177	124	252	696	573	579	340
Mainstream CT	53	147	176	270	196	262	669	972	792	340
Total[3] Revenues	565	1,979	2,703	4,265	4,793	5,160	6,769	6,021	2,451	2,290
Gas Levy	—	—	—	252	289	306	281	279	264	245

[1] By reference to movements in the GDP deflator.
[2] Includes Advance Petroleum Revenue Tax (APRT).
[3] Constituent figures do not add up due to rounding.

SCOTLAND

Fisheries

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will make a statement on the up-to-date situation regarding the application for a Loch Awe Protection Order under the Freshwater and Salmon Fisheries (Scotland) Act 1976.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: On 26 September 1988 the consultative committee on freshwater fisheries decided that it could not recommend that the Secretary of State should grant proposals for statutory protection of freshwater fishing rights in Loch Awe, Loch Avich and the River Avich.

My right hon. and learned Friend is currently considering whether to accept or to reject the proposals or to hold a local inquiry in the light of the consultative committee's advice, the views of objectors and the comments of the proposers. A decision will be announced as soon as possible.

Conservation

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he proposes to take to limit the amount of compensation paid to farmers and landowners to prevent them damaging areas of special conservation interest.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: While my right hon. and learned Friend makes payments to facilitate the conservation of certain areas, compensation payments in relation to sites of special scientific interest are made by the Nature Conservancy Council from funds provided by the Department of the Environment.

Cash Limits

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether the Lord Advocate proposes any changes to the Crown Office and Procurator Fiscal Service cash and running cost limits for 1988-89.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The cash limit on class XI, vote 14 will be reduced by £100,000 from £21,267,000 to £21,167,000 and the running costs limit by £100,000 from £18,820,000 to £18,720,000.

East End Executive, Glasgow

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many jobs in each classification have been created to date by the East End Executive, Glasgow.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 16 January 1989]: Such statistics are not held centrally. I understand that the East End Executive's records show that, from its inception in August 1987 until 31 December 1988, businesses in receipt of advice and counselling from the executive have provided a total of 1,627 jobs in the area; of these, 558 were in manufacturing industry and 1,069 in the service sector.

Employment Training

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total number of authorised places in employment training in 1988-89 and 1989-90.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 19 January 1989]: There is provision for 41,473 employment training places in Scotland in 1988-89 once the programme is fully operational. Provision for 1989-90 has not yet been finalised.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total amount of planned expenditure on employment training in 1988-89 and 1989-90.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 19 January 1989]: Up to £180 million is available for employment training in Scotland in 1988-89. Expenditure plans for 1989-90 have not yet been finalised.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any plans to reduce the number of authorised employment training places.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 19 January 1989]: Provision for employment training in Scotland is kept under review in the light of changing circumstances including the level of long-term unemployment.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give in percentage form the local government rate support grant settlement for each of the years 1977-78 to 1987-88.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 23 January 1989]:
The information requested is as follows:

Scotland

	Percentage
1977-78	68·5
1978-79	68·5
1979-80	68·5
1980-81	68·5
1981-82	66·7
1982-83	64·2
1983-84	61·7
1984-85	60·2
1985-86	57·7
1986-87	56·1
1987-88	55·5

NORTHERN IRELAND

Gipsies

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many gipsies have been encamped at the junctions of the Middletown-Rookford roads, Armagh, during December 1988; how many caravans were there; how many caravans were burnt; what assistance he has given towards the replacement of damaged caravans; on how many occasions the Royal Ulster Constabulary and fire authority were called to this camp in December; whether the gipsy children attended school; what financial and social assistance was given to these gipsies; how many of them came from the Republic of Ireland; what action he took to remove them; and whether any public nuisance was caused by them.

Mr. Ian Stewart: During December 1988 some 40-50 travelling people were encamped at the junctions of the Middletown/Rookford roads, Armagh. Two of the 19 caravans on the site were burnt. No claim under the Criminal Damage (Compensation) (Northern Ireland) Order 1977 has been received for damage caused during December 1988 to property at that location.

I understand that the Royal Ulster Constabulary was called to the site on 16 occasions during December 1988. The Northern Ireland Fire Authority was called to the site on two occasions in December.

It is understood that the children of the itinerant families did not attend school while at the location.

It has been possible to identify five travellers from the site who during this time were in receipt of social security benefit. However, any of the people on the site who applied would have received the benefits to which they were entitled. Social work help, mainly in relation to welfare rights inquiries, was provided.

Details of the number of travelling people from the Republic of Ireland are not available.

It was considered by the district council that a public health nuisance was caused by those at the site and 12 statutory notices to remove them were issued. In addition, it was also considered that a road traffic hazard was being caused.

Community Unit of Management (Belfast)

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will provide details of the budgetary provision for 1987-88 and 1988-89 for the community unit of management in north and west Belfast; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: The final budget allocation to the north and west Belfast community unit of management in 1987-88 was £18,250,758, including capital. The unit's initial budget allocation for 1988-89 was £18,410,452. In addition, in 1988-89 the unit received an additional allocation of £611,250 through the "Making Belfast Work" initiative. The final budget allocations for 1988-89 have not yet been determined.

Health Standards (Belfast)

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the standards of health of the population of north and west Belfast.

Mr. Needham: A recent report by the Eastern health and social services board indicates that in general morbidity and mortality rates are higher among the population in north and west Belfast than in other parts of the city. Action is being taken on a number of fronts to tackle this problem. These include the allocation of special funds for health related projects in north and west Belfast as part of the "Making Belfast Work" initiative, which also aims to relieve social deprivation; the setting up of an action team to improve low immunisation uptake rates; and the participation of Belfast in the World Health Organisation's healthy cities project.

Eastern Health and Social Services Board

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what action is to be taken on the Eastern health board's complementarity study on the Royal Victoria hospital, Belfast City hospital and Mater hospital; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: The recommendations of the complementarity study have recently been considered by the Eastern board and have now been included in the board's draft operational plan for 1989-90 as a basis for consultation. When this process has been completed I will wish to discuss with the chairman the board's conclusions.

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the likely costs and savings of the recommendations contained within the Eastern health board's complementarity study, giving details for each relevant recommendation.

Mr. Needham: Estimates of the costs and savings of the recommendations contained in the complementarity study report are not yet available.

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the Eastern health board's proposal to close the Mater hospital's casualty unit at night and the likely impact on the population of north Belfast.

Mr. Needham: This proposal is one of the recommendations of the Eastern board's complementary study which are currently the subject of consultation as part of the board's draft operational plan for 1989-90. When the board reaches conclusions on the study I shall want to discuss with the chairman the implications for the Mater hospital and the population it serves.

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the Eastern health board's proposal to close the Royal Victoria hospital's casualty service on certain nights and the impact on the population of north and west Belfast.

Mr. Needham: The proposal is one of the recommendations of the Eastern board's complementarityy study which is currently the subject of consultation as part of the board's draft operational plan for 1989-90. When the board reaches conclusions on the study I shall want to discuss with the chairman their implications, including the impact on the population served.

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the Eastern health board's proposal to close the Royal College of Surgeons' recommended trauma unit on certain nights.

Mr. Needham: The proposal is one of the recommendations of the Eastern board's complementarity study which are currently the subject of consultation as part of the board's draft operational plan for 1989-90. When the board reaches conclusions on the study I shall want to discuss their implications with the chairman. In case of accident and emergency services I will take into account all the recommendations contained in the recent report by the Royal College of Surgeons on the management of patients with major injuries.

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the Eastern health board's proposal to develop a unified management structure for the Royal Victoria, Mater and Belfast City hospitals and the budgetary implications.

Mr. Needham: I believe that it is essential to improved management and delivery of acute hospital services in Belfast to secure greater co-ordination and harmonisation between these three hospitals. I welcome the recommendation from the complementarity study for a unified management structure and I await with interest detailed proposals from the Eastern board to take this forward.

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the number of gynaecology beds in the Royal Victoria, Mater and Belfast City hospitals in the years 1986, 1987 and 1988; and if he will make a statement on the Eastern health board's proposals for the future of gynaecological services for those three hospitals.

Mr. Needham: The information is as follows:

	1986	1987	1988
Royal Victoria	38	38	38
Belfast City	60	60	60
Mater	20	20	20

The current proposals for rationalisation of gynaecology services in these hospitals stem from the Eastern board's complementarity study which is currently the subject of consultation as part of the board's draft operational plan for 1989-90. When the board reaches conclusions on the study I shall be discussing their implications with the chairman of the board.

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the future of all specialties presently provided by the Royal Victoria hospital in the light of the Eastern health board's recent complementarity study.

Mr. Needham: The Eastern board has yet to reach decisions on the recommendations of the complementarity study, some of which relate to the Royal Victoria hospital. The hospital however is, and will continue to be, the major centre of excellence in Northern Ireland, providing the bulk of regional medical services to the population as a whole.

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the number of gynaecology re-admissions at the Royal Victoria, Mater and Belfast City hospitals in the years 1986, 1987 and 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: This information is not available.

North and West Belfast Health District

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the relocation of the salaries and wages department of the North and West Belfast health district.

Mr. Needham: In view of the poor standard of accommodation occupied by the salaries and wages office of the royal group of hospitals unit of management (formerly north and west Belfast district) the Eastern health and social services board decided to relocate the office in more suitable accommodation in the centre of Belfast. Staff were consulted about the move and agreed to it.

Royal Victoria Hospital

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on action being taken to upgrade the buildings of the Royal Victoria hospital.

Mr. Needham: Over the past few years there has been an extensive programme of works designed to improve and extend the buildings and facilities at the royal group of hospitals. This is in addition to routine or day-to-day maintenance (including redecoration and repairs) undertaken by both directly employed maintenance staff and private contractors. The total cost of the programme of works carried out in the three financial years from 1985/86 was £8,839,550. Estimated expenditure on works in the current financial year, some of which will carry over into 1989-90, is £2,192,475, giving a total over the four years of £11,032,025. Details of the projects undertaken are available in the Library.

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the number of patients not treated at the Royal Victoria hospital due to (i) lack of access, and (ii) security problems in each year since 1975.

Mr. Needham: This information is not available.

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list staffing levels within the internal security work force of the Royal Victoria hospital in each year since 1975.

Mr. Needham: The number of staff engaged specifically on security duties at the royal group of hospitals, including the Royal Victoria hospital, at 30 September each year was as follows:

	Staff in post
1975	n/a
1976	n/a
1977	n/a
1978	48
1979	48
1980	48
1981	48
1982	47
1983	42
1984	43
1985	39
1986	37
1987	37
1988	39

The figures for the years prior to 1985 relate to staff employed by the former north and west Belfast district, which included those hospitals forming the present royal group of hospitals unit of management.

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on plans to remedy internal security problems within the Royal Victoria hospital.

Mr. Needham: Security at the Royal Victoria hospital site is primarily the responsibility of the Eastern health and social services board, which has recently spent £400,000 on security measures recommended by the Royal Ulster Constabulary. The board has now issued a consultative document proposing further measures aimed at reducing all crime on the site. I am satisfied that the board is taking seriously the problem of protecting the interests of patients, staff and visitors while, at the same time, preserving reasonable access to the hospital's services.

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish the Royal Ulster Constabulary report on security at the Royal Victoria hospital; and if he will make a statement on the reasons for this report not being made available to the Health Service trade unions.

Mr. Needham: For obvious reasons, reports by the crime prevention unit of the Royal Ulster Constabulary are confidential documents. However, the additional measures recommended by the RUC to combat crime and vandalism on the site are contained in a paper which has been issued to interested parties, including the trade unions, for comment.

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on present negotiations between the Northern Ireland Office, the Eastern health board and Health Service trade unions on security at the Royal Victoria hospital.

Mr. Needham: I understand that the royal group of hospitals unit of management has recently invited interested parties, including the Health Service trade unions, to participate in discussions on its proposals for additional security measures to combat the level of crime and vandalism on the royal site. I welcome this initiative and hope that all concerned will react positively to this invitation in the interest of providing the best possible protection to patients, staff and visitors using the hospitals.

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the level of funding being made available in 1988-89 and 1989-90 for improving internal security at the Royal Victoria hospital.

Mr. Needham: I understand that in 1988-89 the Eastern health and social services board expects to spend some £580,000 on salaries and wages for security staff at the royal group of hospitals, including the Royal Victoria hospital. Expenditure on non-staff costs associated with security on the site is not separately identifiable. The budget for 1989-90 will be determined in the light of the outcome of the consultations with trade unions and other interests on the additional security measures which the board has now proposed.

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he has any plans for the use of a new site as part of the rebuilding plans for parts of the Royal Victoria hospital; and if he will make a statment.

Mr. Needham: Options for the use of the former Kelvin school site which adjoins the royal group of hospitals are currently being examined by the Eastern health and social services board. The board has recently approved a proposal by the unit of management group to use part of the site for additional car parking. This is an interim measure and does not prejudice continuing consideration of the best use of the Kelvin school site to meet the longer term development needs of the royal group of hospitals.

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he has any plans to carry out a study on the role of the Royal Victoria hospital as a district hospital serving north and west Belfast, as a general hospital serving the whole city and greater Belfast area and as the home of regional specialties; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: I have no plans to carry out such a study. The royal group of hospitals, including the Royal Victoria hospital, is the major centre of excellence with the bulk of regional specialties based there; it also provides acute services for the Eastern board population. I intend that it will continue to fulfil these roles and as evidence of the Government's commitment I have recently announced that two capital schemes will proceed in 1989-90—the regional neonatal referral unit and expanded recovery facilities for cardiac surgery.

Health Service (Staffing)

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the number of senior management posts presently being filled by secondments within the royal group of hospitals.

Mr. Needham: The following three senior management posts are currently being filled by secondments within the royal group of hospitals:

a. Group Administrator
b. Catering Manager
c. Senior Administrative Officer (Clinical Activity and Resource Analysis).

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the operation of the secondment process for senior management positions in the Royal group of hospitals, detailing the steps taken to safeguard fair employment practices.

Mr. Needham: The use of secondments at the royal group of hospitals is a matter for the Eastern health and social services board. Currently three managerial positions are being filled on this basis at the royal group.

Fair employment practices are safeguarded by the board's policy on equality of opportunity which provides for equal opportunity for all staff regardless of religious affiliation, sex or disability.

Antrim Hospital

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations he has received from general practitioners in the Northern health and social services board area opposing the provision of the new Antrim hospital; and if he will make a statement on the reasons given for opposition.

Mr. Needham: I have received representations recently on behalf of a number of general practitioners in the Northern board area opposing the new Antrim hospital and questioning the underlying strategy for the development of acute hospital services in that board. I have indicated the Government's view that the project is essential to ensure that the population of the Northern board have in the future the high quality medical care to which they are entitled.

Accidents (Donaghadee)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many accidents have occurred, in each of the past 10 years, in the vicinity of the junction of Windmill road and Killaughey road, Donaghadee; what is the recorded number of injuries and fatalities; and if he will consider undertaking a scheme to improve road safety at this junction.

Mr. Needham: No statistical record of damage only accidents in this vicinity is kept, but the personal injury and fatal accident history over the past 10 years is as follows:

Number of personal injury/fatal accidents

Year	Number
1979	Nil
1980	1
1981	Nil
1982	[1]1
1983	Nil
1984	1
1985	Nil
1986	1
1987	Nil
1988	Nil

[1] Fatal.

The Department of the Environment's roads service is currently considering measures to improve this junction.

Handyman's Course (Donaghadee Technical College)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland why the handyman's course, due to commence on 10 January 1989 at Donaghadee technical college, has been withdrawn; and if arrangements are being made to offer this course later in the present academic year.

Dr. Mawhinney: The organisation of courses is a matter for the South-Eastern education and library board.

This course was withdrawn because potential participants were unable to obtain a training grant from the Department of Economic Development's action for community employment (ACE) programme as funds available had already been committed and applicants were not themselves prepared to pay the required tuition fees. If the necessary fees support can be provided it may be possible to mount the course later this year.

Stalker-Sampson Inquiry

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many Royal Ulster Constabulary officers have been (a) the subject of disciplinary proceedings, (b) dismissed from the Royal Ulster Constabulary, (c) required to resign, (d) allowed to resign due to ill health, (e) permitted to take premature retirement, (f) demoted, (g) repremanded or (h) otherwise disciplined, following the events investigated by Mr. Stalker and Mr. Sampson.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Disciplinary proceedings have not yet been concluded in respect of any of the 20 RUC officers referred to in the Chief Constable's statement of 4 July 1988. The answer to (b) (c) (e) (f) (g) (h) of the hon. Member's question is none. The two suspended officers to whom my right hon. Friend referred in his statement of 17 February 1988, at column 977, who have never been the subject of any disciplinary proceedings, have since been medically discharged under the RUC Pensions Regulations 1973 (as amended) because they were not fit to carry out the duties expected of them.

Council Houses

Mr. Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish a table in the Official Report to show the number of dwellings in each council area in Northern Ireland which have a net annual valuation below £60; how many of these in each council area are in (a) the public sector and (b) the private sector; in each sector how many are owner-occupied; and what percentage of the dwellings in each council area such dwellings represent in each category of ownership and occupation, or as much of the information sought as is available to him.

Mr. Needham: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Rates

Mr. Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many domestic hereditaments for rating purposes there are in (a) Limavady council area, (b) Coleraine council area and (c) Magherafelt council area.

Mr. Needham: The information at 31 December 1988 is as follows:

Council area	Number of domestic hereditaments
Limavady	8,723
Coleraine	19,725
Magherafelt	11,245

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Ministerial Staff (Pay)

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the number of staff in his Ministry, by grade, in receipt of local pay additions outside London and the south-east economic planning region; what are the different amounts paid to staff by grade; whether this figure varies due to location; what qualifying period of scale-related criteria is used; and whether this varies by location.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Outside London and the south-east economic planning region 52 administrative assistants in Ministry offices in Cambridge receive a local pay addition of £300 per annum. There is no qualifying period for receipt of the allowance.

Meat Exports

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what volume of British meat exports to the United States of America has been debarred or delayed so far, as a result of United States retaliation against the European Economic Community ban on imports of hormone-treated meat.

Mr. Donald Thompson: When the European Community banned imports from third countries of meat derived from animals treated with hormone growth promoters, the United States response was to impose penal levels of import duties—at 100 per cent.—on certain EC exports, rather than a complete ban. The list includes two meat items only: boneless beef and hams and shoulders. There were no United Kingdom exports to the United States of these products during the last 12 months for which statistics are available; the United States action is therefore most unlikely to affect United Kingdom meat exporters.

ENVIRONMENT

Rating Reform

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish in the Official Report a list of all those categories of people who will (a) be excluded from liability to pay the community charge and (b) be entitled to a rebate on community charge payments; and what the scale of such rebates will be.

Mr. Gummer: The categories of people who will be exempt from liability to pay the personal community charge are listed in schedule 1 to the Local Government Finance Act 1988.

People whose income is at or below the level of income support will receive rebates of 80 per cent., and income support will be increased to take account of the 20 per cent. liability. We estimate that there will be 5 million adults in this category, and that an additional 4½ million adults, whose income is above the level of income support, will receive rebates, on a sliding scale, of up to 80 per cent. In addition, ¾ million full-time students will pay only 20 per cent. of the full charge.

Sir Eldon Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what savings in staff per thousand accounts he expects local authorities on average to achieve on the basis of the report he commissioned from Price Waterhouse on the costs of collection of the community charge.

Mr. Gummer: Price Waterhouse estimated that if authorities maintained their existing performance levels on rate collection one employee would be required for every 1,700 community charge accounts. However, Price Waterhouse also estimated that if all authorities were to work as efficiently as the most efficient in their category, one employee would be required for every 2,100 accounts. I would expect authorities to be working towards this higher productivity level, which could save nearly 5,000 staff.

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the statutory instruments now being prepared connected with the preparation of poll tax registers in England and Wales and the likely dates of laying them; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer [holding answer 23 January 1989]: There will be no statutory instruments dealing with poll tax registers, since the Government have no plans to introduce a poll tax. We intend to lay before the House in March one statutory instrument covering the administration and enforcement of the community charge, including the compilation of registers.

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what replacement funding will be provided for fire, police and transport services on the advent of the poll tax; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer [holding answer 23 January 1989]: The Government have no plans to introduce a poll tax. In metropolitan areas, joint police and joint fire and civil defence authorities will precept on the collection funds operated by each charging authority within their areas. Precepts on the collection fund will be met by income from the community charge, needs grant and business rates. In addition, police authorities will continue to receive police grant from the Home Office. Passenger transport authorities will issue levies to their constituent district councils.

In shire areas, these services are provided by county councils or district councils as appropriate. Their expenditure will also be supported by income from community charges, needs grant and business rates, and by police grant.

Homeloan Scheme

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many first-time buyers received assistance under the homeloan scheme, in the latest year for which figures are available, in each of the regions of England.

Mr. Trippier: Information on the take-up of the homeloan scheme is not available for individual regions. The number of people receiving assistance in 1987-88, the last year for which figures are available, is estimated to be 2,580.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he last reviewed the homeloan scheme of assistance for first-time home buyers.

Mr. Trippier: The homeloan scheme is reviewed from time to time, both with regard to its general effectiveness and to the price limits for the home purchased.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what criteria are used to upgrade the price limits on house purchases under the homeloan scheme; when these limits were last reviewed; and when they will next be reviewed.

Mr. Trippier: The price limits in the homeloan scheme are intended to allow about two thirds of first-time buyers to qualify for the scheme's benefits. They are based on the prices actually paid by first-time buyers borrowing from building societies, and are reviewed as often as changing house prices makes necessary. The present limits were introduced on 18 March 1988. They have been reviewed recently, and we shall be tabling an order shortly which proposes increases in all areas in Great Britain.

Hedgerows

Dame Janet Fookes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many miles of hedgerow have been destroyed in the last 20 years.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: There has been a certain amount of hedgerow removal in recent years as a result of changing agricultural circumstances and for other reasons. The current rate is not easy to establish. Estimates have been made for past periods, though none covers the last 20 years.

A survey of landscape change in England and Wales carried out for the Department and the Countryside Commission by Hunting Surveys and Consultants Ltd. showed annual losses of some 2,900 miles of hedgerow between 1969 and 1980 and 4,000 miles between 1980 and 1985. A survey of environmental topics on farms carried out by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food showed annual losses of 500 miles between 1980 and 1985. The two surveys were very different in approach and neither can be regarded as definitive. The Hunting survey used air photography covering 1·1 per cent. of England and Wales, backed up by ground survey. The MAFF survey used a postal questionnaire to some 6,000 farmers asking them to estimate changes in hedgerow lengths and covered approximately 6 per cent. of England and Wales. Work is continuing to improve information both on the rate of removal and on the extent of new planting.

Dame Janet Fookes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many miles of hedgerow have been destroyed in Devon in the last 10 years.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The sample surveys of landscape change so far completed have not provided information at the level of individual counties.

Dame Janet Fookes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will take steps to stem the loss of hedgerows by the introduction of landscape conservation orders or by other means.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Hedgerows need positive management to keep them in good condition. The main priority is to ensure that farmers and other owners continue to maintain them voluntarily. Agricultural advisers from the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food encourage farmers to retain hedgerows wherever possible and to manage them effectively. MAFF aids the planting of new hedgerows and hedgerow laying under the agriculture improvement scheme. It is anticipated that such grants will form part of the new farm and conservation grant scheme which my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food announced last November. Where appropriate the Countryside Commission and the Nature Conservancy Council can also offer assistance.

Ozone Layer

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps have been taken to implement the European Environmental Council directive about the Montreal protocol on substances that deplete the ozone layer.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The EC regulation to implement the Montreal protocol is directly applicable in all member states and therefore forms part of the law of each member state. The Department is considering whether any topping-up regulations may be required under the European Communities Act 1972.

Local Authority Staff

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list in the Official Report for each local authority the staff increases they have experienced in each of the last three years; and what estimates there are of any increases in future years.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Information on changes in local authority staff numbers in England is compiled by LACSAB on behalf of DOE and the local authority associations and published quarterly in a joint manpower watch press notice, tables D to M. Copies of the press notices containing mid-year figures have been placed in the Library of the House. Estimates of any future increases are not made centrally.

Widdicombe Report

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he intends to seek to implement any of the recommendations of the Widdicombe report in the current parliamentary session.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Yes.

Endangered Species (Control of Trade)

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many part-time and full-time staff have been assigned to implement the Control of Trade in Endangered Species (Enforcement) Regulations 1985 per month since enforcement of the regulations; and what is the cost to his Department.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Departmental staff have not been assigned exclusively to implement the Control of Trade in Endangered Species (Enforcement) Regulations 1985. In 1987-88 26 staff in the Department's wildlife division were involved on endangered species matters and were assisted, as required, by a panel of 90 fee-paid inspectors. The cost of the full-time staff involved was approximately £465,000. Enforcement of the regulation is a matter for HM Customs and Excise and the police as appropriate.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many person hours have been spent implementing the Control of Trade in Endangered Species (Enforcement) Regulations 1985 per month since enforcement of the regulations; and what is the cost to his Department.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not available.

Infractions

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 17 January to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Erdington, Official Report, columns 154-55, what was the nature of the five infractions that have been referred to the enforcement authorities and of the two infractions at present under consideration by his Department.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: All possible infractions involve suggestions that CITES appendix I or EC Regulation 3626/82 annex C part I specimens were being offered for sale.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 17 January to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Erdington, Official Report, columns 154-55, if he will specify the number and nature of any possible infractions which have been referred to his Department between April 1987 and October 1988; and what action his Department has taken on these.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not readily available, as the Department kept no central record of possible infractions during this period.

Nitrogen Dioxide (Monitoring)

Mr. Allan Roberts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the number of sites in London monitoring nitrogen dioxide levels under European Community directive 85/203; and where are those sites.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: There are two sites in London monitoring nitrogen dioxide levels in accordance with European Community directive 85/203/EEC; they are in Pembroke road, Kensington W8 and Vauxhall bridge road, Victoria SW1.

Waste Treatment Works

Mr. Allan Roberts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions the Government have held with United Nations environment programme and Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development on the subject of encouraging the establishment of waste treatment works in the countries of source to discourage the transfrontier shipment of such wastes.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Government are participating actively in discussions within the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development and United Nations environment programme to develop international controls on transfrontier shipment and supports the principle that countries should establish their own disposal facilities to reduce transfrontier shipment to a minimum compatible with environmentally sound and efficient management.

Litter Collections

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will estimate the spending on litter collection for 1988-89 and for each of the next three years.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Details of local authority expenditure on litter collection are not available centrally.

Council House Sales

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his latest estimate of capital receipts from the right to buy for 1988-89 and his forecasts for the coming three years.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Estimates and plans for local authorities' initial capital receipts from the sale of dwellings in England, both under the right-to-buy and on a voluntary basis are given in the table. Figures are not available for right-to-buy receipts alone.

Local authorities' initial capital receipts from sale of dwellings

	Initial receipts £ million
1988-89 (estimate)	2,555
1989-90 (plan)	2,915
1990-91 (plan)	2,525
1991-92 (plan)	2,440

Keep Britain Tidy Campaign

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the Government budget for the Keep Britain Tidy campaign for each year since 1979 and for the next three years at current prices and at constant 1987-88 prices.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Government's grant aid to the Tidy Britain Group (formerly Keep Britain Tidy Group) since 1979 at current prices and at 1987-88 prices is as follows:

Year	Current prices £000	At 1987-88 prices £000
1979-80	275	477
1980-81	250	366
1981-82	275	367
1982-83	292	363
1983-84	525	624
1984-85	510	581
1985-86	547	587
1986-87	554	577
1987-88	568	568
1988-89	1,254	1,194
1989-90	3,000	2,773

Decisions on the future level of grant aid have yet to be made. A review of the programme of pilot projects being carried out by the group will be undertaken later in the year.

Street Cleaners

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the number of street cleaners in 1979, and today.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Details of the number of street cleaners employed by local authorities are not held centrally.

Water Privatisation

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how the Government propose to safeguard the countryside and the public's access to it, after privatisation of the water authorities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: In the last decade, the water authorities have shown a growing appreciation of the importance of furthering conservation, maintaining public access to their land and water, and promoting recreation. This is something we wish to continue and build upon for in many of its operations, such as the construction and maintenance of reservoirs, the protection of water catchment areas and the abstraction of water from rivers, the water industry has a unique, profound and continuous impact on the environment.

That is why the Water Bill currently being considered by Parliament would impose on all the water and sewerage companies, the National Rivers Authority and certain other water bodies a duty to carry out their functions in a way that furthers conservation, preserves public rights of access and promotes recreation.

In enforcing these duties on the new water plcs the Secretary of State would take into account the extent to which they have followed the terms of statutory codes of practice giving practical guidance in relation to these duties. These new codes will give added emphasis to these important duties.

I have today published a draft of the code of practice on conservation, access and recreation and have invited the NRA and the water authorities and statutory water companies to comment on these draft guidelines. I have placed a copy of the draft code, with a summary of its contents, in the Library of the House.

Housebuilding (Rentals)

Mr. Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many houses were built to be rented in the public sector in each successive year since 1974.

Mr. Trippier: The information requested is listed below.

Over 1 million dwellings were built for rent by the public sector in England between 1974 and 1987. In addition over 1 million renovations would in many cases have provided additional dwellings for rent.

New Public Sector Housebuilding Completions for Rent: England, in thousands (Figures exclude new build for sale and shared ownership)

Year
1974	[1]104·9
1975	[1]127·9
1976	[1]130·3
1977	[1]138·0
1978	[1]112·4
1979	89·3
1980	91·8
1981	70·5
1982	39·3
1983	37·7
1984	36·6
1985	29·7
1986	25·7
1987	23·2

[1] estimate.

Public sector here consists of local authorities, new towns and housing associations.

Waste Disposal

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the additional consultation paper on waste disposal law amendments as announced on 29 June, Official Report, column 254.

Mr. Ridley [pursuant to the reply, 23 November 1988, c. 4]: The Government are concerned about criticisms of the regulation of waste disposal, exemplifed in the reports of the former hazardous waste inspectorate (now part of Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution). My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales and I have accordingly reviewed existing arrangements in England and Wales and have today published a consultation paper with proposals for reform. Copies of the paper have been deposited in the Libraries of both Houses.

Our proposals are aimed at securing high national standards of waste management which are consistently and fairly enforced at local level. They build on the arrangements established under the Control of Pollution Act 1974 but address weaknesses and criticisms which have emerged in the light of experience.

National standards, applicable to both public and private sector operations, will be achieved by requiring regulation authorities to have regard to waste management papers prepared by Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution in carrying out its functions. The regulatory and operational functions of waste disposal authorities will be separated by organising operational functions into arm's-length local authority disposal companies. Disposal authorities will be retitled waste regulation authorities and will be required to publish annual reports on their regulatory performance to strengthen public accountability.

Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution will be given statutory powers to examine and report on the regulatory performance of waste regulation authorities, with rights of access to documents and land. There will be more finely targeted default powers for the Secretaries of State with regard to authorities which consistently fail to exercise their regulatory duties properly.

Waste collection authorities will have a duty to arrange for the disposal of waste they have collected. They will be required to seek competitive tenders which both local authority waste disposal companies and private sector companies will be eligible to submit. In assessing tenders, waste collection authorities will be required to have regard to the environmental effects of the proposed method of disposal.

These proposals complement the measures to strengthen controls on waste disposal announced on 29 June last and the proposals announced in the House on 23 November. Together they form a package which will be the subject of early legislation.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Betting and Gaming

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will give consideration to the case for increased financial support to national hunt racing when determining the 28th levy scheme for 1989-90 in addition to the need to improve the conditions of a substantial number of those employed in racing.

Mr. John Patten: Yes. These matters are referred to in submissions to my right hon. Friend which he is taking into account in determining the 28th horseracing betting levy scheme.

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he has received a memorandum from the three Government appointed members of the Horserace Betting Levy Board on the 28th levy scheme 1989-90; and whether he will implement their recommendation that serious consideration should be given to raising levy rates to a level designed to give British racing a fairer return from the large volume of betting turnover and that as an interim move the 28th levy scheme should be based on a return to racing of at least 1 per cent. of leviable betting turnover.

Mr. John Patten: My right hon. Friend has received the memorandum and is considering all the recommendations in it in determining the 28th horserace betting levy scheme.

Race Relations

Ms. Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make breaches of the prison department's race relations policy a disciplinary offence; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: It is already possible to bring disciplinary proceedings against a member of staff who behaves in a racially prejudiced or discriminatory manner.

Ms. Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will introduce a system of rewards to encourage all prison department staff to act in a professional and non-discriminatory way; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: All staff are under a specific duty to act in a professional and non-discriminatory way, and are rewarded accordingly. We see no need for a special system of the kind suggested by the hon. Member, which might give the impression that professional behaviour was optional.

Ms. Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will ensure that proven commitment to the goals of the prison department's race relations policy is a factor which is taken into account when considering a prison officer's prospects for promotion; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The prison service race relations policy statement defines the standard of professional behaviour required of staff and helps to inform the annual assessment of an officer's working relationships with inmates and others. Those considering candidates for promotion give significant weight to that aspect of performance.

Animal Experiments

Dame Janet Fookes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much of the £60,000 allocated for the refinement, reduction and replacement of animal use in experiments in the last 12 months for which records are available was allocated to the development and validation of alternatives to tests used for cosmetic safety and efficacy.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: About £13,000; of the four projects which have been grant-aided, one should have direct applicability to the irritancy testing of cosmetic substances.

Dame Janet Fookes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many project licences have been granted under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 for safety and efficacy testing of cosmetics and toiletries.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Six project licences have been granted for the safety testing of cosmetic substances.

Dame Janet Fookes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for each project licence for cosmetics tests granted under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986, what species and how many animals are to be used.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The use of animals in cosmetics testing for the last available year is given in table 3 of the "Statistics of Scientific Procedures on Living Animals 1987" (Cm. 515). It is not our practice to reveal details of individual projects.

Dame Janet Fookes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what additional restraints the animals procedures committee has imposed on project licence applications for cosmetics tests.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: As the APC has revealed in its annual report (HC 36, para 3.6), it has identified a number of common requirements for cosmetic testing licences and these have been incorporated in the guidance notes for applicants. I have accepted the committee's recommendation that licensees should make a detailed statistical return for the APC's use.

Dame Janet Fookes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether any licences have been issued for cosmetics testing that go beyond the mild severity category in the project licence.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: A minority of the project licences for the testing of cosmetic substances have been assessed as "moderate", the remainder as "mild". This reflects the range of procedures used and the types of substances required to be tested by individual companies.

Local Pay Additions

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the number of staff in his Department, by grade, in receipt of local pay additions outside London and the south-east economic planning region; what are the different amounts paid to staff by grade; whether this figure varies due to location; what qualifying period of scale-related criteria is used; and whether this varies by location.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: There are no Home Office staff outside London and the south-east region in receipt of local pay additions.

Trevi Group

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many meetings he has attended with ministers in the Trevi group in each year from 1985 to 1988; and what subjects he has discussed.

Mr. Hurd: Since I became Home Secretary in September 1985 I have attended three Trevi ministerial meetings in 1986 (two of which I chaired), two in 1987 and two in 1988. The main subject of discussion has been co-operation in counter-terrorism matters but we have also dealt with a variety of other topics including football hooliganism, drug trafficking and other serious organised international crime.

In the second half of 1986, on my initiative, complementary meetings of Ministers were also established to consider immigration matters. I chaired the first meeting of this group in October 1986 and have attended the two meetings held each year subsequently.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consultations he has had in connection with subjects discussed with the Trevi group of ministers; and with which organisations he has discussed matters raised at Trevi meetings.

Mr. Hurd: I do not discuss Trevi matters in specific terms with other organisations because much of Trevi's work and its proceedings, especially on terrorism, is classified. Some of the general subject areas with which Trevi is concerned also feature in other fora, in bilateral contacts with other countries at both ministerial and official level and in discussions with various organisations and individuals as appropriate.

Entry Policy (EC)

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consultations he has held and proposes to hold in connection with proposals to operate a common policy of entry at all European Economic Community ports of entry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: I have attended a series of meetings of Trevi Ministers and European Community Immigration Ministers in which these and related issues have been extensively discussed. For information about the most recent of these meetings in Athens, and about future work to be undertaken by the supporting meetings of officials, I refer the hon. Member to my answers to questions from my hon. Friend the Member for Romsey and Waterside (Mr. Colvin) on 14 December at columns 576-77 and 15 December 1988 at column 709. These consultations will continue.

Waterloo-South Bank (Incidents)

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will request from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis a list of incidents reported or investigated by the Metropolitan police that occurred during the past year in the area between the south bank centre and British Rail's Waterloo station in the evening hours.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I understand from the commissioner that such a list is not readily available and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost. If the hon. Member has a specific problem in mind he is welcome to write to my right hon. and noble Friend about it.

Firearms Amnesty

Mr. Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how the weapons handed in during the recent amnesty were disposed of; and whether any effort was made to realise their cash value.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Weapons surrendered under the recent firearms amnesty were destroyed, save for those of historical significance which, under special arrangements, were acquired by museums. None was offered for sale.

Mr. Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish a table in the Official Report to show how many of the firearms and other weapons listed in his reply to the hon. Member for Londonderry, East of 13 December 1988 Official Report, columns 509-510, were handed in to each police force; and if he will list them as in his reply of 13 December.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The information is as follows:

Table 1: Firearms surrendered to the police during the firearms amnesty September 1988 by police force area

England and Wales — Number of items surrendered

Police force area	Fully automatic	Self-loading	Rifles Manual	All	Pistols and revolvers	Total firearms
Avon and Somerset	4	37	161	198	630	832
Bedfordshire	1	4	80	84	128	213
Cambridgeshire	1	9	63	72	211	284

Police force area	Rifles				Pistols and revolvers	Total firearms
	Fully automatic	Self-loading	Manual	All
Cheshire	1	2	105	107	384	492
Cleveland	—	—	34	34	130	164
Cumbria	—	—	83	83	208	291
Derbyshire	4	1	72	73	268	345
Devon and Cornwall	21	26	232	258	1,005	1,284
Dorset	1	5	140	145	540	686
Durham	2	—	47	47	167	216
Essex	5	7	152	159	512	676
Gloucestershire	32	6	84	90	259	381
Greater Manchester	3	14	101	115	585	703
Hampshire	4	3	261	264	951	1,219
Hertfordshire	3	13	146	159	256	418
Humberside	6	1	71	72	224	302
Kent	1	—	193	193	618	812
Lancaster	16	6	121	127	438	581
Leicestershire	1	5	115	120	334	455
Lincolnshire	2	12	126	138	280	420
London, City of	1	—	3	3	19	23
Merseyside	8	1	89	90	465	563
Metropolitan Police District	12	15	337	352	1,728	2,092
Norfolk	1	9	105	114	304	419
Northamptonshire	—	9	73	82	167	249
Northumbria	2	27	127	154	493	649
North Yorkshire	—	1	106	107	364	471
Nottinghamshire	—	7	62	69	348	417
South Yorkshire	—	4	41	45	297	342
Staffordshire	2	1	65	66	246	314
Suffolk	3	12	118	130	285	418
Surrey	2	3	152	155	524	681
Sussex	3	12	182	194	846	1,043
Thames Valley	11	36	143	179	703	893
Warwickshire	2	—	51	51	180	233
West Mercia	3	4	127	131	522	656
West Midlands	5	6	127	133	570	708
West Yorkshire	2	—	99	99	506	607
Wiltshire	2	1	119	120	262	384
Dyfed Powys	4	6	76	82	236	322
Gwent	1	—	54	54	150	205
North Wales	3	6	93	99	257	359
South Wales	3	4	120	124	405	532
All forces	178	315	4,856	5,171	18,005	23,354

Table 2

Shotguns surrendered to the police during the firearms amnesty September 1988 by police force area
England and Wales

Police force area	Number of items surrendered
	Long barrelled shotguns			Short barrelled shotguns			Total shotguns
	Traditional	Other	All	Traditional	Other	All
Avon and Somerset	358	8	366	7	5	12	378
Bedfordshire	281	—	281	4	—	4	285
Cambridgeshire	188	—	188	10	3	13	201
Cheshire	205	8	213	1	—	1	214
Cleveland	87	1	88	2	—	2	90
Cumbria	243	—	243	1	5	6	249
Derbyshire	159	5	164	8	—	8	172
Devon and Cornwall	766	6	772	33	3	36	808
Dorset	342	—	342	7	—	7	349
Durham	77	—	77	2	—	2	79
Essex	376	16	392	2	3	5	397
Gloucestershire	194	4	198	5	—	5	203
Greater Manchester	156	2	158	34	6	40	198
Hampshire	556	7	563	3	—	3	566
Hertfordshire	130	1	131	4	—	4	135
Humberside	137	1	138	3	—	3	141
Kent	346	4	350	15	4	19	369
Lancashire	276	13	289	6	4	10	299
Leicestershire	188	1	189	19	—	19	208
Lincolnshire	255	1	256	18	—	18	274
London, City of	2	—	2	—	—	—	2
Merseyside	157	2	159	13	—	13	172
Metropolitan Police District	526	13	539	5	1	6	545
Norfolk	302	5	307	35	6	41	348

Police force area	Number of items surrendered: Long barrelled shotguns Traditional	Other	All	Short barrelled shotguns Traditional	Other	All	Total shotguns
Northamptonshire	120	3	123	1	—	1	124
Northumbria	176	2	178	10	—	10	188
North Yorkshire	337	19	356	—	—	—	356
Nottinghamshire	167	5	172	3	—	3	175
South Yorkshire	114	1	115	—	1	1	116
Staffordshire	178	3	181	14	2	16	197
Suffolk	320	—	320	24	3	27	347
Surrey	265	—	265	—	4	4	269
Sussex	378	4	382	25	10	35	417
Thames Valley	379	13	392	29	8	37	429
Warwickshire	122	1	123	2	—	2	125
West Mercia	337	3	340	42	1	43	383
West Midlands	224	6	230	6	—	6	236
West Yorkshire	192	—	192	6	—	6	198
Wiltshire	202	—	202	—	2	2	204
Dyfed Powys	244	1	245	1	—	1	246
Gwent	95	3	98	—	2	2	100
North Wales	240	5	245	2	—	2	247
South Wales	204	4	208	2	5	7	215
ALL FORCES	10,601	171	10,772	404	78	482	11,254

Table 3

Other firearms surrendered to the police during the firearms amnesty September 1988 by police force area

England and Wales

Police force area	Number of items surrendered: Prohibited	Air rifles and air pistols	Others including imitations	Total other firearms
Avon and Somerset	3	211	25	239
Bedfordshire	—	86	14	100
Cambridgeshire	5	70	11	86
Cheshire	8	151	19	178
Cleveland	—	59	27	86
Cumbria	2	60	—	62
Derbyshire	1	85	14	100
Devon and Cornwall	2	219	100	321
Dorset	1	169	86	256
Durham	—	63	21	84
Essex	2	170	18	190
Gloucestershire	—	69	11	80
Greater Manchester	2	331	177	510
Hampshire	2	319	83	404
Hertfordshire	1	165	—	166
Humberside	—	107	11	118
Kent	1	166	34	201
Lancashire	12	172	69	253
Leicestershire	1	100	37	138
Lincolnshire	—	98	44	142
London, City of	1	2	1	4
Merseyside	1	208	101	310
Metropolitan Police District	1	576	320	897
Norfolk	—	106	4	110
Northamptonshire	—	83	39	122
Northumbria	1	169	31	201
North Yorkshire	—	93	13	106
Nottinghamshire	—	148	23	171
South Yorkshire	—	94	2	96
Staffordshire	—	102	43	145
Suffolk	3	81	27	111
Surrey	1	144	4	149
Sussex	8	253	134	395
Thames Valley	7	203	38	248
Warwickshire	—	54	5	59
West Mercia	—	124	45	169
West Midlands	—	247	82	329
West Yorkshire	—	228	124	352
Wiltshire	3	104	20	127
Dyfed Powys	—	27	—	27
Gwent	—	41	11	52
North Wales	—	67	19	86
South Wales	—	102	35	137
All forces	69	6,126	1,922	8,117

Mr. Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, further to his answer to the hon. Member for Londonderry, East Official Report, columns 509-10, 13 December, if he will publish a table in the Official Report to show how many of the firearms listed in each category in the reply were (a) held illegally, (b) held previously and (c) currently held on (i) firearms certificates, (ii) shotgun certificates and (iii) did not require any certificate, or as much of such information as is available to him.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: This information was not collected. since there was no obligation on those in legal possession of firearms to hand them in, most of those surrendered are thought to have been held illegally.

Mr. Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information is (a) collected by the police, and (b) sent or held by his Department, in relation to (i) firearms and (ii) shotguns held on certificates; and whether such information was collected on each firearm, shotgun and other weapon handed in during the recent firearms amnesty.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: In addition to an applicant's personal details, information relating to the type, calibre, maker's name and serial number of weapons held on a firearm certificate is collected by the police. This information is not held by the Home Office. Corresponding information about weapons held on a shotgun certificate will not be collected by the police until the provisions of the Firearms (Amendment) Act 1988 relating to notification of transactions involving shotguns are introduced later this year.

Under the arrangements for the amnesty there was no obligation on any person surrendering a weapon to provide details of this kind but, where available, information on the calibre, type, maker's name and identification of weapons was recorded, for purposes of description and categorisation.

Breath Tests

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Reigate (Mr. Gardiner), 18 January, Official Report, column 202, whether he will give the number of positive breath tests for each police force area together with the number of (a) fatal and (b) other personal injury accidents in the period 19 December 1988 to 1 January 1989.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The official breath test and road accident statistics for 1988 will not be available until later this year. The Association of Chief Police Officers has, however, collected provisional figures for the number of positive breath tests and accidents involving personal injury (including fatalities) in each police force area between 19 December 1988 and 1 January 1989. These are given in the table:

Police force area	Number of positive breath tests	Number of injury accidents
Avon and Somerset	113	145
Bedfordshire	45	50
Cambridgeshire	47	73
Cheshire	93	111
City of London	15	9
Cleveland	51	53
Cumbria	45	34
Derbyshire	78	88
Devon and Cornwall	142	146
Dorset	57	20
Durham	72	54
Dyfed-Powys	45	51
Essex	149	223
Gloucestershire	50	64
Greater Manchester	422	272
Gwent	58	57
Hampshire	170	114
Hertfordshire	84	108
Humberside	81	69
Kent	130	110
Lancashire	139	205
Leicestershire	79	70
Lincolnshire	62	90
Merseyside	135	175
Metropolitan	980	887
Norfolk	33	58
Northamptonshire	45	63
Northumbria	137	112
North Wales	92	43
North Yorkshire	71	97
Nottinghamshire	101	90
South Wales	108	132
South Yorkshire	120	75
Staffordshire	121	115
Suffolk	43	69
Surrey	76	97
Sussex	81	88
Thames Valley	213	169
Warwickshire	43	36
West Mercia	121	92
West Midlands	259	310
West Yorkshire	182	194
Wiltshire	73	41
Total	5,261	4,272

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will set out the grounds on which a police officer may require a motorist to take a breath test; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The current police powers to require breath tests are contained in the Road Traffic Act 1972 (as amended by the Transport Act 1981). Under section 159, a police constable in uniform has the power to stop any vehicle; and under section 7 to require a breath test:

(a) where there is reasonable cause to suspect that the driver has alcohol in his body; or
(b) where there is reasonable cause to suspect that the driver has committed a moving traffic offence; or
(c) where there is reasonable cause to believe that the driver has been involved in an accident.

Viraj Mendis

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimates he has as to the total costs to date to his Department of the Viraj Mendis case.

Mr. Renton: It is unfortunately not practicable to identify the staffing and other resources spent by the Department in connection with the case, but they were considerable.

Women Prisoners

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the number of females sentenced to a period of imprisonment during 1987 and 1988 in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The information requested for 1987 can be found in table 7.15 "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales, 1987" (Cm. 498), copies of which are in the Library of the House. Information for 1988 is not yet available.

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the female prison population in England and Wales at the most recent date available.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: At unlocking on Friday 20 January, 1,765 female inmates were held in prison service establishments in England and Wales.

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many females with dependent children under the age of five years were sentenced to a period of imprisonment in England and Wales during 1987; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. A census on 11 August 1986 revealed that 340 females in custody were known to be the mothers of 455 children aged five years or under.

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the number of places available in prison establishments for female detainees with dependent children and babies in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Three female prison establishments provide a total of 39 places for mothers with babies up to the age of 18 months.

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many females gave birth during the currency of a prison sentence during 1987 and 1988 in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Information for calendar years is not readily available. Between 1 April 1986 and 31 March 1987, 55 sentenced females gave birth during their sentences. Between 1 April 1987 and 31 March 1988, 64 did so.

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the total number of females currently serving a prison sentence in England and Wales; what is the proportion and number of such females who have committed an offence involving robbery or violence; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The information is published annually in "Prison Statistics, England and Wales" (table 1.8 of the latest issue, for 1987). I shall reply as soon as possible giving provisional information for 1988.

Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the statement by the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis on his strategy for 1989.

Mr. Hurd: I am placing copies of the commissioner's strategy statement for 1989 in the Library of the House today. I am also sending copies to all right hon. and hon. Members whose constituencies fall wholly or partly within the Metropolitan police district. I hope to meet London Members soon to discuss the strategy.

Prisons

Mr. Summerson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what changes he intends to make in the rules governing the conduct of adjudications within prisons; and if he has decided to accept the recommendation of Her Majesty's chief inspector of prisons, in his report on grievance procedures, that the offences of making a false and malicious allegation against an officer and of repeatedly making groundless complaints should be abolished.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Revised prison rules, which will be laid before the House shortly, will simplify and clarify the code of offences in the current prison rule 47 under which prisoners may be charged. Many of the changes are designed to give effect to the Government's response to the Prior committee report, contained in a White Paper published in October 1986.

It has been decided, in the context of these changes, to abolish the current offences under rule 47(12), of making a false and malicious allegation against an officer, and prison rule 47(16), of repeatedly making groundless complaints. The so-called "simultaneous ventilation" rule, contained in prison standing orders, is also to be abolished.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Incomes

Mr. Lester: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish figures showing the weekly disposable incomes of a married couple and a lone parent, each with two children aged four and six years and each paying average local authority rents and rates, in each of the following circumstances (a) out of work on income support, (b) participating in the new employment training scheme, (c) in part-time work earning £25 and (d) in full-time work earning £150.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information is set out in the table. The results are arbitrary. They cannot reflect, except by chance, the actual circumstances of particular people. The use of average rent and local authority rates means these illustrations do not reflect the full range of housing costs which people can pay.

Current benefit system: average local authority rent and rates.
Married couple with two children aged 4 and 6

(a) Not working	Earnings	Tax	NI	Rent	Rates	Housing benefit	CHB	FSM	FWM	Net income after housing costs
Income support
64·60	—	—	—	19·90	8·20	26·46	14·50	2·55	1·83	81·84
(b) On the new employment training scheme
Training allowance plus income support[1]
74·60	—	—	—	19·90	8·20	26·46	14·50	2·55	1·83	91·84
(c) Working part-time—earning £25
Income support[2]
44·60	25·00	0·00	0·00	19·90	8·20	26·46	14·50	2·55	1·83	86·84

[1] Assumes previously in receipt of basic rate of Income Support.
[2] Assumes receipt of Supplementary Benefit/Income Support for less than two years.

	Earnings	Tax	NI	Take home pay	Family credit	Rent	Rates	Housing benefit	CHB	Total net income	Net income after housing costs
(d) Working full-time earnings £150
	150·00	17·81	13·50	118·69	0·00	19·90	8·20	0·00	14·50	133·19	105·09

Current benefit system: average local authority rent and rates.
Lone mother with two children aged 4 and 6

	Earnings	Tax	NI	Rent	Rates	Housing benefit	CHB	FSM	FWM	Net income after housing costs
(a) Not working
Income support
45·35	—	—	—	19·90	8·20	26·46	19·40	2·55	1·83	67·49
(b) Working part-time—earning £25
Income support
35·35	25·00	0·00	0·00	19·90	8·20	26·46	19·40	2·55	1·83	82·49
(c) On the new Employment Training Scheme.
Training allowance plus income support
55·35	—	—	—	19·90	8·20	26·46	19·40	2·55	1·83	77·49

Notes:
[1] Lone mother assumed to be over 25 years.
[2] Lone mother assumed to have been on basic rate of Income Support prior to acceptance on Employment Training Scheme.

(d) Working full-time	Tax	NI	Take home pay	Family benefit	Child benefit	Rent	Rent rebates	Rates	Rate rebates	Total net income	Net income after housing costs
Earnings head
150·00	17·81	13·50	118·69	0·00	19·40	19·90	0·0	8·20	0·00	138·09	109·99

Mentally Handicapped Persons

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the cost falling to the social security budget resulting from the transfer of care for mentally handicapped persons in Bexley from the local authority to a private company.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I regret that the information requested could not be obtained without disproportionate expense.

Social Fund

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the overall spending on the social fund during each month in 1985, 1986 and 1987.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The first part of the social fund, relating to regulated payments for maternity and funeral expenses came into operation on 6 April 1987. Discretionary payments under the social fund for community care grants, budgeting and crisis loans, came into operation on 11 April 1988. Expenditure for calendar months in 1987 was as follows:

	£
April	935,565
May	2,087,250
June	2,829,890
July	2,569,383
August	2,867,333
September	2,363,906
October	2,409,383
November	2,976,350
December	1,648,302

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many oral parliamentary questions he has answered by written reply because the question was not reached at Question Time for the most recent year for which figures are available.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: From January 1988 until 25 July, when the Department of Health and Social Security was divided into two separate Departments of State, 611 of the 748 oral questions tabled to the Secretary of State for Social Services received a written reply. From 25 July to the end of the year 132 oral questions were tabled to the Secretary of State for Social Security, 114 of which received a written reply.

These figures do not include oral questions which were subsequently withdrawn, unstarred or transferred to other Departments.

YTS

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what evaluations or research his Department has commissioned into the operation of YTS since the introduction of benefit changes in September 1989; and when the results will be available.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: None. We are, however, closely watching the impact of the reformed social security system on all client groups, including 16 and 17-year-olds.

Oldham and Failsworth Local Offices

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many new claims for income support were made each month since 11 April 1988 at the Oldham and Failsworth offices of his Department; and how many claims were determined each month;

(2) what was the average number of new claims and cases since 11 April 1988 awaiting review at the Oldham and Failsworth offices of his Department which were recorded as outstanding each month; and how many related to (a) supplementary benefit claims and (b) single payment claims;

(3) how many items of unlinked correspondence were recorded each month since 11 April 1988 at the Oldham and Failsworth offices of his Department;

(4) what load of current cases have the Oldham and Failsworth offices of his Department carried in the past six months.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information available is set out in the tables.

The figures on unlinked post are supplied from local office records. The source of the live load figure is the 100 per cent. count of cases in action and is available only on a quarterly basis. The figures given include a small number of cases not actually in receipt of benefit.

Month ending	30 April 1988	31 May 1988	30 June 1988	31 July 1988	31 August 1988	30 September 1988	31 October 1988	30 November 1988	31 December 1988
Oldham ILO
Income support
Claims
Intake	690	1,181	1,152	1,361	1,260	1,217	1,098	1,147	856
Processed	503	1,241	1,080	1,402	1,301	1,160	1,131	1,157	816
Outstanding	187	127	199	158	117	174	141	131	171
Assessment review outstanding	46	38	19	20	59	10	79	3	70
Unlinked post	19	13	7	11	12	8	10	10	17
Live load					16,197			15,854
Supplementary benefit work outstanding
Claims	86	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0
Single payments	3,500	2,690	1,218	585	0	0	0	0	0
Additional requirements	2,200	1,911	932	193	40	0	0	0	0
Failsworth ILO
Income support
Claims
Intake	479	591	690	804	742	761	745	639	484
Processed	388	595	674	812	757	728	769	645	494
Outstanding	91	87	103	95	80	113	89	83	73
Assessment review outstanding	42	36	30	41	12	25	34	36	40
Unlinked post	0	0	0	0	0	1	2	1	34
Live load					12,247			11,855
Supplementary benefit work outstanding
Claims	44	1	0	0	0	0	0	0	0
Single payments	1,081	277	127	36	20	6	2	1	2
Additional requirements	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many social fund applications were made each month since 11 April 1988 at the Oldham and Failsworth offices of his Department for (a) budget loans, (b) crisis loans, and (c) community care grants; and how many applications in each of these categories were determined in each month.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Information on the numbers of applications for social fund loans and grants processed and awarded, listed by local office, including information on budget allocations and expenditure, is available from the details held in the Library.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give for Oldham and Failsworth offices of his Department the current staffing complement, broken down by staffing grades of (a) how many permanent staff are currently in post; (b) how many temporary staff are currently in post; (c) how many staff members are currently being trained; and (d) the annual turnover of permanent staff.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information requested is as follows:

	Permanent Staff
	Oldham ILO	Failsworth ILO
Grade 7	1·0	1·00
SEO	1·0	1·00
HEO	9·5	9·00
LO1	55·0	42·50
LO2	102·5	77·50
AA	25·0	18·00
Typing Manager	1·0	—
Typist	4·0	3·00
Security Guard	—	2·00
Messenger	3·0	1·00
Telephonist	2·0	1·00
	204·0	156·00
Temporary Staff	—	[1]2·00
Total Staff	204·0	158·00
Annual Turnover	8·9	6·94
Staff Under Training	0·0	0·00

[1] AA Grade.
Note: ILO-Integrated Local Office.

Mr. Viraj Mendis

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what information he has as to the total amount of social security benefits paid to Mr. Viraj Mendis since 1973.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: It is not the Department's policy to release information from social security records of individuals, which is obtained and held in confidence, without the individual's approval.

Pensions

Mr. John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security by what percentage the basic state pension has been increased since May 1979; and what was the percentage increase in the retail price index inflation to the latest month for which figures are available.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The basic state pension has been increased from £19·50 in November 1978[1] to £41·15 in April 1988[2], representing an increase of 111 per cent. The corresponding percentage increase in the retail price index was 106 per cent.

[1] The level of pension in payment in May 1979 came into force in November 1978.

[2] The level of pension currently in payment came into force in April 1988.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what estimates he has as to the number of women aged (a) 60 to 62½ years and (b) 62½ to 65 years in the United Kingdom; and how many are in receipt of state retirement pensions;

(2) what estimates he has as to the number of men aged (a) 60 to 62½ years and (b) 62½ to 65 years in the United Kingdom; and how many are in receipt of state retirement pensions.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Actual population figures for 1988 are not available. Projected population figures[1] for that year for Great Britain indicate that there were approximately 893,000 women and 837,000 men aged 60-62, and 934,000 women and 808,000 men aged 63-65. The Department's records show that, as at March 31 1988, 590,000 women aged 60-62 and 811,000 women aged 63-65 were in receipt of retirement pension. Retirement pension is paid to men aged 65 and over.

Source: Government Actuary's Department.
[1] Based on mid-1985 data.
Note: information provided is for Great Britain.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received concerning the possibility of reducing the retirement age for men to (a) 60 years or (b) 62½ years and increasing the retirement age for women to that age; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Between 13 January 1988 and 10 January 1989 we received a total of 364 representations about state pension age. Records do not indicate the precise ages about which correspondents wrote.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimates he has as to the cost to public funds of (a) reducing the retirement age for men to 60 years and (b) reducing the retirement age for men to 62½ years and raising the retirement age for women to 62½ years.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information is not available in the form requested. The most recent estimates, which are based on 1985-86 benefit rates, are that the net annual cost to public funds of equalising state pension age at 60 years would be approximately £3,000 million, and at 63 years the net costs would be approximately £800 million.

Benefits and Allowances

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people in Great Britain were receiving (a) attendance allowance at (i) the higher rate, and (ii) the lower rate, (b) invalid care allowance, (c) mobility allowance, (d) invalidity benefit, (e) severe disablement allowance, (f) industrial disablement pension, (g) war disablement pension, (h) retirement pension, (i) income support, and (j) supplementary benefit at the latest dates for which figures are available; and what are those dates.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information requested is as follows:

Benefit	Number of recipients	Date
Attendance allowance
(i) higher rate	287,000	March 1988
(ii) lower rate	425,000	March 1988
Invalid care allowance	109,000	January 1989
Mobility allowance	557,000	January 1989

Benefit	Number of recipients	Date
Invalidity benefit	967,900	April 1987
Severe disablement allowance	260,200	April 1987
Industrial injuries disablement pension	183,000	April 1988
War disablement pension	197,800	December 1988
Retirement pension[1]	9,300,000	March 1988
Income support[2]	4,354,000	May 1988
Supplementary benefit[2]	4,834,000	November 1987

[1] Excludes cases where graduated pension only is payable.
[2] Source: Quarterly Statistical Enquiries.

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what benefits are available to an employed person who has to be admitted to hospital for a serious illness or operation; for how long such benefits are paid; and if he will give similar information for a self-employed man or woman.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: An employed person who is sick and incapable of work will usually qualify for statutory sick pay (SSP) from his employer. SSP is payable for up to 28 weeks of incapacity, providing the contract of employment continues. If there is no title to SSP or entitlement ends before 28 weeks, state sickness benefit is payable, subject to the satisfaction of the relevant contribution conditions. Sickness benefit and/or SSP is replaced by invalidity benefit after incapacity has lasted 28 weeks. SSP sickness and invalidity benefits continue in payment whilst the claimant is in hospital, but sickness and invalidity benefit are reduced after six weeks free in-patient treatment. A further reduction is made at the 12 months stage.

A self-employed person is not entitled to SSP, but qualifies for sickness and invalidity benefit on the same basis as an employed person.

There may be other social security benefits payable while a person is in hospital, depending on his particular circumstances. If my hon. Friend has a specific case in mind, I should be happy to look at it.

Cold Weather Payments

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claimants in Wales were paid under the cold weather payments scheme for the last five years; how much benefit has been paid in each of the last five years; and how many claims were refused.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The available information is as follows:

Winter	Number of claimants paid	Amount paid £	Number of claims refused
1984-85	11,494	92,679	Not known
1985-86	38,769	1,039,294	Not known
1986-87	[1]61,000	640,295	31,592
1987-88	1,735	8,675	697
[2]1988-89	nil	nil	5

[1] Estimate based on the number of £5 payments made.
[2] To date.
Detailed information as above not collected before 1984-85.

Lone Parents (Spending Power)

Sir Ian Gilmour: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish figures showing the net spending power of a lone mother with two children aged three and five years, paying average local authority rent and rates, who is (a) not working, (b) working part-time earning £15, £25 and £40 a week, and paying £5 for travel costs to work, (c) in the new employment training scheme, and (d) working full-time, earning £100, £150 and £200 a week, and paying £55 for travel to work and child minding costs.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 6 December 1988]: The information is set out in the table.

As specified in the question, net weekly spending is assumed to be benefits plus earnings less housing costs and other identified expenditures. The results are arbitrary. They cannot reflect, except by chance, the actual circumstances of particular people. The use of average rent and local authority rates means the answers do not reflect the full range of housing costs which people can actually pay.

Current benefit system: average local authority rent and rates
Lone mother with two children aged three and five

Income support	Earnings	Tax	NI	Fares to work	Rent	Rates	Housing benefit	CHB	FSM	FWM	Net weekly spending power
(a) Not working
45·35	—	—	—	—	19·90	8·20	26·46	19·40	2·55	1·83	67·49
(b)(i) Working part-time—earning £15 and £5·00 fares to work
45·35	15·00	0·00	0·00	5·00	19·90	8·20	26·46	19·40	2·55	1·83	77·49
(b)(ii) Working part-time—earning £25 and £5·00 fares to work
35·35	25·00	0·00	0·00	5·00	19·90	8·20	26·46	19·40	2·55	1·83	77·49
(b)(iii) Working part-time—earnings £40 and £5·00 fares to work
20·35	40·00	0·00	0·00	5·00	19·90	8·20	26·46	19·40	2·55	1·83	77·49

Training allowance plus income support	Fares to work	Rent	Rates	Housing benefit	CHB	FSM	FWM	Net weekly spending power
(c) On the new employment training scheme with £5·00 fares to work and £50·00 child care costs
55·35	5·00	19·90	8·20	26·46	19·40	2·55	1·83	72·49

Notes:
1. £50·00 child care costs are paid by Department of Employment direct to the childminder.
2. Lone mother assumed to be over 25 years.
3. Lone mother assumed to have been on basic rate of Income Support prior to acceptance on Employment Training scheme.

Earnings head	Tax	NI	Family credit	Child benefit	Rent	Rent rebates	Rates	Rate rebate	Fares to work	Child care costs	Net weekly spending power
(d) Working full-time with £5·00 fares to work and £50 child care costs
100·00	5·31	7·00	18·83	19·40	19·90	0·00	8·20	0·00	5·00	50·00	42·82
150·00	17·81	13·50	0·00	19·40	19·90	0·00	8·20	0·00	5·00	50·00	54·99
200·00	30·31	18·00	0·00	19·40	19·90	0·00	8·20	0·00	5·00	50·00	87·99

HEALTH

King's College Hospital

13. Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will pay an official visit to King's College hospital, Denmark Hill, to discuss the funding of services.

Mr. Freeman: The South East Thames regional health authority is currently having discussions with Camberwell health authority about its financial allocation for 1989-90. It would not therefore be right for me to visit the hospital specifically to discuss funding at this time.

Junior Doctors

14. Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions he has had with representatives of hospital consultants about the hours worked by junior doctors.

Mr. Mellor: There were detailed discussions between the Health Departments and the profession's representatives, including hospital consultants, before the Government asked health authorities in June 1988 to work towards a reduction in junior doctors' rota commitments. I met representatives of the British Medical Association, including hospital consultants, on 9 January and plan to meet them again next month.

68. Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he has taken to obtain opinions concerning the maximum number of hours which should be worked by junior hospital doctors in any one working week, or continuously; and if he will publish the responses he receives.

Mr. Mellor: In June 1988, following agreement with doctors' representatives, we asked health authorities to work towards the elimination of rotas requiring a junior doctor to be on duty on average more than one night and one weekend in three. We discussed junior doctors' hours at a meeting with representatives of the British Medical Association on 9 January; and we plan to meet them again next month.

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he possesses concerning the number of hours worked by junior hospital doctors, additional to their contracted hours.

Mr. Mellor: In 1985, when average weekly contracted hours of junior hospital doctors were 86, the average weekly hours worked when off duty was one, compared with three in 1981, when average weekly contracted hours were 89.

79. Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the specific proposals and resources offered by his Department to enable health authorities to reduce the hours worked by junior doctors on call in hospitals.

Mr. Mellor: In June 1988 we announced a scheme to reduce the hours of work of junior hospital doctors and dentists. Details were set out in circular EL(88) P82, a copy of which was placed in the Library. I have asked regional health authorities to report to me by 20 January as to the progress being made.

Needle Exchange Scheme

15. Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his policy towards the establishment of needle exchange schemes to reduce the spread of HIV among injecting drug users; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: We have now received the final report of the evaluation of exchange schemes and are urgently considering its implications. We have already issued guidance to health authorities on establishing syringe exchange schemes and estimate that there are currently some 60 to 100 schemes operating in England.

Hospital Waiting Lists

16. Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress he has made in reducing hospital waiting lists in the Mersey region.

Mr. Freeman: Waiting lists in the Mersey region are some 10,000 lower than at March 1979. The number of patients waiting over one year is now down to 6,300—4,000 lower than at March 1979.

62. Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the latest figures for change in throughput of patients in National Health Service hospitals.

Mr. Freeman: The information is given in the table.

In-patient cases treated per available bed per annum (throughput), NHS hospitals, England, 1978, 1986 and 1987-88

Percentage changes between:—

	Throughput
1978	14·5
1986	20·3
1987-88	22·3
1978 and 1987-88	53·4
1986 and 1987-88	9·8

Over the period since 1978 increased throughput has been possible, not only because of greater health authority efficiency, but because new treatments and techniques have meant that stays in hospital are now shorter.

Community Care

17. Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he now expects to make a statement on his Department's plans for implementation of the proposals contained in the Griffiths report on community care.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: We are actively engaged at present in working up our own proposals for the future of community care. I hope to be in a position to bring forward our plans in the near future.

Health Authorities

19. Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will supply his latest estimate of the projected budget deficit in (a) the current financial year and (b) the next financial year of (i) London health authorities and (ii) health authorities.

Mr. Mellor: Health authorities report on their income and expenditure position as part of quarterly monitoring introduced in 1988-89. At the half-year stage, the projected income and expenditure deficit for 1988-89 of the four Thames regional health authorities, together with the eight postgraduate special health authorities, was £23·5 million. The deficit projection for all English health authorities was £59·9 million.

The information relating to the rest of the United Kingdom is a matter for my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Wales, Northern Ireland and my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland. Projections of the income and expenditure position for the next financial year will be provided by health authorities in their short-term programmes.

45. Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he has taken to promote flexible employment conditions in health authorities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: This is one of the key aims of our personnel policies and we have in particular encouraged health authorities to offer more opportunities for flexible working arrangements, part-time working and job sharing.

We have commissioned a senior National Health Service personnel officer to carry out a comprehensive review of conditions of service, including the scope for greater decentralisation. This is now nearing completion and we shall be making full use of the findings in deciding on further action in this field.

Nurses (Pay)

21. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on his Department's evidence to the pay review body on plans for regional variations in nurses' pay.

Mr. Mellor: The Health Department's written evidence to the review body which we published in October says that there is scope for a more flexible system of pay to respond to geographical and skill shortages. We have since asked the Review Body to consider setting aside around £5 million within their overall recommendations for a pilot exercise in supplementing national rates of basic pay where this is deemed appropriate on recruitment and retention grounds.

Staff Regrading

23. Mrs. Maureen Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many clinical regrading appeals have been considered to date; and what percentage of those have been regraded as a result.

Mr. Mellor: We do not hold this information centrally.

37. Dr. Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the total number of nurse regrading appeals which have been made.

94. Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many appeals against nurses' gradings have been heard by health authorities; and how many appeals remain to be considered.

Mr. Mellor: We do not hold this information centrally.

50. Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many representations he has received about midwives' pay since the new pay structure was introduced.

Mr. Mellor: The Department has received some 400 written representations since the implementation process was completed. In addition, my right hon. and learned Friend met the president and the general secretary of the Royal College of Midwives on 7 December and had a friendly and useful discussion with them.

76. Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the progress being made on nurses' appeals over their recent regrading.

Mr. Mellor: I refer the hon. Member to my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State's reply to the hon. Member for Ynys Môn (Mr. Jones) earlier today.

78. Ms. Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many representations he has received concerning the nurses' regrading review.

Mr. Mellor: The Department has received some 2,300 written representations since the implementation process was completed. In addition, we had friendly and constructive meetings with the president and the general secretary of the Royal College of Nursing on 5 December, and the president and general secretary of the Royal College of Midwives on 7 December.

Hospital Doctors

24. Mr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospital doctors there were in 1978 and in 1986; and what proportion of them in each year were women.

Mr. Mellor: In 1978 and 1986 there were 38,527 and 43,992 hospital doctors respectively in England. Of these, 19·4 per cent. in 1978 and 24·8 per cent. in 1986 were women.

Coventry and Warwickshire Hospital

25. Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Health why letters from general practitioners referring patients with non-urgent surgical conditions are presently being stockpiled by the medical records officer at the Coventry and Warwickshire hospital; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: With the help of central funding under our waiting list initiative in 1987-88, Coventry reduced the number of patients who had waited more than a year for general surgery from 355 in March 1987 to 217 in March 1988. Provisional data indicated a further reduction by September 1988 to 146, but this put pressure on the hospital's budget. Combined with the pressure on beds from urgent medical conditions over winter and high staff sickness particularly among nurses, this has led to a reduction in activity since October, and some 200 non-urgent out-patient cases referred by general practitioners to surgeons—5 per cent. of their normal workload—have not yet been given appointments. The district general manager is discussing with the surgeons how best to schedule appointments for all patients who have not yet been seen.

NHS Review

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement concerning his plans to extend the mechanism of the internal market in the National Health Service.

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to announce the results of the review of the National Health Service.

26. Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to allow hospitals to opt out of the present National Health Service management structure.

29. Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to make an announcement on the Government's review of the National Health Service.

36. Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to publish his White Paper on the future of the National Health Service; and if he will make a statement.

38. Ms. Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will provide details of proposals currently being considered which would have the effect of some district general and other hospitals opting out of the structure of the National Health Service.

47. Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement about the implications for the distribution of hospitals in the National Health Service of measures to promote increased competition.

52. Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to publish the findings of the review of the National Health Service.

56. Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he intends to publish the results of the current review of the National Health Service; and if he will make a statement.

85. Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has for experiments in the delivery of health care to National Health Service customers.

88. Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to publish the results of the National Health Service review.

90. Mr. Roger King: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the National Health Service review.

91. Mr. Neil Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to publish his White Paper on the future of the National Health Service; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: I refer my hon. Friends and the hon. Members to the reply given by my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State to the hon. Members for Nottingham, North (Mr. Allen), for Western Isles (Mr. MacDonald), for Hornchurch (Mr. Squire), for Sheffield, Hallam (Mr. Blunkett) and for Suffolk, South (Mr. Yeo) earlier today.

67. Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has for ensuring greater cost-effectiveness in the National Health Service.

Mr. Mellor: The NHS is not a business, but it has to be more business-like. There is still a huge gulf between the best and the worst in terms of efficiency, customer choice, standards, good management and clear decision-taking. The Government intend to spread the best qualities of the enterprise economy more widely throughout the NHS, and we shall be bringing forward proposals to this end shortly.

Abortions

27. Mr. Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy to instruct health authorities to take disciplinary action against staff who do not take all possible actions to preserve the life of foetuses born alive after attempted abortion operations.

Mr. Mellor: It is for health authorities to determine within well-established disciplinary procedures action to be taken in cases involving professional misconduct or incompetence.

34. Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of abortions performed in England in the latest year for which figures are available were performed because the child was likely to have been born severely handicapped.

Mr. Freeman: There were 170,197 notifications of abortions which were carried out in England in 1987 under the Abortion Act 1967, of which 1,826 (1·07 per cent.) mentioned ground 4 (there is a substantial risk that if the child were born it would suffer from such physical or mental abnormalities as to be seriously handicapped).

35. Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he has any plans to seek to amend the Abortion Act 1967.

Mr. Freeman: Like their predecessors of both parties, the Government consider that amendments to the 1967 Act are a matter for private Members' legislation.

41. Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on how many occasions during the last 12 months, for which figures are available, officials of his Department have visited private abortion clinics licensed by his Department in order to monitor the implementation of the Abortion Act 1967.

Mr. Freeman: In 1988 the Department's medical, nursing and administrative officers made 79 visits of inspection to places approved under the Abortion Act 1967.

42. Mr. Ashby: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many recent representations he has received from right hon. and hon. Members urging more thorough monitoring of the Infant Life (Preservation) Act.

Mr. Freeman: We have had no such representations.

57. Mr. Ken Hargreaves: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he has as to the numbers of abortions performed by individual doctors; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: I regret that this information is not available centrally.

60. Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the most common technique for performing abortions after 18 weeks currently used in National Health Service abortion centres; and what that technique involves.

71. Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the most common technique for performing abortions after 18 weeks currently used in private abortion clinics.

Mr. Freeman: The most common technique for performing abortions carried out under the Abortion Act 1967 after 18 completed weeks gestation in both NHS and non-NHS premises in England and Wales is the use of prostaglandins, either alone or with other agents. This technique involves the introduction of prostaglandins within the uterus.

81. Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he has yet taken any steps to implement the 1973 recommendation of the Select Committee on Abortion that there should be no financial links between doctors and agencies who counsel women in difficult pregnancies and the centres in which abortions may subsequently be performed upon those women.

Mr. Freeman: We have no plans to alter the long-standing administrative conditions governing financial links between doctors and agencies who refer women for abortions and the private sector clinics in which such abortions are performed.

86. Mr. Dickens: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he has as to how many foetuses born alive following abortion operations survived in the latest year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: No information is collected at birth registration which distinguishes between foetuses born alive following abortion operations and other live births. Hence, no information would be available on the survival of such foetuses. The notification of abortions carried out under the Abortion Act 1967 does not require information about the outcome of the aborted foetus to be recorded.

Mr. Hind: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many abortions were carried out in the United Kingdom in 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: Complete statistics are not yet available for abortions performed in the United Kingdom for 1988. The table shows the latest figures for England and Wales for half of 1988, and figures for the constituent parts of the United Kingdom for the whole of 1987. The Abortion Act 1967 does not apply in Northern Ireland.

Notifications of abortions carried out under the Abortion Act 1967 in the United Kingdom and its constituents parts 1987, 1988

Area	1987	March and June quarters 1988[1]
England and Wales	174,276	92,715
Scotland	9,351	n/a
United Kingdom	183,627	n/a

[1] Provisional—includes notifications received by end of August.

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of all abortions performed under the terms of the Abortion Act 1967 have been performed (a) in the case of a pregnancy resulting from rape or (b) in emergency to save the life of the mother.

Mr. Freeman: The total number of notifications of legal abortions, to resident and non-resident women, carried out under the Abortion Act 1967, from 27 April 1968 to 30 June 1988, is 2,899,405[1]. Of these, 130[1] (0·004 per cent.) were performed in an emergency in order to save the life of the pregnant woman.

As rape is not in itself a statutory ground for performing an abortion under the 1967 Act, and is not required to be specified on the notification form by the certifying doctor, the exact number of notifications of abortions associated with rape is not known. However, in some cases the information is volunteered, and arrangements have been made to code separately and analyse all notifications forms which mention rape from 1 January 1987. Of the 266,991 notifications received for the period January 1987 to June 1988 inclusive, 45 (0·02 per cent.) mentioned rape. Earlier, but non-comparable, data were collected clerically and published for the years 1968-73, in table 12 of the Registrar General's "Statistical Review, Supplement on Abortion", copies of which are in the Library. The reliability of these earlier data is uncertain.

[1] The total number of abortions is based on notifications received (1968 to 1980) and on occurrences (1981 to 1986). Data for 1988 are provisional.

Hospices

28. Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the number is of terminally ill patients now being cared for in hospices; what the figure was for five years ago; and what has been the change in Government funding for hospice projects over the same period.

Mr. Freeman: Information is not available in the form requested. We are, however, currently collecting information from health authorities on the estimated demand for specialist services for the terminally ill and on their arrangements for the financial support of voluntary hospices.

Smoking (Health Warnings)

2. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will provide details of the options considered by his Department for changing the wording of Government health warnings in relation to smoking and health.

Mr. Freeman: Health warnings are included on some tobacco products in the United Kingdom by virtue of a voluntary agreement with the tobacco industry. We will seek renegotiation of this agreement and new health warnings will be considered. The Commission of the European Communities has also brought forward proposals on tobacco labelling including health warnings, which are at present under discussion.

30. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on his proposals for strengthening Government health warnings on cigarette packets.

Mr. Freeman: Health warnings are included on packets of cigarettes and hand rolling tobacco by virtue of a voluntary agreement with the tobacco industry. That agreement will stand at least until 31 October 1989. We intend to seek renegotiation of the agreement and new health warnings will be one of the matters which will be considered.

Cancer Screening

31. Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will report on progress in setting up the breast cancer screening programme.

Mr. Freeman: I am pleased to announce the arrangements for the provision of breast cancer screening services to all district health authorities in England. The service will provide routine screening for women aged 50 to 64 and for older women on request. The list shows both the first regional centres which were established early last year and the further centres and consortia which regions plan to set up by 1990 to serve the remaining population, although these may be subject to slight alteration as proposals are finalised. Against each name is a list of the district health authorities which it will serve. In some cases more than one unit will operate from the base named. Those centres which to date have become operational are marked with an asterisk. Equitable access to services will be ensured by the provision, where appropriate, of a combination of static and mobile facilities. Detailed information about local arrangements can be obtained through regional health authorities.

We are very pleased with the commitment which health authorities and their staff are showing towards this programme which will make a significant contribution to the health of the women in this country.

Breast cancer screening service

Screening centre or consortium	Districts served
Northern Regional Health Authority
Gateshead*	Gateshead
	Durham
	South Tyneside
	Sunderland
Newcastle	Newcastle
	North Tyneside
	Northumberland
	North West Durham
North Tees	North Tees
	South Tees
	Darlington
	Hartlepool
	South West Durham
West Cumbria	West Cumbria
	South Cumbria
	East Cumbria
Yorkshire Regional Health Authority
Huddersfield*	Huddersfield
	Calderdale
	Dewsbury
Hull	Hull
	East Yorkshire
	Grimsby
	Scunthorpe
York	York
	Scarborough
	Northallerton
Bradford	Airedale
	Bradford
Leeds	Leeds Eastern
	Leeds Western
	Pontefract
	Wakefield
	Harrogate
Trent Regional Health Authority
Nottingham*	Nottingham
	Central Nottinghamshire
	Bassetlaw
Leicester	Leicestershire
Lincolnshire*	North Lincolnshire
	South Lincolnshire
South Yorkshire	Barnsley
	Doncaster
	Rotherham
Derbyshire	North Derbyshire
	Southern Derbyshire
Sheffield	Sheffield
East Anglian Regional Health Authority
Peterborough and West Norfolk*	West Norfolk and Wisbech
	Peterborough
Suffolk	East Suffolk
	West Suffolk
	Great Yarmouth and Waveney (part)
Norwich	Norwich
	Great Yarmouth and Waveney (part)
Cambridge and Huntingdon	Cambridge
	Huntingdon
North West Thames Regional Health Authority
Charing Cross Hospital	Riverside
	Hounslow and Spelthorne
	Ealing
	Hillingdon

Screening centre or consortium	Districts served
Edgware General Hospital*	Barnet Harrow Parkside South West Hertfordshire
Luton and Dunstable Hospital	North West Hertfordshire North Bedfordshire South Bedfordshire North Hertfordshire East Hertfordshire
North East Thames Regional Health Authority
Epping*	West Essex Redbridge
Bloomsbury*	Bloomsbury Hampstead Islington
East London	City and Hackney Newham Tower Hamlets
Chelmsford and Colchester	North East Essex Mid Essex
Whipps Cross	Waltham Forrest
Barking, Havering and Brentwood	Barking, Havering and Brentwood
North Middlesex	Enfield Haringey
South Essex	Southend Basildon and Thurrock
South East Thames Regional Health Authority
Camberwell*	Camberwell West Lambeth Lewisham and North Southwark Greenwich Bexley Bromley
Canterbury	Canterbury and Thanet South East Kent Maidstone Tunbridge Wells Medway Dartford and Gravesham
East Sussex	Brighton Eastbourne Hastings
South West Thames Regional Health Authority
Guildford (1)*	Mid Surrey North West Surrey South West Surrey
(2)*	West Surrey and North East Hants. East Surrey
Worthing	Worthing Chichester Mid Downs
Wandsworth (1)	Wandsworth Croydon Kingston and Esher Merton and Sutton
(2)	Richmond, Twickenham and Roehampton

Screening centre or consortium	Districts served
Wessex Regional Health Authority
Southampton*	Southampton and South West Hampshire Salisbury
Isle of Wight*	Isle of Wight
Portsmouth*	Portsmouth and South East Hampshire
Dorset	East Dorset West Dorset
Bath/Swindon	Bath Swindon
Winchester/Basingstoke	Winchester Basingstoke and North Hampshire
Oxford Regional Health Authority
Aylesbury*	Aylesbury Vale
Northampton	Northampton
Wycombe	Wycombe
Milton Keynes	Milton Keynes
Kettering	Kettering
Reading*	West Berkshire
Windsor	East Berkshire
Oxford/Banbury	Oxfordshire
South Western Regional Health Authority
Cornwall*	Cornwall and Isles of Scilly
West Devon	Plymouth North Devon
East Devon	Exeter Torbay
Somerset	Somerset
Avon	Bristol and Weston Frenchay Southmead
Gloucestershire	Gloucester Cheltenham and District
West Midlands Regional Health Authority
Stoke-on-Trent (1)*	North Staffordshire
(2)	Mid Staffordshire South East Staffordshire
Coventry (1)	Coventry North Warwickshire
(2)	Rugby South Warwickshire Solihull
Dudley	Dudley Wolverhampton
Walsall	Walsall Sandwell
Birmingham (1)	North Birmingham East Birmingham West Birmingham
Birmingham (2)	Central Birmingham South Birmingham

Screening centre or consortium	Districts served
Bromsgrove General Community Hospital Worcester
	Hereford
	Kidderminster and District
	Bromsgrove and Redditch
Shrewsbury	Shropshire
Mersey Regional Health Authority
Liverpool (1)*	Liverpool
(2)	Southport and Formby
	South Sefton
	St. Helen's and Knowsley (part)
Warrington	Warrington
	Halton
	St. Helen's and Knowsley (part)
Crewe	Crewe
Macclesfield	Macclesfield
Wirral	Wirral
Chester	Chester
North Western Regional Health Authority
South Manchester*	North Manchester
	Central Manchester
	South Manchester
	Stockport
	Tameside and Glossop
	Oldham
	Trafford
	Salford
Wigan*	Wigan
	West Lancashire
	Chorley and South Ribble
Bolton*	Bolton
	Bury
	Rochdale
North East Sector	Blackburn, Hyndburn and Ribble Valley
	Burnley, Pendle and Rossendale
North West Sector	Preston
	Blackpool, Wyre and Fylde
	Lancaster

Dental Treatment

32. Mr. Janman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many courses of dental treatment were carried out in 1978 and in 1986; and how many dentists there were in each year.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is set out in the table.

General dental services—England

Year	Number of courses of treatment 000s	Number of dentists
1978	27,105	11,919
1986	32,279	14,516

Hepatitis B

33. Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received for additional funds to meet the cost to district health authorities of funding of vaccination of National Health Service employees against Hepatitis B.

Mr. Freeman: Written representations on behalf of Burnley, Pendle and Rossendale community health council have been received from three hon. Members, including one from the hon. Member himself. I have replied in writing to the hon. Member.

In-patients

39. Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people were treated as in-patients in 1978 and how many in the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Freeman: In the financial year 1987-88, 6,619,354 in-patient cases were treated in England. This was 23 per cent. more than the 5,370,319 cases treated in 1978.

Family Practitioner Committee

40. Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the powers and responsibilities of family practitioner committees.

Mr. Mellor: The present statutory powers and responsibilities of family practitioner committees are set out in the following statutes:

National Health Service Act 1987 Chapter 49
Health and Social Security Act 1984 Chapter 48
NHS Functions (Directions to Authorities and Administration Arrangements) Regulations 1989. SI1989 No. 51
NHS England and Wales. The Family Practitioner Committees (Membership and Procedure) Regulations 1985. SI1985 No. 213
NHS (General Medical and Pharmaceutical Services) Regulations 1974. SI1974 No. 160
NHS (Family Practitioner Committees Supply of Goods) Regulations 1974. SI1974 No. 191
NHS (Service Committees and Tribunals) Regulations 1974. SI1974 No. 455
NHS (Charges for Drugs and Appliances) Regulations 1980. SI1980 No. 1503
NHS (General Dental Services) Regulations 1973. SI1973 No. 1468
NHS (General Ophthalmic Services) Regulations 1986. SI1986 No. 975
NHS (Payment for Optical Appliances) Regulations 1986. SI1986 No. 976

These are augmented by administrative circulars from time to time issued by my Department.

Competitive Tendering

44. Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on his Department's record in encouraging local health authorities to put their services out to tender.

Mr. Freeman: The competitive tendering initiative launched five years ago concentrated on domestic, catering and laundry services. Virtually all these services have now been subjected to the tendering process. The initiative has generated not only substantial annual savings (almost £110 million) but has provided improved specification of services, more flexible provision, tighter budgetary control and improved productivity. In the light of these perceived benefits a number of health authorities have extended, or are planning to extend, the range of services subject to the tendering process, for example portering and security services, estate services, computer services and supplies distribution. Over £1·2 billion of National Health Service services are now subject to routine competition. We shall continue to encourage health authorities to consider competitive tendering as a means of improving efficiency in the way services are delivered thus maximising the resources available for patient care.

Rural Maternity Units

46. Mr. Latham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what response he has made to the representations which he received regarding the proposals of the Leicestershire health authority to close rural maternity units; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: This is at present a matter for the district health authority with the region following consultations on the proposals issued last September. The standard procedure in relation to the closure of health facilities requires Ministers to make the final decision if agreement cannot be reached locally among the community health council and the health authorities. My hon. Friend will appreciate that it would be inappropriate for me to comment at this stage.

Hospital Consultants

48. Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to increase the number of hospital consultants; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: Health authorities are responsible for determining the number of consultants they require to meet service needs. Their strategic plans indicate an annual increase in the number of consultants which averages 2 per cent. per annum and regions will be held to account for achieving these plans. In addition to this, "Achieving a Balance", a 10-year plan to reform hospital medical staffing, introduced specific measures to give a further boost to the number of consultant posts.

Community Care

49. Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to complete his consideration of the recommendations of the Griffiths report on community care; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he now expects to make a statement on implementation of the recommendations of the Griffiths report.

Mr. Mellor: We are actively engaged at present in working up our own proposals for the future of community care. I am mindful of concern that we should reach a conclusion as soon as possible. We hope to be in a position to bring forward our plans in the near future.

Food Quality

51. Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received from consumer health organisations about the impact on health of the quality or contents of food available in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Freeman: We have not received any such representations. The Secretary of State for Health and the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food jointly consider all proposals for regulations under the Food Act and are required to consult widely before making such regulations. The consumer organisations are among those whose views are sought and our officials have frequent contacts with these organisations.

NHS Patients (Private Hospitals)

53. Mr. Grocott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the cost to the National Health Service of paying private hospitals to treat National Health Service patients in the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Mellor: The summarised accounts of health authorities for 1987-88 record total expenditure on contractual hospitals and homes of £52·4 million. At this stage the figure is provisional as it is subject to audit.

Hospitals (Resource Management)

54. Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the results of the pilot projects on resource management in hospitals.

Mr. Mellor: The resource management experiments will be formally evaluated by the Joint Consultants Committee and the NHS Management Board, the joint sponsors of the initiative, in October 1989.

Piloting at the reference sites is still continuing. The work to date has already demonstrated the significance of a number of elements. These include the importance of good quality medical records data; the value associated with involving doctors and nurses in decision making and giving them a sense of ownership of their data; the importance of involving all staff in the projects and of good quality local management; the desirability of introducing nurse management and other information systems and the feeding back to managers and clinicians of existing information. These and other issues were discussed at a meeting with RHA chairmen on 18 January.

Wheelchairs

55. Mr. Flannery: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he has received any representations during the past year for more battery powered wheelchairs for the chronically disabled.

Mr. Mellor: These are matters for the Disablement Services Authority, to which the hon. Member should address questions.

Sex-change Operations

58. Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give the number of sex-change operations performed by the National Health Service, both male to female and female to male, for each of the last 20 years, giving the cost to the Exchequer in each case.

Mr. Freeman: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Congleton (Mrs. Winterton) on 1 March 1988, at column 557.

Wessex Regional Health Authority

59. Mr. David Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he plans next to meet the chairman of the Wessex regional health authority.

Mr. Mellor: I met the Wessex chairman at the region's ministerial review on 10 January. My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State and I saw all chairmen on 18 January and will expect to meet Mr. Buchanan again at our next regular meeting with regional chairmen on 14-15 March.

NHS Expenditure

61. Mr. David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health by what proportion spending on the National Health Service has increased above the rate of inflation since 1979; and what is his estimate of the likely figure when the additional resources he has announced for the coming year are taken into account.

Mr. Mellor: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Harrow, West (Mr. Hughes) on 14 December 1988, at column 597.

Cook-chill Catering

63. Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he intends to make available the amended recommendations concerning the introduction of the cook-chill meals system into hospitals under the charge of the Wakefield district health authority; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Wakefield district health authority is responsible for arrangements for the introduction of the cook-chill meals system in hospitals under its charge and there is no reason why it should not introduce the system forthwith provided it ensures that the existing departmental guidelines on pre-cooked chilled foods are followed. Updated guidelines are nearly ready for publication, but there is no reason to delay the use of cook-chill equipment while we are waiting for publication.

69. Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to be in a position to publish his Department's revised guidelines on pre-cooked meals in catering, chilled and frozen.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The updated guidelines are nearly ready for publication.

Hospitals (Staffing Review)

64. Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will state the number of regional steering groups, concerned with the safety net review of hospital medical staffing, which have issued guidance to their respective district working parties in accordance with his suggested timetable, or later, respectively.

Mr. Mellor: We do not hold this information centrally. We have requested an interim report on progress in carrying out the review of juniors' hours and the safety-net from health authorities by later this month.

Hypothermia

65. Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give the latest estimate of the number of deaths in the United Kingdom from hypothermia and cold-related diseases in the last winter period for which figures are available.

Mr. Freeman: The latest complete winter period for which figures are available is the winter of 1987-88. The provisional number of deaths registered in the United Kingdom with any mention of hypothermia on the death certificate, irrespective of whether it appeared as the underlying cause of death or did not, for the period October 1987 to March 1988 inclusive, is 449.

Transplants

66. Mr. Richard Page: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, what is being done to improve the supply of donor organs for transplants.

Mr. Freeman: We have recently issued detailed guidance to health authorities on this subject. For further information, I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Uxbridge (Mr. Shersby) on 13 December, at column 555.

We are also carrying out a continuing publicity programme. My reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Skipton and Ripon (Mr. Curry) today gives further details.

89. Mr. Curry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will report progress on the current campaign on donor cards.

Mr. Freeman: The Department's donor card campaign is continuing to progress well. The range of outlets where the cards are available has been expanded and there has been a substantial increase in the number of cards distributed compared with last year.

"Readers Digest" is producing and distributing over 5 million donor cards in its February issue at no cost to the Department.

A video for transplant co-ordinators displays and a new range of leaflets will be launched in the spring.

Norwich Health Authority

70. Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what extra funds have been made available to the Norwich health authority during the past year.

Mr. Mellor: Allocations to district health authorities are a matter for the regional health authorities concerned. However, I understand that in 1988-89 the East Anglian regional health authority made available an additional £6,145,000 to the Norwich health authority. Norwich health authority is also to receive a further sum of about £1·4 million to meet the cost of the nurses regrading exercise.

"Look After Your Heart"

72. Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he has plans for a media campaign on "Look after your Heart".

Mr. Freeman: A major publicity campaign began at the end of December and is planned to continue throughout 1989. It includes national and regional television advertising, and a series of advertisements in the national press. The campaign will complement a comprehensive programme of activity involving industry and commerce, local groups, primary health care activity and special promotions.

North-West Region

73. Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what additional resources have been provided to health authorities in the north-west over the past 18 months.

Mr. Mellor: Gross revenue expenditure in North Western regional health authority increased in 1987-88 by 8·7 per cent. in cash and 3·2 per cent. in real terms over the previous year. The region's initial revenue cash limit for 1988-89 was £1,038·8 million. Subsequent in-year additions have been made for:

	£ million
Review Body pay awards	53·5
Waiting lists	2·6
AIDS	0·5
Other services	0·4

As a result expenditure this year is expected to rise by over 9 per cent. compared with 1987-88, a real terms increase of some 3 per cent.

The allocation of funds to districts within the region is a matter for the regional health authority.

Yorkshire Regional Health Authority

74. Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he next intends to meet the chairman of the Yorkshire regional health authority; and what he expects to discuss.

Mr. Mellor: I last met him on Wednesday 18 January and I expect to do so again shortly. A wide range of issues were discussed.

87. Mr. Kirkhope: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made on major hospital building schemes costing more than £1 million in the Yorkshire regional health authority area.

Mr. Freeman: Information held centrally shows that last year six schemes, each costing more than £1 million, were completed by the Yorkshire regional health authority, including phase 1 of the redevelopment of Staincliffe district general hospital. A further 42 schemes are at various stages of planning, design and construction including major developments at Scunthorpe, St. James hospital, Leeds and St. Lukes hospital, Bradford.

Health Education Authority

77. Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he last met the director of the Health Education Authority; and what subjects were discussed.

Mr. Freeman: My right hon. and learned Friend, the Secretary of State and my predecessor the hon. Member for Derbyshire, South (Mrs. Currie) last met the chief executive of the Health Education Authority on 8 December 1988 to discuss the "Look After Your Heart" campaign.

Abortions and Infertility Treatment

80. Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy to require health authorities to provide separate facilities for women having abortions and those receiving infertility treatment in National Health Service hospitals; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: Provision of health services is a matter for individual health authorities in the light of local needs and priorities. We would, however, expect health authorities to consider the individual needs of patients, in this respect, as far as is possible.

Nurses (Training)

83. Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he will make a statement on post-registration training courses for nurses.

Mr. Mellor: The chief executive of the National Health Service Management Board will be writing shortly to health authority general managers asking them to submit bids for pump-priming new developments in post-registration, nurse training in the high technology specialties.

This follows a survey by the management board of training and development in the high technology specialties. The results of the survey are being sent to health authorities and a copy will be placed in the Library. In addition, the English National Board for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting has been asked to draw up proposals to review the structure of post-registration training in order to widen access and reduce any duplication or overlap between different courses.

Some £4 million will be available in 1989-90 for these complementary activities. This demonstrates the importance we attach to equipping nurses with the skills they need in an increasingly complex health care environment.

Royal College of Midwives

84. Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he next expects to meet officers of the Royal College of Midwives.

Mr. Mellor: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State had a friendly and useful discussion with the president and the general secretary of the Royal College of Midwives on 7 December. No date was set for a future meeting, but we have regular meetings with the royal college to discuss a wide range of issues and I would expect and hope that this practice will continue.

Drugs Campaign

92. Mr. Franks: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will report on progress on the current campaign against drugs.

Mr. Freeman: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by my hon. and learned Friend the Minister for Health to my hon. Friend the Member for Nuneaton (Mr. Stevens) on 13 December 1988, at column 550.

Stillborn Children (Parents)

93. Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what attention is given to the emotional needs of the parents of stillborn children.

Mr. Freeman: The 1985 Maternity Services Advisory Committee report "Maternity Care In Action", which was commended to all health authorities in England and Wales, emphasises the crucial importance of helping parents of stillborn children to come to terms with their loss and grief. It gives detailed guidance on the ways in which this can be done. A copy of the report is available in the Library.

The Stillbirth and Neonatal Death Society (SANDS), which has received £75,000 in funding from the Department in the last three years, also makes a valuable contribution by raising awareness of the needs of parents.

Mentally Handicapped Persons

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received concerning the transfer of control of care for mentally handicapped persons in Bexley to Social Policy Management Services Ltd.

Mr. Freeman: None.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what guidance he issues to local authorities concerning the transfer of responsibility for care of mentally handicapped persons to private companies;

(2) what is his policy on the privatisation of local authority services for the care of mentally handicapped persons.

Mr. Freeman: No specific guidance has been issued. The Department encourages local and health authorities, which have statutory responsibility for providing care for mentally handicapped people, to work closely together with the private and voluntary sectors to develop a fully integrated range of services tailored to the specific needs of mentally handicapped people in the most cost-effective way.

Docklands

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of extra demand for health care consequent upon the development of the docklands area of the London borough of Newham.

Mr. Mellor: It is for health authorities to plan local health services in the light of changing local needs and circumstances.

We understand that Newham health authority and the City and East London FPCs, which are responsible for health provision in the docklands area of the London borough of Newham, are working with the London docklands development corporation to ensure that it is able to take account of future demand for health care. The hon. Member may wish to approach the chairmen of Newham health authority and City and East London FPCs for further information.

NHS Property

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what basis National Health Service land was valued before and after the two dates given in his reply to the hon. Member for Norfolk, North Official Report, 16 November 1987, column 441, 27 November 1987, columns 319-21 and 19 April 1988, column 382, and upon whose advice; and what would be the notional value of this National Health Service estate with planning consent.

Mr. Freeman: My predecessor's reply of 16 November 1987, at column 439, gave the 1985 existing use value of the NHS estate (£12·7 billion). The existing use value is the summation of the depreciated replacement cost of the buildings and the value of the land on which they stand. The 1987 revaluation increased this figure to £18·1 billion.

My predecessor's reply of 19 April 1988, at column 382 gave the provisional open market value of the estate following the 1987 revaluation. The final calculation of this value gave a figure of £7·4 billion. The open market value, which assumes the most likely planning consent, represents the opportunity cost of the land and buildings.

All valuations are carried out by the chief valuers office of the Inland Revenue.

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, if he will list the receipts from the sales of National Health Service mental hospital property and land since 1979 by regional health authorities in relation to the total receipt of sales of National Health Service property and land, by region, giving anticipated receipts similarly classified for future years.

Mr. Freeman: The most recent information on receipts from sales of surplus NHS property and land by regional health authority was given by my hon. and learned Friend the Minister of State for Health to the hon. Member for Mansfield (Mr. Meale) on 19 December 1988. Information is not routinely collected on sales of surplus NHS property and land defined by functional group and to collect it by means of a special exercise would involve disproportionate cost. Regional health authorities' forecasts of sales proceeds for the current and next three years are set out in the table.

Forecast-receipts from the sale of NHS properties and land

£ million

Region	1988-89	1989-90	1990-91	1991-92
Northern	5·3	2·2	1·3	0·8
Yorkshire	13·5	14·0	0·9	4·2
Trent	17·2	11·0	3·6	2·9
East Anglian	11·0	3·0	3·1	2·5
North West Thames	45·2	54·0	37·2	50·0
North East Thames	71·0	58·0	22·0	44·8
South East Thames	40·7	28·0	21·0	21·0
South West Thames	25·0	[1]	[1]	[1]
Wessex	20·5	10·0	5·0	5·0
Oxford	17·6	1·0	3·2	0·1
South Western	21·0	19·7	3·0	4·4
West Midlands	11·3	3·0	5·7	5·2
Mersey	8·8	6·7	3·6	1·6
North Western	24·7	2·5	0·7	[1]
SHAs	4·2	22·5	nil	nil
England	337·0	[2]235·6	[2]110·3	[2]142·5

[1] Not available.
[2] Provisional figure.

Departmental Staff (Pay)

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the number of staff in his Department, by grade, in receipt of local pay additions outside London and the south-east economic planning region; what are the different amounts paid to staff by grade; whether this figure varies due to location; what qualifying period of scale-related criteria is used; and whether this varies by location.

Mr. Mellor: There are no Department of Health staff in receipt of local pay additions outside London and the south-east economic planning region.

Adverse Drug Reaction

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many doctors and dentists used the yellow card adverse reaction reporting procedure on (a) one occasion, (b) two occasions, (c) three occasions, (d) four occasions and (e) five occasions or more in each of the years between 1985 and 1988;

(2) how many doctors and dentists made adverse drug reaction reports to the Committee on Safety of Medicines in each of the years between 1985 and 1988, inclusive;

(3) how many adverse drug reaction reports from doctors and dentists were received by the Committee on Safety of Medicines in each of the years 1985 to 1988.

Mr. Mellor: The total number of adverse drug reaction reports received by the Committee on Safety of Medicines in each of the years 1985-88 was as follows:

	Number
1985	12,652
1986	15,527
1987	16,431
1988	19,022

We do not record the numbers of individual doctors and dentists who report adverse drug reactions to the CSM and this information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Malignant Neoplasms

89. Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the reply of 17 January to the hon. Member for Southend East, Official Report, columns 114-15, why no figures on newly diagnosed cases of malignant neoplasms in persons under 15 years of age are available since the year 1984; and when he expects the figures for 1985 and later years to be available.

Mr. Freeman: The Office of Population Censuses and Surveys publishes annual cancer statistics using data collected by 12 regional registries which are funded by the regional health authorities.

The target for the publication of data for individuals diagnosed in 1985 was the middle of 1988. In practice the timing of publication is largely governed by when the slowest regional cancer registry provided OPCS with data. It should be borne in mind that regional registries exist to produce data for local management and research purposes as well as supplying data for the national cancer scheme. They sometimes have local priorities which conflict with the timely supply of data to OPCS.

OPCS is currently waiting for data from two registries on approximately 8,000 individuals diagnosed with cancer in 1985. Information on these cases is expected to be received by the end of February and we plan to publish the 1985 cancer registration volume in the summer of this year.

Doctors (Complaints)

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent representations he has received about the procedures available to investigate complaints against doctors; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The Government's proposals for changing the complaints procedures for the family practitioner services were published in the White Paper "Promoting Better Health". The aim of the proposals is to simplify and streamline procedures and to recast the governing regulations as a whole in simpler and plainer language. Consultations with interested bodies have not yet been completed.

Directions on the procedures for complaints by hospital patients were issued to health authorities in June 1988. No representations have been received.

Osteoporosis

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he has any plans to introduce a national screening programme for women at risk from osteoporosis.

Mr. Freeman: There are at present no plans to introduce a national screening programme for women at risk from osteoporosis. Further research is required on the appropriate techniques to use for screening and which criteria should be used to identify those at highest risk. The Medical Research Council, which receives its grant-in-aid from the Department of Education and Science, has set up a specialist group which is considering this question and we shall keep developments under review.

Imported Food

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many prosecutions have been made for breaches of the Imported Food Regulations 1984.

Mr. Freeman: This information is not collected centrally.

EMPLOYMENT

Earnings

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many weekly or monthly paid people in the United Kingdom are estimated to earn in excess of (a) £20,000, (b) £25,000 and (c) £50,000 per annum.

Mr. Nicholls: The latest estimates available from the Inland Revenue's survey of personal incomes for the tax year 1986-87 are as follows:

Income from employment in excess of £	Numbers (thousands)
20,000	347
25,000	298
50,000	38

Staff (Pay)

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) what is the number of staff in the Training

Agency, by grade, in receipt of local pay additions outside London and the south-east economic planning region; what are the different amounts paid to staff, by grade; whether this figure varies due to location; what qualifying period of scale-related criteria is used; and whether this varies by location;

(2) what is the number of staff in his Department, by grade, in receipt of local pay additions outside London and the south-east economic planning region; what are the different amounts paid to staff, by grade; whether this figure varies due to location; what qualifying period of scale-related criteria is used; and whether this varies by location.

Mr. Cope: Neither the Employment Department nor the Training Agency make any local pay additions to staff outside London and the south-east planning region.

Employment Training

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will extend the employment training scheme to include the sponsorship of young persons wishing to become commercial airline pilots.

Mr. Nicholls: There are no plans to make commercial pilot training available in employment training. The Air Transport Industry Training Association already carries out comprehensive training to meet its own requirements, including a thorough selection and assessment process.

Opencast Mining

Mr. Batiste: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when the code of practice setting out national standards for opencast mining in the vicinity of water courses will be published.

Mr. Nicholls: It is not possible to give a final date for the publication of the code of practice on the stability of excavated slopes at opencast coal sites, but it is expected this summer.

Small Businesses

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what measures he is taking to ensure that small businesses are well managed and that, where appropriate, managers employed in large businesses are encouraged to join small businesses.

Mr. Lee: The Training Agency currently supports a wide range of programmes aimed at improving the business and management skills of small firms and the small firms service offers advice to large numbers of owner/managers. In the White Paper "Employment for the 1990s" published last month, I announced plans to bring these together under the Training Agency and to establish training and enterprise councils. These developments will ensure that advice and training are closely linked, relevant to the business objectives of owner/managers and reflect local needs.

Managers in large businesses may be encouraged to join small firms by the strength of the small firms sector and the range of encouragement to enterprise that we have introduced.

Viraj Mendis

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what information he has as to any claims by, and payments made to, Mr. Viraj Mendis for unemployment benefit since 1973.

Mr. Lee: My officials are unable to trace records of Mr. Mendis's benefit claims before December 1980. I can confirm that although Mr. Mendis made a number of claims for unemployment benefit after this date, no unemployment benefit was paid.

Business Growth Training

Mr. Roger King: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement about his plans for the business growth through training programme, announced in the White Paper entitled "Employment for the 1990s", Cm. 540

Mr. Fowler: I can now announce that the programme, "Business Growth Training" will start on 1 April and that expenditure on it will be £55 million in a full year. The programme is designed to help the smaller business in particular and it will have four major components:

help for smaller firms with fewer than 500 employees to obtain outside advice to improve their performance through better training. Up to £15,000 will be available to meet up to half the costs of professional assistance to plan for the training of their employees as part of a strategy for managing change; associated training of managers and supervisors; purchase of open learning materials, and other forms of training new to the firm; training of owners and managers of very small businesses in better management and business skills in order to help them run and develop their business;

projects to demonstrate how new approaches to training and development can help employers meet their business needs more effectively. Selected firms will be given up to half of the agreed costs, up to a maximum of £60,000, to mount the projects and to disseminate the results to other employers; projects to help to start up partnerships between businesses on a national sectoral basis or locally, to define needs for training in key skills, and to develop a long-term strategy for improving the supply of those skills. Funding will be limited to a maximum of £60,000, up to half the costs. The Training Agency will draw up priorities for responding to applications for this pump-priming funding.

With the introduction of these new arrangements on 1 April, the local grants for employers scheme, local collaborative projects and national priority skills scheme will end. Existing commitments will of course be honoured. Those elements of the former training for enterprise programme which do not form part of employment training (the private enterprise programme, graduate enterprise programme, firmstart and growth programmes) will continue under business growth training.

Transfer of Undertakings Regulations

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he has any plans to amend (a) the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 1981 or (b) the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) (Amendment) Regulations 1987.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 23 January 1989]: My right hon. Friend has no such plans.

Graduates

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment with whom he has discussed the graduates in employment statistics outlined in the January 1989 edition of the Employment Gazette, at pages 22 and 23;

(2) if he has any plans to discuss the graduate in employment statistics outlined in the January 1989 edition of the Employment Gazette at pages 22 and 23 with the Confederation of British Industry and the Scottish Council (Development and Industry).

Mr. Lee [holding answer 19 January 1989]: We have no plans to initiate discussions on the information in the article.

The article itself was based on a paper prepared for the Department of Education and Science-led review of the demand for graduates, which in turn was based on information extracted from the labour force survey.

The Confederation of British Industry is represented on the review's working groups, which also include officials from relevant Departments, including the Scottish Office, and representatives from the Council for Industry and Higher Education. The Scottish Council for Development and Industry is not a member.

Departmental Advertising

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how much he has spent on advertising in each of the last three years, and what was the breakdown of expenditure on advertising in each of these years.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 20 January 1989]: The amount spent by the Department of Employment on advertising during the financial years 1985-86, 1986-87 and 1987-88, broken down by media category was as follows:

£ million

Year	Television	Press/ Radio	Posters	Total
1985-86	Nil	0·1	Nil	0·1
1986-87	9·3	3·0	0·4	12·7
1987-88	3·0	0·5	2·6	6·1

These figures include production costs and VAT.

HSE (Prosecutions)

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what criteria are used by the Health and Safety Executive when deciding if a prosecution should go on indictment to the Crown court.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 23 January 1989]: It is a decision for magistrates courts, and not for the Health and Safety Executive, whether particular cases should be taken on indictment to the Crown court.

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment on how many occasions in 1988 private solicitors were instructed to conduct prosecutions on behalf of the Health and Safety Executive; and if he will consider transferring all prosecution work under the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act and associated legislation to the Crown Prosecution Service.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 23 January 1989]: In England and Wales in 1987-88, the latest years for which figures are available, 234 cases were conducted by private solicitors on behalf of the Health and Safety Executive. My right hon. Friend has no plans to transfer prosecution work in the highly technical and specialised field of health and safety law to the Crown Prosecution Service,

Hantergantick Quarry (Fatalities)

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many informations were laid before Bodmin magistrates by the Health and Safety Executive in respect of the double fatality at Hantergantick quarry on 25 August 1987; and to what breaches of statutory provisions each of these informations related.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 23 January 1989]: A total of two informations were laid: one under section 2(1) of the health and Safety At Work, etc. Act. 1974, and another under section 109 of the Mines and Quarries Act 1954.

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment why all informations laid before Bodmin magistrates in connection with the double fatality at Hantergantick quarry of 25 August 1987 were not proceeded with.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 23 January 1989]: The section of statute under which the successful prosecution proceeded was the result of the considered advice of solicitors and counsel.

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether the prosecution relating to the double fatality at Hantergantick quarry on 25 August 1987 was conducted by the Health and Safety Executive's own staff, or whether outside solicitors were instructed.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 23 January 1989]: The prosecution was undertaken by a local firm of solicitors, under the instructions from HSE legal division.

Safety at Work

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he has made an assessment of the service provided by the procurator fiscal's department in conducting all prosecutions in Scotland under the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 23 January 1989]: No.

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what steps are taken to ensure that all inspectors authorised to conduct legal proceedings under the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974 have received sufficient training and have a sufficient knowledge of magistrates courts proceedings to enable them to conduct the proceedings correctly; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 23 January 1989]: All newly appointed Health and Safety Executive inspectors who will be required to conduct legal proceedings attend, as part of their training, a course on magistrates court procedures, collection of evidence, presentation of cases and the conduct of proceedings in court. Further courses covering the same material are provided for inspectors in mid career either to update their skills and knowledge or before they are likely to conduct legal proceedings in a magistrates court.

HSE's inspectors are also provided with comprehensive written guidance on magistrates court procedures and the conduct of proceedings in court.

Summerwest World (Injury)

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what action was undertaken by the Health and Safety Executive following the injury to a small boy at Butlins Summerwest World, Minehead in September 1988 on the water slide; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 23 January 1989]: In accordance with the Health and Safety (Enforcing Authority) Regulations 1977, enforcement of the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974 at Butlins Summerwest World, Minehead is carried out by West Somerset district council, and consequently the Health and Safety Executive has no information about this incident.

DEFENCE

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many oral parliamentary questions he has answered by written reply because the question was not reached at Question Time, for the most recent year for which figures are available.

Mr. Younger: In 1988, 721 oral parliamentary questions were answered by written reply owing to the question not being reached at Question Time.

Royal Air Force Officer and Aircrew Selection Centre

Mr. John Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimates his Department has made of the expected revenue savings from the transfer of the RAF officer and aircrew selection centre from Biggin hill to Cranwell.

Mr. Neubert: Some £10 million in running costs will be saved over the next 10 years. Once the move has been completed running cost savings of more than £2 million per annum at current prices are expected to accrue.

Mr. John Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimates his Department has made of the expected level of capital receipts following disposal of the existing RAF officer and aircrew selection centre site at Biggin hill.

Mr. Neubert: Following the closure announcement discussions are now being held with Bromley council to consider the future uses for the site of the officers and aircrew selection centre. This will assist us to determine the capital value of the site. The final estimate will however be a matter of commercial confidentiality and it would not be our normal practice to disclose it.

Mr. John Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what expenditure is envisaged to accommodate the RAF officer and aircrew selection centre following its proposed transfer from Biggin hill to Cranwell, including provision for the selection centre itself and the residential accommodation required for the personnel.

Mr. Neubert: The estimated cost of the facilities concerned, including extensions to existing facilities, is some £5½ million at current prices.

Woolwich Arsenal West

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to release the area of surplus land at Woolwich Arsenal west; how the developer is to be selected; what form the development is likely to take; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neubert: The Woolwich Arsenal west site including the riverside area is owned jointly by the Ministry of Defence and the Crown Estate Commissioners with whom discussions are already in progress on disposal arrangements. We are also in informal consultation with the local planning authority, Greenwich borough council, to establish potential uses for the surplus land which will protect and be compatible with the many listed buildings on site.

It is our normal practice to select a developer through open market competition.

Radioactivity

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer, Official Report, column 280, to the hon. Member for Dumbarton of Thursday 19 January; if he will specify the document covering United States practice in United Kingdom waters which embodies standard and international standards on the release of radioactivity.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: United States practice is consistent with the recommendations of the International Commission on Radiological Protection (ICRP). The commission adopted its most recent recommendations on 17 January 1977, and these are contained in ICRP publication 26.

PUBSAFF

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Dumbarton of Thursday 19 January; if he will summarise the changes required by the local authorities and emergency services during the consultation process on Clyde PUBSAFE.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Clyde public safety scheme is currently under review, in consultation with local authorities and emergency services. It would not be appropriate to release details of any proposed changes before the revision is issued.

Nuclear Accident Exercises

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Dumbarton of Thursday 19 January, Official Report, column 280, how many exercises in each of the past five years have been carried out under the existing scheme.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: In the Clyde area, there were seven nuclear accident exercises in 1985, six in 1986, five in 1987 and six in 1988. In Rosyth, there has been one exercise during each of the last five years, and practice evacuations of part of the naval base in 1984, 1986, 1987 and 1988.

Radioactivity (Submarines)

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Dumbarton of Thursday 19 January, Official Report, column 280, what levels of radioactive material Royal Navy submarines are authorised to discharge.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Releases of radioactivity from United Kingdom nuclear-powered submarines are strictly controlled within the established national and international standards, as recommended by the International Commission on radiological protection.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Dumbarton of Thursday 19 January, Official Report, columns 279-80, if he has been informed by the United States Navy of the maximum level of radioactivity in waste discharged into United Kingdom waters by their submarines; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Her Majesty's Government are satisfied that any releases of radioactivity have not breached established national and international standards. Early United States operations in Holy Loch did lead in the 1960s to the detection of some Cobalt 60 in harbour sediment samples. This radioactivity was well below the internationally agreed public safety levels at the time, and was also below the much more stringent levels which apply now. Since then, the United States has made technical advances and has instituted even more rigorous control over discharges.

I also refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Member for Edinburgh, West (Lord James Douglas-Hamilton) to the hon. Member for Carrick, Cumnock and Doon Valley (Mr. Foulkes) on 23 January 1989 at column 407.

Aircraft (Urban Areas)

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence at what height military aircraft are permitted to fly over urban areas which are not located within one of the avoidance areas or transit areas marked on the Civil Aviation Authority chart of United Kingdom areas of intense aerial activity, aerial tactics areas and military low flying system.

Mr. Neubert [holding answer 16 December 1988]: Military fast jet aircraft are instructed not to fly over the centres of major conurbations and built up areas below 2,000 feet, whilst the limit for light propeller driven aircraft and helicopters is 1,000 feet. However, we cannot guarantee to avoid overflying the outskirts of major towns or smaller communities. Nevertheless pilots will make every effort to avoid populated areas wherever possible.

Low-level Flying (Morocco)

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on progress in talks with the Government of Morocco on the use of facilities in Morocco for low-level training by the Royal Air Force.

Mr. Neubert [holding answer 16 December 1988]: I have nothing further to add to the answer given by my predecessor, the hon. Member for Kettering (Mr. Freeman), on 10 May 1988 at column 104. The details of discussions of this sort is confidential.

Low Flying

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if normal low-flying training sorties down to 250 ft are permitted within the three tactical training areas at the same time as operational low-flying training down to 100 ft.

Mr. Neubert [holding answer 16 December 1988]: Low flying training sorties down to 250 ft by non-operational low flying units are not permitted within the three tactical training areas when operational low flying is taking place except under special arrangements and with special approval.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence over what proportion of the land surface of the United Kingdom military low flying is permitted.

Mr. Neubert [holding answer 16 December 1988]: In principle military low flying is permitted over the whole of the United Kingdom landmass except for main conurbations, danger areas and certain other areas such as civil air traffic zones, airports, glider sites, and nuclear power stations.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many times the military low flying management group met in 1987 to consider proposals for changes to the United Kingdom low flying system.

Mr. Neubert [holding answer 16 December 1988]: The Military low flying management group met on three occasions in 1987 to consider and discuss a variety of matters concerning the United Kingdom low flying system including proposals for minor changes to the system.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many Royal Air Force police personnel are currently employed on surveying potential new areas for low flying;

(2) if he will make a statement on the criteria and methods used by the Royal Air Force when surveying potential new areas for low flying.

Mr. Neubert [holding answer 16 December 1988]: There are currently no plans to change the basic structure of the United Kingdom low flying system implemented in 1979 although, as part of the continuous review of the system, two RAF police senior NCOs are occupied full time in the tasks referred to in my predecessor's answer to the hon. Member of 19 November 1987 at column 453, working according to the criteria set out in that answer.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the approximate current land area covered by low flying area 7(T); and if he will list any changes made to the boundaries of this area since 1979.

Mr. Neubert [holding answer 16 December 1988]: Low flying area 7(T) covers the south west portion of the constituency of Montgomery, the north west quarter of Brecon and Radnor, the north east corner of Carmarthen and the eastern part of Ceredigion and Pembroke north. There have not been any changes to the boundaries of this area since 1979.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence under what conditions fixed-wing military aircraft not operating from local bases are permitted to use those low-flying areas dedicated to local users.

Mr. Neubert [holding answer 16 December 1988]: Pilots are required to obtain clearance from a co-ordinating authority before flight in a low flying area dedicated to local users.

Written Answers to Questions

Wednesday 25 January 1989

WALES

Empty Properties

Mr. Gregory: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the most recent figure for empty local authority housing; how many of these properties have been vacant for periods over six, 12 and 24 months, respectively; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: The total number of local authority empty dwellings as at 1 April 1988 was 3,365; the number vacant for more than six months was 389. Information on the number vacant for 12 and 24 months is not held centrally.

Motorways (Matrix Indicators)

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report a list of those sections of motorways in Wales fitted with matrix indicators which permit written messages to be conveyed on them.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: There are no written message matrix indicators on the M4 in Wales. There are however nine variable message signs between Newport and the Severn bridge and 71 matrix indicators displaying traffic signs over the whole length.

Meetings

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many times he has met the farmers' organisations of Wales since October 1987, giving the details of each meeting with each organisation.

Mr. Peter Walker: Since October 1987 I have met farmers' organisations 15 times. Details are as follows:

22 October 1987—Meeting with the Farmers Union of Wales (FUW) to discuss the hill livestock compensatory allowances (HLCA) review.

28 October 1987—Meeting with the National Farmers Union (NFU) Wales to discuss HLCA review.

28 October 1987—Ministerial meeting with the NFUs for England, Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland, to discuss HLCA review.

10 February 1988—Meeting with the FUW to discuss a wide range of agricultural subjects including extensification, stabilisers and milk quotas.

30 March 1988—Meeting with the NFU to discuss a range of agricultural issues.

10 May 1988—Speech to the FUW annual general meeting about sheepmeat regime and general matters of interest to the agriculture industry.

19 July 1988—Meetings with the NFU, FUW and the Country Landowners Association (CLA) at the Royal Welsh show to discuss general subjects of current interest to the agriculture sector.

31 August 1988—Visit to mid-Wales co-operatives with representatives of the Welsh Agricultural Organisation Society (WAOS) to discuss co-operation in the Welsh agriculture sector.

13 September 1988—Visit to West Midland Farmers Association to open its new premises at Bridgend.

20 October 1988—Meeting with the FUW to discuss HLCA review.

25 October 1988—Visit to mid and west Wales region of the Organic Growers Association to discuss general topics of interest to organic farming.

27 October 1988—Meeting with the NFU Wales to discuss HLCA review.

27 October 1988—Ministerial meeting with the NFUs for England, Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland to discuss HLCA review.

2 November 1988—Speech to the Welsh Agricultural College: Farming Conference on the outlook for Welsh agriculture and subjects of general interest to the industry.

8 December 1988—Meeting with the NFU to discuss the Wool Board and agriculture generally.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many times he has met consumer organisations in Wales since October 1987; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: Since 1987, I have met Welsh representatives of the National Association of Citizens Advice Bureaux and the chairman of the Transport Users Consultative Committee (Wales). My hon. Friend the Minister of State has hosted a meeting with the chairman and members of the Welsh Consumer Council, and attended the annual conference of parent-teacher associations in Wales. My hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State has met the Association of Welsh Community Health Councils. All three of us are consumers and meet other consumers every day.

Departmental Spending

Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he proposes to make any changes to his Department's running costs and cash limits in the current year.

Mr. Peter Walker: Yes. Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimates, cash limits are being changed as follows:

The cash limit on class XVII, vote 5 is being increased by £18,789,000 from £223,766,000 to £242,555,000. This increase covers additional provision of £18,803,000 for trunk road construction, of £261,000 for historic buildings and ancient monuments and of £100,000 for the cost of the nurses' clinical regrading, partly offset by savings of £375,000 elsewhere.

The cash limit on class XVII, vote 8 is being increased by £10 million from £777,017,000 to £787,017,000. This increase will enable health authorities in Wales to meet the estimated total costs of the nurses' clinical grading exercise which I announced on 4 November 1988.

The running costs limit for the Welsh Office is being reduced by £1,000 from £41,081,000 to £41,080,000. This decrease will be offset by a corresponding increase in the running costs limit for the office of the Minister for the Civil Service (class XX, vote 1) and reflects the transfer of costs for recruitment under the direct entry grade 7 competition 1988. There is a consequent reduction of £1,000 in the cash limit on class XVII, vote 9 from £42,526,000 to £42,525,000.

The cash limit on class XVII, vote 11 is being increased by £1,000 from £2,796,000 to £2,797,000. This increase is matched by a corresponding reduction of £1,000 to the cash limit on class XVII, vote 10 from £1,014,800,000 to £1,014,799,000.

The net increase resulting from these cash limit changes will be charged to the reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Road Construction Costs

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will give (a) the amount of finance made available in the form of grant or loan by the European Economic Community towards the construction of the Welsh section of the M4 and (b) the actual and estimated costs of construction, giving all figures at current prices;

(2) if he will give (a) the amount of finance made available in the form of grant or loan by the European Economic Community towards the construction of (i) the A55 Conway tunnel, (ii) the other Welsh sections of the A55 and (iii) the Welsh section of the A494 Queensferry bypass, (b) the latest estimated cost of the Conway tunnel and (c) the actual and estimated costs of the improvements to the other Welsh sections of the A55 and the A494 Queensferry bypass, giving all figures at current prices.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: I shall write to the hon. Gentleman as soon as possible.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Somalia (Refugees)

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will give consideration to the position of refugees from the northern area of Somalia, with a view to giving special assistance; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: We have already provided over £2·3 million for relief programmes to help some 400,000 refugees who have fled into Ethiopia from civil strife in northern Somalia since the middle of last year. Over £1 million of this assistance has been channelled through the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and £1·3 million through British charities for water and health facilities. We shall continue to consider sympathetically further requests for assistance.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Costs and Productivity

111. Mr. Allen McKay: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when his Department intends to respond to the findings of the study carried out for the Government by PA Cambridge Consultants into geographical variations in costs and productivity.

Mr. Atkins: My Department commissioned this study to assess the extent and source of differences in industrial costs and productivity in English regions. I have seen the study and noted its findings. The study was published on 20 July 1988 and a copy has been placed in the library.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. French: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many oral parliamentary questions he has answered by written reply, in connection with his duties as Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, because the question was not reached at Question Time, for the most recent year for which figures are available.

Mr. Newton: In respect of my responsibilities for the Duchy of Lancaster, there were no such questions during 1988.

Companies Act Inquiries

Mr. Gould: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster which investigations under sections 432, 466 and 442 of the Companies Act have been completed since 1 February 1988.

Mr. Maude: The following investigations under these sections have been completed since 1 February 1988:

Company Name	Type of Inquiry
Signal Life Assurance Co. Limited	S.432
Summer International plc (formerly Sumrie Clothes plc)	S.442 and S.446
Guinness plc	S.432 and S.442
Consolidated Gold Fields plc	S.442
Bremner plc	S.442
House of Fraser Holdings plc	S.432

Mr. Gould: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is the management target for the duration of inquiries under sections 432, 466 and 442 of the Companies Act.

Mr. Maude: The usual practice is to agree a provisional time scale for the investigation with the inspectors at the outset and to hold regular progress meetings thereafter.

Mr. Gould: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster which inquiries under sections 432, 466 and 442 of the Companies Act are currently outstanding.

Mr. Maude: The following investigations under section 432 and 442 of the Companies Act 1985 remain outstanding. There are no outstanding investigations under section 446.

Date of Appointment	Company Name	Type of Investigations
8 November 1982	Minet Holdings plc	S.432
8 November 1982	WMD Underwriting Agencies Limited	S.432
11 March 1983	Graylaw Holdings plc	S.432
11 March 1983	Link Service Stations Limited	S.432
4 October 1983	Bank Street Securities Limited	S.432
4 October 1983	Pennine Commercial Holdings Limited	S.432
20 November 1987	Animal Defence Society Limited (The)	S.432
10 June 1988	James Ferguson Holdings plc	S.432
4 July 1988	James Ferguson Holdings plc	S.442
4 July 1988	Barlow Clowes Gilt Managers Limited	S.432
22 July 1988	James Neill Holdings plc	S.442

Date of Appointment	Company Name	Type of Investigations
22 July 1988	F. H. Lloyd Holdings plc	S.442
22 July 1988	Francis Industries Limited	S.442
16 August 1988	Rotaprint plc	S.432
16 August 1988	Rotaprint plc	S.442
1 September 1988	Aldermanbury Trust plc	S.432
20 October 1988	Consolidated Gold Fields plc	S.442
19 December 1988	County NatWest Limited	S.432
19 December 1988	County NatWest Securities Limited	S.432

Mr. Gould: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is the average length of time for completion of inquiries under sections 432, 466 and 442 of the Companies Act begun since May 1979.

Mr. Maude: Two years three months.

Mr. Gould: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many prosecutions have resulted from inquiries under sections 432, 466 and 442 of the Companies Act since May 1979.

Mr. Maude: To date, there have been eight prosecutions following such inquiries since May 1979.

Public Appointments

Mr. Gould: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many of the public appointments made by his Department have been from the ethnic minorities; and what proportion this represents of the total.

Mr. Forth: This information is not collected.

Mr. Gould: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many of the public appointments made by him since June 1987 have been (a) men and (b) women.

Mr. Forth: Whilst information in the form requested is not collected, details are given each year in the publication "Public Bodies" of the number of men and women holding public appointments. The latest edition, for 1988, shows that at 1 April 1988 903 men and 227 women held appointments made by my Department.

Inner City Renewal

Mr. Heddle: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what discussions he has had on inner city renewal and urban regeneration and the likely impact of value added tax on non-domestic construction on the viability of private sector schemes in these areas in general; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: I have received a number of representations about the imposition of VAT on non-domestic construction, following last year's decision of the European court. This is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Post Office Counters Ltd

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on whether he has any plans for privatising Post Office Counters Ltd.

Mr. Forth: The Post Office has no plans to sell its subsidiary Post Office Counters Ltd. to the private sector.

Broadcasting

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how much of the broadcasting spectrum will be allocated to (a) Channel 5, and (b) MVDS.

Mr. Atkins: As stated in our recent White Paper "Broadcasting in the '90s: Competition, Choice and Quality", the fifth terrestrial television service will make use of two standard 8 MHz channels, 35 and 37, in the UHF broadcasting band; whilst decisions on the amount of choice of spectrum for MVDS will be announced by the end of April this year.

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether it is his intention to release additional frequencies to the radio authority for ancillary services, programme links and radio communications.

Mr. Atkins: My Department is currently considering how best to meet the rapidly growing needs of both existing and prospective programme-makers for additional spectrum for the range of programme-making and related activities.

Recycling

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he has any plans to promote further measures to encourage the recycling of industrial materials.

Mr. Atkins: We shall continue with our present initiatives of sector conferences; promoting awareness of the benefits of recycling to industry, schools and the general public; and the provision of technical advice through our Warren Spring laboratory. A series of seminars will be held throughout the United Kingdom during the next few months to promote the collection of waste paper for recycling and a conference on plastics waste and recycling is planned for September.

Where appropriate, further initiatives will be introduced.

Anti-dumping Action

Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many anti-dumping actions have been initiated by the European Commission against Japanese companies over the last three years; and what have been the results of these actions, broken down into duty imposed, price undertaking agreed, or no duty imposed.

Mr. Alan Clark: During the period in question the European Commission initiated 12 investigations into alleged dumping by Japanese companies in response to complaints from European industries. Two of these resulted in the imposition of definitive anti-dumping duties, two were terminated without an anti-dumping remedy, while the remaining eight cases are still under investigation. In one of these cases provisional anti-dumping duties have been imposed.

Steel Industry

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when discussions began between the British Steel Corporation and Firth Brown Ltd. for the transfer of the British Steel Corporation's river Don works, press forging and drop forging divisions, Sheffield to Firth Brown Ltd.

Mr. Atkins: These discussions, which took place in the early 1970s, were primarily a matter for the British Steel Corporation and information concerning them is not readily available within the Department.

British Coal

Mr. Riddick: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when the Monopolies and Mergers Commission report on the investment programme of the British Coal Corporation will be published.

Mr. Maude: The report is published today.

The commission was asked to investigate the investment programme of British Coal. It took into account British Coal's achievements and looked to the future, particularly in the light of the changing environment posed by privatisation of electricity supply. The commission concluded that British Coal should take a more positive view of the opportunities which existed to influence vital aspects of its business future, for example, in its response to the threat of future imports.

The Commission found that in general investment and post-investment appraisal had worked effectively, but singled out Asfordby new mine for particular comment. It disagreed with British Coal's view that the project had ever been demonstrably viable according to British Coal's investment criteria. However, the commission accepted that the project now has sunk costs and that this, combined with agreement on six-day working, might mean that the remainder of the project could be shown to be a worthwhile investment. However the commission recommended that in future the sort of conditional approval which was given for expenditure in Asfordby, in advance of its showing a sound financial prospectus, should not be allowed, except where other factors were explicably judged to be of sufficient weight, were clearly laid out in the project appraisal, and a decision to proceed was made at board level.

Looking to the future, the commission recommended that British Coal should now commit itself firmly to specific quantified financial objectives for the next five years. All investment projects, and the investment programme as a whole, should be related to these targets. British Coal should also continue to examine the prospects of further simplifying its organisational structure to enable it to respond flexibly to a rapidly changing business environment. The commission commended British Coal's efforts to introduce more flexible working.

The commission also recommended that British Coal should update and run its forecasting models more frequently, and should incorporate the United Kingdom coal market into its world model. It should use its models to consider the effect on the industry of a wider range of possible developments, including ESI privatisation, exchange rate movements, competition from alternative fuels and possible rapid growth in world trade in coal.

The commission made some 20 other recommendations relevant to British Coal's investment policy. It concluded that British Coal was not operating against the public interest in the areas falling within the reference.

Detailed case studies are included as appendices to the report.

British Coal will be producing a preliminary response to the commission's findings within three to four months, in the light of which my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Energy will inform the House of his views.

Regional Assistance

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will provide figures for spending on (a) regional selective assistance and (b) regional development grant for (i) Scotland, (ii) England, (iii) Wales and (iv) Northern Ireland for each year from 1978-79 to 1988-89, and estimated figures for 1989-90, 1990-91 and 1991-92, in cash and at 1987-88 prices.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 24 January 1989]: Gross expenditure on regional development grant and regional selective assistance in England, Scotland and Wales in the financial years 1978-79 to 1987-88 is shown in the tables together with current estimates provision for 1988-89. Information about planned expenditure on regional assistance in future years will shortly be published in the public expenditure White Paper.

The RDG and RSA schemes do not operate in Northern Ireland.

Expenditure at current prices

£ million

	1978-79	1979-80	1980-81	1981-82	1982-83	1983-84	1984-85	1985-86	1986-87	1987-88	1988-89 (estimates provision)
(a) Regional selective assistance
England	59·1	46·7	48·6	54·4	68·7	62·2	72·9	74·8	100·6	122·9	157·0
Scotland	14·9	17·8	22·3	19·7	21·6	28·2	38·2	55·0	43·9	46·0	60·4
Wales	30·3	18·8	10·7	9·2	15·5	18·2	25·1	28·0	35·6	36·7	47·3
(b) Regional development grants
England	238·1	210·0	273·8	351·8	280·7	223·8	209·1	166·5	254·3	139·3	161·6
Scotland	107·3	70·2	113·3	142·7	287·3	143·0	109·2	107·5	170·2	78·0	60·3
Wales	71·5	50·7	103·5	122·2	121·5	72·1	92·7	84·4	88·8	53·4	65·6

Expenditure at constant (1987-88) prices

£ million

	1978-79	1979-80	1980-81	1981-82	1982-83	1983-84	1984-85	1985-86	1986-87	1987-88	1988-89 (estimates provision)
(a) Regional selective assistance
England	121·4	81·9	72·0	73·4	86·5	74·9	83·6	81·4	105·9	122·9	147·8
Scotland	30·6	31·2	33·0	26·6	27·2	34·0	43·8	59·8	46·2	46·0	56·9
Wales	62·2	33·0	15·9	12·4	19·5	21·9	28·8	30·5	37·5	36·7	44·5
(b) Regional development grants
England	488·9	368·4	405·6	474·8	353·5	269·6	239·8	181·2	267·7	139·3	152·2
Scotland	220·3	123·2	167·9	192·6	361·8	172·3	125·2	117·0	179·2	78·0	56·8
Wales	146·8	88·9	153·3	164·9	153·0	86·9	106·3	91·8	93·5	53·4	61·8

Notes:

1. All figures in the above tables show gross expenditure, that is they exclude domestic receipts and receipts from the European Regional Development fund.
2. The RDG figures comprise expenditure under the original and revised schemes. The RSA figures incorporate expenditure under industrial and training grants, as well as assistance under the Business Improvement Services and Exchange Risk Guarantee schemes.
3. Current price data have been converted to constant (1987-88) prices by using the Implied Market Price Gross Domestic Product Deflator (1987-88 = 100).

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Legal Profession (Consultation Papers)

Mr. Lawrence: To ask the Attorney-General when the Green Paper on the future of the legal profession and the two other consultation papers, which were announced to the House on 24 October 1988 will be published.

The Attorney-General: The three papers on the work and organisation of the legal profession, conveyancing by authorised practitioners and contingency fees have been laid before the House today and have been published as command papers. The Government's overall objective in publishing the Green Paper on the work and organisation of the legal profession is to see that the public has the best possible access to legal services and that those services are of the right quality for the particular needs of the clients. The Government hope that this examination of the legal profession will stimulate comment from a wide range of opinion. These are matters not only of concern to lawyers but are of great public importance. The Government will welcome comments on all three papers by 2 May 1989.

PRIME MINISTER

Magistrates Courts

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Prime Minister if she will outline the division of responsibilities for administration of magistrates courts in England and Wales between different Government Departments.

The Prime Minister: Responsibility for the magistrates courts service is shared between the Home Secretary and the Lord Chancellor. The balance of these responsibilities is defined in the Justices of the Peace Act 1979. Broadly, the Home Secretary has responsibility for matters relating to the staffing and administration of the courts. The Lord Chancellor is responsible for the appointment, training and conduct of magistrates.

Ozone Layer

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Prime Minister what steps she plans to take to ensure the atmospheric control technology, the support refrigerant technology for catering, and the packaging material for documentation for the forthcoming United Kingdom-sponsored conference on the ozone layer depletion and dangers of chlorofluorocarbons, minimises the use of chlorofluorocarbons.

The Prime Minister: As my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Environment informed the House on 15 December 1988 at column 725, Government Departments have been asked to review their policies, specifications and practices with a view to promoting the objective of reducing use of chlorofluorocarbons and halons to the maximum possible extent.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Adley: To ask the Prime Minister if, at her next meeting with President Mitterrand, she will propose the establishment of a joint British-French team to co-ordinate investment, social and environmental criteria for the high-speed rail link between London and Paris, to take account of British Rail's corporate disadvantages; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I can see no advantage in the establishment of such a team. As I have already explained to my hon. Friend, there is regular contact at working level between the British and French Governments on issues related to the construction of rail links to the Channel tunnel.

VAT

Mr. Heddle: To ask the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on interdepartmental co-operation on the implementation of judgment of the European Court on value added tax on new non-domestic construction.

The Prime Minister: Any statement on this matter will be made in due course by my hon. Friend the Economic Secretary.

Consumer Protection

Mr. McCrindle: To ask the Prime Minister (1) what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of the present division of responsibility for consumer affairs among ministries for the representation of the interest of the consumer;

(2) what steps she is taking to improve the co-ordination between Ministries on consumer protection to provide improved representation for consumers.

The Prime Minister: I am satisfied that the present arrangements for representing consumers' interests and the present division of responsibility among Departments work satisfactorily. I have no plans to change the existing arrangements for interdepartmental consultations.

Mr. McCrindle: To ask the Prime Minister if she will consider the creation of a consumer affairs Ministry embracing the activities in relation to consumers of a number of Departments; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I have no plans to do so.

TRANSPORT

Bus Services

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list those English counties which, in the last 12 months, have produced (a) timetables for all bus services within their counties, (b) bus route maps, (c) timetables for supported bus services only, and (d) no publicity at all; and if he will indicate in each case whether a charge other than mailing costs is made for the information, where available.

Mr. Portillo: This information is not held by my Department. However, information on timetables along the lines requested is available in a commercial publication and I will write to the hon. Member with details.

Brown Route

Mr. Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he will inquire into the circumstances whereby callers to his Department's regional office in Manchester were informed that the line of the A6 Disley-High lane bypass is likely to be the Brown route; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: I am not aware of any callers having been advised as to the likely outcome of the A6 Disley and High lane bypass public consultation. The Department published its proposals for a bypass last January. These took the form of a single favoured route (the Brown) and rejected alternatives. There was a massive response from the public which is still being considered.

It is likely to be some time yet before an announcement can be made as to whether a scheme should be added to the national trunk road programme and, if so, on the choice of route.

Railway Line Closures

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what criteria British Rail is required to meet when considering a railway line for closure; and what consultation process it is required to hold.

Mr. Portillo: When considering a railway line for closure British Rail should have regard to the objectives which were set for the chairman on 21 October 1986 and which were announced to the House the same day in reply to a question from the hon. Member for Chipping Barnet (Mr. Chapman) at columns 772-74. The statutory railway closure procedure is set out in section 56 of the Transport Act 1962, as modified by section 54 of the Transport Act 1968.

M1 (Congestion)

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action he intends to take to improve road conditions on the section of the M1 between the M25 and 15 miles north of Luton.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: On the M1 itself a scheme is being prepared to instal climbing lanes in both directions from junction 9. An experimental automatic incident detection system has also been installed on the northbound carriageway of the M1 from Bedfordshire to Northamptonshire. In conjunction with more frequent matrix signals, this will give motorists better warning of slow-moving or stationary traffic ahead when incidents occur.

Improvements to alternative routes, including the extension of the M40 to Birmingham, are expected to attract some traffic away from the M1. We are, in our current review of the road programme, considering what further measures are necessary.

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received concerning congestion with particular reference to tailbacks being experienced during the early morning from the M25 to about 15 miles north of Luton; and if he will estimate the time lost to motorists in tailbacks on that section of the M1.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: From time to time members of the public write to us about congestion, usually as a result of an incident on the motorway. In our economic assessment of the need for improvement, account is taken of notional delays to vehicles. We do not systematically record information about the time actually lost in tailbacks.

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment his Department has made of the extent to which junction 8 on the M1 is operating satisfactorily.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: We plan to study problems of queuing occurring on the northbound off-slip at junction 8. Temporary difficulties were experienced when the junction was closed to allow for the rebuilding of the A4147. The junction is now fully operational.

Airline Pilot Training

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will take steps to ensure that there are an adequate number of places in approved commercial airline pilot training establishments to meet current and future demand;

(2) if he will make a statement on the shortfall in qualified commercial airline pilots and the lack of technologically advanced training facilities to overcome this problem.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The Government's policy is that the aviation industry should be responsible for meeting the costs of training whatever skilled manpower it needs. It is important to maintain professional pilot training facilities in the United Kingdom and to ensure a supply of high-quality United Kingdom professional pilots, but the responsibility for funding such training must rest with the air transport operators themselves.

Bridge Heights (Signs)

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will introduce legislation to provide for bridge height signs to be displayed in imperial and metric measures.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: No fresh legislation is needed. Bridge heights may already be shown in imperial and metric measures.

Battersea Bridge (Collision)

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the collision of a river craft with Battersea bridge on 19 January; and what steps he will be bringing forward to improve river safety and navigation on the Thames.

Mr. Portillo: This incident is being investigated by a marine surveyor from the Department as well as by the Port of London Authority. The surveyor will be concerned to establish the causes and to see whether the circumstances point to any steps which can be taken to avoid a recurrence.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Adley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make it his policy to match the subsidy provided by the French Government to Sociéte Nationale de Chemins de Fer for its Channel tunnel rail plans, by making available to British Rail additional funds to enable it to meet essential environmental costs relevant to a new line of railway from the tunnel to London; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: Section 42 of the Channel Tunnel Act 1987 prohibits Government subsidies in connection with British Rail's Channel tunnel rail services. But I expect BR's proposals for a new line to take full account of environmental considerations.

Docklands Light Railway

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much public money (a) has already been spent on the docklands light railway, and (b) is planned to be spent in the next three years.

Mr. Portillo: Public expenditure on the initial docklands light railway and City extension is expected to reach some £140 million by the end of this financial year. Public expenditure in the following three years on the City extension is forecast to total some £45 million. In addition to this Olympia and York the developers of Canary wharf are contributing £68 million. The cost of the Beckton extension will be met by the LDDC out of the increases in the value of its land holdings generated by the railway.

Manchester Airport (Accident)

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to the reply to the right hon. Member for Manchester, Wythenshawe of 12 January, Official Report, column 728, if he will now summarise in a statement to the House the main findings of the report on the British Airtours Boeing 737 accident at Manchester airport on 22 August 1985.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: There has been no request for a review board, so we expect to publish the full report on 13 March. No useful purpose would be served by publishing a summary of the findings before that. The report has already been seen in draft by the CAA and by other parties to the investigation. Relevant recommendations have been acted upon.

A40

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if there are any plans to improve the traffic flow on the A40 at the remaining road junctions in London; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Yes. Improvements are planned or under construction at the four remaining junctions on the A40 in London as follows:

Swakeleys Road
An underpass is under construction and due for completion Spring 1990.

Long Lane
Work is to start on construction of an underpass later this year.

Gipsy Corner Western Circus
Draft orders proposing grade separation at these junctions were published in March 1988.

Severn Bridge

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give (a) the amount of finance made available in the form of grant or loans by the European Economic Community towards the construction of the M4 Severn bridge and (b) the total actual cost of construction, giving all figures at current prices.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The United Kingdom was not a member of the EEC when the existing Severn crossing was constructed in 1961-66.

The cost of construction of the Severn bridge alone was £63·8 million, and the Severn crossing as a whole (including the Wye bridge linking viaducts) £102·3 million, both at current prices.

Public Expenditure

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his estimate of gross and net public sector capital spending by his Department by both central Government and local authorities for 1988-89 and for each of the next three years, at current prices and at constant 1987-88 prices.

Mr. Portillo: The table shows spending on fixed assets, both gross and net by central Government and local authorities. Information about public sector capital spending will be included in table 21.1.11 of the 1989 public expenditure White Paper, to be published on 30 January.

£ million

	1988-89	1989-90	1990-91	1991-92
Cash
Gross spending
Central Government	960	1,290	1,370	1,410
Local authorities	700	810	770	790
Net Spending
Central Government	920	1,250	1,350	1,390
Local authorities	660	730	730	750
Real Terms (1987-88 prices)
Gross spending
Central Government	900	1,160	1,190	1,190
Local authorities	660	730	670	660
Net spending
Central Government	870	1,120	1,170	1,170
Local authorities	620	650	630	630

National Bus Company (Accounts)

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to receive the National Bus Company's accounts; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Channon: The NBC's report and accounts for 1987-88, published today, show that at 31 March 1988, the estimated gross proceeds from the disposal programme are £323 million, an increase of £17 million over the estimate given in the accounts for 1986-87. After allowing for the repayment of all the NBC's debt, taxation, redundancy costs, and the costs of the disposal programme, there should be a net surplus to the Government of at least £89 million.

This is an excellent outcome to the NBC's privatisation programme which involved the sale of 72 subsidiaries (over half of which were sold to their own managment) embodying some 14,000 buses and coaches and 48,000 employees. The completion of the NBC's disposal programme, well within the statutory deadline, has played an essential role in the successful introduction of competition in the bus industry and I pay tribute to all those involved. A copy of the accounts has been deposited in the Library of the House.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Chemical Weapons (Control)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what initiatives he plans, following the Paris 145-nation conference on chemical weapons, control and disarmament to facilitate the framework for the formation of an international regulatory agency within the United Nations for the control of exports of chemical agents capable of being put to military use.

Mr. Waldegrave: We are committed to the achievement of a comprehensive global and verifiable ban on chemical weapons as the only effective means to halt the spread of these weapons and to ensure the destruction of existing stockpiles.

Pending the conclusion of such a convention, 19 western countries (the "Australia Group") meet regularly to exchange information and to concert action on export controls on chemical weapon precursors. Members of the group also circulate to national industries a longer warning list of other chemicals which might have relevance to the manufacture of chemical weapons.

Security Council resolution 620 of 26 August 1988, sponsored by the United Kingdom called upon all states "to continue to apply, to establish or to strengthen strict control of the export of chemical products serving for the production of chemical weapons".

This reflected points made in the speech by my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs to the UN special session on disarmament on 7 June last year.

Middle East Peace Initiative

Sir Geoffrey Finsberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has considered the recent Council of Europe middle east peace initiative; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: We warmly welcome this helpful Council of Europe initiative, which has our full support, as do all efforts which encourage the parties to the Arab-Israel dispute to recognise each other's legitimate rights and to make progress towards a settlement.

Point Geologie

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what protests have been made by Her Majesty's Government to the French authorities regarding the construction of an airstrip at Point Geologie in Antarctica and the threat to penguin breeding grounds; if any of the Greenpeace protesters were British subjects; what policing arrangements exist within Antarctica; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: We are following with close attention the construction of the French airstrip at Point Geologie in the French-claimed sector of Antarctica. The information required under the Antarctic treaty concerning French activities this austral summer has already been provided by the French authorities.

The French are constructing their airstrip under the terms of article VII. 2 of the agreed measures on the conservation of antarctic fauna and flora, which permit such activities to the minimum extent necessary for the establishment, supply and operation of Antarctic stations. Observance of the agreed measures is subject to review, and this can be done during the normal course of Antarctic treaty meetings, the next of which will take place in Paris in May.

I understand that a number of the members of Greenpeace involved in the recent airstrip protest were British subjects.

Under the Antarctic treaty, consultative members have the right to designate observers to carry out inspections in all areas of Antarctica including all stations operated by treaty members.

The United Kingdom is a founder member of the Antarctic treaty system, and a full consultative party.

Diplomatic Wing (Costs)

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he proposes to make any changes to his Department's diplomatic wing running costs limit and cash limits for 1988-89.

Mr. Eggar: The cash limit for class II, vote 1 (overseas representation) will be decreased by £9,196,000 from £439,022,000 to £429,826,000. In addition, the running costs limit on vote 1 will be reduced by £4,347,000 from £406,298,000 to £401,951,000. Both changes are due to reductions in assumed costs overseas.

Foreign Affairs Council

Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish in the Official Report a statement on the outcome of the Foreign Affairs Council held on 23 January.

Mrs. Chalker: The Foreign Affairs Council met in Brussels on 23 January. My right hon. Friend the Minister of State represented the United Kingdom.

The council again discussed the dispute with the United States over the EC directive banning imports of hormone-treated meat. It called on the Commission to continue the action initiated in GATT to seek condemnation of United States unilateral retaliatory measures, but also to continue bilateral contacts with the United States Administration to secure a negotiated settlement of the dispute. While approving a revised list of Community counter-retaliation measures, it agreed to defer the question of their implementation for further consideration, at its meeting in February, in the light of progress in GATT and bilaterally.

The council reviewed EC/EFTA co-operation, and called for a further strengthening of the relationship. To this end the EFTA countries will be invited to an informal ministerial meeting in March. The United Kingdom welcomes such moves.

Taking account of the Community's close relations with Cyprus and Malta, the council agreed on new financial protocols to be offered to the two countries, providing generous levels of grant aid and access to EIB loans.

The Presidency introduced the Commission draft directive on the right to vote in local elections. Substantive discussion was deferred.

Meeting as a conference of representatives of the member states, Ministers agreed on the appointment as vice-presidents of the Commission for 1989-90 of Mr. Frans Andriessen, Mr. Martin Bangemann, Sir Leon Brittan, Mr. Henning Christophersen, Mr. Manuel Marin and Mr. Filippo Pandolfi.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Government Expenditure

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the average general Government expenditure in cash terms, real terms, and as a percentage of gross domestic product for each period of five years since 1959.

Mr. Major: Figures for general Government expenditure (excluding privatisation proceeds) in cash and real terms and money gross domestic product for 1963-64 to 1991-92, for which five yearly averages can be derived, were given in table 1.1 of the 1988 Autumn Statement. For earlier years, calendar year figures for general Government expenditure, in cash and real terms, and as a percentage of GDP, were published in the article "Long term trends in public expenditure" in the October 1987 edition of Economic Trends.

VAT

Mr. Heddle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessments he has made on the impact of the imposition of value added tax on non-domestic construction of the viability of schemes entered into but not confirmed by binding building contracts before the date of publication of the judgment by the European Court on 21 June 1988.

Mr. Lilley: I have given detailed consideration to this matter in the course of consultations with developers following the EC court ruling on the imposition of VAT on non-domestic construction. I propose to publish draft clauses shortly.

National Savings

Mr. Hanley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what sales of the new National Savings capital bond have been made to date; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lilley: By Tuesday 24 January savers had invested some £45 million in capital bonds since they were introduced on 4 January. Purchases are currently running at nearly £20 million a week. This is a most encouraging start. It demonstrates that investors are attracted by the offer of a guaranteed annual return of 12 per cent. gross of income tax over five years, regardless of what happens to other interest rates.

Central Office of Information

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he is proposing any change to the Central Office of Information cash limit for 1988-89.

Mr. Lilley: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the cash limit for class XIX vote 1 will be increased by £103,000 from £1,181,000 to £1,284,000. The increase will be charged to the reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure. The additional expenditure is needed to cover services provided by the Central Office of Information on an allied service basis.

Customs and Excise

Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if there are any proposals to change the 1988-89 cash limit and running costs limit for Her Majesty's Customs and Excise.

Mr. Lilley: Both the cash limit and the running costs limit for HM Customs and Excise (class XIX, vote 2) have been reduced by £3,000: from £514,733,000 to £514,730,000 and from £464,058,000 to £464,055,000 respectively. These decreases will be offset by corresponding increases in the cash limit and running costs limit for the Cabinet Office: Office of the Minister for the Civil Service (class XX, vote 1) and reflect the transfer of costs for recruitment under the direct entry grade 7 costs competition, 1988.

There is no overall increase in either cash limits or gross running costs limits for Government as a whole as a result of these changes, which will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Race Relations

Ms. Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will introduce identifiable channels of complaint or grievance procedures for prisoners who feel that they have suffered racial discrimination; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Any prisoner who thinks that he or she may have suffered racial discrimination can raise the matter through the usual grievance procedures. In addition, provided that the complaint is raised internally at the same time, the prisoner may write to the Commission for Racial Equality, which will decide what action to take.

Ms. Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will take steps to ensure that every regional race relations co-ordinators' group includes a representative from the Prison Officers Association.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The regional race relations co-ordinators' group provides a forum for the discussion of race relations issues and, drawing on these discussions and on information from governors and prison service headquarters, advises the prisons board on the service's implementation of the race relations policy. Its membership includes the four regional race relations co-ordinators, representatives from headquarters and one of the community relations consultants. It is not the general practice to invite representatives of staff associations to participate in meetings that are essentially concerned with management matters.

Ms. Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will take steps to ensure that boards of visitors have oversight over race relations matters; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will take steps to ensure that boards of visitors routinely receive results of all racial monitoring and liaise on a regular basis with the race relations committee on their establishment.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The principal duty of a board of visitors is to satisfy itself as to the state of the prison premises, the administration of the prison, and the treatment of prisoners. Boards report annually on how they have carried out this duty. Guidance to boards on the content of their report includes the need to report on race relations matters. We would expect them to ensure that they have access to the necessary information for this purpose. We are considering, however, whether more detailed advice would be helpful.

Ms. Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will take steps to ensure that the monitoring of memoers of ethnic minorities in prison and various work parties and training courses is sensitive to the length of time inmates stay in a particular workplace and the allocation of high-status jobs.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Guidance issued to governors requires them to ensure that all inmates have equal access to training courses and to jobs and to be particularly vigilant in monitoring access to the more attractive jobs. No specific guidance has been given in regard to monitoring the length of time inmates stay in particular jobs.

Ms. Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will take steps to ensure that data collection on race in prison department establishments is standardised to enable comparisons to be drawn across establishments and across regions.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Establishments have already been given guidance on the standard classifications to be used when recording the ethnic origin of prisoners. This took effect from 1 June 1984.

Ms. Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to publish the report entitled "Race Relations in Prison" by Elaine Genders and Elaine Player; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We understand that the Oxford University Press will be publishing the report on 2 February.

Ms. Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will take steps to ensure that staff who are chosen to undertake specific duties in prison such as classification and transfer are given particular guidance on the exercise of their discretion in matters involving race relations.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Guidance issued to prison staff stresses that all duties can be discharged properly only if staff treat prisoners with humanity and respect, impartially and without discrimination on the grounds of colour, race or religion.

Prisons (Psychiatry)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners and others taken into custody have been subjected to body belts in 1988; to what extent a rota system of consultant psychiatrists is available to (a) prisons and (b) the police; on how many such cases their services were used; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: A governor may order an inmate in a prison service establishement to be put under restraint in a body belt where this is necessary to prevent the inmate from injuring himself or others, damaging property or creating a disturbance. During 1987 (the last year for which figures are currently available), body belts were used on 74 occasions in establishments in England and Wales. The prison medical office must be informed whenever a governor orders an inmate to be put under restraint.

Consultants employed in the NHS are frequently called upon by prison medical officers for specialist advice in the context of inmates' treatment generally and in emergencies. In the year ended 31 March 1988 (the last year for which information is available), the cases of 2,815 inmates were referred to NHS consultant psychiatrists, and of a further 9,410 to other NHS psychiatrists. Such services are available round the clock by arrangement with regional health authorities. Information about the incidence of referrals or consultants for specific purposes is not available.

The treatment of people held in police custody is governed by code C (code of practice for the detention, treatment and questioning of persons by police officers) of the codes of practice made under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984. The code states that reasonable force may be used to prevent escape, injury, damage to property or the destruction of evidence and requires medical attention for the suspect to be sought whenever necessary, normally from the police surgeon.

Custody records in respect of every person detained by the police are held locally and the information sought could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Essex Police Force

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy to increase the establishment of the Essex police force by 150 phased equally over the next three years.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My right hon. Friend will consider applications for increases in the Essex police establishment, together with those received from other authorities, in the context of the extra police posts which may be available year on year and with advice from Her Majesty's inspectorate of constabulary. He expects shortly to announce his decisions on increases in police establishments for 1989-90.

Passports

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for (a) new passports and (b) amendments to passports were made at each office in each year since 1979; and if he will indicate the number of applications received in each month in 1987 and 1988.

Mr. Renton: The information, which relates to passports issued rather than to applications, is shown in the tables.

Table 1. Annual total of new passports issued and amendments made to existing passports (1979-1988)

	1979		1980		1981		1982		1983
	(a)	(b)	(a)	(b)	(a)	(b)	(a)	(b)	(a)	(b)
London	405,431	71,146	471,479	34,253	392,725	21,101	453,262	25,246	423,957	27,995
Liverpool	474,179	35,916	575,012	24,946	432,953	20,739	542,412	27,021	492,901	30,054
Peterborough	376,507	42,948	459,426	27,696	383,155	17,196	457,855	21,699	434,193	23,141
Newport	389,821	27,105	463,915	22,439	393,331	15,336	447,159	18,241	439,793	19,261
Glasgow	163,153	15,387	212,868	12,191	166,374	7,537	197,109	10,309	182,386	11,141
Belfast	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	6,514	603
Total	1,809,091	192,502	2,182,700	121,525	1,768,538	81,909	2,097,797	102,516	1,979,744	112,195

Column (a) shows new passports issued.
Column (b) shows endorsements and amendments to existing passports.

	1984		1985		1986		1987		1988
	(a)	(b)	(a)	(b)	(a)	(b)	(a)	(b)	(a)	(b)
London	424,341	31,988	418,036	26,889	437,857	28,129	355,475	23,345	414,569	22,649
Liverpool	481,540	28,952	446,813	32,327	556,664	36,076	554,993	27,595	665,277	32,829
Peterborough	418,074	25,986	392,460	25,249	482,797	31,581	480,422	29,114	565,096	29,617
Newport	403,520	18,356	369,981	17,472	427,800	18,829	439,302	14,048	547,685	23,175
Glasgow	146,123	10,362	137,098	9,650	159,954	11,587	159,723	11,042	165,633	9,480
Belfast	33,707	1,546	34,655	1,537	45,472	2,031	51,305	2,321	60,248	2,458
Total	1,907,305	117,190	1,799,043	113,124	2,110,544	128,233	2,041,220	107,465	2,418,508	120,208

Column (a) shows new passports issued.
Column (b) shows endorsements and amendments to existing passports.

2. Monthly total of new passports issued (1987-88)

	London	Liverpool	Peterborough	Newport	Glasgow	Belfast	Total
January 1987	23,682	30,319	29,806	27,999	7,251	2,534	121,591
January 1988	25,044	28,592	41,880	35,049	7,402	3,246	141,213
February 1987	35,565	48,946	49,917	39,614	13,838	4,954	192,834
February 1988	34,136	68,377	44,845	52,379	10,613	5,575	215,925
March 1987	40,488	75,898	60,983	51,542	21,179	5,604	255,694
March 1988	38,831	78,554	60,155	66,788	20,035	6,278	270,641
April 1987	33,065	62,425	56,051	31,345	16,334	6,362	205,582
April 1988	39,994	79,168	62,605	59,824	20,556	7,443	269,590
May 1987	24,383	51,586	48,473	30,188	11,109	6,874	172,613
May 1988	45,130	103,559	57,405	60,329	26,149	7,929	300,501
June 1987	31,376	55,486	54,841	44,200	18,524	8,405	212,832
June 1988	51,411	71,656	63,461	57,851	22,272	10,286	276,937
July 1987	52,269	65,066	48,004	45,575	19,069	5,625	235,608
July 1988	48,953	76,327	64,174	46,446	22,682	7,969	266,551
August 1987	40,099	56,929	38,765	53,836	17,939	4,195	211,763
August 1988	34,458	46,551	50,528	51,991	2,630	4,566	190,724
September 1987	24,731	32,838	25,815	49,407	14,665	2,681	150,137
September 1988	24,480	31,081	25,929	22,112	7,284	2,421	113,307
October 1987	15,940	27,529	22,891	23,236	7,410	1,596	98,602
October 1988	23,312	32,086	28,829	26,042	8,453	1,653	120,375
November 1987	20,584	26,496	24,242	21,095	6,646	1,356	100,419
November 1988	31,220	39,145	37,792	37,755	9,474	1,714	157,100
December 1987	13,293	21,475	20,634	21,265	5,759	1,119	83,545
December 1988	17,600	10,181	27,493	31,119	8,083	1,168	95,644

	London	Liverpool	Peterborough	Newport	Glasgow	Belfast	Total
Total 1987	355,475	554,993	480,422	439,302	159,723	51,305	2,041,220
Total 1988	414,569	665,277	565,096	547,685	165,633	60,248	2,418,508

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is the average time taken to process applications for new passports at each office from time of receipt to date of issue as at the first day of each month in 1988;

(2) what was the average time taken to process applications for (a) renewal and (b) amendment to passports at each office from time of receipt to date of issue on the first day of each month in 1988.

Mr. Renton: I regret that the information is not available in precisely the form requested. The processing times in working days for straightforward, non-urgent applications of all types are shown in the table, and relate to applications completed on the dates shown.

	London	Liverpool	Peterborough	Newport	Glasgow	Belfast
January	45	5	19	7	6	2
February	32	10	12	12	14	3
March	43	14	20·5	15	24	3
April	39	11	25·5	18	28	3
May	47	13	30	18	33	4
June	56	11	34	21	35	4
July	52	14	34	22	38	3
August	12	11	16	12	2	2
September	8	10	7	5	7	2
October	8	7	6	6	13	2
November	16	6	7	11	11	2
December	11	2	7	6	13	2

Note: Figures are those at the first weekend of each month in 1988.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the number of staff (a) in past and (b) actually on duty in each passport office on the first day of each month in 1988.

Mr. Renton: The table shows the number of staff in post and on duty at each regional passport office on the first working day of each month in 1988.

	London	Liverpool	Peterborough	Newport	Glasgow	Belfast
January
(a)	250·5	200	177·5	177	83	14·5
(b)	215·5	165·5	153	160	65	11·5
February
(a)	271·5	209	191	185·5	91	16
(b)	244·5	178·5	158	155	76	16
March
(a)	272·5	231	208	221·5	92·5	16·5
(b)	243·5	187·5	185	190	78	12
April
(a)	278·5	248	217·5	221·5	103·5	18
(b)	255·5	175·5	167·5	146	81	13
May
(a)	304·5	248·5	226·5	223·5	123·5	20
(b)	280·5	206·5	194·5	187	107	17
June
(a)	302	259·5	223	220·5	121·5	21
(b)	281	205·5	168·5	147	104	21
July
(a)	301	256·5	217	213·5	126·5	21
(b)	272	187·5	153·5	171	107·5	14
August
(a)	304	249·5	221	207·5	122·5	23
(b)	284	185·5	177	156	103·5	17
September
(a)	266·5	210	179·5	189·5	114·5	15
(b)	240·5	154	152	160	91·5	10·5
October
(a)	266·5	195·5	169	168·5	104·5	13
(b)	241·5	148·5	143	137	77·5	10
November
(a)	251·5	190·5	169	166·5	120	12
(b)	235·5	160	148·5	141	107	7
December
(a)	245	198·5	176	162·5	129	12
(b)	221	154·5	158·5	128	101	7·5

Column (a) Number of staff in post.
(b) Number of staff on duty (London figures do not reflect absences on annual/flexible working hours leave).

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were employed on a casual basis, namely, not on the permanent staff, at each passport office in each month of 1987 and 1988; and what was the cost of such staff.

Mr. Renton: The table below shows the number of casual staff in post at each regional passport office on the last day of each month in 1987 and 1988, and the annual cost of such staff.

	London	Liverpool	Peterborough	Newport	Glasgow	Belfast
January 1987	20	5	19	16	5	—
January 1988	20	11	25	20	8	—
February 1987	22	27	26	21	7	1
February 1988	27	32	43	53	10	2
March 1987	25	34	37	33	9	1
March 1988	37	51	51	52·5	21	4
April 1987	40	33	39	33	9	2
April 1988	62·5	50	62	53·5	40	5
May 1987	27	45	42	39	15	3
May 1988	54	62	60	51·5	38	5
June 1987	50	49	43	51	26	5
June 1988	56·5	58	54	48·5	39	6
July 1987	47	46	37	50	24	5
July 1988	57·5	53	58	41·5	35	8
August 1987	34	12	24	41	18	4
August 1988	26	25	31	35·5	29	—
September 1987	12	—	9	11	8	—
September 1988	19	21	8	5	18	—
October 1987	10	—	2	—	7	—
October 1988	12	17	9	4	7	—
November 1987	6	—	2	—	6	—
November 1988	10	17	16	4	7	—
December 1987	3	—	1	—	6	—
December 1988	7	12	4	—	7	—

Salary cost of casual staff: 1987—£567,002. 1988—£864,030.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many visitors' passports were issued in each year from 1979; and how many extensions to passports were issued in 1986 to date.

Mr. Renton: The information is shown in the tables.

I. Annual issues of British Visitors Passports (1979-1987)

	Numbers
1979	1,087,485
1980	1,178,885
1981	1,739,194
1982	1,399,575
1983	1,436,639
1984	1,501,579
1985	1,419,225
1986	1,806,168
1987	2,161,489

The figure for 1988 is not yet available.

II. Annual total of free short-term extensions to expired passports granted to personal callers at the London Passport Office

	Number
1986	Nil
1987	13,532
1988	18,511

Precise figures are not available from the other regional passport offices, but the numbers issued were very low.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the estimated time expected to be taken between receipt by application and issue of (a) new passports, (b) renewals and (c) amendment to passports at each office in 1989.

Mr. Renton: Subject to continuing satisfactory progress with the computerisation programme and no unforeseen changes occurring in the volume and pattern of demand for passport services, the passport department will be aiming in 1989 to process all straightforward, non-urgent passport applications within a month.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the target time for answering telephone inquiries at each passport office as at (a) 1 July 1988 and (b) the latest available date; what was the estimated average time to answer such calls; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: There were no specific target times for answering telephone inquiries during 1988, and no information is available as to the average time taken to answer such calls. The passport department has undertaken a complete review of its telephone systems with a view to improving the service provided to the public, and various enhancements are being made. The aim in 1989 will be to provide a personal response to 90 per cent. of calls within two minutes of connection, but the achievement of this will depend on a number of factors, including the successful implementation of the remainder of the computerisation programme.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will indicate the date of receipt of applications for new passports being dealt with on (a) 1 July 1988 and (b) 1 August 1988 at each passport office.

Mr. Renton: The table shows the date of receipt of applications for new passports being dealt with by each regional passport office at the first weekend in July and August 1988.

	Week ending 3 July 1988	Week ending 7 August 1988
London	19 April	25 July
Liverpool	17 June	22 July
Peterborough	19 May	18 July
Newport	6 June	20 July
Glasgow	19 May	5 August
Belfast	1 July	5 August

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff not employed as permanent members of staff have worked for a continuous period of (a) three months and (b) six months or more in 1988, showing the information for each passport office.

Mr. Renton: The table shows the number of casual staff employed continuously at each regional passport office during 1988 for (a) three months or more and (b) six months or more.

	(a)	(b)
London	70	25
Liverpool	29	29
Peterborough	63	34
Newport	52	30
Glasgow	39	29
Belfast	3	2

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will consider a public campaign to encourage people to apply for new passports in the months from January to June and November and December.

Mr. Renton: The passport department already publicises on its application forms and in other ways, the need to apply for passports in good time and to avoid the peak summer periods when delays tend to be greatest. They are examining ways of reinforcing this message in 1989.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total budget for salaries and overtime in passport offices in 1988-89; what is the estimated expenditure; and if he will provide the same information for 1989-90.

Mr. Renton: The salaries and overtime element of the passport department's budget for running costs in 1988-89 amounted to £9·9 million. This is likely to be exceeded due to the heavy demand for passport services during the year, but it is not yet possible to say precisely what the outturn expenditure will be. Budget estimates for 1989-90 have yet to be finally determined.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many telephone lines are available for calls from the public at each passport office in 1989; how many were available in 1988; how many staff are currently allowed to answer such calls; how many were available to do so during June to October 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: The table shows the number of telephone lines available for incoming calls from the public at each passport office in (a) January 1988 and (b) January 1989.

	(a)	(b)
London	28	28
Liverpool	24	24
Peterborough	12	24
Newport	17	40
Glasgow	6	12
Belfast	3	3

The switchboards at London, Peterborough and Newport connect callers initially to recorded message systems, giving general information for passport applicants. This service is to be extended to the other offices. Staff are allocated to telephone inquiry duties according to the overall operational needs of the office, taking into account other demands, in particular that of passport-issuing. No precise information is available as to the number of staff available to answer incoming calls during a particular period.

Passport Offices (Hours of Work)

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will indicate (a) the number of hours overtime, (b) the average number of hours overtime and (c) the cost of such overtime to each passport office in each month in 1988.

Mr. Renton: The table shows the monthly number of hours overtime worked at each regional passport office, and the estimated cost of such overtime, in 1988.

	London	Liverpool	Peterborough	Newport	Glasgow	Belfast
January
(a)	2,088	1,263	2,269	2,391	325	0
(b)	22,181	10,180	18,288	19,271	2,620	0
February
(a)	5,029	6,467	3,634	4,810	1,520	0
(b)	53,424	52,124	29,290	38,769	12,251	0
March
(a)	4,667	11,017	3,190	4,994	2,636	0
(b)	49,578	88,797	25,711	40,252	21,246	0
April
(a)	7,373	16,276	5,138	7,455	3,865	0
(b)	78,325	131,185	41,412	60,087	31,152	0
May
(a)	6,432	11,119	3,792	4,059	3,648	0
(b)	68,328	89,619	30,564	32,716	29,403	0
June
(a)	4,351	4,625	4,065	3,271	2,809	248
(b)	46,221	37,278	32,764	26,364	22,641	1,999
July
(a)	5,654	4,301	2,928	3,388	2,790	614

	London	Liverpool	Peterborough	Newport	Glasgow	Belfast
(b)	60,063	34,666	23,600	27,307	22,487	4,949
August
(a)	1,637	0	1,686	1,322	0	0
(b)	17,390	0	13,589	10,655	0	0
September
(a)	231	397	29	0	315	0
(b)	2,454	3,200	234	0	2,539	0
October
(a)	997	1,407	123	0	594	0
(b)	10,591	11,340	991	0	4,788	0
November
(a)	3,463	2,386	998	1,146	0	0
(b)	36,788	19,231	8,044	9,237	0	0
December
(a)	1,342	0	1,238	2,905	461	0
(b)	14,256	0	9,978	23,414	3,716	0

Column:
(a) shows the number of hours overtime worked.
(b) shows the estimated cost of such overtime in £.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the estimated amount of overtime expected to be worked at each passport office in 1989; and what is the estimated cost.

Mr. Renton: The requirements for overtime working are determined by operational needs, which are in turn determined by the level and pattern of demand for passport services. Budget estimates for 1989-90 have yet to be finally determined.

Heathrow (Police)

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis of the total hours worked by police officers at Heathrow airport in each month from April to October 1988.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I understand from the commissioner that the information is as follows:

	Hours
April	64,069
May	65,996
June	64,483
July	64,917
August	61,673
September	60,900
October	65,553

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis on the number of hours worked by police officers at Heathrow airport in each week from 31 October 1988 to 22 January 1989 or to the latest date for which information is available; what is the average number of hours expected to be worked by officers at Heathrow in each week until 31 March 1989; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I understand from the commissioner that the information is as follows:

	Hours
31 October 1988 to 6 November 1988	15,485
7 November 1988 to 13 November 1988	15,389
14 November 1988 to 20 November 1988	15,682
21 November 1988 to 27 November 1988	15,489
28 November 1988 to 4 December 1988	16,539
5 December 1988 to 11 December 1988	16,032
12 December 1988 to 18 December 1988	14,863
19 December 1988 to 25 December 1988	14,765
26 December 1988 to 1 January 1989	11,024
2 January 1989 to 8 January 1989	14,016
9 January 1989 to 15 January 1989	15,361

The average number of hours worked each week until 31 March is expected to be about 15,400.

Crime (Lighting)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will consider implementing a programme to substantially improve lighting in public areas and streets to combat crime; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: I accept the view that substantial improvements in street lighting can reduce the public's fear of crime, and in certain circumstances can help to prevent crime itself. Together with colleagues in the Departments of Environment and Transport, we are seeking to identify where early action can be taken.

Criminal Injuries Compensation Board

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has as to the average time taken for the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board to come to a final decision on claims made to the board for compensation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Isle of Wight (Mr. Field) on 20 January at column 350.

Pirate Decoders

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what body will have the responsibility for policing pirate decoders after the abolition of the Independent Broadcasting Authority.

Mr. Renton: Should pirate equipment become available, it would be for the company to pursue the pirate manufacturers through the civil courts, or for the police to investigate any criminal offences which might have been committed.

Channel 5

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether investment in Channel 5, prior to its establishment, will be borne by ITV and Channel 4.

Mr. Renton: We have no proposals to invite existing contractors to invest in Channel 5.

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has on how much the Independent Broadcasting Authority spent on Channel 5.

Mr. Renton: The IBA has been involved in a study of the operational and engineering aspects of the proposed Channel 5 but I understand that their costs have not been separately identified.

Mr. Mark Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of any disruption to ITV and Channel 4 services which will be caused by the installation of Channel 5 transmitter equipment.

Mr. Renton: Detailed arrangement have not yet been made for the introduction of Channel 5 transmission. Experience suggests that, though short-term interruptions to night time services might be necessary there need be no interruption to services during the day and evening.

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will publish a table identifying which transmitter sites need additional equipment before transmitting Channel 5.

Mr. Renton: The precise coverage of a Channel 5 service has not yet been decided.

Transmitters

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether it is his intention to define minimum standards of transmitter performance which will apply after 1992.

Mr. Renton: As our White Paper made clear, we intend to ensure that high technical standards are maintained. The study on the privatisation of the transmission system which we announced on 30 December will examine whether any technical regulation is necessary to ensure this, and if so, what form it should take.

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department by what means transmitter replacement will be funded.

Mr. Renton: As we made clear in our White Paper, a privatised transmission system will be expected to achieve the same degree and quality of coverage as at present. The study on the privatisation of the transmission system which we announced on 30 December will be examining how this objective can be best achieved. The cost of maintaining the transmission system would fall to the private sector operators.

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the Independent Television Commission will be responsible for monitoring transmitter performance.

Mr. Renton: It is envisaged that the ITC will supervise the transmission arrangements for independent services, in order to ensure conformity with international obligations and the observance of technical specifications designed to limit interference. The study on the privatisation of the transmission system which we are commissioning will consider whether any further technical regulation is necessary.

In the transitional period before the establishment of a privatised transmission system, we envisage that the ITC will also be responsible for appointing, and monitoring the performance of, transmission contractors.

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many ITV and Channel 4 transmitters are on British Broadcasting Corporation-owned sites.

Mr. Renton: Four hundred and sixty one.

Business Vote (City of London)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy to abolish the business vote in the City of London; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: No.

Aldermen

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy to seek to abolish the office of alderman.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We have no plans to abolish the office.

SCOTLAND

Skye (Road Bridge)

Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the proposed construction of a road bridge to Skye; what submissions he has received from the private construction sector; what further consultations have taken place with representatives of the Highland regional council; what consideration has been given to the possibility of recouping capital costs by means of toll charges; and what assessment has been made of the implications of any of the above on the budgetary position of Highland regional council's roads department.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Highland regional council commissioned a study of the possibility of building a bridge to Skye. This was discussed with officials of the Scottish Development Department in October 1987. It was agreed that the regional council should ask its consultants to carry out further work. Following its completion there was a discussion between Highland regional council and Scottish Development Department officials in November 1988. A range of options and their financial implications is now being considered. Two firms which suggested that the bridge might be built as a private sector project have been asked to provide further information, in particular on the level of tolls which might be charged if the bridge was built in this way.

Nursery Education

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the number of those aged three and four in Scotland in nurseries, pre-school playgroups or other forms of education (a) at the latest available date, (b) five, (c) 10 and (d) 15 years ago, expressed numerically and as a percentage of the age group; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The numbers of children aged three and four years (at December each year) in nursery, special and primary schools in September 1972, 1977, 1982 and 1987 were 21,880, 40,570, 45,010 and 50,070 respectively which were 12·3, 28·4, 36·5 and 39·7 per cent. of the population respectively. In addition, in 1987 there were 43,430 places in pre-school playgroups and 4,470 in day nurseries, children's centres and family centres; information on pupil numbers is not available for these establishments. It is estimated that in total about 80 per cent. of three and four-year-olds were involved in one of the above mentioned forms of activity in 1987.

Empty Properties

Mr. Gregory: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the most recent figure for empty local authority housing; how many of these properties have been vacant for periods over six, 12 and 24 months, respectively; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: On the basis of information returned to the Scottish Development Department, some 23,000 local authority houses are estimated to have been vacant at the end of March 1988. Information on the length of vacancies is not collected in the form requested, but, of the 8,150 vacant houses estimated to be available for letting, approximately 1,500 had been vacant for more than six months.

I am concerned that, where possible, empty houses should be brought back into use and I have sought details of authorities' policies in this regard.

Health Service (Dismissals)

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what current procedures are in force concerning an appeal against dismissal, by a health board, of a consultant-surgeon; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: There are two avenues of appeal to the Secretary of State which are available to an NHS consultant dismissed by a health board. One, which is open only to senior medical and dental staff, is that set out under paragraph 190 of their terms and conditions of service. Under this the doctor remains suspended from duty until the appeal process is completed. The other procedure, which is open to all NHS staff, is that set out under section 40 of the general Whitley council agreements. This is normally invoked after dismissal has taken effect.

Rates

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list for each year from 1982-83 (a) the average rates and (b) the percentage annual increase in the average rates payable per household in Scotland.

Mr. Lang: The figures requested are shown in the table.

	Average domestic rate bill £	Percentage increase
1982-83	309	13·6
1983-84	310	0·1
1984-85	328	6·0
1985-86	392	19·5
1986-87	417	6·3
1987-88	474	13·8
1988-89	495	4·4

Rating Reform

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the organisations which have made representations concerning exemptions from the community charge for people with a severe mental impairment.

Mr. Lang: The following organisations with an interest in the exemption for the severely mentally impaired were consulted about the detailed provisions relating to that exemption:

Archdiocesan Council for the Mentally Handicapped
Association of Directors of Social Work
British Association of Social Workers
British Psychological Society (Scottish Branch of the Division of Clinical Psychology)
Church of Scotland Board of Social Responsibility
Convention of Scottish Local Authorities
Health Board General Managers
Housing Corporations
Institute of Health Service Management (Scottish Division)
Mental Welfare Commission for Scotland
Psychiatric Nurses Association
Royal College of General Practitioners (Scottish Council)
Royal College of Nursing
Royal College of Psychiatrists (Scottish Division)
Scottish Assessors' Association
Scottish Federation of Housing Associations
Scottish General Medical Services Committee
Scottish Society for Mental Handicap

In addition my right hon. and learned Friend has received representations or inquiries from:—

Alzheimers Scotland
ACORN Centre, Edinburgh
British Medical Association
Scottish Action on Dementia

and a number of Health Boards and other NHS organisations.

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list by district council area the weekly net income level at which a single person with no dependants would lose entitlement to the community charge rebate.

Mr. Lang: This information is not available.

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will estimate the number of adults who will be eligible for a community charge rebate.

Mr. Lang: It is estimated that over 1 million adults in Scotland will receive a community charge rebate.

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the number of premises, broken down by community charge registration area, which have been designated as liable for the collective community charge.

Mr. Lang: The number of designated premises included on the community charges register for each regional and islands council area as at 1 October 1988 was as follows:

	Number
Borders	3
Central	n/a
Dumfries and Galloway	8
Fife	5
Grampian	n/a
Highland	6
Lothian	37
Strathclyde	40
Tayside	60
Orkney	0
Shetland	1
Western Isles	0

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to introduce flexibility in the application of the standard community charge multiplier.

Mr. Lang: Under section 10(7) of the Abolition of Domestic Rates Etc. (Scotland) Act 1987, as amended by the Local Government Finance Act 1988, local authorities already have discretion to set the standard community charge multiplier at between one and two times the level of the personal community charge for their areas. There are no plans to introduce greater flexibility.

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what advice he will give to private sector tenants who do not have registered rents and to private landlords regarding the abolition of domestic rates and the consequent reduction which should be made to the tenant's period charge following the removal of the rates element.

Mr. Lang: After 1 April this year private sector tenants whose accommodation charges include contributions towards their landlord's domestic rates bills will be entitled to a reduction in their payments to reflect the abolition of domestic rates. Landlords will have no right to ask for such contributions. Regulated tenants who do not have a registered rent at present will be able to enforce their right to lower payments by applying to the rent officer for their rent to be registered. They will then know by how much they should reduce their payments, because registered rents are net of any payments towards rates. Tenants in regulated tenancies will have a right to seek registration of a fair rent for as long as their tenancy lasts.

Tenants of assured tenancies taken out from 2 January this year will see from the written statement of the terms of their tenancy which their landlord is obliged by law to give them what reduction should be made in their payments from 1 April. Thereafter, prospective tenants will be able to ask the landlord what adjustment has been made to the total accommodation charge to take account of the rates element of the previous charge.

Tenants will therefore have full protection against unreasonable charges by landlords.

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if single persons in prison will be liable for a standard community charge and community water charge in respect of a house they own, rent or lease during the period of their imprisonment; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: Where a prisoner's house ceases to be his sole or main residence and there is no one else solely or mainly resident there he will be liable to pay the standard community charge and the standard community water charge in respect of it.

Public Spending

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his estimate of gross and net public sector capital spending by his Department by both central Government and local authorities for 1988-89, and for each of the next three years, at current prices and at constant 1987-88 prices.

Mr. Lang: Information on public expenditure in Scotland will be provided in the Scotland and supplementary analyses chapters of the public expenditure White Paper which will be published on Monday 30 January 1989.

Employment Training

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, what was the total number of employment training places (a) authorised and (b) filled on the latest date for which information is available.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 19 January 1989]: There is provision for 41,473 employment training places in 1988-89 once the programme is fully operational. On 13 January 1989, 12,497 places were filled by employment training trainees. A further 7,174 were filled by those continuing under community programme terms and conditions.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

City Technology Colleges

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will consider extending the establishment of city technology colleges to rural areas.

Mrs. Rumbold: The terms of section 105 of the Education Reform Act, under which we shall pay grant to CTCs, lay down that a CTC should be situated in an urban area because it is there that the expectations of parents and pupils of the education system are furthest from fulfilment. However, CTCs will have lessons for all schools in combating underachievement, in establishing closer links with employers, in the use of information technology throughout the curriculum and in more effective school management.

Pupil Numbers

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many children have been in fee-paying schools for the last three years for which figures are available.

Mr. Butcher: The total number of pupils attending non-maintained schools in England in 1986, 1987 and 1988 wre 526,000 538,000 and 547,000 respectively.

Mr. Grocott: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is his latest estimate of the proportion of children at school who are educated within the state education system.

Mr. Butcher: In January 1988 the number of children attending maintained schools in England as a proportion of all children in school was 92·8 per cent.

History

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he expects the curriculum working group on history to report; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: I refer the hon. Member to the reply which my right hon. Friend gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Rugby and Kenilworth (Mr. Pawsey) on 13 January at column 762.

Truancy

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he has any plans to provide national truancy statistics to enable comparison to be made between schools that have opted out and those that remain with the local education authority.

Mr. Butcher: My right hon. Friend has no plans to require local education authorities and governors of grant-maintaind schools to submit information to him on attendance levels. It will be for local education authorities and governers of grant-maintained schools to monitor attendance levels at their schools and to decide whether to publish information on attendance.

Higher Education

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many full-time students entered (a) university or (b) polytechnic courses for the first time in the academic year 1988-89.

Mr. Jackson: Provisional estimates for 1988 indicate that there were 87,000 full-time first year students, other than postgraduates, in universities and 124,000 in polytechnics and colleges in Great Britain.

Special Educational Needs

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what was the total amount spent, per capita, on children with special educational needs in each of the last five years at constant prices.

Mr. Butcher: The average net institutional expenditure per pupil in maintained special education for the five years to 1986-87, the last year for which information is available, is as follows:

Net institutional expenditure per pupil (£)
Special education—England[1,2]
£ per pupil
1986-87 real terms[3]

	£
1982-83	3,655
1983-84	3,725
1984-85	3,880
1985-86	4,175
1986-87	4,460

[1] The figures are based on LEA expenditure returns to DOE and pupil number returns to DES.

[2] The figures cover maintained special schools, home teaching, individual teaching in hospitals, other special education provided other than at school and education in social services establishments where this is charged to the education account. Information on expenditure on pupils with special needs educated in primary and secondary schools is not available.

[3] The cash figures for the earlier years have been repriced to 1986-87 prices using the gross domestic product (market prices) deflator.

ECCTIS and CATS

Dr. Hampson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the scale of operations cost and relationship of the educational counselling and credit transfer information system (ECCTIS) and the credit accumulation of transfer systems (CATS).

Mr. Jackson: The ECCTIS is a computerised information service funded by the Department of Education and Science at an estimated cost in 1988-89 of £789,000. Its main purpose is to provide prospective students with information about courses in further and higher education. It also contains a facility to provide information about credit transfer opportunities including, where available, the credit rating of certain courses included in its database. The credit rating information is provided by the Council for National Academic Awards (CNAA) which runs CATS. The CNAA is an independent chartered body funded from fee income and CATS forms an integral part of the services which the council provides. I understand that the annual cost to the CNAA for CATS is of the order of £350,000.

AIDS

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what research is being undertaken in the United Kingdom on the effectiveness of anti-viral drugs in preventing or delaying the development of AIDS in people who are HIV positive; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: The Medical Research Council is conducting a clinical trial to test whether zidovudine (formerly known as AZT) benefits healthy HIV positive people. In the MRC's view, no other drug is yet developed enough to justify a trial. The MRC directed programme aims to develop anti-viral drugs and vaccines to prevent or delay the development of AIDS in people infected with HIV.

Medical Students (Drugs)

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will undertake research into the number of medical students who have taken cannabis or other addictive drugs.

Mr. Jackson: My right hon. Friend has no plans to initiate such research.

Residential Special Schools

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will be providing additional financial support to inner London boroughs to maintain the Inner London education authority's residential special schools after transfer in April 1990.

Mrs. Rumbold: It is hoped that detailed decisions about the allocation of responsibility for these schools will be reached shortly. Like other local education authorities, from April 1990, the inner London councils will be operating under the financial arrangements established by the Local Government Finance Act 1988; in this context, the Government are currently consulting the local authority associations about a new simplified needs assessment for education.

Marine Pollution

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the level of funding for research into marine pollution.

Mr. Jackson: The Natural Environment Research Council plans to undertake research relevant to marine pollution in the financial year 1989-90 at a level of some £4·55 million, including the North sea project to study water quality. In the wider context, the co-ordinating committee on marine science and technology will report in due course on a national strategic framework for Government-funded marine science.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is his estimate of gross and net public sector capital spending by his Department by both central Government and local authorities for 1988-89 and for each of the next three years, at current prices and at constant 1987-88 prices.

Mrs. Rumbold: The estimated capital spending outturn for 1988-89 within the Department of Education and Science programme and planned provision for the next three years are as follows:

	1988-89 estimated outturn £ million	1989-90 plans £ million	1990-91 plans £ million	1991-92 plans £ million
Cash
Local authority
gross	619	545	555	563
net	461	385	394	403
Central Government
gross	378	494	475	481
net	371	487	466	472
Real terms (1987-88 prices)
Local authority
gross	583	489	481	473
net	434	345	341	339
Central Government
gross	356	443	411	404
net	349	437	403	397

From 1989-90 the central Government figures include capital expenditure on the polytechnics and other higher education institutions transferring from the local education authorities to the Polytechnics and Colleges Funding Council sector.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Mater Hospital

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the Eastern health board's proposal to remove obstetrics from the Mater hospital.

Mr. Needham: This proposal is one of the recommendations of the eastern board's complementarity study which are currently the subject of consultation as part of the draft operational plan for 1989-90. When the board reaches conclusions on the study I shall want to discuss the implications for the Mater hospital with the chairman.

Prisoners (Working Out Scheme)

Mr. McCusker: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many prisoners in Northern Ireland have been processed through the working out scheme operated from Her Majesty's prison, Belfast during the past three years; how many prisoners are currently working out; how many are awaiting an opportunity to participate in the scheme; what is the average waiting time for the scheme; and if he will consider its extension to Her Majesty's prison Maze.

Mr. Ian Stewart: During the thre-year period between 1 January 1986, and 31 December 1988, 71 indeterminate sentence prisoners were released on licence after completing a pre-release programme operated from Her Majesty's prison, Belfast. Thirty-eight prisoners are currently involved in the pre-release programme. Fifteen of them are working out of the prison each day and eight are working and living in the community, reporting to the prison at intervals.

There are no prisoners awaiting an opportunity to participate in the scheme. The practice is that once a provisional release date has been set by the Secretary of State the prisoner is informed and transferred to Belfast prison shortly afterwards.

There are no plans to move the pre-release unit from Belfast prison. The use of other prisons, including Maze, on an ad hoc basis has not, however been ruled out should the number of prisoners on pre-release exceed the capacity at Belfast.

Students Numbers

Mr. Eddie McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what were the student numbers in each year group of the bachelor of education honours in-service part-time degree courses in each of the years 1983-84 to 1987-88 in (a) Stranmillis college of education and (b) St. Mary's college of education, Belfast.

Dr. Mawhinney: The numbers of students receiving support from the Department of Education for Northern Ireland in each year are as follows:

	1983-84	1984-85	1985-86	1986-87	1987-88
Stranmillis
New Starts	Nil	Nil	Nil	25	Nil
Carry over	59	35	Nil	Nil	25
St. Mary's
New Starts	34	25	10	29	9
Carry over	77	69	56	34	29

Note:

The numbers of St. Joseph's college of Education are included with St. Mary's in respect of 1983-84 and 1984-85. The 2 colleges amalgamated on 1 September 1985 to form St. Mary's college.

The Department does not hold any information about "independent" students who are not receiving student awards.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what were the student numbers in the post-graduate certificate in education course in each of the years 1983-84 to 1987-88 in (a) Stranmillis college of education and (b) St. Mary's college of education, Belfast;

(2) what were the student numbers in years 1 and 2 of the bachelor of education degree course in each of the years 1983-84, to 1987-88 in (a) Stranmillis college of education and (b) St. Mary's college of education, Belfast;

(3) what were the student numbers in year 3 of the bachelor of education (a) honours and (b) pass degree course in each of the years 1983-84, to 1987-88 in (i) Stranmillis college of education and (ii) St. Mary's college of education, Belfast.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information is as follows:

	Stranmillis College	St. Mary's College
1983-84
Year 1	156	157
Year 2	108	102
Year 3 (Pass) Degree	74	56
Year 3 (Hons) Degree	30	40
PGCE	40	43
PGCE (Hons) Psychology	5	—
1984-85
Year 1	165	168
Year 2	153	153
Year 3 (Pass) Degree	74	59
Year 3 (Hons) Degree	34	45
PGCE	43	46
PGCE (Hons) Psychology	3	—
1985-86
Year 1	168	166
Year 2	162	160
Year 3 (Pass) Degree	94	95
Year 3 (Hons) Degree	59	57
PGCE	43	47
PGCE (Hons) Psychology	5	—
1986-87
Year 1	166	171
Year 2	160	165
Year 3 (Pass) Degree	89	86
Year 3 (Hons) Degree	75	64
PGCE	45	46
PGCE (Hons) Psychology	6	—
1987-88
Year 1	177	173
Year 2	164	166
Year 3 (Pass) Degree	77	75
Year 3 (Hons) Degree	84	94
PGCE	60	58
PGCE (Hons) Psychology	6	—

Note: St. Joseph's college amalgamated with St. Mary's college on 1 September 1985. Figures for the former St. Joseph's college have therefore been included in the St. Mary's college figures for the 1983-84 and 1984-85 years.

Colleges (Grants)

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what were the total grant allocations in each of the years 1983-84 to 1987-88 to (a) Stranmillis college of education and (b) St. Mary's college of education, Belfast.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information is as follows in respect of recurrent grant payments:

	Stranmillis college £	St. Mary's college £
1983-84	2,654,476	1,961,725
1984-85	2,590,107	1,988,000
1985-86	2,542,597	2,235,000
1986-87	2,690,466	2,510,000

Notes:

1. St. Joseph's college amalgamated with St. Mary's college on 1 September 1985. Figures for the former St. Joseph's college have therefore been included in the St. Mary's college figures for the 1983-84, 1984-85 and 1985-86 financial years.
2. Figures have been taken from the audited accounts; information is not available for 1987-88.

Employment Bill

Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he intends to follow the proposals in the Employment Bill introduced on 30 November 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Viggers: Yes. It is our intention to legislate where appropriate for corresponding purposes in Northern Ireland.

Firearms Certificates

Mr. Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many police officers of each rank, and how many civilians of each grade are employed in processing firearms certificates at the Royal Ulster Constabulary firearms section; and what were the comparable figures five and 10 years ago, respectively.

Mr. Ian Stewart [holding answer 24 January 1989]: The number of police officers and civilians employed in processing firearms certificates at the Royal Ulster Constabulary firearms section is as follows:

	31 December 1988	31 December 1983	31 December 1978
Superintendent	1	1	1
Chief Inspector	1	1	1
Inspector	1	1	1
Sergeant	1	1	1
Constable	1	1	1
Executive Officer II	1	1	0
Administrative Officer	5	5	5
Administrative Assistant	33	27	22

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Annual Review

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, how his Department's documents covering the annual review of United Kingdom agriculture will be made available to hon. Members and the public; and if there are to be any major changes in content as compared with previous annual review White Papers.

Mr. Ryder: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer that I gave on 5 December to my hon. Friend the Member for Daventry (Mr. Boswell) at col 30.

Hares

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether his Department is conducting or funding any research into the distribution and density of the British hare population.

Mr. Ryder: My Department is not conducting or funding any research into the distribution and density of the British hare population.

Agriculture Council

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the outcome of the Agriculture Council in Brussels on 23 and 24 January; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I refer my hon. Friend to the statement that I gave earlier today.

Food Poisoning

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what responsibility his Department has for ensuring that foodstuffs are safe for human consumption and carry no risk of food poisoning; in what way this responsibility is carried out; how many and what type of staff are required; what is the annual cost to his Department; and what has been the change in the number of staff and the annual cost to his Department in each of the last five years.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 15 December 1988.]: The Ministry has joint responsibility with the Department of Health for ensuring that foodstuffs are wholesome and safe. This responsibility is exercised through legislation, principally the Food Act 1984 and subordinate legislation and the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985. Under the Food Act 1984 the food industry has the primary responsibility for ensuring that its products are safe.

While enforcement of the legislation lies mainly with local authorities the Ministry also carries out an extensive programme of food surveillance designed to complement the effect of statutory controls and monitor their effectiveness. The work is co-ordinated by the steering group on food surveillance and its latest report, "Food Surveillance Paper No. 24," has been deposited in the Library of the House. The steering group and its working parties also liaise with other advisory committees with responsibility for food safety matters, including the food advisory committee, the advisory committee on pesticides and the veterinary products committee.

A detailed breakdown of ministerial objectives in the area of food safety and the resource allocations, including manpower, over the last three years, are given in programmes 35, 36, 37 and 51 of the Ministry's MINIM 1987 publication. Subprogramme 51a identifies the resources allocated for research into food safety. A copy of MINIM 87 is in the Library of the House.

Cook-Chill Food

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has any plans to ensure that instructions concerning refrigeration and storage on containers of cook-chill food products are sufficiently clear and are printed in large enough type size as to be easily understood and readily identified by consumers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 23 January 1989]: The European Community food labelling directive and the Food Labelling Regulations 1984 already require such foodstuffs to be marked or labelled with an indication of special storage conditions. This information has to be easy to understand clearly legible and indelible and when the foodstuff is sold to the consumer marked in a conspicuous place in such a way as to be easily visible.

NATIONAL FINANCE

VAT

Mr. Heddle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what consultations he has held with (a) Government agencies and (b) outside bodies and others about the impact of value-added tax on non-domestic construction work on the viability of commercial and mixed commercial and residential schemes of urban renewal of inner city regeneration; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lilley: All interested parties, including Government agencies and outside bodies were invited to respond to the consultation document issued on 21 June. Many did so respond and some made points related to urban renewal and inner city regeneration. These responses were followed up in many cases at meetings with me or Customs and Excise officials. As regards residential schemes, there will be no VAT on new housing; and refurbishment of existing housing is already liable to VAT.

HEALTH

Waiting Lists

Mr. Evennet: To ask the Secretary of State for Health Wwhether he has a plans to provide additional funds to reduce hospital waiting lists in the South East Thames region.

Mr. Mellor: Last December we announced a further £1·956 million for South East Thames region from the waiting list fund for 1989-90. This brings the total additional funds made available to South East Thames through this initiative to £6·346 million over three years. In addition two South East Thames districts—West Lambeth, and Lewisham and North Southwark—will have an opportunity to bid against the £6 million reserved next year from the waiting list fund for districts with special waiting problems.

Grading

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what directives have been issued to regional health authorities on regrading nurses; if he will publish them; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: We have issued a range of guidance to regional health authorities, copies of which are in the Library. The objective throughout was to ensure that the clinical grading structure was implemented properly, and in accordance with both the spirit and the letter of the agreement reached by both sides of the nursing and midwifery staffs negotiating council.

Pharmacists

Mr. Favell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on progress in his drive to encourage pharmacists to provide professional services in addition to dispensing and the savings which are being made.

Mr. Mellor: Discussions are taking place with the representatives of the profession on ways in which the proposals in the White Paper "Promoting Better Health" can be put into effect.

The changes to the remuneration system and the controls on the entry of new pharmacies to NHS dispensing introduced in April 1987 have resulted in expenditure on pharmacists' remuneration being lower than would otherwise have been the case.

OPCS

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he has any changes to announce to the cash and gross running costs limits for the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys for 1988-89.

Mr. Freeman: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the cash limit for class XX vote 16 will be increased by a token £1,000 from £24,752,000 to £24,753,000,. The OPCS gross running cost limit for class XX vote 16 will be increased by £257,000 from £38,096,000 to £38,353,000. This increase, reflecting increased expenditure by OPCS on services provided to the Department of the Environment, the Department of Education and Science, the Department of Employment and the Health and Safety Commission, will be offset by corresponding reductions in their gross running costs limits and will not, therefore, add to the planned total of public expenditure.

There is no overall increase in gross running costs as a result of these changes.

Crewe District Health Authority

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will institute an immediate inquiry into the management of the Crewe district health authority.

Mr. Mellor: No.

Adoption and Care

Mr. Gorst: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the national statistics of the number of children adopted or taken into care in 1986, 1987 and 1988 because either or both parents have been suffering from severe mental illness.

Mr. Mellor: This information is not available.

"The Nation's Health"

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will make it his policy to accept the targets for health set out in "The Nation's Health: A Strategy for the 1990's"; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he has considered the recommendations made to Government in "The Nation's Health"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The recommendations and targets put forward in the report "The Nation's Health" cover the work of a number of Government Departments not simply this Department. We welcome the publication of the report, not least because it helps to emphasise the promotion of good health and the prevention of disease. Many of its concerns had already been recognised by the Government and acted upon before publication. We will be considering the many detailed points in the report.

Ambulance Service

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many times recorded announcements have been used in response to calls to the London ambulance service in (a) London and (b) South East Thames regional health authority in the last year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: This information is not collected routinely in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many delays of more than (a) two minutes, (b) three minutes and (c) five minutes were recorded in the response rate by the London ambulance service to incoming calls in (i) London and (ii) South East Thames regional health authority in the last year.

Mr. Freeman: The information is not collected by the London ambulance service.

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average answering time by the London ambulance service to incoming calls in (a) London and (b) the South East Thames regional health authority.

Mr. Freeman: This information is not collected routinely in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if incoming calls to the London ambulance service are stacked by the operator before being connected; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: Incoming telephone calls to the London ambulance service are not stacked by an operator. All calls to the LAS central ambulance control are received by their automatic call distribution system which groups them in order of emergency. Within these groups calls are taken in the order that they are received when an operator becomes available. If the hon. Member would like to know more about the capability of the computer which controls the LAS telephone system, and the information which it can provide, she may wish to contact South West Thames regional health authority which manages the service.

Listeria

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer to the right hon. Member for Stoke-on-Trent, South, on 14 December 1988, Official Report, column 601, if he will list the causes other than food of listeria poisoning; what were the causes of the 259 incidents of listeria poisoning notified to the public health laboratory in 1987; if he will request the public health laboratory to keep him fully informed of all cases of food poisoning; and if he will make a statement on the growth in the number of cases, the seriousness, and the causes of listeria poisoning, and indicate what precautionary measures are advisable.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: No vehicle was identified for any of the listeriosis cases reported to the public health laboratory service in 1987 and 1988, other than the three in 1988 which were microbiologically associated with food. My Department has been and is working on the reasons for the increase of listeriosis which occurred between 1986 and 1987; the increase in cases in 1988 was less marked than between 1986-87. The public health laboratory service is keeping us fully informed.

The manifestations of listeriosis range from a mild, flu-like illness to septicaemia and meningitis and the organism can cross the placenta in pregnant women and affect the baby. The mortality rate in reported cases of listeriosis may be of the order of 30 per cent. While adequate cooking will destroy the bacteria, bad handling or bad hygiene subsequent to cooking can result in cross-contamination, and good hygiene practice including adequate refrigeration is essential to reduce risk. This will be a central message of the Government's campaign on food hygiene which is to be launched very soon.

Child Sex Abuse (Broxtowe)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what involvement his Department has had in the Broxtowe child sex abuse case; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The regional office of the Department's social services inspectorate gave appropriate advice and support to the Nottinghamshire social services department.

Medical Manpower Planning

Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the report of the second advisory committee on medical manpower planning; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I have today published the report of the second advisory committee for medical manpower planning. The committee's two main recommendations are that there should be no immediate change in the numbers entering medical school and that there should be a standing committee to monitor annually the balance of supply and demand for doctors. The Goverment have accepted both these recommendations. Copies of the report will be placed in the Library.

Capital Spending

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his estimate of gross and net public sector capital spending by his Department by both central Government and local authorities for 1988-89 and for each of the next three years, at current prices and at constant 1987-88 prices.

Mr. Mellor: Information on the Government's plans on public sector capital spending can be found in table 21.1.11 of the 1989 White Paper on public expenditure which will be published on Monday 30 January.

Certificate of School Nursing

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many nurses gained the certificate of school nursing in each of the last five years.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 19 January 1989]: The information requested is given in the table:

Number of nurses successfully completing school nursing courses. England

Year ended 31 March	Number
1984	306
1985	421
1986	404
1987	294
1988	311

Source: English National Board for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting.

Doctors (Statistics)

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many doctors are employed in the National Health Service; if he will break the figure down into hospital consultants, junior hospital doctors and general practitioners; and if he will give comparable figures for 1978-79.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 24 January 1989]: The information is set out in the table:

Table: National Health Service Medical Staff in England

	Whole-time equivalents at 30 September
	1978	1987
Medical staff[1]	33,796·1	39,012·7
Hospital consultants	10,381·9	12,830·5
Junior hospital doctors[2]	18,090·5	20,678·8

	Whole-time equivalents at 30 September 1978	1987
	Numbers at 1 October
General medical practitioners	22,651	27,023

[1] Including hospital, community health services and community medicine staff.
[2] Including senior registrars, registrars, senior house officers and house officers.

Urban Programme

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his provision for the urban programme for 1988-89 and for the next three years at cash prices and at 1987-88 constant prices.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 24 January 1989]: The information requested is given in the table:

	Cash Provision £ million	At 1987-88 prices £ million
1988-89	46	43
1989-90	38	36
1990-91	39	37
1991-92	40	38

Care of the Elderly

Mr. John Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list by regional health authority (a) the financial resources allocated to the National Health Service for the care of the elderly and (b) the number of units and staff specifically allocated within the National Health Service for the care of elderly people.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 25 November 1988]: In the main the Department does not identify funds for specific purposes such as provision of care of the elderly within its overall allocations to regional health authorities. The allocation of resources to district health authorities is a matter for regions and districts to determine, within a national framework of health care priorities, and in the light of local needs and circumstances.

Information on the number of units and staff allocated to care of the elderly is not available in the form requested. The number of NHS hospitals having beds for elderly in 1987-88 and the number of medical and nursing staff allocated to the geriatric area of work on 30 September 1987 are shown in the table.

(Whole Time Equivalent)

Regional Health Authority	Number of NHS Hospitals Having beds for the Elderly[1]	Staff[2] Medical	Nursing[3]
Northern	65	110	3,330
Yorkshire	63	130	3,710
Trent	63	190	4,330
East Anglian	31	80	2,120
North West Thames	54	120	2,310
North East Thames	57	140	2,970
South East Thames	56	150	2,040
South West Thames	39	110	1,950
Wessex	52	110	3,000
Oxford	44	60	1,770
South Western	72	100	3,030
West Midlands	78	160	5,290
Mersey	34	100	2,390
North Western	65	200	3,980
Special Health Authorities	2	10	90

[1] For the financial year 1987-88. Excluding beds for the elderly mentally ill.
[2] Working the geriatric area. Rounded to the nearest 10 whole time equivalents. (WTE) at 30 September 1987.
[3] Nursing and midwifery staff.

NHS Employees

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many (a) men and (b) women are employed in the National Health Service;

(2) how many (a) men and (b) women are employed as nurses in the National Health Service;

(3) how many (a) men and (b) women are employed as midwives in the National Health Service.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 25 November 1988]: The information for September 1986 is given in the table. This is the latest date for which reliable information to this level of detail is available. Unfortunately, there are discrepancies in the 1987 data which are being checked urgently; I will write to the hon. Member with 1987 figures as soon as these are available.

Number[1] of NHS staff in post—England 30 September 1986

	Male	Female
Total directly employed staff (excluding agency nursing and midwifery staff and locum medical and dental staff).	211,600	735,200
Nursing staff (including agency staff)[2]	42,800	404,000
Midwifery staff (including agency staff)[3]	[4]—	26,500

[1] Figures are independently rounded to the nearest one hundred.
[2] Includes qualified nurses, learners and unqualified nursing staff.
[3] Includes qualified midwives and student midwives.
[4] Less than 50.
Source: Department of Health Annual Censuses of NHS Medical and Non-Medical Manpower.

Baby Food (Aluminium)

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he has on the levels of aluminium in proprietary baby milk and foods; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder: I have been asked to reply.

A survey of infant formulae recently carried out by this Ministry showed that aluminium present in these products is derived from natural levels of aluminium present in cows' milk or soya from which the foods have been prepared.

The results are shortly to be published in the scientific literature.

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions he has had with manufacturers of proprietary baby foods and milk on the level of aluminium content in such products; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder: I have been asked to reply.

Discussions are shortly to be held with representatives of the trade on the results of a recent survey on aluminium levels in infant formulae.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Pensioners' Incomes

Mr. Lester: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish figures showing the disposable incomes of a single pensioner and a married pensioner paying (a) average local authority rent and rates and (b) rent of £35 and rates of £10 a week, when in receipt of the national insurance basic retirement pension only and when in receipt of (i) state earnings related pensions or occupational pensions of (a) £5, (b) £10, (c) £15, (d) £20, (e) £25, (f) £30, (g) £35, (h) £40, (i) £45, (j) £50, (k) £75 and (l) £100 a week and (ii) income from capital of the same amounts.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Information relating to (i) is shown in the following tables.

It is not possible to provide an answer to (ii) because entitlement to housing benefit depends upon the amount of a pensioner's capital and the tax payable will vary according to type of investment.

For those on the lowest incomes, income support may be available.

Table showing disposable weekly income of a single man over 65 but under 80, when receiving basic retirement pension and retirement pension plus SERPS/Occupational pension
Average local authority rent and rates

	Gross income	Tax	Income after tax	Rent	Rent Rebate	Rates	Rate Rebate	Total net income	Net income after housing costs
RP	41·15	0·00	41·15	16·60	16·60	6·90	5·52	63·27	39·77
RP+£5	46·15	0·00	46·15	16·60	15·23	6·90	5·10	66·48	42·98
RP+£10	51·15	0·00	51·15	16·60	11·98	6·90	4·10	67·23	43·73
RP+£15	56·15	0·00	56·15	16·60	8·73	6·90	3·10	67·98	44·48
RP+£20	61·15	0·00	61·15	16·60	5·48	6·90	2·10	68·73	45·23
RP+£25	66·15	1·25	64·90	16·60	3·05	6·90	1·35	69·30	45·80
RP+£30	71·15	2·25	68·90	16·60	0·61	6·90	0·60	70·11	46·61
RP+£35	76·15	3·75	72·40	16·60	0·00	6·90	0·00	72·40	48·90
RP+£40	81·15	5·00	76·15	16·60	0·00	6·90	0·00	76·15	52·65
RP+£45	86·15	6·25	79·90	16·60	0·00	6·90	0·00	79·90	56·40
RP+£50	91·15	7·50	83·65	16·60	0·00	6·90	0·00	83·65	60·15
RP+£75	116·15	13·75	102·40	16·60	0·00	6·90	0·00	102·40	78·90
RP+£100	141·15	20·00	121·15	16·60	0·00	6·90	0·00	121·15	97·65

Table showing disposable weekly income of a single man over 65 but under 80, when receiving basic retirement pension and retirement pension plus SERPS/occupational pension
Assuming rent £35 per week, rates £10 per week

	Gross income	Tax	Income after tax	Rent	Rent rebate	Rates	Rates rebate	Total net income	Net income after housing costs
	£	£	£	£	£	£	£	£	£
RP	41·15	0·00	41·15	35·00	35·00	10·00	8·00	84·15	39·15
RP+£5	46·15	0·00	46·15	35·00	33·63	10·00	7·58	87·36	42·36
RP+£10	51·15	0·00	51·15	35·00	30·38	10·00	6·58	88·11	43·11
RP+£15	56·15	0·00	56·15	35·00	27·13	10·00	5·58	88·86	43·86
RP+£20	61·15	0·00	61·15	35·00	23·88	10·00	4·58	89·61	44·61
RP+£25	66·15	1·25	64·90	35·00	21·45	10·00	3·83	90·18	45·18
RP+£30	71·15	2·25	68·90	35·00	19·01	10·00	3·08	90·99	45·99
RP+£35	76·15	3·75	72·40	35·00	16·57	10·00	2·33	91·30	46·30
RP+£40	81·15	5·00	76·15	35·00	14·13	10·00	1·58	91·86	46·86
RP+£45	86·15	6·25	79·90	35·00	11·70	10·00	0·83	92·43	47·43
RP+£50	91·15	7·50	83·65	35·00	9·26	10·00	0·00	92·91	47·91
RP+£75	116·15	13·75	102·40	35·00	0·00	10·00	0·00	102·40	57·40
RP+£100	141·15	20·00	121·15	35·00	0·00	10·00	0·00	121·15	76·15

Table showing disposable weekly income of a married man over 65 but under 80, when receiving basic retirement pension and retirement pension plus SERPS/occupational pension
Average local authority rent and rates

	Gross income	Tax	Income after tax	Rent	Rent rebate	Rates	Rate rebate	Total net income	Net income after housing costs
	£	£	£	£	£	£	£	£	£
RP	65·90	0·00	65·90	16·60	16·60	6·90	5·52	88·02	64·52
RP+£5	70·90	0·00	70·90	16·60	14·52	6·90	4·88	90·30	66·80
RP+£10	75·90	0·00	75·90	16·60	11·27	6·90	3·88	91·05	67·55
RP+£15	80·90	0·00	80·90	16·60	8·02	6·90	2·88	91·80	68·30
RP+£20	85·90	0·00	85·90	16·60	4·77	6·90	1·88	92·55	69·05
RP+£25	90·90	0·00	90·90	16·60	1·52	6·90	0·88	93·30	69·80
RP+£30	95·90	0·00	95·90	16·60	0·00	6·90	0·00	95·90	72·40
RP+£35	100·90	1·02	99·88	16·60	0·00	6·90	0·00	99·88	76·38
RP+£40	105·90	2·27	103·63	16·60	0·00	6·90	0·00	103·63	80·13
RP+£45	110·90	3·52	107·38	16·60	0·00	6·90	0·00	107·38	83·88
RP+£50	115·90	4·77	111·13	16·60	0·00	6·90	0·00	111·13	87·63
RP+£75	140·90	11·02	129·88	16·60	0·00	6·90	0·00	129·88	106·38
RP+£100	165·90	17·27	148·63	16·60	0·00	6·90	0·00	148·63	125·13

Table showing disposable weekly income of a married man over 65 but under 80, when receiving basic retirement pension and retirement pension plus Serps/occupational pension
Assuming rent £35 per week, rates £10 per week

	Gross income	Tax	Income after tax	Rent	Rent rebate	Rates	Rate rebate	Total net income	Net income after housing costs
	£	£	£	£	£	£	£	£	£
RP	65·90	0·00	65·90	35·00	35·00	10·00	8·00	108·90	63·90
RP+£5	70·90	0·00	70·90	35·00	32·92	10·00	7·36	111·18	66·18
RP+£10	75·90	0·00	75·90	35·00	29·67	10·00	6·36	111·93	66·93
RP+£15	80·90	0·00	80·90	35·00	26·42	10·00	5·36	112·68	67·68
RP+£20	85·90	0·00	85·90	35·00	23·17	10·00	4·36	113·43	68·43
RP+£25	90·90	0·00	90·90	35·00	19·92	10·00	3·36	114·18	69·18
RP+£30	95·90	0·00	95·90	35·00	16·67	10·00	2·36	114·93	69·93
RP+£35	100·90	1·02	99·88	35·00	14·08	10·00	1·56	115·52	70·52
RP+£40	105·90	2·27	103·63	35·00	11·65	10·00	0·81	116·09	71·09
RP+£45	110·90	3·52	107·38	35·00	9·21	10·00	0·00	116·59	71·59
RP+£50	115·90	4·77	111·13	35·00	6·77	10·00	0·00	117·90	72·90
RP+£75	140·90	11·02	129·88	35·00	0·00	10·00	0·00	129·88	84·88
RP+£100	165·90	17·27	148·63	35·00	0·00	10·00	0·00	148·63	103·63

Mentally Handicapped Persons

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what guidance is issued to local offices in respect of social security payments for the support of mentally handicapped persons in homes transferred from local authority control to private companies.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: General advice on the handling of claims in a variety of circumstances form people in private and voluntary homes is in the adjudication officers' guide, a copy of which is in the Library.

Housing Benefit

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many households in (a) Corby and (b) east Northants were in receipt of housing benefit in 1987-88;

(2) how many council tenants in (a) Corby and (b) east Northants are in receipt of housing benefit;

(3) how many council tenants in (a) Corby and (b) east Northants were in receipt of housing benefit in 1987-88;

(4) how many households in (a) Corby and (b) east Northants are in receipt of housing benefit.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The latest information available for 1987-88 is given in the table. Information for 1988-89 will become available when statistical returns from all local authorities have been received and validated.

Estimated number of housing benefit recipients 1987-88

Recipients	1987-88
Corby
Council Tenants	6,125
All households	7,260
East Northants
Council Tenants	2,880
All households	5,662

Source: Local authority housing benefit subsidy claims.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many applications for housing benefit transitional protection have now been received; and how many have been assessed as eligible for payment.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Up to 23 January 1989 the transitional payments unit had received 405,314 applications. A total of 402,118 inquiry forms, requesting housing benefit details, have been issued to local authorities of which 370,464 have been returned. The unit processes applications as soon as these inquiry forms are returned and so far 171,559 have been assessed as eligible for payment; 190,285 have not been eligible

National Insurance Numbercards

Mr. Favell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many national insurance numbercards have been issued since their launch in 1984; how many national insurance numberholders have these plastic cards and how many do not; what representations he has received since their issue on the implications of the cards for civil liberties; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: About 7 million numbercards have been issued since 8 January 1984. Some of these were reissued cards to replace lost cards or those where the contributor's name had changed. We do not know how many of the estimated 21·5 million national insurance contributors currently have number cards.

In 1984 when the card was first issued concern was expressed, but few representations have been received since. The card is merely a durable reminder to a person of his national insurance number, containing only his name and that number. It is not an identity document.

Mr. Favell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what information is currently stored on the memory strip of the national insurance numbercard; and what free space exists for further information.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The magnetic strip on the back of the national insurance numbercard contains three tracks. Each is capable of recording 79 characters. The only information currently recorded is that shown on the front of the card, that is the holder's name, nine character national insurance number and the two character check code. The free space remaining on the magnetic strip depends on the number of characters in the cardholder's name. There are no proposals to include any further information on the magnetic strip.

Benefits (Disqualification)

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will specify the number of people referred to adjudication offices by employment service staff because of doubts about their availability for work; and how many were disqualified from receiving benefit on grounds of non-availability for work for each of the years 1983 to 1988;

(2) if he will specify the number of people referred to adjudication officers by employment service staff because of restrictions they placed on their availability; and how many were disqualified from receiving benefit on grounds of non-availability for work for each of the years 1983 to 1988.

Mr. Scott: The information requested is given in the table.

Claims referred to adjudication officers and claims disallowed: availability for work and restricted availability

Year	Availability		Restricted availability
	Referrals	Disallowances	Referrals	Disallowances
1983	97,844	50,243	21,853	6,994
1984	81,186	43,465	16,781	5,578
1985	100,474	45,903	16,520	5,617
1986	114,447	61,402	23,868	7,371
1987	171,515	85,319	68,400	16,455
1988[1]	78,259	38,141	45,347	10,149

[1] To June 1988 only. Later information is not available.

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will specify the number of people referred to adjudication officers by employment service staff because they neglected to avail themselves of or refused suitable employment; and how many were disqualified from receiving benefit on grounds of neglecting to avail themselves of or refusing suitable employment for each of the years 1983 to 1988.

Mr. Scott: The information requested is as follows:

	Neglect to avail of a reasonable opportunity of suitable employment		Refusal of suitable employment
	Claims[1] Referred	Claims[1] Disqualified	Claims[1] Referred	Claims[1] Disqualified
1983	784	433	5,030	1,450
1984	1,071	504	5,019	1,461
1985	1,564	762	5,331	1,534
1986	2,906	1,242	5,654	1,945
1987	5,176	2,013	7,783	2,308
1988[2]	4,697	1,733	3,939	1,205

[1] Figures relate to the number of claims, not the number of people making those claims.
[2] Figures for 1988 are for the first six months only; data for the second half of the year are not yet available.
Source: 100 per cent. count of adjudication officer decisions.

Transitional Payments

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many people are now receiving housing benefit transitional protection;

(2) how many people will lose housing benefit transitional protection after April.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Up to 20 January 1989, 155,153 awards of housing benefit transitional payments had been made. The closing date for applications is 31 March 1989 and until all applications are received, and processed, we will not know the final number of successful applicants or how many of them will cease to receive these payments from April 1989.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claimants have lost their income support transitional addition as a result of changes in their circumstances.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Of the estimated 1·4 million income support claimants who received a transitional addition at the inception of the scheme in April 1988, some 1·1 million are expected still to be receiving such an addition at the beginning of April 1989.

Family Credit

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many families are now receiving family credit.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Livingston (Mr. Cook) on 13 January at columns 781-82.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the Government expect to achieve their target for the take-up of family credit.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Expenditure on family credit is already running at approximately the level estimated for the current financial year. It is apparent that the majority of people with a large entitlement are already claiming it. Our overall target is to ensure that families are made aware of their possible entitlement to family credit and encouraged to claim it. We have had two major television and press campaigns and have issued leaflets to child benefit recipients paid through the Post Office. We are now planning a further major campaign, to include television, to coincide with the uprating in April.

Severe Hardship Allowance

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give details of the numbers of young people under the age of 18 years who were in receipt of severe hardship allowance by month, for the period September to December 1988 inclusive.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I regret that the information is not available. However the number of directions enabling income support to be paid on grounds of severe hardship was as follows:

Period ended (1988)	Cumulative number of directions[1,2]
30 September	234
28 October	545
25 November	980
30 December	1,637

[1] Figures relate to the number of decisions rather than to the number of individuals involved. Some individuals may have had more than one decision made in respect of them.
[2] Severe hardship directions are for variable periods.

Social Security Operational Strategy

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what were the estimates of net savings and costs contained in "Social Security Operational Strategy: A Framework for the Future" at 1987-88 prices.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Using the gross domestic product reflator, the estimates of total costs and net savings would be £856 million and £1,379 million respectively (at 1987/88 prices).

Family Income Implement

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will provide figures detailing the number of claims made for family income supplement in each year since 1983; how many such claims were received in each year; how many were determined in each year; and how many resulted in an award.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information is as follows:

	Claims made/ received (thousands)	Determinations (thousands)	Awards (thousands)
1983	[1]108	351	205
1984	386	394	210
1985	397	393	204
1986	411	409	225
1987	420	422	227
1988[2]	111	103	61

[1] Figure available from 3 September 1983 only.
[2] January to April only.

Widows (Benefit)

Mr. Ashdown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many women in Britain have been excluded from receiving widow's benefit owing to new regulations effective from 11 April 1988; and how many women in Britain are receiving a reduced amount of widow's benefit in relation to that paid prior to 11 April 1988.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many women who would otherwise have been eligible are estimated to have lost their entitlement to widow's pension because of the raising of the age limit from 40 to 45 years; and, of these, how many actually qualified for widow's allowance but were then disqualified by their age from receiving a widow's pension.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 19 January 1989]: Latest estimates* indicate that during 1988-89 approximately 2,500 women, who would otherwise have been eligible, will have lost their entitlement to widow's pension because of the raising age limit from 40 to 45 years. Approximately 600 women will have qualified for widow's allowance but will then have been disqualified by their age from receiving a widow's pension. Approximately 17,500 women are receiving a reduced amount of widow's benefit in relation to that paid prior to 11 April 1988.

* Source Government Actuary's Department.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much it is estimated would have been paid out in 1989-90 in widows' benefits had the age limit for widows' pension not been raised from 50 to 55 years.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 19 January 1989]: Estimates* indicate that expenditure on widows' benefits in 1988-89 would have been £965 million had the age limit for widows' pension not been raised from 50 to 55 years. This represents an increase of £35 million on estimated actual expenditure.

* Source: Government Actuary's Department.

Attendance Allowance (Training)

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the purpose of reviewing attendance allowance when a recipient commences an employment training programme or a youth training scheme; and if he will make a statement;

(2) how many reviews of attendance allowance recipients who entered employment training or a youth training scheme took place in 1988; and what percentage of these reviews have resulted in the withdrawal of attendance allowance.

Mr. Scott [holding answer 20 January 1989]: Entitlement to an attendance allowance is reviewed if there has been a relevant change in a recipient's attendance needs. It is for the independent attendance allowance board to decide whether such a change has occurred in each individual case. Information about the number and outcome of reviews conducted in 1988 where the attendance needs of a recipient undergoing employment or youth training had changed is not available.

ENERGY

High Moor Colliery (Accident)

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on the events leading up to the collapse of 30 m of roof in 91's main site heading at High Moor colliery in which 10 miners were trapped in an accident on 13 January.

Mr. Michael Spicer: This is primarily a matter for British Coal and the Health and Safety Executive's mines and quarries inspectorate. I understand that they are each carrying out their own investigations into the cause or causes of the accident.

Coal Imports

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will estimate the cost of transporting imported coal from port of entry to power stations; and what percentage of the total price at the port of entry this represents.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Transport costs, which vary widely depending on distance and other factors, are a commercial matter for those importing coal.

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how much foreign coal has been imported into (a) the United Kingdom and (b) Scotland in each year of the last five years.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Available information for the five years commencing 1984 is as follows:

Imports of Foreign Coal

Thousand tonnes

Destination	1984	1985	1986	1987	January-November 1988
United Kingdom	8,894	12,732	10,554	9,781	10,755
Scotland	1,097	1,650	1,174	1,269	1,655

Source: Her Majesty's Customs and Excise (port of entry basis).

Energy Systems

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if his Department, or consultants to his Department, have carried out a comparative study of (a) public concern towards, and (b) the environmental intrusion of, renewable energy systems such as wind farms or wave generator arrays off shore, and nuclear power plants, respectively.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Energy Paper No. 54 "Energy Technologies for the United Kingdom: 1986 Appraisal of R, D and D" summarised the environmental implications of energy technologies in the United Kingdom. Appropriate studies of environmental features and public attitudes are being conducted of each renewable source as part of its development programme. An application to my right hon. Friend, under the Electric Lighting Act 1909, for consent to build a new major power station (including a nuclear station) is accompanied by an environmental statement. My right hon. Friend requires the applicant to advertise any such applications so that the public has a full opportunity to express their views.

Ministerial Broadcasts

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will seek permission from the British Broadcasting Corporation to issue a copy of a transcript of (a) his interview on BBC1 Television's "On the Record" and (b) his interview with BBC Radio 4's "The World this Weekend", both on 15 January; and if he will place copies in his departmental library and the Library of the House of Commons.

Mr. Parkinson: No. I understand that the Library of the House does obtain transcripts from the broadcasters on behalf of hon. Members.

Electricity Generation

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is his latest estimate of the cost of the capital investment programme to replace old electricity generating plant, for the new power generation and national power companies in Wales and England.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The cost of investment to replace old electricity generating plant will depend on a number of factors including when the plant is retired and what type of equipment is chosen by the CEGB's successor companies and their competitors to replace it.

Electricity Industry (Expenditure)

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is his estimate of capital spending by the electricity industry for 1988-89 and for each of the next three years at current prices, and at constant 1987-88 prices.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Approvals given for capital expenditure by the electricity supply industry in England and Wales, based on programmes submitted in 1988, related to projected expenditure of:

	1987-88 prices £ billion	Outturn prices £ billion
1988-89	1·4	1·5
1989-90	1·5	1·6
1990-91	1·7	1·9
1991-92	1·9	2·2

Departmental Spending

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is his estimate of gross and net public sector capital spending by his Department by both central Government and local authorities for 1988-89 and for each of the next three years at current prices and at constant 1987-88 prices.

Mr. Parkinson: Estimates of public sector capital spending by my Department appear in the public expenditure White Paper supplementary analysis—chapter 21, Cm. 621—which is due to be published on Monday 30 January.

EMPLOYMENT

RPI

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the percentage contribution made by each component to the retail prices index in December 1988; and what was the percentage contribution of the same components at the same month in each of the preceding nine years.

Mr. Lee: Following is the information for the sub-groups of the retail prices index. Owing to a change made in January 1987 in the structure of the index it has not been possible to provide a complete back series in all cases. Because the contributions have been rounded independently they do not all add precisely to the 12-month change for all items.

Contributions to the percentage increase in the "all items" retail prices index in the 12 months ended:

	December
	1979	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984	1985	1986	1987	1988
Food	3·2	2·1	2·0	0·8	1·2	0·6	0·7	0·6	0·6	0·6
Catering	1·1	0·7	0·3	0·3	0·3	0·3	0·2	0·3	0·3	0·3
Alcoholic drink	1·4	1·4	1·3	0·7	0·5	0·4	0·5	0·3	0·4	0·4
Tobacco	0·7	0·5	1·1	0·4	0·2	0·5	0·3	0·4	0·1	0·1
Housing	2·3	3·6	3·0	−0·1	1·3	1·3	1·7	1·3	0·7	2·9
Fuel and light	1·1	1·6	0·8	1·0	0·1	0·3	0·3	−0·3	−0·1	0·3
Clothing and footwear	0·9	0·5	0·0	0·1	0·1	0·0	0·3	0·2	0·1	0·3
Motoring expenditure									0·7	0·6
Fares and other travel costs	3·1	2·0	1·7	1·0	0·8	0·3	0·6	0·1
Household goods									0·1	0·1
Household services									0·2	0·3
Personal goods and services	3·3	2·8	1·5	1·1	0·8	0·9	1·1	0·5	0·2	0·2
Leisure goods									0·2	0·2
Leisure services									0·2	0·1
									0·1	0·2
ALL ITEMS	17·2	15·1	12·0	5·4	5·3	4·6	5·7	3·7	3·7	6·8

Employment Training

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the target number of employment training scheme places to be filled by the end of each month from 30 September 1988 onwards, in each area where such statistics are collected.

Mr. Nicholls: Planning profiles for the number of filled places are for internal management purposes only and are not normally made available.

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he will make a statement on the decision of Warrington borough council to boycott employment training and on the reasons it has given for their decision.

Mr. Nicholls: Many local authorities support employment training and are actively participating in the programme. Unfortunately Warrington borough council has decided not to do so. The council disagreed with some of the arrangements for the programme, including the payment of training allowances to trainees. In the council's view, those taking part should be employees and paid a wage, even though the concept of "rate for the job" is quite out of place in a programme of training. The council's approach is of no help whatsoever to unemployed people in Warrington.

Opencast Mining

Mr. Batiste: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the opencast sites identified by the Health and Safety Executive mines and quarries inspectorate where preventive and advisory action has been taken following the flooding of the St. Aidon's site and specify the action taken.

Mr. Nicholls: Following the national survey carried out by the Health and Safety Executive's mines and quarries inspectorate four sites were identified where working was planned in the vicinity of water courses. Where appropriate, modifications to existing methods of work have been agreed.

Mr. C. Petrie

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when he will receive a reply to the letter he wrote to the unemployment benefit office in Wavertree, Liverpool 15, about an ex-Cammell Laird shipyard employee, Mr. H. C. Petrie of 93 Picton Road, Liverpool, on 21 March 1988 and on two subsequent occasions.

Mr. Lee: Although officials at the Wavertree unemployment benefit office have spoken to the hon. Member's private secretary on two occasions, I regret that a written response to his letter had not been sent. I have asked the office manager to ensure that a full reply and an appropriate apology is sent immediately giving the complete details of the case in question.

I understand that the case has been resolved in Mr. Petrie's favour, and a payment can now be made.

Student Exchange

Mr. Sims: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many United States students have taken temporary employment in the United Kingdom under the student exchange employment programme in the most recent 12-month period for which figures are available; and how many British students worked in the United States of America under the same programme during that period.

Mr. Lee: In 1988, a total of 4,122 United States students came to the United Kingdom under the British Universities North America Club student exchange programme which allows those taking part to take up temporary employment. In the same period 8,684 British students went to the United States of America under the same programme. It is not known how many students actually took up jobs.

Pay Differentials

Ms. Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether his Department has figures for pay differentials between low and high-paid workers in the United Kingdom; and if a breakdown of such figures by standard planning region is available.

Mr. Nicholls: Annual surveys of earnings are conducted concurrently for Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the results are published separately. They provide figures of the average weekly and hourly earnings of different categories of employees and of the distribution of their earnings for a pay period in April. Summary figures are published in table 1 of the reports. Details figures by standard regions of Great Britain are published in part E of the report on the new earnings survey and for Northern Ireland in the separate report on the new earnings survey for Northern Ireland. Copies of the latest, 1988, reports are in the Library.

Tilbury Port (Health and Safety)

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will conduct a full public inquiry into the level of health and safety provision at the port of Tilbury.

Mr. Nicholls: No.

Tilbury Docks (Deaths)

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what discussions he has had with the chairman of the Port of London Authority about the number of deaths caused by industrial accidents at Tilbury docks.

Mr. Nicholls: My right hon. Friend has had no such discussions.

Dockyards

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what steps he is taking to improve the safety record in Britain's dockyards.

Mr. Nicholls: The new Dock Regulations and the Loading and Unloading of Fishing Vessels Regulations came into force on 1 January 1989. Both are aimed at promoting health and safety in docks and have the support of all sides of the ports industry. They reflect the technological changes that have occurred in cargo handling since the inception of the now revoked Docks Regulations 1934 and take account of the 1979 International Labour Office convention and recommendation on dock work. The Health and Safety Executive is working on establishing the new standards and is co-operating with the British Ports Federation and others to bring the requirements to the attention of all concerned.

Restart

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what percentage of long-term unemployed people have obtained jobs from their restart interviews.

Mr. Lee: We do not know how many people get a job as a result of the restart interview. The aim of the restart programme is to make contact with longer-term unemployed people. It provides information and advice about opportunities to help people back into work.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish the most recent figures for the north-west region showing how many unemployed people have, for each year since the introduction of the restart initiative (a) been called for a restart interview, (b) attended a restart interview, (c) had their benefit disallowed for failing to attend a restart interview, (d) been referred to a claimant adviser as a result of a restart interview and, (e) been referred to the disablement resettlement officer.

Mr. Lee: The information requested is shown in the table.

North-west region	Letters of invitation	Restart interviews	Benefit/Credit disallowances for failing to attend interview	Referred to claimant adviser	Referred to disablement resettlement officer
January	43,000	33,000	2,000	2,000	900
February	35,000	31,000	2,000	1,900	800
March	32,000	30,000	2,100	2,100	800
April	41,000	34,000	2,000	2,400	900
May	34,000	28,000	1,800	2,300	1,000
June	38,000	28,000	2,000	2,500	1,000
July	44,000	38,000	2,500	3,100	1,300
August	36,000	29,000	2,100	2,400	900
September	42,000	28,000	1,500	2,100	900

North-west region	Letters of invitation	Restart interviews	Benefit/Credit disallowances for failing to attend interview	Referred to claimant adviser	Referred to disablement resettlement officer
October	53,000	30,000	1,700	2,500	1,000
November	42,000	32,000	2,100	2,600	1,100
December	32,000	28,000	2,400	2,200	800

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish details, as soon as they become available, of how many unemployed people in the north-west region have in each month January to December 1988 inclusive (a) been called for a restart interview, (b) attended a restart interview, (c) had their benefit disallowed for failing to attend a restart interview, (d) been referred to a claimant adviser as a result of a restart interview and, (e) been referred to the disablement resettlement officer.

Mr. Lee: The information requested is shown in the table:

North West Region

	From / To	1 July 1986 / 9 April 1987	10 April 1987 / 25 March 1988	28 March 1988 / 30 December 1988
(a) Letters of Invitation		259,000	441,000	362,000
(b) Restart interviews		217,000	353,000	276,000
(c) Benefit/Credit disallowances for failing to attend interview		N/A	19,000	18,000
(d) Referred to Claimant Adviser		1,600	19,000	22,000
(e) Referred to Disablement Resettlement Officer		8,000	10,000	9,000

Career Development Loans

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give the most recent details of how many people have been awarded career development loans; in what occupational sectors; and what was the status of those awarded loans at the time of application —employed, unemployed, student, trainee and other; and the destinations of recipients and the average cost of each place.

Mr. Cope: As at 31 December 1988, a total of 1,706 people had obtained career development loans, 655 of whom had obtained their loans during the pilot phase of the scheme. The training courses undertaken were in the following occupational sectors:

	Numbers
Management	249
Commercial/professional	215
Shorthand/typing	140
Processing	9
Engineering	37
Construction	30
Hotel/Catering	6
Service/Retail	137
Computer Skills	156
Clerical	40
Science/Technology	129
Automotive	1
Flying Occupations	102
Driving Occupations	217
Health	184
Miscellaneous	54

At 31 December 1988, a total of 678 trainees were recorded as having been unemployed at the time of application, 814 as employed and 214 as "other".

Of those individuals who, at 31 December 1988, had responded to a follow-up questionnaire 81 per cent. had obtained employment following their course, and a further 3 per cent. had gone on to further training.

The average size of a career development loan at the end of 1988 was £2,400, although loans have been taken out across the full available range, from £300 to £5,000. The Government pay the interest on the loans during the period of training and for up to three months afterwards.

YTS

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish the most recent details, for the north-west, of (a) the numbers of filled places in YTS by training occupational classification and (b) the number of contracted places in YTS by training occupational classification.

Mr. Cope: At 31 December 1988 there were 65,906 young people training on YTS in the north-west region. A breakdown by training occupational classification is given in the table. Information on the number of contracted places for YTS by training occupational classification is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

North west region
Filled places by training occupational classification at 31 December 1988

	Number
Administrative and clerical occupations	13,409
Creative, and educational and recreational service occupations	1,650
Health, community and personal service occupations	7,009
Selling and storage occupations	7,262
Scientific occupations	473
Catering, and food preparation and processing occupations	2,550
Agricultural and related occupations	2,109
Fishing occupations	19
Transport operating occupations	667
Construction and civil engineering occupations	10,350
Mining, oil extraction and quarrying occupations	62
Electrical and electronic engineering occupations	2,992
Mechanical engineering, and metal production and processing occupations	6,315
Motor vehicle repair and maintenance occupations	4,181
Non-metal processing occupations	1,143
Printing occupations	393
Clothing and textiles manufacturing occupations	1,924
Security service occupations	16

	Number
Others	3,382
Total	65,906

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish the most recent details, in the north-west region, of (a) the number of young people who have been referred by the careers service for failing or refusing to take up a YTS place, (b) the number of young people who have waited more than eight weeks for a suitable YTS place, and in which occupational sector, and (c) the financial arrangements which have been made for young people in (b).

Mr. Cope: I am not aware of any case where the careers service has referred a young person to the benefit service for failing or refusing to take up a YTS place.

It is not possible to provide information on the number of young people who may be waiting for a YTS place, as young people are not required to report what they are doing once bridging allowance expires. Provided they had made early contact and kept in regular touch with their local careers office they would have been offered a YTS place before the eight weeks bridging allowance period ends.

A young person who is still actively seeking a YTS place when his bridging allowance runs out and who, if benefit were not paid, would suffer severe hardship, may be eligible for income support.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on proposals to review the YTS, in particular if he will give details of the date and scope of the review, and of the parties likely to be involved in such a review.

Mr. Cope: I have nothing to add to the reply my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State gave to the hon. Member for Leicester, South (Mr. Marshall) on 17 January 1989 at column 197.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if the YTS allowances will be increased in the current year.

Mr. Cope: I refer the hon. Member to the reply which I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Derbyshire, West (Mr. McLoughlin) on 18 January at column 253.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish the most recent details of (a) the number of YTS schemes and work placements which have been referred to the Training Agency in regard to allegations of racial discrimination, sex discrimination and discrimination against people with disabilities, (b) the outcome of the above allegations and (c) the number of YTS schemes and work placements which have had their contracts with the Training Agency cancelled because of evidence of discrimination in the three categories referred to in (a).

Mr. Cope: Within the past year there have been three cases of racial discrimination drawn to the attention of the Training Agency head office, which have been the subject of a Commission for Racial Equality investigation. In one, a potential work experience provider was found guilty of unlawful discrimination. In the others, two managing agents are currently being investigated by the Commission for Racial Equality.

Allegations of discrimination in YTS are handled initially at local level by the Training Agency, where most are resolved and do not need to be reported to head office.

Five YTS managing agents have failed to achieve approved training organisation status on grounds which included an unsatisfactory equal opportunities policy.

Equal Opportunities

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) if he will meet the chair of the Equal Opportunities Commission to discuss the advancement of equal opportunities in the workplace;

(2) if he will discuss plans for the provision of childcare facilities to ensure equality of opportunity in the workplace with the chair of the Equal Opportunities Commission.

Mr. Nicholls: Department of Employment Ministers have frequent discussions with the chairman of the Equal Opportunities Commission about equal opportunities in employment. The EOC chairman will be leading a discussion on child care for working parents at a meeting on 2 February of the advisory committee on women's employment chaired by me.

Co-operative Development Agency

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the future of the Co-operative Development Agency.

Mr. Cope: The Co-operative Development Agency was set up in 1978, with the aim of promoting co-operative ventures and representing the interests of the co-operative movement. Since that time and with the help of the CDA, many co-operative support agencies have been established, offering advice and assistance to anyone wanting to start or develop a co-operative business.

The CDA was originally set up with a finite ceiling of financial support. Its life was extended under the 1984 Co-operative Development Agency and Industrial Development Act and the financial ceiling increased to £3 million. We estimate that this ceiling will be reached in the 1990-91 financial year.

The CDA has done the job it was asked to do by Parliament and there is now a good national network of local co-operative development agencies. There is also a wider network including the small firms service and local enterprise agencies able to offer business advice to small firms of all kinds; the local training and enterprise councils announced in the White Paper "Employment in the 1990s" will be asked to take account of the needs of all small and developing businesses in their localities including co-operatives.

We are therefore inviting comments from interested bodies on whether the agency is still needed and on our proposal to bring it to an end. We will consider any comments carefully. If, after doing so, we conclude that the agency should be wound up we will do so by order under the affirmative resolution procedure in accordance with the provisions of the 1984 Act.

60

Safety at Work

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many prosecutions have been brought under the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974 and associated legislation in England and Wales in each year from 1982 to 1988; and if any estimate has been made of the inspection days saved if all proceedings had been conducted by the Crown Prosecution Service.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 23 January 1989]: The figures requested are given in the table.

Number of informations laid by Her Majesty's Factory and Agricultural Inspectorates and local authorities England and Wales[4]

Year	Factory and Agricultural Inspectorates	Local Authorities
1982	2,099	[3]468
1983	1,971	[3]511
1984	1,978	[3]585
1985	1,898	394
1986-87[2]	1,892	560
1987-88[1,2]	2,103	..

.. = not available.
[1] Provisional.
[2] Year commencing 1 April.
[3] Informations laid relate to Great Britain. Data for England and Wales alone is not readily available.
[4] Data for the small number of prosecutions taken by other enforcing authorities is not readily available.

No estimate has been made of the effects of proceedings being conducted by the Crown Prosecution Service. Since health and safety cases are frequently highly technical, and the expertise of HSE inspectors is required to explain them to the court, it is highly unlikely that many inspector days would be saved.

Labour Statistics

Ms. Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many firms in percentage terms have a work force of (a) 1 to 50 persons, (b) 51 to 100 persons, (c) 101 to 250 persons, (d) 251 to 500 persons, (e) 501 to 1,000 persons, (f) 1,001 to 2,500 persons, (g) 2,501 to 5,000 persons, (h) over 5,001 persons and (i) broken down by sector and standard planning region.

Mr. Maude: I have been asked to reply.

Expressed as a percentage of all firms, that is companies, partnerships and sole proprietors, the numbers registered for VAT are:

Sector	Per cent.
Agriculture, forestry and fishing	11·1
Production	10·1
Construction	14·8
Transport industries	4·4
Wholesaling and dealing	8·0
Retail	16·5
Finance, property and professional services	8·3
Catering	8·0
Motor trades	4·9
Other services	13·9

Employment figures are available solely for manufacturing industries to the following bands:

Percentage of total firms in manufacturing

Employment	Per cent.
1 to 49	90·9
50 to 99	4·1
100 to 199	2·4
200 to 499	1·6
500 to 999	0·5
1,000 and over	0·4

These figures relate to 1988 which are the latest available and are derived from tables 1 and 6 of Business Monitor PA1003 "Size analyses of United Kingdom businesses", which is available in the House of Commons Library. Because corporate businesses may have widely dispersed local sites, an analysis by standard planning region is not produced.

ENVIRONMENT

Houses in Multiple Occupation

8. Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he intends to include provisions covering houses in multiple occupation in the forthcoming Housing and Local Government Bill; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: We are still considering possible changes to the legislation on houses in multiple occupation in the light of the 200 responses to our consultation paper.

Urban Regeneration

13. Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the progress of urban development corporations in carrying out the regeneration of the areas for which they are responsible.

Mr. Ridley: The corporations are making very good progress indeed.

Water Company Land

16. Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received on the case for the code of practice on conservation and access to the countryside to apply to water company land which is sold or transferred.

Mr. Howard: My right hon. Friend has received a number of representations on this matter. I published the draft code yesterday.

Litter

17. Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any plans to introduce new legislation to control litter.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: No, the Government are vigorously pursuing a series of initiatives within the existing legal framework.

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will estimate the spending on litter collection for each year from 1979.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Details of local authority expenditure on litter collection are not available centrally.

Strategic Planning (London)

18. Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has for improving the quality of strategic planning in Greater London.

Mr. Howard: My right hon. Friend is preparing strategic planning guidance for London which will be published in draft for consultation in the near future.

Housing (Torbay)

19. Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the proposed transfer of council housing stock in Torbay.

Mr. Ridley: Torbay borough council applied to me on 17 November for consent to dispose of its housing stock to two housing associations. My Department replied on 10 January saying that I am minded not to give consent to the disposals, and inviting the council to consider conducting a further ballot of tenants to establish more clearly both the extent of the opposition and the extent of positive support.

Housing Associations (Bolton)

21. Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many homes were provided by housing associations in Bolton in 1987; and what is the estimated figure for 1988.

Mr. Trippier: Bolton metropolitan district has reported that housing associations completed 259 new dwellings and renovation work on a further 57 dwellings in their area in 1987. In the first nine months of 1988, 91 new dwellings were completed, whilst in the first half of the year there were 12 renovations.

Rating Reform

22. Mr. Franks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what measures he has taken to assist local authorities with the implementation of the community charge.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Government are working closely with local authorities to ensure that they are fully prepared to implement the community charge in April 1990, in terms both of advice and resources. We are also helping local authorities by ensuring that the public are fully informed about the community charge.

23. Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the latest available estimate for the levels of community charges in Norfolk after April 1990.

Mr. Ridley: The illustrative figures for Norfolk, based on 1988-89 expenditure, are in the range £173 to £206 with no safety net and £178 to £215 with the full safety net.

30. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what a typical ward sister would pay (a) in rates, (b) in community charge and (c) in a system of capital value rates plus local income tax paid in the proportions of 80:20, respectively, if she lived in a typical one-bedroom flat in Ealing.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: A ward sister earning £15,000, living in a flat in Ealing worth £70,000 and with a rateable value of £300, would pay a rates bill of £537, a community charge of £234 (disregarding the transitional safety net), and £695 under a system of capital value rates plus local income tax.

33. Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimates he has made of the cost to the average household in London of a system of local government finance based on (a) the community charge and (b) a local income tax combined with a local domestic rate based on capital values of property.

Mr. Gummer: Illustrative figures, published on 23 June 1988, show that the average household in London would be considerably worse off under a system of local income tax combined with capital value rates than with the community charge.

56. Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any proposals to change the date at which registration for the poll tax will begin in England.

Mr. Gummer: The Government have no plans to introduce a poll tax. We intend that the regulations enabling community charges registration officers to request information from members of the public will come into force on 22 May.

110. Mr. Wood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the progress of local authorities in preparing for the introduction of the community charge.

Mr. Gummer: Many local authorities are clearly making good progress in preparing for the introduction of the community charge. I intend to monitor progress carefully in the months ahead.

Unleaded Petrol

24. Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of car refuellings now take place at garages which stock unleaded petrol.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: About 25 per cent. of refuellings are now estimated to take place at petrol stations where unleaded petrol is available.

70. Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the percentage increase in demand for unleaded petrol over the last 12 months.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The demand for unleaded petrol has increased by over 1,500 per cent. during the last year. We hope the demand will increase substantially further in the next 12 months.

99. Mr. Andrew MacKay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he is satisfied with the current availability of unleaded petrol; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Encouraging progress has been made with about 3,000 petrol stations around the country now selling unleaded petrol. This is growing by some 60 stations a week.

Drinking Water

25. Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he has to change the law in relation to drinking water.

Mr. Howard: The Water Bill contains proposals for a new and substantially strengthened system for setting drinking water quality standards and ensuring compliance with those standards.

Waste (North Sea)

26. Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received concerning the dumping of waste into the North sea.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We have continued to receive a large number of representations about a wide range of marine environment issues including the dumping of waste from ships and discharges from land-based sources.

Planning Applications

27. Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many planning applications were allowed in 1988 after appeal and where only minor modifications were necessary; what proportion these constituted of the total number of applications made; and what was the estimated average length of time between submission and final approval of applications allowed after appeal and with only minor modification.

Mr. Howard: Information in the form requested is not available. Generally, the number of appeals allowed is estimated to represent some 1 per cent. of over 600,000 planning applications submitted in a year. Between 1 January and 31 October 1988 (the latest date for which information is available), 16,977 planning appeals were determined, of which 6,375 were allowed. The average length of time between the date the application was made to the local planning authority and final approval following the appeal, for these 6,375 cases, was 54 weeks.

Football Clubs (Membership Scheme)

28. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received about the proposed football membership scheme.

Mr. Moynihan: I have received over 1,800 representations on a wide range of issues relating to the idea of a scheme, most of them against the idea. In addition, I have received a large number of proposals to implement the scheme from computer companies and others.

Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received from football authorities on the proposed football membership scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: The football authorities contributed fully to the working party I chaired on the national membership scheme and agreed the report which the working party produced. They have made it clear that they are opposed to the principle of the scheme but have confirmed that they will co-operate with the Government in producing a workable scheme.

I wrote to the president of the Football league and the chairman of the Football Association on 17 January inviting them to confirm that the football authorities would wish to take on responsibility for the FMA. I understand that the president of the League has said they will do so and I welcome this.

63. Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the latest meeting held between his Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State and the chairmen of Football League clubs.

Mr. Moynihan: I had a useful and constructive meeting about the Football Spectators Bill with the chairmen of many of the league clubs on 17 January. I have accepted an invitation from the Football League to meet club chairmen again on 26 January.

73. Mr. John Carlisle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he intends to meet the chairman of the Football League to discuss proposed legislation on a football membership scheme.

Mr. Moynihan: I wrote to the president of the Football League and the chairman of the Football Association about the Bill on 17 January, I look forward to meeting them soon.

97. Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he next intends to meet representatives from the Football Supporters Association and the National Federation of Football Supporters Clubs to discuss identity cards.

Mr. Moynihan: At the meeting I held with the FSA and NFFSC on 6 December about the proposed national membership scheme I said that any further views that both organisations wished to express would be welcomed. I also said that I would be happy to meet both organisations again following the introduction of the Football Spectators Bill.

100. Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has had any discussions with the chairman of the Sports Council since the publication of the report of the working party on the proposed national football supporters membership scheme.

Mr. Moynihan: I have not discussed the proposed national membership scheme for football supporters with the chairman of the Sports Council. I have, however, seen the council's press release of 9 January. I welcome the chairman's comments about the commercial opportunities that the scheme would provide.

Local Authorities (Enforcement Powers)

29. Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has any plans to seek to amend local authorities' enforcement powers in relation to planning, air pollution and waste disposal.

Mr. Howard: We hope shortly to receive the report of the review of local authorities' planning enforcement powers, now being carried out by Mr. Robert Carnworth QC, and the need to amend existing powers will be considered in the light of the report's recommendations. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has already announced our intention to introduce, in the lifetime of this Parliament, legislative proposals to improve waste management. We hope to provide for new controls over air pollution which will give local authorities powers of prior authorisation (and associated enforcement powers) over certain industrial processes as announced in consultation papers issued in December 1986 and December 1988.

Local Authority Land

31. Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether any application for the sale of local authority land in Bradford has been made since September 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: No applications have been received.

Global Environment (Research)

32. Dr. Bray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what responsibility he has for research into the global environment supported from public funds; and what support he is giving to it on the Votes for which he is responsible in 1988-89 and 1989-90.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Department supports research into the global environment where this will provide a sound scientific basis for its policy and statutory responsibilities. Climate change and ozone layer depletion are currently the principal issues of global significance. Expenditure on these areas is expected to rise from £191,000 this year to about £950,000 in 1989-90.

Council Properties (Transfers)

34. Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will introduce legislation to ensure that a tenant who moves into a council property after a landlord has made a bid for that property will not have his home transferred without his consent.

Mr. Trippier: Where a dwelling is let by the existing landlord after a tenant's choice application has been made, regulations under Section 101 of the Housing Act 1988 will provide for vacant possession to be given on transfer. Such lettings will therefore be temporary and will not involve the transfer of dwellings over a tenant's or licensee's head. Existing landlords will be required to make the temporary nature of any such lettings clear at the time to the tenants or licensees.

Beijing (Ministerial Visit)

35. Mr. Clay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on his visit to Beijing to discuss the effects of chlorofluorocarbons on the global environment.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State had very useful discussions in December and was impressed by the understanding of the Chinese Government of the effects of chlorofluorocarbons on the ozone layer and by their appreciation of the gravity of the possible effect of CFCs on world climate. China has given an enthusiastic and positive response to our initiative in holding a major international conference in March on "Saving the Ozone Layer" and is considering the most appropriate senior level of representation.

Nirex

36. Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he next expects to meet representatives of UK Nirex.

48. Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he next expects to meet representatives of UK Nirex.

52. Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he next expects to meet representatives of UK Nirex.

68. Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he next expects to meet representatives of UK Nirex.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has no plans at present to meet representatives of UK Nirex.

Planning Law

37. Mr. Adley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will seek to amend existing legislation that provides presumption in favour of developers, in current planning law; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: There is a long-standing principle that applications for planning permission should be granted unless the development proposed would cause demonstrable harm to interests of acknowledged importance. That principle remains sound.

Housing Action Trusts

38. Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he proposes to publish the consultants' reports on housing action trusts.

Mr. Trippier: When we have received all the consultants' reports and have had an opportunity to consider them, we shall publish their findings.

London Boroughs Grants Scheme

40. Ms. Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received from the London boroughs grants scheme on section 137 of the Local Government Act 1972; and whether he has arranged to meet their representatives.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The London borough grants scheme wrote to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State arguing against the proposal in paragraph 8.20 of the White Paper "The Conduct of Local Authority Business". My right hon. Friend, the Minister for Local Government, will meet representatives on 23 February.

Homelessness

41. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he proposes to take in light of the findings of the Audit Commission study on homelessness and local authorities.

Mr. Trippier: I shall consider action on this study when it is finalised and published.

105. Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give the latest figures for families accepted as homeless by local authorities (a) in Greater London and (b) in England and Wales as a whole.

Mr. Trippier: The latest estimates of households accepted as homeless by English local authorities appears in table 1 of "Local authorities' action under the homelessness provisions of the 1985 Housing Act: England, Results for the third quarter of 1988, Supplementary tables", which is available in the Library.

For Welsh figures, I refer the hon. Member to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the reason for the delay in publishing the Audit Commission's report on its study of local authorities and homelessness; when he expects the report to be published; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: The timing of publication of Audit Commission reports is entirely a matter for the Commission.

Greenhouse Effect

42. Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the Government's latest assessment of the danger posed by the greenhouse effect; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer the hon. Member to the Government's reply to the first report from the Environment Committee, Session 1987-88, HC 270-1 on air pollution, Cm. 552.

Water Authority Land

43. Mr. Geraint Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received from recreational groups concerning access to water authority land after privatisation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: My right hon. Friend has received representations from a number of bodies which are being carefully considered.

However, the Water Bill imposes on the NRA and on the water and sewerage undertakers the same duties in respect of public access as at present apply to the water authorities, and the associated draft code of practice will make clear the presumption that the undertakers should continue to open up land of high amenity value to public access wherever circumstances allow.

58. Mr. Lofthouse: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received on the financial implications of the Water Bill in respect of land owned by the water authorities.

Mr. Moynihan: My right hon. Friend has received representations from the Council for the Protection of Rural England, the Countryside Commission and others on access to and conservation of water authority land after privatisation. In addition he has received representations from a local authority about compensation for councils whose land was transferred to water authorities under the Water Act 1973.

77. Mr. David Young: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has received a copy of the Countryside Commission's report of December 1988 on sites of conservation and recreation value currently in the ownership of water authorities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: The Countryside Commission has produced an interesting and useful study.

The planning system, together with the existing arrangements for national parks and areas of outstanding natural beauty, protects and will continue to protect amenity land.

The majority of land in national parks has always been in private ownership, and there is no evidence that this inhibits public enjoyment or leads to unacceptable development.

Local Authority Housing (Paper)

44. Ms. Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received in response to the consultation paper "A New Financial Regime for Local Authority Housing in England and Wales"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Bexhill and Battle (Mr. Wardle) on 11 January 1989 at column 676.

River Quality

45. Mr. Kirkhope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of rivers in England and Wales are of good or fair quality.

Mr. Moynihan: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Taunton (Mr. Nicholson) on 14 December at column 618.

106. Mr. Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what further action he proposes to improve the quality of English rivers.

Mr. Moynihan: The Water Bill provides for the establishment of the new National Rivers Authority with strong powers for the protection and enhancement of the water environment. The Bill also contains proposals for a strengthened general framework for the control of water pollution through the introduction of statutory water quality objectives. Improved powers to establish water protection zones are included in the Bill along with new provisions designed to allow most stringent controls over discharges of the most dangerous "Red List" substances.

Other action in hand includes major programmes by the regional water authorities, costing in the region of £900 million to £1,000 million to bring sewage treatments works which are at present failing to meet discharge consent conditions into compliance by March 1992. Regulations are also being prepared to improve controls over three of the commonest sources of water pollution incidents—slurry, silage and oil stores.

Climatic Change (Research)

46. Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what support he is giving to research into the effects of long-term climatic change on the United Kingdom.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply which I gave to the hon. Member for Wakefield (Mr. Hinchliffe) on 22 December at column 431.

Bed-and-Breakfast Accommodation

47. Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give the latest available figures for households in bed-and-breakfast accommodation (a) in Greater London and (b) in England and Wales as a whole.

Mr. Trippier: Latest estimates of households temporarily placed in bed-and-breakfast accommodation by English local authorities appear in table 4(a) of "Local authorities' action under the homelessness provisions of the 1985 Housing Act: England. Results for the third quarter of 1988. Supplementary Tables", which is available in the Library.

For Welsh figures, I refer the hon. Member to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

80. Mr. Haynes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his latest estimate of the cost of keeping a homeless family in bed-and-breakfast accommodation.

Mr. Trippier: The latest estimate of the average cost per household day of bed-and-breakfast accommodation provided by English local authorities in 1987-88 is £34 (£26 net of offsetting income such as DSS allowances).

Chlorofluorocarbons

49. Ms. Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what further measures his Department is considering to control the use and production of chlorofluorocarbons in commercial products.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given earlier today by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to my hon. Friend, the Member for Suffolk, South (Mr. Yeo).

Rate Support Grant Settlement

50. Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received following his announcement last month of the rate support grant settlement for 1989-90.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We have received representations from or on behalf of about 15 local authorities concerning the announcement on 19 December by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Local Government of the rate support grant settlement for 1989-90. Several hon. Members also made representations during the debate on the settlement on 19 January. The House then approved the 1989-90 rate supports grant report and supplementary reports for earlier years.

Rural Planning Strategies

51. Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress is being made in the preparation of rural planning strategies by district councils in England.

Mr. Chope: District councils for rural areas should include appropriate planning policies in their local development plans. Our planning policy guidance note on local plans, published in November, notes that large areas of the country still have no local plan and urges local planning authorities to make full use of this key component of the planning system. In rural areas new and updated local plans should reflect the Government's policies for fostering diversification of the rural economy.

Housing Association Rent Levels

53. Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the extent to which housing association rent levels can be kept within the means of locally employed people in rural areas under his present policies.

69. Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has any proposals to ensure that housing association rents set under mixed funding in rural areas will be affordable by rural workers.

Mr. Trippier: The average grant rate for housing association schemes using mixed private and public funding in England in 1989-90 will be 75 per cent. The Housing Corporation is publishing rates, within this overall average, for different types of development in different areas of the country. Housing associations in all parts of the country, including rural areas, will be able to set rents within the reach of people in lower-paid employment.

Housing Associations

54. Mr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the percentage increase in provision for housing associations between 1988-89 and 1991-92.

Mr. Trippier: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to my hon. Friend, the member for Nottingham, East (Mr. Knowles) on 14 December 1988 at column 629.

Private Tenants (Landlords)

55. Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he has to enable private tenants of non-resident landlords to change their landlord in the event of being subjected to persistent harassment.

Mr. Trippier: The Housing Act 1988 extends the remedies available to tenants through the courts by strengthening the law on harassment and illegal eviction, and introducing a new civil right to damages for an illegally evicted occupier. With the increase in privately rented accommodation expected as a result of the Act, tenants who wish to change landlord for whatever reason should find it easier to do so.

Bathing Water Standards

57. Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if his Department has any plans to bring forward the date of compliance with EEC bathing water standards; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: At present, some £70 million a year is being spent on schemes to improve the quality of bathing waters. We are discussing with water authorities the costs and the feasibility of bringing all waters identified under directive 76/160/EEC up to the European standards. In 1987, some 60 per cent. of the waters met those standards. The indications are that the results for the 1988 bathing season will show a further improvement.

Council House Sales

59. Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the current level of council house sales.

Mr. Trippier: Sales have increased substantially over the last two years. The current forecast is for more than 150,000 sales by local authorities and new towns in England in 1988-89 some 70 per cent. more than in 1986-87 and the second largest total for any financial year since the right to buy was introduced.

Estate Action

60. Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of Estate Action finance is directed to energy conservation and to providing heating facilities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on Wednesday 18 January 1989 at column 211.

Mortgage Arrears

61. Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has as to how many families have been admitted into local authority homeless accommodation in the last 12 months due to mortgage arrears.

91. Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate he has of the number of persons currently homeless as a result of building societies foreclosing on their mortgages.

Mr. Trippier: In the 12 months to September 1988 local authorities accepted responsibility to secure accommodation for an estimated 9,100 households under the homelessness provisions of the 1985 Housing Act, where the immediate reason for homelessness was mortgage arrears. Information is not available of type of mortgage lender.

90. Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give the latest figures for mortgage repossessions in England and Wales.

Mr. Trippier: The latest figures available for mortgage repossessions by building societies cover the first half of 1988. At 0·134 per cent. of all mortgage advances, the figure shows a continuing downward trend.

Parish Councils

62. Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the new financial arrangements for parish councils when the Local Government Finance Act becomes operational.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: When the Local Government Finance Act becomes operational, parish councils will continue to have the right to raise whatever money they need by precepting on the charging authority for their area, which must meet such precepts from the moneys—community charge, needs grant and its share of the national business rate—in its collection fund. The charging authority will reflect a parish precept in the community charge it sets for the parish area.

We are currently discussing with the local authority associations needs assessments for the grant system and the detailed arrangements for paying precepts. We envisage that charging authorities' needs assessments will include recognition of spending on functions which may be undertaken by parishes, and that a charging authority will meet its parish precepts in full, whatever the actual amount of community charges it collects.

Pield Heath Nurseries, Cowley, Uxbridge

64. Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to be able to announce his decision on the appeal by Milton Hutchings Ltd. and the Costain Group against the decision of the London borough of Hillingdon in connection with Pield Heath Nurseries, Cowley, Uxbridge.

Mr. Chope: As my hon. Friend will know, this is a complex and difficult case. We are making good progress in considering the further views of the parties and hope to reach a decision shortly.

Empty Council Houses

65. Mrs. Maureen Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the number of empty council homes.

Mr. Trippier: I can reply only for England. Returns made by English local authorities with their latest housing investment programmes indicate that there were 102,900 empty council dwellings at 1 April 1988. With the agreement of the local authority associations, my Department has carried out a survey of authorities' policy and practice with their empty dwellings; when the results are available, I will consider what action should be taken to bring these dwellings into use.

Derelict Land Grant

66. Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he expects to change the criteria in regard to the derelict land grant.

Mr. Trippier: A departmental review of measures for dealing with derelict land reclamation and the criteria attaching to derelict land grant is now under way. The outcome will be announced later in the year.

72. Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the level of Government grant aid for the reclamation of derelict land in inner city areas in 1987-88 and 1986-87; and how many acres of land were involved in each year.

Mr. Trippier: Public expenditure of approximately £50 million in 1986-87 and £75 million in 1987-88 was applied to the reclamation or improvement of land in the areas of the 57 urban programme authorities, through derelict land grant, urban development grant, the urban programme and the urban development corporations. Comprehensive statistics for the area of land reclaimed in inner cities were not collected centrally for this period.

Nuclear Waste

67. Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he has received from Nirex concerning the choice of sites for the disposal of nuclear waste; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has still to receive Nirex's proposals for a radioactive waste disposal facility. These are expected shortly.

Planning White Paper

71. Mr. John Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to publish his White Paper on planning; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: My right hon. Friend hopes to do so shortly.

Basildon Council

74. Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment on what information he based his decision not to rate-cap Basildon council in the current financial year.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State decided in July last year not to designate Basildon for rate limitation in 1989-90 on the best information then available to him about Basildon's likely total expenditure for 1988-89, namely the budget return for 1988-89 dated 14 April 1988.

National Rivers Authority Advisory Committee

75. Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what criteria he used in considering the appointment of a chairman to the National Rivers Authority advisory committee; and whether it is his policy to extend the criteria in making future appointments including the chairman for the proposed National Rivers Authority.

Mr. Moynihan: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State wished to appoint as chairman of the National Rivers Authority advisory committee someone with proven management experience and experience of environmental matters. In accordance with the requirement in clause 1(4) of the Water Bill my right hon. Friend will seek to appoint people to the board of the National Rivers Authority who have experience of, and have shown capacity in, matters relevant to the functions of the authority.

Housing Act 1985

76. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received concerning his review of part III of the Housing Act 1985, previously the Homeless Persons Act; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: Reports have been sent by SHAC/Shelter; the Institute of Housing; the National Association of Citizens Advice Bureaux; the Association of London Authorities and the Association of District Councils. In addition, a number of other organisations, individual local authorities and members of the public have sent representations.

Green Belt, Barnsley

78. Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has any proposals to release land from the green belt around Barnsley.

Mr. Chope: My right hon. Friend has had no such proposals before him.

Service Men (Tenancies)

79. Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will take steps to prevent the homes of service men on active service being transferred from the local authority to another landlord if they are unable to vote under the tenants' choice provisions in the Housing Act 1988.

Mr. Trippier: Arrangements proposed under the tenants' choice provisions to consult tenants, including those temporarily absent from home, were described in my Department's consultation paper "Tenants' Choice: Consultation and Voting", which was issued on 8 December 1988 and copies of which were placed in the Library.

Marine Environment

81. Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any plans to promote further measures to protect the marine environment.

Mr. Moynihan: Protection of the marine environment remains a high priority for my Department and other Departments with marine responsibilities. In addition to implementing the major programme of measures agreed at the London North sea conference and preparing for the third North sea conference in March next year, we are discussing a wide range of follow-up work in other fora including the Oslo and Paris commissions, the North sea scientific task force and, where relevant, the European Community.

Housing Corporation (Funding)

82. Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what initiatives he is taking to ensure that areas including north Oxfordshire have access to Housing Corporation funding.

Mr. Trippier: It is for the Housing Corporation to determine the allocation of its capital programme to individual housing associations and areas, within broad priorities agreed with my right hon. Friend. Details of the approved development programme for 1989-90 and forward plans for 1990-91 and 1991-92 were given in my answer of 14 December to my hon. Friend the Member for Nottingham, East (Mr. Knowles) at column 629.

Domestic Rates

83. Mr. Cunliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the average increase in domestic rates in April 1988.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The average increase in domestic rates between 1987-88 and 1988-89 was 8·8 per cent.

Atmospheric Pollution

84. Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the five main sources of pollution into the atmosphere, giving the tonnage of pollution per year in each case.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Data on emissions of selected gases into the atmosphere are published annually in the "Digest of Environmental Protection and Water Statistics", the latest issue of which (No. 10) contains figures for 1976-86.

The table summarises the data given for 1986.

United Kingdom estimated emissions of selected gases into the atmosphere, by source, 1986

thousand tonnes

Source	[1]SO2	NOx	CO	HCs	[2]CO2 (million tonnes)
Domestic	200	57	483	78	91
Commercial/Public Service	130	45	11	1	35
Power Stations	2,600	783	48	13	227
Refineries	170	38	4	1	22
Agriculture (fuel use)	10	3	1	—	3
Other industry	570	179	75	3	122
Transport	50	821	4,762	583	96
Other sources	—	[3]12	[3]220	[4]1,387	25
Total	3,740	1,937	5,602	2,065	621

[1] from fuel combustion only.
[2] to be published for the first time in Digest No. 11.
[3] incineration and agricultural burning.
[4] mostly industrial processes and solvent evaporation.

Pollution (Trees)

85. Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement of his Department's policies towards protecting trees from the effects of pollution.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The surveys carried out by the Forestry Commission are giving us information about the state of health of trees, but do not tell us whether any effects observed are the result of pollution. The Department is supporting research into possible mechanisms by which air pollution might damage trees. The most recent authoritative advice, from the Department's terrestrial effects review group, is that some trees are exposed to pollution levels which may be expected to cause stress. Research will continue in order to establish whether there is any threat to the long-term health of trees. The Department also funds the arboricultural advisory and information service located at the Forestry Commission's research station at Alice Holt, which gives a wide range of advice to local authorities and others on tree matters.

Irish Sea (Pollution)

86. Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of riverborne pollution in the Irish sea comes from British rivers.

Mr. Moynihan: The recent status report prepared for the International Council for the Exploration of the Sea by scientists from the UK and Ireland summarises available information on inputs from rivers to the Irish sea. The information supplied for river discharges from English and Welsh coasts, Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland indicates that for the majority of anthropogenic inputs, the proportion coming from English and Welsh rivers ranges between 50 and 80 per cent. and is typically about two thirds. As the report indicates, the data available is of variable quality.

Water Supplies (Nitrate Levels)

87. Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what further estimate he has made of the cost to water authorities of reducing nitrate levels in public water supplies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: The capital costs to water authorities of reducing nitrate levels in public supplies will be between £25 million and £35 million; the cost to statutory water companies will be around £5 million.

Water Bill

88. Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received from organisations representing consumers concerning the Water Bill.

Mr. Moynihan: During the preparation of the Water Bill and following its publication, representations have been received from

The National Consumer Council
The Consumer Association
The National Federation of Consumer Groups
The Welsh Consumer Council
The Birmingham Consumer Group
The Tyneside Consumer Group
The Portsmouth and District Consumer Group
The National Association of Citizens' Advice Bureaux

These have been concerned mainly with the organisation of river basin management, the question of a national body to represent consumers, the responsibilities and powers of the National Rivers Authority and of the Director General of Water Services, and price control. More recently the National Consumer Council has also made representations on the guaranteed standards scheme and on disconnections practice.

In addition, the consumer consultative committees of all ten water authority regions in England and Wales have made representations on the scope, membership and responsibilities of the proposed new customer service committees.

Local Government Manpower

89. Mr. Favell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many people were employed in local government in 1968 and in the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Gummer: The number of people employed by local authorities in England in June 1968 was 1,948,000; this figure excludes law and order staff (except police—all ranks) and agency staff, as these were not included in surveys before 1975. The corresponding figure for June 1988 was 2,440,000.

Water Quality

92. Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he last discussed the implementation of the EEC directives on bathing water and tap water quality with the Commission of the European Communities.

Mr. Moynihan: My officials are in regular contact with Commission officials about the implementation of these directives.

London Docklands (Infrastructure Schemes)

93. Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how he intends to respond to the request by the London Docklands development corporation for an extra £400 million Government subsidy to fund infrastructure schemes; and whether he intends to put a limit on the amount of subsidy payable.

Mr. Trippier: The LDDC's splendid achievements in regenerating London's docklands are funded by Government grant and by receipts from land sales. No request for £400 million additional grant is under consideration. Grant is paid within annual limits as voted expenditure approved by Parliament.

Empty Council Houses (London)

94. Mr. Janman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the number of council properties in Greater London which have been empty for longer than six months.

Mr. Trippier: London boroughs reported in their housing investment programme returns that there were 12,400 council houses which had been vacant for more than six months at 1 April 1988.

Redundant Agricultural Buildings

95. Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will take further measures to encourage planning authorities to consider positively applications for the change of use of redundant agricultural buildings.

Mr. Chope: Since 1980 we have consistently encouraged planning authorities to take a positive approach to proposals for the reuse of redundant farm buildings. This policy is clearly stated in our planning policy guidance notes on green belts and rural enterprise and development. We shall continue to advocate this policy as opportunities arise, and to have regard to it when determining planning appeals.

Council House Tenants (Opting-out)

96. Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps his Department is taking to ensure that all council house tenants are fully appraised of the choice to opt out of local authority control.

Mr. Trippier: Tenants' choice will be implemented fully in the spring. Comprehensive information material from my Department about tenants' choice is being prepared and will be published shortly. The Housing Corporation is already providing advice, information and assistance to tenants and prospective new landlords about the scheme. Any tenant or body wishing to know more should contact the corporation.

Canary Wharf

98. Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he intends to put a limit on the subsidy to the developers of the Canary wharf.

Mr. Trippier: The Isle of Dogs enterprise zone provisions lapse on 26 April 1992. Within the statutory provisions, variations are not possible between particular developers or sites.

HIP Allocations, London

101. Mr. Cohen (Leyton): To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment by how much housing investment programme allocations for London have been reduced for 1989-90 from 1988-89, in real terms; and why.

Mr. Trippier: The total for basic HIP allocations in London for 1989-90 is £289·891 million. In real terms this amounts to 74·4 per cent. of that for 1988-89. London received 33·2 per cent. of the national total, the same proportion as for 1988-89. Although the net total for HIP allocations has reduced, capital receipts from sales of council housing have increased substantially, and gross provision nationally for local authority housing capital expenditure in 1989-90 is £3,303 million, an increase of 15 per cent. on previous plans.

Planning Inquiries (Appeals)

102. Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will consider introducing changes in the planning inquiry appeals procedures, including the inspectors' adjudication, which would help to equalise the rights of existing local residents and property development companies.

Mr. Chope: The rules of procedure at public inquiries are designed to meet the criteria of openness, fairness and impartiality which were laid down by the Franks committee in 1957. The present rules were comprehensively revised only last year; I see no need for further changes at this stage. Within the framework provided by the rules, inspectors are expected to use their discretion to ensure that all relevant submissions, from whatever source and however presented, are given due consideration.

Council House Sales

103. Mr. Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many council houses have been sold to sitting tenants in England since May 1979.

Mr. Trippier: From April 1979 to September 1988 about 963,000 tenants bought their homes from English local authorities and new towns.

Water Companies (Ownership)

104. Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to preserve diversity of ownership of the statutory private water companies.

Mr. Moynihan: I refer the hon. Member to the statement by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 11 January.

London (Air Pollution)

107. Mr. Michael J. Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many times carbon monoxide levels in London's air have exceeded World Health Organisation deadlines in the last 12 months; and how many times nitrogen dioxide levels in London's air have exceeded the air quality standard contained in the European directive 85/201 over the last 12 months.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The World Health Organisation has set guidelines for carbon monoxide concentrations using average periods of eight hours and one hour. These are targets for improved air quality and not limit values. In 1988 one exceedance of the eight hour guideline was measured at the Department of the Environment's monitoring station in central London. No exceedances of the one hour guideline were measured.

Provisional results from the United Kingdom nitrogen dioxide monitoring network indicate that the EC directive limit value, which is based on the 98th percentile of measurements throughout the year, was not exceeded in London in 1988.

People With Special Needs (Hostels)

109. Mr. Boateng: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement concerning the future of hostel placements for people with special needs.

Mr. Trippier: No. Placements are a matter for the individual local authorities, housing associations and voluntary bodies concerned.

Child Care Provision

109. Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what advice he will be giving local authorities on improving child care provision for their employees.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: None. Conditions of employment in local government are a matter for the local authorities.

Ports (Pollution)

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those ports in the south-west of England and south Wales which make a charge for the disposal of refuse from ships using those ports; what charges are levied; and if he will make a statement on the environmental consequences of dumping such refuse in United Kingdom coastal waters.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Regulations made by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport, which came into effect on 31 December 1988, permit harbour authorities providing reception facilities for ships' garbage to make reasonable charges for their use. Although some information on these facilities is available, details of what charges they make are not definite or comprehensive.

This Department is concerned with arrangements for the disposal of landed ships' waste. Regulations made under the Control of Pollution Act classify ships' waste, including refuse, as industrial waste. Most industrial waste is collected by the private sector but where local authorities undertake this function they are required to levy a reasonable charge for collection and disposal.

Dumping ships' waste in coastal waters can have very damaging environmental consequences. The dumping of certain materials such as plastics is now an offence under the Merchant Shipping Acts.

67 Tufton Street, London

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what annual rental charges have been paid by the Property Services Agency to the owner of the freehold of 67 Tufton street, Westminster, London, for each of the years since 1980.

Mr. Chope: The rental charges agreed by the Property Services Agency of leasehold buildings are determined on a strictly commercial, and therefore confidential, basis.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what changes occurred in the terms and conditions of the leasehold agreement between the Property Services Agency and their landlord at 67, Tufton street, Westminster, London at or around the time when Westminster city council disposed of the freehold to Bourne Association Ltd.

Mr. Chope: One minor change to provide an optional access to the top floor.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what changes occurred in the terms and conditions of the leasehold agreement between the Property Services Agency and their landlord at 67, Tufton street, Westminster, London at or around the time when Bourne Association Ltd. disposed of the freehold to the present owners.

Mr. Chope: None.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment who is the present landlord of the Property Services Agency at 67, Tufton street, Westminster, London.

Mr. Chope: This information, like all aspects of the landlord-tenant relationship, is a matter of confidentiality.

Greenhouse Effect

Mr. Bidwell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what research is undertaken by his Department to ascertain the contributions to the greenhouse effect of vehicle exhaust gas emissions.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I have today given to the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce) which includes information about emissions of CO_2, the principal greenhouse gas.

London Docklands

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will place a copy in the Library of the report on employment in London docklands commissioned by the London Docklands development corporation from Research Bureau Ltd.

Mr. Trippier: I will do so, as soon as the report has been considered, and can be published.

East Thameside Study

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what extra resources he is planning to commit to the provision of housing for those on low and medium incomes on the sites included in the east Thameside study.

Mr. Trippier: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Hartlepool (Mr. Leadbitter).

Construction Work (VAT)

Mr. Heddle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he has had about the impact of value added tax on non-domestic construction work on schemes planned and appraised but not legally binding or backed by a building contract on 21 June 1988.

Mr. Trippier The Government have had discussions with some interested parties who made representations on their proposals for transitional relief on VAT for non-domestic construction projects.

Mr. Heddle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consultations he has had with the chairman of each urban development corporation on the likely effect of the imposition of value added tax on non-domestic construction work on the contribution private sector investment will make to urban regeneration; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier None, but I am of course aware of the representations being made by developers.

Water Industry (Spending)

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the capital spending by the water industry for 1988-89 and for each of the next three years at current prices and at constant 1987-88 prices.

Mr. Moynihan: Estimates of capital expenditure in 1988-89 and in 1989-90 will be published on 30 January by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer in the public expenditure White Paper. The remaining information requested by the hon. Member is not available.

Housing Subsidies

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the housing subsidy paid to each partnership and programme authority in each of the years from 1978-79 to 1989-90 (plans) expressed in cash and constant 1987-88 prices.

Mr. Trippier I will write to the hon. Member.

Viraj Mendis

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will request a report from Manchester City Council as to the reasons why Mr. Viraj Mendis who has illegally overstayed in the United Kingdom since 1975 was provided with council properties by that council; what the total subsidies were on these properties; and whether Mr. Mendis's rates and rent were in arrears.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 24 January 1989]: Yes. I have requested a report from the city council and will write to my hon. Friend in the light of its reply.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has of any rent and rate rebates and housing benefit payments made to Mr. Viraj Mendis since 1973.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 24 January 1989]: I have no information, but I have taken the matter up with the city council and will write to my hon. Friend in the light of that reply.

DEFENCE

Plutonium, Uranium, Tritium (Exports)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if any unsafeguarded plutonium, uranium or tritium has been exported to the United States of America since May 1979.

Mr. Sainsbury: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the right hon. Member for Manchester, Wythenshawe (Mr. Morris) on 25 April 1984 by the then Minister of State for Defence Procurement at column 506.

Development Projects

Mr Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those development projects which have been written off by his Department in the last two years in each of the services; what will be the savings for each project cancelled; and how much development expenditure had been involved in each project until the date the projects were cancelled.

Mr. Sainsbury: In the financial years 1986-87 and 1987-88 the following major projects which had entered full development were cancelled:

Title	Service	Date of cancellation	Expenditure at cancellation £ million
CACS 4	Royal Navy	1987-88	[1]28
SP 70	Army	1986-87	88
Nimrod AEW	Royal Air Force	1986-87	660

[1] Expenditure on hardware only. Other expenditure is commercially confidential.

Projects funded for full development are the preferred solution to approved defence requirements. Although a project may subsequently be cancelled, the underlying requirement will almost certainly remain and will need to be met by other means. This is the case in respect of all three projects listed. The question of savings in respect of these cancellations does not arise.

Payroll Deduction Scheme

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is (a) the name of the agency charity which has been awarded the contract for his Department's payroll deduction scheme, (b) the length of time that the agency has been in existence, (c) the number of civilian and military personnel that will be covered by the agency, (d) the number of staff employed by the agency, (e) the agency's experience in dealing with computerised records systems, (f) the number of other payroll deduction schemes with which it is involved and the number of employees covered by such schemes, and (g) the length of time that will have elapsed between Mr. Chancellor's announcement of tax concessions for payroll deduction schemes and the operative date of his Department's scheme.

Mr. Sainsbury: The agency charity which has been awarded the Ministry of Defence contract for the payroll deduction scheme is South West Charitable Giving. This agency was awarded Inland Revenue approved status in March 1987. Potentially there are 161,950 civilians and 312,000 military personnel who could subscribe to the payroll deduction scheme. Details relating to the agency such as personnel are of course a matter for the company. I can however say that it is registered for payroll giving under the Data Protection Act 1986. The Chancellor of the Exchequer announced tax concessions for payroll deduction schemes in the 1986 Budget. For civilians the charities payroll giving scheme came into effect on 1 November 1988, and the armed forces expect to join the scheme on 1 April 1989.

Ministerial Staff

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the number of staff, by grade, in receipt of local pay additions outside London and the south-east economic planning region; what are the different amounts paid to staff, by grade; whether this sum varies due to location; what qualifying period of scale-related criteria is used; and whether this varies by location.

Mr. Sainsbury: None.

Military Aircraft (Accidents)

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the numbers of military aircraft destroyed or severely damaged by accident during each of the last 10 years for which figures are available, indicating the aircraft types involved.

Mr. Neubert: I refer the hon. Member to the annual statements on the defence Estimates (SDE) which since 1980 have published such information about accidents to aircraft of the three services. The relevant information for 1988 is as follows:

Date	Aircraft	Service
1. 22 January	Hawk	RAF
2. 3 February	Sea King	RN
3. 2 March	Bulldog	RAF
4. 10 March	Lynx	RN
5. 30 March	Tornado	RAF
6. 11 April	Lightning	RAF
7. 20 April	Phantom	RAF
8. 6 May	Chinook	RAF
9. 10 May	Tornado	RAF
10. 13 May	Hawk	RAF
11. 20 May	Harrier	RAF
12. 30 May	Meteor	RAF
13. 14 June	Hunter	RN
14. 23 June	Lynx	Army
15. 24 June	Hawk	RAF
16. 2 August	Phantom	RAF
17. 9 August	Tornado × 2	RAF
18. 18 August	Harrier	RAF
19. 6 September	Bulldog	RAF
20. 6 September	Gazelle	Army
21. 7 September	Jaguar	RAF
22. 14 September	Gazelle	Army
23. 23 September	Phantom	RAF
24. 13 October	Sea King	RN
25. 18 October	Phantom	RAF
26. 19 October	Gazelle	Army

Skyguard Radar

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what training in the operation of the Skyguard radar system has been given to RAF police responsible for monitoring low flying.

Mr. Neubert: There is no operational training requirement for the RAF police in the use of Skyguard in a monitoring role because trained operators and engineering support are provided by 2729 squadron, Royal Auxiliary Air Force Regiment, RAF Waddington. However, limited training has been provided during the trials of the equipment to enable RAF police investigators to familiarise themselves with its operation.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the assessment of the results of the trial of the Skyguard radar system for monitoring low-flying aircraft is complete; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neubert: The results of the trials to assess the possibility of using a Skyguard system to monitor the heights of low-flying aircraft are still under consideration. I hope to be able to announce our conclusions shortly.

Low Flying

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans exist to deploy mobile threat simulator equipment in low-flying areas during exercises, to provide electronic warfare training to aircrews.

Mr. Neubert: A programme is currently underway to construct eight remote sites within Spadeadam range airspace to which mobile threat simulators could routinely be deployed. In addition to this, mobile threat simulators may be used on a limited basis elsewhere in the country in support of a RAF sponsored exercise.

Arms Race (Symposium)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Newport, West, 10 January, Official Report, column 539, if he will list those civil servants by grade and division who took up the invitations from Imperial college, London, to attend the "Ways Out of the Arms Race" scientists conference symposium on 2-4 December 1988.

Mr. Sainsbury: I have nothing to add to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member on 10 January at column 539.

Disarmament (Verification)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what contribution in terms of research finances and personnel has been made by his Department's arms control unit into the outstanding verification problems, within the disarmament regimes of (a) chemical, biological or toxic warfare agents, (b) cruise missiles, (c) nuclear warhead testing, (d) the safeguarding of military grade nuclear materials from misuse and (e) ballistic missile exports and testing.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The defence arms control unit, in consultation with a number of other divisions in the Ministry of Defence and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, keeps all aspects of arms control, including verification, under review. The Department does not, however, record the time spent by personnel on individual arms control issues in the way that the hon. Member requests. Although no research finance is currently devoted specifically to arms control verification by the Department, we do maintain close contact with academics both in the United Kingdom and internationally who are engaged on research in this field.

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if any Royal Air Force bases ever receive air freighted consignments of radioactive wastes from British military bases abroad.

Mr. Sainsbury: Small quantities of radioactive waste from British military bases abroad have been returned to the United Kingdom on an ad hoc basis. Most of the consignments have been sent by sea. Some minor items containing very small quantities of radioactive material, for example, instruments luminised with radium, may have been moved by air, but records of such movements, if any, are not held centrally, and therefore the question could be answered only at disproportionate cost.

Chemicals

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if there are any stocks held at any Ministry of Defence establishment in the United Kingdom or elsewhere of (a) diphenylaminechloroasine, or phenarsazine chloride (Adamsite), (b) phosgene, (c) dichlororethyl sulphide, (d) hydrocynanic acid, (e) chlorovinyldichloroarsine and (f) diphenylcyanoarsine.

Mr. Sainsbury: The Ministry of Defence holds small experimental quantities of agents solely for research into protective measures for personnel against chemical and biological attack. These include substances of the type identified in the question. The United Kingdom abandoned its offensive capability in chemical warfare in the late 1950s and does not hold stocks of agents for offensive purposes.

Chemical Weapons

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Rutland and Melton (Mr. Latham), Official Report, 10 January, column 679, if he will give the locations, dates and methods of destruction of the United Kingdom chemical weapons stockpile, to which he made reference.

Mr. Sainsbury: The United Kingdom abandoned its offensive capability in chemical warfare in the late 1950s. United Kingdom chemical weapons were disposed of over a lengthy period and it would require disproportionate effort to research old records for precise locations, dates and methods. However, I can confirm that all known stocks were disposed of, although from time to time there are discoveries of buried items dating back to the two world wars, which are taken to the chemical defence establishment at Porton Down for safe disposal.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what criteria are used to decide whether the standard £250 cost limit for the answering of parliamentary questions may be waived.

Mr. Younger: Any parliamentary question which is likely to involve disproportionate expenditure—currently £250—is referred to the responsible Minister before significant resources are committed. It is not a rigid limit: it is for the Minister concerned to decide in each case whether there are exceptional circumstances to justify answering a question which would cost more than £250.

Chemical Warfare Agents

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when members of the scientific section of the Japanese Ministry of Foreign Affairs and the Japanese Army Institute of Science and Technology visited this country to obtain details of production of chemical or biological warfare agents.

Mr. Sainsbury: We have been unable to find any record of a visit which might correspond to the one described by the hon. Member. In any event, the United Kingdom does not provide chemical or biological warfare agents.

Low Flying (Swansea)

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the low-flying incident over the city of Swansea on Friday 20 January.

Mr. Neubert: Following a number of complaints about the incident to both RAF Brawdy and the Ministry of Defence by residents of Killay, Newton and Langland during the afternoon of Friday 20 January, a full investigation was commissioned to establish what military aircraft was involved and the circumstances. Such investigations are always thorough and may take some time to complete, but I shall write to the right hon. Member once the results are available.

Tactical Booking Cell, West Drayton

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will make a statement on the roles, responsibilities and staffing levels of the tactical booking cell, RAF West Drayton;

(2) what responsibility the tactical booking cell at RAF West Drayton has for the control of military low-level flying in each of the low flying areas 1A, 1B, 3, 9, 13, 19, 20, (T) and Yeovilton.

Mr. Neubert [holding answer 16 December 1988]: The tactical booking cell at RAF West Drayton manages the day-to-day use of the United Kingdom low-flying system and air weapons ranges, provides warnings and compiles statistics. The cell is also responsible for dedicated user low-flying areas when their co-ordinating authorities are closed. The established staff level of the cell is 20 Royal Air Force personnel.

Aircraft (Low-flying Sorties)

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those aircraft types for which central records are kept of low-flying sorties over the United Kingdom.

Mr. Neubert [holding answer 16 December 1988]: Central records of low-flying sorties over the United Kingdom are kept for all regular military users of the United Kingdom low flying system.

Low-level Flying (Management Group)

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many civilian personnel from the National Air Traffic Services serve on the military low flying management group.

Mr. Neubert [holding answer 16 December 1988]: One.

Written Answers to Questions

Thursday 26 January 1989

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Chemical Weapons

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will make it his policy to offer to (a) the United States of America and (b) the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, United Kingdom expertise in the destruction or disablement of their chemical biological or toxic warfare agent stockpiles;

(2) if he has any plans to offer to (a) Libya, (b) Iraq and (c) Israel, United Kingdom technical expertise and technology to destroy or disable chemical or biological warfare agents held by each respective country.

Mr. Waldegrave: Information on the destruction of chemical weapon stockpiles is widely available. A number of countries have tabled papers on the subject at the negotiations in Geneva aimed at achieving a global ban on chemical weapons. In particular, Britain has tabled two papers in 1979 and 1988 on the destruction of the pilot nerve agent production plant at Nancekuke, Cornwall.

We would, of course, consider approaches from any country for technical advice on the disposal of such weapons. We have no particular expertise in the destruction of biological weapons.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy to request the incoming United States Secretaries of Defence and State that the United States of America implement a moratorium on its new binary chemical weapons development programme.

Mr. Waldegrave: No. The unilateral United States moratorium on chemical weapons production from 1969 to 1987 was not matched by the Soviet Union, which has the world's largest and most sophisticated chemical weapons capability. In the face of this, the continuing disparity between our assessment of, and Soviet claims about, the size of their stockpile, and in the absence of a comprehensive convention banning these weapons, we support the United States modernisation programme as a means to maintain a limited but credible deterrent capability.

The eventual United States binary stockpile will, in fact, be smaller than their limited and aging unitary stockpile, which is already being destroyed.

Gulf States (Visit)

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if, during his recent visit to the Gulf states he raised with any of the heads of state or Government ministers whom he met the possibility of sales of United Kingdom nuclear reactor and fuel service technology to their country.

Mr. Waldegrave: No.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if, during his recent meeting with Saudi Government ministers during his Gulf state tour he took the opportunity to welcome the recent accession of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty by Saudi Arabia.

Mr. Waldegrave: Yes.

Departmental Library

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will arrange for copies of videos and transcripts of the Central television 12-part series on the nuclear age to be put in his Departmental library.

Mr. Waldegrave: No. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office library does not normally stock audiovisual material or transcripts of television programmes.

Public Records

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he made any application under the Public Records Act of 1958 in accordance with paragraphs 26 and 27 of the White Paper on Modern Public Records, Cmnd. 8531, to withhold beyond 30 years papers concerning the background to the signing with the United States Government of the Anglo-American mutual defence agreement on atomic energy matters in July 1958.

Mr. Eggar: Records may be retained or closed for longer periods than 30 years under appropriate sections of the Public Records Act 1958 and in accordance with established criteria. It has been the practice of successive administrations not to disclose the content of records which are so withheld from public release.

Soviet Tanks

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if his arms control and disarmament research unit has examined the potential benefits to future Soviet tank division readiness and efficiency from the redeployment of Soviet tank technicians from obsolete tanks to be withdrawn under the commitment made by president Gorbachev in his speech to the United Nations in December; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: We are examining the effect which the cuts in Soviet forces announced by Mr. Gorbachev on 7 December, on which he and Mr. Shevardnadze elaborated on 18 and 19 January, might have on Soviet military capabilities. We welcome the statement that 5,300 of the 10,000 Soviet tanks to be withdrawn will be modern, although it is disappointing that only 5,000 of the 10,000 will be destroyed. A number of detailed questions remain to be answerd about how the cuts will be implemented, including the question of how residual forces might be redeployed.

Japanese Prisoners of War

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has received any representations on the level of compensation paid to former Japanese prisoners of war; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: Yes. The question of compensation was dealt with in the 1951 treaty of peace with Japan. The total sum made available to the United Kingdom for compensation was £4,816,473, including £174,871 contributed by the Thai Government for work done on the Burma-Siam railway.

Emperor Hirohito

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many representations he has received regarding his decision to attend Emperor Hirohito's funeral.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State has received 57 letters regarding his decision to attend the late Emperor of Japan's funeral, including 25 letters from hon. Members.

ODA

Zambia

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the Government have yet determined the conditions under which they would be prepared to write off their development loans to Zambia.

Mr. Chris Patten: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave the hon. Member for Oxford, East (Mr. Smith) on 14 November 1988 at column 366.

Debt

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much of the debt owed by each of the 17 most indebted countries is owed to (a) Her Majesty's Government and (b) British banks.

Mr. Chris Patten: As at 31 March 1988 amounts outstanding to the Overseas Development Administration from the 17 countries classified by the World Bank as highly indebted were as follows:

	£
Argentina	—
Bolivia	270,856·48
Brazil	3,416,096·55
Chile	—
Colombia	2,847,924·56
Costa Rica	3,214,041·25
Cote D'Ivoire	1,814,770·77
Ecuador	7,557,273·24
Jamaica	49,180,720·59
Mexico	—
Morocco	—
Nigeria	5,175,084·04
Peru	4,194,608·65
Philippines	5,481,634·67
Uruguay	—
Venezuela	—
Yugoslavia	—

The latest available figures on amounts at risk to ECGD were published in its "Summary of audited trading results 1986/87". Claims by United Kingdom commercial banks on developing countries are listed in table 15 of the Bank of England Quarterly Bulletin.

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the net financial transfer of resources to the 17 most indebted countries during 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: Figures for net resource transfers in 1988 are not yet available.

Commonwealth Distance Learning Project

Mr. Wells: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what contribution he is making towards the implementation of the decisions taken at the Commonwealth Ministers' meeting at Vancouver to establish a Commonwealth distance learning project; and whether he will make a statement;

(2) what action he has taken to implement the decisions taken by Commonwealth Ministers at Vancouver about a Commonwealth distance learning project; and whether he is yet in a position to make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: The United Kingdom is playing a major part in the new Commonwealth of learning, a distance learning network to help students in one country take advantage of educational facilities in another. An important requirement for the network will be a comprehensive information unit and credit transfer register. Her Majesty's Government have agreed to finance these developments by building on existing facilities at the British Open university.

Discussions have already taken place and a meeting of representatives of user institutions is being held at the Open university in February. A proposal will then be placed before the board of governors of the Commonwealth of learning, on which the United Kingdom is represented, at its second meeting in March.

The cost of these developments will be between £1 million and £2 million over five years and is additional to the support which Her Majesty's Government will continue to give to distance education under its bilateral aid programme.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Ministerial Staff

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Attorney-General what is the number of staff in the Crown Prosecution Service, by grade, in receipt of local pay additions outside London and the south-east economic planning region; what are the different amounts paid to staff, by grade; whether this figure varies due to location; what qualifying period of scale-related criteria is used; and whether this varies by location.

The Attorney-General: Local pay additions are not paid to members of the Crown Prosecution Service employed outside London and the south-east economic planning region.

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Attorney-General what is the number of staff in the Lord Chancellor's Department, by grade, in receipt of local pay additions outside London and the south-east economic planning region; what are the different amounts paid to staff by grade; whether this figure varies due to location; what qualifying period of scale-related criteria is used; and whether this varies by location.

The Attorney-General: The number of staff in the Lord Chancellor's Department by grade in receipt of local pay additions outside London and the south east economic planning region is as follows:

	Number
EO	6
AO	13
Typist	5

All are paid at the same rate of £300 per annum on completion of six months service.

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Attorney-General what is the number of staff in Her Majesty's Land Registry,b y grade, in receipt of local pay additions outside London and the south-east economic planning region; what are the different amounts paid to staff by grade; whether this figure varies due to location; what qualifying period of scale-related criteria is used; and whether this varies by location.

The Attorney-General: There are no Land Registry staff, outside London and the south east economic planning region, in receipt of local pay additions.

Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Attorney-General what criteria were used by the Lord Chancellor in determining the reasons for the witholding of papers from release at the Public Record Office for 1958 concerning the Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament.

The Attorney-General: The Public Records Act 1958 makes provision for records to be retained or closed from access for periods longer than 30 years. Records are retained or closed from access in accordance with established criteria, which were set out in paragraphs 24-31 of the White Paper "Modern Public Records", Cmnd. 8531, March 1982.

Criminal Law Jurisdiction Act

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Attorney-General on how many occasions his Department has been informed by the prosecuting authorities of the Republic of Ireland that witnesses have refused to travel to the Republic to give evidence in cases involving the Criminal Law Jurisdiction Act 1976.

The Attorney-General: I am not aware of any occasion when information of such refusal has been communicated by the prosecuting authorities of the Republic of Ireland to my Department.

Cash Limits

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Attorney-General whether any changes will be made to the Lord Chancellor's Department's cash limit and running costs limit for 1988-89.

The Attorney-General: Yes. Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the cash limit for the Lord Chancellor's Department, class XI vote 5 will be increased by £9,999,000 from £207,384,000 to £217,383,000. This increase reflects an increase of £8,000,000 to take account of a projected shortfall in receipts from civil court business fees; an increase of £2,000,000 to maintain progress on the court building programme; and a reduction of £1,000 to £213,803,000 in the running cost limit. The running costs limit decrease will be offset by a corresponding increase in the running costs limit for the Office of the Minister for the Civil Service (class XX, vote I) and reflects the transfer of costs for recruitment under the direct entry grade 7 competition 1988.

The cash limit increase will be charged to the reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

WALES

"Our Changing Schools"

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he intends to issue a Welsh Office version of the Department of Eduction and Science handbook "Our Changing Schools."

Mr. Wyn Roberts: We have no plans at present to do so. The Welsh Consumer Council published in 1988 a guide for parents with children starting school.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many oral parliamentary questions he has answered by written reply because the question was not reached at Question Time, for the most recent year for which figures are available.

Mr. Peter Walker: A total of 240 oral questions were tabled to the Secretary of State for Wales between 1 January and 31 December 1988; of these oral questions 100 were answered by written reply because they were not reached.

The figure does not include oral questions which were subsequently withdrawn, unstarred or transferred to other Departments.

Cardigan Bypass

Mr. Geraint Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he has any plans to build the Cardigan bypass within the next three years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Yes. Details of the timing will be given in the forthcoming edition of "Roads in Wales".

Royal Welsh Agricultural Society

Mr. Geraint Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he has any plans to give financial aid or a loan to the Royal Welsh Agricultural Society during the next three years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: The Royal Welsh Agricultural Society has recently made an application to my Department which is under consideration.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will state for each of the districts within mid-Glamorgan the number of jobs (a) lost and (b) created for the 12 months ended (i) December 1987 and (ii) December 1988.

Mr. Peter Walker: Comprehensive information on jobs lost and created is not available.

Gresford-Pulford Bypass

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the saving achieved in building the Gresford to Pulford bypass as a result of the prior singling of the Wrexham to Chester railway line.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: About £300,000.

Higher Education

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he is able to announce his decisions on local authority higher education provision in 1989-90; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: Having consulted the Welsh joint education committee and the Welsh counties committee I have decide that the higher education quantum for 1989-90, formerly known as the advanced further education quantum, ahould be set at £39·4 million. This represents a 7·7 per cent. increase between 1988-89 and 1989-90.

I have received advice from the Wales advisory body for local authority higher education on the planned disposition of academic provision, the number of student places on higher education courses in local authority colleges in Wales and the distribution of the higher education quantum. The WAB proposals provide a growth of 2·9 per cent. between the target of 13,589 full-time equivalent students in 1988-89 and the target student numbers of 13,986 for 1989-90. They provide for continued emphasis to be given to courses in science, engineering and other vocational disciplines and for sub-degree and part-time provision to be protected. The proposals for distributing the quantum relate to the proposals for target student numbers by institution, mode of attendance and subject, and allow additional funding for degree and postgraduate courses. WAB has considered bids from institutions against the £400,000 set aside for selective initiatives and has proposed that this money be used to fund the following initiatives:

- Continued support for the manufacturing systems engineering degree course at the Polytechnic of Wales.
- Continued support for the engineering access course at the Polytechnic of Wales.
- Continued support for professional, industrial and commercial updating (PICKUP) courses at six institutions.
- Continued support for research activities at the Polytechnic of Wales, together with new support for research at the South Glamorgan and West Glamorgan Institutes of Higher Education.
- Support for the development of an all-Wales access consortium.
- Support for the development of a training course for management education teachers.

I have decided to accept the WAB's advice on academic provision and student numbers, on the methodology for distributing the quantum and on the distribution of the £400,000 for selective initiatives. The local education authorities have been informed of these decisions and of their individual allocations.

Copies of a note explaining the methodology by which the AFE quantum for 1988-89 is being distributed have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

CIVIL SERVICE

Cash Limits

Mr. Ground: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service if there are any proposals to change the 1988-89 cash limit for the office of the Minister for the Civil Service.

Mr. Luce: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the cash limit for the Office of the Minister for the Civil Service (class XX, vote 1) will be increased by £2,889,000 from £30,994,000 to £33,883,000. The increase will be charged to the reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure. The increase is required to cover the cost of physical security improvements to the Downing street complex and other buildings; refurbishment and maintenance in 10 Downing street and uprating of the telecommunications system (this charge is partially offset by appropriations in aid); charges by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office for the provision of conference officers for visits overseas by the Prime Minister (previously provided as an allied service); additional costs associated with the running of a competition for recruitment of direct entry grade 7 staff (this charge is offset by a corresponding decrease of £92,000 in the votes for the various Departments who are participating in the scheme). The increase also reflects the decision to disburse to charities and benevolent associations the savings to the Exchequer arising from the underpayment of public service pensioners as a result of the miscalculation of RPI increases.

The above increases have a consequent effect on the Department's running costs limit which will increase by £831,000 from £28,773,000 to £29,604,000.

THE ARTS

British Library

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Minister for the Arts if he will make a statement on the progress of the construction of the British Library.

Mr. Luce: Satisfactory progress on stage 1A of the new British Library, currently under construction at St. Pancras, is being maintained. Stage 1A is on target to be completed in 1993 within the cash target of £300 million which I announced last November. The current position is that, measured in expenditure terms, stage 1A is 24 per cent. complete.

The completion phase is now at the outline sketch design stage and progressing satisfactorily. This final phase of the building is being planned so that the whole new British Library will be complete and fully operational in 1996.

Departmental Staff (Child Care)

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Minister for the Arts what child care provision the Office of Arts and Libraries provides for pre-school age children of employees; what child care provision, for school holiday or after-school care, is provided for employees' children aged five and over; what plans there are for increasing provision in the next five years; and how these are to be funded.

Mr. Luce: The Office of Arts and Libraries does not at present provide child care facilities for its employees. The Cabinet Office, with which the Office would be associated in this matter, is considering the need to do so.

Items in Lieu of Tax

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Minister for the Arts if there have been any items accepted in lieu of tax or allocated since he last made an announcement on the subject to the House.

Mr. Luce: Since my announcement on 19 December at column 2, I am pleased to announce that three items have been accepted in lieu of tax; a drawing by Rubens, a sculpture by Naum Gabo, and "The Artist's Studio" by Peter Tillemans. The tax liability satisfied was £50,000, £286,610 and £52,270 respectively. The Tillemans painting will go to the Castle museum, Norwich but a decision over the allocation of the other two items has not yet been taken.

Cash Limits

Mr. Carrington: To ask the Minister for the Arts if he will give details of any proposed changes to the cash limits of his Department's votes in 1988-89.

Mr. Luce: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimates, the cash limits of the following votes will be increased as indicated:

Class and Vote	Current Cash Limit £	Change £	Revised Cash Limit £
XIII, 1	153,576,000	+500,000	154,076,000
XIII, 2	174,362,000	+5,200,000	179,562,000

Additional provision of £500,000 is being sought in a spring Supplementary Estimate on class XIII, vote 1. The grant-in-aid to the Tate gallery is to be increased by £800,000 to meet completion costs of building projects which exceed previous estimates. That increase will be partly met from savings of £300,000 elsewhere on the vote.

Additional provision of £5·2 million is being sought on class XIII, vote 2. The main Estimate provision for assets accepted in lieu of tax is to be augmented by £5·7 million but this additional provision is partially offset by savings of £500,000 elsewhere on the vote.

The increase of £5,700,000 on these two votes has been charged to the reserve and will not, therefore, add to the planned total of public expenditure.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Malaysia and Singapore Air Carriers

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many Rolls-Royce engines have been sold to (a) Malaysia and (b) Singapore air carriers in each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Atkins: Rolls-Royce plc has provided my Department with the following details of engines supplied for civil purposes to Malaysia and Singapore:

	Number
Malaysia
1980	1 Dart
1982	10 RB211-524
1986	1 RB211-524
1987	1 RB211-524
Singapore
1979	2 Dart
1980	1 Dart
1987	2 Spey

European Single Market

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will provide funds for those non-Confederation of British Industry member firms unable to afford the £1,725 fee for attendance at the Confederation of British Industry's Initiative 1992 seminars.

Mr. Maude: The DTI does not subsidise attendance at private sector conferences on the single European market. Our "Europe Open for Business" campaign provides a comprehensive service free of charge to help firms prepare for the single market challenge. This includes access to a database listing hundreds of conferences and seminars throughout the country.

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster excluding media advertising (a) how much has been spent on preparing British industry for the creation of the European single market in 1992 and (b) how this money has been spent.

Mr. Maude: Excluding advertising, some £3·65 million has been spent on DTI's campaign to encourage firms to prepare for the single European market. The expenditure includes detailed and comprehensive literature on the single market programme; a major series of business conferences; a national telephone inquiry service (01-200 1992) and mailing operation; the 1992 'Spearhead' computer database; video materials; and research into business preparations.

Peckham (Ministerial Visits)

Ms. Harman: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will give details of Ministers' visits to the Peckham area in connection with the north Peckham task force, including the name of the Minister, the date of the visit, and the purpose of the visit.

Mr. Forth: The information is as follows and relates to visits since the launch of the task force in May 1986:

Date
1 July 1986	Kenneth Clarke, Paymaster General and Sir George Young, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State at DoE, to look at projects in development.
4 March 1987	Kenneth Clarke, Paymaster General opened the south east adult training project and looked at other task force funded projects.
22 September 1987	Kenneth Clarke, inaugurated the task force and Lloyds business development fund.
20 January 1988	Robert Atkins, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State at DTI—familiarisation visit.
1 February 1988	John Patten, Minister of State at the Home Office inaugurated the task force/Brook Street project.

Date
9 June 1988	Tim Renton, Minister of State at Home Office opened the Vietnamese refugee community's employment and training project.
13 July 1988	John Patten, Minister of State at Home Office launched the Peckham enterprise centre.
26 July 1988	Norman Fowler, Secretary of State for Employment, to talk about task force funded projects, with special reference to ET providers.
12 December 1988	Lord Young, Secretary of State for Trade and Industry inaugurated the Walworth school world of work scheme.

Disposable Products

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what plans he has to encourage manufacturers to produce dioxin-free disposable nappies and disposable paper products; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the Parliamentary Secretary to the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on 28 November, at column 96. I understand that the quantities of dioxin which may occur in these products are very small. I will consider the matter further when the expert advice from the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the committee on toxicity at the Department of Health is available.

Overseas Companies

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many overseas companies have set up operations in Britain over the past year.

Mr. Alan Clark [pursuant to his answer 18 January 1989, c. 231.]: Toyota has for some time been considering setting up a car manufacturing plant in the European Community and has engaged consultants to help them assess the options. The Government believe that at this stage the United Kingdom is the lead candidate as a location for the project. Feasibility studies are in hand based on a plant producing up to 200,000 cars a year, with a local (EC) content level rising after a transitional period to 80 per cent. The project would create up to 3,000 direct jobs.

My right hon. and learned Friend has made it clear to Toyota that it would receive a warm welcome from the Government if it were to decide to locate the project in the United Kingdom, and he has invited the company to work closely with the Department of Trade and Industry in pursuing its feasibility studies.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prostitutes (Prosecutions)

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will seek to make it a criminal offence for a prostitute knowingly to infect a person with HIV or hepatitis B.

Mr. John Patten: We have considered most carefully whether it should be an offence for one person knowingly to pass HIV on to another, but have concluded, for the present, that this would not be justified, principally because:

(a) there is little evidence that reckless infection is a problem or that people who are HIV antibody-positive are deliberately infecting others;

(b) any such offence would be difficult to prove and probably unworkable in practice;

(c) it is doubtful whether an offence would deter; and

(d) the introduction of an offence might well be counter-productive, discouraging those at risk from being tested and, arguably, thereby contributing to the spread of the disease.

Similar considerations apply in relation to hepatitis.

Local Pay Additions

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what, in respect of the payment of local pay additions in the Metropolitan police, are the different amounts paid to staff, by grade; whether this sum varies due to location; what qualifying period of scale-related criteria is used; and whether this varies by location.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I understand from the Commissioner that the information is as follows:

Grade	Location	£ per annum
Executive Officer (excluding those in ADP field)	Jubilee House	600
Administrative Officer (excluding those in receipt of specialist allowances)	All	600
Administrative Assistants (excluding those in receipt of specialist allowances)	All	300
Senior Personal Secretary	Inner London	700
Personal Secretary	Elsewhere	600
Typing Manager	Inner London	700
Typist	Elsewhere	600
Trainee Typist
Knowledge of London Examiner (Grades I and II)	All	600
Area Traffic Warden Controller	All	450
Senior Traffic Warden Controller	All	450
Traffic Warden Controller	All	450
Traffic Warden Supervisor	All	450
Traffic Warden	All	375

No qualifying periods are required except for traffic wardens who receive local pay additions after one year's service. This does not vary by location.

Fire-fighting Equipment

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he is satisfied that the fire tenders known as Green Goddesses and equipment to be used in an emergency are maintained at a high state of readiness for immediate use.

Mr. John Patten: Yes.

Police Raid (Leyton)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if, further to his answer of 12 January, Official Report, columns 487-8, to the hon. Member for Battersea (Mr. Bowis) about the explosives find in Battersea, he will make a further statement about the subsequent police raid on 21 December on premises in Leyton.

Mr. Hurd: Following the discovery of the cache at Staplehurst court, Battersea and in an effort to trace possible witnesses, police made inquiries at a number of addresses including one in Leyton. They were satisfied that the occupants of the Leyton address were not connected with any terrorist organisation.

Football (Policing)

Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what was the cost of policing matches involving Football League clubs in each of the last five football seasons;

(2) what was the contribution made by Football League clubs towards the cost of policing football matches involving Football League teams in each of the last five football seasons;

(3) what was the total cost for policing football matches at the grounds of (a) Chelsea football club, (b) Leeds United football club, (c) Huddersfield Town football club, (d) Newcastle United football club, (e) Liverpool football club, (f) Oxford United football club, (g) Luton Town football club in each of the last five seasons; and what proportion of these costs was paid for by each club itself.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I understand from the Commissioner that the payments made by football League clubs in London over the past five years are as follows:

Club	1983-84 £	1984-85 £	1985-86 £	1986-87 £	1987-88 £
Arsenal	108,076·00	110,024·92	141,636·43	160,581·23	161,875·96
Brentford	23,388·43	39,254·80	33,351·45	31,095·05	34,078·68
Charlton	11,387·11	21,512·63	41,572·66	74,500·35	49,273·65
Chelsea	107,811·24	177,138·67	167,815·67	142,615·45	168,257·86
Crystal Palace	22,144·55	52,710·05	39,918·13	44,755·58	37,173·59
Fulham	40,745·69	34,171·18	42,351·03	34,814·48	26,526·79
Leyton Orient	9,547·73	13,777·59	14,947·57	14,225·96	17,509·17
Millwall	18,300·89	39,280·96	50,093·27	43,658·14	57,693·28
Queen's Park Rangers	49,685·61	65,986·81	96,304·41	95,717·26	129,564·28
Tottenham Hotspur	200,864·02	156,247·01	195,159·92	171,440·49	153,785·36
West Ham United	104,530·17	102,908·85	119,049·89	146,478·51	176,303·08
Wimbledon	19,556·66	24,951·89	22,718·80	57,469·45	81,354·26
Total	716,038·10	837,965·36	964,919·23	1,017,351·95	1,093,395·96

There is no central record of the costs of policing matches or of contributions made by clubs outside London. This information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Television Licences

Sir Dennis Walters: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he intends to review the possibility of extending the present rules governing refunding of television licences.

Mr. Renton: We have no plans to do so.

Fly Posting

Mr. Gregory: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many successful prosecutions there have been in each of the last three years for unauthorised fly posting; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: Information collected centrally does not distinguish illegal bill posting from other offences against the Town and Country Planning Acts 1968-71.

Child Abuse (Research)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the research on child sexual abuse undertaken by his Department (a) since 1979, (b) currently underway, and (c) planned for the future together with the amount of money allocated in each instance; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: The Home Office has conducted no major research studies specifically focusing on child sexual abuse. It has, however, published two short articles in the Home Office research and planning unit's research bulletin —copies of which are in the Library—which deal with various aspects of child abuse. These are:

Child Homicide and Child Physical and Sexual Abuse 1986, Research Bulletin No. 20.

Child Molestation: A Research Note 1987, Research Bulletin No. 23.

The Home Office is funding a research project on the experiences of "Children as Victims of Crime". This study will shed light on experiences of sexual abuse as well as other types of crime. The grant made in respect of this project is £98,000. Moreover, a contract has recently been let to examine the effectiveness of live TV links for child witnesses in the Crown courts, including cases of child sexual abuse. The cost of this research is £45,000.

Planning of our programme of research for the financial year 1989-90 is under way. We are considering research needs in respect of child sexual abuse and discussions are being held with the Department of Health on this important topic.

Court Attendance (Parents)

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will consider introducing an experimental scheme making the attendance at court mandatory for parents of children under the age of 17 years who are on trial.

Mr. John Patten: Where juveniles are charged with criminal offences, it is normally right for their parents to attend court with them. The law already imposes a duty on the court, where it considers the parents' attendance desirable, to require them to attend unless it would be unreasonable to do so.

Bulk Loads

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions there have been under paragraph 100(2) of the Road Vehicle (Construction and Use) Regulations for failing to secure a loose bulk load, in the most recent period for which figures are available.

Mr. John Patten: The information collected centrally on court proceedings does not separately distinguish contravention of regulation 100(2) of the Road Vehicles (Construction and Use) Regulations 1986. The available information relates to offences of causing danger by reason of the number of passengers carried, by insecure load, by weight or distribution, and is published annually in "Offences relating to motor vehicles England and Wales, Supplementary tables" (table 5 of the issue for 1987, the latest available). Probably of the order of 90 per cent. of these offences will have related to the load carried. This publication also gives, table 20, the available information on the issue of fixed penalty notices, which may be issued as an alternative to prosecution for certain loading offences, including the one in question.

Association of Chief Police Officers

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he last met representatives of the Association of Chief Police Officers; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Hurd: I would refer my hon. Friend to the reply that I gave to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Lancashire, West (Mr. Hind) on 15 December at column 708.

Peremptory Challenge

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will take steps to ensure that the abolition of a defendant's rights of peremptory challenge in jury trials will not in any way weaken the fairness of the jury system.

Mr. John Patten: We believe that abolition of peremptory challenge will increase the fairness of the jury system. We have no present plans for further changes, but we will of course keep the working of the system under review.

Radio

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to widen choice for radio listeners.

Mr. Renton: We have endorsed IBA proposals to award 20 contracts for incremental radio stations. The first five will be announced in the spring. We have also agreed that a separate contract should be advertised for a station covering Heathrow and Gatwick airports. In addition we have authorised BBC and independent local radio stations to provide separate programmes if they wish on each of their current frequencies. The White Paper "Broadcasting in the '90s" makes further proposals to allow the expansion of radio in due course, in particular the establishment of independent national radio stations and up to several hundred local and community radio stations.

Association of Chief Police Officers

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he last had a meeting with the Association of Chief Police Officers; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Hurd: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Lancashire, West (Mr. Hind) on 15 December at column 708.

Mr. Viraj Mendis

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will make an up-to-date statement on the case of Viraj Mendis.

Mr. Renton: Further to the reply given to a question from the right hon. Member for Birmingham, Sparkbrook (Mr. Hattersley), on 18 January, Mr. Mendis applied for judicial review of my right hon. Friend's refusal to reverse the decisions to refuse refugee status and to make a deportation order against him. The Divisional court and the Court of Appeal rejected this application on 19 January.

No satisfactory assurance was received about Mr. Mendis' admissibility to a third country, and he was removed to Sri Lanka on the 12.15 pm Air Lanka flight from Gatwick airport on 20 January.

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his estimate of the total cost to public funds in respect of Mr. Viraj Mendis including legal costs, transport costs and supplementary benefit payments since the time at which his overstay in the United Kingdom commenced.

Mr. Renton: It is not practicable to quantify the staffing and other resources spent by the Home Office in connection with Mr. Mendis' case, but these were considerable. Costs incurred by other Departments are a matter for my right hon. and hon. Friends the Ministers concerned.

Disclosure of Information

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has reviewed all the statutory provisions bearing upon the disclosure of official information, other than the Official Secrets Act, to ensure that they are consistent with the principles and provisions concerning liability to criminal prosecution for disclosure of official information contained in the Official Secrets Bill; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: The purpose of the Official Secrets Bill is to replace section 2 of the Official Secrets Act 1911 in accordance with the principles set out in the White Paper published in June 1988 (Cm 408). The Government are aware of other legislation containing specific offences relating to the disclosure of particular information provided under statutory requirements and it referred to these in its White Paper at paragraph 35. Any consideration of such offences needs to be made in the context of the specific provisions to which they relate.

Immigration

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the date on which the papers relating to the family of KMA (Ref. No. K362905/3) were received by his Department; and when he expects to have processed this case and advised the Foreign and Commonwealth Office of his conclusions.

Mr. Renton: I regret that when I wrote to the hon. Member on 13 January I was not aware that the referral papers had been received in the Home Office on 5 December but were not linked with the file. The entry clearance officer in Bombay was instructed on 25 January to issue suitable entry clearance.

Football Clubs (Membership Scheme)

Mr. McCrindle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if it is anticipated that companies running the proposed football identity card scheme should have access to the police national computer.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: No.

Drugs

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the recent level of arrests for narcotics-related offences.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Figures for the number of people arrested for drug-related offences are not collected centrally. Figures available for people dealt with at court or cautioned are published regularly and 1987 figures can be found in chapters 5 and 7 of "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales, 1987". Also, figures for people whose offences are settled by compounding or who are given informal warnings can be found in the Home Office statistical bulletin "Statistics on the Misuse of Drugs 1987".

Women Prisoners

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is (a) the total number of females who served all or part of a prison sentence during 1987 accompanied by a dependent child or baby in England and Wales, and (b) the proportion and number of such females who had committed an offence involving robbery or violence; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 24 January 1989]: During 1987, 129 females served all or part of a prison sentence accompanied by their babies. Of these, 20—16 per cent.—had committed an offence involving robbery or violence.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Belfast City Airport

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what arrangements he is proposing to make for the future of Belfast city airport in the context of the sale of Short Brothers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Viggers: The future of Belfast harbour airport will depend largely on the outcome of the process to privatise Short Brothers plc. An information memorandum on Shorts was recently issued to a selected number of prospective purchasers inviting them to submit preliminary proposals for the company. This memorandum was issued to only those parties interested in purchasing the company as a whole. In the detailed negotiations which will follow the proposals of possible purchasers, the future of the harbour airport will be covered, but meanwhile there will be no change in its operation.

Fair Employment

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Kingston upon Hull, North, Official Report, 20 January, columns 335-36, if he will identify those recommendations contained in paragraphs 15.5 to 15.123 of the Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights' "Report on Fair Employment" (Cm. 237) which have been incorporated (a) in full and (b) in part in the Fair Employment (Northern Ireland) Bill 1988, indicating in which clauses of the Bill they can be found.

Mr. Viggers: An analysis of the kind requested would be inappropriate given the complexity of the issues involved. The Fair Employment (Northern Ireland) Bill reflects those recommendations of the SACHR report which relate to the meaning of discrimination and equality of opportunity, the scope of new legislation, the encouragement of equality of opportunity in practice, new institutional arrangements, the conduct of strategic investigations and new duties on employers to monitor the religious composition of their work force. In addition, the Government fully endorses the SACHR's general principles on the provision of equality of opportunity. The Bill's provisions dealing with the registration and certification of employers, the enforcement powers of the fair employment tribunal and the disqualification of employers from public sector grants and contracts reflect concerns expressed by SACHR, but address the issues by means different from those recommended in the report.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he will publish the proposed code of practice refered to in the Fair Employment (Northern Ireland) bill 1988 two clear sitting days before the Second Reading of the Bill.

Mr. Viggers: No. The code will be drawn up by the Fair Employment Commission, and will therefore be available until the commission has been established. However, I intend to make available before Committee stage a preliminary draft of the revised "Guide to Effective Practice", which will serve as the first code once the Bill receives Royal Assent.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he intends to publish the drafts of seven sets of regulations referred to in the Fair Employment (Northern Ireland) Bill 1988.

Mr. Viggers: It is not normal practice to publish drafts of subordinate legislation of this kind. However, I expect to be able to inform the House during Committee stage of the likely content of the main regulations referred to in the Bill.

Fair Employment Act

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if, pursuant to his reply of 13 January to the hon. Member for Kingston upon Hull, North, he will list in the Official Report the employers in respect of whom section 42 certificates under the Fair Employment Act were issued.

Mr. Viggers [holding answer 18 January 1989]: It is not the policy of the Fair Employment Agency to release the names of parties in individual complaint cases. Of the 18 section 43 certificates referred to in my reply of 13 January, five involved either the Northern Ireland Office or Northern Ireland Departments whilst the remaining 13 concerned public bodies in Northern Ireland.

Toxocariasis

Mr. Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is is his estimate of the number of cases of toxocariasis which occur each year in Northern Ireland; what is the distribution of such cases, over the last few years; and whether there is any evidence as to whether the incidence of the condition has been affected by the dog licensing scheme operating in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 24 January 1989]: Information about cases of toxocariasis is not available. It is not possible, therefore, to say if the incidence of the disease has been affected by the current dog licensing scheme.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Inflation

13. Mr. Worthington: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the rate of inflation (a) now and (b) last January.

69. Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the rate of inflation (a) now and (b) last January.

106. Mr. Morgan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the rate of inflation (a) now and (b) last January.

Mr. Brooke: 6·8 and 3·3 per cent. respectively.

58. Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what forecast he has made of the rate of inflation in six months' time.

Mr. Lilley: The Autumn Statement contains the latest published forecast for retail prices index inflation in 1989.

94. Mr. Cabom: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give his latest forecast for the rate of inflation in 1989.

138. Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest forecast for the rate of inflation in 1989.

Mr. Lilley: The Autumn Statement contains the latest published forecast for retail prices index inflation in 1989.

114. Ms. Mowlam: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will state the number of countries in the European Community which have a lower rate of inflation than the current rate in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Lilley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Barnsley, Central (Mr. Illsley) on 20 January at column 358.

115. Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the Government expect to achieve the objective of zero per cent. inflation.

123. Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the Government expect to achieve the objective of zero per cent. inflation.

141. Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the Government expect to achieve the objective of zero per cent. inflation.

Mr. Lilley: The Government's resolve against inflation remains firm, as shown by recent policy actions in raising interest rates to keep downward pressure on inflation. The ultimate objective remains stable prices.

Income Statistics

14. Mr. Wallace: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if there are any plans to change the system of collation of national income statistics.

Mr. Major: The CSO are always looking for ways to improve the accuracy and completeness of the national accounts. The Government established last summer a review to make recommendations for cost-effective improvements. It has now been completed and a comprehensive report will be published in due course.

Ministerial Meetings

15. Mr. Batiste: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he next expects to meet his counterparts in the other major industrial countries.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he next expects to meet his counterparts in the other major industrial countries.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he next expects to meet his counterparts in the other major industrial countries.

Mr. Lawson: The G7 Finance Ministers will be meeting in Washington next week.

Labour Statistics

16. Mr. Lord: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer in which regions adult unemployment has fallen over the past year.

Mr. Brooke: Adult unemployment has fallen sharply in every region of the United Kingdom over the last year, but fastest in the west midlands, the north west and Wales.

61. Mr. William Powell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer in which regions adult unemployment has fallen over the past year.

129. Mr. Burt: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer in which regions adult unemployment has fallen over the past year.

Mr. Major: Adult unemployment has fallen sharply in every region of the United Kingdom over the last year, but fastest in the west midlands, the north west and Wales.

83. Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the fall in the number of long-term unemployed aged 18 to 24 years since October 1986.

95. Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the fall in the number of long-term unemployed aged 18 to 24 years since October 1986.

97. Mr. Andy Stewart: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the fall in the number of long-term unemployed aged 18 to 24 years since October 1986.

Mr. Major: The latest available figures, for October 1988, show that the number of long-term unemployed aged between 18 and 24 has fallen by one half since October 1986.

Exchange Rate

18. Mr. Flyn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the latest exchange rate policy.

110. Mr. Murphy: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on exchange rate policy.

Mr. Lilley: The Government's policy is unchanged. The need to reduce inflation is paramount and a firm exchange rate is essential to achieve this objective.

World Bank and IMF

19. Miss Lestor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he next expects to meet the managing director of the International Monetary Fund and the President of the World Bank; and what matters they propose to discuss.

Mr. Lawson: I expect to see the managing director of the IMF at the G7 meeting in Washington next week.

VAT

20. Mr. Baldry: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received from charities concerning the European Court of Justice ruling on value added tax on new buildings.

Mr. Lilley: My right hon. Friend and I have received a large number of representations from charitable bodies about the impact of the recent European court judgement on VAT zero rates, and I and customs officials have also held meetings with representative groups. The points made are being carefully considered and I will make an announcement soon.

31. Mr. Graham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much a person on average earnings spends as a proportion of his total income on value added tax now; and what is the comparable figure for 1978-79.

119. Mr. McCartney: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much a person on average earnings spends as a proportion of his total income in value added tax now; and what is the comparable figure for 1978-79.

137. Mr. Bradley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much a person on average earnings spends as a proportion of his total income on value added tax now; and what is the comparable figure for 1978-79.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Estimates of VAT payments as a proportion of total income (ie including unearned income) are not available. Estimates of VAT payments as a proportion of gross earnings were given as part of an answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Hornchurch (Mr. Squire) on 10 January 1989 at columns 634-56.

42. Mr. Pike: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received regarding the future policy on taxation of those items at present exempt from value added tax.

Mr. Lilley: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor has received a number of representations about the future policy on taxation of items at present exempt from value added tax.

117. Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received regarding the imposition of value added tax on books, periodicals and newspapers.

Mr. Lilley: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor has received a number of representations in favour of maintaining VAT zero rating for books, periodicals and newspapers.

Investment

21. Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the latest figures for the growth of manufacturing investment.

70. Mr. French: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the latest figures for the growth of manufacturing investment.

111. Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the latest figures for the growth of manufacturing investment.

Mr. Major: In the first three quarters of 1988, manufacturing investment was 11 per cent. higher than in the same period a year earlier.

22. Mr. Redwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the growth of total fixed investment in the United Kingdom since 1981.

45. Mr. Hind: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the growth of total fixed investment in the United Kingdom since 1981.

73. Mr. Fishburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the growth of total fixed investment in the United Kingdom since 1981.

76. Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the growth of total fixed investment in the United Kingdom since 1981.

93. Mr. David Davis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the growth of total fixed investment in the United Kingdom since 1981.

Mr. Major: In the first three quarters of 1988 total fixed investment was 43 per cent. higher in real terms than in 1981.

25. Mr. Hayes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the ratio between the growth of investment and the growth of consumption over the past five years.

36. Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the ratio between the growth of investment and the growth of consumption over the past five years.

63. Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the ratio between the growth of investment and the growth of consumption over the past five years.

108. Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the ratio between the growth of investment and the growth of consumption over the past five years.

Mr. Major: Investment has grown over one and a half times faster than consumption over the past five years up to the third quarter of 1988.

33. Mrs. Roe: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of the growth in total investment in 1988.

35. Mr. Whitney: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of the growth in total investment in 1988.

Mr. Major: Total investment was forecast in the Autumn Statement to increase in real terms by 12 per cent. in 1988.

43. Mr. Cousins To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on current foreign investment and capital flows into the United Kingdom.

52. Mr. Doran To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on current foreign investment and capital flows into the United Kingdom.

Mr. Major: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Bridgend (Mr. Griffiths) on 23 January at column 374.

46. Mr. Darling: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will provide the latest available data on net flows of (a) direct investment, (b) portfolio investment and (c) banking flows into the United Kingdom in 1988.

Mr. Major: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my hon. Friend the Economic Secretary gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Edinburgh, South (Mr. Griffiths).

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of the growth in total investment in 1988.

Mr. Major: Total investment was forecast in the Autumn Statement to increase in real terms by 12 per cent. in 1988.

Labour Costs

23. Mr. Gregory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest information on the growth of unit labour costs in manufacturing industry.

79. Mr. Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest information on the growth of unit labour costs in manufacturing industry.

85. Sir Hal Miller: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest information on the growth of unit labour costs in manufacturing industry.

89. Sir David Price: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest information on the growth of unit labour costs in manufacturing industry.

Mr. Major: In the three months to November, manufacturing unit wage costs increased by 0·5 per cent. on the same period a year earlier.

Public Sector Surplus

24. Mr. Janman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest forecast for the level of public sector surplus in 1988-89.

Mr. Major: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply that my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Bridlington (Mr. Townend).

Employment

26. Mr. Devlin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the growth of (a) self-employment and (b) part-time employment in the United Kingdom since 1979.

Mr. Major: Between June 1979 and September 1988 the number of self-employed people in Great Britain rose by 60 per cent. to nearly 3 million. Over the same period, the part-time work force in employment rose by 30 per cent. to more than 6 million.

National Insurance

27. Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions has he had with the institute for fiscal studies regarding reform of the national insurance contributions system.

Mr. Major: None, but I have noted their proposals.

Interest Rates

28. Mr. Speller: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will take steps to reduce bank interest rates and the mortgage interest rates.

Mr. Lilley: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer that I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Tooting (Mr. Cox).

32. Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on his Department's estimate of the future level of interest rates and mortgage rates in the next three months.

Mr. Lilley: Interest rates will remain as high as they need be, for as long as necessary, to bring inflationary pressures back under control. Mortgage rates are a matter for lenders to decide.

55. Mr. Latham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will make a statement on the current level of interest rates.

57. Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the current level of interest rates.

67. Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the current level of interest rates.

Mr. Lilley: Bank base rates are 13 per cent.

66. Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will assess the impact of current levels of interest rates on the economy.

Mr. Lilley: Higher interest rates will take some time to have their full effect, but there are already some clear signs that economic growth is moderating to sustainable rates. Higher interest rates encourage saving and discourage borrowing.

98. Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on how many occasions during the past 12 months he has increased interest rates; what is the total increase; and what is his assessment of the total resultant increase in annual interest payments within the United Kingdom economy.

Mr. Lilley: Bank base rates were moved 13 times in the last year, both up and down, and increased by 4 per cent. in total. The impact on total interest payments within the United Kingdom economy will be less than proportionate as long-term interest rates have moved much less than short-term rates.

101. Mr. Patchett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the extra borrowing costs to industry incurred by a rise of 1 per cent. in interest rates.

128. Mr. Morley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the extra borrowing costs to industry incurred by a rise of 1 per cent. in interest rates.

Mr. Major: The cost to industrial and commercial companies of a one percentage point rise in United Kingdom short-term interest rates maintained for a full year is estimated to be about £400 million.

Government Expenditure

29. Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the outlook for general Government expenditure as a percentage of gross domestic product.

107. Mr. Neil Hamilton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the outlook for general Government expenditure as a percentage of gross domestic profit.

Mr. Major: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer's Autumn Statement to the House on 1 November 1988 set out the Government's plans for public spending. It noted that general government expenditure (excluding privatisation proceeds) in 1988-89 is expected to be below 40 per cent. of GDP for the first time in over 20 years; and that over the next three years it is expected to fall further.

Bank of England (Governor)

30. Mr. Skinner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he next intends to meet the Governor of the Bank of England; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lilley: My right hon. Friend meets the governor from time to time to discuss a variety of topics.

60. Mr. Yeo: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last met the Governor of the Bank of England; and what subjects were discussed.

Mr. Lilley: My right hon. Friend meets the governor from time to time to discuss a variety of topics.

Balance of Payments

34. Mr. McLeish: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will state the current balance of payments as a proportion of gross domestic product.

51. Dr. Godman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the current balance of payments as a proportion of gross domestic product.

105. Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will state the current balance of payments as a proportion of gross domestic profit.

Mr. Major: In the latest 12 months for which figures are available the current account deficit as a proportion of gross domestic product was 2½ per cent.

56. Mr. Strang: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list his policies which are aimed at reducing the balance of payments deficit; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: The rise in the current account deficit has primarily reflected the strength of domestic demand. The Government responded appropriately by tightening monetary policy and the effects of this are already beginning to bite, particularly in the housing market and in the retail sector. However, as my right hon. Friend the Chancellor has made clear, the current account deficit is likely to be one of the last indicators to respond.

88. Mr. Battle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give his latest forecast for the United Kingdom's balance of payments.

99. Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give his latest forecast for the United Kingdom's balance of payments.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give his latest forecast for the United Kingdom's balance of payments.

Mr. Major: The Autumn Statement forecast a current account deficit this year of £11 billion. There will be a new forecast published on Budget day in the usual way.

Exports

37. Dr. Moonie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will provide his latest forecast for growth in the United Kingdom's visible exports in 1989.

74. Mr. Clelland: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will provide his latest forecast for growth in the United Kingdom's visible exports in 1989.

Mr. Major: I refer the hon. Members to the reply that my right hon. Friend the Paymaster General gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Hemsworth (Mr. Buckley).

Overseas Assets

38. Mr. Bowis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of the stock of United Kingdom net overseas assets.

91. Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of the stock of United Kingdom net overseas assets.

120. Mr. Beaumont-Dark: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of the stock of United Kingdom net overseas assets.

127. Dr. Twinn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of the stock of United Kingdom net overseas assets.

Mr. Major: At the end of 1987, the United Kingdom net stock of overseas assets was worth £89½ billion, about one fifth of GDP. These assets generated earnings of £5½ billion in 1987. The United Kingdom net stock of assets was the second highest in the world behind Japan. Figures for 1988 are not yet available.

National Debt

39. Sir John Stokes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the additional revenue which will be available in 10 years as a result of the current level of national debt repayment.

Mr. Lilley: Were annual debt repayments for each of the next ten years to be at the current forecast level of £10 billion the stock of net debt will be virtually halved. However, the amount of debt interest saved will depend upon interest rates over the next ten years and the mix of debt repaid, and hence it could only be quantified with a large degree of uncertainty. There would clearly be a substantial saving on the current level of net interest payments of £11½ billion.

Pound Sterling

40. Mr. Ron Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the current value of the 1979 pound sterling after taking inflation into account; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lilley: The real effective sterling exchange rate (based on relative normalised unit labour cost, as published by the IMF on the United Kingdom country page of "International Financial Statistics") averaged 83·6 in 1979 and 106·1 in October 1988.

Income Tax

41. Mr. Hardy: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the cost to the Exchequer of a reduction in the rate of income tax of 1p.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The direct revenue cost, at 1989-90 income levels, of reducing the basic rate of income tax by one penny is estimated to be £1·4 billion in 1989-90 and £1·7 billion in 1990-91.

Budget Surplus

44. Mr. McAllion: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the budget surplus at present.

84. Mr. Roger King: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest forecast for the level of public sector surplus in 1988-89.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest forecast for the level of public sector surplus in 1988-89.

Mr. Major: I refer the hon. Gentleman and my hon. Friends to the reply that my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Bridlington (Mr. Townend).

Economy (North-West)

47. Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the long-term future of the economy of north-west England.

54. Mr. Parry: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the long-term future of the economy of the north-west.

Mr. Major: The Government do not publish long-term forecasts of the regional economies, but my assessment is that the prospects for north-west England are good, deriving from a more broadly based and flexible economy. For example, the region has one of the most rapidly falling unemployment rates in the United Kingdom.

96. Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the economic growth rate in the north-west of England for the last two years for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: The growth of GDP at factor cost in current prices in the north-west region is estimated to have been 10·1 per cent. between 1985 and 1986, and 7·4 per cent. between 1986 and 1987. These estimates are subject to revision, particularly the provisional 1987 figure.

Cider

48. Mr. Colin Shepherd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the yield from excise duty on cider and allied products for each of the last three years for which figures are available.

Mr. Lilley: The information is as follows:

Cider and perry duty receipts

	£ million
1985-86	49·7
1986-87	53·2
1987-88	50·7

Trade Deficit

49. Dr. Reid: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give the latest forecast for the United Kingdom trade deficit.

Mr. Major: The latest forecast was published in the Autumn Statement.

Economic Growth

50. Mr. Squire: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the current level of economic growth.

71. Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the current level of economic growth.

102. Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the current level of economic growth.

118. Mr. Hunter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the current level of economic growth.

Mr. Major: Gross domestic product is likely to have grown by around 4½ per cent. in 1988. This would be the fourth consecutive year of growth in excess of 3 per cent. —a performance unmatched since the war.

90. Mr. Knapman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the composition of growth in the United Kingdom as between consumer expenditure, exports and investment over the period 1981 to the latest available date.

100. Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the composition of growth in the United Kingdom as between consumer expenditure, exports and investment over the period 1981 to the latest available date.

112. Mr. Kirkhope: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the composition of growth in the United Kingdom as between consumer expenditure, exports and investment over the period 1981 to the latest available date.

116. Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the composition of growth in the United Kingdom as between consumer expenditure, exports and investment over the period 1981 to the latest available date.

Mr. Major: Since 1981 consumers expenditure in real terms has grown on average by 3½ per cent. per year, compared with 5 per cent. for investment and 4 per cent. for exports.

Grants

53. Mr. Gill: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the total cost to the Exchequer of all grants in aid to trade, industry and commerce in the financial year 1987-88.

Mr. Major: The table below shows the 1987-88 estimated outturn for grants and subsidies included under the trade and industry part of the trade, industry, energy and employment section of table 2.7 (Functional analysis of United Kingdom public expenditure) of volume I of "The Government's Expenditure Plans 1988-89 to 1990-91" (Cm 288). The figures cover grants and subsidies to both public corporations and the private sector. Revised outturn data for public expenditure in 1987-88 will be given in the 1989 public expenditure White Paper which is due to be published in the next few days. I shall write to my hon. Friend to update the figures given below shortly.

Expenditure[1] on certain grants and subsidies to trade, industry and commerce[2] £ million

	Grants	Subsidies	Total
Regional and general industrial support	455·0	242·2	697·1
Scientific and technological assistance	3·2	0·4	3·6
Support for aerospace, shipbuilding, coal, steel and vehicle manufacture	316·2	46·9	363·1
Trade	9·0	151·2	160·2
	783·3	440·7	1,223·9

[1] Estimated outturn figures.
[2] Covers the trade and industry part of the trade, industry, energy and employment section of Table 2.7 of Volume I of Cm 288.

European Monetary System

59. Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of whether the circumstances are appropriate for the pound sterling to join the exhange rate mechanism of the European monetary system.

Mr. Peter Lilley: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply that I gave to the Member for Holland with Boston (Sir Richard Body) on 20 January at column 358.

Employment

62. Mr. David Porter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the growth of (a) self-employment and (b) part-time employment in the United Kingdom since 1979.

68. Mr. Couchman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the growth of (a) self-employment and (b) part-time employment in the United Kingdom since 1979.

Mr. Major: Between June 1979 and September 1988 the number of self-employed people in Great Britain rose by 60 per cent. to nearly 3 million. Over the same period, the part-time work force in employment rose by 30 per cent. to over 6 million.

Small Businesses

64. Mr. Amos: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the current level of taxation on small businesses.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Companies with profits below £100,000 are subject to corporation tax at 25 per cent. Those with profits of between £100,000 and £500,000 are taxed at the main rate of 35 per cent. but receive a marginal relief. The total corporation tax liability arising for small companies in 1986-87, the latest year for which revenue figures are available and when the rates were 29 per cent. and 35 per cent. (with relief) respectively, is estimated at £1¼ billion, of which about £¾ billion arose in each band. Businesses are not required to register for VAT purposes until turnover reaches £22,100, the highest threshold allowed by European Community law.

77. Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received about the effect of interest rates on small businesses.

113. Mr. Rogers: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received about the effect of interest rates on small businesses.

140. Mr. Henderson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received about the effect of interest rates on small businesses.

Mr. Lilley: My right hon. Friend has received a number of such representations.

Manufacturing Investment

78. Mr. Brazier: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest information on the investment intentions of manufacturing industry.

87. Mr. Brandon-Bravo: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest information on the investment intentions of manufacturing industry.

Mr. Major: I refer my hon. Friends to the reply that I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Salisbury (Mr. Key).

Disabled Staff

65. Mr. Ashley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he intends to take any steps to increase the number of registered disabled people in his Department.

Mr. Lawson: My Department is not planning any specific measures to increase the number of disabled staff it employs. It will continue to seek to attract potential recruits under equal opportunity guidelines.

New Businesses

72. Mr. Cash: To ask the the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the average weekly rate of business start-ups in net terms in 1988.

109. Mr. Stevens: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the average weekly rate of business start-ups in net terms in 1988.

125. Mr. Nicholas Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the average weekly rate of business start-ups in net terms in 1988.

Mr. Major: In 1987, the latest year for which figures have been published by the Department of Employment, the net increase in the number of businesses registered for VAT was 45,000, an average of approaching 900 a week. Indications are that the rate of increase in 1988 is even faster. The number of VAT registrations and de-registrations processed by Customs and Excise during 1988 indicate a net increase of over 1,200 a week. Department of Employment figures for 1988 will be available in the summer.

Economic Prospects

75. Mr. Leigh: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the economic prospects for the United Kingdom for 1989.

Mr. Major: A revised economic forecast for 1989 will be published at Budget time.

House Purchase (Stamp Duty)

80. Mr. Shersby: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total revenue from stamp duty on house purchase conveyances for the most recent 12-month period for which figures are available.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The yield from stamp duty on residential property in 1988 is estimated at £1,140 million.

Shareholders

81. Mr. Evennett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of the number of private shareholders in the United Kingdom.

86. Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of the number of private shareholders in the United Kingdom.

135. Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of the number of private shareholders in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The joint Treasury and stock exchange survey carried out in January and February 1988 estimated that approximately 9 million people own shares —20 per cent. of the adult population. This represents a threefold increase since 1979.

Mortgage Interest

82. Mr. Turner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information he has as to how many households have their mortgage interest payments adjusted annually.

136. Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information he has as to how many households have their mortgage interest payments adjusted annually.

Mr. Lilley: I refer the hon. Members to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for The Wrekin (Mr. Grocott) on 19 January at column 259.

Budget Objectives

92. Mr. Grocott: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the extent to which the 1988 Budget is achieving its objectives.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The effects of particular Budgets should not be looked at in isolation but as part of a general process of tax reform and other measures which have, inter alia, improved the performance of the economy by boosting incentives and enterprise. The 1988 Budget was a further major step in that process. We examine the extent to which specific measures have achieved their objectives as part of the annual Budget process.

Personal Savings

104. Mr. Boswell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action he is taking to stimulate personal savings.

Mr. Lilley: The increases in interest rates which have already taken place make savings more attractive. The National Savings capital bond launched earlier this month provides a new and attractive option for personal long-term saving.

Gross Domestic Product

121. Mr. Moss: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the increase in the output measure of gross domestic product for the latest 12-month period.

124. Mr. Bright: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the increase in the output measure of gross domestic product for the latest 12-month period.

Mr. Major: The output measure of gross domestic product is estimated to have grown by 4½ per cent. in the year to the third quarter of 1988.

Taxes

122. Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish the figures showing the total taxes paid by average earners in each financial year from 1978-79 to the present day.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Hornchurch (Mr. Squire) on 10 January at columns 633-56.

130. Mr. Cummings: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much a person on half average earnings pays as a proportion of his total income in all direct and indirect taxes including value added tax and national insurance.

132. Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much a person on half average earnings pays as a proportion of his total income in all direct and indirect taxes including value added tax and national insurance.

139. Mr. Ted Garrett: To ask the Chancellor of the Chancellor how much a person on half average earnings pays as a proportion of his total income in all direct and indirect taxes including value added tax and national insurance.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Reliable estimates of indirect tax payments are not available for this level of income.

133. Mr. Jack Thompson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much a person on average earnings pays as a proportion of his total income in all direct and indirect taxes including value added tax and national insurance.

134. Mr. Martlew: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much a person on average earnings pays as a proportion of his total income in all direct and indirect taxes including value added tax and national insurance.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I refer the hon. Members to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Nottingham, North (Mr. Allen) on 20 January at column 357.

Mr. Riddick: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much revenue from composite rate tax on investment income the Treasury received in the last financial year (a) in total, (b) from people with tax liabilities and (c) from people without tax liabilities.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Total receipts of composite rate tax from savings institutions in 1987-88 were £3·1 billion after the set-off of about £0·4 billion of tax already paid on income received by them under deduction of income tax. Of the £3·5 billion composite rate tax accounted for by the savings institutions, about £450 million was due in respect of interest that would not have been liable to tax in the hands of its recipients in the absence of a composite rate system.

Mr. Riddick: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much revenue the Treasury would receive if composite rate tax was levied on national savings, taking the last financial year as an example (a) in total and (b) as a proportion of total composite rate tax revenue.

Mr. Norman Lamont: National Savings are excluded from the composite rate scheme in order to provide a convenient means for non-taxpayers to receive interest without deduction of non-reclaimable tax. The rate would tend to reduce if there was an extension of its scope to investments favoured by non-taxpayers, but the size of the reduction following such an extension is uncertain. However, net interest paid in 1987-88 on which savings institutions accounted for tax at composite rate totalled about £10·7 billion; interest on National Savings was about £1·4 billion payable gross and subject to tax if the recipient is a taxpayer, and about £1·7 billion not subject to tax.

Mr. Riddick: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of total tax revenue to the Treasury is accounted for by composite rate tax.

Mr. Norman Lamont: About 2·8 per cent. in 1987-88.

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has of the revenue cost of reducing capital gains tax to a flat rate of 25 per cent. and of raising the capital gains tax exemptions limit from £5,000 to £10,000 in 1989-90 and 1990-91.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 23 January 1989]: The reduction in liability to capital gains tax arising from gains realised by individuals and trusts in 1989-90 is estimated to be about £450 million. The estimate allows for an increase in disposals in response to the reduction in effective rate of tax but does not allow for any short term effects such as might arise between the announcement of the proposed change and its coming into effect.

Northern Ireland (Revenue Contribution)

126. Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information he has as to the contribution from Northern Ireland to United Kingdom exchequer revenue; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: I assume that the hon. Member is referring to Northern Ireland's attributed share of taxation. The attributed share in 1985-86 (the last year for which there are full figures) was £1,873 million.

Customs and Excise (Confiscations)

131. Mr. Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people had goods confiscated by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise when returning to the United Kingdom from abroad during 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lilley: Customs seized about 50,000 items in the year ended 25 December 1988. It is not possible to identify from the records of seizures the number of persons concerned.

Business Start-ups

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the average weekly rate of business start-ups in net terms in 1988.

Mr. Major: In 1987, the latest year for which figures have been published by the Department of Employment, the net increase in the number of businesses registered for VAT was 45,000—an average of approaching 900 a week. Indications are that the rate of increase in 1988 is even faster. The number of VAT registrations and de-registrations processed by Customs and Excise during 1988 indicate a net increase of more than 1,200 a week. Department of Employment figures for 1988 will be available in the summer.

Credit

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will meet representatives of the banking industry to discuss the establishment of a code of practice for the marketing of credit to the young.

Mr. Lilley: The establishment of any code of practice in this field is a matter for the banks.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will now introduce controls over inducements offered by credit card companies to encourage credit purchase.

Mr. Lilley: No.

Energy Conservation

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy to impose special taxes on carbon dioxide emissions in order to encourage energy conservation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I cannot anticipate my right hon. Friend's Budget statement, but I note the suggestion.

Financial Accounting and Reporting

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what progress has been made in producing a statement of the Government's financial accounting and reporting framework following the recommendation made by the Comptroller and Auditor General in paragraphs 4·22 to 4·25 of his report on financial reporting to Parliament in 1986.

Mr. Brooke: A draft consultative document was produced by the Treasury and issued to accountancy institutes and other interested parties for comment in July 1987. A number of useful suggestions were received and many of these have been incorporated into a revised document which is being published today and of which copies will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Inland Revenue

Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if there are any proposals to change the 1988-89 cash limit and running costs limit for the Inland Revenue.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Both the cash limit and the running costs limit for the Inland Revenue (class XIX, vote 7) have been reduced by £147,000. There are two components to this change. The first is a transfer of £143,000 to the Department of Social Security as payment for work they will be undertaking for Inland Revenue; the second is a transfer of £4,000 to the Cabinet Office to reflect the transfer of costs for recruitment under the direct entry grade 7 competition 1988.

There is no overall increase in either cash limits or running costs limits as a result of these changes, which will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the cost of running the Inland Revenue share valuation division.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 24 January 1989]: The estimated running cost of the Inland Revenue shares valuation division is currently under £3 million per year.

Treasury Running Costs

Mr. Tom Arnold: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether there will be any changes to the Treasury's running costs limit for 1988-89.

Mr. Brooke: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the Treasury's running costs limit will be increased by a net £33,000 from £71,154,000 to £71,187,000.

This net increase reflects a transfer of costs for recruitment under the direct entry grade 7 competition 1988 (£5,000); and increased provision of setting up costs at Chessington computer centre, prior to the take on of payroll work in respect of the Department of the Environment/Department of Transport from 1 April 1989 (£38,000).

These changes will be offset by a corresponding increase in the running costs limit of the Office of the Minister for the Civil Service Vote (class XX, vote 1), and by a corresponding decrease in the running costs limit on the administration and transport services vote (class VIII, vote 2) respectively and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

As a further consequence of the transfer of costs for recruitment the cash limit for Her Majesty's Treasury administration vote (class XIC, vote 11) will be decreased by £5,000 to £54,041,000.

ENERGY

Coal Imports

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) from which countries Britain has imported coal in the last 12 months; how many tonnes have been imported from each respective country; and what information he has on the price per tonne from each country listed at the latest available date;

(2) if he will list information available to him on the price per tonne of coal for each country from which Britain has imported coal in 1985, 1986, 1987, and at the latest available date.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Information is available for the period January to November 1988 as shown in the table.

For the data on price per tonne of coal in 1985, 1986 and 1987 I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 29 June 1988 at column 251.

January to November 1988

Country (of origin)	Quantity (thousand tonnes)	Average value per tonne (£)
United States of America	3,881	35·30
Australia	3,242	31·03
Poland	1,224	34·56
Colombia	434	35·07
Canada	426	30·29
USSR	325	26·61
China	281	50·41
Netherlands	249	39·33
South Africa	241	42·42
Federal Republic of Germany	157	97·59
Belgium	111	47·28
Venezuela	69	30·49
Others	114	52·06
TOTAL	[1]10,755	35·29

[1] Rounded total.

Note: Average value of imports are on a cost, insurance and freight basis.

Source: Her Majesty's Customs and Excise.

Energy Saving Targets

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what are Her Majesty's Government's national energy saving targets for the years 1990 and 1995.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The Government support the European Community objective of achieving a 20 per cent. improvement in the efficiency of final energy demand by 1995.

Surplus Electricity

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what representations he has received calling for greater publicity to be given to the green policy of allowing electricity producers to sell surplus capacity via the national grid.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The Electricity Bill places a statutory duty on the National Grid Company to facilitate competition in the supply and generation of electricity. Under the draft licence to be issued to the National Grid Company, authorised generators will be able to use the grid to convey their electricity. My Department is not aware of any representations of the kind described by my hon. Friend.

Severn Barrage

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he expects to announce the results of the current studies into the proposed Severn barrage.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The current and third phase of the Severn barrage studies are nearing completion and I hope to make a report available to Parliament in a few months' time.

Wind Energy

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what measures he intends to take in 1989 to promote the use of wind energy.

Mr. Michael Spicer: It is our intention that the electricity privatisation legislation currently before the House will place an obligation on the electricity supply companies to contract for a specified minimum amount of non-fossil-fuelled generating capacity and this will help to encourage the full exploitation of wind energy.

In addition, we will continue our substantial programme of research into wind energy which encompasses work on all the important technical questions and includes the construction and testing of a number of large wind turbines. During 1989 it is expected that construction of the 1 MW wind turbine at Richborough will be completed and that wind measurements will commence on the site of the first of three proposed experimental wind farms to be built by ourselves and the CEGB in collaboration.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how many oral parliamentary questions he has answered by written reply because the question was not reached at Question Time, for the most recent year for which figures are available.

Mr. Parkinson: Of 432 oral questions tabled in 1988, a total of 293 were answered with a written reply. These figures do not include oral questions which were withdrawn, unstarred or transferred to other Departments prior to Question Time.

Conservation

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what recent assessment his Department has made of the environmental benefits of conserving energy.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Rother Valley (Mr. Barron) on 28 November, at columns 125-26, which referred to a study to assess the impact of energy efficiency on emission of CO_2 and other pollutants. The study is now under way.

Plutonium

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Liverpool, Mossley Hill (Mr. Alton) on plutonium, 9 December 1988, Official Report, column 373, by whom the plutonium content is calculated, to what accuracy, and under what safeguards requirements.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The operators make the calculations. The accuracy of the estimates depends on the accuracy of estimating the heat output of the reactors and the accuracy of the isotopic data used. The calculated plutonium content of all fuel despatched from the stations is reported to the safeguards authorities.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn) on 8 December 1988, Official Report, column 329, on the physical verification of plutonium by the European Atomic Energy Authority at Sellafield, if he will make a statement on the number of occasions when the European Atomic Energy Authority has carried out the inspections to which he refers in the reply of 4 June 1988, Official Report, columns 594-95 in 1986, 1987 and 1988.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Civil nuclear material is under the continuous inspection regime of Euratom.

Magnox

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) whether the British Nuclear Fuels plc Magnox reprocessing facility has been used for the concurrent processing of safeguardable and non-safeguarded Magnox spent fuel to yield fissile plutonium for the atomic weapons programme.

(2) what proportion of Magnox spent nuclear fuel from Hunterston was co-processed with spent fuel from the military reactors at Calder hall and Chapelcross prior to 31 December 1986.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Member for Worcester (Mr. Walker) to my hon. Friend the Member for Penrith and The Border (Mr. Maclean) on 4 June 1986 at columns 594-95.

Lascar Safeguards Review Group

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how many departmental staff have been allocated to the (large-scale commercial reprocessing plant) safeguards review group meetings; what was the cost of departmental representations at the Lascar review meeting in Tokyo on 17-21 October 1988; what issues were discussed at the Tokyo meeting; and if he will place in the Library copies of all documentation presented to the meeting by his departmental delegation.

Mr. Michael Spicer: It is expected that two members of the safeguards office will devote time to Lascar-related work. One of these attended the Tokyo meeting at an approximate cost of £2,900.

The aims of Lascar are to exchange safeguards related information and techniques on future large plutonium handling facilities. This exchange of information took place on the understanding that it would remain confidential to the parties involved.

Public Bodies

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list those non-departmental public bodies responsible to his Department for which funding and staffing (a) have been reduced in 1988 and (b) are planned for reductions in 1989; and, for each case, if he will list the change in funding and staffing levels.

Mr. Parkinson: The reductions are as follows:

	Reduction in staff numbers		Financing (£ million)
	1987-88	1988-89[1]	1987-88	1988-89[1]
Oil and Pipelines Agency	2	20	—	1·3
United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority	263	1,100	12·0	—

[1] Estimated.

Notes:

1. Figures are available for financial years only.
2. Staff reductions are based on staff employed at April 1987, April 1988 and an estimate of staff levels at April 1989.

Electricity Privatisation

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will seek permission from the BBC for a transcript of the interviews on the privatisation of the electricity supply industry by the Under-Secretary of State, the hon. Member for Worcestershire, South (Mr. Spicer) and the hon. Member for Sedgefield (Mr. Blair) on the "Today" programme on Radio Four, broadcast on 17 January; and if he will place copies in the departmental and House of Commons Libraries.

Mr. Parkinson: No. I understand that the Library of the House does obtain transcripts from the broadcasters on behalf of hon. Members.

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement about arrangements for allocation of shares in the electrical industry on privatisation.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Decisions on the arrangements for the allocation of shares will be taken much nearer the time of the offers for sale.

Alternative Energy Sources

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what amount has been spent by his Department in each of the last five years on research on alternative energy sources.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The table gives my Department's programme expenditure on alternative energy sources for the financial years 1983-84 to 1987-88.

	Current prices (£ million)	Constant prices (1988; £ million)
1983-84	11·7	14·9
1984-85	14·9	18·1
1985-86	13·2	15·1
1986-87	12·0	13·4
1987-88	15·1	16·0

Provision for 1988-89 is £16·2 million.

Energy Saving Schemes

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how much has been spent by his Department in each of the last five years on the development and encouragement of energy saving schemes in the public and private sector.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Wakefield (Mr. Hinchliffe) on 8 December 1988 at column 327.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Privy Council Office (Finance)

Mr. Hanley: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he proposes to make any changes to the Privy Council Office's cash limit and running costs limit in the current year.

Mr. Wakeham: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the cash limit on class XX, vote 11 is being increased by £30,000 from £1,187,000 to £1,217,000 to meet the higher costs of parliamentary publications.

The increase will be charged to the Reserve and will not add to the planned total of public expenditure.

In addition, the running costs limit is being increased by £30,000 from £1,207,000 to £1,237,000.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Packet Butter Market

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list, for each year since 1973, the percentage of the United Kingdom packet butter market accounted for by the following countries (a) the United Kingdom, (b) the Republic of Ireland, (c) France, (d) New Zealand, (e) Denmark, (f) Netherlands and (g) Belgium.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The available information is set out in the following table, which shows the percentage share of total new butter supplies in the United Kingdom by country of origin since 1973. The United Kingdom line is based on total production less intervention purchases, and those of other countries represent total imports into the United Kingdom.

	United Kingdom	Ireland	France	New Zealand	Denmark	Netherlands	Belgium and Luxembourg
1973	18·9	9·3	0·9	31·6	17·8	14·8	1·0
1974	10·5	7·1	6·3	25·7	18·4	19·9	2·6
1975	8·9	10·1	7·1	23·0	15·5	20·9	2·2
1976	16·6	10·3	4·2	25·7	14·9	18·0	1·0
1977	27·7	7·0	3·2	27·6	14·0	13·0	0·9
1978	29·9	11·9	1·4	29·0	14·2	9·3	1·0
1979	31·8	8·6	0·5	28·3	11·2	3·7	0·7
1980	43·0	8·7	0·5	28·6	11·3	3·7	0·7
1981	44·8	8·1	0·3	26·6	11·3	5·7	0·5
1982	53·0	7·5	0·3	23·8	10·1	2·9	0·7
1983	43·2	6·5	0·3	28·5	12·3	7·8	1·0
1984	46·3	7·6	0·4	29·3	11·6	4·2	0·3
1985	44·4	5·5	0·5	30·8	12·6	5·4	0·4
1986	47·9	7·5	0·4	28·6	11·0	3·3	1·2
1987	46·2	5·6	0·5	32·3	12·2	1·9	1·2
1988[1]	52·7	5·0	0·4	27·5	11·3	2·0	1·0

[1] January to October.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. French: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many oral parliamentary questions he has answered by written reply because the question was not reached at Question Time, for the most recent year for which figures are available.

Mr. Donald Thompson: In 1988, 515 oral questions were answered by written reply.

Farms (Nottingham)

Mr. Graham Allen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food in which parliamentary constituency (a) Chilwell Dam farm, Nottingham and (b) the farm at the junction of Apollo drive and Nottingham road, Nottingham are located.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The areas referred to have some land falling within the Nottingham, north constituency but form a small part of holdings which are registered in other constituencies.

Sheepmeat

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food why he did not consult organisations representing consumers about EEC proposals for altering the trade arrangements between the EEC and New Zealand for sheepmeat; and if he will do so before approving future EEC proposals which affect the interests of United Kingdom consumers.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I take account of the interests of consumers, along with those of others, including producers and taxpayers, when considering EC proposals. My officials have had a number of consultations with representatives of consumers' interests on the Commission's proposals for sheepmeat, detailed consideration of which has yet to get under way in the Council.

Departmental Staff (Child Care)

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what child care provision his Department provides for pre-school age children of his Department's employees; what child care provision, for school holiday or after school care, is provided for employees' children aged five years and over; and what plans there are for increasing provision in the next five years; and how these are to be funded.

Mr. Donald Thompson: A successful holiday play scheme was held at one location last summer and is planned to be repeated for a longer period this summer. The success of the play scheme was notified to all staff in the Department and locations interested in arranging similar or other types of child care arrangements were offered help, advice and encouragement to do so. The Department is also participating in a holiday play scheme in the Westminster area of London which is intended to operate during half-term and end of term holidays throughout 1989. Pump-priming funds have been made available and continue to be available for child care schemes.

Contaminated Meat

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which import agents were responsible for the import of meat of Irish origin which in September and October of 1988 were cancelled as unfit for human consumption by Carrick district council.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Information supplied to the Ministry by Carrick district council does not include the names of import agents.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will list the occasions during the current year when his Department issued warnings to port health authorities of the possible danger of contaminated meat supplies originating in the Republic of Ireland;

(2) if he will list the occasions during the current year when his Department issued guidelines on warnings relating to the import of contaminated meat supplies to (a) local authorities, (b) port health authorities, (c) the Institution of Environmental Health Authorities and (d) the Association of Sea and Air Port Health Authorities; and on how many occasions during each of the last three years such warnings were issued;

(3) whether any notification was given to port health authorities warning of the possibility of contaminated imports of beef supplies following the identification of such imports by Carrick district council;

(4) if he will list the dates during 1988 when his Department notified the Association of Sea and Air Port Health Authorities of the possible import of contaminated meat supplies from the Republic of Ireland, in the light of the condemnation of such supplies by Carrick district council.

Mr. Donald Thompson: On 21 December 1988 and 13 January 1989, the Ministry passed information received from Carrick district council to the Association of Port Health Authorities, requesting the association to advise port health authorities to pay special attention to consignments of meat from the Republic of Ireland. These were the only occassions during the past three years when such action has been necessary. The association and the Institution of Environmental Health Officers have their own very effective arrangements for disseminating information about any problems which are found by their members. These arrangements were also used to inform their members in the case of the unfit Irish meat found by Carrick district council.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on how many occasions during each of the last three years his Department has been notified by Carrick district council of the condemnation of (a) beef and (b) other meat imports originating in the Republic of Ireland.

Mr. Donald Thompson: My Department received two reports from Carrick district council in 1986 and two in 1988. All related to beef originating in the Republic of Ireland.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on how many occasions during the last three years his Department has been officially notified of contaminated meat originating from each of the EEC countries by environmental health departments in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Donald Thompson: In the past three years my Department has received from environmental health officers 14 reports on contaminated fresh meat originating in the Republic of Ireland, two on meat from the Netherlands, one on meat from France and one on meat from Spain.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what was the total volume of meat condemned by the environmental health service in Carrick district council for each of the last three years;

(2) what volume of imported meat supplies was condemned as unfit for human consumption for each of the last four years, stating in all cases the country of origin.

Mr. Donald Thompson: No records are collected of the quantities of meat condemned by enforcement authorities in the exercise of their responsibilities for ensuring that meat intended for sale for human consumption is fit for that purpose.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will seek to impose a legal requirement upon local authorities to inspect all imported meat arriving in their area which has not been inspected by area health authorities at the port of arrival.

Mr. Donald Thompson: No.

Irish Meat

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he has any estimate of the volume of meat imports landed in Great Britain having been shipped from Northern Ireland; and what percentage of such imports originated in the Republic of Ireland.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Figures are not available since customs data is not collected on movement of goods within the United Kingdom.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his estimate of the volume of beef landed at Stranraer which orginated in the Republic of Ireland.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Stranraer is an internal port receiving only consignments from Northern Ireland and customs data is not collected on movement of goods within the United Kingdom. Goods imported from the Republic of Ireland via the Larne-Stranraer route would have been recorded as imports into the United Kingdom when they entered Northern Ireland.

Salmonella

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many successful applicants for compensation from the recent poultry compensation scheme have been identified as having salmonella enteritidis infected flocks; and what were (a) the total number of eggs produced from flocks, (b) the total number of hens slaughtered from such flocks and (c) the total compensation paid.

Mr. Donald Thompson: It was not a condition of the slaughter of hens scheme that culled birds should be tested for evidence of salmonella enteriditis. With the agreement of some flock owners, examinations have been carried out on some slaughtered birds and none of the flocks examined to date has shown evidence of infection.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what arrangements were made for the disposal of hens believed to be contaminated with salmonella enteritidis, slaughtered under the recent compensation scheme;

(2) what arrangements were made for the disposal of hens slaughtered under the recent compensation scheme.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The agriculture departments are arranging for the disposal of all carcases of birds slaughtered under the scheme by burial or incineration.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what arrangements his Department made for the supervision of hens believed to be salmonella-infected slaughtered during the last three months outwith his recent compensation scheme.

Mr. Donald Thompson: None. The slaughter and disposal of hens outside the scheme is the responsibility of the owner and is subject to the relevant statutory provisions such as those governing welfare and hygiene.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether any inspection by his staff during 1988 revealed the presence of salmonella in poultry farms.

Mr. Donald Thompson [holding answer 23 January 1989]: Poultry farms are not routinely inspected for the presence of salmonella. Under the Zoonoses Order 1975, which requires the reporting of isolations of salmonella, 870 reports (provisional) of salmonella of all serotypes in poultry in 1988 were received.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Teachers (Training)

Mr. Allason: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will issue guidance to local education authorities on the practice of allowing teachers to take their training days at home.

Mrs. Rumbold: Under the terms of the school teachers' pay and conditions document 1988 a teacher is required to be available for work for 195 days in any year, of which 190 days are to be days on which he or she may be required to teach pupils. The intention is that the remaining five days should be used primarily for in-service training. The form that such training should take is at the discretion of local education authorities.

National Curriculum (Northumberland)

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what proportion in (a) cash terms and (b) as a percentage of the extra resources being made available for the implementation of the national curriculum will be provided to Northumberland.

Mrs. Rumbold: Targeted support for expenditure by local education authorities on activities relating to the introduction of the national curriculum is channelled through education support grants and LEA training grants. My right hon. Friend has approved expenditure on such activities by Northumberland in 1989-90 of £437,700 under the education support grants programme and £328,000 under the LEA training grants scheme. These figures represent respectively 0·8 per cent. and 0·7 per cent. of the total amounts being made available for such activities in that year. It is for LEAs to determine what additional support to devote to the implementation of the education reforms from block grant or from their own resources.

PRIME MINISTER

Israel

Q32. Mr. Latham: To ask the Prime Minister whether she will pay an official visit to Israel.

The Prime Minister: I have at present no plans to do so.

Libya (Chemical Weapons Plant)

Q80. Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Prime Minister if she will raise at the next meeting of the European Council the participation of European firms in the manufacture of the chemical weapons plant in Libya; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The European Council will next meet on 26-27 June and it is too early to speculate on what will be discussed. The issue is, however, a matter of great concern to us, particularly given Libyan links with terrorism, and we are already co-ordinating closely with EC partners and others about it. All EC states are members of the informal "Australia group" of Western countries which holds consultations on export controls on chemical weapon precursors and other related measures.

North-west Kent

Q87. Mr. Dunn: To ask the Prime Minister if she has any plans to visit north-west Kent.

The Prime Minister: I have at present no plans to do so.

Cabotage

Q122. Sir David Price: To ask the Prime Minister what progress she has made in the Council of Ministers of the European Community in persuading other member Governments to accord equal rights of cabotage to each others coastal shipping, and if she will name the non-complying Governments.

The Prime Minister: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport is continuing to press hard for agreement on cabotage liberalisation in the Transport Council.

The six member states who have laws restricting cabotage trades to ships of their national flag are the Federal Republic of Germany, France, Greece, Italy, Portugal and Spain. We have an agreement with the Federal Republic which ensures that British operators offering a competitive service have no bureaucratic difficulties in participating in German cabotage trades.

Sir Leon Brittan

Q143. Mr. Tam Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister why she will not make a statement on her communications with Sir Leon Brittan, KBE, since his appointment as a Vice-President of the European Commission on 1 January.

The Prime Minister: I have nothing to add to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member on 10 January 1989 at column 493.

Child Abuse

Mr. Allen: To ask the Prime Minister (1) which Government Departments have been involved in the Broxtowe child sex abuse case; and if she will make a statement;

(2) further to her reply to the hon. Member for Nottingham, North of 19 January about the Broxtowe estate, whether she has any progress to report.

The Prime Minister: The offences were investigated by the Nottinghamshire constabulary and the successful prosecutions were conducted by the Crown Prosecution Service.

The Nottinghamshire social services department received appropriate support and guidance from the regional office of the Department of Health's social services inspectorate. Otherwise no Government Departments were directly involved in the case.

The Department has in hand an active programme of research into child care, including child abuse and child sexual abuse.

Departmental Staff (Child Care)

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Prime Minister what child care provision is provided by the Cabinet Office for the pre-school-age children of employees; what child care provision, for school holiday or after-school care, is provided for employees' children aged five and over; what plans there are for increasing provision in the next five years; and how these are to be funded.

The Prime Minister: At present the Cabinet Office does not provide child care facilities. It is considering the need to do so.

Engagements

Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 26 January.

Mr. David Evans: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 26 January.

Mr. Riddick: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 26 January.

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 26 January.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 26 January.

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 26 January.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 26 January.

Mr. Stern: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 26 January.

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 26 January.

Mr. Cran: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 26 January.

Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 26 January.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House I shall be having further meetings later today.

Soviet Union

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Prime Minister on how many occasions permission for emigration to or travel within the Soviet Union or other Comecon Eastern bloc countries has been denied to applicants formerly employed at (i) Ministry of Defence, (ii) atomic weapons research establishments, (iii) MI5 and (iv) Government Communications Headquarters at Cheltenham, since May 1979.

The Prime Minister: The information requested is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Retirement Age

142. Mr. Holt: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the financial implications for the Government of implementing a universal retirement age of 63 years.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Pembroke (Mr. Bennett) on 24 January at column 522.

National Insurance

143. Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the annual yield from employers' national insurance surcharge contributions.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: There has been no national insurance surcharge since the end of the 1984-85 financial year.

Social Fund

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will summarise to what each social fund configuration for computerisation purposes relates.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Each local office has been allocated one of three microcomputer configurations depending on its predicted workload. The three types of configuration provide different levels of microcomputer capacity but perform identical functions.

Administrative Costs

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the cost of administering the social security system in 1978-79 and 1987-88, in 1978-79 prices.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The administration costs are as follows:

	£ million
1978-79	761
1987-88	[1]996

[1] At 1978-79 prices.

The main reasons for the additional costs in 1987-88 were the salary and other costs of extra staff in the local offices of both the Department of Social Security and the Department of Employment, together with the greater use of computers and consultants.

Mentally Ill People (Sheltered Homes)

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security under which category sheltered homes for the mentally ill will be defined in his forthcoming changes in board-and-lodgings allowance.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Sheltered accommodation can take a variety of forms ranging from registered homes to warden-controlled flats. Some types of sheltered accommodation, usually shared housing where meals may be supplied by the landlord, are classed as lodgings or hostels for benefit purposes. From April 1989 people in lodgings will no longer rely on special payments of income support to meet their accommodation costs. Instead they will be able to receive normal income support payments and housing benefit in the same way as the majority of other claimants.

We have consulted widely on proposals to make similar changes to payments for people in hostels. We have deferred any change until after April 1989 to allow us time to examine more fully the effects on hostels' finances. An announcement will be made once final decisions have been reached.

Young People (Entitlement)

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the entitlement to social security including housing benefit for young people on leaving local authority care.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Young people aged 16 or 17 who leave care and register for a job or a YTS course are entitled to income support for a period after they leave school if they are not living with their parents nor any person acting in place of their parents. During this period they are guaranteed an offer of a YTS place. Some 16 and 17-year-olds may receive income support both during and after that period because, for example, they are incapable of work or a YTS course by reason of disablement, or they are responsible for a child.

Young people living in board and lodgings or hostels, including those on YTS, may receive help with their accommodation costs from income support as well as their other needs. Other young people who are responsible for paying housing costs are entitled to claim housing benefit; those on income support or with net incomes at or below that level get a maximum 100 per cent. of rent and 80 per cent. of rates. From April, young people in lodgings will also be entitled to housing benefit in the same way as other tenants. We are reviewing the arrangements for people in hostels.

Further help may be sought from the social fund. In particular those who qualify for income support may be eligible for community care grants to help them set up home.

Pensions

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what was the average growth in incomes in each of the last 10 years of (a) households in the second decile group and (b) pensioner households in the second decile group of pensioner households;

(2) what was the average growth in incomes in each of the last 10 years of (a) households in the second decile group and (b) pensioner households in the third decile group of pensioner households.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to him on 23 January at column 414.

Benefits (Disqualification)

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what guidance he has issued to his local offices to ensure that when claimants have their benefit stopped, for reasons such as non-availability for work, the decision is explained clearly and their right to appeal is pointed out; and if he will make a statement on how current arrangements are operating.

Mr. Scott: Local office staff have been given guidance to the effect that once a decision to withdraw benefit has been confirmed they should issue a letter or explanatory notice. This notification sets out the reason for the withdrawal, the means whereby the claimant can obtain a full explanation, their right of appeal and how to exercise it, and a reference to the citizens advice bureau or local law centre from which they can obtain free advice.

We are satisfied with the way these arrangements are operating. As always, they are under constant review.

Appeals

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many (a) social security, and (b) medical appeals there were in each of the last three years in (i) Wales (ii) England, and (iii) Scotland.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The latest national administrative statistics available in the form required are for the year ending 31 December 1987. The information provided in the attached table is for the years ending 31 December 1985, 1986 and 1987.

I regret that equivalent information is not available for medical appeal tribunals.

Estimated number of appeals lodged

	1985	1986	1987
Wales	12,640	16,032	18,248
England	194,806	224,190	250,114
Scotland	39,948	54,519	60,646
Total	247,394	294,741	329,008

The information given is considered an estimate because the figures include a small proportion of referrals to social security appeal tribunals by adjudication officers.

Departmental Offices

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what load of current cases the Greenock and Port Glasgow offices of his Department have carried in the past nine months;

(2) what was the average number of new claims and cases since 11 April 1988 awaiting review at the local offices of his Department of Greenock and Port Glasgow which were recorded as outstanding each month; and how many were concerned with: (a) supplementary benefit claims and (b) single payment claims.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information available is set out in the tables.

The source of the live load figures is the 100 per cent. count of cases in action and is available only on a quarterly basis. The figures given include a small number of cases not actually in receipt of benefit.

Month ending	30 April 1988	31 May 1988	30 June 1988	31 July 1988	31 August 1988	30 September 1988	31 October 1988	30 November 1988	31 December 1988
GREENOCK
Income Support
Live Load	—	11,344	—	—	11,577	—	—	11,423	—
Claims outstanding	28	31	56	44	36	85	45	78	128
Assessment Reviews outstanding	250	122	69	83	58	112	119	147	237
Supplementary Benefit Work outstanding
Claims	7	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0
Single payments	2,930	1,057	270	17	0	0	0	0	0
PORT GLASGOW
Income Support
Live Load	—	4,847	—	—	4,783	—	—	4,659	—
Claims outstanding	26	23	37	23	40	55	31	60	50
Assessment Reviews outstanding	448	262	104	196	208	137	134	70	141
Supplementary Benefit Work outstanding
Claims	3	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0
Single payments	2,552	971	24	0	0	0	0	1	2

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give for the Greenock and Port Glasgow offices of his Department, the current staffing complement, broken down by staffing grades of (a) how many permanent staff are currently in post, (b) how many temporary staff are currently in post, (c) how many members of staff are currently being trained and (d) the annual turnover of permanent staff.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information requested is as follows:

	Greenock integrated local office	Port Glasgow integrated local office
Permanent staff
Grade 7	1·0	0·0
SEO	1·0	1·0
HEO	6·0	3·5
LO1	33·5	20·5
LO2	76·0	34·0
AA	22·0	7·5
Typing manager	0·0	0·0
Typist	3·0	1·0
Security guard	0·0	0·0
Messenger	2·0	1·0
Telephonist	0·0	0·0
	144·5	68·5
Temporary staff	[1]2·0	[2]14·0
	[2]19·0
Total staff	165·5	82·5
	per cent.	per cent.
Annual turnover	[3]11·90	[3]9·09
	[4]6·85	[4]15·71
	[2]15·79	[2]11·11

[1] AO grade.
[2] AA grade.
[3] LO1 grade.
[4] LO11 grade.

There are no staff under tutelage in either office.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many social fund applications were made each month since 11 April 1988 at the Greenock and Port Glasgow offices of his Department for (a) budget loans, (b) crisis loans and (c) community care grants; and how many of these applications in each of these categories were successful each month.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Such information is available in the Library.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many new claims for income support were made each month since 11 April 1988 at the local offices of his Department in (a) Greenock and Port Glasgow, (b) Strathclyde and (c) Scotland as a whole; and how many of these claims were determined each month;

(2) how many people are in receipt of income support in (a) Greenock and Port Glasgow, (b) Strathclyde and (c) Scotland as a whole; and what are the corresponding figures for those in receipt of supplementary benefit for each year since 1979.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Strathclyde region is served by the following local offices of the Department, although their boundaries are not coterminous:

Airdrie
Clydebank
East Kilbride
Hamilton
Motherwell
Ayr
Coatbridge
Glasgow (13 offices)
Irvine
Oban
Bellshill
Cumbernauld
Johnstone
Paisley

Campbeltown
Dumbarton
Greenock
Kilmarnock
Port Glasgow

The information available is set out in the tables.

Income support claims made (a) and determined (b):

	Greenock		Port Glasgow		Strathclyde		Scotland
	(a)	(b)	(a)	(b)	(a)	(b)	(a)	(b)
April 1988	354	326	208	182	10,543	7,764	21,182	14,946
May 1988	663	660	291	294	16,960	17,037	34,182	34,484
June 1988	1,010	985	434	420	25,383	23,975	47,862	45,779
July 1988	865	877	361	375	23,739	24,494	48,169	48,734
August 1988	805	813	370	353	21,669	22,117	42,222	43,653
September 1988	1,070	1,021	518	503	22,080	21,220	42,835	41,643
October 1988	700	740	239	263	20,114	21,032	39,229	40,234
November 1988	804	771	312	283	18,421	18,608	36,997	37,358
December 1988	664	614	283	293	14,525	14,090	29,592	28,620

(Where the numbers processed exceed the intake, this indicates clearance of claims from earlier periods.)

Income support/supplementary benefit live load:

	Greenock	Port Glasgow	Strathclyde	Scotland
1979	6,317	2,814	166,426	294,116
1980	6,794	3,069	183,629	320,260
1981	7,999	3,704	221,403	385,238
1982	9,812	4,156	252,679	439,419
1983	9,720	4,128	265,180	461,461
1984	10,381	4,541	283,600	492,775
1985	10,705	4,990	295,392	508,970
1986	12,195	5,285	309,578	543,025
1987	12,338	5,369	315,735	548,272
1988	11,423	4,659	284,381	499,890

All information has been collated from internal management statistics and that for Aprl 1988 and later is provisional and subject to amendment.

Single Payments

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was (a) the total of all single payments paid by local offices in London, (b) the equivalent figure for only those single payments encompassing items now covered by the social fund, for 1986-87 and 1987-88, (c) the total number of budgeting loans, crisis loans, community care grants paid out in the same catchment area so far for the year 1988-89 and (d) the expenditure represented by (a) to (c).

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Details of the total number and amount of all single payments paid by local offices in the London postal area for the periods 1986-87 and 1987-88 by office are in the Library.

All items for which a single payment could be made are available under the social fund, subject to budgetary constraints.

Information on the numbers of applications for social fund loans and grants processed and awarded, listed by local office, including information on budget allocations and expenditure, is also in the Library.

Social Security Programme

Mr. Gregory: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will provide an analysis of the growth of the social security programme between 1978-79 and 1988-89.

Mr. Scott: Since 1978-79, social security expenditure has increased by 33 per cent. in real terms, from £35·8 billion to £47·6 billion in 1988-89 prices. Just over half of this real growth can be explained by increases in the numbers of beneficiaries for which the social security system now provides and one third by increases in the average amounts of benefit paid. The Government's commitment to meeting genuine needs has seen social security spending rise from 25·6 per cent. of public spending in 1978-79 to 31 per cent. in 1988-89.

The main groups benefiting from the growth of the programme have been:

—pensioners: expenditure on the elderly has increased by about £4·1 billion in real terms. This substantial rise in social security spending has taken place at the same time as the rapid growth of occupational and personal pensions and the higher income from savings which many pensioners now enjoy. The result is that pensioners' incomes from all sources have increased by 23 per cent. in real terms between 1979 and 1986.

—long term sick and disabled: expenditure has grown by 90 per cent. (almost £3·5 billion) in real terms. About half a million more people now receive invalidity benefit than in 1978-79 and there has been a similar increase in the numbers receiving attendance allowance. The numbers receiving mobility allowance have increased fivefold from less than one hundred thousand to more than half a million over the period.

—the family: total benefit support for the family has increased by 25 per cent. in real terms over the period. Spending on family credit in 1988-89 is expected to be on target at over £400 million. This is more than double the spending on family income supplement which it replaced.

National Insurance

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish a table showing the main changes to national insurance benefits and the savings or expenditure which accrued from each change since 1979 in (a) cash prices and (b) 1988 prices.

Mr. Scott [holding answer 22 December 1988]: Since 1978-79, expenditure on national insurance benefits has grown by almost £15 billion in cash terms and by over £2 billion in real terms. For a fuller analysis of the growth in expenditure across the whole of the social security programme, I refer the hon. Member to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for York (Mr. Gregory) today. The costs and savings which have accrued from the main policy changes to national insurance benefits since 1979 are set out in the table.

Changes to national insurance benefits: estimated expenditure effects

Great Britain, £ million

	Financial year	Cash effect[1]	Cash effect in 1988 prices
Uprating of long-term benefits by prices	1981-82	−280	−400
5 per cent. abatement in uprating of invalidity benefit, unemployment benefit, sickness benefit and maternity allowance	1981-82	−160	−230
Abolition of earnings-related supplements to short-term benefits	1982-83	−390	−520
	1983-84	−10	−10
Introduction of statutory sick pay[2]	1984-85	80	100
Restoration of 5 per cent. abatement of UB	1986-87	−140	−160
Offsetting of invalidity benefit age addition by additional pension	1986-87	120	130
Restoration of 5 per cent. abatement of IVB	1986-87	−80	−90
Extension of statutory sick pay[2]	1987-88	40	40
Introduction of statutory maternity pay[2]

[1] The figures shown represent the initial estimates of the effect of the changes on national insurance benefit expenditure only in the first year following implementation in which the cost/savings of the change exceeded £50 million. No account is taken of the impact of the changes on administration costs, income tax and national insurance contribution revenues and expenditure on income related benefits, other than shown in footnote 2.

[2] The amounts shown represent the net effect on NI benefit expenditure after employers' recoveries from contributions to the NI Fund in respect of payments of statutory sick pay and statutory maternity pay to their employees.

HEALTH

Salmonella

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the most recent research in relation to salmonella.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: A considerable amount of research is taking place into many aspects of salmonellosis including methods by which the disease is produced in humans and animals and also the manner in which it is spread among food-producing animals and humans.

Pre-cooked Chilled Food

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice has been given to local councils and environmental health officers concerning the regular inspection of pre-cooked chilled foods with regard to outbreaks of food poisoning.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The regular inspection of food is a matter for local authorities. We have advised chief environmental health officers that end product testing is not an effective means of ensuring the microbiological safety of batches of food. The microbiological control of pre-cooked chilled food is best achieved by good manufacturing and retail practice and the inspection of foods should concentrate on those aspects rather than undertaking extra routine final product testing.

Human Organs (Sale)

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to regulate the sale of human organs, including from live donors.

Mr. Freeman: We are totally opposed to the commercialisation of human organs. Recent allegations are being investigated urgently. A report is expected shortly. The Registered Homes Act 1984 provides powers to cancel the registration of private hospitals where conduct is in any way improper or undesirable. We are currently consulting Health Service management and the medical profession with a view to implementing a register of organ transplant operations in England. Such a register would help in the investigation of any future allegations.

Crèche Facilities

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many district health authorities have crèche facilities for their staff; and if he will list them.

Mr. Mellor: We do not collect this information centrally.

Medicines (EC)

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when, pursuant to his answer, 10 January, Official Report, column 614, the data bank containing the prices of medicines in each of the member states of the European Community will be completed; and if he will use it to obtain more competitive prices for drugs supplied to the National Health Service.

Mr. Mellor: The timing of the work on the data bank will be for the European Commission to decide. I understand that the Commission is considering to what extent they can make use of existing information held by Governments and other bodies, but it will inevitably take some years to cover all medicines available in the Community. Some comparative information may be available earlier. The extent to which any information can be used to influence negotiations on prices of medicines supplied to the NHS will be for consideration at the time.

Emergencies (Private Hospitals)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will institute a code of conduct for private hospitals to ensure that particularly in the case of emergencies they have adequate equipment and supplies available to treat their patients;

(2) what provision his Department makes for the monitoring of private hospitals and their provision of emergency treatment in the case of patients, particularly in regard to the minimum provision of blood supplies.

Mr. Mellor: District health authorities are required to inspect each private hospital at least twice a year. Private hospitals have a statutory duty to provide and maintain adequate medical, surgical and nursing equipment and adequate treatment facilities. Blood is supplied to them as necessary by the national blood transfusion service on payment of a handling charge. In 1985, model guidelines were issued to all health authorities under the auspices of the National Association of Health Authorities. These were endorsed by the Department.

Radiation

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if, following the release of new information on 1 January on an accident involving the release of substantial quantities of radioactive strontium 90 from the Windscale reprocessing plant at Sellafield in the spring of 1957, he will make it his policy to request the chairperson of the Committee on the Medical Aspects of Radiation into the Environment (COMARE) to re-open his study of the population of west Cumbria and the possible radiation effects.

Mr. Freeman: No. COMARE's report in 1986 already took into account evidence concerning estimated radiation doses to the public over the period 1951 to 1982 including the effects of 1957 releases from Windscale.

Grading

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what analysis his Department has undertaken of the 1988 grading review; and when he will institute a further review to implement those findings.

Mr. Mellor: The Department has carefully examined the grading returns from regions and districts. We have no plans for a further review of the nurses' grading structure.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many appeals against regrading are outstanding (a) in the Nottingham district health authority and (b) in the Trent region; and when all appeals are expected to have been dealt with.

Mr. Mellor: We do not hold the information requested centrally.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list those types of nursing staff categorised by their qualifications who have appealed against their regrading levels, and which have not appealed (a) in the Nottingham district health authority (b) in the Trent region.

Mr. Mellor: We do not hold the information requested centrally.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the current status of the regrading exercise being undertaken (a) in the Nottingham district health authority and (b) the Trent region; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: All nurses and midwives have been told their new grades and have received arrears of pay at the new salary scales from 1 April 1988. Appeals from staff who remain dissatisfied with their grading are being dealt with under a general Whitley council agreement, agreed between management and the trades unions.

Listeria

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he has on the number of listeria monocytogenes bacteria which need to be consumed to cause illness in vulnerable people.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: According to a recent WHO working group, virtually nothing is known about the infectious dose of listeria monocytogenes in man. It is likely that the infectious dose may be related to host susceptibility. The detailed follow-up by the public health laboratory service of cases of listeriosis in the United Kingdom may shed some light on this.

Appointments Panels

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Wakefield, Official Report, 23 January, if he will specify who is responsible for the nomination of the second independent professional assessor; and what criteria are used when deciding who will sit on a particular appointments panel.

Mr. Mellor: The district health authority itself normally nominates one of the two independent assessors; the other, as I indicated in my reply of 23 January at column 411 is nominated by the regional health authority. Apart from the requirement for assessors, the constitution of appointments panels is a matter for district health authorities to decide for themselves. The Department does not lay down criteria, and I would expect practice (for example with regard to the size of panels) to vary between authorities.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health who were the two independent professional assessors on the most recent appointment board for the post of district general manager in the Wakefield health authority.

Mr. Mellor: This is a local matter. The hon. Member may wish to contact the chairman of the health authority for the information he is seeking.

AIDS

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information is available to him on the effectiveness of anti-viral drugs in preventing or delaying the development of AIDS in people who are HIV positive; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 25 January 1989]: No anti-viral drug to prevent or delay the development of AIDS in people who are HIV positive has yet reached a stage at which it is licensed for general use. The most advanced is Zidovudine which is currently undergoing clinical trials to assess its efficacy for this purpose.

Aplastic Anaemia

Mr. Lofthouse: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research is taking place into the cause of aplastic anaemia.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 16 January 1989]: The Department of Health is not funding research into the causes of aplastic anaemia.

The main agency through which the Government supports medical and related biological research is the Medical Research Council (MRC), which receives its grant-in-aid from the Department of Education and Science. I understand that the MRC is always willing to consider soundly-based research proposals for funding, in competition with other applications.

SCOTLAND

Infants (Temperature Monitor)

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if his Department is providing financial or other forms of assistance to any private company in the research or development of an early-warning temperature monitor for human infants.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Scottish Home and Health Department has given no assistance, financial or otherwise, to private companies involved in such research.

Jackton Bridge

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on what date the contract for the improvement of the Jackton bridge was approved; when work commenced on site; when he expects the work to be completed; what is the latest estimate of the cost of the work and what was the original estimate; what are the reasons for any delay or cost increase; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: As this improvement concerns a local road, the hon. Member should consult Strathclyde regional council, the local roads authority, about it.

Eaglesham Moor Road

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland who is responsible for removing rubble and rubbish following road improvement work; who is responsible for ensuring such removal is undertaken; what is the position on the work undertaken on the Eaglesham Moor road over the past year; what contractors were involved; what action he proposes to take to ensure the rubble is removed; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: So far as trunk roads are concerned, it would normally be a condition of the contract that the contractor reinstates the site to its former state. However, the road in question is a local road and I would suggest that the hon. Member consults Strathclyde regional council about the contract for the works.

Rating Reform

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will introduce legislation to seek to amend the Abolition of Domestic Rates Etc. (Scotland) Act to specify that the date of birth need only to be collected when there are two or more people living at the same address with the same name and initials.

Mr. Lang: My right hon. and learned Friend has no plans to do so.

Nuclear Power Stations (Safety)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether any debris from the Pan Am disaster fell on or near to Chapelcross or Calder Hall nuclear power stations; what safety arrangements there are to protect those power stations from airborne material; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: I am advised by the Dumfries and Galloway constabulary that the nearest debris was found about three miles from Chapelcross and 45 miles from Calder Hall power stations. The debris was located on the perimeter of the wreckage trail and was of a light and wind-borne nature.

For all licensed nuclear sites the operator is required to show that the probability of a damaging impact from airborne debris resulting from aircraft crashes or mid-air disintegration is sufficiently low to support the judgment that no further specific features need to be incorporated into the design of the station to take account of such impacts.

Nuclear power stations are of robust construction. The concrete and steel structures and built-in reactor protection systems give an inherent strength against a number of hazards.

As a further measure the Air Navigation Order Regulations restrict aircraft movement within specified distances of nuclear installations and the Ministry of Defence operates a similar prohibition in the case of military aircraft.

Eggs

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to complete consideration being given to enhancing the status of the two voluntary codes of practice and the set of guidelines issued to the egg production industry in relation to the risk of salmonella infection in eggs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food to my hon. Friend the Member for Suffolk, Central (Mr. Lord) on 18 January at columns 214-15. The measures proposed coupled with the voluntary codes of practice underline the Government's commitment to tackling the problem of salmonella.

Health Board Chairmen

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give any elected local government positions held at any time in the past by persons who will be health board chairmen as from 1 April, including their political affiliations.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information is as follows:—

Chairmen of health boards and elected local government positions held

Mr. J. D. Ryan CBE—Argyll and Clyde. Member of Renfrew County Council 1968-70; Greenock Corporation 1972-75; and Inverclyde District Council 1974-77 (Labour).

Mr. W. S. Fyfe OBE—Ayrshire and Arran. Member of Prestwick Town Council 1967-73; and Ayr County County 1970-72 (Conservative).

Dr. D. H. Pringle CBE—Borders. None.

Mr. J. A. McIntyre JP—Dumfries and Galloway. None.

Mrs. A. H. Ferguson—Fife. None.

Mrs. J. I. D. Isbister—Forth Valley. Member of Stirling District Council 1980-84 (Conservative).
Mr. J. Kyle—Grampian. None.
Dr. T. J. Thomson CBE—Greater Glasgow. None.
Mr. J. McWilliam OBE—Highland. None.
Mrs. B. M. Gunn OBE JP—Lanarkshire. Member of Lanark County Council 1970-74; and Strathclyde Regional Council 1974-82 (Conservative).
Mr. R. B. Weatherstone TD—Lothian. None.
Mr. J. D. M. Robertson OBE—Orkney. None.
Mrs. F. B. Grains JP—Shetland. Member of Shetland Islands Council 1978-82 and 1986 to present (Independent).
Mr. D. B. Grant TD—Tayside. None.
Mrs. M. A. Macmillan—Western Isles. Member of Stornoway Town Council; Ross and Cromarty County Council; and Western Isles Islands Council 1978-86 (Independent Conservative).

Poultry

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will now make compliance with the code of practice for poultry breeders and hatcheries a condition of the State Veterinary Service's poultry health scheme; and if he will make a statement on the enforcement costs and other resource implications for the industry of any such changes.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: As from 1 April 1988, membership of the poultry health scheme will be conditional upon compliance with the code of practice for poultry breeders and hatcheries issued in December 1988. Compliance costs will vary according to the extent to which the current practices of companies on such aspects as hygiene and bacteriological monitoring are compatible with those laid down in the code.

Greater Glasgow Health Board

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many staff are employed by Greater Glasgow health board to monitor the performance of private contractors; what is their salary range; and what is their cost in a full financial year.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: This information is not available centrally.

Southern General Hospital

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what services at the Southern general hospital have been privatised; what services are currently under consideration for privatisation; and how many staff would be affected.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: None.

NHS (Property and Land)

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the total proceeds from the disposal of National Health Service property and land in (a) Strathclyde region and (b) Scotland as a whole since 1979.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: £10·704 million and £29·231 million respectively.

Hampden Park, Glasgow

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is (a) the number of association football matches played at Hampden park, Glasgow, during the 1987-88 season, (b) the total attendance during the season, (c) the total arrests in association with these matches, (d) the average attendance per match, (e) the average number of arrests per match and (f) the arrests as a proportion of the attendance.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Queens Park football club and Strathclyde police have provided the information on which the table is based:

Association football matches at Hampden Park, Glasgow during season 1987-88

	Number
a. Matches played	29
b. Total attendance	314,202
c. Total associated arrests	152
d. Average attendance per match	10,834
e. Average number of arrests per match	5
f. Arrests as proportion of attendance	1:2,067

Football Matches

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the football matches the Scottish Office Minister with responsibility for sport has attended in an official capacity since June 1987.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I have attended the following:
Hampden Park—Celtic FC v Dundee United FC on 14 May 1988
Hampden Park—Scotland v Yugoslavia on 19 October 1988

Nuvan 500 EC

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he has any plans to standardise the use of Nuvan 500 EC on marine fish farms; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he has any proposals to assess and review the use of Nuvan 500 EC on marine fish farms; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: An application for a product licence for Nuvan 500 EC is currently being considered by the veterinary products committee. As with any other medicine, the proposed conditions of use will be scrutinised as part of the assessment.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any proposals to commission research programmes into the evaluation of alternative pesticides to Nuvan 500 EC for use on marine fish farms; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Scottish Salmon Growers Association has commissioned the Institute of Aquaculture at the university of Stirling to investigate alternative methods to control sea lice infestation of farmed salmon. Scientists from the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland's marine laboratory are co-operating in this work and will be undertaking other studies of the problem of sea lice infestation.

Salmonella (Poultry Farms)

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether any inspections by his staff during 1987 and 1988 revealed the presence of salmonella on poultry farms; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Twelve cases of salmonella in poultry units in Scotland were reported under the Zoonoses Order 1975 in 1987 and 21 in 1988. In each of these cases officers from the state veterinary service carried out a follow-up inspection.

Egg Producers (Compensation)

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received on the recent statement on compensation for egg producers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I have received three representations on this subject. The schemes which were announced on 19 December, together with the Government's advertising campaign, have, I believe, made a significant contribution to the restoration of stability in the egg market in Scotland.

Hospitals

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the hospitals in Scotland with 250 beds or more.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The latest available information is for the year ending 31 March 1988 and is as follows:

Ayrshire and Arran Health Board:
Ayrshire Central and Maternity Hospital
Crosshouse Hospital
Ailsa Hospital
Ballochmyle Hospital

Borders Health Board:
Dingleton Hospital

Argyll and Clyde Health Board:
Argyll and Bute Hospital
Vale of Leven DGH
Ravenscraig Hospital
Inverclyde Royal Hospital
Dykebar Hospital
Merchiston Hospital
Royal Alexandra Hospital

Fife Health Board:
Cameron Hospital
Victoria Hospital
Stratheden Hospital
Lynebank Hospital

Greater Glasgow Health Board:
Belvidere Hospital
Canniesburn Hospital
Gartloch Hospital
Glasgow Royal Infirmary
Lennox Castle Hospital
Stobhill Hospital
Woodilee Hospital
Leverndale Hospital
Mearnskirk General Hospital
Victoria Infirmary
Southern General Hospital
Gartnavel General Hospital
Gartnavel Royal Hospital
Glasgow RHSC
Glasgow Western Infirmary

Highland Health Board:
Raigmore Hospital
Craig Dunain Hospital

Lanarkshire Health Board:
Monklands DGH
Birkwood Hospital
Hartwood Hospital
Law Hospital
Hairmyres Hospital
Stonehouse Hospital

Grampian Health Board:
Aberdeen Royal Infirmary
Woodend General Hospital
Kingseat Hospital
Royal Cornhill Hospital
Ladysbridge Hospital

Lothian Health Board:
Eastern General Hospital
Royal Victoria Hospital
Western General Hospital
Astley Ainslie Hospital
City Hospital
Gogarburn Hospital
PMRO Hospital
Rosslynlee Hospital
Royal Infirmary of Edinburgh
Royal Edinburgh Hospital
Bangour General Hospital
Bangour Village Hospital

Tayside Health Board:
Ninewells Hospital
Dundee Royal Infirmary
Royal Dundee Liff Hospital
Strathmartine Hospital
Perth Royal Infirmary
Murray Royal Hospital
Sunnyside Royal Hospital
Stracathro Hospital

Forth Valley Health Board:
Royal Scottish National Hospital
Falkirk and District Royal Infirmary
Bellsdyke Hospital
Stirling Royal Infirmary

Dumfries and Galloway Health Board:
Crichton Royal Infirmary
Dumfries and Galloway Royal Infirmary

Rent Arrears

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table showing levels of rent arrears for public sector housing in Scotland as a whole and in each district and islands area on 30 September 1988, expressed as an average figure for each house in each district.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information available is shown in the table.

Information on the rent arrears for 10 local authorities has yet to be received centrally. Information on the rent arrears for the Scottish Special Housing Association by distruct and islands area is not held centrally. The average rent arrears per dwelling has been calculated as the rent arrears divided by the total number of dwellings owned by the authority concerned.

Public sector rent arrears as at 30 September 1988

	Total arrears £	Arrears per dwelling £
SCOTLAND[1]	20,018,624	28·05
Local authority[1]	17,021,809	28·65
Berwickshire	[2]54,638	22·26
Ettrick and Lauderdale	40,664	10·14
Roxburgh[1]
Tweeddale[1]
Clackmannan	800,903	93·48
Falkirk	667,830	22·71
Stirling	635,700	53·76
Annandale and Eskdale	121,708	25·25
Nithsdale	322,710	43·85
Stewartry	31,137	13·49
Wigtown[1]
Dunfermline	669,523	34·98
Kirkcaldy[1]
North East Fife	117,675	18·17
Aberdeen	1,144,379	31·04

	Total arrears £	Arrears per dwelling £
Banff and Buchan	277,064	24·21
Gordon	76,225	14·00
Kincardine and Deeside	48,878	13·83
Moray	105,555	10·52
Badenoch and Strathspey	17,900	17·11
Caithness[1]
Inverness	[3]	—
Lochaber[1]
Nairn	[3]	—
Ross and Cromarty	268,364	44·15
Skye and Lochalsh[1]
Sutherland	29,279	17·20
East Lothian	416,583	29·93
Edinburgh	1,709,041	34·71
Midlothian	279,632	25·73
West Lothian	239,049	11·96
Argyll and Bute	167,810	21·37
Bearsden and Milngavie	126,374	73·69
Clydebank[1]
Clydesdale	191,031	20·73
Cumbernauld and Kilsyth	446,934	110·76
Cumnock and Doon Valley	391,219	41·42
Cunninghame	304,415	14·27
Dumbarton	[2]445,232	37·68
East Kilbride	40,059	31·25
Eastwood	38,237	22·09
Glasgow[1]
Hamilton	487,120	22·59
Inverclyde	318,000	17·72
Kilmarnock and Loudoun	214,026	13·22
Kyle and Carrick	333,026	20·80
Monklands	958,767	35·18
Motherwell	1,063,807	28·66
Renfrew	1,226,984	33·78
Strathkelvin	459,718	48·77
Angus	117,843	9·32
Dundee	1,019,368	26·94
Perth and Kinross	188,615	13·14
Orkney Islands[1]
Shetland Islands	111,934	43·42
Western Isles	296,853	123·12
New Towns	1,202,975	29·28
Cumbernauld	201,464	27·45
East Kilbride	230,889	17·49
Glenrothes	[2]422,405	60·45
Irvine	115,910	26·57
Livingston	232,307	25·25
SSHA	1,793,840	22·86

[1] Return outstanding.
[2] Includes rate arrears.
[3] Information not available.

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table showing levels of rent arrears for public sector housing in Scotland as a whole and in each district and islands area on 30 September for each year since 1979.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is shown in the table. Information on the rent arrears at 30 September 1988 for 10 local authorities has yet to be received centrally. Information on the rent arrears for the Scottish Speicial Housing Association by district and islands area is not held centrally. Because of changes in the way in which rent arrears are measured, the information for 1984 to the present is not strictly comparable with that for the years before 1984.

Public sector rent arrears as at 30 September each year

	1979 £	1980 £	1981 £	1982 £	1983 £	1984 £	1985 £	1986 £	1987 £	1988 £
Scotland	4,943,914	5,619,382	8,488,067	12,896,778	17,999,570	18,858,844	19,943,204	24,292,244	26,658,649	20,018,624
Local authority	4,375,020	4,682,104	7,017,812	9,919,681	15,971,913	16,686,273	17,698,066	21,966,354	24,441,926	17,021,809
Berwickshire	24,293	22,961	[2]34,247	[2]55,879	[2]44,605	[2]45,155	[2]43,397	[2]43,122	[2]40,908	[2]54,638
Ettrick and Lauderdale	12,890	10,906	13,523	14,014	21,459	19,995	28,780	29,262	29,501	40,664
Roxburgh	38,598	49,821	67,614	..	..	174,046	162,267	173,475	158,920	[1]—
Tweeddale	2,717	2,101	3,248	8,473	12,110	14,402	19,568	12,658	9,950	[1]—
Clackmannan	62,920	60,264	92,383	157,867	147,174	173,128	169,583	368,792	501,064	800,903
Falkirk	281,022	338,343	421,078	640,725	421,024	674,110	604,830	491,071	477,299	667,830
Stirling	89,824	96,658	153,093	402,377	443,475	227,983	362,592	418,550	466,600	635,700
Annandale and Eskdale	17,103	19,995	..	69,716	52,249	61,142	89,947	101,650	99,888	121,708
Nithsdale	28,553	33,280	61,379	89,040	96,713	152,370	138,123	129,156	126,891	322,710
Stewartry	5,818	8,706	18,809	24,723	16,567	16,835	16,908	17,985	27,523	31,137
Wigtown	5,369	7,279	8,557	15,511	23,990	34,417	67,272	65,421	99,446	[1]—
Dunfermline	106,133	126,795	281,336	389,444	433,504	500,260	466,974	456,911	460,340	669,523
Kirkcaldy	70,689	102,946	192,646	388,602	444,831	345,345	381,896	419,969	462,442	[1]—
North East Fife	13,243	21,035	36,143	43,036	41,662	40,806	63,600	92,419	67,633	117,675
Aberdeen	174,718	232,148	329,117	424,941	402,889	349,788	568,992	646,109	802,565	1,144,379
Banff and Buchan	52,340	48,153	81,875	199,277	184,417	249,430	194,557	224,032	253,788	277,064
Gordon	20,789	26,467	36,242	41,405	39,293	37,882	38,498	47,485	64,638	76,225
Kincardine and Deeside	13,136	10,457	18,671	23,819	18,934	23,939	25,599	31,892	38,669	48,878
Moray	21,409	34,408	52,675	54,649	22,872	66,867	41,825	49,232	48,770	105,555
Badenoch and Strathspey	5,107	4,142	9,343	11,543	6,726	13,380	11,981	6,300	12,838	17,900
Caithness	4,497	8,637	24,352	27,121	23,402	38,013	26,307	36,932	37,836	[1]—
Inverness	73,339	105,008	141,133	122,953	187,956	118,166	137,154	115,401	143,103	[3]—
Lochaber	20,315	22,133	63,095	61,733	95,406	80,679	87,700	63,778	43,327	[1]—
Nairn	704	644	988	5,499	6,873	8,152	5,170	6,090	7,385	[3]—
Ross and Cromarty	43,818	6,196	43,618	47,452	160,649	172,515	214,453	150,633	170,923	268,364
Skye and Lochalsh	4,600	6,433	13,613	6,020	9,764	26,771	24,687	36,315	38,418	[1]—
Sutherland	11,157	7,565	15,055	22,482	16,173	20,052	14,254	17,155	17,429	29,279
East Lothian	57,358	62,040	96,900	141,596	159,527	222,861	213,935	206,100	231,065	416,583
Edinburgh	544,806	591,718	731,832	1,003,598	708,035	870,160	993,270	1,039,067	1,147,598	1,709,041
Midlothian	85,050	122,307	166,607	218,276	159,700	240,090	244,054	246,430	247,049	279,632
West Lothian	59,414	79,167	194,169	182,969	225,515	142,937	150,568	158,751	163,544	239,049
Argyll and Bute	48,953	50,983	141,173	140,237	107,823	67,632	65,299	109,379	73,676	167,810
Bearsden and Milngavie	13,300	7,946	14,295	22,131	25,830	26,507	30,484	36,884	42,126	126,374

	1979 £	1980 £	1981 £	1982 £	1983 £	1984 £	1985 £	1986 £	1987 £	1988 £
Clydebank	72,610	112,739	214,211	296,105	536,768	493,906	516,541	482,332	455,683	[1]—
Clydesdale	30,000	38,000	60,000	78,864	81,720	82,432	73,984	95,067	117,243	191,031
Cumbernauld and Kilsyth	28,501	39,778	76,965	126,902	155,271	184,060	394,358	468,279	537,420	446,934
Cumnock and Doon Valley	21,576	34,000	72,871	182,418	120,354	179,872	269,013	256,228	311,903	391,219
Cunninghame	121,445	150,000	220,000	300,000	250,000	[illegible]0,000	170,000	190,000	256,818	304,415
Dumbarton	126,004	135,056	282,197	441,016	373,45[illegible]	[illegible]4,636	[2]486,617	[2]541,136	[2]421,723	[2]445,232
East Kilbride	15,540	11,758	19,605	28,996	35,152	36,219	35,536	34,093	32,312	40,059
Eastwood	4,839	11,850	20,785	22,580	19,827	12,269	25,392	29,737	35,173	38,237
Glasgow	[3]—	[3]—	[3]—	[3]—	5,676,000	[illegible]588,000	5,814,000	8,486,000	9,550,000	[1]—
Hamilton	96,155	165,412	129,112	228,830	263,416	259,883	537,661	362,352	428,508	487,120
Inverclyde	127,265	102,812	194,371	264,180	220,455	189,380	254,159	349,931	264,764	318,000
Kilmarnock and Loudoun	58,942	64,971	84,675	115,900	99,776	89,120	113,144	270,924	190,345	214,026
Kyle and Carrick	62,170	69,122	101,086	116,376	157,530	160,209	189,839	186,576	220,143	333,026
Monklands	514,410	282,545	350,990	580,595	483,120	700,399	594,509	732,748	671,501	958,767
Motherwell	417,852	325,683	533,719	600,000	600,000	958,178	743,287	589,200	935,361	1,063,807
Renfrew	199,671	243,608	422,132	533,010	403,755	377,534	463,214	606,478	766,543	1,226,984
Strathkelvin	97,534	187,293	110,981	317,678	321,649	306,909	468,721	369,178	723,992	459,718
Angus	30,964	33,616	65,569	87,396	78,758	83,988	94,055	110,693	99,175	117,843
Dundee	299,663	194,693	254,179	348,166	673,877	687,826	488,398	920,579	1,113,017	1,019,368
Perth and Kinross	[3]—	48,153	99,542	104,896	160,431	124,072	132,890	107,807	111,454	188,615
Orkney Islands	20,805	18,742	27,099	36,269	26,020	26,859	34,091	39,833	50,878	[1]—
Shetland Islands	15,092	19,250	28,397	52,396	82,436	89,496	94,614	121,296	92,685	111,934
Western Isles	[3]—	65,381	90,517	[3]—	391,000	285,221	[4]—	[5]517,000	441,133	296,853
New Towns	287,599	349,572	558,046	829,057	789,014	874,722	874,153	832,412	922,372	1,202,975
Cumbernauld	75,973	78,611	88,717	108,535	127,152	138,861	108,053	131,246	143,184	201,464
East Kilbride	[4]114,157	[4]132,525	[4]240,853	[4]383,331	292,270	316,631	174,644	161,093	167,179	230,889
Glenrothes	42,117	51,777	117,877	175,822	220,045	260,786	271,953	266,367	313,304	[2]422,405
Irvine	20,944	39,996	22,555	57,877	55,293	37,924	56,595	78,196	101,116	115,910
Livingston	34,408	46,663	88,044	103,492	94,254	120,520	262,908	195,510	197,589	232,307
SSHA	281,295	587,706	912,209	2,148,040	1,238,643	1,297,839	1,370,985	1,493,478	1,294,351	1,793,840

[1] Return outstanding.
[2] Includes Rate Arrears.
[3] Information not available.
[4] Figures for 1979-82 include Stonehouse New Town.
[5] Includes unprocessed housing benefit awards.

Local Enterprise Boards

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he intends to make any provision for the representation of rural interests in the proposed new local enterprise boards.

Mr. Lang: Our proposals for Scottish Enterprise, which are currently the subject of consultation, envisage that those bidding to form the board of management for the local agency in each area will decide on their own membership. One of the criteria for assessing the bids received will of course be the extent to which the fullest possible range of local interests are involved.

Cash Limits

Sir Hector Monro: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he proposes to make any further changes to the cash limits for 1988-89 within his responsibility.

Mr. Rifkind: Yes. I intend to make changes to seven of the cash limits within my responsibility.

As a result of expected savings on a number of services, the cash limit for Class XVI vote 2, has been decreased by £1,500,000 from £78,042,000 to £76,542,000. This reduction will partly offset an increase to Class XVI vote 7, local transport, water sewerage and environmental services, Scotland which is non-cash limited, and which will be used to meet the costs arising from the Lockerbie air disaster. In addition the cash limit for Class XVI vote 3, regional and general industrial support, Scotland will be decreased by £1 million from £134,954,000 to £133,954,000, also partly to offset the increase to Class XVI vote 7. The cash limit for Class XVI vote 10 will also be reduced by £1 million from £4 million to £3 million to offset the increase to Class XVI vote 7.

The cash limit for Class XVI vote 11 will be reduced by £150,000 from £27,775,000 to £27,625,000. This is due to later than anticipated occupation of two courthouses following completion of new building and restoration work and will partially offset increased expenditure of £1,675,000 on Class XVI, vote 13 which is non-cash limited.

Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, there will be an increase of £90,000 in the cash limit for Class XVI Vote 14, prisons, hospitals and community health services etc, Scotland from £1,889,706,000 to £1,889,796,000 to fund the Scottish Health Education Group's winter warmth campaign. This increase will be offset by a reduction of £90,000 in the cash limit for Class XVI Vote 15, education, arts, libraries and social work, Scotland from £198,589,000 to £198,499,000.

The cash limit for the Scottish Office administration Vote, Class XVI Vote 21 is being reduced by £4,000 from £120,198,000 to £120,194,000 as a result of a transfer of costs for recruitment under the direct entry grade 7 competition 1988 offset by a corresponding increase in the Office of the Minister of the Civil Service, Class XX Vote 1.

As a result of these changes there will be no addition to the planned total of public expenditure.

In addition, the running costs limits for the Scottish Office will be reduced by £96,000 from £195,044,000 to £194,948,000 and for the Scottish Courts Administration by £150,000 from £22,986,000 to £22,836,000.

Council House Sales

Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table listing those local authorities who have failed to serve offers on tenants, to sell houses to tenants within two months of the application to purchase, the number of houses affected in each area, and the average time taken by each local authority to submit offers to sell to tenants.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 19 January 1989]: Such information as is kept centrally is set out for the latest available period in the table:

	Number of applications with formal offer overdue at 30 September 1988
Scotland	5,673
Berwickshire	6
Ettrick and Lauderdale	—
Roxburgh	4
Tweeddale	48
Clackmannan	166
Falkirk	—
Stirling	1
Annandale and Eskdale	99
Nithsdale	18
Stewartry	—
Wigtown	—
Dunfermline	223
Kirkcaldy	252
North East Fife[1]	18
Aberdeen	600
Banff and Buchan	154
Bordon	2
Kincardine and Deeside	1
Moray	10
Badenoch and Strathspey	—
Caithness[1]	18
Inverness	84
Lochaber	3
Nairn	—
Rossi and Cromarty	1
Skye and Lochalsh	—
Sutherland	—
East Lothian	—
Edinburgh	n.a.
Midlothian	239
West Lothian	298
Argyll and Bute	12
Bearsden and Milngavie	72
Clydebank	51
Clydesdale	—
Cumbernauld and Kilsyth	52
Cumnock and Doon Valley[1]	2
Cunninghame	95
Dumbarton	367
East Kilbride	1
Eastwood	1
Glasgow	1,010
Hamilton	150
Inverclyde	152
Kilmarnock and Loudoun	108
Kyle and Carrick	894
Monklands[1]	4
Motherwell[1]	—
Renfrew	102
Strathkelvin	58
Angus	—
Dundee	108
Perth and Kinross	167
Orkney Islands[1]	2
Shetland Islands	15
Western Isles	5

[1] Returns outstanding. Most recent available information is shown.
Source: SDD return 85.

ENVIRONMENT

Water

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether all water supplied by water authorities and water companies complies with annex I of European Community Council directive 80/778/EEC; what steps his Department has taken to ensure that it does so comply; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: Most water supplied by water authorities and water companies complies with the standards set in annex 1 of EC directive 80/778. The Department requires water undertakers to prepare action programmes for its approval where a supply does not comply and where a derogation under the terms of the directive is not available. Over the last few years a substantial number of supplies have been improved under these programmes and good progress continues to be made towards full compliance with the directive.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if, when new valuation work of water authority land and buildings is undertaken in connection with the preparation of prospectuses, he will make it his policy to ensure that such valuation takes account of the possibility of planning permission for development being granted; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: The valuation work will be carried out against the background of guidance notes issued by the Royal Institution of Chartered Surveyors on the valuation of assets, which provide that valuers should take account of the prospects for planning permission in relevant circumstances.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if, pursuant to his answer of 14 December, Official Report, column 626, he will make it his policy to publish for each water authority figures of net asset value based on the net current replacement costs figures shown in their published accounts; whether the amounts of net current replacement cost for each water authority have been calculated on a consistent accounting basis with each other; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: I have no plans to publish additional information on the value of assets in the ownership of water authorities to that which is given in the published annual accounts. Water authorities' accounts are drawn up in accordance with standard guidelines for the industry which it is the responsibility of each authority to apply, subject to the scrutiny of its external auditors.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he plans to bring forward further proposals to guarantee effective competition within each water authority area; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: The water merger proposals announced by my right hon. Friend on 11 January at column 841 are designed to ensure that the Director General of Water Services can make performance comparison between independently owned water and sewerage undertakers throughout England and Wales.

PSA (Staff)

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the number of staff in the Property Services Agency, by grade, in receipt of local pay additions outside London and the south-east economic planning region; what are the different amounts paid to staff by grade; whether this figure varies due to location; what qualifying period of scale-related criteria is used; and whether this varies by location.

Mr. Ridley: Seventeen, all of whom are administrative assistants in Cambridge with a local pay addition of £300. There is no qualifying period or scale-related criterion.

Departmental Staff (Pay)

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the number of staff in his Department, by grade, in receipt of local pay additions outside London and the south-east economic planning region; what are the different amounts paid to staff by grade; whether this figure varies due to location; what qualifying period of scale-related criteria is used; and whether this varies by location.

Mr. Ridley: Apart from the Property Services Agency, my Department is not at present paying local pay additions to any staff outside London and the south-east economic planning region.

Chelsea Football Ground

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to publish his decision on the inspectors' report in the public inquiry on the proposed redevelopment of Chelsea football ground.

Mr. Chope: The inspector's report is being considered. The decision will be issued as soon as possible.

Fees Ofice (Floor Covering)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he has to provide carpet and decent floor covering in the Fees Office, Dean's yard; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: All the carpet and floor coverings in No. 3 Dean's yard will be replaced during the next summer recess.

London Docklands

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assistance the London docklands development corporation has given to the new training centre set up in the royal docks by Mowlems.

Mr. Trippier: The corporation was involved in the preparation of this scheme, and fully supports it. No financial assistance was required.

Ozone Layer (Conference)

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which university research departments will be invited to the forthcoming United Kingdom sponsored conference in ozone layer depletion and CFC dangers.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Participation in the "Saving the Ozone Layer" London conference is for Governments only, and we have invited over 150 countries to send a Ministerial delegation. A small number of leading scientists and industrialists from all over the world will speak on specialist subjects. The scientists will also be involved in informal panel sessions and an exhibition, where they will be supported by the stratospheric ozone review group, including the chairman, Dr. Pyle, of Cambridge university.

Public Bodies (Funding)

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those non-departmental public bodies responsible to his Department for which funding and staffing (a) have been reduced in 1988 and (b) are planned for reductions in 1989; and, for each case, if he will list the change in funding and staffing levels.

Mr. Ridley: Tables a to c give information on my Department's NDPBs which (a) received less funding by way of grants and/or net borrowing from the Department in 1988-89 compared with 1987-88; (b) are planned to receive less funding by way of grants and/or net borrowing from the Department in 1989-90 compared with 1988-89; and (c) reduced their staffing levels between the start of 1987-88 and the start of 1988-89;

The reduction in funding for the National Heritage Memorial Fund between 1987-88 and 1988-89 largely reflects the payment of a £20 million endowment to the fund in 1987-88. The reduction in grant in aid for the Countryside Commission is partly due to the separate provision of core-funding for the groundwork foundation and trusts from 1 April 1988. 1987-88 figures are also inflated by the emergency provision for tree replanting following the 1987 great storm.

The higher level of funding for the London Docklands development corporation in 1988-89 compared with planned provision in 1989-90 reflects £38 million supplementary provision during 1988-89.

Reductions in staffing levels of the new town development corporations, which are funded mainly from revenue and by receipts from the disposal of their property, reflect the rundown of their programmes and some privatisation of functions. Aycliffe and Peterlee development corporation and Washington development corporation were wound up at the end of the 1987-88 financial year. Peterborough development corporation was wound up in September 1988.

The residuary body staffing is reducing because they are limited life bodies which are being wound up as soon as practicable. Tyne and Wear residuary body was wound up in October 1988. The residuary bodies are not funded by the Department.

During 1988-89, which is subsequent to the period covered by table c, the staff complement of the Historic Buildings and Monuments Commission has been reduced from 1562·5 to 1560·5. Reductions in the staffing of the new town development corporations and the residuary bodies have continued during 1988-89 and further reductions are expected during 1989-90. These apart there are no specific proposals for reducing staff numbers in 1989-90 in the bodies sponsored by the Department although it remains my Department's policy that NDPBs should be staffed at the minimum necessary to carry out their responsibilities efficiently and effectively.

Table A

		£ thousand
	1987-88 outturn	1988-89 provision
Countryside Commission	22,750	21,118
National Heritage Memorial Fund	21,546	1,500
New Towns Staff Commission	3	2

Table B

		£ thousand
	1988-89 provision	1989-90 provision
London Docklands Development Corporation	116,415	86,000

Table C

	Staffing March-April 1987	Staffing March-April 1988
Countryside Commission	125	115
Letchworth Garden City Corporation	108	93
New Town Development Corporations
Aycliffe and Peterlee	29	0
Milton Keynes	816	540
Peterborough	339	249
Telford	702	469
Warrington and Runcorn	555	380
Washington	126	0
Commission for the New Towns	1,107	1,085
Residuary Bodies:
Greater Manchester	267	112
London	3,094	2,148
Merseyside	334	213
South Yorkshire	109	17
Tyne and Wear	46	14
West Midlands	52	21
West Yorkshire	116	57

Fish

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if coarse fish, and eels in particular, are able to meet the quality standards set out in European Community directives 82/176 and 84/156.

Mr. Moynihan: These directives set out a range of quality objectives from which member states are required to select those most appropriate to the intended use of the waters. For the purposes of implementing these directives in inland waters, water authorities have elected to apply the quality standard for mercury concentrations in water, rather than that for fish flesh. They have not therefore monitored compliance with the latter standard, which in any case applies to a representative sample of fish flesh, and not to any individual species. Concentrations of substances in fish flesh generally are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food.

Nuclear Waste

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans Nuclear Industry Radioactive Waste Executive has for disposing of nuclear waste in Yorkshire; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State expects to receive Nirex's proposals for a radioactive waste disposal facility shortly. Until these have been received and a decision is made, no part of the country can be ruled out.

British Waterways Board

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will appoint a member from Wales to the British Waterways Board; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: I have no plans at present to appoint a member for Wales. Future appointments will continue to be made in accordance with the statutory criteria in section 1(6) of the Transport Act 1962 and in the light of the board's particular needs at the time.

Football

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Derbyshire, North-East (Mr. Barnes) of 19 December 1988, Official Report, columns 55-60, if he will break down the information for the number of matches played in the FA cup, the Littlewoods cup, the Simod cup, and the Sherpa Van trophy.

Mr. Moynihan: The information given in my answer to the hon. Member for Derbyshire, North-East (Mr. Barnes) on 19 December 1988 relates only to matches played in the Football League. Information on arrests made at matches played in the FA cup, Littlewoods cup, Simod cup and Sherpa Van trophy competitions is not held centrally.

Environmental Protection

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much has been spent by his Department in each of the last five years on the development and encouragement of environmentally sensitive processes in industry both public and private.

Mr. Ridley: In general, it is for industry to develop new processes to meet environmental requirements imposed by Government. My Department has, however, recently launched the environmental protection technology scheme to assist development to proof of concept stage of new technologies which would enable standards to be improved. A number of promising applications are being considered, but no grants have yet been made. In addition in 1988-89 my Department is providing support of £25,000 for the better environment awards for industry.

Tree Preservation

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how he proposes to carry out the review of tree preservation.

Mr. Ridley: I have appointed James Batho, formerly director of the eastern region of my Department and the Department of Transport, to carry out this review. He has been asked to review the present policy and legislation on tree preservation and consider whether they remain appropriate in present conditions in both urban and rural areas. I have agreed with my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland and for Wales that this review will also cover the position in Scotland and Wales.

Unified Business Rate

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish (a) the estimated increase in the level of rates that businesses in each of the district council areas of Devon will face when unified business rate is introduced and how that increase will be phased in and (b) the results of the recent rates revaluation on businesses in Exeter and Devon.

Mr. Gummer [holding answer 25 January 1989]: A business (national non-domestic) rate set at the 1988-89 average level would have been set at 239·5p in the pound. This compares with the present poundages in the district council areas of Devon as follows:

	Pence in the Pound	Percentage difference
East Devon	228·7	5
Exeter	225·7	6
North Devon	236·7	1
Plymouth	231·3	4
South Hams	235·3	2
Teignbridge	236·5	1
Mid-Devon	234·8	2
Torbay	244·3	−2
Torridge	237·0	1
West Devon	235·2	2

The revaluation of non-domestic properties will be carried out by the valuation office of the Inland Revenue by the end of this year. I hope to be able to announce shortly the Government's proposals for phasing in rate changes, based on sample information about the likely effects of the revaluation.

Rates

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the average rates payable per household for each year since 1978-79 for (a) the United Kingdom, (b) Great Britain, (c) Greater London and (d) the south-east excluding Greater London, showing in each case the annual and cumulative percentage increase.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 25 January 1989]: The unrebated figures are as follows:

Average domestic rate bill (£)

	(£)	Annual percentage increase	Cumulative percentage increase
Greater London
1978-79	169	—	—
1979-80	200	18·7	18·7
1980-81	264	32·0	56·8
1981-82	358	35·3	112·2
1982-83	400	11·9	137·7
1983-84	449	12·2	166·3
1984-85	478	6·5	183·7
1985-86	505	5·6	199·5
1986-87	485	−3·9	188·0
1987-88	517	6·5	206·9
1988-89	530	2·4	214·2
South East excluding London
1978-79	157	—	—
1979-80	186	18·4	18·4
1980-81	230	24·9	46·8
1981-82	259	12·6	65·3
1982-83	298	14·9	90·0
1983-84	315	5·7	100·0
1984-85	334	5·9	112·6
1985-86	361	8·1	129·8
1986-87	426	18·3	171·8
1987-88	465	9·0	196·2
1988-89	526	13·1	234·9
Great Britain
1978-79	127	—	—
1979-80	151	18·3	18·3
1980-81	194	28·7	52·3
1981-82	240	24·0	88·9
1982-83	277	15·2	117·6
1983-84	295	6·5	131·8
1984-85	315	6·8	147·5
1985-86	346	9·8	171·9
1986-87	392	13·2	207·7
1987-88	422	7·9	231·8
1988-89	460	8·8	261·0
United Kingdom
1978-79	126	—	—
1979-80	n/a	—	—
1980-81	n/a	—	—
1981-82	n/a	—	—
1982-83	274	—	116·9
1983-84	290	6·5	131·1
1984-85	312	6·8	146·9
1985-86	342	9·8	171·1
1986-87	387	13·1	206·7
1987-88	418	7·8	230·7
1988-89	454	8·8	259·8

Note: Figures for the United Kingdom between 1979-80 and 1981-82 are not available. However the cumulative percentage increase runs from 1978-79.

TRANSPORT

Greater London (Traffic Flow)

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what improvements to traffic flow were achieved in Greater London during 1988 on (a) the A10, (b) the A11, (c) the A12 and (d) the A13;

(2) what improvements to traffic flow are expected to be achieved in the Greater London area on (a) the A10, (b) the A11, (c) the A12 and (d) the A13 during the current year.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: In 1988 three trunk road schemes were completed on A10 and A13 to improve traffic flow. These were:

A10—Bullsmoor lane junction improvement

A13—Roding bridge

A13—Becton flyover tidal flow scheme.

The tidal flow scheme was particularly successful in improving traffic flow.

The Department's national trunk road programme includes 12 major improvement schemes for the four routes. A further number of smaller improvement schemes are planned for 1989-90 These include:

A12/A127—Gallows corner roundabout: installation of traffic control signals: and other small-scale junction improvements on A12.

A13—Tollgate road junction; and eight other schemes to improve traffic flow on A13, some as interim measures in advance of major schemes.

Computerised control of traffic signals by the MOVA (Modernised optimised vehicle actuation) system will be introduced this year to aid traffic flow at four junctions:

A10—Great Cambridge road/Carterhatch lane.

A12—Eastern avenue/Whalebone lane.
A12—Colchester road/Goosehayes drive/Gubbins lane.
A14—junction with A117 under Becton flyover.

Railway Line Closures

Mr. Edward Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will state which railway lines are proposed to be closed in the current year, giving the reasons for any such closures.

Mr. Portillo: British Rail's railway closure proposals currently outstanding are listed. In addition, British Rail has announced that it intends formally to propose the withdrawal of passenger services between Gainsborough and Barnetby. British Rail has taken the view that it can no longer justify maintaining these rail services. My right hon. Friend will decide each case on its merits.

Settle to Carlisle and Blackburn to Hellifield
Henley-in-Arden to Bearley junction
Ashburys West junction to Phillips Park No. 1 junction
Wortley curve (Leeds)
Melton Halt (Humberside)
Methley junction to Altofts junction
Vale of Rheidol railway
Mexborough East junction to Aldwarke junction
North Pole junction to Old Oak Common East junction

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will (a) list the railway lines closed in each year from 1984 to 1988 and (b) state the reasons for any such closures.

Mr. Portillo: The railway lines and stations closed during each year from 1984 to 1988 are listed. The particular reasons given by my right hon. Friend and his predecessors for consenting to these closures were set out in formal decision letters. But, generally speaking, consent is given where it is considered that hardship and other social and economic effects are not sufficient to outweigh the financial and operational advantages of closure.

1984 Upton by Chester station
South Bank station

1985 Eltham Park station
New Hadley station
Tottenham Hale to Stratford (including Lea Bridge station)
Birchenden junction to Grove (including Tunbridge Wells West and Groombridge stations)
Gogarth and Abertafol halts
Errol station

1986 Tiverton Junction station
Broad Street station to Dalston Junction station (inclusive)
Cefn-Onn station
Balloch Central to Balloch Pier (including Balloch Pier station)

1987 Royton station
Brindle Heath junction to Agecroft junction
Meadowbank station
Goose hill junction to Wath Road junction and Oakenshaw junction to Oakenshaw South junction Dryclough junction to Greetland junction; Milner Royd junction to Health Lodge junction; Bradley Wood junction to Bradley junction; Horbury Station junction to Crigglestone junction and Wakefield Kirkgate West junction to Hare Park junction.

1988 Burton Lane junction to Rowntree Halt (including Rowntree Halt) Rotherham Masborough station.

Kent Rail Link

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he last discussed railway services between London and Dover with the chairman of British Rail; and what plans have been proposed or approved by his Department to improve the service.

Mr. Portillo: My right hon. Friend and I frequently meet the chairman of British Rail, and we discuss a wide range of issues. I have no proposals currently before me which relate to the Dover service.

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what financial effect the proposed new rail link in Kent will have on revenue and capital expenditures and the external financing limits of British Rail in each year between 1990 and 2000.

Mr. Portillo: It is too early to say. The likely cost and timing of any new rail link have still to be determined.

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what arrangements are currently envisaged as the basis for British Rail to pay the operating company for using the new Kent rail link; and what amounts are expected to be paid in each of the 20 years following completion.

Mr. Portillo: British Rail has invited private sector companies to show that they are competent to bid to become involved in a new high-speed Channel tunnel rail link. The invitation does not expire until the end of this month. It is too soon to foretell what precise financial arrangements may emerge.

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what studies were carried out by his Department and British Rail into the feasibility and financial viability of upgrading and extending to Ashford and Folkstone (Cheriton) the existing Dover—Canterbury—London rail link as an alternative to the proposed new Kent rail link; and if he will publish those studies.

Mr. Portillo: The precedure by which British Rail identified its possible route corridors for a new rail link to the Channel tunnel was explained in the report which it published in July 1988. Copies were sent to hon. Members and placed in the Library of the House. My Department has not carried out any studies of possible routes; that is British Rail's responsibility. On the face of it, improvements to the route via Canterbury and Dover would appear to be a rather circuitous way of improving access to Ashford and Folkestone.

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what statutory provision British Rail has to finance the whole or part of the cost of a high speed rail link to carry international passengers between London and the Channel tunnel.

Mr. Portillo: The financing of a high-speed rail link between London and the Channel tunnel would come within British Rail's general powers to provide railway services and to make appropriate financial arrangements in connection with the provision of railway services. British Rail will, however, require specific parliamentary authorisation for construction and operation of any new rail link.

Road Repairs

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to implement the proposals of the Horne committee on road repairs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer that I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Elmet (Mr. Batiste) on 19 January at column 292.

Local Pay Additions

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the number of staff in his Department, by grade, in receipt of local pay additions outside London and the south east economic planning region; what are the different amounts paid to staff by grade; whether this figure varies due to location; what qualifying period of scale-related criteria is used; and whether this varies by location.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The Department is not at present paying local pay additions to any staff outside London and the south east economic planning region.

London Transport (Resignation Agreement)

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether Dr. Ridley, former chairman of London Transport, has complied with the terms of the resignation agreement as placed in the Library.

Mr. Portillo: Dr. Ridley ceased to hold office as a member of London Regional Transport under his terms of appointment (as placed in the Library) on 10 November 1988, the date on which my right hon. Friend accepted his resignation.

Rail Electrification

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has now received any proposals from British Rail to electrify the London-Midland railway line.

Mr. Portillo: I have not.

Hazardous Substances (Carriage by Air)

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport in the light of the Pan Am jumbo jet crash in Scotland, he will initiate a full review of the present safety standards for the carriage of (a) commercial nuclear materials and (b) non radioactive hazardous substances by aircraft operating from United Kingdom airports.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The regulations governing the transport of radioactive materials are kept under continuous review by the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA). The agency is currently reviewing the safety requirements for transporting plutonium by air.

The United Kingdom regulations for the movement by air of non-radioactive dangerous goods are kept under review by the Civil Aviation Authority.

Construction Work (VAT)

Mr. Heddle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessments he has made with the BAA, the British Railways Board and other bodies within his Department's responsibility about the effect of the imposition of value added tax on non-domestic construction work following the decision of the European Court on 21 June 1988, in particular on partnership schemes in the private sector involving urban regeneration where the schemes were commercially committed prior to the relevant date but not protected by the transitional arrangements proposed by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise.

Mr. Portillo: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to him on 25 January by my hon. Friend the Economic Secretary to the Treasury. I have no reason to believe that different considerations would apply to construction schemes involving transport bodies from the generality of such schemes.

Mr. Heddle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received from the BAA, the British Railways Board and other bodies within his Department's responsibility about the effect of value added tax on non-domestic construction work following the decision of the European Court on 21 June 1988, in particular on partnership schemes with the private sector.

Mr. Portillo: The chairman of British Rail has written to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State pointing out the possible effect on a number of British Rail development schemes of the imposition of value added tax in non-domestic construction work. My right hon. Friend has received no other representations from bodies sponsored by his Department.

Licence Applications (Manchester-United States)

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will now make a further statement on the progress of the talks with the United States Government on the licence applications for new Manchester routes by United States airlines.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Stockport (Mr. Favell) on 16 January at column 97.

British Rail (Investment)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has received any proposals from British Rail concerning investment in the London South Wales mainline and the Crewe-Holyhead line; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: I have received no such proposals.

King's Cross Station (Fire Calls)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on how many occasions the London fire brigade has been called out to King's Cross station since 18 November 1987.

Mr. Portillo: I understand from London Underground Ltd. that the London fire brigade has been called out to King's Cross station on 53 occasions since 18 November 1987. In eight cases the fire brigade dealt with a fire or smoke incident, 28 incidents were dealt with by London Underground staff before the fire brigade arrived and in the remainder the fire brigade found no trace of fire or smoke.

Capital Allocations (London)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the capital allocations for transport and the accepted expenditure for TSG purposes in each case excluding any allowance for the traffic control systems unit, for each London borough for the years 1986-87, 1987-88, 1988-89 and 1989-90.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The accepted expenditure figures for TSG purposes and the initial transport capital allocations excluding any allowance for the traffic control systems unit for each London borough for 1986-87, 1987-88, 1988-89 and 1989-90 are as follows:

TSG and capital allocation for the London boroughs (excluding allocations for TCSU)

(£000's)

Borough	1986-87		1987-88		1988-89		1989-90
	TSG	CAP	TSG	CAP	TSG	CAP	TSG	CAP
Barking	109	1,111	1,505	2,459	5,590	5,991	4,480	4,441
Barnet	151	1,523	760	1,028	631	815	355	504
Bexley	3,292	4,870	763	1,328	2,076	2,587	2,373	2,573
Brent	861	1,749	460	895	730	102	710	950
Bromley	335	1,423	668	1,448	7,601	8,600	7,445	8,301
Camden	0	1,894	101	904	162	225	35	87
Croydon	0	1,010	201	899	291	594	350	809
Ealing	3,059	4,629	3,918	4,815	4,352	6,142	6,220	7,172
Enfield	7,120	7,744	14,659	14,868	22,363	22,654	23,718	23,960
Greenwich	1,435	2,971	280	1,214	2,111	3,229	1,434	2,386
Hackney	349	2,189	3,822	4,969	750	1,562	681	1,375
Hammersmith	231	711	140	227	46	169	172	269
Haringey	2,000	3,682	2,828	3,223	7,915	8,175	11,678	11,696
Harrow	2,365	2,881	3,590	3,953	7,344	9,441	7,600	8,791
Havering	3,524	4,658	2,415	3,299	507	1,204	237	737
Hillingdon	10,059	11,663	6,494	7,046	8,335	10,288	15,087	10,122
Hounslow	939	1,683	1,120	1,786	1,408	1,606	1,433	1,447
Islington	0	302	101	655	51	286	171	372
Kensington	700	1,118	434	589	712	1,018	1,464	1,441
Kingston	7,065	9,021	9,389	9,652	5,338	5,531	3,922	3,744
Lambeth	115	855	421	925	358	599	182	380
Lewisham	0	1,562	450	1,536	1,811	2,238	10,455	10,812
Merton	2,245	3,803	5,334	7,636	4,967	6,628	9,287	9,245
Newham	2,400	4,176	2,195	3,246	1,972	2,498	1,891	2,227
Redbridge	400	766	1,951	2,600	679	1,742	508	686
Richmond	353	1,105	308	778	282	580	205	457
Southwark	2,700	3,772	2,330	2,780	3,474	4,090	5,193	5,407
Sutton	900	1,900	1,578	2,030	1,462	2,455	1,788	2,171
Tower Hamlets	0	914	246	722	51	447	26	276
Waltham Forest	1,600	2,672	2,045	2,381	1,268	1,510	941	1,047
Wandsworth	4,465	6,047	5,220	6,605	1,165	2,230	1,624	2,448
Westminster	908	4,092	650	2,200	972	1,360	1,669	1,855
City	847	2,497	955	1,316	180	646	385	625

Note:

The 1986-87 settlement did not specify a separate capital allocation for TCSU apart for that which went with the TCSU element of the TSG minor works accepted expenditure.

I am sending the hon. Member a simple guide to TSG, copies of which are available in the Library.

Lockerbie Disaster

Ms. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will consider including in the inquiry into the Lockerbie disaster the question of the delay between the identification of the body of a victim and the passing of this information on to the next of kin.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The purpose of the investigation being carried out by my air accidents investigation branch is to determine the circumstances and causes of the accident. The question raised by the hon. Member falls outside the scope of this investigation.

I understand from my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland that he has been assured by the chief constable of Dumfries and Galloway that, when a body was reliably identified, every effort was made to notify the next of kin, whether in this country or abroad, as soon as possible. If the hon. Member has a particular case in mind and will notifiy my right hon. and learned Friend, he will gladly make further inquiries.

London Regional Transport (Rate Precept)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has on the likely level of the rate precept for London Regional Transport for the forthcoming year; what percentage increase this represents over the current year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to my hon. Friend the Member for Harrow, East (Mr. Dykes) on 19 December at column 12. The proposed levy for 1989-90 would represent an increase of 50 per cent. over the 1988-89 levy.

Transport (London)

Mr. Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to improve transport in London.

Mr. Channon: I am today publishing a booklet entitled "Transport in London" setting out the Government's policy aims for transport in London and the steps being taken to achieve them. This is supported by a fuller, more technical statement on transport in London which I am sending to the London local authorities and other interested bodies.

Much is already being done and planned to improve the quality of London's transport systems and to increase their capacity. Earlier this week I announced the east London rail study which is examining the best options for improving rail access from central London to docklands and east Thames-side. Today I am publishing the report of the central London rail study jointly with the chairman of London Regional Transport and British Rail.

I welcome the central London rail study report as a major contribution to the debate on how best to improve services and provide for forecast demand on the rail networks serving central London.

The number of passengers using the rail networks serving central London is currently at record levels. The study concludes that peak demand may grow by up to a further 20 per cent. by the end of the century. To meet this demand and improve the quality of services a twofold strategy is proposed:

(i) A major upgrading programme costing some £1·5 billion to make the best use of the existing infrastructure. This programme would allow more and higher capacity trains to be run; increase the capacity of Underground stations; and include service restructuring and other measures to ease bottlenecks and secure better operating performance. It would provide an early response to some of the mst pressing problems but would not by itself be enough to cater for the forecast increases in demand and provide acceptable standards of, service. Provision has already been made for some of this programme in present plans.

(ii) A package of new line construction. The study proposes alternative packages each consisting of two new lines in tunnels under London.

Some work is required before decisions can be taken. This will be carried out in parallel with the east London rail study and will include work on how such investments might be financed. The Government believe that if there is to be new investment of benefit to passengers, it is they who should pay for it, rather than taxpayers from other parts of the country. Contributions should be forthcoming from property owners and developers where they also stand to benefit. Where these two sources of finance are not enough to make a project commercially viable, grants can be available provided that economic benefits, for example in the relief of road congestion, justify them.

I am now inviting interested parties to give their views on the proposals. In the light of these and the further work that remains to be done, I hope to be in a position to take decisions on the way ahead later this year.

I am placing copies of "Transport in London", the technical document supporting it, and the report of the central London rail study in the Library.

EMPLOYMENT

London Docklands

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give an update of the activity and individual projects being carried out by the docklands liaison group set up by the employment service and the Training Agency.

Mr. Nicholls: Since its inception in June 1987 the docklands liaison group has continued to work towards improving the extent and co-ordination of the Department's programmes provided by the employment service and the Training Agency.

Specific projects which have been initiated or progressed include the development of construction training under Employment Training in each docklands borough; training projects to help English as a second language (ESL) students gain access to construction training; a new enterprise package which includes low-cost business rents, advice on business start-up, finance and training; the development of two office and commercial training centres; and the development of a mobile jobcentre service.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment which are the employer-led groups referred to in "Employment for the 1990s" invited to set up TECs in the London borough of Newham.

Mr. Cope: We will publish a prospectus shortly. This will invite employer-led groups thoughout England and Wales to offer to form TECs.

Departmental Staff (Child Care)

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what child care provision his Department provides for pre-school age children of employees; what child care provision, for school holiday or after-school care, is provided for employees' children aged five and over; what plans there are for increasing provision in the next five years; and how these are to be funded.

Mr. Cope: I refer to the hon. Member to the reply I gave her on 20 April 1988 at column 475.

I addition to the child care provision mentioned in that reply, the Employment Department group now operates a further care parent scheme for staff with children under five years old in the employment service and Training Agency headquarters in Sheffield.

The group has also contributed to the initial funding of the Westminster holiday playscheme which is being co-ordinated by the Office of the Minister for the Civil Service for staff working in central London. We are considering other facilities both departmentally and jointly with the office of the Minister for the Civil Service.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will show for Scotland, Wales, England and Great Britain as a whole (a) the number of employees employed in (i) manufacturing and (ii) service industries in (1) 1979 and (2) 1988 and (b) the changes in the numbers employed in percentage terms.

Mr. Lee: The information is as follows:

Employees in employment in Great Britain

	Employees in employment		Net change between September 1979 and September 1988
	September 1979	September[1] 1988	Per cent.
Scotland
Manufacturing	602	387	−36
Service industries	1,228	1,287	5
Wales
Manufacturing	317	218	−31
Service industries	572	566	−1
England
Manufacturing	6,204	4,421	−29
Service industries	11,493	13,064	14

	Employees in employment		Net change between September 1979 and September 1988
	September 1979	September[1] 1988	Per cent.
Great Britain
Manufacturing	7,123	5,025	−29
Service industries	13,293	14,918	12

[1] The latest date for which information is available.

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will indicate for each year since 1979 and for each country and region of the United Kingdom (a) the number of female employees in employment, (b) the number of females in full-time employment, (c) the number of females in part-time employment; and if he will express (c) as a percentage of (a).

Mr. Lee: Table A shows all female employees in employment for each region and country of the United Kingdom. Tables B and C show female full-time and female part-time employees in employment for each region and country of the United Kingdom except Northern Ireland. Estimates of full and part-time employment are not collected for Northern Ireland. Table D shows female part-time employees in employment as a percentage of all female employees in employment.

Table A
All female employees in employment

Thousands

September:	1979	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984	1985	1986	1987	1988[1]
South East	3,187	3,192	3,122	3,075	3,108	3,187	3,269	3,329	3,436	3,529
East Anglia	289	288	281	285	289	302	314	325	341	356
South West	677	666	660	659	665	683	692	705	720	742
West Midlands	906	880	843	819	820	840	862	882	903	929
East Midlands	645	633	613	605	617	628	645	660	680	700
Yorkshire and Humberside	813	794	765	753	755	769	784	797	814	833
North West	1,137	1,111	1,072	1,038	1,030	1,040	1,051	1,060	1,073	1,084
North	506	490	466	456	457	464	471	482	492	507
England	8,160	8,053	7,823	7,691	7,741	7,914	8,088	8,239	8,458	8,679
Scotland	902	890	832	848	840	851	868	866	878	892
Wales	414	401	390	377	378	383	382	380	391	396
Northern Ireland	231	230	225	225	228	229	231	230	233	236

[1] The latest date for which figures are available.

Table B
Female employees in full-time employment

Thousands

September:	1979	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984	1985	1986	1987	1988[1]
South East	1,936	1,920	1,871	1,845	1,865	1,924	1,971	1,992	2,054	2,112
East Anglia	168	164	159	156	164	171	172	175	183	193
South West	385	370	354	350	354	370	375	387	398	412
West Midlands	537	516	492	481	476	491	494	496	504	517
East Midlands	379	369	356	350	353	359	366	367	382	386
Yorkshire and Humberside	457	441	418	404	403	408	411	410	420	433
North West	673	645	620	596	587	587	583	579	577	581
North	298	285	267	261	256	255	257	257	258	265
England	4,834	4,710	4,538	4,444	4,458	4,565	4,630	4,663	4,775	4,899
Scotland	572	559	534	508	504	505	505	500	494	503
Wales	250	241	231	222	219	219	213	204	210	208
Northern Ireland	[2]—	[2]—	[2]—	[2]—	[2]—	[2]—	[2]—	[2]—	[2]—	[2]—

[1] The latest date for which figures are available.
[2] Unavailable.

Table C
Female employees in part-time employment

Thousands

September:	1979	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984	1985	1986	1987	1988[1]
South East	1,251	1,272	1,251	1,229	1,244	1,264	1,298	1,337	1,383	1,416
East Anglia	121	124	122	129	125	131	142	150	158	163
South West	292	296	306	309	311	312	317	317	322	331
West Midlands	369	363	351	338	344	349	368	385	399	412
East Midlands	266	264	256	255	264	269	280	293	298	314
Yorkshire and Humberside	356	353	347	349	352	361	373	387	394	401
North West	464	466	452	442	444	453	467	481	496	503
North	207	205	200	195	200	209	214	225	233	241
England	3,326	3,343	3,285	3,247	3,283	3,349	3,458	3,576	3,682	3,780
Scotland	331	332	338	340	337	346	363	367	383	389
Wales	164	160	158	156	159	163	169	176	181	187
Northern Ireland	[2]—	[2]—	[2]—	[2]—	[2]—	[2]—	[2]—	[2]—	[2]—	[2]—

[1] The latest date for which figures are available.
[2] Unavailable.

Table D
Female employees in part-time employment as a percentage of all female employees in employment

Per cent.

September:	1979	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984	1985	1986	1987	1988[1]
South East	39·3	39·8	40·1	40·0	40·0	39·7	39·7	40·2	40·2	40·1
East Anglia	41·8	43·1	43·3	45·2	43·3	43·4	45·1	46·2	46·3	45·8
South West	43·1	44·4	46·3	46·8	46·7	45·8	45·9	45·0	44·7	44·5
West Midlands	40·7	41·3	41·6	41·3	41·9	41·6	42·6	43·7	44·2	44·3
East Midlands	41·3	41·7	41·8	42·2	42·7	42·8	43·3	44·4	43·9	44·8
Yorkshire and Humberside	43·8	44·5	45·4	46·4	46·6	47·0	47·6	48·5	48·4	48·1
North West	40·8	41·9	42·1	42·5	43·1	43·5	44·5	45·4	46·3	46·4
North	41·0	41·8	42·8	42·8	43·9	45·0	45·4	46·7	47·5	47·6
England	40·8	41·5	42·0	42·2	42·4	42·3	42·8	43·4	43·5	43·6
Scotland	36·7	37·2	38·7	40·1	40·1	40·7	41·8	42·3	43·7	43·6
Wales	39·6	39·9	40·7	41·2	42·1	42·6	44·3	46·3	46·2	47·3
Northern Ireland	[2]—	[2]—	[2]—	[2]—	[2]—	[2]—	[2]—	[2]—	[2]—	[2]—

[1] The latest date for which figures are available.
[2] Unavailable.

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish a table showing for each country and region of the United Kingdom the numbers of: (a) employees in employment and (b) self-employed people and (c) the change in the number of unemployed persons, for each year since 1979 and for each month in 1987 and 1988.

Mr. Lee: Table A shows estimates of the numbers of employees in employment by region and country; these figures are not adjusted for the effects of seasonal variations.

Table B shows estimates of the numbers of self-employed people by region and country.

Table C shows levels of seasonally adjusted unemployment consistent with the current coverage for each region and country of the United Kingdom at each December from 1979 and each quarter month in 1987 and 1988, together with the changes over the relevant period.

Table A
Employees in employment

thousands

	South East	East Anglia	South West	West Midlands	East Midlands	Yorkshire and Humberside	North West	North	England	Scotland	Wales	Northern Ireland
December 1979	7,549	708	1,589	2,257	1,564	2,010	2,677	1,244	19,597	2,094	1,033	537
December 1980	7,389	691	1,552	2,121	1,595	1,918	2,561	1,169	18,906	2,037	966	520
December 1981	7,204	676	1,516	2,015	1,460	1,829	2,424	1,107	18,231	1,958	919	508
December 1982	7,095	675	1,488	1,953	1,433	1,793	2,338	1,076	17,851	1,303	890	498
December 1983	7,172	688	1,514	1,970	1,444	1,785	2,310	1,063	17,946	1,891	884	500
December 1984	7,277	718	1,545	1,995	1,470	1,793	2,305	1,069	18,172	1,902	889	503
December 1985	7,365	750	1,548	2,025	1,502	1,795	2,297	1,080	18,361	1,897	872	502
December 1986	7,404	784	1,568	2,050	1,519	1,795	2,283	1,086	18,488	1,874	862	494
March 1987	7,377	780	1,555	2,040	1,505	1,778	2,259	1,077	18,371	1,862	852	491
June 1987	7,440	795	1,594	2,052	1,528	1,803	2,263	1,090	18,576	1,886	864	491
September 1987	7,496	810	1,593	2,065	1,540	1,810	2,269	1,093	18,677	1,879	873	493
December 1987	7,553	820	1,588	2,094	1,552	1,819	2,288	1,100	18,814	1,877	871	496
March 1988	7,547	820	1,573	2,084	1,530	1,813	2,265	1,097	18,727	1,868	866	495
June 1988	7,568	834	1,599	2,096	1,559	1,819	2,264	1,105	18,845	1,888	874	497
September 1988[1]	7,611	845	1,617	2,104	1,564	1,826	2,263	1,116	18,946	1,884	876	498

[1] The latest date for which figures are available.

Table B
Self Employed

thousands

	South East	East Anglia	South West	West Midlands	East Midlands	Yorkshire and Humberside	North West	North	England	Scotland	Wales	Northern Ireland
December 1979	663	81	166	148	123	142	215	79	1,617	157	122	64
December 1980	688	85	207	163	137	157	216	82	1,735	152	117	63
December 1981	708	89	224	172	147	165	219	86	1,810	157	118	61
December 1982	723	92	217	175	154	168	222	89	1,840	172	123	61
December 1983	794	102	223	182	162	186	241	92	1,982	182	135	61
December 1984	881	112	242	186	162	213	263	98	2,157	193	145	61
December 1985	904	110	254	186	162	219	267	105	2,207	203	150	60
December 1986	968	116	267	198	178	226	273	107	2,333	200	151	60
March 1987	1,080	122	273	204	184	231	276	107	2,397	197	150	60
June 1987	1,032	127	278	209	189	236	279	108	2,458	194	148	60
September 1987	1,046	129	280	211	191	239	282	109	2,487	196	149	60
December 1987	1,060	130	282	212	193	242	284	110	2,513	198	151	60
March 1988	1,074	132	284	214	195	245	287	111	2,542	200	152	60
June 1988	1,087	134	287	216	197	248	289	112	2,570	202	154	60
September 1988[1]	1,101	135	289	217	198	251	292	113	2,596	203	155	60

[1] The latest date for which figures are available.

Table C
Seasonally adjusted unemployment (000's)

December	South East Level	South East Change over year	East Anglia Level	East Anglia Change over year
1979	203·2	−28·6	24·3	−2·5
1980	365·4	162·2	43·7	19·4
1981	534·2	168·8	57·0	13·3
1982	616·1	81·9	68·3	11·3
1983	667·9	51·8	70·0	1·7
1984	715·5	47·6	72·6	2·6
1985	737·1	21·6	77·7	5·1
1986	731·7	−5·4	77·5	−0·2
1987	582·0	−149·7	60·0	−17·5
1988	421·7	−160·3	41·2	−18·8

	South East Level	South East Change over quarter	East Anglia Level	East Anglia Change over quarter
March 1987	701·9	−29·8	75·0	−2·5
June 1987	666·0	−35·9	70·8	−4·2
September 1987	627·4	−38·6	66·1	−4·7
December 1987	582·0	−45·4	60·0	−6·1
March 1988	547·0	−35·0	55·7	−4·3
June 1988	505·8	−41·2	51·4	−4·3
September 1988	461·9	−43·9	47·1	−4·3
December 1988	421·7	−40·2	41·2	−5·9

December	South West Level	South West Change over year	West Midlands Level	West Midlands Change over year
1979	69·5	−8·2	101·2	2·8
1980	110·5	32·9	282·8	84·6
1981	143·4	41·0	198·2	97·0
1982	161·5	18·1	313·1	30·3
1983	172·3	10·8	319·6	6·5
1984	186·0	13·7	326·3	6·7
1985	193·5	7·5	326·8	0·5
1986	190·8	−2·7	320·5	−6·3
1987	153·9	−36·9	263·9	−56·6
1988	113·1	−40·8	198·3	−65·6

	South West Level	South West Change over quarter	West Midlands Level	West Midlands Change over quarter
March 1987	183·8	−7·0	310·0	−10·5
June 1987	174·4	−9·4	296·2	−13·8
September 1987	164·0	−10·4	279·3	−16·9
December 1987	153·9	−10·1	263·9	−15·4
March 1988	145·3	−8·6	249·3	−14·6
June 1988	137·1	−8·2	233·7	−15·6
September 1988	126·1	−11·0	218·3	−15·4
December 1988	113·1	−13·0	198·3	−20·0

December	East Midlands Level	East Midlands Change over year	Yorks & Humberside Level	Yorks & Humberside Change over year
1979	57·6	−3·0	90·0	−4·2
1980	109·8	52·2	165·6	75·6
1981	143·8	34·0	220·3	54·7
1982	161·6	17·8	250·4	30·1
1983	173·3	11·7	259·6	9·2
1984	185·8	12·5	275·8	16·2
1985	190·0	4·2	288·8	13·0
1986	188·9	−1·1	290·8	1·8
1987	159·8	−29·1	248·1	−42·5
1988	126·6	−33·2	203·0	−45·1

	East Midlands Level	East Midlands Change over quarter	Yorks & Humberside Level	Yorks & Humberside Change over quarter
March 1987	185·6	−3·3	283·3	−7·3
June 1987	178·4	−7·2	274·7	−8·6
September 1987	169·5	−8·9	261·3	−13·4
December 1987	159·8	−9·7	248·1	−13·2
March 1988	152·7	−7·1	238·7	−9·4
June 1988	145·3	−7·4	229·5	−9·2
September 1988	137·1	−8·2	218·1	−11·4
December 1988	126·6	−10·5	203·0	−15·1

December	North West Level	North West Change over year	Northern Level	Northern Change over year
1979	161·5	1·2	90·0	0·6
1980	266·9	105·3	137·0	47·0
1981	349·4	82·5	172·0	35·0
1982	390·2	40·8	191·4	19·4
1983	412·7	22·5	201·0	9·6
1984	423·9	11·2	214·6	13·6
1985	428·3	4·4	217·3	2·7
1986	419·9	−8·4	211·6	−5·7
1987	358·4	−61·5	185·1	−26·5
1988	292·8	−65·6	160·1	−25·0

	North West Level	North West Change over quarter	Northern Level	Northern Change over quarter
March 1987	410·1	−9·8	207·0	−4·6
June 1987	394·8	−15·3	201·8	−5·2
September 1987	376·2	−18·6	194·0	−7·8
December 1987	358·4	−17·8	185·1	−8·9
March 1988	344·6	−13·8	179·4	−5·7
June 1988	328·0	−16·6	172·2	−7·2
September 1988	312·7	−15·3	165·9	−6·3
December 1988	292·8	−19·9	160·1	−5·8

December	England Level	England Change over year	Wales Level	Wales Change over year
1979	796·0	−41·9	64·0	−4·1
1980	1,397·1	601·1	109·6	45·6
1981	1,902·9	505·8	136·6	27·0
1982	2,152·6	249·7	151·9	15·3
1983	2,276·4	123·8	155·1	3·2
1984	2,400·5	124·1	166·7	11·6
1985	2,459·5	59·0	168·8	2·1

December	England Level	England Change over year	Wales Level	Wales Change over year
1986	2,431·5	−28·0	163·3	−5·5
1987	2,011·2	−420·3	137·9	−25·4
1988	1,556·8	−454·4	113·1	−24·8

	England Level	England Change over quarter	Wales Level	Wales Change over quarter
March 1987	2,357·2	−74·3	156·6	−6·7
June 1987	2,257·1	−100·1	150·8	−5·8
September 1987	2,137·8	−119·3	145·5	−5·3
December 1987	2,011·2	−126·6	137·9	−7·6
March 1988	1,912·7	−98·5	133·3	−4·6
June 1988	1,803·0	−109·7	127·7	−5·6
September 1988	1,687·2	−115·8	120·6	−7·1
December 1988	1,556·8	−130·4	113·1	−7·5

December	Scotland Level	Scotland Change over year	Northern Ireland Level	Northern Ireland Change over year
1979	141·7	4·2	53·6	1·6
1980	209·8	68·1	77·5	23·9
1981	265·6	55·8	90·1	12·6
1982	291·7	26·1	103·2	13·1
1983	302·6	10·9	109·1	5·9
1984	314·0	11·4	110·2	1·1
1985	325·7	11·7	116·1	5·9
1986	339·4	13·7	125·0	8·9
1987	302·3	−37·1	117·6	−7·4
1988	260·3	−42·0	108·9	−8·7

	Scotland Level	Scotland Change over quarter	Northern Ireland Level	Northern Ireland Change over quarter
March 1987	336·0	−3·4	123·3	−1·7
June 1987	326·6	−9·4	123·0	−0·3
September 1987	313·6	−13·0	121·2	−1·8
December 1987	302·3	−11·3	117·6	−3·6
March 1988	293·3	−9·0	114·7	−2·9
June 1988	279·7	−13·6	114·0	−0·7
September 1988	272·3	−7·4	111·6	−2·4
December 1988	260·3	−12·0	108·9	−2·7

Benefit Office (Closures)

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) what are the estimated annual savings incurred by the closure of the employment benefit offices at (a) Lanchester, County Durham and (b) Willington, County Durham;

(2) what are the staffing implications arising from the decision to close the employment benefit offices at (a) Lanchester, County Durham and (b) Willington, County Durham.

Mr. Lee: The estimated annual savings incurred by the closure of Lanchester and Willington part-time unemployment benefit outhouses will be approximately £1,100 per annum and £900 per annum respectively. Closure of these offices will allow existing staff resources to be used more productively on linked work in the full-time unemployment benefit offices.

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what arrangements will be made to cover the transport costs of claimants affected by the proposed closure of the employment benefit offices at (a) Lanchester, County Durham and (b) Willington, County Durham.

Mr. Lee: Claimants who live six miles or more from their nearest local office and disabled persons or those with significant travel difficulties will no longer be required to attend for their fortnightly claims but will be able to make these by post.

In most cases, claimants who currently attend the Lanchester and Willington part-time offices should be able to attend the nearest local offices at Stanley or Crook respectively. These offices have bus services from Lanchester and Willington and the fares are reasonable for claimants to meet from their own resources.

Unemployment Registration

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people register as unemployed at the Willington, County Durham office (a) weekly and (b) monthly.

Mr. Lee: There are 300 people registered as unemployed at Willington unemployment benefit outhouse, all of whom attend fortnightly.

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people register as unemployed at the Lanchester, County Durham office (a) weekly and (b) monthly.

Mr. Lee: There are 161 people registered as unemployed at Lanchester unemployment benefit outhouse, of whom 133 attend fortnightly and 28 attend quarterly.

Industrial Tribunals (Costs)

Mr. Batiste: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment on how many occasions in each of the last three years for which records are available warnings as to costs were issued by industrial tribunals; and in how many such cases costs ultimately were awarded.

Mr. Nicholls: The details are as follows:

	Costs warnings issued	Costs awarded following warning
12 months ended 31 March 1986	672	46
12 months ended 31 March 1987	517	30
12 months ended 31 March 1988	344	16

Mr. Batiste: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment on how many occasions in each of the last three years for which records are available costs were awarded by industrial tribunals in cases where no warning had previously been made.

Mr. Nicholls: The details are as follows:

	Number
12 months ended 31 March 1986	9
12 months ended 31 March 1987	1
12 months ended 31 March 1988	8

Tourism (South Africa)

Mr. Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether in the light of Her Majesty's Government's policy on the promotion of tourism to South Africa, he will seek to dissuade the Association of British Travel Agents from holding its convention in South Africa.

Mr. Lee: It is understood that the Association of British Travel Agents has no plans to hold its convention in South Africa.

Factories Act 1961

Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what progress has been made in setting up a non-statutory scheme to replace section 119A of the Factories Act 1961.

Mr. Cope: A consultation paper containing proposals for a new scheme to ensure that young people with disabilities are not placed in unsuitable employment or training has been circulated for comment to a wide range of interested organisations. Copies of the paper are available in the Library. A final decision on the details of the scheme will be taken in the light of comments received, and the new arrangements will be implemented as soon as possible.

Benefits and Income Support

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will provide details of the numbers of those aged under 18 years in receipt of benefit/income support by standard economic region, by month, for the period June to December 1988, inclusive.

Mr. Lee [holding answer 25 January 1989]: The table shows the available analysis of under 18-year-olds claiming unemployment-related benefits, that is unemployment benefit, income support or national insurance credits.

The recent extension of the guaranteed offer of a YTS place to all those aged under 18 not in full-time education or employment means there is now no need for these young people to be unemployed. Consequently, only a few now remain entitled to unemployment-related benefits following the associated change from September 1988 in the benefit regulations for under 18-year-olds.

Numbers of under 18-year-olds claiming unemployment-related benefits by standard region—June to December 1988

1988	[1]June	July	[1]August	[1]September	October	November	December
South East	13,117	11,907	10,976	9,846	1,728	1,074	880
East Anglia	1,921	1,553	1,431	1,285	188	155	114
South West	4,207	3,579	3,299	2,955	508	348	291
West Midlands	7,718	8,820	7,974	7,010	708	483	387
East Midlands	5,587	5,033	4,617	4,004	540	431	341
Yorkshire and Humberside	11,045	9,808	8,866	7,878	858	645	575
North West	13,493	12,200	11,207	9,928	1,112	808	708
Northern	7,001	6,232	5,630	4,874	590	438	359
Wales	5,345	4,766	4,349	3,743	454	328	290
Scotland	15,598	14,485	13,137	11,225	1,061	836	747
Northern Ireland	3,382	3,154	2,963	2,410	398	280	236
United Kingdom	90,414	81,437	74,450	65,158	8,145	5,826	4,928

[1] Estimated.

YTS

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish the most recent details of the average weekly take-home pay for YTS leavers, by standard economic region.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 25 January 1989]: Estimates from the youth cohort study for England and Wales, covering those young people who reached minimum school leaving age in the academic year 1984-85 and were surveyed in spring 1988 show that the average weekly take-home pay for those in a job who said they had had YTS experience within the previous three years, is as follows:

Region	Average weekly take home pay (£)
North	76·97
Yorkshire and Humberside	71·27
North West	73·83
East Midlands	74·57
West Midlands	77·67
East Anglia	79·54
Greater London	99·20
South East	87·13
South West	73·06
Wales	73·61
National Average	78·21

DEFENCE

Scottish Regiments

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the total cost of maintaining each Scottish regiment of the Army in 1987.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The costs of maintaining individual regiments are not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, the majority of Scottish regiments are infantry and the average operating cost in 1987 of a infantry battalion based in the United Kingdom was some £11 million. This figure includes personnel costs, spares, fuel and administrative support services, but excludes capital equipment costs.

Minesweepers and Frigates (Costs)

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the average cost of maintaining (a) a minesweeper and (b) a frigate, per annum.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The average annual operating costs of a minesweeper and a frigate are some £2 million and £4·2 million respectively. These costs include personnel costs, fuel, spares and so on, and administrative support services, but excludes capital equipment costs and refit-repair expenditure.

Scottish RAF Bases

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the total cost of maintaining the Royal Air Force forces based in Scotland in 1987.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The defence budget is not accounted for on a regional basis in the United Kingdom and the information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mutual Defence Agreement

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he made any applications under the Public Records Act of 1958 in accordance with paragraphs 26 and 27 of the White Paper on modern public records, Cmnd. 8531, to withhold beyond 30 years papers concerning the background to the signing with the United States Government of the Anglo-American mutual defence agreement on atomic energy matters in July 1958.

Mr. Sainsbury: Atomic records are retained in the Department under section 3(4) of the Public Records Acts 1958 and 1967 with the approval of the Lord Chancellor.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what agreement was made with the United States Department of Energy in November 1988 for the further enrichment of enriched uranium at Oakridge, Tennessee, under the 1958-59 United States-United Kingdom mutual defence agreement on atomic energy matters.

Mr. Sainsbury: Arrangements have been made for the further enrichment by the United States Department of Energy of a quantity of low enriched uranium produced in this country, in accordance with the statement by my right hon. Friend, the then Secretary of State for Defence, on 23 June 1982 at column 128.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what forms of transport have been used for the export and import of nuclear materials bartered or bought by the United Kingdom under the 1958, as amended in 1959, Anglo-American mutual defence agreement;

(2) what form of transport was used for the carriage of highly enriched uranium from Oakridge, Tennessee, to the United Kingdom under the arrangement actuated in November 1988, under the provisions of the 1959 amendment to the 1958 Anglo-American mutual defence agreement on atomic energy matters.

Mr. Sainsbury: It is not the MOD practice to give such information on the transport of nuclear materials.

Inertial Confinement Fusion Technology

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if his Department (a) currently funds or (b) has any future plans to fund inertial confinement fusion technology.

Mr. Sainsbury: The reply to both questions is yes. To provide further details would be against the national interest.

Parliamentary Answers

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what were the reasons for the delay in providing a substantive answer to the question from the hon. Member for Meirionnydd Nant Conwy, to which a holding answer was given on 22 February 1988, and a substantive answer on 21 June 1988, Official Report, column 497;

(2) if he will state the reasons for the delay in providing a substantive answer to the question from the hon. Member for Meirionnydd Nant Conwy, tabled for answer on 4 December 1987, to which a substantive answer was given on 21 March 1988, Official Report, column 9.

Mr. Neubert: The delay resulted from the requirement to assemble the detailed data asked for by the hon. Member.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence why the questions from the hon. Member for Meirionnydd Nant Conwy on 4 December 1987, Official Report, column 736, originally to be answered by a letter from the hon. Member for Kettering (Mr. Freeman) were subsequently answered by replies published in the Official Report, 31 March 1988, columns 623-26; and what criteria he uses to decide whether a parliamentary question should be answered in the Official Report or by a ministerial letter.

Mr. Neubert: I aim, as did my predecessor in this Department my hon. Friend the Member for Kettering (Mr. Freeman), to provide information requested by right hon. and hon. Members as speedily and in as helpful and appropriate a manner as possible. In the particular case raised by the hon. Member, it was not possible to provide him with the detailed answers to the questions he had posed immediately. My hon. Friend the then Under-Secretary of State for the Armed Forces therefore, and in the light of the impending parliamentary recess, said that he would write to the hon. Member. In the event, the researches required took longer than had been expected and it was therefore most appropriate to answer the questions by means of written answers.

Low Flying

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence why the special rules zone around Bristol airport has not been designated as a low-flying avoidance area.

Mr. Neubert: There is no need specifically to designate the area around Bristol airport as a low flying avoidance area as aircraft are not allowed to enter regulated airspace without approval from the controlling authority.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what is the approximate current land area covered by low-flying area 7(T); and if he will list any changes made to the boundaries of this area since 1979;

(2) if he will make a statement on progress in talks with the Government of Morocco on the use of facilities in Morocco for low-level training by the Royal Air Force;

(3) over what proportion of the United Kingdom land surface military low-flying is permitted;

(4) at what height military aircraft are permitted to fly over urban areas which are not located within one of the avoidance areas or transit areas marked on the Civil Aviation Authority chart of United Kingdom areas of intense aerial activity, aerial tactics areas and military low-flying system;

(5) if he will make a statement on the criteria and methods used by the Royal Air Force police when surveying potential new areas for low-flying.

Mr. Neubert: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 24 January 1989 at columns 555-56.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions in (a) 1987 and (b) 1988 the military low-flying management group met to consider proposals for changes to the United Kingdom low-flying system.

Mr. Neubert: The military low-flying management group met on three occasions in 1987 and on four occasions in 1988 to consider and discuss a variety of matters concerning the United Kingdom low-flying system including proposals for minor changes to the system.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many civilian personnel from the national air traffic services serve on the military low-flying management group;

(2) if he will list those aircraft types for which central records are kept of low-flying sorties over the United Kingdom;

(3) if he will make a statement on the roles, responsibilities and staffing levels of the tactical booking cell, Royal Air Force West Drayton.

Mr Neubert: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 25 January 1989.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the total number of low-flying movements in low-flying area 1A in each year since 1979, differentiating between (a) movements by fixed-wing aircraft and (b) movements by helicopters.

Mr. Neubert: It is not our practice to publish detailed information relating to specific low-flying training areas.

Military Jets (Noise)

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what studies have been undertaken by his Department of the noise levels generated on the ground by military jet aircraft overflying at 100 ft and at up to 550 knots.

Mr. Neubert: Although there has been no recent research specifically into the noise from low-flying aircraft, it is possible for MOD scientists, using the noise database collected during an exercise known as Bedlam, to calculate the maximum noise levels on the ground which would be generated by a military aircraft flying at 100 ft and at speeds up to 550 knots. A copy of the report of the results from exercise Bedlam was placed in the Library of the House in November 1987.

Jet Aircraft (Low-level Sorties)

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what is the basis of calculation of the figure for the average duration of a fast jet low-level sortie over the United Kingdom;

(2) what is the basis of calculation of the figure of 42 minutes for the average duration of a fast jet low-level sortie over the United Kingdom.

Mr. Neubert: The basis of the figure is statistical data compiled by headquarters military air traffic operations on the usage of the United Kingdom low-flying system.

Missiles

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the studies undertaken by research centres responsible to his Department on the feasibility of use of the Seawolf anti-air and anti-missile weapon and the Star Streak laser-guided missile for a limited anti-ballistic missile defence for British nuclear-capable bases.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Government have no plans to develop a ballistic missile defence system for deployment in the United Kingdom or more widely in Europe. Research carried out as part of the United States funded European architecture study has indicated that missile systems such as those referred to in the hon. Member's question would require substantial further development before they could be used in a ballistic missile defence system.

Nuclear Materials (Safety)

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if, in the light of the Pan Am 103 jumbo jet disaster in Scotland, he has any plans to review the safety standards for the airfreight of military nuclear materials.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Our safety standards for the movement of nuclear materials are stringent and are kept continuously under review.

Dartmoor National Park

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of the advertised live firing times were actually used by his Ministry in the Dartmoor national park in the calendar year 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neubert: For the three live firing ranges on Dartmoor, the figures for 1988 are as follows:

Percentage of advertised live firing times actually used

Range	per cent.
Okehampton	65·4
Merrivale	68·4
Willsworthy	64·5

We have an agreement—made in recognition of the importance of the national park—to restrict live firing to a certain number of days each year on these ranges and we have been conscientious in our observance of these restrictions. Firing has to be planned well in advance, and, because we cannot plan to fire on a greater number of days than those agreed, there is inevitably some degree of underutilisation. Firing programmes are affected by two main factors, weather and urgent changes in military commitments (such as short-notice deployments and military aid to the civil community tasks).

As my hon. Friend explained on 3 Feburary 1988 at columns 1138-42, Dartmoor continues to meet essential military requirements for live and dry training. Its importance has grown in recent years because of the increased training requirements of the larger numbers of regular and TA forces now based in this county and because of the increased demands of modern weapons.

While the Government will continue to be alert to any opportunities which may arise to reduce the demands of military training or to promote increased public access to the training areas, it remains the Government's policy to ensure that the facilities necessary for efficient and effective training are available to meet defence requirements. There is no foreseeable prospect of any significant reduction in those requirements but the Government remain fully committed meanwhile to seeking the best possible reconciliation between military and national park interests.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much compensation he has paid to farmers with animals grazing in the Dartmoor national park which have been killed, maimed or injured in each of the last five years.

Mr. Neubert: A total of some £2,400 has been paid in compensation to farmers in the Dartmoor national park area for animals which have been killed as a result of Army training and manoeuvres. This figure can be broken down as follows:

	£
1984	20
1985	60
1986	130
1987	990
1988	1,200

There are a few claims still outstanding.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many animals have been killed or injured by live firing in the Dartmoor national park in each of the past five years.

Mr. Neubert: The figures for the period 1984-88 are as follows:

Animals killed	Year
1 Sheep	1984
1 Pony	1985
3 Sheep	1986
1 Sheep, 2 Cattle	1987
3 Sheep, 2 Cattle[1]	1988

[1] One of the two cattle killed in 1988 was the result of a road traffic accident.

The available military statistics do not indicate the number of animals injured.

Expenditure (OECD)

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish a table of the information he has on defence expenditure in each Organisation for Economic Co-operation and development member state (a) as a percentage of gross domestic product and (b) on a per capita basis.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Department does not hold information on the defence expenditure of Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development member states which are not members of NATO. For NATO nations, the information requested is given in figure 14 of volume one of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1988" (Cm. 344-I).

Private Horses

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will take action to ensure that private horses are not supervised, groomed, exercised or looked after in Army time by military personnel.

Mr. Neubert: The arrangements for the regular management audit of posts, supplemented by written instructions, are designed to ensure that the rules concerning the proper employment of Army personnel are followed.

Written Answers to Questions

Friday 27 January 1989

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Higher Education

Ms. Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many 18-year-old students have progressed into higher education in each of the last three academic years, giving figures in numerical and percentage terms and for each standard planning region.

Mr. Jackson: The information is not readily available in the form requested. The figures in the tables relate to all school leavers who intended to proceed to first degree study or teacher training.

Table 1
Numbers of school leavers intending to proceed to first degree study or teacher training

Thousands

	Academic years
	1984-85	1985-86	1986-87
North	3·6	3·4	3·5
Yorkshire and Humberside	6·1	5·9	5·8
North West	8·3	8·4	8·6
East Midlands	4·7	4·3	4·6
West Midlands	6·3	6·4	6·2
East Anglia	1·8	1·9	1·8
Greater London	6·8	6·9	5·8
Other South East	15·1	13·9	14·0
South West	5·2	5·3	5·1
England	57·7	56·3	55·4

Table 2
Numbers of school leavers intending to proceed to first degree study or teacher training as a percentage of all school leavers

Percentages

	Academic years
	1984-85	1985-86	1986-87
North	7·1	7·1	7·2
Yorkshire and Humberside	7·6	7·3	7·3
North West	7·9	8·1	8·3
East Midlands	7·3	7·0	7·5
West Midlands	7·2	7·4	7·2
East Anglia	6·1	6·5	6·3
Greater London	7·5	7·9	7·0
Other South East	9·4	8·9	8·9
South West	7·5	8·0	7·5
England	7·8	7·8	7·7

Ms Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many fifth-form pupils have moved into full-time further education, in each of the last three academic years giving the figures in numerical and percentage terms and for each standard planning region.

Mr. Jackson: The information is not available in the form requested. The figures in the tables relate to school leavers, irrespective of their year-group, who intended to proceed to a course of further or higher education.

Table 1
Numbers of school leavers intending to proceed to a course of further or higher education

Thousands

	Academic years
	1984-85	1985-86	1986-87
North	10·9	10·3	11·2
Yorks and Humberside	18·8	18·9	18·5
North West	29·7	29·7	31·0
East Midlands	16·8	16·7	17·2
West Midlands	24·3	24·5	24·4
East Anglia	8·3	8·0	8·1
Greater London	25·8	26·6	25·6
Other South East	51·2	49·6	50·1
South West	22·9	23·3	23·0
England	208·7	207·5	209·1

Table 2
Numbers of school leavers intending to proceed to a course of further or higher education as a percentage of all school leavers

Percentages

	1984-85	1985-86	1986-87
North	21·7	21·4	23·1
Yorks and Humberside	23·4	23·7	23·3
North West	28·3	28·5	29·8
East Midlands	26·2	27·3	27·9
West Midlands	27·9	28·3	28·4
East Anglia	28·2	27·5	28·0
Greater London	28·4	30·6	30·7
Other South East	31·9	31·8	32·0
South West	33·4	35·0	34·1
England	28·3	28·9	29·2

Teachers

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what has been done to rectify the shortcomings outlined by the interim advisory committee on teachers' pay and conditions of (a) statistical information on teachers numbers, (b) the numbers required in particular sectors, (c) areas of specialism and (d) teaching group sizes.

Mrs. Rumbold: On the provision of statistical information, the Department has commissioned the management consultants Logica to carry out a study of information requirements relating to teachers. My Department's evidence to the Education, Science and Arts Committee sets out tentative projections of future teacher demand by sector and specialism. It is for local education authorities and schools to decide on appropriate group sizes.

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if the elements on which the desired numbers in service are calculated, which is quoted in annex E(V) of his Department's evidence presented to the Select Committee on Education, Science and Arts are the subject of any discussions with representatives of teaching unions.

Mrs. Rumbold: No.

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what plans there are to provide guidance to local education authorities on class sizes and maximum class contact time for both primary and secondary teachers.

Mrs. Rumbold: None. These are matters for decision by schools and local education authorities themselves.

Departmental Staff (Child Care)

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what child care provision his Department provides for pre-school age children of his Department's employees; what child care provision, for school holiday or after school care, is provided for employees' children aged five years and over; and what plans there are for increasing provision in the next five years; and how these are to be funded.

Mrs. Rumbold: My Department has no child care provision for pre-school age children belonging to its employees or after school care provision for children aged five years and over. The Westminster holiday play scheme, supported by this and other Departments, is available during each of the school holiday periods to employees' children aged between five and 12.

The provision of creche facilities is currently under consideration in both the central London and Darlington offices. In London a questionnaire has been sent to all members of staff and the replies are being analysed. In Darlington similar demand investigations are taking place. If there is evidence that crèche facilities would be used, they would be established on the basis that after the initial setting-up costs they should be generally self-financing.

Inspectors' Annual Report

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he intends to publish the 1988 annual report by Her Majesty's inspectors on LEA provision for education and the quality of response in schools and colleges in England, 1987.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The report is to be an annual report on the education service in England from the senior chief inspector to me, based on a full year's work by HMI. The extent to which it deals with LEA provision is for the SCI to determine, on the basis of HMI findings. I understand that the report is being prepared and that it is well on the way to completion. I should, therefore, receive it from the SCI in the very near future and, when I do so, I will publish it.

TRANSPORT

Ferries (Safety)

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Pembroke on 17 January, what action is taken by his Department to ensure that masters of ferries between Ireland and Great Britain do not permit the maximum number of passengers allowed for any voyage to be exceeded.

Mr. Portillo: For passenger ferries on routes between Great Britain and both Northern Ireland and the Irish Republic there is a statutory duty on owners to operate a boarding card system. The purpose of the cards is to ensure that the master has an accurate count of the total number of passengers on board for any voyage, and above all that the number does not exceed that on the passenger ship certificate. The operation of these arrangements is regularly checked on the spot by the Department's marine surveyors. It is an offence to breach the requirements of the boarding card regulations.

Severn Bridge

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement concerning the accidents on and near the Severn bridge on 9 January and 18 January.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The prime reason for all the accidents on 18 January was that drivers were travelling too fast and too close to the vehicle in front, while paying scant regard to either the weather conditions (thick fog in the Severn valley with visibility down to 10 m) or the 30 mph advisory speed limit.

The accidents clearly demonstrate the need for better driver behaviour in such conditions.

On 19 January a car went through an emergency crossing point in the central reserve into the path of an oncoming heavy goods vehicle. The car driver was killed.

There was severe congestion on the M4 on both ways. The motorway was closed between Almondsbury and Newhouse for several hours on 18 January.

Malaysia and Singapore Air Carriers

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what steps he is taking to ensure that the Singapore and Malaysian Governments give fair treatment to British air carriers;

(2) what steps he has taken to ensure that British air carriers do not face unfair competition from Malaysian and Singapore national air carriers;

(3) when his Department last received a request from Singapore Airlines or Malaysian Airline System for greater access to British airports.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Requests from Singapore Airlines to operate additional frequencies to the United Kingdom were last discussed between United Kingdom and Singapore civil aviation officials at air services consultations held in London earlier this month. These consultations are expected to resume in March. Similar requests have been received from Malaysian Airline System in recent months and these requests are the subject of discussions between the airlines.

In the current discussions with Singapore, and at such time as the Malaysian requests may be the subject of consultations at the Government level, I hope that it will be possible to agree on a broadly balanced expansion of the opportunities for the provision of air services by all the airlines concerned.

Seat Belts

Mr. Onslow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to ensure that the European Community directives on seat belts and seat belt anchorages make provision for seat belts in minibuses; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: We have already secured amendment of the relevant directives to require seat belt fitment on all front seats and those not directly behind another seat. Our regulations implementing this apply to all minibuses and coaches registered on or after 1 October 1988.

We are negotiating to extend the European Community directives to all other seats in minibuses and coaches with a view to this being adopted by 1992.

We strongly advise anyone buying a new minibus to specify fitment of good easy-to-use seat belts.

Dartford Tunnel

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the total amount collected since the new method of coin collection was introduced for the Dartford tunnel.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: There has been no recent changes in the method of collecting tolls at the Dartford tunnel. Toll income for the financial year 1987-88 was £21·133 million.

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of the amount collected at the Dartford tunnel is attributed to administrative costs; and what are the comparable figures for other collection arrangements.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The annual accounts for the Dartford tunnel for the financial year 1987-88 show that toll collection costs were £1·073 million (5·1 per cent. of toll income). Comparable figures for other collection arrangements are not available.

Channel Tunnel (London Terminal)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the implications for the central London rail study of a decision to locate the second London terminal for the Channel tunnel in (a) Stratford and (b) King's Cross.

Mr. Portillo [holding answer 16 January 1989]: The study team has taken account in its work of major developments in London, including those associated with the Channel tunnel. British Rail has also considered the possible effect of the east-west crossrail proposal on the choice between King's Cross and Stratford.

Further work will be done in the detailed studies of the options that my right hon. Friend announced on 26 January.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Judicial Appointments

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Attorney-General what steps are being taken by the Lord Chancellor to remedy the imbalance between the number of men and women appointed to judicial offices as disclosed in his answer to the hon. Member for Norwood, Official Report 22 December, columns 418-19.

The Attorney-General: The Lord Chancellor would like to appoint more women to judicial office and intends to do so as the opportunity offers. However, since his overriding policy is to appoint the best candidate to all available posts, the proportion of women judges will reflect broadly the proportion of women in the legal profession in the relevant age groups. Many more women have joined the legal profession in recent years, and, as they progress, the proportion of women judges is likely to increase.

Women Barristers

Ms. Harman: To ask the Attorney-General if he will estimate what percentage of women who have qualified as barristers have remained in the profession for more than four years in each of the years between 1978 and 1984.

The Attorney-General: I understand from the general council of the Bar that this information is not available.

Ms. Harman: To ask the Attorney-General if he will estimate what percentage of those qualifying as barristers in each of the years 1978 to 1988 were women.

The Attorney-General: I understand from the general council of the Bar that the percentage of those qualifying as barristers in each of the years 1978 to 1988 who were women is as follows:

	per cent.
1977-78	24
1978-79	23
1979-80	28
1980-81	27
1981-82	31
1982-83	30
1983-84	32
1984-85	30
1985-86	32
1986-87	37
1987-88	37

Women Solicitors

Ms. Harman: To ask the Attorney-General if he will estimate what percentage of women who have qualified as solicitors have remained in the profession for more than four years in each of the years 1978 to 1984.

The Attorney-General: I regret that I am unable to provide the information that is requested. However, I understand from the Law Society that a career structure survey conducted in 1987 indicated that 56 per cent. of those women who qualified as solicitors in 1977 remained in the profession full-time; 75 per cent. of women who qualified as solicitors in 1982 remained in the profession full-time.

Ms. Harman: To ask the Attorney-General if he will estimate what percentage of those qualifying as solicitors in each of the years 1978 to 1988 were women.

The Attorney-General: I understand from the Law Society that the percentage of those qualifying as solicitors in each of the years 1978 to 1988 who were women is as follows:

	per cent.
1978	26
1979	27
1980	29
1981	31
1982	35
1983	37
1984	39
1985	41
1986	44
1987	45
1988	45

Crown Prosecution Service

Mr. Curry: To ask the Attorney-General whether any changes will be made to the Crown Prosecution Service's cash limit and running costs limit for the year 1988-89.

The Attorney-General: Yes. The cash limit on class XI vote 10 (The Crown Prosecution Service: administration) will be reduced by £18,373,000 from £111,873,000 to £93,500,000 and the running costs limit by £16,982,000 from £107,873,000 to £90,891,000. This is mainly due to a shortfall in the recruitment of staff.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Export Promotion Levy

Mr. Steel: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the future of the export promotion levy, following representations from the woollen industry.

Mr. Alan Clark: I refer to the answer given to the hon. Member for Bradford, West (Mr. Madden) on 8 December 1988 at columns 262-63. I am still receiving representations about the future of the wool textile industry (export promotion) levy under the consultation process which is due to end on 31 January. I shall ensure that all views received will be taken carefully into account before a decision is taken on the future of this statutory levy.

Remote Sensing Systems

Mr. Warren: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what steps he is taking to further the understanding of Her Majesty's Government of the value of space-based remote sensing systems.

Mr. Atkins: There is growing awareness within the United Kingdom (and within other European Governments) of the potential value, for a variety of public uses, of satellite-derived data. The Government are supporting the creation of the earth observation data centre at Farnborough which will play a significant role in processing such data for subsequent use in commercial and public sector applications.

Car Mileage Meters

Mr. Cox: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what has been the number of prosecutions in each of the last three years for selling cars on which the car mileage meter has been altered.

Mr. Forth: The number of prosecutions under the Trade Descriptions Act 1968 for offences involving the alteration of car odometers, as notified to the Office of Fair Trading, are as follows:

Year	Number of prosecutions
1986	369
1987	401
1988	431

Departmental Staff (Child Care)

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what child care provision his Department provides for pre-school age children of the Department's employees: what child care provision, for school holiday or after-school care, is provided for employees' children aged five years and over; and what plans there are for increasing provision in the next five years; and how these are to be funded.

Mr. Forth: The Department of Trade and Industry is considering arrangements for workplace child care for pre-school age children.

With other Departments, DTI is contributing pump-priming funds to a pilot play scheme in London for employees' children aged five to 12 years. Future provision will depend on the outcome of the London pilot scheme and on the other discussions. The expectation is that play schemes for children aged over five should become self-financing; nursery schemes might need a continuing subsidy from departmental funds.

Renault

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the French Government's overriding of the European Commission's objections to the subsidies being given to Renault.

Mr. Atkins: The Commission is examining the issue and we shall be watching developments closely.

National Engineering Laboratory (East Kilbride)

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he has received a bid from the institute of technology, Cranfield, for the national engineering laboratory at East Kilbride.

Mr. Forth: A bid for the laboratory was submitted by Cranfield institute of technology to the Department on 21 July 1988.

Security Interests

Mr. Mans: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if his Department has received the report on security interests in property other than land commissioned from Professor Al Diamond in December 1985.

Mr. Maude: Yes. The report is published today by Her Majesty's Stationery Office. I would like to record my Department's thanks for Professor Diamond's work.

The terms of reference given to Professor Diamond were:

(a) to examine the need to reform the law relating to mortgages and other interests in property other than land, including those arising from hire-purchase and sale with retention of title and in Scotland securities over moveables;

(b) to consider the case for a single scheme of registration for such interests and in particular to consider the position of the registration of charges created by companies in the context of such a scheme.

(c) to make recommendations as to the nature of any reforms required and as to how work in this area might best be carried forward.

The report covers two separate issues. In parts I and II, it proposes a radical revision of the current law affecting security interests. The recommendations are numerous and cover complex issues where change would have significant implications for the raising of business finance. They need careful consideration in the light of views from those in business whose interests would be affected. I am therefore inviting comments on the proposals detailed in part II of the report by 1 September 1989.

Part III of the report looks at the current system of registration of company charges and proposes a number of changes. Professor Diamond was able to make his proposals in this area available to my Department on an interim basis. The proposal in the Companies Bill relating to the registration of company charges reflect a number of his recommendations.

Copies of the report have been made available in both Houses.

North Peckham Task Force

Ms. Harman: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will state the total Government expenditure required to secure the 4,000 jobs he specified in his answer to the hon. Member for Lancashire, West (Mr. Hind) 26 October, Official Report, column 289-90 and the basis upon which the figures given were calculated; and how many of the jobs were in the north Peckham task force area.

Mr. Forth [holding answer 26 January 1989]: The information referred to was produced by consultants from a survey aggregating all task force expenditure and outputs. The breakdown requested is not available except at disproportionate cost.

Ministerial Advisers

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the ministerial advisers appointed in his Department for each year since 1979, the salary each person received, whether paid directly or to another employer, and the duties undertaken, whether solely in his Department or in conjunction with other Departments; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth [pursuant to his reply, 16 January 1989, c. 16]: I am now able to reply to the hon. Member's question about the appointment of ministerial advisers to the Department of Trade and Industry since 1979.

	Period of appointment	Type of employment	Duty undertaken
D. I. Young (now Lord Young)	19 May 1980 to 14 April 1982	Part-time unpaid	Special Adviser
J. Sterling (now Sir Jeffrey Sterling)	7 April 1982 to date	Part-time unpaid	Special Adviser
S. Sherbourne	5 July 1982 to 15 May 1983	Full-time	Political Adviser
M. D. X. Portillo	1 July 1983 to 14 October 1983	Full-time	Political Adviser
M. J. Dobbs	28 October 1983 to 3 September 1985	Part-time secondee	Political Adviser
J. F. L. Whittingdale	15 October 1984 to 20 May 1987	Full-time	Political Adviser
H. James	15 June 1987 to 25 September 1987	Full-time secondee	Political Adviser
J. H. Hill	15 June 1987 to 26 July 1988	Full-time	Political Adviser
P. J. Luff	28 September 1987 to date	Full-time secondee	Political Adviser
C. Hendry	1 September 1988 to date	Full-time	Political Adviser

It is not appropriate to reveal the salaries of individual advisers as they are negotiated in relation to previous outside earnings and conditions and are therefore confidential. Duties are individually defined to provide support for DTI Ministers to carry out their policies.

Uruguay Round

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will ask the EEC Council to discuss the Cairns group proposals for agriculture in the Uruguay round negotiations; and if he will list the main differences between these proposals and those put forward by the EEC.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I have been asked to reply.

In preparation for and during the mid-term meeting of the Uruguay round in December, the Council discussed agriculture at length, taking account of all negotiating proposals, including those of the Cairns group. Both the EC and Cairns group proposals include long and short-term measures. For the long term, the Cairns group has proposed the elimination of trade-distorting policies. For the short term, it has proposed a freeze on, followed by reductions in, overall agricultural support and protection, with specific action on administered support prices, export subsidies and import barriers. The EC has proposed for the long term a significant reduction in (but not elimination of) overall support and protection. For the short term it proposes a freeze and reductions, expressed in terms of an aggregate measure of support and protection, leaving Governments free to choose their own combination of policies to achieve an agreed reduction in aggregate support.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Cash Limits

Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the cash limits for Northern Ireland departmental services and for the Northern Ireland Office for 1988-89.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The cash limit for Northern Ireland departmental services (NIDI) is being increased by £19·6 million for £2,479·3 million to £2,498·9 million. This incorporates the increases to provision announced previously (totalling £29·1 million) in respect of the 1988 Health Service pay review body awards. The cash limit increase is partly offset by savings elsewhere of £9·5 million. This increase will be charged to the reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the 1988-89, cash limit for the Northern Ireland office—class XVIII, vote I—will be increased by £2,969,000 from £579,199,000 to £582,168,000 to cover increased requirements for expenditure on law, order, protective and miscellaneous services. Major components of the net increase are an additional provision of £3 million for the RUC, and an increased requirement to cover criminal damage and criminal injury compensation claims. These increases are partly offset by the NIO and Northern Ireland departmental expenditures, and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

The net effect of these changes on the NI public expenditure total (including NIDI, NIO and non cash limited NI departmental services) is an increase from the reserve of £29·1 million.

DEFENCE

Territorial Army

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what checks are made upon those who subsequently join fascist organisations after enlistment to the Territorial Army; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neubert: Whilst not wishing to generalise, any case of a volunteer admitting to membership (or being revealed as a member) of a fascist organisation would need to be investigated on its individual merits. I can assure the hon. Member that any such investigation would be carried out in the most thorough manner possible. Should it eventually be decided that the volunteer in question may continue in service, his, or her, performance will be subjected to the strictest scrutiny and supervision.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how frequently medical examinations are carried out on all Territorial Army members with access to weapons; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neubert: In addition to undergoing pre-enlistment medical examinations, all members of the Territorial Army are subjected to further examinations within eight weeks of the following birthdays: 30, 35, 40, 43, 46, 48 and 50. Those volunteers continuing in service beyond age 50 must undergo annual checks.

Armed Forces (Liability Exemption)

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what is his policy with regard to immunity exemption from liability in respect of any injury suffered by a member of the armed forces while on duty or on land or premises being used for the purposes of the Crown;

(2) when he last made use of powers given to him by section 10 of the Crown Proceedings Act 1947.

Mr. Neubert: Since the repeal of section 10 of the Crown Proceedings Act 1947 on 15 May 1987, it has been open to a member of the armed forces or his-her dependants to pursue a claim for damages in respect of injury, illness or death arising from incidents on or after 15 May 1987 which are believed to have been caused by the negligence of other members of the armed forces whilst on duty, or of the Ministry of Defence or the Crown. Claims in respect of death, injury or illness suffered before 15 May 1987 remain barred by section 10 and the Secretary of State has no discretion to waive these provisions. Exceptionally, however, valid claims arising in respect of incidents between the date of announcement on 8 December 1986 of the intention to repeal section 10 and the actual date of repeal, are considered on an ex-gratia basis.

Low Flying

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if pilots of jet aircraft, other than Royal Air Force Jaguars, using the United Kingdom low flying system, are required to report to their commanding officers any use of reheat at heights below 1,000 ft;

(2) if he will list the number of reported occasions on which military jet aircraft have used reheat in the United Kingdom low flying system at heights less than recommended in the United Kingdom military low flying handbook;

(3) if pilots of Royal Air Force Jaguars using the United Kingdom low flying system are required to report to their commanding officers any use of reheat at heights below 500 ft.

Mr. Neubert [holding answer 23 January 1989]: It is standard procedure for aircrew to debrief, normally to their authorising officer, on all aspects of a training sortie in order to confirm that the requirements of a sortie have been met. The debrief provides the opportunity for the aircrew to report any difficulties encountered during the sortie. Central records of occasions on which military jet aircraft have used reheat in the United Kingdom low flying system are not held.

Low-flying Aircraft (Air Traffic Zones)

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the conditions under which low-flying military aircraft may penetrate military air traffic zones during low-level training sorties.

Mr. Neubert [holding answer 16 December 1988]: Low flying military aircraft are permitted to penetrate a military air traffic zone only with clearance from the controlling authority.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Firearms

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications by (a) established registered firearms dealers and (b) the holders of section one firearms' certificates have been refunded since 1 August 1987 to 31 December 1988 or to the latest available date; and how many in each of the categories were granted.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The latest information is published in tables 5 and 1 of Home Office statistical bulletin 33/88 "Statistics on the operation of the Firearms Act 1968, England and Wales 1987", a copy of which is in the Library.

Rule 43

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners were held under rule 43 on the last date for which figures are available; and what change has there been in numbers since the introductions of fresh start.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Fresh start was implemented at most prison service establishments during the second half of 1987. On 30 June 1988 (the latest date for which figures are readily available) 2,011 adult male prisoners were segregated under prison rule 43 for their own protection. The number so segregated on 31 December 1987 was 1,814.

Football Hooligans

Mr. Adley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent discussions he has had with chief constables about football hooligans; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Home Office is in regular contact with the Association of Chief Police Officers about this matter. The association was represented on the Minister for Sport's working party and will continue to be involved in discussions on the implementation of the Football Spectators Bill.

Football Clubs (Membership Scheme)

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if his Department will maintain, or have access to, lists of football supporters after the introduction of the proposed identity card scheme.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The details of the national football membership scheme will be drawn up by the proposed football membership authority, which will be responsible for holding membership records. I do not envisage any need for my Department to have access or to replicate these records.

Police Surgeons

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will order an inquiry into delays in the attendance of general practitioners employed as part-time police surgeons attending to victims of rape and violent crime.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: No. Police surgeons are appointed by police authorities and it is for each police authority and chief constable to ensure that suitable arrangements are made to secure the necessary coverage by police surgeons within the force area. If the hon. Member has a particular problem in mind, he should in the first instance take it up with the chief constable.

Prison Kitchens

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the answer to the right hon. Member for Stoke-on-Trent, South, Official Report, 15 November 1988, column 551, how his Department monitors the standard of prison kitchen inspections; whose advice is sought on whether or not they are at a standard equivalent to those carried out by local authority environmental health officers; who carries out the inspections of prison kitchens; what are their qualifications, experience and expertise in food hygiene; how frequent are inspections; in what circumstances the advice of local authority officers is sought; how often advice has been sought; and in how many cases it was to take preventive action rather than to cope with a food poisoning or other problem.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Home Office health and safety officers and supply and transport branch headquarters catering managers carry out formal hygiene inspections of prison catering facilities. Each establishment receives at least an annual inspection by one of these officers. Some are inspected more regularly. All the inspecting officers have received appropriate training and hold the diploma in food hygiene of the Royal Institute of Public Health and Hygiene. All the inspecting catering managers have extensive knowledge and experience of the food hygiene problems associated with large-scale catering operations. The health and safety officers are specialist full-time personnel who have wide-ranging background training and experience in health and safety matters. Inspections are carried out to a predetermined format which ensures that all aspects of hygiene are checked and assessed.

A number of random validation inspections are carried out by an environmental health officer from the Department of Health. These inspections assist in monitoring the efficacy of the main inspection arrangements. Local authority environmental health officers are called in to provide assistance and expertise in tracing the source of an outbreak of food poisoning. This recognises the need for additional special skills and experience under these circumstances. Prison medical officers are also authorised to seek their advice when it is considered to be appropriate.

More generally, guidance has recently been issued to governors and medical officers encouraging them to establish a working relationship with local authority environmental health officers. This may include visits to prisons in an informal advisory capacity. Records of the number of visits by local authority officers to prisons, and the purposes of those visits, are not held centrally.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the answer to the right hon. Member for Stoke-on-Trent, South, Official Report, 15 November 1988, column 551, what progress has been made regarding an improvement in the standards of the 13 of the 21 prison kitchens inspected by the Institution of Environmental Health Officers which had standards of hygiene so low as to warrant prosecution were it not for Crown immunity.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: A further exchange of letters has taken place between the prison department and the Institution of Environmental Health Officers. Relevant background details of the institution's survey have not yet been released to the prison department. A considered response to the institution's survey will be made as soon as relevant background material is made available.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether food prepared in the normal prison kitchen is served in prison hospitals.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Yes.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the current budget for maintaining and improving hygiene in prison kitchens; and what has been the budget in each of the last five years.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The cost of maintaining and improving hygiene in prison kitchens is subsumed within the total running costs of the prison service. It is not practicable to extract information on the level of funding dedicated specifically to hygiene in prison kitchens.

Mr. Raoul Wallenberg

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish in the Official Report the letter and enclosure of 7 November 1988, sent by the hon. Member for Basildon to his Department regarding Mr. Raoul Wallenberg; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: I have placed a copy of the letter and enclosure by Professor Elie Wiesel in the Library, with a copy of my reply to which I have nothing to add.

Food Poisoning (Prisons)

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many outbreaks of food poisoning in prisons have there been in each of the last five years for which figures are available.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Six confirmed outbreaks of salmonella food poisoning have been reported and investigated since 1984. There have been no known cases of other outbreaks of food poisoning.

Prison Hospitals

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners are currently in prison hospitals; what proportion this is of the prison population; and how many suffer from (a) AIDS, (b) tuberculosis and (c) other serious long-term illnesses.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The number of prisoners in hospital is not known centrally. In the year ended 31 March 1988 the average daily number of patients in prison hospitals was 1,923 representing 3·9 per cent. of the average population for that year. The available information about the incidence of physical diseases of special interest in that yar is contained in appendix 5 to the report on the work of the prison service April 1987—March 1988 (Cm. 516). The only current figures available centrally relate to cases of HIV infection including AIDS. On 26 January 1989 the number of reported HIV antibody positive prisoners was 58. There was no reported case of AIDS.

Prisons (Safety and Hygiene)

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information is required by his Department from prison governors regarding safety and hygiene in prisons.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Prison governors must provide a health and safety policy statement covering the entire establishment. This statement will be reviewed annually. Governors are also required to report the completion of an annual safety audit.

In addition, action plans must be submitted in response to recommendations made following hygiene inspections of catering facilities and full health and safety inspections.

Medical officers are required to submit six-monthly reports on health and hygiene standards throughout their establishment.

Wormwood Scrubs

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will make it his policy to commend the relevant staff of Wormwood Scrubs prison on their decision to invite the environmental health officer to inspect the prison hospital and on the decision to close it pending improvement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The decision to close a temporary in-patient facility at the prison was taken by the principal medical officer on 12 January, following environmental deterioration caused by defective sanitary installations in adjacent areas of the building. An environmental health officer visited the prison later that day at the request of the principal medical officer to see and advise on conditions in the affected accommodation. Both the closure action and the subsequent decision to seek the environmental health officer's advice are fully supported by the director of prison medical services. I gladly endorse his commendation of the principal medical officer for her prompt response to a situation which in her professional judgment had become unacceptable.

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will make funds available to ensure Wormwood Scrubs prison hospital is brought up to the standard necessary to reopen it.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Repairs have already been made to enable the hospital to reopen for out-patient use and contracts previously let for refurbishment at the prison incorporate upgrading of the hospital. The proposed longer-term redevelopment of Wormwood Scrubs includes the construction of a new hospital.

Health Officers (Prisons)

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will advise all prison governors to invite an environmental health officer to inspect their premises.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Advice has recently been issued to all prison governors and medical officers encouraging them to liaise with local authority environmental health officers. The liaison may include informal visits to prisons by environmental health officers.

HIV

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consideration has been given to making it a criminal offence for a person who knows that they are HIV positive to act in such a way that makes it possible that they will infect another.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given yesterday to my hon. Friend the Member for Warrington, South (Mr. Butler).

Terrorist Organisations

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many citizens of other countries have each year since 1979 been denied entry into the United Kingdom or deported from the United Kingdom because of their suspected connection with terrorist organisations of other countries;

(2) if he will name those citizens of other countries who have been denied entry into the United Kingdom or deported from the United Kingdom because of their suspected connection with terrorist organisations of other countries.

Mr. Renton: The available information refers to the total number of exclusions under section 13(5) of the Immigration Act 1971 and to deportations under section 15(3) of the Act.

	Exclusion	Deportation
1979-83	n/a	Nil
1984	27	21
1985	40	17
1986	47	25
1987	14	5
1988	27	1

It is not our practice to give names of persons against whom action is taken under the Immigration Act or in matters of a security nature, although we are ready to confirm details of decisions which are already in the public domain.

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his policy towards members of terrorists organisations or self-proclaimed liberation movements meeting and conspiring in the United Kingdom to further their objectives in their own countries.

Mr. Hurd: Any person legitimately in this country may engage in activities which are within the law. If there was clear evidence of a crime having been committed here by such a person either in the form of a substantive offence or a conspiracy to commit an offence elsewhere which gave rise to an offence under United Kingdom law, it would be a matter for the police to take action.

In addition and when appropriate I would not hesitate to use my powers under the Immigration Act to exclude or deport from this country such a person whose presence here was considered to be not conducive to the public good.

Terrorism

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what definition of terrorism he uses in formulating his policy in response to terrorism;

(2) what definition of the term international terrorism he uses in formulating his policy in response to terrorism.

Mr. Hurd: There is no internationally agreed definition of terrorism. For practical purposes we rest on the definition in the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1984 and in the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Bill currently before the House.

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list those countries with which the United Kingdom has signed a formal agreement with regard to combating terrorism;

(2) if he will list those countries with which the United Kingdom has come to an informal understanding with regard to combating terrorism;

(3) if he will make a statement on the measures taken by the Government since 1979 to combat international terrorism; and what assessment he has made of the success of these measures;

(4) what further measures he proposes to take to combat international terrorism.

Mr. Hurd: We are totally committed to the fight against terrorism and to the need for international co-operation to prevent and combat it. We have taken, and will continue to take, an active role in the relevant international bodies, such as Trevi, to secure a common, firm policy about international terrorism and practical measures to deter and defeat the terrorist.

The first aim of Governments must be to prevent acts of terrorism; if prevention fails, the aim must be to resolve incidents with the minimum loss of life and to bring terrorists to justice. Underlying this policy is the fundamental principle that there should be no substantive concessions to terrorists demands.

We will continue to pursue this policy vigorously in multilateral fora and in our bilateral links with our Community partners and with other like-minded third countries who share our resolve and commitment on this topic. In addition to multilateral agreements and co-operation, some countries like to have more formalised bilateral agreements to give additional political impetus to co-operation on the topic. I have signed such agreements with Morocco, Egypt and Italy.

Vigilantes (Underground)

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has had any discussions with the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis on the independent establishment of vigilante groups on the London Underground; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: No. Policing the London Underground is the responsibility of the British Transport police. About 80 police officers from the Metropolitan and City of London police forces are to be loaned to the British Transport police L Division for the next 12 months. If the Guardian Angels or any other group act unlawfully or engage in conduct likely to provoke a breach of the peace, they cannot expect to be exempt from the ordinary processes of the law. But these would be operational issues for the police to consider.

Emergency 88 Conference

Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the Institute of Civil Defence Emergency 88 conference held in London last November; and whether some financial support will be given towards the cost of this initiative.

Mr. John Patten: "Emergency 88" was a privately organised occasion, and it was made clear at the outset that support from official funds would not be available. That remains the position, but officials will continue to offer the organisers advice on how they might meet their costs.

Cash Limits

Mr. Sims: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he intends to make any changes to the 1988-89 cash limits within his responsibilities and to his Department's running costs limit.

Mr. Hurd: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the cash limit on class

XI, vote 2, prisons, England and Wales, will be increased by £109,100,000 from £801,578,000 to £910,678,000. This increase will be charged to the reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

The additional provision is necessary because of the rise in the prison population. The elements of the extra costs are the emergency package of measures which I announced in March last, the costs of additional prison staff recruited for extra accommodation coming into use in 1988-89, and the cost, in the meantime, of accommodating prisoners in police cells.

The Home Office running cost limit will be increased by £21,296,000 from £807,799,000 to £829,095,000. This takes account of changes in provision on both class I, votes 2 and 3. The running cost provision in class XI, vote 2 will be increased by £23,300,000 from £594,658,000 to £617,958,000 which takes account of the surrender of £433,000 as a consequence of the overspend of the running cost limit for 1987-88. The running cost provision on class XI vote 3, central administration, miscellaneous and community services and civil defence, England and Wales will be reduced by:

(a) £2,000,000 to offset partly the increase on class XI, vote 2.

(b) £4,000 to reflect the Home Office's share of the costs of the recruitment under the direct entry Grade 7 competition for 1988 which will result in a corresponding increase in the running cost limit for the office of the Minister of the Civil Service, class XX, vote 1, from £213,141,000 to £211,137,000.

On class XI, vote 3 on which token provision of £1,000 is being sought, there will be an overall reduction of £4,000 in the cash limit from £410,168,000 to £410,164,000 to reflect the transfer of costs for the direct entry grade 7 competition.

SCOTLAND

Health Board Chairmen

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how he proposes to respond to the representations by health board chairmen on making their remuneration more equitable compared with that of the chairmen of health authorities in England.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: My right hon. and learned Friend accepts that the remuneration of health board chairmen should be amended to reflect more adequately the extent of their responsibilities, particularly in comparison with the chairmen of health authorities in England. He has therefore decided on the following levels of remuneration for chairmen with effect from 1 April 1989.

Health Board	Remuneration
Greater Glasgow	17,709
Lothian	15,928
Grampian Tayside	14,148
Lanarkshire Argyll and Clyde	12,368
Ayrshire and Arran Fife Forth Valley Highland	10,310
Borders Dumfries and Galloway	8,243
Orkney Shetland Western Isles	5,047
Common Services Agency	9,810
State Hospital	9,494

WALES

Floods

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a table indicating the total expenditure by his Department on (a) flood prevention and (b) compensation or ex-gratia payments to persons or corporate bodies in Wales who have suffered the effects of floods.

Mr. Grist: The Department's expenditure, which is in the form of grant aid, is given in the table:

Year	Expenditure £
1978-79	1,158,266
1979-80	1,017,848
1980-81	3,099,315
1981-82	2,198,016
1982-83	2,870,039
1983-84	2,988,827
1984-85	2,109,302
1985-86	1,457,807
1986-87	833,782
1987-88	951,811

With regard to compensation or ex-gratia payments for those affected by flooding, the answer is none.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the expenditure on flood prevention work for each district council area in Wales in each year since 1975.

Mr. Grist: The information requested is not held centrally.

Hospital and Community Health

Mr. Raffan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he has now reached decisions about the allocation of resources for hospital and community health services in Wales for 1989-90; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: I announced on 21 December that, subject to parliamentary approval, I propose to provide £953 million in 1989-90 for the hospital and community health services in Wales. However, following a further review of other programme requirements, I am now pleased to amend the figure to £954·7 million. Excluding the costs of the artificial limb and appliance service (which is administered on my behalf by the Welsh health common services authority) £880·1 million will be provided for current purposes and £69·1 million for capital spending.

For current spending this represents a net cash increase of £44 million. With the estimated saving of £16.3 million from the reduction in the rate of employers' superannuation contribution from 7·5 to 4 per cent. and £10.5 million from new cost improvement programmes and increased receipts from income generation schemes, the total increase in resources over 1988-89 is 8·6 per cent. This is on top of the additional funding which has been provided for the recurrent effect of this year's review bodies awards.

A total of £49.9 million will be available to health authorities for their discretionary use which represents a cash increase of 6·1 per cent. over this year's enhanced provision. £10.4 million will be allocated to centrally funded developments. These developments, which are as follows will considerably assist authorities in meeting future service requirements.

	£million
Regional Services and Centrally Funded Developments	2.8
Psychiatric development, joint financing with local authorities and schemes to combat the misuse of drugs	1.6
Consultant Expansion Programme	0.3
Breast and Cervical Cancer Screening	0.6
AIDS	0.4
Revenue consequences of new capital development	1.0
Developments in information technology etc.	0.8
Waiting List Initiative	0.9
Project 2000	0.4
Other	1.6
	10.4

Of the capital provision, £39 million will be made available to health authorities for their discretionary use. This amounts to an increase of almost 32 per cent. over last year's capital allocations. The balance is required for the all-Wales capital programme, details of which will be announced in due course.

Authorities will be able to retain the cash released through their cost improvement programmes and from income-generation schemes, and they will be able to retain the income raised from charges for private treatment. Authorities will also benefit from the retention of receipts from the sale of surplus land and buildings and this is expected to generate a further £3·9 million in 1989-90. In total, I will expect Welsh authorities to achieve additional savings, income and receipts amounting to at least 1·3 per cent. of their recurrent revenue allocations.

The current and capital allocations to individual authorities will be as shown in the table. These allocations do not take into account further sums which will be made available following decisions to be made on centrally funded developments for the coming year. The capital allocations to health authorities are additional to the sums which I announced on 21 December as being available under my programme for the valleys initiative.

Allocation (£ million)

	Current element	Capital element
Clwyd	107·130	6·915
East Dyfed	67·871	1·967
Pembrokeshire	25·454	1·963
Gwent	127·392	7·308
Gwynedd	64·002	[1]1·741
Mid Glamorgan	149·704	7·168
Powys	30·527	1·589
South Glamorgan	172·722	3·572
West Glamorgan	110·212	6·732

[1] In addition Gwynedd health authority will receive a further sum of around £1 million (to be funded from the repayment of brokerage loans entered into by authorities in 1988-89) in recognition of the effect of the Ysbyty Gwynedd litigation settlement upon capital formula calculations. The precise amount will be determined in due course following discussions with the authority.

These current and capital allocations provide for real increase in spending by health authorities after taking account of the level of inflation forecast by the Chancellor of the Exchequer in his Autumn Statement. They more than fulfil the resource planning assumptions which were issued to authorities last year.

The current allocations, as in previous years, have been weighted in favour of those authorities which are shown by the latest revenue formula assessment to be furthest below their target shares of available revenue resources (which are based on the catchment populations for the services which they provide). As a result, eight of the nine district health authorities in Wales will be brought to within plus or minus 1 per cent. of their formula targets; and the range of difference between the best and least well provided authorities will be reduced to less than 4 per cent. by comparison with over 13 per cent. only three years ago. This demonstrates the progress which the Government have made in recent years in achieving greater equality of revenue provision between health authorities in Wales.

The capital allocations have been determined in accordance with the first revise of the original capital formula assessment which includes an allowance for the progressive equalisation of capital stock between authorities. Copies of the revenue and capital formula assessments which have been used in determining these allocations will be placed in the Library of the House. Both formulae are currently under review by the joint Welsh Office/NHS resources allocation working group; and I look forward to receiving the working group's report, together with health authorities' comments on the group's recommendation during the course of the next few months.

Welsh Language Teaching

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will list by local education authority and parliamentary constituency, the number and percentage of (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in Wales which currently provide Welsh tuition for some of their pupils;

(2) if he will list by local education authority and parliamentary constituency, the number and percentage of (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in Wales which currently provide Welsh tuition for all their pupils.

Mr. Wyn Roberts [holding answer 20 January 1989]: The information for each local education authority as at September 1987 is as follows:

The number and percentage of schools providing Welsh tuition

	Primary				Secondary
	All pupils		Some pupils		All pupils[1]		Some pupils
	Number	Percentage	Number	Percentage	Number	Percentage	Number	Percentage
Clwyd	181	71·8	70	27·8	4	12·1	29	87·9
Dyfed	262	81·1	31	9·6	10	30·3	21	63·6
Gwent	—	—	6	2·6	—	—	10	30·3
Gwynedd	197	99·5	—	—	21	87·5	3	12·5
Mid Glamorgan	194	62·2	104	33·3	3	7·1	37	88·1
Powys	72	63·2	39	34·2	1	7·7	12	92·3
South Glamorgan	34	21·9	64	41·3	1	3·6	26	92·9
West Glamorgan	77	45·8	80	47·6	3	11·1	24	88·9

[1] Based on forms i-v only.

The information by parliamentary constituency could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in each Welsh local education authority provided Welsh tuition for (a) all their pupils and (b) some of their pupils in 1965, 1970, 1974, 1979 and 1985, respectively.

Mr. Wyn Roberts [holding answer 20 January 1989]: Information in respect of 1965, 1970 and 1974 is not available centrally. The information in respect of 1979 and 1985 is as follows:

The percentage of schools providing Welsh tuition

Percentage

	1979				1985
	Primary		Secondary[1]		Primary		Secondary[1]
	All pupils	Some pupils	All pupils	Some pupils	All pupils	Some pupils	All pupils	Some pupils
Clwyd	87·5	12·5	14·7	82·4	88·8	10·4	6·1	87·9
Dyfed	82·3	7·3	20·0	77·1	83·9	6·1	29·4	64·7
Gwent	—	1·1	—	25·0	—	2·5	—	25·7
Gwynedd	99·0	1·0	57·1	42·9	99·0	1·0	87·5	12·5
Mid Glamorgan	61·6	28·1	4·9	90·2	72·1	19·2	7·1	88·1
Powys	46·6	35·9	—	91·7	65·0	29·1	—	92·3
South Glamorgan	30·9	36·5	3·3	86·7	21·3	40·0	3·4	86·2
West Glamorgan	40·9	31·8	3·8	92·3	46·5	33·7	11·1	88·9

[1] Based on forms i-v only.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, what estimates he has as to the number of teachers employed in each Welsh local education authority who are, (a) qualified to teach Welsh and (b) teach Welsh.

Mr. Wyn Roberts [holding answer 20 January 1989]: The information for each local education authority is as follows:

Qualifications in Welsh held by teachers[1]

	Primary Schools	[2]Secondary Schools[3]
Clwyd	484	220
Dyfed	605	258
Gwent	39	34
Gwynedd	626	331
Mid Glamorgan	N/A	246
Powys	104	60
South Glamorgan	138	113
West Glamorgan	342	170

[1] Any post A level qualification with Welsh as the main or subsidiary subject of study.
[2] As at Spring term, 1987.
[3] As at Spring term, 1984.

Secondary School teachers teaching Welsh[1]

	Numbers
Clwyd	180
Dyfed	232
Gwent	25
Gwynedd	289
Mid Glamorgan	167
Powys	71
South Glamorgan	81
West Glamorgan	117

[1] As at spring term, 1984.
Information on teachers teaching Welsh in primary schools is not available in the form requested.

National Museum of Wales

Mr. Faulds: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he will publish in the Official Report the attendance figures for 1988 reported by the National Museum of Wales, including its outstations, with the percentage change on the attendance figures for 1987.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: [pursuant to his reply, 21 December 1988, c. 294]: A total of 838,820 people visited the National Museum of Wales during 1988—19 per cent. less than in 1987—but this reflected the immense success of the dinosaur exhibition in 1987. The 1988 figures show an 18 per cent. increase on 1986.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Mortgage Interest Tax Relief

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the estimated full-year revenue effect of applying mortgage interest tax relief to the residence rather than the individual; and what is the estimated effect on the mortgage interest tax relief ceiling if the change is revenue neutral in 1988-89 and 1989-90.

Mr. Norman Lamont: For loans taken out from 1 August 1988, mortgage interest tax relief is limited to the interest on £30,000 per residence regardless of the number of borrowers. Estimates of the yield arising from this measure were given in table 4·1 of the 1988-89 Financial Statement and Budget Report. The direct revenue cost of an increase of £1,000 in the ceiling for mortgage interest relief would exceed the yield from this measure.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing by range of income estimates for 1988-89 and 1989-90 the number of tax units receiving mortgage interest tax relief, the average value per mortgagor and the total cost of the relief.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Latest estimates for 1988-89 are given in the table. These are based on projections to 1988-89 of information in the 1986-87 survey of personal incomes and the 1986 family expenditure survey and are provisional. The estimates include mortgages formerly under the option mortgage sheme which are now subsumed within MIRAS. The estimate of the cost of mortgage interest relief in 1988-89 takes account of the recently announced increases in the mortgage interest rate. It would be premature to provide estimates for 1989-90, since the cost of the relief will depend on the amounts of mortgage lending, interest rates and the 1989-90 income tax rates and bands.

Tax units[1] receiving mortgage interest relief by range of total income 1988-89

Range of total income	Numbers receiving mortgage interest relief (Thousands)	Average value of relief to mortgagor (£)	Total cost of relief (£ million)
Under £5,000	690	400	270
£ 5,000 to £10,000	1,830	510	930
£10,000 to £15,000	2,530	560	1,410
£15,000 to £20,000	1,740	590	1,020
£20,000 to £25,000	1,040	650	670
£25,000 to £30,000	480	810	390
Over £30,000	790	1,020	810
Total	9,100	600	5,500

[1] Single persons and married couples.

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many cases of multiple mortgage interest relief at source claims have been detected in each year since the inception of the scheme; and what amounts of money were involved.

Mr. Norman Lamont: It is tentatively estimated that about 500,000 single people are involved in multiple borrower mortgages. Figures on the total size of these loans are not available.

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what amounts of money on (a) a national and (b) a regional basis have been paid in mortgage interest relief at source in each of the last five years and in respect of what number of properties and persons.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the annual cost to the Treasury of mortgage interest tax relief; and if he will publish a table breaking down this figure by county and by region.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 23 January 1989]: The table shows the latest estimates of the cost of mortgage interest relief in the United Kingdom—including relief given outside the MIRAS system—and the number of tax units benefiting from this relief in each of the years 1984-85 to 1988-89. It is tentatively estimated that about 500,000 single people are involved in multiple borrower mortgages in respect of around 250,000 properties.

	Cost of mortgage interest relief (£ million)	Number of tax[1] units with mortgage interest relief (thousands)
1984-85	3,580	7,800
1985-86	4,750	8,100
1986-87	4,670	8,450
1987-88	[2]4,800	[2]8,750
1988-89	[2]5,500	[2]9,100

[1] Singles and married couples.
[2] Provisional.

Following the introduction of MIRAS in April 1983, regional information on the cost of mortgage interest relief cannot be extracted from Inland Revenue records. The regional distribution can be estimated from the family expenditure survey (FES) but, as the sample size for the FES is relatively small, it is not possible to provide robust estimates of regional trends for the period after 1982-83. Accordingly the table provides an estimate of the regional distribution of mortgage interest relief based on FES data from 1984 to 1986. Information on the distribution of relief by county is not available.

Regional share of mortgage interest relief based on FES data for 1984 to 1986

	Percentage
Northern	3·8
Yorkshire and Humberside	7·2
North West	9·3
East Midlands	6·3
West Midlands	7·8
East Anglia	3·5
Greater London	14·1
Other South East	26·6
South West	8·5
Wales	4·2
Scotland	7·4
Northern Ireland	1·3
United Kingdom	100·0

Taxation

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which categories of individuals and families are paying a higher real level of total taxation now than in 1979.

Mr. Norman Lamont: People with the same level of real income as in 1978-79 will pay a lower proportion of their income in tax than in 1978-79 at all levels of income and for all household types for which estimates can be made.

Tax Collection Costs

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the cost of administering the tax collection system in 1978-79 and 1987-88, in 1978-79 prices.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The current expenditure costs incurred by Inland Revenue and Her Majesty's Customs and Excise on administering taxes were £524 million in 1978-79 and £566 million in 1987-88 (in 1978-79 prices, deflated by the GDP deflator).

The figure for 1978-79 includes a high degree of estimation because part of the comparable expenditure was at that time borne on the votes of the PSA and the HMSO. In addition, both figures have been adjusted to exclude the estimated costs of activities which had no direct impact on the taxes collected during the two years; for example, the costs of the Inland Revenue's valuation office, except in so far as it provides valuations for tax purposes, and non-revenue work undertaken by Customs and Excise such as prevention of drugs smuggling.

Composite Tax Rate

Mr. Riddick: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of composite rate tax revenue comes from non-taxpayers who are (a) male, aged above 65 years and (b) female, aged above 60 years.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I regret that information is not available in the form requested. Provisional results of a survey carried out in respect of 1986-87 provide some information related to age. It is estimated that between 8 and 9 per cent. of the composite rate tax then accounted for by savings institutions was due in respect of interest credited to recipients of age allowance (available where claimant or spouse is over 65) who would not have been liable to tax in the absence of a composite rate system.

Tax Revenue

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the total revenue from all types of taxation in cash terms, nominal terms, and as a percentage of gross domestic product for each period of five years since 1959.

Mr. Major: The available information is as follows:

Inland Revenue receipts (current prices)

(£ billion)

Five year average	Total revenue	Income tax	Corporation tax	Capital gains tax	Capital transfer tax (Inheritance tax)	Stamp duties	Petroleum revenue tax	Other receipts
1963-64 to 1967-68	4·6	3·3	0·5	0·0	—	0·0	—	0·4
1968-69 to 1972-73	8·1	5·6	1·5	0·1	—	0·1	—	0·7
1973-74 to 1977-78	17·1	13·4	2·6	0·4	0·1	0·3	—	0·4
1978-79 to 1982-83	33·9	24·5	4·8	0·5	0·4	0·7	1·9	0·6
1983-84 to 1987-88	54·6	35·8	10·9	1·0	0·8	1·5	4·6	0·0

Customs and Excise receipts (current prices[1])

(£ billion)

Five year average	Total revenue	VAT (Purchase tax)	Car tax	Hydro-carbon oil	Tobacco	Alcohol duties	Other receipts
1963-64 to 1967-68	3·5	0·6	—	0·8	1·0	0·6	0·4
1968-69 to 1972-73	5·1	1·2	—	1·4	1·1	0·9	0·5
1973-74 to 1977-78	9·2	3·2	0·1	1·8	1·6	1·6	0·9
1978-79 to 1982-83	21·4	9·9	0·5	3·8	2·9	3·0	1·6
1983-84 to 1987-88	38·0	19·7	0·9	6·7	4·4	4·6	2·2

[1] Prices prevailing at the time.

Other tax receipts (current prices[1])

(£ billion)

Five year average	Vehicle Excise duty	National Insurance contributions
1963-64 to 1967-68	0·2	1·7
1968-69 to 1972-73	0·4	2·7
1973-74 to 1977-78	0·8	7·1
1978-79 to 1982-83	1·4	14·4
1983-84 to 1987-88	2·4	24·9

[1] Prices prevailing at the time.

Inland Revenue receipts as a percentage of gross domestic product

(Percentage of gross domestic product)

Five year average	Total revenue	Income tax	Corporation tax	Capital gains tax	Capital transfer tax (Inheritance tax)	Stamp duties	Petroleum revenue tax	Other receipts
1963-64 to 1967-68	12·7	10·6	1·2	0·0	—	0·0	—	1·2
1968-69 to 1972-73	15·0	10·2	2·8	0·0	—	0·0	—	1·2
1973-74 to 1977-78	15·4	12·1	2·4	0·0	0·0	0·0	—	0·4
1978-79 to 1982-83	14·6	10·6	2·1	0·0	0·0	0·0	0·1	0·2
1983-84 to 1987-88	15·1	9·9	3·0	0·0	0·0	0·0	1·3	0·0

Customs and Excise receipts as a percentage of gross domestic product

(Percentage of gross domestic product)

Five year average	Total revenue	VAT (Purchase tax)	Car tax	Hydro-carbon oil	Tobacco	Alcohol duties	Other receipts
1963-64 to 1967-68	9·7	1·8	—	2·1	2·7	1·7	1·0
1968-69 to 1972-73	9·3	2·3	—	2·5	2·1	1·7	0·9
1973-74 to 1977-78	8·3	2·8	0·1	1·7	1·4	1·4	0·8
1978-79 to 1983-84	9·2	4·3	0·2	1·6	1·3	1·3	0·7
1983-84 to 1987-88	10·5	5·4	0·2	1·8	1·2	1·3	0·6

Other tax receipts as a percentage of gross domestic product

(Percentage of gross domestic product)

Five year average	Vehicle Excise duty	National Insurance contributions
1963-64 to 1967-68	0·6	4·5
1968-69 to 1972-73	0·8	5·0
1973-74 to 1977-78	0·7	6·3
1978-79 to 1983-84	0·6	6·2
1983-84 to 1987-88	0·7	6·9

Inland Revenue receipts in real terms (1987-88 prices)

(£ billion 1987-88 prices)

Five year average	Total revenue	Income tax	Corporation tax	Capital gains tax	Capital transfer tax (Inheritance tax)	Stamp duties	Petroleum revenue tax	Other receipts
1963-64 to 1967-68	33·2	25·7	3·2	0·0	—	0·6	—	3·1
1968-69 to 1972-73	44·3	30·5	8·4	0·7	—	0·8	—	3·7
1973-74 to 1977-78	51·3	40·1	7·9	1·1	0·3	0·8	—	1·1
1978-79 to 1982-83	51·8	37·6	7·3	0·8	0·7	1·0	2·9	0·8
1983-84 to 1987-88	60·0	39·1	11·9	1·0	0·9	1·7	5·0	0·0

Customs and Excise receipts in real terms (1987-88 prices)

(£ billion 1987-88 prices)

Five year average	Total revenue	VAT (Purchase tax)	Car tax	Hydro-carbon oil	Tobacco	Alcohol duties	Other receipts
1963-64 to 1967-68	25·1	4·7	—	5·6	7·1	4·5	2·6
1968-69 to 1972-73	27·7	6·7	—	7·4	6·2	5·1	2·6
1973-74 to 1977-78	27·6	9·5	0·5	5·5	4·8	4·7	2·7
1978-79 to 1982-83	32·8	15·2	0·8	5·8	4·5	4·6	2·4
1983-84 to 1987-88	41·6	21·6	0·9	7·3	4·8	5·1	2·4

Other tax receipts in real terms (1987-88 prices)

(£ billion 1987-88 prices)

Five year average	Vehicle Excise duty	National Insurance contributions
1963-64 to 1967-68	1·6	12·0
1968-69 to 1972-73	2·4	14·9
1973-74 to 1977-78	2·3	21·1
1978-79 to 1982-83	2·2	22·0
1983-84 to 1987-88	2·6	27·2

Source: CSO, Financial Statistics, Economic Trends.

Tax and National Insurance Revenue

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the overall revenue from taxation plus national insurance contribution in cash terms, real terms, and as a percentage of gross domestic product for each period of five years since 1959.

Mr. Major: The available information is as follows:

Total revenue from taxation plus national insurance contributions in current prices, real terms and as a percentage of GDP

Five year averages £ billion	Total taxes and NICs (current prices[1])	Total taxes and NICs in real terms (1987-88 prices)	Total taxes and NICs as a per cent. of GDP
1963-64 to 1967-68	11·4	81·1	31·1
1968-69 to 1972-73	19·0	103·9	34·9
1973-74 to 1977-78	39·1	117·1	35·2

Five year averages £ billion	Total taxes and NICs (current prices[1])	Total taxes and NICs in real terms (1987-88 prices)	Total taxes and NICs as a per cent. of GDP
1978-79 to 1982-83	86·0	131·7	37·0
1983-84 to 1987-88	139·2	152·2	38·4

[1] prices prevailing at the time.
Source: CSO, Financial Statistics Economic Trends.

Government Investment

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been general Government investment in cash terms, real terms and as a percentage of gross domestic product for each period of five years since 1959.

Mr. Major: Information, as available, based on national accounts data, is as follows. Figures are given on two bases—expenditure on fixed assets, and the conventional national accounts measure of gross domestic fixed capital information (GDFCF). GDFCF is defined as expenditure on fixed assets minus sales of fixed assets. Constant price estimates of expenditure on fixed assets are not readily available.

	General Government		£ million	General Government
	Expenditure on fixed assets (1)	GDFCF (2)	GDFCF at 1985 prices (3)	'investment' as a percentage of GDP (A) [1] (4)	[1] (5)
1959-63	4,763	4,763	[2]—	3·5	3·5
1964-68	8,742	8,742	51,201	4·6	4·6
1969-73	13,928	13,695	59,320	4·7	4·6
1974-78	25,211	24,272	49,216	4·0	3·9
1979-83	33,654	25,244	28,485	2·7	2·0
1984-87[3]	37,167	26,940	26,885	2·5	1·8

[1] Col (4) is col (1) as percentage of GDP (A) at market prices
Col (5) is col (2) as percentage of GDP (A) at market prices
[2] Not available
[3] Four-year period

PAYE (Computerisation)

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what changes have been made by the Inland Revenue in the proposed method of computerising pay-as-you-earn following recent changes in taxation or related matters; whether the original plans are still expected to achieve the cost/benefits anticipated; and what is the expenditure of public funds involved.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 25 January 1989]: The Inland Revenue's computer system for PAYE was designed in such a way as to be able to handle changes of the kind that have been made in the personal tax system with the minimum of adaptation. The computer system will, in particular, make it possible to introduce independent taxation in 1990 after some necessary systems and re-progamming work. The existing PAYE and schedule D computerisation project is still expected to produce staff savings of some 6,800, of which some 5,800 will have been secured by April 1989 and the bulk of the remainder by April 1990. The estimated total cost of developing and installing the system is about £340 million in 1987 prices. The system is already producing estimated savings of over £15 million in the current financial year and this figure is expected to be more than doubled in 1989-90.

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what progress has been made on the computerisation of pay-as-you-earn by the Inland Revenue; what is the starting date for phase two relating to schedule D and corporation tax; what delays have been experienced; and what has been the cost in relation to staff time and consultants' fees.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 25 January 1989]: The computerisation of PAYE was completed as planned in October 1988 with the conversion of centre 1 at East Kilbride to the new on-line system. The computerisation of schedule D assessing is already operating over most of the country and is on schedule for completion in Scotland by April 1989. The precise timetable for introducing the new system for corporation tax is dependent on the new computerised collection and accounting system, phased implementation of which is planned to begin in 1990. Staff time associated with system development and implementation of the PAYE and schedule D projects amounted to some 6,000 man years and around £24 million at 1987 prices in consultants fees.

Capital Gains Tax

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information he has about the rate of capital gains tax levied on unquoted investments in each of the Group of Seven countries.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 24 January 1989]: The information requested is given in the table, which is supplemented by notes. The rates quoted relate to capital gains on the sale of investments in general since there is no evidence available to suggest that the countries listed distinguish between gains on quoted and unquoted investments.

Country	Nominal rates of tax on gains of
	Individuals	Companies
Canada[1 2 3]	17-29 per cent. plus provincial tax	28 per cent. plus provincial tax
France [4 5]	16 per cent. or 5-56·8 per cent.	15 per cent. or 42 per cent.
Germany[6]	22-56 per cent.	56 per cent.

Country	Nominal rates of tax on gains of Individuals	Companies
Italy[7 8 9]	12-62 per cent. plus 16·2 per cent. local tax	36 per cent. plus 16·2 per cent. local tax
Japan[10]	10·5-60 per cent. plus inhabitants tax (5-16 per cent.)	42 per cent. plus inhabitants tax (17·3-20·7 per cent.)
United Kingdom[11]	25 and 40 per cent.	25 and 35 per cent.
USA[12]	15 and 28 per cent. plus state tax	15-34 per cent. plus state tax

[1] In Canada, two thirds (three-quarters from 1990) of the post-1971 gains are included in the individual's or company's income and taxed at the appropriate income tax rates.
[2] Provincial rates of tax vary. The rate in Ontario (the most populous province) is 52 per cent. of federal tax for individuals and 10-15·5 per cent. of gains for corporations.
[3] An individual may claim a deduction equal to taxable capital gains up to a cumulative life-time maximum of $250,000 (£117,370 at latest available purchasing power parities (ppp) rate).
[4] In France the reduced rate of 16 per cent. applies if sale takes place more than two years after acquisition and if the shares constitute a substantial interest in a resident or non-resident company (ie where the shareholder has held more than 25 per cent. of the company's share capital at any time during the preceding five years).
[5] The reduced rate of 15 per cent. applies to long-term gains of companies, provided the net balance is allocated to a "special long-term gain reserve".
[6] In Germany the gains of individuals are subject to income tax if the securities were held as business assets or if they are sold less than six months after acquisition. Gains amounting to less than DM 1,000 (£274 at latest ppp rate) are not taxable.
[7] In Italy gains of individuals are subject to tax only if the shares were held as business assets or are sold within five years of acquisition and, in the case of unquoted companies, exceed 10 per cent. of the company's capital.
[8] In Italy corporate gains are not taxed if they are allocated to a special reserve and are re-invested within two years.
[9] In Italy local tax is deductible when calculating national income tax. The effective rates, including the local tax, are 46·4 per cent. for corporations and 26·2-68 per cent. for individuals.
[10] In Japan gains by individuals are only taxable if deemed business transactions. They are subject to a deduction of 500,000 yen (£1,423).
[11] In the United Kingdom the charge is confined to post-1982 indexed gains. Individuals are exempt from tax on gains not exceeding £5,000.
[12] In the USA most states impose a state tax on both individuals and corporations. For example in California (the most populous state) the maximum state tax of 9·3 per cent. produces an effective maximum rate of approximately 34 per cent. for individuals and 40 per cent. for companies.

Mr. Viraj Mendis

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information he has as to any income tax payments made by Mr. Viraj Mendis since 1973.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 24 January 1989]: Such information is confidential.

Corporation Tax

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the cost of abolishing mainstream corporation tax in 1989-90 and 1990-91, and of maintaining the rate of corporation tax at the rate of advanced corporation tax.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 23 January 1989]: The revenue cost of reducing the main rate of corporation tax to 25 per cent. would depend on the level of taxable profits earned in future years and on companies' behavioural response to the change. The rate of corporation tax applicable to company incomes in the year from 1 April 1988 was set at 35 per cent. in the 1988 Finance Act. Had the rate been set at 25 per cent. and taking the level of income in the year as given, it is estimated that receipts would be about £4¼ billion lower in 1989-90 and £6¼ billion lower in 1990-91. The revenue cost of abolishing mainstream corporation tax so that tax would be charged only on company distributions by way of advance corporation tax would be considerably more than this.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Turkey (Torture)

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will raise with the Turkish Government the Amnesty International reports on torture in that country; and if he will press the Turkish authorities to grant all prisoners immediate access to lawyers, doctors and relatives.

Mr. Waldegrave: My right hon. Friend the Minister of State raised Amnesty International's allegations of human rights abuse with the Turkish ambassador on 12 December. We continue to urge the Turkish Government to maintain the recent improvements in human rights, and to live up to internationally accepted standards concerning the treatment of prisoners.

Departmental Staff (Child Care)

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what child care provision his Department provides for pre-school age children of his Department's employees; what child care provision for school holiday or after school care, is provided for employees' children aged five years and over; and what plans there are for increasing provision in the next five years; and how these are to be funded.

Mr. Waldegrave: Children of school age of employees in the diplomatic and aid wings of the FCO have been registered to take part in play schemes to be run in Westminster during school holidays in 1989 beginning in February. Both wings will contribute to the setting up fund for the scheme.

A study will shortly be made into the demand for and feasibility of providing permanent creche facilities for younger children of FCO-ODA staff in the Whitehall area. This study will include options for funding.

Child care provision at other locations is also being considered.

US Senate (Reports)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will seek to obtain the hearings and reports from the United States Senate on Senate Bill 158 of the 97th Congress, session one; if he will place any such hearings and reports in the Library; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will seek to obtain the hearings and reports from the United States Senate on Senate joint resolution 110 of the 97th Congress, session one; if he will place any such hearings and reports in the Library; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: Her Majesty's embassy in Washington is looking into the possibility of obtaining these documents, and I shall write to my hon. Friend in due course.

Helsinki Final Act

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on progress in the implementation by the Soviet and Eastern European countries on the provision of the Helsinki final act during the last six months.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have recently prepared a report on Soviet and East European implementation of their CSCE commitments for the period July to December 1988. Copies will be deposited in the Library of the House.

Caribbean (Drug Trafficking)

Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress Her Majesty's Government are making in assisting dependent territories to combat drug trafficking in the Caribbean.

Mr. Eggar: Following the review, which HMG conducted in 1986 in the British dependent territories of the Caribbean a number of steps have been taken to help the local Governments combat drugs and narcotics trafficking. We have provided a police launch for the British Virgin Islands and a drugs surveillance aircraft between the Turks and Caicos Islands and British Virgin Islands, built safe repositories for seized drugs, and supplied sniffer dogs for local police and customs forces. Local drugs squads have been established and strengthened with United Kingdom personnel, and advisers have been appointed to carry out drug awareness customs training courses. Drugs intelligence gathering systems are being set up throughout the territories.

Particular emphasis has been placed on the introduction or strengthening of appropriate legislation. All the Caribbean dependent territories are in the process of passing legislation akin to the United Kingdom's Drugs Trafficking Offences Act.

The total value of this assistance to date is over £¼ million. Further aid in the pipeline will provide more launches and rummage equipment for the customs services.

These efforts have already yielded success. On 9 January the BVI drugs squad, in a joint operation with the United States Drugs Enforcement Agency seized 150 kg of cocaine, $60,000, three boats and arrested 18 persons on drugs trafficking charges. Earlier last year the same squad acting independently seized 470 kg, one aircraft and arrested two persons in one operation.

Drugs trafficking is an international problem which requires an international effort, and HMG are determined to ensure that none of their dependent territories become the weak link in the chain.

ENVIRONMENT

Water Purification

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent regulations or recommendations have been made in respect of the nature of soaps and detergents and their effects on the efficacy of water purification works; what current investigations are being made into this topic; and if he is contemplating further advice or regulation.

Mr. Moynihan: There have been no recent regulations or recommendations in respect of the nature of soaps and detergents and their effects on the efficacy of waste purification works, and my Department is not currently contemplating any action in this area.

Water Pollution

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will inquire into the cause of the escape into public waters of a considerable quantity of uranyl nitrate, suspension of uranium, from the Springfields plant of British Nuclear Fuels plc; and if he will make a statement as to its possible effects and remedies.

Mr. Moynihan: The circumstances surrounding this occurence are currently under investigation by Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution of my Department and the nuclear installations inspectorate of the Health and Safety Executive. Initial investigations have shown that a relatively small amount of uranium was released to the site foul drain which discharges to the local sewage works. Results from on-site monitoring and analysis of samples from the sewage sludge have shown levels of radioactivity to be below normal background levels and radiologically insignificant.

Local Authorities (Company Interests)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many organisations commented on the Government's consultation paper on local authorities' interests in companies, published in June 1988; whether he will list the names of the organisations that submitted comments; when the Government expect to publish their response to these comments; and whether he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Over 200 responses have been received to the consultation paper. We propose to publish a summary of the points made in the responses shortly, with the Government's comments on them. We shall include a list of those who submitted responses.

Inner London Education Authority

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will direct the chair of the London residuary body to provide adequate, heated accommodation for the county hall-based employees of the Inner London education authority prior to that body's wind-up.

Mr. Virginia Bottomley: No. The day-to-day running of county hall is a matter for the London residuary body.

Water Authorities (Chairmen)

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what remuneration is made to the chairs of water authorities.

Mr. Moynihan: The annual salaries of the chairmen of the regional water authorities in England are as follows:

Authority	Remunerations £
Anglian	40,800
Northumbrian	28,500
North West	45,600
Severn-Trent	45,600
Southern	40,800
South West	47,500
Thames	45,600
Wessex	38,000
Yorkshire	51,000

These salaries reflect the chairmen's differing time inputs as well as other factors.

Chairmen and executive members are also eligible for annual bonuses if their authorities achieve or exceed the performance targets set out for them by the Government. Details of the bonuses paid to chairmen in respect of the financial year 1987-88 were given by my right hon. Friend, in reply to a question from the hon. Member for Copeland (Dr. Cunningham) on 12 January at column 742.

Planning (London)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to respond to the advice on strategic planning guidance in London submitted to him by the London planning advisory committee; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: My right hon. Friend is preparing strategic planning guidance for London which will be published in draft for consultation in the near future. The draft guidance will take into account the advice submitted to my right hon. Friend by the London planning advisory committee.

Greater London Council

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the bodies now carrying out the functions previously carried out by the Greater London council.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The destinations of functions formerly carried out by the GLC were set out in my Department's circular 8/86. A copy is available in the Library. Of these functions which passed from the GLC to the London residuary body, Thamesmead has been sold to Thamesmead Town, and Seaside and Country Homes to the North British housing association.

County Hall, London

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the reasons for the delay in announcing the completion of the contract between the London residuary body and the county hall developement group consortium; when an announcement will be made; and if he will make a statement .

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The timing of an announcement is for the parties concerned.

Plant and Machinery (Rating)

Mr. Forman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how he intends to use powers under the Local Government Finance Act 1988 to prescribe what items of plant and machinery should be rated; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: For the 1990 revaluation we propose to re-enact the provisions contained in the Plant and Machinery (Rating) Order 1960 (SI 1960 No. 122), as amended, together with the relevant provisions contained in the General Rate Act 1967. My right hon. Friends, the Secretaries of State for Scotland and for Wales, and I recognise that in the longer term there is a need to consider ways of securing a fuller harmonisation of the valuation treatment of plant and machinery in the different parts of Great Britain. Consideration will also be given to the need to review the provisions of the 1960 order more generally.

Heritage (Protection)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what legislation he intends to introduce to protect Britain's archaeological sites from destruction by developers in the light of forthcoming directives from the EEC; if he will be providing for archaeological surveys to be made before developers commence work; and what further protection he will give to save Britain's heritage.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [pursuant to her reply, 23 January 1989, c. 454]: The regulations which brought the EC directive on environmental assessment on 15 July 1988, require environmental statements to be prepared by developers and considered by the relevant public bodies before planning permission may be given for certain major projects.

The effects of proposals on the cultural heritage are one of many items which must be covered by an environmental statement. The regulations relate only to developments which are likely to have significant environmental effects. If an ancient monument is scheduled any works which would affect it need scheduled monument consent from my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State. In appropriate cases, consent may be given subject to conditions relating to archaeological investigation or recording. In other cases the provision for archaeological investigation or recording is a matter between developers, local planning authorities and archaeologists.

It has always been open to local planning authorities to consider the archaeological implications of development and impose conditions that are both appropriate and reasonable in the circumstances of the case on any planning permission that may be granted. It is my right hon. Friend's policy to encourage close links between developers, archaeologists and local planning authorities as a means of ensuring appropriate protection for non-scheduled sites.

HEALTH

In-patient Treatment

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the lowest and the highest average cost of in-patient treatment in a district health authority in the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Freeman: Information within hospitals costing returns for health authority managed hospitals is published in aggregated tables of average treatment costs by type of hospital for health regions and England in the Department's annual publication "Health Services Costing Returns" (the latest being for 1986-87), copies of which are held in the Library.

All hospitals are classified for costing purposes into one of a series of standard types which reflect the principal use to which their beds are allocated. Although in-patient treatment costs may vary between hospitals of the same type, those categorised "pre-convalescent", "convalescent" or "mental handicap" generally have lower average costs, while higher average costs are usually incurred at hospitals within such categories as "acute", "childrens acute" and "eye".

The published regional summary tables for 1986-87 show that an average cost per in-patient day of £17·45 was incurred by a convalescent hospital, whilst among the highest individual hospital average costs recorded was £238·68 per inpatient day for Papworth hospital, Cambridgeshire.

General Practitioners

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the average list size of general medical practitioners in the Northern health authority at 1 October 1988; what was this figure as a percentage of the United Kingdom average; and what proportion of general practitioners in the Durham area health authority had lists longer than the United Kingdom average.

Mr. Mellor: The information requested is collected from family practitioner committees, which are not necessarily conterminous with health authority boundaries, and aggregated by region. As at 1 October 1987 (the latest date for which figures are available) the average list size for northern region was 2,002 patients per unrestricted general medical practitioner. This is 99 per cent. of the average list size for England (2020). A total of 54 per cent. of unrestricted general medical practitioners in the area covered by the Durham family practitioner committee (which includes Durham district health authority) had lists greater than the England average. The average list size for the United Kingdom was 1965 and the corresponding percentages were 102 per cent. and 60 per cent. respectively.

Pre-cooked Chilled Food

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he has any plans to extend the new guidelines with regard to pre-cooked chilled foods to make reference to chilled food sold in supermarkets.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: No. These guidelines are specific to catering operations. However we are preparing separately guidelines for retailed chilled foods which will be issued as soon as possible.

Child Sexual Abuse (Research)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the research on child sexual abuse undertaken by his Department (a) since 1979, (b) currently undergoing, and (c) planned for the future together with the amount of money spent or allocated in each instance; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The information is as follows:

Title abstract of project	Period of support	Costs £
(a) Completed
1. Decision making in the protection of children A study of the decision making process and interagency working in cases of children at risk of abuse (mainly physical but includes sexual abuse)	1978-81—Dr. R. Dingwall	29,300
2. Child abuse in an English local authority A study of the characteristics identification, social work management and treatment of children at risk (concerned with physical, but includes sexual abuse)	1979-82—Dr. R. Banon	96,300
3. A study to modify parent child interaction in abusive families A controlled trial of a focussed casework approach to the treatment of child abuse (physical and sexual) comparing two contrasting therapies	1983-86—Prof. A. R. Nicol	32,400
4. Professional intervention in child abuse The aims of this study were to examine and evaluate literature on intervention strategies in cases of child abuse (physical and sexual) and to provide a sythesis of present knowledge of value to those working in the field	1985-87—Dr. F. Boddy, Dr. D. Gough	23,800
(b) Current
1. Intervention in child sexual abuse This study will look at characteristics and outcome of a treatment programme provided to the victims of child sexual abuse and their families	1987-89—Dr. A. Bentovin, Prof. P. Graham	225,000
2. Normal sexual knowledge in children The aim is to collect systemation and reliable information on: (i) sexual knowledge in children (ii) normal behaviour in families A second aim of the study is to see whether children in the community can be distinguished from children who have been sexually abused on the basis of their sexual knowledge and behaviour	Dr. M. Smith
3. A study of co-ordination in child abuse A study which aims to look at the policies and practice of interagency co-ordination in child abuse (physical-sexual)	1988-92—Dr. C. Hallet	130,000
4. Decision making intervention and outcomes in respect to children at risk of abuse	1988-93—Ms. E. Farmer	155,000

Title abstract of project	Period of support	Costs £
The aims of this study are to explore the process of decision making and intervention in relation to a group of children at risk of abuse in two local authorities and to relate these outcomes
(c) Projects under consideration
1. Parental perceptions in child abuse The aims of this study are to gain a greater understanding of the perceptions of parents of the process in cases of suspected child abuse	2½ years	140,000
2. Feasibility of a prevalence study This will examine the feasibility of a study to provide reliable estimates of the scale of sexual abuse of children in England and Wales	2 years	30,000
3. Parental participation in child protection case conferences This project would evaluate the object of parental participation in child protection case conferences both in terms of the impact on the children and the parents and in terms of the decision making process	3 years	100,000
4. A study of the patterns of use of child protection registers This study would examine how registers are used—their use by practitioners	3 years	120,000
5. Computer based techniques in diagnosis This project would aim to develop computer based techniques to assist in obtaining case histories from the victims of child sexual abuse and to facilitate interaction between them and counselling in a therapeutic context	4 years	200,000
6. Evaluation of interdisciplinary training Following a recommendation of the Cleveland Enquiry this study would develop methods of interdisciplinary training	2 years	50,000
7. Perpetrators of child sexual abuse This project would identify the social characteristics of abusers; their personal history (eg victims of abuse as a child); and the numbers and relationship of their victims	3 years	60,000

Aluminium

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what information he has on research into the levels of aluminium in medical products such as antacids; by whom the research was conducted; and whether the levels found were considered to be harmful or not;

(2) what information he has as to about which illnesses or complaints there have been reports of a possible association with aluminium, for which the ingestion of aluminium is not recommended;

(3) if he will make a statement on the known risks of ingesting aluminium; and if he will list the foods, drinks and other products which are suspected of containing an undesirable high level of the element.

Mr. Freeman: Aluminium and its salts are of low toxicity and have various approved uses in medical practice and in the food and water industries.

Aluminium hydroxide and other aluminium salts are widely used in medicinal products as antacids in the treatment of gastro-intestinal disease. I am not aware of any recent research in this area since their effects are widely known and they are regarded as extremely safe. However, in a very few patients with pre-existing depletion of body phosphate, this condition can be worsened, leading to osteomalacia (softening of the bone); advice to doctors on antacids is that they should not be used for these patients.

In-patients with renal failure, who have high body phosphate, aluminium hydroxide is used as a binding agent to limit uptake of phosphate from the intestine. In severe cases, very large doses are used and it is recognised that this may contribute toward encephalopathy and osteomalacia, and that very careful monitoring is required.

Renal dialysis with fluid high in aluminium is liable to cause encephalopathy and osteomalacia because the aluminium readily enters the bloodstream, unlike ingested aluminium. Levels of aluminium in licensed dialysis products (such as peritoneal dialysis solutions) are controlled to below the limits defined in EC resolution 86/C184/04 of 16 June 1986. These limits are applied by the United Kingdom licensing authority when approving product licence applications. For other categories of licensed medicines, the monitoring and control of aluminium and other metals is kept under review by the licensing authority and the Committee on Safety of Medicines.

No disease is known to be caused either by natural presence of aluminium or as a result of the approved use, in food or drinking water. No food or drink, including tap water, normally contains an undesirably high level of this element. However, rare incidents of gross contamination of water with certain salts of aluminium have caused acute outbreaks of diarrhoea and vomiting.

A hypothesis that aluminium may have a role in the causation of Alzheimer's disease is currently being studied. Recent evidence of a geographical association between levels of aluminium in drinking water and the disease is assessed by the Department's independent expert advisers, in agreement with the authors of the study, as too tentative to justify changes in usage; further research along several lines is in hand.

Reports of a number of persistent ill effects following a recent incident of gross contamination of water by aluminium sulphate are now to be considered by an advisory group of independent medical and scientific experts.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he has on research into the levels of aluminium in (a) tea, (b) soft drinks (c) acid foods cooked in aluminium pans and (d) food wrapped or packed in aluminium foil or containers; who conducted the research in each case; and if the levels found were considered harmful or not.

Mr. Freeman: In a recent study conducted by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, tea infused in a pyrex container using distilled water was found to contain between 2·2 and 5·5 milligrams of aluminium per litre.

The Camden Food Preservation Research Association has measured aluminium in a variety of soft drinks, where levels ranged from 0·3 to 1·3 mg per kg.

I understand that an independent study has shown that cooking in aluminium pans makes only a small contribution to the dietary intake of aluminium. Further details of dietary aluminium levels are given in food surveillance paper No. 15, "Survey of Aluminium, Antimony, Chromium, Cobait, Indium, Nickel, Thallium and Tin in Food", a copy of which I have placed in the Library.

There is no evidence that aluminium in food is harmful.

Broadmoor Hospital

Ms. Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether his Department will review the practices of Broadmoor hospital in relation to the administering of injections to violent patients, in the light of the death of Mr. Joseph Watts.

Mr. Freeman: I wish to extend to the relatives of Mr. Watts my deepest sympathy over his most unfortunate death. I have asked the Broadmoor hospital management team to report to me quickly on the action they propose to take in response to the coroner's findings following the inquest. I shall give the hospital's proposals my urgent consideration.

Basingstoke and North Hampshire Health Authority

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people have lived in the Basingstoke and North Hampshire health authority district in each year since the formation of that health authority; and what has been the percentage change each year.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is as follows:

Basingstoke and North Hampshire district health authority area

Year	Mid year estimate of usually resident population (Thousands)	Change from preceding year (per cent.)
1982	203·2	+0·7
1983	206·8	+1·8
1984	210·9	+2·0
[1]1985	214·4	+1·7
1986	215·0	+0·3
1987	217·2	+1·0

[1] Number of armed forces dependants reassessed.
Source: OPCS monitors in PP1 series.

Health Authorities

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what remuneration is made to chairs of regional and district health authorities.

Mr. Mellor: They are entitled to remuneration which currently stands at £11,868 a year. They may as an alternative choose to claim financial loss allowance. Chairmen are also entitled to claim travelling and subsistence allowances.

Otosporin

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he intends to make representations to Burroughs Wellcome to reduce the cost of the drug Otosporin from the £4·09 currently charged to the National Health Service to a figure nearer the 94p charged for the same quantity of the drug in Spain; and whether he intends to make spot checks on the cost of other drugs in Europe that are on the National Health Service limited list.

Mr. Mellor: The prices of medicines purchased by the National Health Service are not set by individual comparison with prices charged in other countries. Prices in different countries vary for a wide range of reasons, including varying levels of consumption and different pricing arrangement adopted by Governments. In the United Kingdom, the pharmaceutical price regulation scheme regulates the overall profit obtained by pharmaceutical companies on their business supplying the National Health Service, and medicine costs are in the middle band among European states.

AIDS

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health why AIDS is not a notifiable disease.

Mr. Mellor: We do not consider that there are any strong public health grounds for making AIDS a notifiable disease. To do so would be unlikely to improve the present reporting system or to assist health professionals in their work. Notification might also deter people from seeking help, and so drive the infection underground.

Lowermoor Incident Health Advisory Group

Mr. Neale: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he will give further details on the work proposed for the Lowermoor incident health advisory group; and when he will be able to report on the progress of its inquiry.

Mr. Freeman: The Lowermoor incident health advisory group has been asked to advise comprehensively on the health of the people living in the Camelford area following the contamination of their drinking water at Lowermoor in July 1988. They will give the fullest possible consideration to the question whether there may be any long-term effects on the local population's health and will consider fully the feasibility of any forms of research or monitoring which might help in considering those questions.

The advisory group will visit the Camelford area during the course of its inquiry. I will write to my hon. Friend by the end of March to inform him of the progress made by the advisory group.

Meningitis

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Derbyshire, North-East in the Official Report, 23 January on meningitis in the North Derbyshire health authority, if he will make a statement on the 11 notified cases of meningococcal meningitis in the North Derbyshire area since October 1988.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 26 January 1989]: I understand that there is no obvious connection between the cases of meningococcal meningitis identified recently in north Derbyshire. They have affected different ages and have come from widely separated places within the district.

Where meningococcal infection has been suspected, close contacts of the patient have been given antibiotic treatment in accordance with the DHA's control of infection procedures. All general practitioners and school doctors in the district have been advised of the situation, which is being closely monitored.

Cook-Chill Foods

Mr Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what regulations exist concerning good practice in the manufacture of cook-chill foods; if he has any plans to introduce further measures to ensure safe manufacturing procedures; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke [holding answer 23 January 1989]: The Food Hygiene (General) Regulations 1970 apply to the manufacture of such foods. My Department's guidelines on pre-cooked chilled food in catering provide detailed guidance to ensure the safety of food produced by this system. We are preparing guidelines on good practice in the manufacture, distribution and storage of cooked-chilled food sold in retail outlets.

ENERGY

Mining Subsidence

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what assistance his Department offers to people who suffer from problems caused by mining subsidence.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The day-to-day management of the subsidence repair and compensation system is a matter for British Coal. However, the Department publishes a widely available leaflet, "Coal Mining Subsidence Damage: A Guide to Claimants' Rights" which advises claimants on how to pursue their claims.

Deep-mined Coal

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what information he has available of the likely contraction of manpower on the deep-mined coal industry in the current year; and if he will indicate the areas affected.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Kilmarnock and Loudoun (Mr. McKelvey) on 12 December 1988 at column 477.

Departmental Staff (Child Care)

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what child care provision his Department provides for pre-school age children of his Department's employees; what child care provision, for school holiday or after-school care, is provided for employees' children aged five and over; what plans there are for increasing provision in the next five years; and how these are to be funded.

Mr. Michael Spicer: My Department does not provide child care facilities and has no present plans for doing so.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Dental Charges

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish a list for each month during which the new centralised system of claiming payments for dental charges on form AGI has been in operation, showing the average time taken to process the claim in that month, together with a list of the average time of processing similar claims for the last six months of the previous locally based system.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The only available information about average clearance times of claims dealt with by the agency benefits unit was given in my replies to the hon. Members for Edinburgh, South (Mr. Griffiths) and for Angus, East (Mr. Welsh) on 18 July 1988 and 13 January 1989 at column 489 and columns 246-48 respectively. No information is available about the clearance times of claims dealt with under the previous system.

Family Income Supplement

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many families were receiving family income supplement in November 1986, December 1986, November 1987 and December 1987.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: A total of 221,000 families received payments of family income supplement for November 1986, and 218,000 for December 1986. These figures include all families who received payments for the months shown even though they may not have received them until later. They are therefore not strictly comparable with family credit figures which are based on the number of awards actually in payment at the end of the relevant month. Reliable information is not available for 1987.

Social Security Changes

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what progress has been made in his Department's research on the impact of the April 1988 social security changes; and when the results will be published

Mr. Scott: Monitoring and evaluation of the impact of the April 1988 social security changes is a continuing process based on a wide range of detailed statistical information. Much of this is routinely published in the annual statistical inquiry, social security statistics and the monthly statistics on the social fund. The first annual statistical survey on the reformed housing benefit scheme will be published later this year.

In addition, detailed research projects are being commissioned on some subjects such as the effects of the income support earnings rules and the extent to which the social fund is meeting its objectives. Decisions on publication will be made at the appropriate time.

Disabled People

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he expects to respond to the Social Security Advisory Committee's report on the disabled.

Mr. Nicholas Scott: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Carmarthen (Mr. Williams) on 19 December 1988 at columns 114-15.

Community Care

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether his Department is continuing to monitor the level of underspending on community care grants; and if he will make a statement on this matter before the end of the financial year.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: We are continuing to monitor closely all aspects of the social fund. Expenditure on community care grants has increased significantly over recent months and is currently running at 77 per cent. of national monthly profile.

I outlined in my reply to the hon. Member for Don Valley (Mr. Redmond) on 17 January at columns 118-19 the steps we were taking further to improve awareness of the help that can be provided through community care grants. Monthly statistics on the operation of the social fund for every local office and a national summary are placed in the Library.

Help with Hostel Charges

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received on the consultation paper "Help with Hostel Charges"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to the hon. Member for Halifax (Mrs. Mahon) on 23 January at columns 417-18.

Durham Office (Staff)

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average length of service of the staff now working at his Department's office in Durham.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The average length of service is 13·78 years. This covers all grades of staff.

Pensioners

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he proposes to implement legislation to phase out the earnings rule for pensioners.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: We have no plans to implement legislation to phase out the earnings rule for pensioners. We shall continue to carry out our statutory duty to review annually the level of permitted earnings.

Costs Limits

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether there have been any changes in the running costs limits of his Department for 1988-89.

Mr. Scott: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the running cost limit for class XV vote 7 (administration and miscellaneous services) will be increased by £12·139 million. This is the net effect of a reapportionment between non-running cost and running cost expenditure (£4·437 million), additional receipts of £7·563 million from the national insurance fund, a transfer of £143,000 from Inland Revenue and a decrease of £5,000 as a contribution towards the direct entry grade 7 competition 1988, which is offset by a corresponding increase in vote XX.1.

As a result of these changes and those announced by my hon. and learned Friend the Minister for Health, which add a further £4·856 million to the running costs of vote XIV.3, the running cost limit of the Departments of Social Security and Health is increased by £16·995 million from £1,785·189 million to £1,802·184 million. These increases do not add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Family Credit

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what has been the total number of claims for family credit; and what proportion of those claims has been assessed as eligible for payment.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: By 20 January 1989, 539,000 claims had been received of which 489,000 had been cleared. Of these, 28,000 were duplicate claims or were subsequently withdrawn. Of the remaining 461,000 claims, 336,000 (72·9 per cent.) were successful. In addition, 206,000 family income supplement beneficiaries were awarded family credit without a claim being required. As awards of family credit are for a limited period (normally six months) many of the 542,000 awards will have expired. At the end of December approximately 255,400 families were receiving family credit.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Pig Farmers

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the subsidies that pig farmers in Derbyshire currently receive from the Government.

Mr. Donald Thompson: United Kingdom pig farmers do not currently receive any direct Government subsidies.

Aluminium (Babies)

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information he has on research regarding (a) the ability of babies to absorb aluminium that is ingested, (b) the amount of aluminium that a baby's normal diet is likely to provide and, (c) the level of aluminium in water and in baby milk that is safe for babies; who conducted the research in each case; and what were the conclusions.

Mr. Ryder: There is no information at present on the extent to which babies are able to absorb ingested aluminium. However, it is known that the greater part of aluminium ingested by adults is excreted. A survey of aluminium in infant milks has recently been carried out by this Ministry. Estimates of aluminium intakes by infants up to age four months show that potential intakes from infant milks are well within the internationally agreed acceptable level specified by the joint FAO/WHO expert committee on food additives.

New Zealand Butter and Sheepmeat

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the implications for the agricultural trade negotiations of the Uruguay round of the general agreement on tariffs and trade of EEC proposals to impose more restrictions on access for New Zealand butter and sheepmeat.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The proposals would continue arrangements for specified quantities of New Zealand butter and sheepmeat to enter the Community at concessionary rates of levy, with reductions in both the quantities and the level of import charge. They take account of the Community's commitments in the Uruguay round under the Punta del Este declaration and represent a fair balance between the many interests involved. The New Zealand Government have acknowledged this. Negotiations on the round are continuing with the aim of securing greater liberalisation of trade in agriculture.

Baby Food (Ingredients)

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has any evidence that animal offal, brain, bowels, feet and testicles are present in any baby foods; and what would be their effects on the health of babies.

Mr. Ryder: The Ministry has no evidence that brain, bowels, feet, testicles or any animal offal other than liver or kidney are present in any baby foods. Liver and kidney are used in the preparation of some baby foods because of the high nutritional value they bestow.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will take steps to require all baby foods to have on their labels the quantity, quality and nature of their ingredients.

Mr. Ryder: The EC food labelling directive and the Food Labelling Regulations 1984 require prepacked foods to be marked or labelled with a list of ingredients in descending order of weight. The Food Act 1984 makes it an offence to sell food which is not of the nature, substance or quality demanded by the consumer and also an offence to provide labelling which is misleading as to nature, substance or quality of the food.

The proposed EC directive on foods for particular nutritional uses would provide for specific directives which may control the description, composition, labelling, advertising and presentation of certain categories of foods, including baby foods. It could be therefore that the European Community will develop specific rules for the labelling of baby foods.

Research Funding

Sir John Farr: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what funding has been made available (a) to the central veterinary laboratory for its research into the development of an Elisa test, and (b) to the Moredun research institute for its work with the lymphacyte transformation test.

Mr. Donald Thompson: At least £46,000 will be allocated in 1989-90 for expenditure on research at the central veterinary laboratory into the development of an Elisa test for tuberculosis in deer. Work on the lymphoates transformation test at the Moredun research institute is being privately funded.

Animal Feedstuffs

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list those plants using animal by products in the preparation of animal feedstuffs.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 16 January 1989]: The use of small quantities of animal protein materials in some poultry feed have for many years been a normal trade practice. Such materials are produced in processing plants, all of which are subject to the controls contained in the Protein Processing Order 1981. The heat or other treatment used in such plants will destroy all salmonella. The animal protein is then supplied to the manufacturers of animal feedstuffs, of which there are many throughout the country, both on farms and elsewhere. Detailed information on all manufacturers is not available in my Department.

Eggs

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he proposes to take to prevent the sale of eggs which are a risk to human health.

Mr. Ryder: Notices will be issued under the Zoonoses Order 1975 to egg producers with flocks known or suspected of infection with salmonella enteritidis or other similar types of Salmonella. These notices will prevent producers from selling eggs in a raw state for direct consumption. The first such notices will be issued today.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the brand names of chicken feeds which contain processed animal byproducts.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 13 January 1989]: The use of small quantities of animal protein materials in some poultry feed have for many years been a normal trade practice. Such materials are produced in processing plants, all of which are subject to the controls contained in the Protein Processing Order 1981. The heat or other treatment used in such plants will destroy all salmonella. Detailed information on the brand names involved is not available from my Department.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many producers of chicken food using animal byproducts are known to his Ministry.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 13 January 1989]: The use of small quantities of animal protein materials in some poultry feed have for many years been a normal trade practice. Such materials are produced in processing plants, all of which are subject to the controls contained in the Protein Processing Order, 1981. The heat or other treatment used in such plants will destroy all salmonella.

The animal protein is then supplied to the manufacturers of animal feedstuffs, of which there are many throughout the country both on farms and elsewhere. Detailed information on all such manufactures who produce poultry feedstuffs is not available in my Department.

EMPLOYMENT

Press Officers

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many press officers and staff his Department has employed or used in each year since 1979.

Mr. Cope: The number of designated press officers in the Employment Department London HQ for each year since 1979 is as follows:

	Number
1979	7
1980	8
1981	8
1982	8
1983	8
1984	8
1985	8
1986	8
1987	11
1988	11
1989	11

Training and Enterprise Council

Mr. Clelland: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the total budget proposed for training and enterprise councils; and how many training and enterprise councils will receive more than the minimum £15 million stated in the White Paper "Employment for the 1990s".

Mr. Cope: On the basis of current expenditure plans the total budget for TECs, when they are fully established throughout the country, would be in excess of £2,500 million. It is too early to say at this stage how many training and enterprise councils will receive more than £15 million a year.

Training Schemes (Women)

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what were the main conclusions and recommendations of the recent Training Commission study of women's participation in training schemes.

Mr. Nicholls: The Training Agency's internal review of women's participation in its education and training programmes is not yet complete.

Departmental Advertising

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what has been the expenditure on media and advertising by his Department in each year since 1979.

Mr. Cope: The amount spent by the Department of Employment on advertising in each financial year since 1979 was as follows:

Year	Amount (£ million)
1979-80	0·7
1980-81	0·3
1981-82	0·4
1982-83	0·5
1983-84	0·5
1984-85	0·3
1985-86	0·1
1986-87	12·7
1987-88	6·1

These figures include production costs and VAT.

Employment Training

Mr. Blair: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many places on his Department's employment training programme had been filled by 31 December 1988 by region and by sector.

Mr. Nicholls: At 31 December 1988 there were 108,000 trainees on employment training in Great Britain. A breakdown by region is given in the following table. Information by industrial sector is not available.

Employment Training
In training at 31 December 1988

	Number
South East	7,100
London	10,500
South West	6,900
West Midlands	12,100
East Midlands and Eastern	9,000
Yorkshire and Humberside	16,000
North West	15,500
Northern	11,800
Wales	7,400
Scotland	11,700
Great Britain	108,000

Mr. Blair: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many employers were by 31 December 1988, providing work experience places for employment training by region and by sector.

Mr. Nicholls: The information is not available. However, information on the number of trainees in employer-based training will be available from the end of the month.

YTS

Mr. Blair: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many fatal, major and minor reportable accidents occurred on YTS for each quarter of each year since 1984, by sector and by region.

Mr. Lee: I will write to the hon. Member with the information requested and will place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the average number in training on the YTS during the years (a) 1 April 1985 to 31 March 1986, (b) 1 April 1986 to 31 March 1987 and (c) 1 April 1987 to 31 March 1988.

Mr. Cope: The information is as follows:

Year	Average number in training on YTS
	Number
1 April 1985-31 March 1986	264,000
1 April 1986-31 March 1987	296,000
1 April 1987-31 March 1988	376,000

Wages Councils

Mr. Blair: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish in the Official Report the statistics on wages councils' employment and compliance with wage council rates in 1988, in the same format as used in the reply on 4 March 1988, Official Report, columns 733-38.

Mr. Lee: The information is not yet available.

Cash Limits

Mr. Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether any changes will be made to his Department's cash limits or running costs limits for 1988-89.

Mr. Fowler: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary spring Supplementary Estimates, the following changes will be made:

The cash limit for class VII, vote 1 (employment programmes) will be reduced by £3 million from £1,293,618,000 to £1,290,618,000. The reduction offsets the £3 million increased provision sought by the Training Agency (class VII, vote 7) (training programmes) towards further marketing of the employment training programme and promotion of training and enterprise councils (TECs).

The cash limit on class VII, vote 2 (administration) will be reduced by £3,300,000 from £265,170,000 to £261,870,000. The reduction partly offsets the cash limit increase on class VII, vote 7 resulting from the increase in provision sought to cover additional running costs for the skills training agency (STA).

There will be a token £1,000 increase on the cash limit on class VII, vote 5 (Training Commission) from £1,936,179,000 to £1,936,180,000. This token increase is necessary to adjust the provision transferred to the Department of Employment (class VII, vote 7) in the winter Supplementary Estimates, to reflect actual expenditure by the Training Commission up to 1 December 1988, when responsibility for most of the commission's activities transferred to the Department of Employment.

The cash limit on class VII, vote 7 (Department of Employment: training programmes) will be increased by £6,300,000 from £559,000 to £6,859,000. This is the net effect of the increased provision of £3 million sought to allow for further marketing of employment training and promoting the new training and enterprise councils (which is offset by the £3 million decrease on class VII, vote 1) and £3,300,000 increased provision for STA running costs (which is offset by the £3,300,000 decreases on class VII, vote 2). As a result of these changes there will be no addition to the planned total of public expenditure.

The class VII, vote 2, Employment Department's administration running costs limit will be reduced by £3,254,000 from £606,842,000 to £603,588,000. This is the net result of a £3,300,000 reduction in order to offset the £3,300,000 increased provision sought for the STA on class VII, vote 7, £106,000 increased provision sought for a special employment service initiative in Sunderland at the request of the Department of Trade and Industry (which is offset by a £106,000 decrease in the running costs provision on class V, vote 3) and the transfer of £61,000 to the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys (class XX, vote 16).

The class VII, vote 5, Training Commission's running costs limit will be increased by £12,264,000 from £145,754,000 to £158,018,000 (which is partly offset by reductions totalling £8,238,000 on votes 2 and 7).

The class VII, vote 7, Department of Employment: training programmes running costs limit will be reduced by £4,984,000 from £74,265,000 to £69,281,000. This reduction is the net result of the transfer of £12,264,000 back to the Training Commission (class VII, vote 5) as too much was transferred at the winter Supplementary stage; reclassification of £120,000 worth of central services marketing expenditure out of running costs to programme expenditure; and increased running costs provision of £3,300,000 (which is offset by a £3,300,000 reduction in running costs provision on class VII, vote 2) and a transfer of £4,100,000 youth training scheme programme expenditure to running costs, both of which contribute towards the additional running costs expenditure on the STA.

The class VII, vote 4, Health and Safety Commission's running costs limit will be reduced by £24,000 from £93,713,000 to £93,689,000. This small reduction, for which a spring Supplementary Estimate is not required, reflects the transfer of labour force survey costs to the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys (class XX, vote 16).

There is an overall increase in the Employment Department group's running costs of £4,002,000 from £936,432,000 to £940,434,000.

Job Clubs

Mr. Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what plans he has for developing the job club programme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Fowler: I have reviewed the job club network in the light of the fall in unemployment in the last 12 months of 530,000. The job club programme will continue to have a key role in helping longer-term unemployed people to obtain jobs. It will complement and be co-ordinated with the employment training programme, and people who have not found a job on completing employment training will be able to make full use of a job club to do so. Action to ensure that people with special needs, including people with disabilities and people in inner cities, are effectively helped through job clubs will be continued and reinforced.

I have therefore set the employment service a target of 175,000 participants in job clubs in 1989-90. To improve the services that they can offer it is intended to build on best practice and develop the expertise of those running job clubs by concentrating resources in the areas of most need.

An ambitious expansion for job clubs was set in 1987 when the level of unemployment was much higher. The unemployment picture today is far different and some job clubs are underutilised. The job club network is best served, therefore, by rationalising particularly those where alternative job club facilities are available in the same locality. This means that we will be able to streamline the network from around 1,200 in the country to 1,000 nationwide.

To ensure that long-term unemployed people fully appreciate the benefits that job clubs can offer in helping find jobs and the success that participants achieve, a national publicity drive will commence on 30 January.

Trainees

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, if he will publish the most recent 100 per cent. YTS leavers survey for each Training Agency area and region in the north-west, showing the destinations of trainees by ethnic origin, sex and disability and by scheme type.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 25 January 1989]: Most of the information requested is provided monthly in the two-year YTS 100 per cent. follow-up survey results, copies of which are available in the Library. I regret that detailed information showing distinction of trainee by scheme type for each Training Agency area could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish the most recent 100 per cent. leavers survey for each training agency area in the north-west, showing the reasons why trainees left their schemes.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 25 January 1989]: The information requested is published monthly in the two-year YTS 100 per cent. follow-up survey results and copies are available in the Library.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 145

SESSION 1988–89

16th January 1989—27th January 1989

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc, between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instrument etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Mr. Speaker and his deputies are brought together under the heading Speaker's rulings and statements.

Other contributions by Mr. Speaker and his deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates, Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates etc (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R=first reading, 2R=second reading, Money res=money resolution, Com=Committee stage, Rep=Report stage, 3R=third reading, amendt/amendts=amendment/amendments, *=matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.

A1
120w
Northumberland 293-4w, (23:01:89) 844-52
Road accidents 293-4w
Road safety 89w

A9
679

A10
734-5w

A11
734-5w

A12
734-5w
Road works 3-4

A13
325w

A36
4-5

A38
Saltash tunnel 293w

A40
Greater London 574w

A46
4-5

A55
563w

A120
Road works 4

A320 airbus
318

A470
Road works 679

A494
563w

Abbott, Ms Diane
Debates etc.
By election writs, Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 631, 634, 637
Official Secrets Bill, Com (25:01:89) 1077-8, 1122, 1130
Security Service Bill, Com (17:01:89) 200, 224-5, 273-4, 275, 291-2
Questions
Autoguide electronic route guidance system 88-9w
Broadmoor Hospital, Death 801w
Business statements 490-1
Mental hospitals, Ethnic monitoring 113w
"New Financial Regime for Local Authority Housing in England & Wales Consultation Paper" 637-8w
NHS administration 531-2w
Prison staff, Ethnic minorities 390w
Prison staff, Race relations 507-8w, 580w
Prison visitors, Race relations 390w, 579w
Prisoners, Ethnic monitoring 580w
Prisoners, Race relations 579w
Prisons, Ethnic monitoring 579w
Prisons, Race relations 579-80w

Abortion
533-4w
Advisory services 533w
Disciplinary proceedings 532w
Doctors 533w
Law reform 532w
Medical equipment 113w, 356-7w
Medical treatments 533w
Mental handicap 532w
Private health services 532-3w
Prosecutions 368w

Abortion Act 1967
Questions
532w

Absent voting
275w

ABTA
see Association of British Travel Agents

ACAS
see Advisory Conciliation & Arbitration Service

Access to Personal Files (Social Work) (Scotland) Regulations 1989
Debates etc.
(24:01:89) 982-1001

Accident & emergency departments
Eastern Health & Social Services Board 493w
Royal National Orthopaedic Hospital 863

Accidents
Boats 189-90w
Health & Safety Executive 96-7w
Medical malpractice 354w
Minehead 555w
Playgrounds 186w
Ports 624w
Transport 90-1w

Accountability
Inner cities initiative 321
Metropolitan Police 392w

Accounting
National Bus Company 575w
Subsidiary companies 105w

ACMD
see Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs

ACORD
see Advisory Council on Research & Development for Fuel & Power

ACP countries
Lome Convention 371-2w
Overseas aid 373w

ACPO
see Association of Chief Police Officers

Action for Community Employment
Donaghadee 221w
Northern Ireland 221w

ADAS
see Agricultural Development & Advisory Service

Adjournment debates
Speaker's rulings & statements (17:01:89) 309

Adley, Mr Robert
Questions
British Rail, Capital investment 3-4
Business statements 484
Channel tunnel, Railway network 570w, 573w
Clough, Brian, Prosecutions 368w
Diets, Nutrition & health 296w
Eggs, Food standards 310w
Eggs, Salmonella 310w
Football, Hooliganism 771w
Housing, Planning permission 1019
Industry 332
Nationalised industries, Rates & rating 150w
Net Book Agreement 472w
Planning permission, Law reform 636w
Railway closures, Bus services 122-3w
Railway network, EC countries 122w

Administration of justice
Glasgow 408w

Administrative costs
Social security 706-7w

Administrative delays
Agency Benefits Unit 246-8w, 804w
Company investigations 565w
Criminal Injuries Compensation Board 350w, 590w
Disabled Persons (Services Consultation & Representation) Act 1986 870-1
Entry clearances 675w
Family credit 48w, 616w
Land Registry Office 260w, 487w
Members' correspondence 8w
Passports 583-7w
Planning appeals 633w

Administrative delays—continued
Retirement pensions 257-8w
Road construction 97w
Social security claims 48-9w

Advanced Transport for Avon
(24:01:89) 947-81

Advertising
Dept of Employment 553w, 809-10w

Advisory Conciliation & Arbitration Service
181w

Advisory Council on Research & Development for Fuel & Power
343w

Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs
357w

Advisory services
Abortion 533w
Debts 234-5w
Immigration 7w
Social security benefits disqualification 708w

Afghanistan
Overseas aid 686-7

Aflatoxin
Food contamination 57w

AFRC
see Agricultural & Food Research Council

African Development Bank (Further Subscription to Capital Stock) Order 1989
Debates etc.
(16:01:89) 31

African Development Fund (Fifth Replenishment) Order 1989
Debates etc.
(16:01:89) 31

Age
Community charges register 397-8w
Employment Training 171w
Retirement pensions 523-4w

Age participation rates
407w, 592-3w, 759-60w

Agency Benefits Unit
Administrative delays 246-8w, 804w

Agricultural & Food Research Council
Research finance 19-20w

Agricultural Development & Advisory Service
434w

Agricultural improvement scheme
502w
Environmentally sensitive areas 470

Agricultural Inspectorate
628-9w

Agricultural land
Nitrates 472-3
Northern Ireland 144-6w

Agricultural production
Eggs 431w
Set-aside schemes 59-60w

Agricultural products
Departmental responsibilities 193-4w
EC external trade 60w
GATT 441w

Agricultural research
Listeria monocytogenes 319-20w
Research finance 312w, 807-8w

Agricultural subsidies
EC action 125w
Fraud 212w
Milk 58w
Pigs 404-5w, 806w
Sheep 476

Agricultural support systems
EC Agriculture Council 767-8w

Agricultural workers
Set-aside schemes 285w

Agriculture
Departmental publications 603w
EC grants & loans 313w

Agriculture—continued
GATT 314w
Government grants (19:01:89) 579

Agriculture Improvement (Variation) (No 3) Scheme 1988
Debates etc.
(19:01:89) 579

AIDS
Crime 774w
Disease control 861
Drug abuse 357w
Drugs 716w
Foreign patients 860
Forensic science 351w
Medical research 598w
Notifiable diseases 802w
Prison accommodation 3w
Prison population 3w
Republic of Ireland 860

"AIDS & Drug Misuse"
357w

Air accidents
Lockerbie 27-8w, 159, 161-2w, 718w, 739w
M1 124w
Manchester Airport 99w, 573-4w
Military aircraft 653w
Nuclear safety 718w

Air force
Armed forces recruitment 555w
West Germany 26-7w

Air force bases
Radioactive wastes 655w
Scotland 753w

Air freight transport
Transport of hazardous materials 737w
Transport of radioactive materials 468w, 756w

Air pollution
644-6w
Greater London 503-4w, 648-9w
Trees 645w

Air pollution control
Chlorofluorocarbons 1016-7
International conferences 869
Ozone layer 569-70w, 1016-7

Air pollution monitoring
Nitrogen dioxide 503-4w

Air routes
Malaysia 762w
Singapore 103w, 124w, 762w
USA 99w, 294w, 738w

Air safety
385w
Boeing 757 469w

Air traffic
South East region 85w

Air traffic control
Capital investment 467w
Low flying 558-9w
Manpower 467w
South East region 88w

Air transport
EC action 86w
Research 471-2w

Air Transport Users' Committee
85w

Airbus Industrie
318
Management 319

Aircraft
Airport security 26

Aircraft noise
Low flying 449w, 755w

Aircrew
Employment Training 551w
Training 572-3w

Airport security
27
Aircraft 26
Airport staff 26-7, 29
Aviation Security Act 1982 25
Buildings 28
EC action 25-6
Equipment 124-5w
Heathrow Airport 23-5, 27-8, 325w
Police 28
Standing Order No 20 applications (26:01:89) 1199-200

Airport staff
Airport security 26-7, 29
Cleaning services 23-4

Airports
Antarctic 576w
Ownership 325w

Aitken, Mr Jonathan
Debates etc.
Official Secrets Bill, Com (25:01:89) 1073-7, 1101-2, 1109-10, 1116-7
Protection of Privacy Bill, 2R (27:01:89) 1306
Security Service Bill, Com (16:01:89) 48-52, 64, 113-4, (17:01:89) 187-92, 231-2, 261-4, 274-6, 285-8, 298-301, 304
Security Service Bill, 3R (23:01:89) 757, 773-6

Albany Prison
Prison accommodation 272w

Alexander, Mr Richard
Debates etc.
Food, Consumer protection (24:01:89) 913-5
Questions
AIDS, Disease control 861
Middle East, Peace negotiations 160-1
Non-domestic rates 148w
Rating revaluations, Non-domestic rates 202w

Alexander Fleming House
Repairs & maintenance 304w

Aliens
Republic of Ireland 329-30w
Tenants' choice 150w

Alison, Rt Hon Michael, Second Church Estates Commissioner
Questions
Clergy, Retirement 486-7w
House of Commons questions, Church Commissioners 486w

All party groups
Speaker's rulings & statements (24:01:89) 875

Allason, Mr Rupert
Debates etc.
Official Secrets Bill, Com (25:01:89) 1053-61, 1077, 1130, 1131
Security Service Bill, Com (16:01:89) 53, 62-5, 74, 75, 76, 77, 79, 82, 86, 102, (17:01:89) 189, 190, 195, 197-201, 216, 240, 248-50, 253, 262, 275, 281, 283-4, 287
Security Service Bill, 3R (23:01:89) 756, 776, 778-80, 791
Questions
Air accidents, Lockerbie 159
Civil service, Lie detectors 20
Teacher training, In-service training 703w

Allen, Mr Graham
Debates etc.
Pre-school education (18:01:89) 398
Questions
Agricultural subsidies, Fraud 212w
Bees, Animal diseases 307w
British Museum, Conservation 17
Challenger tanks, Employment opportunities 276-7w
Civil service 19-20
Coal mining, Subsidence 803w
Community charge exemptions 500w

Allen, Mr Graham—continued
Community programme, Nottingham 280-1w
Council house rents, Nottingham 303w
Cruelty to children, Broxtowe estate 479-80, 607w, 705w
Cruelty to children, Research finance 671-2w
Cruelty to children, Sexual offences 798-800w
Dept of Social Security, Civil service dispersal 257w
Eggs, Food labelling 53w
Factory Inspectorate, Civil service manpower 51w
Farms, Nottingham 699w
House of Commons services, Day care of children 394w
House renovation grants 203-4w
Income support, Nottingham 244w
Intelligence services 367w
Members' allowances 196-8w
Members' allowances, Expenditure 10-1w
Members' facilities, Facsimile transmission 127w
Ministerial resignations, Members' pay 79w
NHS Review, Nottingham Health Authority 856
Nottingham County Football Club 347w
Nurses, Career structure 112w, 715-6w
Pensioners, Nottingham 47w, 414w
Personal income, Tax burden 374w
Post Office, Industrial relations 15w
Railway electrification, Midland main railway line 737w
Road works, Public utilities 736-7w
St Anne's Hospital School Nottingham, School closures 17w
Social Fund, Community care 805w
Stray dogs, Nottingham 200w
Tax burden 784w
Tax burden, Average earnings 357w
Tourism Review Committee 49w
Unemployment, Statistics 251w
Unemployment benefits, Nottingham 364w
War on Want, Overseas aid 686
Youth custody, Departmental correspondence 200w

Alternative energy
Environment 619-20w
Research finance 698w

Alton, Mr David
Debates etc.
By election writs, Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 627, 640, 648, 649, 654-5, 662
Questions
Abortion, Prosecutions 368w
Births & Deaths Registration Act 1953, Carlisle Hospital 32-3w
Inner cities initiative, Accountability 321
Iraq, Biological weapons 194w
Kidneys, Transplant surgery 864
National insurance surcharge, Tax yields 706w
Prisoners, Confessions 393w
Radioactive waste disposal, Liverpool bay 461w

Aluminium
Food composition 801w
Health hazards 799-800w
Infant foods 610-1w, 806-7w
Water pollution 463w
Water supply 305-6w

Alzheimer's disease
799-800w

Ambulance services
Emergency calls 606-7w
Greater London 606-7w

Amess, Mr David
Questions
Abortion, Prosecutions 368w
Export promotion 230w
Magistrates' Courts Review 139-40w
Official engagements 705-6w
Rate limitation, Basildon District Council 642-3w

Amess, Mr David—continued
US Senate 792-3w
Wallenberg, Raoul 363w
Wallenberg, Raoul, Departmental correspondence 773w
Wallenberg, Raoul, House of Commons questions 362-3w

Amnesties
Firearms 510-5w

Amnesty International
792w

Amos, Mr Alan
Questions
Abortion, Private health services 532-3w
Business statements 1180
City technology colleges, Rural areas 596w
Common sheep meat regime 311w
Curriculum, Northumberland 703-4w
Docklands Light Railway, Expenditure 573w
Foreign companies in UK, Japan 290-1w, 330-1w
Japan, Funerals 12w, 661w
Medical treatments, War casualties 226w
Parish councils, Local government finance 641w
Prisoners of war, Compensation 363w, 660-1w
Road signs, Rural areas 83w
Taxation, Small businesses 688w
Unemployment, Hexham 421-2w
VAT registration 180w

Amusement arcades
London boroughs 459w

Anderson, Mr Donald
Debates etc.
Official Secrets Bill, Com (25:01:89) 1099
Oral question time point of order (23:01:89) 681
Security Service Bill, Com (16:01:89) 47, 87, 93-7, 106
Questions
Airport security, EC action 25-6
Association of British Travel Agents, South Africa 751w
Railway transport, Wales 674

Andrew Inquiry
see Government Legal Services Review

Animal breeding
Poultry 719w

Animal cruelty
Badgers 137w

Animal diseases
Bees 307w

Animal experiments
Cosmetics 508-9w

Animal feed
Codes of practice 158w
Compensation 53w
Fish 427w
Food inspection 321w
Pigs 405w
Poultry 314-5w
Salmonella 158-9w, 428-9w, 808w

Animal husbandry
Government assistance 312w

Animal welfare
Planning permission 210w

Animals
Tuberculosis 158w

Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986
Questions
508w

Anniversaries
Books 430w
Ministry of Agriculture 312w

Annual reports
(17:01:89) 180-309, 258-9w, 390w
HM Inspectorate of Schools 761w

Antarctic
Airports 576w
France 576w

Antiaircraft missiles
450w
BAOR 130w

Antidumping
Japan 566w

Antidumping duties
Electronic equipment 259-60w

Antitank missiles
BAOR 129-30w

Antrim Hospital
497w

Aplastic anaemia
38-9w
Medical research 716-7w

Appeals
Leasehold housing 147w
Nurses 682

Arafat, Yasser
155

Arbuthnot, Mr James
Questions
Economic growth, Consumer expenditure 687w

Archaeological sites
454w
Planning authorities 796w

Archer, Rt Hon Peter
Debates etc.
Official Secrets Bill, Com (25:01:89) 1101, 1103, 1109, 1114-5, 1124, 1129, 1133, 1138
Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Bill, Allocation of time motion (23:01:89) 706-9, 712

Ards peninsula
Further education colleges 143w

Armagh
Gypsies 491-2w
School buildings 333-4w

Armed conflict
Conventional weapons 869

Armed forces
Community charge 453w
Helicopters 279w
Lockerbie 27-8w, 447w
Pindar project 278w

Armed forces casualties
Personal injury compensation 769-70w

Armed forces catering services
Marines 277w

Armed forces deployment
Western Europe 129w

Armed forces housing
Fees & charges 452-4w
Rates & rating 452-4w
Tenants' choice 643-4w

Armed forces pay
Army 451-2w
Lockerbie 28w

Armed Forces Pay Review Body
451-2w

Armed forces recruitment
Air force 555w
Land acquisition 555w
RAF Cranwell 555w

Armed forces storage depots
197w

Armed forces training
BAOR 130w
Burma 195w

Armed forces training—continued
Dartmoor national park 757w
Military aid to civil community 447w

Armenia
Disaster relief 372w

Armoured fighting vehicles
450w
Defence procurement 451w

Arms control
Chemical weapons 655w
International conferences 654w
Research 654w

Arms control negotiations
Chemical weapons 373-4w, 575-6w

Armstrong, Ms Hilary
Debates etc.
Pre-school education (18:01:89) 424-7
Questions
Homelessness, Families 636w
Inflation 678w
Junior hospital doctors, Working hours 854
Roads, Northern region 96w
Unemployment, Lanchester 750w
Unemployment, Willington 750w
Unemployment benefit offices, Office closures 749-50w

Army
Armed forces pay 451-2w
Horses 280w, 454w, 758w
Scotland 752w

Army bases
Scotland 398w

Army strength
BAOR 129w

Arnold, Mr Jacques
Debates etc.
Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Bill, Allocation of time motion (23:01:89) 718-20
Rate support grants (19:01:89) 508, 514, 553-4
Questions
Overseas investment 685w
Sudan, Debts 372w
Tourist industry, Employment 170w
War on Want 686

Arnold, Mr Tom
Questions
Disley bypass, Road construction 571w
Treasury, Operating costs 694w

Arrests
Drug crimes 675w
Football 23-4w, 276w, 288w, 338w, 353-4w, 390w, 464w, 719-20w, 732w
Luton Town Football Club 23-4w, 276w
Mendis, Viraj 335-43
Terrorism 140-2w

Arson
Fires 134-5w

Art works
Conservation 77w
Objects in lieu of tax 667w

Artillery
450w

Arts
Business 76w

Arts finance
76w
Devon 75w
Government assistance 76w

ASAPHA
see Association of Sea & Air Port Health Authorities

Ash-cum-Ridley
485w

Ashby, Mr David
Questions
Air accidents, M1 124w
Infant Life (Preservation) Act 1929 533w

Ashdown, Rt Hon Paddy
Debates etc.
Elected Authorities (Northern Ireland) Bill, Rep & 3R (26:01:89) 1211, 1219, 1254, 1257, 1262-3, 1269, 1277, 1280-1
Official Secrets Bill, Com (25:01:89) 1075, 1117, 1120
Questions
Independent Broadcasting Authority, Public appointments 479, 1174-5
Social security benefits, South Somerset 245w
Widows' benefits 617-8w

Ashley, Rt Hon Jack
Questions
Aluminium, Food composition 801w
Aluminium, Health hazards 799-800w
Attendance allowance, Social security benefits rules 618-9w
Bovine somatotropin, Milk 157w
Business statements 1181
Council of Europe, Children's rights 363w
Eggs, Salmonella 308w
Handicapped workers, Treasury 689w
Infant foods, Aluminium 806-7w
Infant foods, Food composition 807w
Infant foods, Food labelling 807w
Listeria monocytogenes, Food poisoning 607w
Ministry of Agriculture, Food standards 603-4w
Prison hospitals, Hospital patients 773w
Prisons, Environmental health 773w
Prisons, Food hygiene 771-3w
Prisons, Food poisoning 773w
Teacher training, Deaf 193w

Ashton, Mr Joseph
Questions
House prices, Inflation 1171-2

Assassination
Palestine Liberation Organisation 362w

Assisted places scheme
Expenditure 65w
Scotland 64-5w

Association of British Travel Agents
South Africa 751w

Association of Chief Police Officers
464w, 673-4w, 771w

Association of Sea & Air Port Health Authorities
701w

ATA
see Advanced Transport for Avon

Atkins, Mr Robert, Under-Secretary of State for Trade and Industry
Debates etc.
Telepoint services, Ministerial statements (26:01:89) 1190-8
Questions
Accounting, Subsidiary companies 105w
Air transport, Research 471-2w
Airbus Industrie 318
Airbus Industrie, Management 319
Barrow in Furness 234w
Boeing, AWACS 330
Boeing, Offset arrangements 330
Bottle banks 228w
British Steel Corporation, Privatisation 567w
Cellular phones, Licensing 231w
Century Newspapers, Takeovers 106w
EC grants & loans, Derbyshire 106-7w
EC internal trade, Departmental publications 105w
Economic League 330

Atkins, Mr Robert—continued
Foreign investment in UK, USA 324
Goods vehicles 232w
Government assistance to industry 331
Government assistance to industry, Corby 331
Government assistance to industry, Publicity 331-2
Import duties, USA 325
Industrial investment, Manufacturing industries 323-5
Industrial investment, North West region 229w
Industry, Economic regions 563w
Machine tools industry 228-9w
Manufacturing industries 235-6w
Manufacturing industries, Foreign investment in UK 325
Manufacturing industries, Industrial production 229-30w
Manufacturing industries, Productivity 231w
Methyl phosphonyl difluoride, Exports 443w
Net Book Agreement, Disclosure of information 108w
Net Book Agreement, Shops 107-8w
Pirate radio stations, Greater London 446w
Productivity 324
Radio frequencies 566w
Recycling 566w
Regional aid 234w, 331
Regional aid, Scotland 568-70w
Regional development grants, Expenditure 445-6w
Regional enterprise grants, Expenditure 444-5w
Remote sensing 765w
Renault, Subsidies 766w
Rolls-Royce Aeroengines 318-9
Rolls-Royce Aeroengines, Exports 667-8w
Satellite broadcasting, Television licences 107w
Satellites 233w
Society of British Aerospace Companies 236w
Space technology 232-3w
Takeovers, EC law 107w
Television channels, Multipoint video distribution systems 566w
Trade agreements, China 324-5
VAT registration, Durham 236w
Wrongful trading, Insolvency Act 1986 105w

Atkinson, Mr David
Questions
British Museum, Conservation 17
Cars, Fraud 329
Community care 541w
Consumer credit, Codes of practice 693w
European Security Conference 255w
Housing benefits, Young people 707w
Litter, Law reform 630w
Metropolitan Police, Law enforcement 776w
NHS Review, Community Care Review 859
Oil pollution 24w
Road tolls, Motorways 12
Sheltered housing, Mentally ill 707w
Social security benefits rules, Investment 417w
Tourist industry, Gaming clubs 146
USSR, Human rights 328-9w

Atlantic Salmon Conservation Trust
Tax allowances 378w

Atomic Weapons Research Establishment
706w

Attendance allowance
Employment Training 618-9w
Social security benefits rules 618-9w

Attorney-General
262-3w
House of Commons questions 154w
Ministerial policy advisers 11w
Republic of Ireland 367-8w

Audit
Defence research establishments 198-9w

Audit Commission
see Audit Commission for Local Authorities in England & Wales

Audit Commission for Local Authorities in England & Wales
161w
Homelessness 636-7w

Audit committees
(26:01:89) 1205

Autoguide electronic route guidance system
88-9w
Greater London 387w

Availability for work
Social security appeals 415w
Social security benefits disqualification 615-6w

Average earnings
Tax burden 357w
VAT 680w

Aviation Security Act 1982
Questions
Airport security 25

Avon
Rapid transit systems (24:01:89) 947-81

Avon Light Rail Transit Bill (HL) 1987/88
Debates etc.
2R order read (19:01:89) 461
2R (24:01:89) 947-81

AWACS
330
Boeing 330

AWE Aldermaston
198-9w

AWE Burghfield
198-9w

AWRE
see Atomic Weapons Research Establishment

Ayrshire & Arran Health Board
Orthopaedics 61-2w
Property transfer 61w
Public appointments 162w
Surgery 61-2w

Bacon & Meat Manufacturers' Association
156w

Badgers
Animal cruelty 137w

Bail hostels
393w

Baker, Rt Hon Kenneth, Secretary of State for Education and Science
Debates etc.
Pre-school education (18:01:89) 396-402
Questions
City technology colleges, Capital investment 383w
Dept of Education & Science, Cash limits 383-4w
HM Inspectorate of Schools, Annual reports 761w
Pupil records 326-8w
Teachers, Personal records 19w

Baker, Mr Nicholas
Debates etc.
Cooper, Roger, Iran (18:01:89) 458-61
Questions
New businesses 689w
Road construction, Nature conservation 97w
Set-aside schemes, EC action 315w

Balance of payments
684w, 1168

Balance of trade
233w, 686-7w
Motor vehicles 442-4w

Baldry, Mr Tony
Questions
Art works, Objects in lieu of tax 667w
Housing associations, Oxfordshire 644w
VAT, European Court of Justice 679w

Bank loans
Farmers 144w

Bank of England
684w

Bankruptcy
Farmers 403w
Small businesses 145

Banks, Mr Robert
Debates etc.
Protection of Privacy Bill, 2R (27:01:89) 1305
Questions
Birds, Oil pollution 463w

Banks, Mr Tony
Debates etc.
Avon Light Rail Transit Bill (HL), Members' voting behaviour (24:01:89) 874
Beef, EC action (18:01:89) 439
By election writs, Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 602, 606, 612, 615-6, 618, 622, 624, 529, 632-3, 641, 647, 652, 654, 655, 657
EC Agriculture Council (25:01:89) 1037
London Government Bill, 1R (25:01:89) 1044-6
Ministers, Press releases (26:01:89) 1204-5
Oral question time intervention (16:01:89) 7
Oral questions, Ministers (26:01:89) 1202
Prime Minister's questions, Supplementary questions (19:01:89) 496
Private notice question intervention (18:01:89) 338
Rate support grants (19:01:89) 497, 503-4, 520, 535-40, 544
Security Service Bill, Com (16:01:89) 52, 53-4, 67, 69, 71, 73, 74, 75, 83-90, 91, 100, 101, 102, (17:01:89) 182, 183, 184, 186, 187, 189, 190, 192, 196, 200, 201, 208-9, 225-7, 231, 234, 236, 275, 279, 280
Security Service Bill, 3R (23:01:89) 764, 767, 785-6
Questions
Alternative energy, Research finance 698w
Antarctic, Airports 576w
British Transport Police 293w
Business statements 492, 1184
Business vote, City of London 592w
Channel tunnel, King's Cross 7
Channel tunnel, Railway network 102w
Channel tunnel, Railway stations 22w, 101-2w, 293w, 763w
Civic dignitaries 592w
Civil service, Foreign & Commonwealth Office 264-5w
Consumer credit, Credit controls 693w
County Hall, Property transfer 795w
District health authorities, Local authorities 40w
Energy conservation 698w
Environment protection, Expenditure 732w
Family credit, Administrative delays 48w, 616w
Family credit, Take-up 617w
Family income supplements, Social security claims 618w
Government departments, Debt collection 2w
Greater London Council, Local government reform 795w
Homelessness, Audit Commission for Local Authorities in England & Wales 636-7w
Housing benefits, Social security recipients 616w
Income support, Social security recipients 616w
Income support, Social security reform 48w
King's Cross, Fire services 738w
Ministers' visits abroad, Mass media 2w
Museums & galleries, Stock control 73-4w
Official engagements 127w
Parking Enforcement Working Party 93w

Banks, Mr Tony—continued
Poverty 870
Railway stations, Planning permission 21-2w
Smoking, Health warnings 535w
Social Fund, Greater London 711w
Social security claims, Administrative delays 48-9w
Special schools, Government grants to local authorities 598-9w
Taxation, Carbon dioxide 693w
Transport supplementary grants, London boroughs 738-40w
Urban planning, Greater London 795w
Water pollution, Greater London 153w
Widows' benefits 617-8w

Banstead
Prison accommodation 5w

BAOR
Antiaircraft missiles 130w
Antitank missiles 129-30w
Armed forces training 130w
Army strength 129w
Drunkenness 27w
Tanks 129w

Barbouti, Ishan
351-2w
Export controls 359w
Libyan Arab Republic 352w
West Germany 352w

Barlow Clowes
332w, 417w
Financial services 331w
Self-regulating organisations 331-2w

Barnes, Mr Harry
Debates etc.
Elected Authorities (Northern Ireland) Bill, Rep & 3R (26:01:89) 1286-7
Questions
Association of Chief Police Officers 674w
Community charge 1013
Community charges register, Electoral register 682
Dept of Social Security, Departmental publications 243w
EC grants & loans, Derbyshire 106-7w
Exchange rates 358w
Football, Arrests 24w, 390w, 464w
Football, Identity cards 23w, 456w
Football, Public order policing 276w
High Moor colliery, Mine accidents 283-4w, 425w, 619w
High Moor colliery, Mine safety 283w
Housing completions, Derbyshire 460-1w
Medical appeal tribunals, Medical equipment 118w
Meningitis, North Derbyshire Health Authority 410w, 803w
Overseas trade, Malta 441-2w
Pigs, Agricultural subsidies 806w

Barnes, Mrs Rosie
Questions
East London river crossing, Land values 387w

Barnsley
Greenbelt 643w
Unemployment 165w
Waste disposal 153w

Barnstaple-Exeter railway
Government grants 95w

Barristers
Women 763-4w

Barron, Mr Kevin
Debates etc.
Tinsley Park, Planning permission (27:01:89) 1366-8, 1371-2
Questions
British Poultry Federation 467
Rate support grants 639w

Barrow in Furness
234w

Basildon District Council
Rate limitation 642-3w

Basingstoke & North Hampshire Health Authority
Population 801w

Bassett Foods
Takeovers 477-8

Batiste, Mr Spencer
Questions
Closed shop 175-6w
Council house sales, Leeds 208w
Group of Seven 678w
Industrial tribunals, Legal costs 750w
Opencast mining, Flood control 50w
Opencast mining, Industrial health & safety 622w
Opencast mining, Mine safety 551w
Productivity 324
Road works, Public utilities 292w

Batteries
Wheelchairs 542w

Battersea bridge
Shipping accidents 573w

Battle, Mr John
Debates etc.
Rate support grants (19:01:89) 513, 527-30, 549
Questions
Balance of payments 684w
Employment Training 171w
National insurance benefits 712-4w
Rates & rating, Revenue support grant 25w
Repossession orders, Mortgage defaulters 641w

BBC
138w, 592w, 620w

Beaumont-Dark, Mr Anthony
Questions
Middle East, Peace negotiations 159-60
Overseas investment 685w
Skill shortages 176-7w

Beckett, Mrs Margaret
Debates etc.
BREL (1988), Privatisation (17:01:89) 164
Child benefit (18:01:89) 380-4
Members, Immigration (24:01:89) 873
Questions
Income support, Social security benefits rules 417w
Income support, Social security reform 417w
Museums & galleries, Stock control 74w
Pensioners, Social security benefits 241w
Social security benefits, Social security recipients 524-5w
Unemployment benefits 246w
Widows' benefits, Expenditure 248w

Bed & breakfast accommodation
638w
Per capita costs 639w

Beef
EC action 311w, (18:01:89) 435-56
Exports 499w
Imports 429w
Scotland 336-8w

Bees
Animal diseases 307w

Beggs, Mr Roy
Debates etc.
Elected Authorities (Northern Ireland) Bill, Rep & 3R (26:01:89) 1212, 1250, 1253
Industrial development, Northern Ireland (26:01:89) 1295
Protection of Privacy Bill, 2R (27:01:89) 1303
Questions
Antrim Hospital 497w

Beggs, Mr Roy—continued
Cervical cancer, Women's Hospital Liverpool 225w
Eggs, Salmonella 468-9
Fire services, Planning permission 334w
Languages education, Northern Ireland 334w
Passport Office, Belfast 135-6w
Special education, Northern Ireland 141-2w
Teachers, Early retirement 29w
Teachers, Northern Ireland 142-3w

"Being Disabled Costs More Than They Said"
118-9w

Beith, Mr A J
Debates etc.
A1, Northumberland (23:01:89) 844-7, 851-2
By election writs, Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 661
Questions
A1, Road accidents 293-4w
A1, Road safety 89w
Berwick Rangers Football Club, Identity cards 348w
Civil service dispersal, Greater London 77w
Civil service recruitment, Pay 18
Common sheep meat regime, Northumberland 320w
Consumer credit, Interest rates 1170
Exports 232w
Housing associations, Domestic rents 639w

Belfast
Community health services 492w
Health 492w
Hospitals 497w
Passport Office 135-6w

Belfast Airport
676w

Belfast City Hospital
493-4w
Eastern Health & Social Services Board 492w

Belfast Prison
599-600w

Bell, Stuart
Members' personal statements (19:01:89) 494

Bell, Mr Stuart
Debates etc.
Devlin, Tim, Members' personal statements (19:01:89) 494
Prime Minister's questions, House of Commons procedure (19:01:89) 496
Questions
Middle East, Peace negotiations 159

Bellingham, Mr Henry
Questions
Community charge, Norfolk 631w
Ministers' visits abroad, USA 320-1w
NHS, Contracts for services 540-1w
Unemployment, East Anglia 164w

Benn, Rt Hon Tony
Debates etc.
Security Service Bill, Com (17:01:89) 182, 193-7, 220
Questions
Mendis, Viraj, Arrests 339

Bennett, Mr Andrew F
Debates etc.
By election writs, Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 592, 593-4, 597, 605, 613-4, 621-2, 625, 646, 648-9, 651
Official Secrets Bill, Com (25:01:89) 1051, 1099, 1101, 1110, 1121
Oral questions, Ministers (25:01:89) 1040, (26:01:89) 1202
Security Service Bill, Com (16:01:89) 41, 90-3, (17:01:89) 210-3, 228, 232, 241-2, 245-6, 252, 275, 277-8, 279-80, 305, 307

Bennett, Mr Andrew F—continued
Written questions, Disclosure of information (17:01:89) 174
Questions
Environmentally sensitive areas 470
Field walls, Government grants 310-1w
Magistrates, Tameside 439-41w
Midwives, Pay settlements 530w
National Curriculum History Working Group 597w
Radio engineering, Glengarry forest 336w
Rhizomania disease, Public footpaths 361w
VAT, Books 680w
West coast railway line, Investment 89-90w

Bennett, Mr Nicholas
Debates etc.
By election writs, Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 641, 642, 653, 657, 664
Child benefit (18:01:89) 352, 353
EC Agriculture Council (25:01:89) 1036
School Curriculum Development Committee & Secondary Examinations Council Order 1988 (16:01:89) 121
Questions
Abortion, Medical equipment 113w, 356-7w
Boats, Accidents 189-90w
Breathalysers, Christmas 515-6w
Breathalysers, Police powers 516w
Business statements 486-7, 1184-5
Butter, Food imports 60w, 699-700w
Criminal Injuries Compensation Board, Administrative delays 590w
EC Labour & Social Affairs Council 173w
Eggs 361w
Ferries, Irish Sea 120w, 190w, 761w
Group of Seven 678w
Higher education, Local authorities 665w
Holiday accommodation 142
Meat, Republic of Ireland 471
Mendis, Viraj, Council housing 651w
Mendis, Viraj, Deportation 516w
Mendis, Viraj, Housing benefits 651-2w
Mendis, Viraj, Income tax 791w
Mendis, Viraj, Legal costs 487w
Mendis, Viraj, Social security benefits 523w
Mendis, Viraj, Tuition fees 476w
Mendis, Viraj, Unemployment benefits 552w
Mortgage interest rates 1172
Potato Marketing Board 361w
Potato Marketing Board, Costs 361w
Primary health care, Patient-professional relationship 412w
Pupil-teacher ratios, Wales 480-2w
Railway closures 91w
Rent arrears, Brent 208-9w
Residential care, Pembroke 481-2w
Retirement age 524w
Retirement age, Costs 524w
Retirement pensions, Age 523-4w
Second homes, Community charge 481w
Teachers, List 99 476-8w
Welsh language, Curriculum 346w, 431-2w
Welsh language, Schools 780-2w
Welsh language, Teachers 345-6w, 781-2w
Welsh Office, "Our Changing Schools" 664w

Bermingham, Mr Gerald
Debates etc.
Security Service Bill, Com (16:01:89) 80, 82-3, 85, 88, 94, 97-9, 105
Security Service Bill, 3R (23:01:89) 746, 758, 759
Questions
Airport security, Equipment 124-5w
International Maritime Organisation, Shipping safety 389w
Prison accommodation, AIDS 3w
Prison population, AIDS 3w
Prisoners, Childbirth 517w
Prisoners, Mothers 517w
Prisoners, Women 516-7w, 675w
Prisons, Mother & baby units 517w

Berwick Rangers Football Club
Identity cards 348w

Betting
Horse racing 507w

Bevan, Mr David Gilroy
Questions
Tourists 141-2

Bexley
Mentally handicapped 547w

BFMF
see British Footwear Manufacturers' Federation

Bidwell, Mr Sydney
Questions
Greenhouse effect, Exhaust emissions 650w
Lung diseases, Exhaust emissions 355w

Biological weapons
Iraq 194w

Bioplan Holdings
(17:01:89) 310-6

Birds
Oil pollution 463w

Birmingham
Derelict land grants 147w

Birth registration
Prosecutions 368w

Births & Deaths Registration Act 1953
Questions
Carlisle Hospital 32-3w

BL
see British Library

Blaenau Gwent
Housing 432w

Blair, Tony
698w

Blair, Mr Tony
Questions
Employment Training 810w
Wages councils 811w
Youth training scheme, Industrial accidents 810w

Blaker, Rt Hon Sir Peter
Questions
Middle East, Peace negotiations 156

Blasphemy
137w

Blood Products Laboratory
Factor VIII 36w
Hepatitis 36w

Blood transfusion services
Health service staff 35w

Blunkett, Mr David
Debates etc.
Rate support grants (19:01:89) 499-500, 502, 504, 573-4
Questions
Bassett Foods, Takeovers 477-8
County Hall, Working conditions 794w
Domestic rates, Scotland 593-4w
Local authorities, Public bodies 1015
Local authority powers, Regional planning & development 23w
NHS administration, Pay 802w
NHS Review, District health authorities 856-8
Public libraries, Fees & charges 154w
Rates & rating, Greater London 733-4w
Somalia, Overseas aid 563w
Water authorities, Pay 794w

Blyth valley
Unemployment benefits 257w

BM
see British Museum

BMA
see British Medical Association

BMMA
see Bacon & Meat Manufacturers' Association

BNFL
see British Nuclear Fuels

Board & lodging charges
Hostels 418w
Sheltered housing 707w
Social security abuse 242w

Board of Inland Revenue
see Inland Revenue

Boateng, Mr Paul
Debates etc.
Rate support grants (19:01:89) 509-10
Questions
Hostels 649w
Mendis, Viraj, Deportation 340
Urban programme, Local authority powers 304w

Boats
Accidents 189-90w

Body, Sir Richard
Debates etc.
Food, Consumer protection (24:01:89) 895-6, 904-5
Official Secrets Bill, Com (25:01:89) 1082, 1096, 1097
Questions
Agricultural products, Departmental responsibilities 193-4w
Agriculture, Departmental publications 603w
Butter, New Zealand 212w
Consumer protection, EC action 330w
EC Agriculture Council, Agricultural support systems 767-8w
EC external trade, New Zealand 807w
European monetary system 358w
Food standards, Departmental responsibilities 126w
GATT 290w
GATT, Agricultural products 441w
Salmonella, Poultry 110-1w
Sheep meat, New Zealand 699-700w
Slaughterhouses, Food hygiene 318w

Body belts
Prisoners 580-1w

Boeing
AWACS 330
Offset arrangements 330

Boeing 757
Air safety 469w

Bolton
Council house sales 209w
Housing completions 631w
Schools 133w

Bomber Command
Military decorations 1177-8

Bombings
Guildford 8-10w, 368w

Bonsor, Sir Nicholas
Debates etc.
Official Secrets Bill, Com (25:01:89) 1092-3

Bookmakers
Office of Fair Trading 443w

Books
Anniversaries 430w
VAT 680w

Borders Region
Low flying 448-9w

Borough junction
292w

Boscawen, Mr Robert
Debates etc.
Security Service Bill, Com (16:01:89) 81-3
Security Service Bill, 3R (23:01:89) 763-5

Boswell, Mr Tim
Debates etc.
Beef, EC action (18:01:89) 451-2
Questions
Czechoslovakia, Human rights 153

Boswell, Mr Tim—continued
EC Agriculture Council 603w
Eggs, Salmonella 473-4, 808w
Inner cities initiative, East Midlands 320
Local plans, Rural areas 639w
NHS administration, Cost effectiveness 532w
Personal savings 690-1w
Pesticides 318-9w
Schools, Libraries 382-3w
Water authorities, Environment protection 505w

Bottle banks
228w

Bottomley, Mr Peter, Under-Secretary of State for Transport
Debates etc.
A1, Northumberland (23:01:89) 846, 847-52
Questions
A1, Road accidents 293-4w
A1, Road safety 89w
A40, Greater London 574w
A120, Road works 4
Accidents, Health & Safety Executive 96-7w
Air accidents, Lockerbie 739w
Air accidents, Manchester Airport 99w, 573-4w
Air routes, Malaysia 762w
Air routes, Singapore 103w, 124w
Air routes, USA 99w, 294w, 738w
Air safety 385w
Air traffic control, Manpower 467w
Air traffic control, South East region 88w
Air transport, EC action 86w
Aircrew, Training 572-3w
Airport security, Equipment 124-5w
Airports, Ownership 325w
Autoguide electronic route guidance system 88-9w
Autoguide electronic route guidance system, Greater London 387w
Boeing 757, Air safety 469w
Bridges, Road signs 573w
Britannia bridge, Road works 325w
Bus lanes, Codes of practice 99w
Bypasses, Road construction 96w
Channel tunnel, Motorways 85w
Cycling, Crash helmets 100w
Cycling, Government assistance 93w
Dartford tunnel, Road tolls 763w
Disley bypass, Road construction 571w
Drinking & driving, Publicity 91w
East London river crossing, Finance 93w
Exhaust emissions, EC law 190w
Goods vehicles, Weighing machines 467w
Heathrow Airport, Capital investment 467w
Lorries, Motor vehicle testing 291-2w
Lorries, Pedestrian areas 97w
M1 120w
M1, Road traffic 572w
M1, Road traffic control 82w, 572w
M3, Road construction 468w
M3-M27 link, Public inquiries 468w
M40, Road construction 385-6w
M42, Road construction 97-8w
Ministerial policy advisers, Dept of Transport 100w
Mobility of disabled, Government assistance 94-5w
Motor vehicles, Fraud 123w
Motor vehicles, Lighting 99-100w
Motorcycles, Casualties 5-6
Motorcycles, Courier services 6
Motorcycles, Driving licences 386-7w
Motorways, North West region 87w
Motorways, Road construction 87w
Motorways, Road signs 189w
Motorways, Road traffic control 95w, 120w
Motorways, Road works 87-8w
Parking Enforcement Working Party 93w
Pay incentives, Dept of Transport 737w
Public service vehicles, Motor vehicle testing 389w
Road accidents, Death 90w
Road accidents, Motorways 93w

Bottomley, Mr Peter—continued
Road construction, Administrative delays 97w
Road construction, Burley-in-Wharfedale 123w
Road construction, Local authorities 189w
Road construction, Nature conservation 97w
Road safety 98w
Road safety, Children 98w
Road safety, Railway closures 13-4
Road safety, Urban areas 98w
Road safety education, Courier services 13-4
Road signs, Rural areas 83w
Road traffic, Costs 93w
Road traffic, Greater London 89w, 92w
Road traffic, South East region 93-4w
Road traffic, Urban areas 96w
Road traffic control, Equipment 89w
Road transport, Cabotage 121w
Road works, Greater London 734-5w
Road works, Public utilities 123w, 292w, 736-7w
Road works, South West region 4-5
Roads 95w
Roads, East Anglia 3-4
Roads, Greater London 83w
Roads, Northern region 95-6w
Safety belts, Minibuses 762-3w
Saltash tunnel, A38 293w
Severn bridge, Construction costs 574w
Severn bridge, Road accidents 762w
Severn bridge, Road tolls 467w
Sonic booms, Cornwall 100w
Suzuki, Motor vehicle safety 191-2w
Trailers, Road accidents 94w
Transport, Accidents 90-1w
Transport of hazardous materials, Air freight transport 737w
Transport of radioactive materials, Air freight transport 468w
Transport of radioactive materials, EC action 468w
Transport supplementary grants, London boroughs 738-40w
Tyre tread depths, Research 294w
Tyre tread depths, Road accidents 294w

Bottomley, Mrs Virginia, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Dept of the Environment
Debates etc.
Rate support grants (19:01:89) 570-5
Questions
Air pollution 644-6w
Air pollution, Greater London 648-9w
Air pollution, Trees 645w
Archaeological sites 454w
Archaeological sites, Planning authorities 796w
Birds, Oil pollution 463w
Chlorofluorocarbons 639w
Chlorofluorocarbons, China 635w
Climate, Research finance 638w
Community charge 631w
Control of Trade in Endangered Species (Enforcement) Regulations 1985, Civil service manpower 503w
Council house sales, Local government revenue 504w
County Hall, Property transfer 457w, 795w
County Hall, Working conditions 794w
Dog registration scheme 462w
Dogs, Death 461w
Domestic rates, Rate increases 644w
Environment, Research finance 635w
Fire services, Rates & rating 305w
Greater London Council, Local government reform 795w
Greenhouse effect 637w
Greenhouse effect, Exhaust emissions 650w
Hazardous wastes, Imports 209w
Hedges & ditches, Devon 502w
Hedges & ditches, Environment protection 501-2w
Housing construction, Inner London boroughs 463w
Lead free petrol 632w

Bottomley, Mrs Virginia*—*continued
Lead free petrol, Garages & petrol stations 632w
Litter, Law reform 630w
Litter, Local government expenditure 504w
Local authorities 1015
Local authorities, Companies 794w
Local authorities, Public bodies 1014-5
Local government expenditure, Local Government Act 1972 636w
Local Government Practices & Procedures Inquiry 503w
Local government services, Competition 1020
Local government staff 502w
Local government staff, Day care of children 649w
Local government staff, Pay settlements 457w
Middlesbrough Borough Council 1020-1
Middlesbrough Borough Council, Privatisation 1019-20
Nationalised industries, Rates & rating 150w
Nature Conservancy Council, Environment protection 207-8w
Nature conservation, EC trade 153w, 503w
Nitrogen dioxide, Air pollution monitoring 503-4w
Nuclear Industry Radioactive Waste Executive 635-6w
Nuclear Industry Radioactive Waste Executive, Radioactive waste disposal 642w
Ozone layer, EC Environment Council 502w
Ozone layer, International conferences 729-30w
Parish councils, Local government finance 641w
Peak District national park 1024
Peak Park Joint Planning Board, Ministers' domestic visits 1023-4
Radiation Incident Monitoring Network 146-7w
Radioactive waste disposal 150w, 459w
Radioactive waste disposal, Liverpool bay 461w
Radioactive waste disposal, South Yorkshire 25w
Radioactive waste disposal, Yorkshire & Humberside 731-2w
Radioactivity, Disclosure of information 347w
Rate limitation, Basildon District Council 642-3w
Rate support grants 639w
Rates & rating, Greater London 733-4w
Rates & rating, Nurses 631w
Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, Deadline 462w
Sites of special scientific interest 305w
Street cleaning, Local government expenditure 630w
Street cleaning, Local government manual workers 505w
Tidy Britain Group, Government grants 504-5w
Tipping of waste, Construction materials 147w
Urban programme, Local authority powers 304w
Waste disposal 1010-2
Waste disposal, Barnsley 153w
Waste disposal, Licensing 151w
Waste disposal, Local authority powers 151w
Waste disposal, North Sea 633w
Waste disposal, Ports 649w
Waste disposal, South Yorkshire 148w
Waste disposal, Transport of hazardous materials 504w

Bourne Association
650w

Bovine somatotropin
157w
Health hazards 157w
Licensing 157w

Bovine somatotropin*—*continued
Milk 157w
Testing 56w

Bovine spongiform encephalopathy
310w
Disease control 310w

Bovine tuberculosis
Research finance 215w

Bowden, Mr Andrew
Questions
National Savings 128w, 202-3w
Pensioners, Housing benefits 241w
Personal income, Households 414w, 707-8w

Bowden, Mr Gerald
Questions
Civil defence, Conferences 776w
Civil servants, Day care of children 52w
EC Research Council 108w
Hard core unemployed 679w
Museum of the Moving Image 75w

Bowis, Mr John
Debates etc.
School Curriculum Development Committee & Secondary Examinations Council Order 1988 (16:01:89) 121
Questions
British Rail, Railway travel 9-10
Business statements 1183
Caribbean, Overseas aid 371w
Inner city areas, Church & state 228w
Israel, Political prisoners 128w
Local government revenue, Greater London 632w
Local government social services, Health services 114w
Mobile homes, Transient people 137w
Museums & galleries, Greater London 75w
Museums & galleries, Opening hours 16
Overseas investment 685w
Post Office, Postal services 16w
Postal services 16w
Postal services, Industrial disputes 106w
Postal services, Monopolies 105-6w
Restart programme, Interviews 186-8w
River Thames, Tunnels 122w
River Thames, Water transport 122w
Servite houses, Old people's homes 118w
Shipping accidents, Battersea bridge 573w
Trains, Clapham Junction 92w
West London line, Railway transport 121-2w

Boxer system
Communication engineering 278w

Boyes, Mr Roland
Questions
Drinking & driving, Publicity 91w

BPF
see British Poultry Federation

BR
see British Rail

Bradford
Land acquisition 634-5w

Bradford Health Authority
38w

Bradford University
School of Peace Studies 382w
University finance 382w

Bradley, Mr Keith
Debates etc.
Poverty, Greater Manchester (19:01:89) 582
Questions
Employment Training, Community programme 172w
Homelessness, Mortgage defaulters 641w
Ministry of Agriculture, Consumers 152-3
Museums & galleries, Government grants 15-6
Poultry, Salmonella 308w
VAT, Average earnings 680w

Braine, Rt Hon Sir Bernard
Debates etc.
By election writs, Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 627, 647, 656, 661-2
Questions
Sunday trading 273w

Brandon-Bravo, Mr Martin M
Questions
Bus services, Competition 92w
Hospital waiting lists, NHS finance 866
Industrial investment, Manufacturing industries 689w

Bray, Dr Jeremy
Questions
Environment, Research finance 635w
Industrial investment, Manufacturing industries 325
Telecommunications technology 233w

Brazier, Mr Julian
Debates etc.
By election writs, Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 609, 616, 639-40, 662
Questions
Abortion, Advisory services 533w
Exports 1168
Exports, Nissan 235w
Heart diseases, Transplant surgery 296w
Industrial investment, Manufacturing industries 689w
Tree conservation 732w

Brazil
Rain forests 271w

Breast cancer
Screening 34-5w, 269w, 535-9w
Wales 269w

Breathalysers
Christmas 201-2w, 515-6w
Drinking & driving 352-3w
Greater London 137-8w
Police powers 516w
Rugby 138w, 392w

BREL
see British Rail Engineering

BREL (1988)
Ministerial statements (17:01:89) 162-72

Brent
Inner area programmes 317
Rent arrears 208-9w

Bridges
Isle of Skye 592w
Liverpool 386w
Road signs 573w

Bridging allowances
627w

Bright, Mr Graham
Questions
Enterprise allowance scheme 177w
National income 691w

Bristol
(24:01:89) 947-81
Railway travel 675

Bristol Airport
Low flying 754w

Bristol Channel
Sewage 22w

Bristol Development Corporation
(18:01:89) 457

Bristol Development Corporation (Area & Constitution) Order 1988
Debates etc.
(18:01:89) 457

Bristol Development Corporation (Area & Constitution) (Amendment) Order 1988
Debates etc.
(18:01:89) 457

Britannia bridge
Road works 325w

British Airways
British Caledonian Airways 124w

British Antarctic Territory
473w

British Broadcasting Corporation
see BBC

British Caledonian Airways
British Airways 124w

British citizenship
Immigration rules 352w

British Coal
see British Coal Corporation

British Coal Corporation
155w, 344-5w
Investment 567-8w

British dependent territories
Overseas aid 793w

British embassies
Facsimile transmission 195w
Operating costs 473w

British Food & Farming Year 1989
Ministry of Agriculture 321w

British Footwear Manufacturers' Federation
237w

British Library
Construction 666w

British Medical Association
354w

British Museum
76w
Conservation 17

British Nuclear Fuels
198-9w, 794-5w

British Poultry Federation
313-4w, 467

British Racing Commission
(24:01:89) 876-9

British Racing Commission Bill 1988/89
Debates etc.
1R (24:01:89) 876-9

British Rail
8-10, 85-6w, 88-90w, 101-2w, 121-2w, 570-3w, 674, 735-8w, 740-1w
Capital investment 3-4
Investment 92w
Public service obligation grant 10, 119-20w
Railway timetables 9
Railway travel 1-2, 4, 9-10

British Rail Engineering
(17:01:89) 162-72

British Railways (Penalty Fares) Bill (HL) 1987/88
Debates etc.
2R order read (19:01:89) 465, (24:01:89) 853, (26:01:89) 1161

British residents abroad
Republic of Ireland 329-30w

British Shipbuilders
232w

British Steel Corporation
Privatisation 567w

British Transport Police
293w

British Venture Capital Association
Small businesses 176w

British Veterinary Association
310w

British Waterways Board
Public appointments 732w

British Wool Marketing Board
315w

Brittan, Leon
480-1, 704-5w

Broadcasting
International cooperation 393w

Broadcasting controls
Terrorism 138-9w

Broadcasting programmes
Interviews 620w

Broadmoor Hospital
Death 801w

Broneglais Hospital, Aberystwyth
680

Brook Hospital
Hospital closures 226w

Brooke, Rt Hon Peter, Paymaster General
Questions
Civil service dispersal, Greater London 77w
Civil service recruitment, EC staff 77w
Exports 1167-8
Government contracts 379w
Government contracts, Competition 374-5w
House prices, Inflation 1171-2
Inflation 677-8w
Ministerial resignations, Members' pay 79w
Mortgage interest rates 1172
Pay incentives, Central Computer & Telecommunications Agency 378w
Pay settlements 1165
Pay settlements, Economic situation 1165
Supply Estimates 693w
Treasury, Merit awards 488w
Treasury, Operating costs 694w
Unemployment, Economic regions 678w

Brown, Mr Gordon
Questions
Council house sales, Local government revenue 504w
Electricity supply industry, Capital investment 620w
European monetary system 1162
Housing subsidies 651w
Inner cities initiative, Expenditure 472-3w
Litter, Local government expenditure 504w
Nursery schools, Expenditure 478w
Public expenditure, Dept of Education & Science 600w
Public expenditure, Dept of Energy 621w
Public expenditure, Dept of Health 608w
Public expenditure, Dept of Transport 574-5w
Public expenditure, Scotland 596w
Regional aid, Scotland 588-70w
Street cleaning, Local government expenditure 630w
Street cleaning, Local government manual workers 505w
Tidy Britain Group, Government grants 504-5w

Brown, Mr Gordon—continued
Urban programme, Dept of Education & Science 477w
Urban programme, Dept of Health 609w
Urban programme, Dept of Transport 469w
Water supply industry, Capital investment 651w

Brown, Mr Michael
Debates etc.
By election writs, Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 642, 644
Industrial development, Northern Ireland (26:01:89) 1291-3
Protection of Privacy Bill, 2R (27:01:89) 1348
Questions
Business statements 488-9
Football, Identity cards 1025
Hard core unemployed 679w
Manufacturing industries, Productivity 231w
Planning permission, Public inquiries 152w
Sheep meat, Food exports 476

Brown, Mr Nicholas
Questions
National insurance contributions, Employees' contributions 241-2w

Brown, Mr Ron
Debates etc.
Housing support grants, Scotland (23:01:89) 802
Protection of Privacy Bill, 2R (27:01:89) 1331-3
Questions
Exports, Libyan Arab Republic 444w
Overseas trade, Libyan Arab Republic 323
Scottish Special Housing Association 219w
Sterling, Exchange rates 685w

Browne, Mr John
Debates etc.
Protection of Privacy Bill, 2R (27:01:89) 1299-308, 1314, 1342, 1343, 1346
Questions
British Rail, Railway travel 2
Employment Training, Handicapped workers 177w
Road tolls, Motorways 13
Trident, Costs 131-2w

Broxtowe estate
Cruelty to children 479-80, 607w, 705w

Broxtowe Residents' Association
479-80

Bruce, Mr Ian
Debates etc.
EC Agriculture Council (25:01:89) 1037
Telepoint services (26:01:89) 1196
Questions
Employment opportunities, Wales 681
Family practitioner services 854
Hospital patients 528-9w
Inner area programmes 317-8
Restart programme 143
River pollution 1021-2

Bruce, Mr Malcolm
Debates etc.
Chlorofluorocarbons (Control) Bill, 1R (25:01:89) 1042
Questions
Air pollution 644-6w
Chlorofluorocarbons 1017-8
Radioactive waste disposal 150w
Waste disposal, Coastal areas 306w
Waste disposal, North Sea 464-6w

BSC
see British Steel Corporation

Buchan, Mr Norman
Debates etc.
By election writs, Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 603
Official Secrets Bill, Com (25:01:89) 1082-5

Buchan, Mr Norman—continued
Security Service Bill, Com (16:01:89) 54, 65-71, 80, 81, 107, 115, (17:01:89) 196, 199, 219, 222-4, 263-5, 271, 279, 293-4, 295, 296, 308
Security Service Bill, 3R (23:01:89) 744-5, 763, 764, 780-2

Buchanan-Smith, Rt Hon Alick
Debates etc.
EC Agriculture Council (25:01:89) 1030

Buck, Sir Antony
Debates etc.
Official Secrets Bill, Com (25:01:89) 1118

Buckinghamshire
Quarrying (24:01:89) 1002-8

Buckley, Mr George J
Questions
Exports 1167

Budget
358w,380w, 686w, 690w

Building alterations
Royal Victoria Hospital, Belfast 494-6w

Building industry
Death 147-8
Employment opportunities 228w
Self-employed 146w
VAT 604w

Building industry safety
166-9w
Demolition 252-3w
Electrical safety 168w
Fires 169w
Greater London 166w
Health & Safety Executive 147
Pay 147-8
Union of Construction Allied Trades & Technicians 148

Building land
Capital gains tax 78-9w

Building repairs
Government grants 329w
Prisons 274w

Building sites
146w

Buildings
Airport security 28
Metropolitan Police 350-1w

Burglary
Derbyshire 275-6w

Burley-in-Wharfedale
Road construction 123w

Burma
Armed forces training 195w
Elections 195w
Human rights 194-5w
Refugees 195w

Burnham Beeches
(24:01:89) 1002-8

Burns, Mr Simon
Debates etc.
Telepoint services (26:01:89) 1195
Questions
Breast cancer, Screening 535-9w
Labour costs, Manufacturing industries 682w
Lead free petrol 632w
Middle East, Peace negotiations 161

Burt, Mr Alistair
Questions
Abortion, Disciplinary proceedings 532w
Dept of Employment, Cash limits 811-2w
Industrial development, North West region 327-8
Jobclubs 173w, 812w
Unemployment, Economic regions 679w

Burundi
687-8

Bury
Employment Training 172w

Bus lanes
Codes of practice 99w

Bus services
Competition 92w
Privatisation 12w
Publicity 571w
Railway closures 122-3w
Wales 12w

Bus timetables
571w

Buses
Vandalism 82-3w

Business
Arts 76w
Industrial training 182w
London Docklands 457w

Business development initiative
Expenditure 445-6w

Business growth training
Government assistance to industry 552w

Business in the Community
Local enterprise agencies 252w

Business motions
(16:01:89) 128, (20:01:89) 660-1
Speaker's rulings & statements (27:01:89) 1364-5

Business premises
Greater London 290w

Business sponsorship incentive scheme
Museums & galleries 14-5

Business statements
483-93, 1179-89

Business vote
City of London 592w

Butcher, Mr John, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Dept of Education and Science
Questions
Educational finance, Warwickshire 474w
Grant maintained schools 478w
St Anne's Hospital School Nottingham, School closures 17w
School population 596w
School population, Nottinghamshire 475w
School population, Private education 596w
Schools, Bolton 133w
Schools, Vandalism 382w
Secondary education, Trafford 19w
Special education, Cost per pupil 597-8w
Special education, Educational finance 475w
Special education, Educational policy 475-6w
Teachers, Derbyshire 474-5w
Teachers, List 99 476-8w
Teachers, Manpower 133w
Teachers, Superannuation Act 1972 475w
Teachers, Vacancies 326w
Truancy, Statistics 597w

Butler, Mr Chris
Questions
Afghanistan, Overseas aid 686-7
Drug crimes, Arrests 675w
Employment Training, Warrington Borough Council 621w
Hazardous wastes, Imports 209w
Hospital waiting lists, Mersey Regional Health Authority 528w
Motorways, North West region 87w
Mudiad Ysgolion Meithrin, Government grants 431w
Museums & galleries, Expenditure 14-5
Overseas trade, Tunisia 322-3

Butler, Mr Chris—continued
Personal savings 358w
Prostitution, Venereal diseases 669-70w

Butter
EC free food scheme 212w
Food imports 60w, 699-700w
Intervention stocks 58-9w
New Zealand 212w

Butterfill, Mr John
Questions
Life insurance 236w
Tourist industry, Coastal areas 170w

Buy British
229w

BVCA
see British Venture Capital Association

BWMB
see British Wool Marketing Board

By election writs
Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 591-664

Bypasses
Road construction 96w

CA
see Consumers' Association

CAA
see Civil Aviation Authority

Cabinet Office
125-6w
Child care 705w
Pay incentives 329w

Caborn, Mr Richard
Debates etc.
Rate support grants (19:01:89) 514
Questions
Disaster relief, Expenditure 269w
Inflation 677-8w
Overseas aid, National income 269w
South Africa, EC aid 270w
South Africa, Overseas aid 270w

Cabotage
Road transport 121w
Shipping 704w

Calder Hall
718w

Calderdale
Hospital waiting lists 300w
Old people's homes 300w
Private health services 300w

Calderdale Health Authority
Cook-chill catering 301w

Callaghan, Mr Jim
Questions
Air accidents, Manchester Airport 99w

Calling of Members
(17:01:89) 296
Speaker's rulings & statements (24:01:89) 925

Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament
Public records 663w

Campbell, Mr Menzies
Debates etc.
Security Service Bill, Com (17:01:89) 263, 265, 267-8
Questions
Air accidents, Lockerbie 27-8w
Antiaircraft missiles 450w
Armoured fighting vehicles 450w
Armoured fighting vehicles, Defence procurement 451w
Army, Armed forces pay 451-2w
Artillery 450w
Defence Communications Centre 451w
Football, Identity cards 634w, 1025
Low flying, Military aircraft 449w
Military exercises, Low flying 654w

Campbell, Mr Menzies—continued
Rescue services 450-1w
Skyguard radar, Low flying 654w
Sportsgrounds, Hooliganism 462w

Campbell, Mr Ronnie
Questions
Children in care, Northumberland 298w
High Moor colliery, Mine accidents 345w
Industrial health & safety 177w
Inflation 678w
Mine safety 282w, 365-6w
Mortgages 868-9
Unemployment benefits, Social security benefits disqualification 257w

Campbell-Savours, Mr D N
Debates etc.
BREL (1988), Privatisation (17:01:89) 169
EC Agriculture Council (25:01:89) 1034-5
Members, Official secrets (25:01:89) 1040-1, (26:01:89) 1204
Official Secrets Bill, Com (25:01:89) 1095, 1098, 1120, 1122, 1127, 1131, 1132, 1134-5
Protection of Privacy Bill, 2R (27:01:89) 1358-9
Questions
Bovine spongiform encephalopathy 310w
Business statements 492-3, 1185
Exchange rates 1161-2
Footwear, Imports 236-8w, 328
Footwear, South Korea 238w
Housing associations, Domestic rents 639-40w
Intelligence services, Members 866-7
Mentally handicapped, Bexley 547w
Mentally handicapped, Local government services 547w
Motorways, North West region 11
Museums & galleries, Manpower 74w
Property Services Agency, Landlords 650w
Property Services Agency, Rents 650w
Property Services Agency, Tenancy agreements 650w
Ridley, Tony, Resignations 737w
Social security benefits, Mentally handicapped 519w, 613w
Waste disposal 1011

Canary Wharf
Capital allowances 348w
Subsidies 648w
Tax allowances 359w

Canavan, Mr Dennis
Debates etc.
Housing support grants, Scotland (23:01:89) 801
Questions
Budget 380w
Eggs, Salmonella 467-8
Football, Identity cards 456w
Freshwater fishing, Scotland 489w
Mendis, Viraj, Deportation 674w
Nurses, Career structure 862
Terrorism, Arrests 140-2w
Youth training scheme 174w

Cancer
Children 116-7w, 549w
North Wales 678
Wales 678-9

Candidates
Terrorism (26:01:89) 1206-90

Capital allowances
Canary Wharf 348w

Capital gains tax
Building land 78-9w
Civil service manpower 377-8w
Group of Seven 790-1w
Property transfer 377w
Tax burden 359-60w
Tax yields 376-7w, 692w

Capital investment
680-1w, 789-90w
Air traffic control 467w
British Rail 3-4
Chiltern line 121w

Capital investment—continued
City technology colleges 383w
Dept of Education & Science 600w
Dept of Energy 621w
Dept of Health 608w
Dept of Transport 574-5w
Education 71-2w
Electricity generation 620w
Electricity supply industry 155w, 620w
Heathrow Airport 467w
Local education authorities 63-4w
Sewage 304-5w
Water supply industry 651w

Capital movements
Foreign investment in UK 374w, 681w

Capital rules
Social security claims 417w

Caravan Sites Act 1968
Questions
461w

Carbon dioxide
Taxation 693w

Carbon monoxide
483-4w, 648-9w

Cardiff
Hospitals 678
Railway travel 674

Cardigan bypass
Road construction 664w

Career development loan scheme
625-6w

Career structure
Health service staff 397w, 530w
Midwives 298w
Nurses 40w, 112w, 299w, 338-42w, 530w, 605w, 715-6w, 861-3
Police 5w

Caribbean
Drug crimes 793w
Overseas aid 371w

Carlile, Mr Alex
Debates etc.
Protection of Privacy Bill, 2R (27:01:89) 1302, 1308-10

Carlisle, Mr John
Questions
Football, Identity cards 151, 634w

Carlisle Hospital
Births & Deaths Registration Act 1953 32-3w

Carmarthen District Council
13w

Carpets
729w

Carrick District Council
701-2w

Carrington, Mr Matthew
Questions
Electricity consumption 211-2w
Inner cities initiative 178-9w
Office of Arts & Libraries, Cash limits 667w
Rates & rating, Nurses 1012-3
Taxis, Wheelchairs 10-1

Cars
Fraud 329-30

Carttiss, Mr Michael
Debates etc.
Rate support grants (19:01:89) 506, 530-5

Cartwright, Mr John
Questions
Brook Hospital, Hospital closures 226w
County Hall, Property transfer 457w
Defence Quality Assurance Directorate, Offices 447-8w

Cartwright, Mr John—continued
East London river crossing 325-6w
Military aircraft, Air accidents 653w
Ports, Accidents 624w
Ports, Industrial health & safety 623-4w
Royal Arsenal Sports & Recreational Association, East London river crossing 277-8w
Schools, Vandalism 382w
Woolwich Arsenal, Property development 556w

Cash, Mr William
Debates etc.
Protection of Privacy Bill, 2R (27:01:89) 1315-7, 1338, 1342, 1344, 1360
Security Service Bill, 3R (23:01:89) 751, 779
Questions
Business statements 486
Charity Commission, Public appointments 394w
Dept of Education & Science, Cash limits 383-4w
Hospital patients 540w
Infant Life (Preservation) Act 1929, Prosecutions 328w
Motor vehicles, Export promotion 228w
New businesses 689w

Cash limits
Central Office of Information 578w
Crown Office for Scotland 490w
Crown Prosecution Service 764-5w
Customs & Excise 578w
Dept of Education & Science 383-4w
Dept of Employment 811-2w
Dept of Transport 470w
Educational finance 266w
Family doctors 853
Foreign & Commonwealth Office 576-7w
Home Office 776-7w
Inland Revenue 693-4w
Lord Chancellor 663-4w
Minister for the Civil Service 666w
Northern Ireland Office 768-9w
Office of Arts & Libraries 667w
Office of Population Censuses & Surveys 605-6w
Overseas aid 486w
Privy Council Office 698-9w
Scottish Office 725-6w
Welsh Office 562-3w

Casualties
Motorcycles 5-6

Cathedrals
Tourist industry 139

Cattle
Prices 311w

CBI
see Confederation of British Industry

CCTA
see Central Computer & Telecommunications Agency

CDA
see Cooperative Development Agency

CEGB
see Central Electricity Generating Board

Cellular phones
Licensing 231w

Census of population
Parliamentary constituencies 41-2w

Census tests
41-2w

Central Computer & Telecommunications Agency
Pay incentives 378w

Central Electricity Generating Board
154-5w

Central London Rail Study
95w, 385w, 740-1w

Central Office of Information
367w
Cash limits 578w

Central Selling Organisation for Diamonds
236w

Century Newspapers
Takeovers 106w, 472w

Cervical cancer
Screening 297-8w, 433w
Wales 433w
Women's Hospital Liverpool 225w

Chairman of Committee of the Whole House
Debates etc.
Amendments & new clauses (16:01:89) 32-5, 44, (17:01:89) 180, 232, 239, 241, 245, 257-8, 270-1, 281-3, (25:01:89) 1047-8, 1113
Calling of Members (17:01:89) 296
House of Commons procedure (16:01:89) 44, (25:01:89) 1110, 1132
Members' conduct (17:01:89) 278, (25:01:89) 1096, 1098, 1100
Members' interventions (16:01:89) 52, 74, (17:01:89) 228
Members' speeches (16:01:89) 102, 115
Scope of debate (16:01:89) 80, 84
Speaker's rulings & statements, Official Report (25:01:89) 1047

Chalker, Rt Hon Lynda, Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs*
Questions
Council of Europe, Children's rights 363w
Cyprus, United Nations 255w
EC countries, Dependent states 128w
EC Foreign Affairs Council 577w
Pay incentives, Foreign & Commonwealth Office 373w

Challenger tanks
199w
Defence contracts 198w
Employment opportunities 276-7w
Vickers Defence Systems 453-4w

Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster
House of Commons questions 563-4w

Chancellor of the Exchequer
see Treasury

Channel Five
Expenditure 591w
Investment 591w
Television engineering 591w

Channel Four
591-2w

Channel tunnel
84-5w
Construction 6
Economic regions 84w
King's Cross 7
Liverpool 83-4w, 386w
Motorways 85w
North West region 6-7, 84w
Railway freight transport 7-9, 85w
Railway network 7, 83w, 102w, 570w, 573w, 737w
Railway stations 22w, 101-2w, 293w, 763w
Railway transport 84w, 674

Channon, Rt Hon Paul, Secretary of State for Transport*
Questions
Air accidents, M1 124w
Air traffic, South East region 85w
Airport security 27
Airport security, Aircraft 26
Airport security, Airport staff 26-7, 29
Airport security, Aviation Security Act 1982 25
Airport security, Buildings 28
Airport security, EC action 25-6
Airport security, Heathrow Airport 23-5, 27-8
Airport security, Police 28
British Airways, British Caledonian Airways 124w

Channon, Rt Hon Paul—continued*
British Rail 8-9
British Rail, Capital investment 3-4
British Rail, Public service obligation grant 10, 119-20w
British Rail, Railway timetables 9
British Rail, Railway travel 1-2, 4, 9-10
Channel tunnel, Railway freight transport 9
Dept of Transport, Cash limits 470w
East London river crossing 325-6w
East London river crossing, Land values 387w
Freight transport 12
Heathrow Airport, Airport security 325w
M25 11-2
Motorways, North West region 11
Motorways, Road freight transport 11
National Bus Company, Accounting 575w
Network SouthEast, Railway travel 85w
Railway closures, Scotland 9-10
Railway signals, Railway safety 85w
Road tolls 12
Road tolls, Motorways 12-3
Roads, Greater London 83w
Transport, Greater London 740-1w
Transport, London Docklands 388w

Chapelcross power station
718w

Charity Commission
Public appointments 394w

Chelsea Football Club
Planning inquiries 729w

Chemical weapons
195w, 655w
Arms control 655w
Arms control negotiations 373-4w, 575-6w
International cooperation 659w
Japan 656w
Libyan Arab Republic 704w
USA 659w

Chemicals
Water treatment 26w

Chemists' shops
Restrictive trade practices 321-2

Child benefit
Opposition days (18:01:89) 351-90

Child care
44w
Cabinet Office 705w
Child safety 43w
Dept of Education & Science 761w
Dept of Employment 742w
Dept of Energy 803-4w
Dept of Trade & Industry 765-6w
Employment Training 281w
Equal Opportunities Commission 44w
Foreign & Commonwealth Office 792w
Ministry of Agriculture 700w
Office of Arts & Libraries 666-7w
Travel grants 258w

Child health
Overseas aid 126w

Child safety
Child care 43w

Childbirth
Prisoners 517w

Children
Cancer 116-7w, 549w
Road safety 98w
Venereal diseases 224w

Children Bill (HL) 1988/89
Questions
44w

Children in care
606w
Northumberland 298w

Children's hearings
(24:01:89) 982-1001

Children's rights
Council of Europe 363w

Chiltern line
Capital investment 121w

China
Chlorofluorocarbons 635w
Compensation 256w
Textiles 17w
Trade agreements 324-5

Chipmunk aircraft
277w

Chlorine
Food contamination 318w

Chlorofluorocarbons
502w, 569-70w, 639w, 729-30w, 1017-8
Air pollution control 1016-7
China 635w
Environment protection (25:01:89) 1042

Chlorofluorocarbons (Control) Bill 1988/89
Debates etc.
1R (25:01:89) 1042

Chope, Mr Christopher, Under-Secretary of State for the Environment*
Debates etc.
Quarrying, Buckinghamshire (24:01:89) 1004-8
Tinsley Park, Planning permission (27:01:89) 1368-72
Questions
Alexander Fleming House, Repairs & maintenance 304w
Amusement arcades, London boroughs 459w
Channel tunnel, Railway stations 22w
Chelsea Football Club, Planning inquiries 729w
House of Commons Fees Office, Parliamentary furnishings 729w
Greenbelt, Barnsley 643w
Housing compensation 148w
Housing construction, Planning appeals 204-6w
Local plans 204w
Local plans, Rural areas 639w
Pield Heath Nurseries, Uxbridge, Planning appeals 641w
Planning appeals 648w
Planning authorities, Housing construction 148w
Planning permission, Animal welfare 210w
Planning permission, Construction 461w
Planning permission, Farm buildings 647w
Planning permission, Law reform 636w
Planning permission, Parish councils 209w
Planning permission, Public inquiries 152w
Property Services Agency, Landlords 650w
Property Services Agency, Rents 650w
Property Services Agency, Tenancy agreements 650w
Radon gas, Public buildings 455w
Railway stations, Planning permission 21-2w
Simplified planning zones, Private investment 304w
Town & country planning 642w
Town & country planning, Law reform 210w
Trent Valley Garden Centre, Planning permission 211w
Urban planning, Greater London 795w
Waste disposal, Planning permission 150-1w
Water authorities, Land values 728w
Watermead country park, Road construction 152-3w

Christmas
Breathalysers 201-2w, 515-6w
Road accidents 515-6w

Church & state
Inner city areas 228w

Church Commissioners
House of Commons questions 486w

Church of England
343
Urban areas 327

Churchill, Mr Winston
Debates etc.
Oral question time intervention (26:01:89) 1175
Questions
Eggs, Salmonella 474-5
HMS Bronington 27w
Mendis, Viraj, Arrests 341-2

Cider
Excise duties 686w

City of London
Business vote 592w

City of London (Spitalfields Market) Bill 1987/88
Debates etc.
3R order read (19:01:89) 465
3R (24:01:89) 933-46

City technology colleges
Capital investment 383w
Rural areas 596w

Civic dignitaries
592w

Civil Aviation Authority
469w

Civil defence
Conferences 776w

Civil Defence College
54w

Civil servants
Day care of children 52w
Eastern Europe 706w
Emigration 706w

Civil service
19-20
Foreign & Commonwealth Office 264-5w
Lie detectors 20
Public relations 20

Civil service agencies
52w
Management 18
Pay 19

Civil service dispersal
21, 152
Dept of Social Security 19-20, 46-7w, 257w
Greater London 77w
Nottingham 257w

Civil service manpower
Capital gains tax 377-8w
Control of Trade in Endangered Species (Enforcement) Regulations 1985 503w
Diplomatic service 473w
Employment discrimination 221-2w
Factory Inspectorate 51w
Food inspection 603-4w
Mortgage relief 377-8w
Passport Office 135-6w, 583-6w
Slaughterhouses 213-4w

Civil service recruitment
EC staff 77w
Pay 18
Women 17-8

Civil service unions
52w

Clapham Junction
Railway accidents 98w
Trains 92w

Clark, Mr Alan, Minister of State for Trade and Industry
Debates etc.
Plessey, Takeovers (20:01:89) 667-70
Questions
Antidumping, Japan 566w

Clark, Mr Alan—continued
Balance of trade 233w
Buy British 229w
EC Internal Market Council 233w
EC internal trade 291w
EC internal trade, North West region 230w
EC internal trade, Public contracts 334
EC internal trade, Publicity 333-4
Export controls, Iran 240-1w
Export licensing 106w
Export promotion 230w
Export promotion, Trade competitiveness 108-10w
Exports 232w
Exports, Libyan Arab Republic 444w
Exports, Nissan 235w
Food exports, Meat 238-40w
Footwear, Imports 236-8w
Footwear, South Korea 238w
Ford Motor Company 334
Foreign companies in UK 231w, 669w
Foreign investment in UK, Employment opportunities 231w
GATT 290w
GATT, Agricultural products 441w
Motor vehicles, Export promotion 228w
Motor vehicles, Imports 442-4w
Overseas trade, Japan 230w
Overseas trade, Libyan Arab Republic 323
Overseas trade, Malta 441-2w
Overseas trade, Tunisia 322-3
Takeovers, Foreign companies in UK 442w
Textiles, China 17w
Whisky, South Korea 229w
Woollen industry, Export promotion 765w

Clark, Dr David
Debates etc.
EC Agriculture Council (25:01:89) 1028-9
Food, Consumer protection (24:01:89) 880-5, 888, 889, 895
Questions
Animal feed, Salmonella 158-9w
Animals, Tuberculosis 158w
Bovine somatotropin, Testing 56w
Bovine tuberculosis, Research finance 215w
Deer, Slaughterhouses 55w
Deer, Tuberculosis 55w
Eggs, Compensation 53-4w
Eggs, Salmonella 324w, 469, 475
Food, Law reform 319w
Food contamination, Aflatoxin 57w
Food inspection, Meat 56w
Greenhouse effect, Departmental coordination 1w
Listeria monocytogenes, Agricultural research 319w
Listeria monocytogenes, Poultry meat 319-20w
Ministry of Agriculture, Ministers' domestic visits 55-6w
Ministry of Agriculture, Public bodies 427w
Post codes, Households 412w
Poultry, Salmonella 322-4w
Rodents, Pest control 319w
Set-aside schemes, Scotland 399w
Set-aside schemes, Take-up 426w, 434w
Sheep, North Yorkshire 57w
Slaughterhouses, Food hygiene 56w
Unemployment benefits, Social security benefits disqualification 51-2w

Clark, Dr Michael
Questions
Lost working days, Industrial disputes 173-4w

Clark, Sir William
Questions
Economic situation 1163

Clarke, Rt Hon Kenneth, Secretary of State for Health
Questions
Community care 529w
Cook-chill catering, Frozen food 543w
Cook-chill catering, Retail trade 798w
Family doctors 853-4
Family doctors, Cash limits 853

Clarke, Rt Hon Kenneth—continued
Food hygiene, Cook-chill catering 411-2w, 803w
Food poisoning, Cook-chill catering 713w
Health 34w
Hospital catering, Cook-chill catering 411w
Listeria monocytogenes, Cook-chill catering 411w
Listeria monocytogenes, Food poisoning 607w, 716w
Medical profession, Manpower 608w
Ministerial policy advisers, Dept of Health 35w
NHS Review 856-9
NHS Review, Community Care Review 859
NHS Review, District health authorities 856-8
NHS Review, Nottingham Health Authority 856
NHS Review, Regional health authorities 856-8
Nurses, Career structure 861-3
Radiotherapy, Maidstone Hospital 223w
Salmonella, Eggs 409w
Salmonella, Medical research 713w
Salmonella, Poultry 110-1w
Wakefield Health Authority, Hospital catering 543w

Clarke, Mr Tom
Questions
Balance of payments 684w
Disabled Persons (Services Consultation & Representation) Act 1986, Administrative delays 870-1
EC internal trade, Conferences 668w
EC internal trade, Publicity 668w
Magistrates' courts, Departmental responsibilities 569w
Overseas loans, Developing countries 661-2w
Railway accidents 89w
Zambia, Overseas loans 661w

Clay, Mr Bob
Questions
Chlorofluorocarbons, China 635w

Cleaning services
Airport staff 23-4
NHS 297w

Clelland, Mr David
Questions
Channel tunnel, Motorways 85w
Eggs, Production 308w
Exports 685w
Training & enterprise councils, Finance 809w
Training & enterprise councils, Government grants 49w

Clergy
Retirement 486-7w

Cleveland County Council
478

Climate
Research finance 638w

Closed shop
175-6w

Clothing
Pensioners 49w

Clough, Brian
Prosecutions 368w

Clwyd, Mrs Ann
Debates etc.
Listeria monocytogenes, Standing Order No 20 applications (16:01:89) 30-1
Telepoint services (26:01:89) 1195
Questions
Cancer, Wales 678-9
Factories, Cynon valley 432w
Hospital beds, Private hospitals 14w
Hospital consultants, NHS 14w
Hospital consultants, Private health services 14w

Clwyd, Mrs Ann—continued
Hospitals, Contracts for services 14-5w
NHS Review, Wales 15w
Nursing homes, Local government social services 13w
Nursing homes, Private health services 13w
Pay beds, Wales 13-4w
Waste disposal 1010-1
Waste disposal, Irish Sea 210w
Women's employment, Equal opportunities 482

Clyde area public safety scheme
556w

Clyde Submarine Base
280w
Emergency planning 556w

Clydebank
217-8w

CND
see Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament

Coal
Imports 619w, 694-5w
Scotland 619w
Transport costs 619w

Coal mining
Manpower 803w
Redundancy 143
Subsidence 803w

Coal prices
344w

Coastal areas
Sea pollution 649w
Tourist industry 170w
Waste disposal 306w

Code of Recommendations for the Welfare of Farmed Deer
Debates etc.
(27:01:89) 1364

Code of Recommendations for the Welfare of Goats
Debates etc.
(27:01:89) 1364

Code of Recommendations for the Welfare of Livestock Sheep
Debates etc.
(27:01:89) 1364

Codes of practice
Animal feed 158w
Bus lanes 99w
Consumer credit 693w
Fair Employment (Northern Ireland) Bill 1988/89 676w
Fish farming 214w
Water supply disconnections 463w

COE
see Council of Europe

Cohen, Mr Harry
Debates etc.
By election writs, Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 606, 608, 615, 624, 638
Private notice question point of order (18:01:89) 345, 346
Rate support grants (19:01:89) 568
Security Service Bill, Com (17:01:89) 265-6
Questions
Balance of payments 684w
Building industry safety, Greater London 166w
Building repairs, Government grants 329w
Central London Rail Study 385w
Civil service 19-20
Community charges register, Age 397-8w
Community charges register, Disclosure of information 397w
Community charges register, Scotland 717w
Crime prevention, Lighting 590w
District health authorities, Local authorities 113w

Cohen, Mr Harry—continued
Driving offences, Prosecutions 673w
House of Commons Fees Office, Parliamentary furnishings 729w
Housing investment programmes, Greater London 648w
Identity cards, Northern Ireland Office 394-5w
London Regional Transport, Rates & rating 739-40w
Middle East, Peace negotiations 158
NHS, Expenditure 529w
Nuclear safety, Air accidents 718w
Open University, Finance 267w
Police raids, Leyton 671w
Prisoners, Body belts 580-1w
Social Fund, Microcomputers 706w
Territorial Army, Medical examinations 769w
Territorial Army, Political activities 769w
Water authorities, Land values 728w
Water authorities, Public sector assets 728w
Water pollution, EC law 728w

COI
see Central Office of Information

Coleman, Mr Donald
Questions
NHS, Property transfer 432w
Railway travel, Cardiff 674

Coleraine District Council
499w

Colleges of education
Government grants 602w
Higher education teachers 400-2w
Student numbers 600-2w

Colvin, Mr Michael
Questions
Air traffic, South East region 85w
Air transport, Research 471-2w
Airbus Industrie, Management 319
Aircrew, Training 572-3w
Airport security, Aviation Security Act 1982 25
British Airways, British Caledonian Airways 124w
Eggs, Imports 309-10w
Employment Training, Aircrew 551w
"Help with Hostel Charges Proposals for Change Consultation Paper" 805w
Home purchase assistance scheme, First time buyers 501w
Home purchase assistance scheme, House prices 501w
Junior hospital doctors, Working hours 527w
Local employer network scheme 173w
Tax yields, Fossil fuels 358w

COMA
see Committee on Medical Aspects of Food Policy

COMARE
see Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment

Comber
Orlit houses 221w

Commencement orders
460w

Commercial television
Television engineering 391w

Commission for Racial Equality
141w, 627-8w

Commission of the European Communities
see European Commission

Committee on Medical Aspects of Food Policy
410w

Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment
715w

Committee on Safety of Medicines
Drug side effects 549w

Common agricultural policy
EC action 317w
National Farmers' Union 308w

Common farm prices
National Farmers' Union 156w

Common sheep meat regime
311w
Northumberland 320w

Commonhold land
260-1w

Commonwealth
Distance learning 662w

Communication engineering
Boxer system 278w

Community care
529w, 541w
Social Fund 242w, 805w
Wales 268w

Community Care Review
867-8
NHS Review 859

Community charge
460w, 631-2w, 1013-4
Armed forces 453w
Defence land 398w
Emergency services 500-1w
Landlord & tenant 595w
Local government staff 459w, 500w
Mentally ill 1013
Norfolk 631w
Prisoners 595w
Scotland 287-8w, 397-8w, 594-5w
Second homes 481w
Wales 682
Water charges 287-8w

Community charge exemptions
500w
Mentally handicapped 594w
Scotland 594w

Community charge rebates
500w

Community charges register
152w, 453w, 460w, 500w, 632w
Age 397-8w
Disclosure of information 397w
Electoral register 682
Press advertising 347w
Scotland 397-8w, 717w

Community health services
Belfast 492w

Community programme
Employment Training 172w, 281-2w
Nottingham 280-1w

Companies
Local authorities 794w

Companies (Audit Committees) Bill 1988/89
Debates etc.
1R (26:01:89) 1205

Company investigations
564-5w
Administrative delays 565w
House of Fraser 239-40w, 444w, 682-3
Prosecutions 565w

Compensation
Animal feed 53w
China 256w
Eggs 53-4w, 431w, 721w
Packaging industry 54w
Prisoners of war 363w, 660-1w

Competition
328
Bus services 92w
Defence procurement 336w

Competition—continued
Government contracts 374-5w
Local government services 1019-20
Offshore structures 211w

Complaints
Doctors 550w
Noise 484w

Composite tax rate system
692w
National Savings 692w
Pensioners 785-6w
Tax yields 692w
Taxpayers 691-2w

Comptroller & Auditor General
see National Audit Office

Computers
PAYE 789-90w

Computers in Government departments
Dept of Social Security 618w
Dept of Social Security local offices 706w

Conditions of employment
NHS 529w
Northern Ireland 223w
Teachers 760w

"Conduct of Local Authority Business"
636w

Confectionery
Milk 466

Confederation of British Industry
176w, 235w, 327
Conferences 668w

Conference on Security & Cooperation in Europe
see European Security Conference

Conferences
Civil defence 776w
Confederation of British Industry 668w
EC internal trade 668w

Confessions
Prisoners 393w

Conservation
Art works 77w
British Museum 17
Museums & galleries 75w
Victoria & Albert Museum 15

Conservative Party
866-7, 1169

Construction
British Library 666w
Channel tunnel 6
Factories 203w
Hospitals 114w
Leeds Prison 273w
Planning permission 461w
Prisons 136w, 271-2w
VAT 570w, 578w, 651w, 737-8w

Construction costs
Prisons 348-9w
Severn bridge 574w

Construction materials
Tipping of waste 147w

Consultants
Housing action trusts 636w

Consumer credit
Codes of practice 693w
Credit controls 693w
Interest rates 1170
Labour Party 1173

Consumer expenditure
Economic growth 687w

Consumer organisations
Food hygiene 541-2w
Ministers' domestic visits 562w
Wales 562w

Consumer organisations—continued
Water Bill 1988/89 646w

Consumer protection
Departmental responsibilities 570-1w
EC action 330w
Government departments 571w

Consumers
Ministry of Agriculture 152-3

Consumers' Association
191-2w

Container terminals
Kingston upon Hull 481-2

Contracts
Orlit houses 221w

Contracts for services
Greater Glasgow Health Board 719w
Hospitals 14-5w
Medical treatments 679
NHS 114-5w, 297w, 540-1w
Southern General Hospital Glasgow 719w

Control of Pollution Act 1974
Questions
151w

Control of Trade in Endangered Species (Enforcement) Regulations 1985
Questions
Civil service manpower 503w

Convention of Scottish Local Authorities
161w
Education 219w

Conventional weapons
Armed conflict 869

Convictions
Football 137w

Conway, Mr Derek
Questions
Challenger tanks, Vickers Defence Systems 453-4w
Eye Ear & Throat Hospital Shrewsbury 864-5
River pollution 638w
Small Farmers' Association 316w
Telford Development Corporation 1016

Cook, Mr Frank
Debates etc.
Food, Consumer protection (24:01:89) 883
Official Secrets Bill, Com (25:01:89) 1100
Protection of Privacy Bill, 2R (27:01:89) 1323, 1335-6
Sunday trading, Public petitions (19:01:89) 580

Cook, Mr Robin
Debates etc.
Child benefit (18:01:89) 351-7, 359
Questions
Dept of Social Security, Operating costs 618w
Family credit, Social security claims 806w
Family income supplements, Social security recipients 804w
Handicapped, Social Security Advisory Committee 805w
Health service staff, Career structure 397w
Housing benefits, Social security claims 614-5w
Junior hospital doctors, Working hours 856
NHS Review, Community Care Review 859
Social Fund, Scotland 117w
Social security reform, Research 804-5w
South East Thames Regional Health Authority, Offices 295w
Tobacco, EC action 227w

Cook-chill catering
(16:01:89) 30-1, 301w, 355w, 543w
Calderdale Health Authority 301w
Food hygiene 301w, 411-2w, 803w

Cook-chill catering—continued
Food labelling 604w
Food poisoning 713w
Frozen food 543w
Hospital catering 43w, 115-6w, 301-2w, 411w
Listeria monocytogenes 42-3w, 411w
Public Health Laboratory Service 115w
Retail trade 798w
Yorkshire Regional Health Authority 116w

Coombs, Mr Anthony
Debates etc.
Official Secrets Bill, Com (25:01:89) 1085-7
Questions
Derelict land, Government grants 642w
Employment Training 148-9
Handicapped workers, Young people 751-2w
Housing subsidies, Council house sales 149w
Industrial investment, Manufacturing industries 1172
Land Registry Office, Administrative delays 487w
M42, Road construction 97-8w
Medical profession, Manpower 608w

Coombs, Mr Simon
Debates etc.
Rate support grants (19:01:89) 565-7
Questions
Building industry safety, Pay 147-8
Health Education Authority 545w
Industrial disputes, Voting methods 185w
Road tolls, Motorways 12-3
Road works, South West region 5

Cooper, Roger
(18:01:89) 458-64

Cooperative Development Agency
628w

Cope, Rt Hon John, Minister of State for Employment
Questions
Career development loan scheme 625-6w
Child care, Dept of Employment 742w
Cooperative Development Agency 628w
Dept of Employment, Advertising 553w, 809-10w
Dept of Employment, Public relations 809w
EC Labour & Social Affairs Council 173w
EC social policy 364w
Employment Training, Working hours 421w
Handicapped workers, Young people 751-2w
Industrial health & safety 177-8w
Industrial training 172w
Industrial training, Business 182w
Industrial training, Training Agency 184w
Inner cities initiative 178-9w
Inner city school compacts 182w
Loan guarantee scheme 183w, 254w
Local employer network scheme 173w
Local enterprise agencies 183-4w
Pay incentives, Training Agency 550-1w
Skill shortages 172w, 176-7w
Skills Training Agency, Privatisation 185-6w
Small businesses 176w
Small businesses, Bankruptcy 145
Small businesses, British Venture Capital Association 176w
Small businesses, EC internal trade 144-5
Small businesses, Foreign languages 145
Small businesses, Small Firms Service 176w
Small Firms Service 145-6
Technical & vocational education initiative 178w
Technical & vocational education initiative, School leaving 254w
Tourism Review Committee 49w
Training, North West region 814w
Training Agency 186w
Training Agency, Information services 179-80w

Cope, Rt Hon John—continued
Training & enterprise councils 182w
Training & enterprise councils, Finance 809w
Training & enterprise councils, Government grants 49w
Training & enterprise councils, Newham 742w
Unemployment, Rural areas 171w
Unemployment, Young people 163-4w
VAT registration 180w
Vocational education, EC internal trade 181w
Vocational education, Educational qualifications 181w
Youth training scheme 174-5w, 253-4w, 627w, 810w
Youth training scheme, Death 140-1
Youth training scheme, Employment discrimination 627-8w
Youth training scheme, Industrial accidents 141
Youth training scheme, Industrial health & safety 175w
Youth training scheme, Manpower 175w
Youth training scheme, North West region 626-7w, 813-4w
Youth training scheme, Norwich 174w
Youth training scheme, Take-home pay 751-2w
Youth training scheme, Take-up 140
Youth training scheme, Training allowances 627w
Youth training scheme, Vacancies 141

Corbett, Mr Robin
Debates etc.
Committee stage, Official Report (25:01:89) 1047
Official Secrets Bill, Com (25:01:89) 1054, 1079, 1086, 1104-8, 1109, 1117, 1122-6, 1136, 1137, 1138
Protection of Privacy Bill, 2R (27:01:89) 1304, 1307, 1328, 1351-4
Questions
Breathalysers, Rugby 392w
Control of Trade in Endangered Species (Enforcement) Regulations 1985, Civil service manpower 503w
Deer, Tuberculosis 429-30w
Guardian, Prosecutions 11w, 368-9w
Motorways, Road traffic control 95w
Nature conservation, EC trade 153w, 503w
Police powers, Tape recorded evidence 7w
Urban areas, Church of England 327

Corby
Government assistance to industry 331
Housing benefits 613-4w

Corbyn, Mr Jeremy
Debates etc.
BREL (1988), Privatisation (17:01:89) 171-2
By election writs, Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 622, 624, 626, 633, 635, 663-4
Elimination of Poverty in Old Age Bill, 1R (18:01:89) 348-50
Hedgerows Bill, Points of order (27:01:89) 1364
Written questions, Disclosure of information (17:01:89) 173, 175-6
Questions
Bombings, Guildford 368w
Building industry safety, Fires 169w
Developing countries, Debts 370w
Housing Act 1985, Homelessness 643w
Mendis, Viraj, Deportation 343
Minister for the Civil Service, Environmental policy 53w
Nurses, Manpower 44-6w
Roads, Greater London 83w
Smoking, Health warnings 535w
Urban development corporations, Employment Select Committee 21w

Cornwall
Sonic booms 100w

Cornwall & Isles of Scilly Health Authority
Midwives 298w

Corporation tax
Scotland 379-80w
Tax yields 791-2w

Cosmetics
Animal experiments 508-9w

Cost effectiveness
NHS administration 532w

Cost per pupil
Special education 597-8w

Costain
641w

Cot deaths
859-60

Couchman, Mr James
Debates etc.
By election writs, Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 638-9, 643-4
Questions
Infant mortality 859-60
Self-employed, Part-time employment 688w
Youth training scheme, Manpower 175w

Council house rents
Nottingham 303w
Rent arrears 210w
Rent increases 306w

Council house sales
152w, 640w, 648w
Bolton 209w
Defective housing 347w
Housing subsidies 149w
Leeds 208w
Local government revenue 504w
Scotland 286-7w, 727w
Torbay 169, 208w, 631w

Council housing
Empty housing 206-8w, 561w, 593w, 642w, 1010
Housing completions 152w
Housing construction 506w
Local government expenditure 206-8w
Mendis, Viraj 651w
Torbay Borough Council 631w

Council of Europe
157, 393w, 456w, 576w
Children's rights 363w

Council of Ministers
Ministers' visits abroad 675

Council tenants
Housing benefits 613-4w

Councillors
NHS administration 856-8

Counterfeit manufacturing
Television reception 590w

Country Landowners' Association
313w

Countryside Commission
314w, 637w

County Hall
Property transfer 457w, 795w
Working conditions 794w

Courier services
Motorcycles 6
Road safety education 13-4

Courts
Parent & child 672-3w

Cousins, Mr Jim
Questions
Bovine spongiform encephalopathy 310w
Food exports, Meat 238-40w
Foreign investment in UK, Capital movements 681w

Cousins, Mr Jim—continued
Hospital staff, Manpower 543w
Nurses, Educational health services 298-9w, 608w
Retail price index 183w
Slaughterhouses, Civil service manpower 213-4w
Slaughterhouses, Enforcement notices 213w
Slaughterhouses, Food hygiene 212-3w
Water supply industry, Ownership 648w

Coventry & Warwickshire Hospital
Hospital waiting lists 530-1w

Cox, Mr Tom
Questions
Albany Prison, Prison accommodation 272w
Amusement arcades, London boroughs 459w
Central London Rail Study 95w
Chelsea Football Club, Planning inquiries 729w
Family doctors, Greater London 355w
Hotels, Standards enforcement 251w
Illegal immigrants, Nigeria 273-4w
Immigrant detainees, Nigeria 274w
Interest rates 1170-1
Lay visitors, Insurance 136w
Mentally disturbed offenders, Prisoners' release 3w
Mileometers, Fraud 765w
Nurses, Career structure 530w
Personal income, Tax burden 376w
Pirate radio stations, Greater London 446w
Police custody, Prisoners on remand 273w
Prison hospitals, Prison visitors 274-6w
Prison staff, Ethnic minorities 201w
Prison staff, Greater London 274w
Prisoners, Segregation of prisoners 200-1w
Prisons, Construction 136w, 271-2w
Prisons, Greater London 274w
Prisons, Modernisation 272w
Rent officers 1022
Segregation of prisoners, Wandsworth Prison 350w

Craft industries
Prison staff 274w

Cran, Mr James
Questions
Business in the Community, Local enterprise agencies 252w
Horticulture, Research finance 307w
Inter-city rail transport, Passengers 86w
Investment 1162-3
Northern Ireland Office, Cash limits 768-9w
Official engagements 127w, 261-2w, 485-6w, 705-6w
Pay settlements 180w
Yorkshire Regional Health Authority 545w
Yorkshire Water Authority, River pollution 1021

Cranfield Institute of Technology
766w

Crash helmets
Cycling 100w

CRE
see Commission for Racial Equality

Credit controls
Consumer credit 693w

Crewe Health Authority
Inquiries 606w
Private hospitals (17:01:89) 310-6

Cricket
South Africa 479

Crime
AIDS 774w
South Bank 510w

Crime prevention
Lighting 590w

Crime victims
Industrial injuries 390w

Criminal Injuries Compensation Board
Administrative delays 350w, 590w

Criminal investigation
Dog fighting 394w

Critchley, Mr Julian
Debates etc.
Protection of Privacy Bill, 2R (27:01:89) 1310-2

Crown Estate Commissioners
258-9w

Crown Office for Scotland
Cash limits 490w

Crown Prosecution Service
553-4w, 628-9w, 684-5
Cash limits 764-5w
Manpower 685
Pay incentives 662w

Crowther, Mr Stan
Questions
Business statements 488

Cruelty to children
Broxtowe estate 479-80, 607w, 705w
Gleneyre & Burnside Children's Home 395w
Research finance 671-2w
Sexual offences 798-800w

Cryer, Mr Bob
Debates etc.
Avon Light Rail Transit Bill (HL), 2R (24:01:89) 950, 954, 955, 961, 971-7
By election writs, Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 653, 654, 661
Housing Support Grant (Scotland) Order 1989 (17:01:89) 309
Private notice question point of order (18:01:89) 346
Security Service Bill, Com (16:01:89) 70, 99-103, (17:01:89) 242-3, 246-8, 260-1, 264, 269-72, 301-4, 306, 308
Security Service Bill, 3R (23:01:89) 746-7, 786-7
Telepoint services (26:01:89) 1196
Questions
Accidents, Minehead 555w
Balance of trade 233w
Business statements 1188
Community charge, Emergency services 500-1w
Community charges register 500w
Hantergantick quarry, Prosecutions 554w
Industrial health & safety, Prosecutions 553-5w, 628-9w
Land acquisition, Bradford 634-5w
Ministerial policy advisers, Dept of Employment 50w
Ministerial policy advisers, Dept of Health 35w
Ministerial policy advisers, Dept of Social Security 47-8w
Ministerial policy advisers, Dept of Trade & Industry 16w, 768w
Ministerial policy advisers, Dept of Transport 100w
Ministerial policy advisers, Home Office 5-6w
Ministerial policy advisers, Lord Chancellor 11w
Ministerial policy advisers, Ministry of Agriculture 57w
Ministerial policy advisers, Prime Minister 1-2w
Ministerial policy advisers, Scottish Office 62-3w
Ministerial policy advisers, Welsh Office 12-3w
Motorcycles, Driving licences 386-7w
Rolls-Royce Aeroengines 318-9
Small businesses, Redundancy 142

CSCE
see European Security Conference

CSM
see Committee on Safety of Medicines

Cultural heritage
868

Cumbernauld Development Corporation
Public appointments 408-9w

Cumbria
Police 5w

Cummings, Mr John
Questions
Building industry safety 166-7w
Eggs, Salmonella 473-4
Reduced earnings allowance 242-3w
Reduced earnings allowance, Invalidity benefits 243w
Reduced earnings allowance, Pensioners 243w
Tax burden 691w

Cunliffe, Mr Lawrence
Questions
Domestic rates, Rate increases 644w

Cunningham, Dr John
Debates etc.
Oral question time intervention (24:01:89) 869, (25:01:89) 1014
Questions
Armed forces, Community charge 453w
Armed forces housing, Fees & charges 452-4w
Community charge 460w, 1014
Community charge, Defence land 398w
Community charges register 460w
Community charges register, Press advertising 347w
Local government finance, Local government revenue 25w
Lowermoor Incident Health Advisory Group 227w
Lowermoor water treatment works, Water pollution 210-1w, 306w
Middlesbrough Borough Council 1020-1
Rate support grants, Wales 436-40w
Residential care 413w
Water authorities, Publicity 462w
Water supply industry, Television advertising 348w
"You & the Community Charge" 348w

Curriculum
Northumberland 703-4w
Special education 18-9w
Welsh language 346w, 431-2w

Curriculum Council for Wales
(16:01:89) 119-28

Currie, Edwina
480-1

Currie, Mrs Edwina
Debates etc.
BREL (1988), Privatisation (17:01:89) 164
Questions
Civil service dispersal 152

Curry, Mr David
Debates etc.
Beef, EC action (18:01:89) 453-5
EC Agriculture Council (25:01:89) 1031
Food, Consumer protection (24:01:89) 882, 886
Questions
Consumer credit, Labour Party 1173
Crown Prosecution Service, Cash limits 764-5w
Organ donor cards 544w

Customs
692-3w

Customs & Excise
Cash limits 578w
Pay incentives 379w

Cycling
Crash helmets 100w
Government assistance 93w

Cyclotron Trust
Government grants 227w

Cynon valley
Factories 432w

Cyprus
United Nations 255w
Youth training scheme 425-6w

Czechoslovakia
Human rights 153

Daewoo
(26:01:89) 1291-8

Dairy farming
National Farmers' Union 311w
Uganda 370w

Dalyell, Mr Tam
Debates etc.
By election writs, Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 595, 600, 611, 645-6, 650
Official Secrets Bill, Com (25:01:89) 1058, 1076, 1081, 1084, 1087-90, 1103, 1107, 1120-1, 1127, 1133, 1137
Security Service Bill, 3R (23:01:89) 755, 761
Questions
Agricultural & Food Research Council, Research finance 19-20w
Attorney-General, Republic of Ireland 367-8w
Chemical weapons, Arms control negotiations 373-4w
Edinburgh University, University finance 382w
European Commission, Public appointments 125w, 704-5w
Food contamination, Chlorine 318w
Greenhouse effect, Departmental coordination 127w
Hayes, Brian 319
Ministerial resignations, Departmental correspondence 480-1
NHS administration, Merit awards 160w
Overseas aid, Rain forests 11w
Salmonella, Medical research 713w

Dance
75w

Dandy, Paul
(25:01:89) 1155-60

Darling, Mr Alistair
Debates etc.
By election writs, Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 626
Questions
Air force bases, Scotland 753w
Army, Scotland 752w
Corporation tax, Scotland 379-80w
Foreign investment in UK 681w
Frontiers, EC action 510w
Immigration rules, Members' correspondence 6w
Minesweepers, Operating costs 753w
Parliament House Edinburgh, Security industry 160w
Passport Office, Civil service manpower 583-6w
Passport Office, Overtime 588-90w
Passport Office, Pay 587-8w
Passport Office, Temporary staff 585-7w
Passports 582-5w
Passports, Administrative delays 583-7w
Passports, Publicity 587w
Passports, Telephone services 586w, 588w
Police, Heathrow Airport 589-90w
Taxpayers, Scotland 379w
Trevi Group 509w
Trevi Group, Terrorism 509w
VAT, Scotland 379w

Dartford tunnel
Road tolls 763w

Dartmoor national park
Armed forces training 757w
Firing ranges 756-8w

Data banks
Opcon system 278w

Davies, Rt Hon Denzil
Questions
Interest rates, Wales 675

Davies, Mr Quentin
Debates etc.
Protection of Privacy Bill, 2R (27:01:89) 1321, 1322, 1323, 1343
Questions
Economic growth, Consumer expenditure 687w
Skill shortages 172w

Davies, Mr Ron
Debates etc.
Food, Consumer protection (24:01:89) 890, 900, 910, 918-22
Questions
Animal feed, Codes of practice 158w
Animal feed, Salmonella 428-9w, 808w
Badgers, Animal cruelty 137w
Beef, Imports 429w
Blood Products Laboratory, Factor VIII 36w
Bovine somatotropin, Licensing 157w
Eggs, Compensation 54w
Employment, Mid Glamorgan 664w
Firearms certificates, Manpower 391w
Fish, Animal feed 427w
Fish farming, Codes of practice 214w
Food inspection, Departmental responsibilities 367w
Forestry Commission, Land acquisition 405-7w
Foxes, Livestock 214w
Hares, Research 603w
Imported Food Regulations 1984, Prosecutions 550w
Interest rates, Small businesses 689w
Livestock, EC action 317-8w
Livestock, Salmonella 427w
Local Government Practices & Procedures Inquiry 503w
Meat, EC countries 701-2w
Meat, Food contamination 702w
Meat, Food hygiene 472
Meat, Food inspection 702w
Meat, Republic of Ireland 429w, 701-2w
Official engagements 127w
Planning permission, Animal welfare 210w
Poultry 309w
Poultry, Salmonella 54w, 428w, 702-3w
Prisoners on remand, Members' correspondence 137w
Road safety, Children 98w
Road works, Public utilities 123w
Shotgun certificates 6w
Sites of special scientific interest, Scotland 489w
Water authorities, Land acquisition 24w
Water authorities, Land ownership & tenure 24-5w
Water supply industry, Privatisation 679
Welsh Office, Offices 434w

Davis, Mr David
Questions
Capital investment 681w
NHS finance 543w
Road construction, Administrative delays 97w

Davis, Mr Terry
Questions
Junior hospital doctors, Working hours 527w
Liver diseases, Transplant surgery 36w
Thalassaemia, Research finance 357w

Day, Mr Stephen
Questions
National Online Manpower Information System 183w

Day care of children
Civil servants 52w
House of Commons services 394w
Local government staff 649w

Day nurseries
District health authorities 714w
Women's employment 628w

Deadline
Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals 462w

Deaf
Teacher training 193w

Death
Broadmoor Hospital 801w
Building industry 147-8
Dogs 461w
Hypothermia 543-4w
Road accidents 90w
Youth training scheme 140-1

Death grants
Expenditure 248w

Debt collection
Government departments 2w

Debts
Advisory services 234-5w
Developing countries 370w, 488-9w
Overseas aid 269-70w
Sudan 372w

Decca Navigator system
386w

Deer
Slaughterhouses 55w
Tuberculosis 55w, 312-3w, 429-30w

Defective housing
Council house sales 347w

Defence Communications Centre
451w

Defence contracts
Challenger tanks 198w

Defence expenditure
Defence research 652w
Guided weapons 279w
OECD countries 758w

Defence land
Community charge 398w
Livestock 757-8w

Defence procurement
Armoured fighting vehicles 451w
Competition 336w
Expenditure 448w
Nottingham 276-7w
Takeovers 336w

Defence Quality Assurance Directorate
Offices 447-8w

Defence research
Defence expenditure 652w
Guided weapons 756w
Nuclear fusion 754w

Defence research establishments
Audit 198-9w

Definitive Modification Bill 1988/89
Debates etc.
2R order read (27:01:89) 1363

Demolition
Building industry safety 252-3w
Planning permission (25:01:89) 1042

Dental health
Health education 410w

Dental services
539w

Dentists
539w

Dept of Education & Science
1w
Capital investment 600w
Cash limits 383-4w

Dept of Education & Science—continued
Child care 761w
Pay incentives 326w
Public expenditure 600w
Urban programme 477w

Dept of Employment
Advertising 553w, 809-10w
Cash limits 811-2w
Child care 742w
Departmental publications 366w
House of Commons questions 284w
Ministerial policy advisers 50w
Pay incentives 550-1w
Public relations 809w

Dept of Energy
Capital investment 621w
Child care 803-4w
House of Commons questions 696w
Non-departmental public bodies 697w
Pay incentives 344w
Public expenditure 621w

Dept of Health
367w
Capital investment 608w
House of Commons questions 356w
Ministerial policy advisers 35w
Pay incentives 548-9w
Public expenditure 608w
Urban programme 609w

Dept of Social Security
1w
Civil service dispersal 19-20, 46-7w, 257w
Computers in Government departments 618w
Departmental publications 243w
House of Commons questions 521w
Ministerial policy advisers 47-8w
Operating costs 618w, 805-6w
Pay incentives 416w
Road accidents 417-8w

Dept of Social Security local offices
Computers in Government departments 706w
Durham 805w
Failsworth 522-3w
Greater London 46-7w
Greenock 709-10w
North West region 119w
Oldham 522-3w
Port Glasgow 709-10w

Dept of the Environment
22w, 149w
Non-departmental public bodies 730-1w
Pay incentives 729w
Public appointments 21w

Dept of Trade & Industry
107w, 333w
Child care 765-6w
Ministerial policy advisers 16w, 768w
Pay incentives 471w
Public appointments 565w

Dept of Transport
101w, 571w
Capital investment 574-5w
Cash limits 470w
Ministerial policy advisers 100w
Pay incentives 737w
Public expenditure 574-5w
Urban programme 469w

Departmental coordination
Greenhouse effect 1w, 127w

Departmental correspondence
Manchester Trades Union Council Pensioners' Association 194w
Ministerial resignations 480-1
National Rivers Authority 25w
Wallenberg, Raoul 773w
World Development Movement 196w
Youth custody 200w

Departmental publications
Agriculture 603w
Dept of Employment 366w

Departmental publications—continued
Dept of Social Security 243w
EC internal trade 105w
Farm diversification scheme 315w
Legal profession 569w

Departmental responsibilities
Agricultural products 193-4w
Consumer protection 570-1w
Food inspection 367w
Food standards 126w, 485w
Magistrates' courts 569w
Mortgage defaulters 2-3w
Pre-school education 1w

Dependent states
EC countries 128w

Deportation
Mendis, Viraj 340-1, 343, 516w, 674w

Deposited papers
Norman Shaw Buildings 127-8w

Derbyshire
Burglary 275-6w
EC grants & loans 106-7w
Housing completions 460-1w
Teachers 474-5w

Derbyshire County Council
Rates & rating 1013-4

Derelict land
Government grants 642w
Staffordshire 204w

Derelict land grants
642w
Birmingham 147w

DES
see Dept of Education & Science

Detergents
Water pollution 793-4w

Developing countries
Debts 370w, 488-9w
Overseas loans 661-2w

Devlin, Mr Tim
Debates etc.
Avon Light Rail Transit Bill (HL), 2R (24:01:89) 973
Bell, Stuart, Members' personal statements (19:01:89) 494
Housing support grants, Scotland (23:01:89) 830, 831, 832
Protection of Privacy Bill, 2R (27:01:89) 1323, 1324, 1346, 1354-8
School Curriculum Development Committee & Secondary Examinations Council Order 1988 (16:01:89) 120
Questions
Business statements 489
Food hygiene, Consumer organisations 541-2w
Food standards, Departmental responsibilities 485w
Free trade 1176
Hospital patients, Per capita costs 796-7w
Inner cities initiative, Local authorities 321
Investment 1162
Lord Chancellor, Cash limits 663-4w
Museums & Galleries Commission, Exhibitions 73w
Self-employed, Part-time employment 682w
Tees & Hartlepool Port Authority, Ministers' domestic visits 82w
Urban development corporations 630w

Devon
Arts finance 75w
Hedges & ditches 502w
Unemployment 166w
Uniform business rate 733w

Dewar, Mr Donald
Debates etc.
Housing support grants, Scotland (23:01:89) 799, 803, 805-10, 840
Questions
Administration of justice, Glasgow 408w

Dewar, Mr Donald—continued
Coal, Imports 619w
Public relations, Government contracts 215w
Scottish courts, Glasgow 285-6w

Dickens, Mr Geoffrey
Debates etc.
Official Secrets Bill, Com (25:01:89) 1105
Questions
Abortion 533w
Rent officers 1022-3
Youth training scheme, Vacancies 141

Dicks, Mr Terry
Questions
Airport security, Police 28

Diets
Nutrition & health 296w

DIG
see Disablement Income Group

Dinefwr District Council
13w

Dioxins
Paper industry 669w

Diplomatic relations
Iran (18:01:89) 458-64

Diplomatic service
Civil service manpower 473w

Dir76/160/EEC
640w

Dir80/778/EEC
145-6w, 153w, 728w

Dir85/203/EEC
503-4w

Director of Public Prosecutions
154w, 367-8w, 683

Disabled Persons (Services Consultation & Representation) Act 1986
Questions
Administrative delays 870-1

Disablement Income Group
Handicap benefits 118-9w

Disaster relief
Armenia 372w
Expenditure 269w

Disasters
Heads of state 3w

Disciplinary proceedings
Abortion 532w
Royal Ulster Constabulary 498w

Disclosure of information
Community charges register 397w
Intelligence services 11w, 368-9w
Net Book Agreement 108w
Nuclear accidents 486w
Official secrets (25:01:89) 1047-142
Official Secrets Bill 1988/89 674-5w
Privacy (27:01:89) 1299-363
Radioactivity 347w
Tenants' choice 647w

Discrimination
Housing 396w

Disease control
AIDS 861
Bovine spongiform encephalopathy 310w

Disley bypass
Road construction 571w

Dismissal
Hospital consultants 593w

Disposable income
380w, 518-20w
One parent families 526-8w
Pensioners 612-4w

Disposable nappies
669w

Disposable syringes
Drug abuse 528w

Distance learning
Commonwealth 662w
Educational aid 662w

Distributive trade
Newsagents 232w

District health authorities
Day nurseries 714w
Local authorities 40w, 113w, 1014-5
Managers 412w, 716w
Merseyside 40w
NHS Review 856-8
North West region 40w

Dobson, Mr Frank
Debates etc.
By election writs, Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 593, 605, 650-3
Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Bill, Allocation of time motion (23:01:89) 696-701, 709 710, 711, 714, 735
Questions
Blood transfusion services, Health service staff 35w
Breast cancer, Screening 34-5w
Business statements 483-4, 1179-80
Capital gains tax, Tax burden 359-60w
Health 34w
Personal income, Tax thresholds 80w

Dock labour scheme
481-2

Docklands Liaison Group
741-2w

Docklands Light Railway
388w
Expenditure 573w

Doctors
Abortion 533w
Complaints 550w
Insurance 116w
Manpower 608-9w

Doctors' list of patients
Durham Health Authority 797-8w
Northern Regional Health Authority 797-8w

DOE
see Dept of the Environment

Dog fighting
Criminal investigation 394w

Dog licences
Northern Ireland 677w

Dog registration scheme
462w

Dogs
Death 461w
Infectious diseases 677w

Domestic rates
Northern Ireland 499w
Rate increases 644w
Scotland 593-4w

Domestic rents
Housing associations 639-40w

Donaghadee
Action for Community Employment 221w
Further education colleges 498w
Orlit houses 221w
Road accidents 497-8w

Doncaster
Social Fund 242w
Social security abuse 242w

Doran, Mr Frank
Debates etc.
Access to Personal Files (Social Work) (Scotland) Regulations 1989 (24:01:89) 993-7

Doran, Mr Frank—continued
Questions
Building industry, Death 147
Foreign investment in UK, Capital movements 681w
Fulmar oilfield, Offshore structures 31w
Fulmar oilfield, Oil industry accidents 30-2w
Fulmar oilfield, Oil pipelines 31w
Offshore structures, Safety standards 32w
Scottish health boards, Pay incentives 64w

Dornoch firth
Railway network 159w

Douglas, Mr Dick
Debates etc.
Housing support grants, Scotland (23:01:89) 805, 806

Douglas-Hamilton, Lord James, Under-Secretary of State for Scotland
Debates etc.
Housing Support Grant (Scotland) Order 1989 (17:01:89) 309
Housing support grants, Scotland (23:01:89) 799-805, 807, 837, 838, 839-41
Questions
Bridges, Isle of Skye 592w
Council house sales, Scotland 286-7w, 727w
Crown Office for Scotland, Cash limits 490w
Dornoch firth, Railway network 159w
Eaglesham moor road, Road works 717w
Empty housing, Council housing 593w
Forestry Commission, Land acquisition 405-7w
Housing support grants, Edinburgh 406w
Jackton bridge, Road works 717w
Local government staff, Scotland 398w
Monofilament gill nets, Prosecutions 159w
Motorways, Road safety barriers 289w
Parliament House, Edinburgh, Security industry 160w
Police housing, Scotland 405w
Radioactivity, Holy Loch 407w
Rent arrears, Scotland 219w, 722-6w
Scottish Special Housing Association 219w
Water supply, Scotland 159w

Dover
Railway travel 735-6w

Down's syndrome
Surgery 860

DPP
see Director of Public Prosecutions

Drinking & driving
Breathalysers 352-3w
Publicity 91w

Driver & Vehicle Licensing Centre
123w

Driving licences
Motorcycles 386-7w

Driving offences
Lincolnshire 271w
Prosecutions 673w
Speed limits 271w

Drug abuse
AIDS 357w
Disposable syringes 528w
Medical education 598w
Narcotics 154
Publicity 546w

Drug crimes
Arrests 675w
Caribbean 793w

Drug hazards
Paracetamol 413w

Drug seizures
128w

Drug side effects
Committee on Safety of Medicines 549w

Drugs
AIDS 716w
Prices 714w, 802w

Drunkenness
BAOR 27w

DTI
see Dept of Trade & Industry

DTp
see Dept of Transport

Duke of Edinburgh
1176

Dunn, Mr Bob
Questions
Ash-cum-Ridley 485w
Channel tunnel, Railway network 737w
City technology colleges, Capital investment 383w
Kent 704w
Road traffic control, Equipment 89w

Dunnachie, Mr Jimmy
Questions
British Rail, Railway travel 1-2
Interest rates 683w
Official engagements 127w
United Kingdom Immigrants' Advisory Service, Scotland 7w

Dunwoody, Mrs Gwyneth
Debates etc.
BREL (1988), Privatisation (17:01:89) 165
Private hospitals, Crewe Health Authority (17:01:89) 310-5
Questions
Business statements 489
Crewe Health Authority, Inquiries 606w
Private hospitals, Emergencies 714-5w

Durham
Dept of Social Security local offices 805w
Student grants 381w
VAT registration 236w

Durham Health Authority
Doctors' list of patients 797-8w

DVLC
see Driver & Vehicle Licensing Centre

Dykes, Mr Hugh
Debates etc.
By election writs, Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 610-1, 617
Planning Permission (Demolition of Houses) Bill, 1R (25:01:89) 1042
Protection of Privacy Bill, 2R (27:01:89) 1309-10
Questions
Business statements 1181-2
Chiltern line, Capital investment 121w
EC Internal Market Council 233w
Planning appeals 648w
Railway signals, Railway safety 85w
Royal National Orthopaedic Hospital 34w
Royal National Orthopaedic Hospital, Accident & emergency departments 863
Satellite broadcasting, Television licences 107w
Satellite broadcasting, Television reception 201w
Unemployment 165w

EAEC
see EURATOM

Eaglesham moor road
Road works 717w

Ealing
Rates & rating 631w

Early retirement
Teachers 29w

Earnings rules
Pensioners 805w

East Anglia
Roads 3-4
Unemployment 164w

East London river crossing
325-6w
Finance 93w

East London river crossing—continued
Land values 387w
Royal Arsenal Sports & Recreational Association 277-8w

East Midlands
Inner cities initiative 320
Unemployment 164w

"East Thames-side Housing Study Report"
Housing 1019

Eastern Europe
Civil servants 706w
European Security Conference 793w

Eastern Health & Social Services Board
496w, 599w
Accident & emergency departments 493w
Belfast City Hospital 492w
Gynaecology 493-4w
Hospital closures 493w
Hospitals 492w
Mater Hospital 493w
NHS administration 497w
Relocation of employees 494w
Royal Victoria Hospital Belfast 492-4w

Eastham, Mr Ken
Debates etc.
BREL (1988), Privatisation (17:01:89) 168
Poverty, Greater Manchester (19:01:89) 586, 587, 588

EC action
Agricultural subsidies 125w
Air transport 86w
Airport security 25-6
Beef 311w, (18:01:89) 435-56
Common agricultural policy 317w
Consumer protection 330w
Frontiers 510w
Livestock 317-8w
Set-aside schemes 315w
Sheep premiums 476
Tobacco 227w
Transport of radioactive materials 468w
Veal (18:01:89) 435-56

EC Agriculture Commissioner
313w

EC Agriculture Council
603w
Agricultural support systems 767-8w
Ministerial statements (25:01:89) 1027-37

EC aid
South Africa 270w

EC Commission
see European Commission

EC Consumer Affairs Council
330w

EC countries
Dependent states 128w
Inflation 358w, 678w
Meat 701-2w
Minimum wage 364-5w
Railway network 122w
Transplant surgery 296w

EC Draft 8903/88
(18:01:89) 435-56

EC Environment Council
Ozone layer 502w

EC external trade
Agricultural products 60w
Iran 240-1w
New Zealand 807w

EC Foreign Affairs Council
363w, 577w

EC free food scheme
321w
Butter 212w
Wales 268w

EC General Affairs Council
see EC Foreign Affairs Council

EC grants & loans
Agriculture 313w
Derbyshire 106-7w

EC grants & loans—continued
Road construction 563w
Transport infrastructure 294-5w

EC Internal Market Council
233w, 239w

EC internal trade
291w
Conferences 668w
Departmental publications 105w
North West region 230w
Public contracts 334
Publicity 333-4, 668w
Small businesses 144-5
Vocational education 181w

EC Labour & Social Affairs Council
173w

EC law
Exhaust emissions 190w
Takeovers 107w
VAT 81w
Water pollution 145-6w, 647w, 728w

EC Research Council
108w

EC social policy
364w

EC staff
Civil service recruitment 77w

EC trade
Nature conservation 153w, 503w

Economic forecasting
689-90w

Economic growth
375-6w, 686-7w, 1161
Consumer expenditure 687w

Economic League
330

Economic models
203w

Economic regions
Channel tunnel 84w
Industry 563w
Unemployment 259w, 678-9w

Economic situation
1163
North West region 686w
Pay settlements 1165
Wales 432w

Edinburgh
Housing support grants 406w

Edinburgh University
207-8w
University finance 382w

Education
Capital investment 71-2w
Convention of Scottish Local Authorities 219w
Optical fibres 229w
Scotland 71-2w

Education & industry
Scholarships 235w

Education Reform Act 1988
Questions
18-9w, 479-80w

Education Science & Arts Select Committee
(18:01:89) 391-434, 457

Education (Scotland) Act 1980
Questions
162w

Education support grants
703-4w

Educational aid
Distance learning 662w
India 371w

Educational equipment
Expenditure 70-2w
Scotland 70-2w

Educational finance
265-6w
Cash limits 266w
Records of achievement 133-4w
Special education 475w
Warwickshire 474w

Educational health services
Nurses 298-9w, 608w

Educational policy
Special education 475-6w

Educational publications
Expenditure 403-4w
Scotland 403-4w

Educational qualifications
Employment 282w, 423-6w
St Helena 12w
Vocational education 181w

Edwards Committee
see Records of Achievement National Steering Committee

Eels
731w

Efficiency scrutinies
46-7w

EFTA
see European Free Trade Association

Eggar, Mr Tim, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign & Commonwealth Affairs
Debates etc.
Cooper, Roger, Iran (18:01:89) 461-4
Questions
Antarctic, Airports 576w
British Antarctic Territory 473w
British embassies, Facsimile transmission 195w
Burma, Armed forces training 195w
Burma, Elections 195w
Burma, Human rights 194-5w
Burma, Refugees 195w
Caribbean, Drug crimes 793w
China, Compensation 256w
Falkland Islands, Ferries 361-2w
Falkland Islands, Upland geese 11w
Foreign & Commonwealth Office, Cash limits 576-7w
Hungary, Visas 364w
Japan, Funerals 12w, 661w
Prisoners of war, Compensation 363w, 660-1w
St Helena, Educational qualifications 12w
South Georgia, Fish conservation 12w
Treaties, Public records 660w
Turkey, Human rights 256w
UN Security Council 473w

Eggs
361w
Agricultural production 431w
Compensation 53-4w, 431w, 721w
Food consumption 308w
Food labelling 53w
Food standards 310w
Imports 309-10w
Overseas aid 370w
Production 308w
Salmonella 214-5w, 224-5w, 308-10w, 324w, 409w, 467-9, 473-5, 676, 718w, 808w
Scotland 718w, 721w
Wales 431w, 676

Elderly
Poverty (18:01:89) 348-50
Residential care 244-5w, 247-52w, 481-2w

Elected Authorities (Northern Ireland) Bill 1988/89
Debates etc.
Rep & 3R (26:01:89) 1206-90

Elections
Burma 195w

Electoral register
Community charges register 682

Electric cables
Scotland 341-2w

Electrical safety
Building industry safety 168w

Electricity & Pipeline Works (Assessment of Environmental Effects) Regulations 1988
Debates etc.
(26:01:89) 1290

Electricity area boards
Electricity consumption 30w

Electricity consumption
211-2w
Electricity area boards 30w

Electricity distribution
Wales 671

Electricity generation
Capital investment 620w
Wave power 341-2w

Electricity supply industry
Capital investment 155w, 620w
Expenditure 154-5w
Privatisation 155w, 695w, 698w
Scotland 62w

Electronic equipment
Antidumping duties 259-60w

Elimination of Poverty in Old Age Bill 1988/89
Debates etc.
1R (18:01:89) 348-50

Embassies
Vietnam 8w

Emergencies
Private hospitals 714-5w

Emergency calls
Ambulance services 606-7w

Emergency planning
Clyde Submarine Base 556w
Military aid to civil community 447w
Rosyth dockyard 280w, 556w

Emergency services
Community charge 500-1w

Emery, Sir Peter
Debates etc.
By election writs, Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 619, 653-7
Questions
House of Fraser, Takeovers 322

Emigration
Civil servants 706w

Employees' contributions
National insurance contributions 241-2w

Employment
745-9w
Educational qualifications 282w, 423-6w
Graduates 553w
Industries 165w
Inner cities initiative 767-8w
London Docklands 650w
Manufacturing industries 419-22w, 742-3w
Mendis, Viraj 340-1
Mid Glamorgan 664w
Restart programme 144
Service industries 742-3w
Social security benefits disqualification 616w
Tourist industry 170w

Employment Bill 1988/89
Questions
Northern Ireland 602w

Employment discrimination
Civil service manpower 221-2w
Industrial tribunals 222w

Employment discrimination*—*continued
Northern Ireland 221-2w, 335-6w, 676-7w
Post Office 221w
Youth training scheme 627-8w

"Employment for the 1990s White Paper"
169-70w, 552w

Employment level
163w
Graduates 425-6w

Employment opportunities
169-70w
Building industry 228w
Challenger tanks 276-7w
Foreign investment in UK 231w
Glasgow 490w
Handicapped workers 177w
London Docklands 348w, 457-8w
Wales 681

Employment Select Committee
Urban development corporations 21w

Employment Training
143-4, 148-9, 171-3w, 280-1w, 518-20w, 526-8w, 621w, 810w
Age 171w
Aircrew 551w
Attendance allowance 618-9w
Bury 172w
Child care 281w
Community programme 172w, 281-2w
Expenditure 491w
Handicapped workers 177w
Inner city areas 171w
Inquiries 282w
Managers 281w
Older workers 148-9
Scotland 288-9w, 490-1w, 596w
Staffordshire 281w
Take-up 281w
Trades Union Congress 171-2w
Warrington Borough Council 621w
Working hours 421w

Empty housing
Council housing 206-8w, 561w, 593w, 642w, 1010
Greater London 647w
Public sector housing 207w
Scotland 593w
Wales 561w

Energy conservation
695w, 698w
Environment 696w
Estate Action 640-1w

Energy costs
Wave power 342-3w

Energy research
Severn barrage 695w
Wave power 341w, 343-4w

Energy Select Committee
(18:01:89) 457

Energy supply
(17:01:89) 177-9

Energy Technology Support Unit
341w, 343w
Inquiries 343w

Enforcement notices
Local authority powers 634w
Slaughterhouses 213w

English Channel
Oil pollution 292w, 463w

Enterprise allowance scheme
177w

Enterprise initiative
234w, 331

Entry clearances
Administrative delays 675w

Environment
Alternative energy 619-20w
Energy conservation 696w

Environment*—*continued
Nuclear power stations 619-20w
Research finance 482w, 635w
Wales 482w

Environment protection
Chlorofluorocarbons (25:01:89) 1042
Expenditure 732w
Hedges & ditches (16:01:89) 31, 501-2w
Nature Conservancy Council 207-8w
Rain forests (25:01:89) 1042
Recycling (25:01:89) 1042
Seas & oceans 644w
Water authorities 505w

Environmental health
Local government services 482-3w
Prisons 773w

Environmental health officers
713w, 771-2w, 774w
Prisons 774w
Wales 482-3w

Environmental impact assessment
22w

Environmental policy
Minister for the Civil Service 53w

Environmentally sensitive areas
316w, 470
Agricultural improvement scheme 470

EOC
see Equal Opportunities Commission

Equal opportunities
628w
Women's employment 482

Equal Opportunities Commission
628w
Child care 44w
Equal pay 162w

Equal pay
Equal Opportunities Commission 162w

Equipment
Airport security 124-5w
Fire services 670w
Infant mortality 34w
Rating revaluations 795-6w
Road traffic control 89w

Eritrea
Peace negotiations 473w

Essex
Police 581-2w
Railway network 8-9

Estate Action
Energy conservation 640-1w
Expenditure 211w
Government grants to local authorities 305w

Estate agents
Restrictive trade practices 322

Ethnic minorities
Police 201w
Prison staff 201w, 390w

Ethnic monitoring
Mental hospitals 113w
Prisoners 580w
Prisons 579w

Ethylene dibromide
Health hazards 419w

EURATOM
696-7w

Europe Open for Business
333-4

European Assembly
see European Parliament

European Atomic Energy Community
see EURATOM

European Commission
53-4w, 107w, 566w, 577w, 647w, 766w
Ministers' visits abroad 675

European Commission*—*continued
Public appointments 125w, 704-5w
Wales 675-6
Water supply industry 291w

European Council
704w

European Court of Justice
570w, 578w, 737-8w
VAT 79w, 679w

European Free Trade Association
577w

European monetary system
358w, 688w, 1162

European Parliament
363w

European Security Conference
255w
Eastern Europe 793w

European Space Agency
232-3w

Evans, Mr David
Questions
Employment Bill 1988/89, Northern Ireland 602w
Employment level 163w
Manufacturing industries, Productivity 231w
Milk Marketing Board 477
Nurses' training 546w
Official engagements 705-6w
Public expenditure, National income 375w
Road accidents, Death 90w

Evans, Mr John
Questions
Football, Identity cards 771w
Income tax, Tax allowances 376w
Medical malpractice, Accidents 354w
Police, Greater Manchester 393w
School population, Private education 596w
Sewage, Capital investment 304-5w
Special education, Cost per pupil 597-8w
Special education, Educational finance 475w
Special education, Educational policy 475-6w
Waste disposal, River pollution 318w

Evans Committee
see Curriculum Council for Wales

Evennett, Mr David
Questions
Abortion, Medical treatments 533w
Association of Chief Police Officers 673w
Channel tunnel, Railway transport 84w
Civil service agencies 52w
Official engagements 261-2w
Shareholders 690w
South East Thames Regional Health Authority, Hospital waiting lists 605w
Unemployment, Greater London 164w

Ewing, Mr Harry
Debates etc.
BREL (1988), Privatisation (17:01:89) 170

Ewing, Mrs Margaret
Debates etc.
Access to Personal Files (Social Work) (Scotland) Regulations 1989 (24:01:89) 987, 997-8
Food, Consumer protection (24:01:89) 886, 903
Questions
British Rail 86w
Farmers, Bankruptcy 403w
Nuclear Industry Radioactive Waste Executive 635-6w
Pigmeat, Monetary compensatory amounts 427w
Pigs, Agricultural subsidies 404-5w
Pigs, Animal feed 405w
Railway closures, Scotland 9-10

Ewing, Mrs Margaret—continued
Veterinary services, Glasgow University 861

Exchange rates
358w, 679w, 1161-2
Sterling 685w

Excise duties
Cider 686w
Lead free petrol 1163-4

Exeter Health Authority
116w

Exhaust emissions
EC law 190w
Greenhouse effect 650w
Lung diseases 355w
Wales 483-4w

Exhibitions
Museums & Galleries Commission 73w

Export controls
Barbouti, Ishan 359w
Iran 240-1w

Export licensing
106w

Export promotion
230w
Motor vehicles 228w
Trade competitiveness 108-10w
Woollen industry 765w

Exports
232w, 685w, 1167-8
Beef 499w
Libyan Arab Republic 444w
Methyl phosphonyl difluoride 443w
Nissan 235w
Nuclear fuels 652w
Nuclear reactors 659w
Rolls-Royce Aeroengines 667-8w

Eye, Ear & Throat Hospital, Shrewsbury
864-5

Eye tests
194w

Facsimile transmission
British embassies 195w
Members' facilities 127w

Factor VIII
Blood Products Laboratory 36w

Factories
Construction 203w
Cynon valley 432w

Factories Act 1961
Questions
751-2w
Young people 185w

Factory Inspectorate
628-9w
Civil service manpower 51w
Nottingham 51w

Failsworth
Dept of Social Security local offices 522-3w

Fair Employment Agency for Northern Ireland
221w

Fair Employment (Northern Ireland) Act 1976
Questions
677w

Fair Employment (Northern Ireland) Bill 1988/89
Questions
335-6w, 676-7w
Codes of practice 676w

Fair Employment Tribunal for Northern Ireland
221-2w

Fairbairn, Sir Nicholas
Debates etc.
Housing support grants, Scotland (23:01:89) 805, 831

Falkland Islands
Ferries 361-2w
Upland geese 11w

Families
Homelessness 636w
Personal income 80w

Family credit
Administrative delays 48w, 616w
One parent families 244w
Social security claims 806w
Take-up 617w

Family doctors
853-4
Cash limits 853
Greater London 355w
Pay 113w

Family income supplements
One parent families 360w
Social security claims 618w
Social security recipients 804w

Family practitioner committees
540w

FAO
see Food & Agriculture Organisation

Farm & conservation grants scheme
470, 502w

Farm Animal Welfare Council
156w

Farm buildings
Planning permission 647w

Farm diversification scheme
Departmental publications 315w
Planning permission 477

Farm incomes
Green pound 307w
Northern Ireland 222-3w

Farm woodland scheme
316w

Farmers
Bank loans 144w
Ministers' domestic visits 561-2w
Northern Ireland 144w
Wales 561-2w

Farms
Nottingham 699w

Farr, Sir John
Questions
Agricultural research, Research finance 807-8w

Fastnet project
Telephone systems 278w

Fatchett, Mr Derek
Debates etc.
Rate support grants (19:01:89) 514, 520, 546, 574-5
School Curriculum Development Committee & Secondary Examinations Council Order 1988 (16:01:89) 119-21
Questions
Health service staff, Political impartiality 115w
Hospitals, NHS administration 114w
NHS, Contracts for services 114-5w
Records of achievement, Educational finance 133-4w
Training Agency 186w
Water supply industry, Fluoridation 302w
Youth training scheme, Industrial accidents 141

Faulds, Mr Andrew
Questions
Museums & galleries 489w
Museums & galleries, Scotland 72w
National Museum of Wales 782w

Favell, Mr Tony
Questions
Air routes, USA 99w
Civil service dispersal 21
Civil service unions 52w
Community Care Review 867-8
Local government staff, Manpower 646w
Manufacturing industries 235-6w
Medical treatments, Contracts for services 679
Mendis, Viraj, Employment 340-1
Ministry of Agriculture, Anniversaries 312w
National insurance cards 615w
Pharmacists 605w
Training Agency, Information services 179-80w

FCO
see Foreign & Commonwealth Office

Fearn, Mr Ronnie
Questions
Air force, West Germany 26-7w
British Steel Corporation, Privatisation 567w
Health service staff, Scientists 410w
Junior hospital doctors, Working hours 855
Lorries, Pedestrian areas 97w
Medical education, Drug abuse 598w
Medical equipment, St Thomas' Hospital 302w
Mental health review tribunals 413-4w
Mental hospitals, Property transfer 548w
NHS administration 531-2w
Pharmacists, Manpower 303w
Royal Devon & Exeter Hospital, Radiotherapy 356w, 410-1w
Sea pollution 640w
Tourism, North West region 170w
Water pollution, Fish 731w

Fees & charges
Armed forces housing 452-4w
Higher education 381w
Public libraries 154w
Television licences 671w

Feltham Remand Centre
Costs 273w

Fennell Committee
see King's Cross Fire Inquiry

Fernley Aeroclean
23-4, (26:01:89) 1199-200

Ferries
Falkland Islands 361-2w
Irish Sea 120w, 190w, 761w

Field, Mr Barry
Questions
Bus services, Privatisation 12w
Chipmunk aircraft 277w
Civil service agencies, Management 18
Criminal Injuries Compensation Board, Administrative delays 350w
Crown Estate Commissioners 258-9w
Defence procurement, Competition 336w
Electricity supply industry, Privatisation 695w
Environmentally sensitive areas, Agricultural improvement scheme 470
Family credit, One parent families 244w
Forensic science, AIDS 351w
Hard core unemployed, Youth employment 259w
Housing (Homeless Persons) Act 1977 149-50w
Magistrates, Public appointments 369w
Official engagements 127w, 261-2w, 485-6w, 705-6w
Oil pollution, English Channel 292w
Oil pollution, Pollution monitoring 292-3w
Plessey, Takeovers 336w
Prisoners, Segregation of prisoners 770-1w
Radio 673-4w
Sea navigation, Radio engineering 386w
Truancy, Statistics 597w

Field, Mr Frank
Debates etc.
Child benefit (18:01:89) 363, 364-5, 371
Questions
Family income supplements, One parent families 360w
Housing benefits, Rents 360w
Income support, Maintenance 257w
Infant mortality 860
NHS administration 531-2w
Social security claims, Members' correspondence 622-3w
Social security recipients, Standard of living 414w
Training & enterprise councils 182w

Field walls
Government grants 310-1w

FIMBRA
see Financial Intermediaries' Managers' & Brokers' Association

Financial Intermediaries' Managers' & Brokers' Association
332w
Vocational education 333w

Financial services
Barlow Clowes 331w
Licensing 331w
Self-regulating organisations 332-3w

Finsberg, Sir Geoffrey
Debates etc.
City of London (Spitalfields Market) Bill, 3R (24:01:89) 933-4
Questions
Middle East, Peace negotiations 157, 576w

Fire engines
670w

Fire prevention
Furniture 240w

Fire services
135w
Equipment 670w
King's Cross 738w
Planning permission 334w
Rates & rating 305w

Firearms
Amnesties 510-5w
Northern Ireland 395-6w

Firearms certificates
770w
Manpower 391w
Northern Ireland 602-3w

Fires
Arson 134-5w
Building industry safety 169w
London Underground 104w

Fireworks
Injuries 290w

Firing ranges
Dartmoor national park 756-8w

First time buyers
501w, 1171-2
Home purchase assistance scheme 501w
Mortgage interest rates 358w

Firth Brown
567w

Fish
Animal feed 427w
Water pollution 731w

Fish conservation
South Georgia 12w

Fish farming
Codes of practice 214w
Maerdy 154w
Pesticides 720w
Scotland 720w

Fishburn, Mr Dudley
Questions
Capital investment 680-1w
Cycling, Government assistance 93w
Hard core unemployed, Greater London 181w

Fishburn, Mr Dudley—continued
Rates & rating, Nurses 1012-3

Fisher, Mr Mark
Questions
Channel Five, Expenditure 591w
Channel Five, Investment 591w
Channel Five, Television engineering 591w
Civil service 19
Independent Television Commission, Illegal broadcasting 276w
Local radio, Radio broadcasting licences 6w
Museums & galleries, Government grants 16-7
Net Book Agreement, Disclosure of information 108w
Net Book Agreement, Shops 107-8w
Radio frequencies 566w
Television channels, Multipoint video distribution systems 566w
Television engineering, Commercial television 391w
Television engineering, Finance 591w
Television engineering, Land ownership & tenure 592w
Television engineering, Quality control 591-2w
Television engineering, Standards specifications 591w
Television reception, Counterfeit manufacturing 590w
Terrorism, Broadcasting controls 138-9w

Fishing quotas
White fish 316-7w

Flannery, Mr Martin
Debates etc.
By election writs, Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 593, 596, 597, 603, 613, 620-1, 641, 654, 657
Elected Authorities (Northern Ireland) Bill, Rep & 3R (26:01:89) 1220, 1225-6
Oral question time point of order (25:01:89) 1026
Oral questions, Ministers (25:01:89) 1039, 1040, (26:01:89) 1201-2
Pre-school education (18:01:89) 402-6, 428
Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Bill, Allocation of time motion (23:01:89) 705
Questions
Factories Act 1961, Young people 185w
Oil industry safety, Offshore safety 344-5w
Public sector housing, Housing construction 1009
Wheelchairs, Batteries 542w
Working hours, Young people 185w

Flats
Freehold housing 260-1w

Flood control
Expenditure 778w
Opencast mining 50w
Wales 778w

Fluoridation
Water supply industry 302w

Fly posting
Prosecutions 671w

Flynn, Mr Paul
Debates etc.
Food, Consumer protection (24:01:89) 925
Questions
Air force bases, Radioactive wastes 655w
Alternative energy, Environment 619-20w
Arms control, International conferences 654w
Arms control, Research 654w
Chemical weapons 655w
Chemical weapons, Arms control 655w
Chemical weapons, Arms control negotiations 575-6w
Chemical weapons, Japan 656w
Electricity generation, Capital investment 620w
Exchange rates 679w

Flynn, Mr Paul—continued
Food composition 311-2w
House of Commons questions, Ministry of Defence 656w
Interviews, Broadcasting programmes 620w
Motor vehicles, Fraud 123w
Newport 261w
Nuclear fuels, Exports 652w
Prisoners on remand, Prison population 393w
Radioactivity, Disclosure of information 347w
Semiconductor devices, Takeovers 325-6
Severn bridge, Public inquiries 431w

Food
Law reform 319w
Opposition days (24:01:89) 880-932
Prices 60w
Prison hospitals 772w

Food aid from UK
Overseas aid 688-90

Food & Agriculture Organisation
369w

Food & Environment Protection Act 1985
Questions
57w

Food composition
311-2w
Aluminium 801w
Infant foods 807w

Food consumption
Eggs 308w

Food contamination
Aflatoxin 57w
Chlorine 318w
Listeria monocytogenes 115w, 157-8w
Meat 701-2w

Food exports
Meat 238-40w
Sheep meat 476

Food hygiene
478-9
Consumer organisations 541-2w
Cook-chill catering 301w, 411-2w, 803w
Meat 470-2
Milk 477
Northern Ireland 471
Prisons 771-3w
Slaughterhouses 56w, 212-3w, 318w

Food imports
Butter 60w, 699-700w
Meat 470-1

Food industry
Self-regulating organisations 156w

Food inspection
Animal feed 321w
Civil service manpower 603-4w
Departmental responsibilities 367w
Meat 56w, 702w

Food labelling
Cook-chill catering 604w
Eggs 53w
Infant foods 807w

Food microbiology
Research 307w

Food poisoning
299-300w
Cook-chill catering 713w
Listeria monocytogenes 607w, 716w
Prisons 773w
Salmonella 111-2w

Food Protection (Emergency Prohibitions) Order 1989
Debates etc.
(23:01:89) 690

Food standards
Departmental responsibilities 126w, 485w
Eggs 310w

Ministry of Agriculture 603-4w
Sausages 469

Food subsidies
471-2

Food supply
Military aid to civil community 447w
NATO 54w

Food surpluses
Expenditure 59w

Fookes, Dame Janet
Questions
Animal experiments, Cosmetics 508-9w
Fireworks, Injuries 290w
Hedges & ditches, Devon 502w
Hedges & ditches, Environment protection 501-2w

Foot, Rt Hon Michael
Debates etc.
By election writs, Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 628
Official Secrets Bill, Com (25:01:89) 1061-4, 1100
Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Bill, Allocation of time motion (23:01:89) 709
Security Service Bill, Com (17:01:89) 201-6, 219-20, 222
Security Service Bill, 3R (23:01:89) 759-63, 766
Questions
Housing, Blaenau Gwent 432w

Football
Arrests 23-4w, 288w, 338w, 353-4w, 390w, 464w, 719-20w, 732w
Convictions 137w
Glasgow 719-20w
Hooliganism 771w
Identity cards 23w, 25w, 137w, 149-51, 456w, 633-4w, 675w, 771w, 1024-6, 1176-7
Public order policing 276w, 671-2w
Scotland 288w, 338w, 720w
Wales 145w, 462w

Football Association
633w

Football League
633-4w, 671-2w

Football Spectators Bill (HL) 1988/89
Questions
145w, 462w

Football Supporters' Association
634w

Footwear
Imports 236-8w, 328
South Korea 236-8w

Ford Motor Company
334

Foreign & Commonwealth Office
486w
Cash limits 576-7w
Child care 792w
Civil service 264-5w
Pay incentives 373w
Television programmes 660w

Foreign companies in UK
231w, 669w
Japan 290-1w, 330-1w
Takeovers 442w
Toyota 1176

Foreign Compensation (People's Republic of China) Order 1987
Questions
256w

Foreign investment in UK
681w, 1168
Capital movements 374w, 681w

Foreign investment in UK—continued
Employment opportunities 231w
Manufacturing industries 325
USA 324

Foreign languages
Small businesses 145

Foreign patients
AIDS 860

Foreign policy
Israel 151

Foreign tourists
Greater London 138-9

Foreign trade
South Korea 238w

Forensic science
AIDS 351w

Forestry Commission
Land acquisition 405-7w

Forman, Mr Nigel
Questions
Rating revaluations, Equipment 795-6w

Former Members
Public appointments 72-3w
Scotland 72-3w

Forsyth, Mr Michael, Under-Secretary of State for Scotland
Debates etc.
Access to Personal Files (Social Work) (Scotland) Regulations 1989 (24:01:89) 982-4, 992, 998-1001
Questions
Assisted places scheme, Expenditure 65w
Assisted places scheme, Scotland 64w
Ayrshire & Arran Health Board, Property transfer 61w
Ayrshire & Arran Health Board, Public appointments 162w
Ayrshire & Arran Health Board, Surgery 61-2w
Beef, Scotland 336-8w
Convention of Scottish Local Authorities, Education 219w
Education, Capital investment 71-2w
Educational equipment, Expenditure 70-2w
Educational publications, Expenditure 403-4w
Eggs, Compensation 721w
Eggs, Salmonella 718w
Farmers, Bankruptcy 403w
Fish farming, Pesticides 720w
Football, Arrests 288w, 338w, 719-20w
Football, Scotland 720w
Freshwater fishing, Scotland 489w
Further education, Scotland 407w
Grant Maintained Schools Trust 161w
Greater Glasgow Health Board, Contracts for services 719w
Health service staff, Career structure 397w
Higher education teachers, Colleges of education 400-2w
Higher education teachers, Scotland 401w
Hospital beds, Scotland 721-2w
Hospital consultants, Dismissal 593w
Infant mortality, Medical research 717w
Lennox Castle Hospital, Finance 407w
Local education authorities, Capital investment 63-4w
Museums & galleries, Scotland 72w
Mylnefield Research Establishment 288w
NHS, Property transfer 290w, 719w
NHS administration, Merit awards 160w
Nursery schools, Expenditure 402w
Nursery schools, Scotland 64-5w
Nurses, Career structure 338-42w
Old people's homes, Scotland 218-9w
Pigs, Agricultural subsidies 404-5w
Pigs, Animal feed 405w
Poultry, Animal breeding 719w
Poultry, Salmonella 720-1w
Pre-school education, Scotland 592-3w
Private education, School population 70-2w

Forsyth, Mr Michael—continued
Private education, Scotland 65-9w
School administration, Scotland 161w
School boards, Video recordings 160w
School leaving, Higher education 399w
School population, Scotland 401-4w
Scottish Council of Independent Schools 161w
Scottish health boards, NHS administration 159w
Scottish health boards, Pay 777-8w
Scottish health boards, Pay incentives 64w
Scottish health boards, Public appointments 215-8w, 718-9w
Set-aside schemes, Agricultural workers 285w
Set-aside schemes, Scotland 399w
Sites of special scientific interest, Scotland 489w
Southern General Hospital Glasgow, Contracts for services 719w
Teachers, Scotland 162w

Forsythe, Mr Clifford
Debates etc.
Elected Authorities (Northern Ireland) Bill, Rep & 3R (26:01:89) 1206-7, 1226, 1238, 1247-8, 1261-2, 1267, 1268, 1278
Telepoint services (26:01:89) 1198

Forth, Mr Eric, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Industry and Consumer Affairs
Questions
Business premises, Greater London 290w
Cars, Fraud 329-30
Central Selling Organisation for Diamonds 236w
Child care, Dept of Trade & Industry 765-6w
Consumer protection, EC action 330w
Dept of Trade & Industry, Public appointments 565w
Education & industry, Scholarships 235w
Enterprise initiative 234w
Fireworks, Injuries 290w
Foreign companies in UK, Japan 290-1w, 330-1w
Furniture, Fire prevention 240w
Government assistance to industry 332-3
Industry 332
Inner cities initiative, Accountability 321
Inner cities initiative, East Midlands 320
Inner cities initiative, Employment 767-8w
Inner cities initiative, Local authorities 321
Inner cities initiative, Local authority powers 320-1
Market research, Expenditure 16w
Marketing, Government contracts 16w
Mileometers, Fraud 765w
Ministerial policy advisers, Dept of Trade & Industry 16w, 768w
National Engineering Laboratory, Privatisation 766w
Net Book Agreement 472w
Newsagents, Distributive trade 232w
North Peckham task force, Ministers' domestic visits 668-9w
Optical fibres, Education 229w
Paper industry, Dioxins 669w
Pay incentives, Dept of Trade & Industry 471w
Post Office, Industrial relations 15w
Post Office, Postal services 16w
Post Office Counters 234w
Post Office Counters, Privatisation 566w
Post offices 17w
Postal services 16w
Postal services, Industrial disputes 106w
Postal services, Monopolies 105-6w
Semiconductor devices 326-7
Semiconductor devices, Protectionism 326
Semiconductor devices, Takeovers 325-6
Telephone selling 470-1w
Water supply industry, Privatisation 291w

Forth, Mr Eric—continued
Fossil fuels
Tax yields 358w

Foulkes, Mr George
Debates etc.
BREL (1988), Privatisation (17:01:89) 169
Child benefit (18:01:89) 360
Questions
Airport security, Heathrow Airport 27
Ayrshire & Arran Health Board, Property transfer 61w
Ayrshire & Arran Health Board, Public appointments 162w
Ayrshire & Arran Health Board, Surgery 61-2w
Bovine spongiform encephalopathy, Disease control 310w
Channel tunnel, Railway freight transport 8
Eaglesham moor road, Road works 717w
EC countries, Dependent states 128w
Falkland Islands, Ferries 361-2w
Jackton bridge, Road works 717w
Low flying, Military aircraft 130-2w
National Savings Bank, Investment 1163
NHS, Property transfer 290w
Nuclear submarines, Radiation hazards 452w
Polaris submarines, Radiation hazards 452w
Radioactivity, Holy Loch 407w
Submarines, Shipping accidents 123w, 131w
Youth training scheme, Girvan 159-60w

Fowler, Rt Hon Norman, Secretary of State for Employment
Questions
Business growth training, Government assistance to industry 552w
Dept of Employment, Cash limits 811-2w
Employment level 163w
Employment opportunities 169-70w
Employment Training 148-9
Homeworking 140
Jobclubs 812w
Ministerial policy advisers, Dept of Employment 50w
National training task force 139-40, 182-3w
Skill shortages 138
Tourist industry 170w
Vocational training, Young people 137-8
Youth training scheme 138

Fox, Sir Marcus
Questions
Unemployment, Yorkshire & Humberside 164w

Foxes
Livestock 214w

France
Antarctic 576w

Franks, Mr Cecil
Questions
Barrow in Furness 234w
Community charge 631w
Drug abuse, Publicity 546w
Small businesses 176w

Fraser, Mr John
Debates etc.
Monopolies & Mergers Commission (Performance of Functions) Order 1988 (25:01:89) 1150-1
Questions
Bridges, Road signs 573w
Judges, Women 763w
King's College Hospital, Finance 527w

Fraud
Agricultural subsidies 212w
Cars 329-30
Mileometers 765w
Mortgage relief 377w
Motor vehicles 123w

Free trade
1176

Freehold housing
Flats 260-1w

Freeman, Mr Roger, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Dept of Health
Debates etc.
Private hospitals, Crewe Health Authority (17:01:89) 313-6
Questions
Abortion 533-4w
Abortion, Advisory services 533w
Abortion, Doctors 533w
Abortion, Law reform 532w
Abortion, Medical equipment 113w, 356-7w
Abortion, Medical treatments 533w
Abortion, Mental handicap 532w
Abortion, Private health services 532-3w
Aluminium, Food composition 801w
Aluminium, Health hazards 799-800w
Ambulance services, Greater London 606-7w
Aplastic anaemia 38-9w
Aplastic anaemia, Medical research 716-7w
Births & Deaths Registration Act 1953, Carlisle Hospital 32-3w
Blood Products Laboratory, Factor VIII 36w
Blood transfusion services, Health service staff 35w
Breast cancer, Screening 34-5w, 535-9w
Broadmoor Hospital, Death 801w
Brook Hospital, Hospital closures 226w
Calderdale Health Authority, Cook-chill catering 301w
Cancer, Children 116-7w, 549w
Census of population, Parliamentary constituencies 41-2w
Cervical cancer, Screening 297-8w
Cervical cancer, Women's Hospital Liverpool 225w
Coventry & Warwickshire Hospital, Hospital waiting lists 530-1w
Dental services 539w
Diets, Nutrition & health 296w
Doctors, Complaints 550w
Down's syndrome, Surgery 860
Drug abuse, Publicity 546w
Eye Ear & Throat Hospital Shrewsbury 864-5
Food hygiene, Consumer organisations 541-2w
Food hygiene, Cook-chill catering 301w
Food poisoning 299-300w
Geriatrics, NHS finance 610w
Health education, Dental health 410w
Health Education Authority 545w
Health service staff, Vaccination 540w
Health services 606w
Health services, Pregnancy 545-6w
Heart diseases, Publicity 544-5w
Heart diseases, Transplant surgery 296w
Hip replacements, Hospital waiting lists 35-6w
Hospices 534w
Hospital catering, Cook-chill catering 115-6w, 301-2w
Hospital patients 528-9w, 540w
Hospital patients, Per capita costs 796-7w
Hospital waiting lists 864
Hospital waiting lists, Mersey Regional Health Authority 528w
Hospital waiting lists, NHS finance 866
Hospital waiting lists, Trent Regional Health Authority 865
Hospital waiting lists, Yorkshire & Humberside 38w
Hospitals, Construction 114w
Hospitals, Yorkshire Regional Health Authority 545w
Human organs, Retail trade 713-4w
Hypothermia, Death 543-4w
Imported Food Regulations 1984, Prosecutions 550w
Infant Life (Preservation) Act 1929 533w
Infant mortality 859-60

Freeman, Mr Roger—continued
Infant mortality, Medical research 33-4w
Infant mortality, Research 34w
Kidneys, Transplant surgery 864
King's College Hospital, Finance 527w
Leicestershire Health Authority, Maternity services 541w
Leptospirosis 295-6w
Listeria monocytogenes 299w
Listeria monocytogenes, Cook-chill catering 42-3w
Listeria monocytogenes, Food contamination 115w
Listeria monocytogenes, Medical research 355w
Lowermoor Incident Health Advisory Group 227w, 802w
Lung diseases, Exhaust emissions 355w
Medical treatments, War casualties 226w
Meningitis, North Derbyshire Health Authority 410w, 803w
Mental health review tribunals 413-4w
Mental hospitals, Ethnic monitoring 113w
Mental hospitals, Property transfer 548w
Mentally handicapped, Bexley 547w
Mentally handicapped, Local government services 547w
NHS, Contracts for services 114-5w, 540-1w
NHS, Land values 547-8w
NHS, Medical treatments 297w
NHS Review, Information 865
Nuclear accidents, Sellafield 715w
Office of Population Censuses & Surveys, Cash limits 605-6w
Old people's homes, Calderdale 300w
Operating theatres 864
Operating theatres, Costs 863-4
Organ donor cards 544w
Osteoporosis, Screening 550w
Oswestry Hospital, Property transfer 356w
Perinatal mortality, Parents 546-7w
Pontefract Health Authority, Hospital waiting lists 38w
Population, Basingstoke & North Hampshire Health Authority 801w
Post codes, Households 412w
Public Health Laboratory Service, Cook-chill catering 115w
Residential care, Elderly 247-52w
Residential care, North West region 42w
Royal Devon & Exeter Hospital, Radiotherapy 356w
Salmonella, Eggs 224-5w
Salmonella, Food poisoning 111-2w
Sex change operations 542w
Silicosis 354w
Smoking, Health warnings 535w
South East Thames Regional Health Authority, Offices 295w
Thalassaemia, Research finance 357w
Tobacco, EC action 227w
Transplant surgery, Organ donors 544w
Venereal diseases, Children 224w
Wakefield Health Authority, Hospital catering 301w
Water supply industry, Fluoridation 302w
Water treatment, Chemicals 26w
Yorkshire Regional Health Authority, Cook-chill catering 116w

Freight transport
12

French, Mr Douglas
Questions
Council house sales 640w
Empty housing, Council housing 206-8w
Empty housing, Public sector housing 207w
Family practitioner committees 540w
House of Commons questions, Attorney-General 154w
House of Commons questions, Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster 563-4w
House of Commons questions, Church Commissioners 486w
House of Commons questions, Dept of Employment 284w
House of Commons questions, Dept of Energy 696w

French, Mr Douglas—continued
House of Commons questions, Dept of Health 356w
House of Commons questions, Dept of Social Security 521w
House of Commons questions, Leader of the House of Commons 257w
House of Commons questions, Minister for the Civil Service 487w
House of Commons questions, Ministry of Agriculture 699w
House of Commons questions, Ministry of Defence 555w
House of Commons questions, Northern Ireland Office 395w
House of Commons questions, Office of Arts & Libraries 488w
House of Commons questions, Prime Minister 329w
House of Commons questions, Public Accounts Commission 256w
House of Commons questions, Scottish Office 289w
House of Commons questions, Welsh Office 664w
Households 227-8w
Housing completions 205w
Housing construction, Planning appeals 204-6w
Industrial investment, Manufacturing industries 680w
Private rented housing 207w
Public sector housing, Housing improvement 20w
Railway travel, Gloucester 102w
Restrictive trade practices 321-2
Tenants, Housing tenure 20w

Freshwater fishing
Scotland 489w

Frigates
Operating costs 753w

Fringe benefits
Personal income 376w

Frontiers
EC action 510w

Frozen food
Cook-chill catering 543w

Fry, Mr Peter
Questions
Channel tunnel, Railway freight transport 8

Fuel & Energy Provision Bill 1988/89
Debates etc.
1R (17:01:89) 177-9

Fulmar oilfield
Offshore structures 31w
Oil industry accidents 30-2w
Oil pipelines 31w

Funerals
Japan 12w, 661w, 1176

Furniture
Fire prevention 240w

Further education
Newtownards 29w
Scotland 407w
Social security benefits rules 417w

Further education colleges
Ards peninsula 143w
Donaghadee 498w
Northern Ireland 143w

Fyfe, Mrs Maria
Debates etc.
By election writs, Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 605-6, 633
Questions
Channel tunnel, Economic regions 84w
Industrial health & safety 177-8w
Local government staff, Day care of children 649w
Youth training scheme 810w

G7
see Group of Seven

Galbraith, Mr Sam
Debates etc.
Access to Personal Files (Social Work) (Scotland) Regulations 1989 (24:01:89) 984-7, 999
Housing support grants, Scotland (23:01:89) 815
Questions
Diplomatic service, Civil service manpower 473w
Health Care International, Private hospitals 217-8w
Hospital beds, Scotland 721-2w
Infant foods, Aluminium 610-1w
Lennox Castle Hospital, Finance 407w
NHS Review, Information 865
Nurses, Career structure 338-42w
Scottish health boards, NHS administration 159w
Scottish health boards, Public appointments 215-8w, 718-9w
UN Security Council 473w
VAT, NHS 79w

Gale, Mr Roger
Questions
Channel tunnel, Railway network 7
Dog registration scheme 462w
Dogs, Death 461w
Nitrates, Agricultural land 473
Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, Deadline 462w

Galloway, Mr George
Debates etc.
Protection of Privacy Bill, 2R (27:01:89) 1318-26

Gaming clubs
Licensing 146
Tourist industry 146

Gaming Machines (Prohibition on Use by Persons Under Eighteen) Bill 1988/89
Debates etc.
2R order read (27:01:89) 1364

Garages & petrol stations
Lead free petrol 394w, 632w

Gardiner, Mr George
Questions
Breathalysers, Christmas 201-2w
Cyprus, United Nations 255w

Garrett, Mr John
Questions
Civil service agencies, Pay 19
Semiconductor devices 326-7

Garrett, Mr Ted
Questions
Income support, Wallsend 245w
Management Bulletin, Production costs 225w
Social Fund, Wallsend 245w
Tax burden 691w

GATT
125w, 290w, 316w, 767-8w, 807w
Agricultural products 441w
Agriculture 314w

Gatwick Airport
467w

GCHQ
see Government Communications Headquarters

GEC
107w, 336w, (20:01:89) 665-70

General Agreement on Tariffs & Trade see GATT

General Electric Company
see GEC

Genetics

Genetics—continued
Immigration applications 389w

George, Mr Bruce
Debates etc.
Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Bill, Allocation of time motion (23:01:89) 720-5

Geriatrics
Health service staff 610w
NHS finance 610w

Gilbert, Rt Hon John
Debates etc.
Official Secrets Bill, Com (25:01:89) 1084, 1101

Gill, Mr Christopher
Debates etc.
Beef, EC action (18:01:89) 445-7
EC Agriculture Council (25:01:89) 1033
Food, Consumer protection (24:01:89) 906, 907
Questions
Courts, Parent & child 672-3w
Food industry, Self-regulating organisations 156w
Government assistance to industry 331
Government assistance to industry, Expenditure 687-8w
NHS Review 858
Official engagements 127w, 261-2w
Planning permission, Parish councils 209w
Unemployment, Vacancies 51w

Gilmour, Rt Hon Sir Ian
Debates etc.
Child benefit (18:01:89) 365-7
Official Secrets Bill, Com (25:01:89) 1051, 1078-9
Questions
One parent families, Disposable income 526-8w

Girvan
Youth training scheme 159-60w

Glandular fever
Research 476w

Glasgow
Administration of justice 408w
Employment opportunities 490w
Football 719-20w
Scottish courts 285-6w

Glasgow University
Veterinary services 861

Glasshouse growers
(16:01:89) 129-36

GLC
see Greater London Council

Glencorse Camp
398w

Gleneyre & Burnside Children's Home
Cruelty to children 395w

Glengarry forest
Radio engineering 336w

Gloucester
Railway travel 102w

Glyn, Dr Alan
Debates etc.
Official Secrets Bill, Com (25:01:89) 1093
Security Service Bill, Com (17:01:89) 252
Questions
Dog fighting, Criminal investigation 394w

Godman, Dr Norman A
Debates etc.
Access to Personal Files (Social Work) (Scotland) Regulations 1989 (24:01:89) 988-9, 992
Questions
Balance of payments 684w
Dept of Social Security local offices, Greenock 709-10w

Godman, Dr Norman A—continued
Eggs, Compensation 721w
Fish farming, Pesticides 720w
Hospital consultants, Dismissal 593w
Income support, Scotland 710-2w
NHS, Property transfer 719w
Poultry, Salmonella 720-1w
Railway safety 90w
Social Fund, Greenock 710w
Social security claims, Greenock 708-10w

Golding, Mrs Llin
Questions
Channel tunnel, Railway freight transport 7-8
Coal mining, Manpower 803w
Horse racing, Betting 507w

Goodhart, Sir Philip
Questions
Business statements 1180-1

Goods vehicles
232w
Weighing machines 467w

Goodson-Wickes, Dr Charles
Questions
Jobclubs 173w
Official engagements 705-6w
Public expenditure, National income 683w
Sex change operations 542w

Gordon, Ms Mildred
Debates etc.
By election writs, Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 608, 614, 631
Child benefit (18:01:89) 377-9
City of London (Spitalfields Market) Bill, 3R (24:01:89) 938-9
Food, Consumer protection (24:01:89) 908, 909, 914, 918, 919
Questions
Air accidents, Lockerbie 739w
Britannia bridge, Road works 325w
Capital allowances, Canary Wharf 348w
Isle of Dogs enterprise zone, Rate rebates 459w
London Docklands, Business 457w
London Docklands, Employment opportunities 348w, 457-8w
London Docklands, Redundancy 458w

Gorman, Mrs Teresa
Debates etc.
By election writs, Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 599, 647
Child benefit (18:01:89) 355
Questions
Cooperative Development Agency 628w
East London river crossing, Finance 93w
Economic growth 687w
Employment Training, Trades Union Congress 171-2w
Solicitors 328w
Youth training scheme, Cyprus 425-6w

Gorst, Mr John
Debates etc.
Official Secrets Bill, Com (25:01:89) 1052, 1055, 1057, 1089, 1099, 1105, 1115, 1117, 1132, 1135
Questions
Parent & child, Mental illness 606w

Gould, Mr Bryan
Questions
Company investigations 564-5w
Company investigations, Administrative delays 565w
Company investigations, Prosecutions 565w
Competition 328
Dept of Trade & Industry, Public appointments 565w
Income tax, Profit sharing 79w

Government assistance
Animal husbandry 312w
Arts finance 76w
Cycling 93w
Mobility of disabled 94-5w

Government assistance to industry
331-3, 687-8w
Business growth training 552w
Corby 331
Publicity 331-2

Government Communications Headquarters
706w
Trade union membership 19-22

Government contracts
379w
Competition 374-5w
Marketing 16w
Public relations 215w

Government departments
Consumer protection 571w
Debt collection 2w

Government grants
Agriculture (19:01:89) 579
Barnstaple-Exeter railway 95w
Building repairs 329w
Colleges of education 602w
Cyclotron Trust 227w
Derelict land 642w
Field walls 310-1w
Hedges & ditches 310-1w
London Docklands 647w
Mudiad Ysgolion Meithrin 431w
Museums & galleries 15-7
Royal Welsh Agricultural Society 664w
Sewage 347w
Tidy Britain Group 504-5w
Tourism, 170w, 284w
Training & enterprise councils 49w

Government grants to local authorities
Estate Action 305w
Special schools 598-9w

Government Legal Services Review
262-3w

Gow, Mr Ian
Debates etc.
BREL (1988), Privatisation (17:01:89) 168
Oral questions, Ministers (24:01:89) 875
Security Service Bill, Com (17:01:89) 294-5
Questions
Public sector borrowing requirement 1166

Gower, Sir Raymond
Questions
Eggs, Agricultural production 431w
Hospitals, Cardiff 678
Sheep meat, Wales 433-4w
Water supply industry, Privatisation 672

Graduates
Employment 553w
Employment level 425-6w
Industry 133w

Graham, Mr Thomas
Debates etc.
Housing support grants, Scotland (23:01:89) 804, 834-6
Questions
Building industry safety 167w
VAT, Average earnings 680w

Grant, Mr Bernie
Debates etc.
Rate support grants (19:01:89) 542, 563
Questions
Canary Wharf, Subsidies 648w
Housing Act 1985, Homelessness 148w
Immigration appeals 392w
NHS administration 531-2w
Racial discrimination, Prosecutions 141w
Roads, Greater London 83w

Grant maintained schools
478w
Trafford 19w

Grant Maintained Schools Trust
161w

Grants to the Redundant Churches Fund Order 1988
Debates etc.
(18:01:89) 347

Greater Glasgow Health Board
407w
Contracts for services 719w

Greater London
A40 574w
Air pollution 503-4w, 648-9w
Ambulance services 606-7w
Autoguide electronic route guidance system 387w
Breathalysers 137-8w
Building industry safety 166w
Business premises 290w
Civil service dispersal 77w
Dept of Social Security local offices 46-7w
Empty housing 647w
Family doctors 355w
Foreign tourists 138-9
Hard core unemployed 181w
Housing 650-1w, 1019
Housing investment programmes 648w
Local government (25:01:89) 1044-6
Local government revenue 632w
Museums & galleries 75w
Pirate radio stations 446w
Prison staff 274w
Prisons 274w
Railway safety 292w
Rates & rating 733-4w
Road traffic 89w, 92w
Road works 734-5w
Roads 83w
Social Fund 711w
Transport 740-1w
Transport of radioactive materials 468-9w
Unemployment 164w
Urban planning 630-1w, 795w
Vacancies 251-2w
Water pollution 153w

Greater London Council
Local government reform 795w

Greater Manchester
Police 7w, 393w
Poverty (19:01:89) 581-90

Greater Manchester Fire & Civil Defence Authority
305w

Green pound
307w
Farm incomes 307w

Greenbelt
Barnsley 643w

Greenhouse effect
637-8w
Departmental coordination 1w, 127w
Exhaust emissions 650w
Natural Environment Research Council 381-2w
Research 381-2w

Greenock
710-2w
Dept of Social Security local offices 709-10w
Social Fund 710w
Social security claims 708-10w

Greenpeace
576w

Greenway, Mr Harry
Debates etc.
Pre-school education (18:01:89) 394, 407, 419-21
Rate support grants (19:01:89) 498, 509
Questions
British Library, Construction 666w
Business statements 1189
Cervical cancer, Screening 297-8w
Cycling, Crash helmets 100w
Employment Training, Inner city areas 171w
Industrial investment, Manufacturing industries 323-4
Inflation 1169
Magistrates 369w

Greenway, Mr Harry—continued
Museums & galleries, Stock control 74w
Official engagements 127w, 261-2w, 485-6w, 705-6w
Overseas aid, Eggs 370w
Pre-school education 265w
Pre-school education, Departmental responsibilities 1w
Pre-school education, Scotland 592-3w
Rates & rating, Nurses 631w
Road traffic, Greater London 92w
School governors, Local education authorities 382w

Greenway, Mr John
Debates etc.
EC Agriculture Council (25:01:89) 1036
Questions
Arts finance 76w
Customs & Excise, Cash limits 578w
Football, Identity cards 633w
Hospital consultants, Manpower 541w
Hotels, Property development 184w
Industrial investment, Manufacturing industries 680w
Inland Revenue, Cash limits 693-4w

Gregory, Mr Conal
Debates etc.
BREL (1988), Privatisation (17:01:89) 166
Questions
British Rail, Railway timetables 9
Council housing, Empty housing 561w
Empty housing, Council housing 593w
Fly posting, Prosecutions 671w
Food contamination, Listeria monocytogenes 157-8w
Labour costs, Manufacturing industries 682w
Milk, Confectionery 466
Percentage for Arts schemes 73w
Social security finance 711-2w
Tourist information 142-3

Greyhound racing
(24:01:89) 876-9

Griffiths, Sir Eldon
Questions
Community charge, Local government staff 459w, 500w
Eggs, Compensation 53w

Griffiths, Mr Nigel
Debates etc.
Housing support grants, Scotland (23:01:89) 803, 817-9, 828, 841
Questions
Agency Benefits Unit, Administrative delays 246-8w
Channel tunnel 84w
Foreign investment in UK 1168
Hospital ancillary staff, Pension rights 153-4
Housing support grants, Edinburgh 406w
Hypothermia, Death 543-4w
Income support, Heating 119w
Minimum wage, Prosecutions 180-1w
Social Fund, Expenditure 519-20w
Social security reform, Lothian 415-6w
Universities, Tourism 284w
University finance, Rates & rating 267w

Griffiths, Mr Win
Debates etc.
Pre-school education (18:01:89) 414
Questions
Foreign investment in UK, Capital movements 374w
Hospital waiting lists, Mid Glamorgan Health Authority 430w
Industrial investment, Manufacturing industries 1173
Inflation 677w
Junior hospital doctors, Working hours 528w, 678
Water pollution, EC law 647w

Griffiths Committee
see Community Care Review

Grist, Mr Ian, Under-Secretary of State for Wales
Questions
Breast cancer, Screening 269w
Bronglais Hospital Aberystwyth 680
Cancer, North Wales 678
Cancer, Wales 678-9
Cervical cancer, Screening 433w
Community care, Wales 268w
Community charges register, Electoral register 682
Council housing, Empty housing 561w
Environment, Research finance 482w
Environmental health, Local government services 482-3w
Flood control, Expenditure 778w
Handicapped, Wales 680
Hormone treatments, Wales 433w
Hospital beds, Private hospitals 14w
Hospital consultants, NHS 14w
Hospital consultants, Private health services 14w
Hospital waiting lists, Mid Glamorgan Health Authority 430w
Hospital waiting lists, Wales 484w
Hospitals, Cardiff 678
Hospitals, Contracts for services 14-5w
Hospitals, Medical equipment 479w
House renovation grants, Local government expenditure 13w
Housing, Blaenau Gwent 432w
Housing benefits, Wales 677
Infant mortality, Research finance 145w
Junior hospital doctors, Working hours 483w, 678
Local authority associations 677
Medical treatments, Contracts for services 679
NHS, Property transfer 432w
NHS, Wales 677-8
Noise, Complaints 484w
Nurses, Appeals 682
Nursing homes, Local government social services 13w
Nursing homes, Private health services 13w
Pay beds, Wales 13-4w
Residential care, Pembroke 481-2w
Second homes, Community charge 481w
Water Act 1973, Wales 195-6w, 268-9w
Water pollution, Wales 484w
Water supply disconnections, Wales 145w
Wrexham Water Works Company, Wealth 267w

Grocott, Mr Bruce
Questions
Budget 690w
Deer, Tuberculosis 312w
Mortgage interest rates 259w
NHS & private practice, Expenditure 542w
School population 596w
Telford Development Corporation, Public sector housing 1015-6
Youth training scheme 174w

Ground, Mr Patrick
Questions
Airport security, Heathrow Airport 27-8
Employment Training 171w
Minister for the Civil Service, Cash limits 666w

Group of Seven
678w
Capital gains tax 790-1w

Grylls, Mr Michael
Debates etc.
Telepoint services (26:01:89) 1193
Questions
EC internal trade, Public contracts 334
Television Licensing Organisation 239w

Guardian
Prosecutions 11w, 368-9w

Guardian Angels
776w

Guided weapons
Defence expenditure 279w
Defence research 756w

Guildford
Bombings 8-10w, 368w

Guillotine
(23:01:89) 692-742

Gummer, Rt Hon John Selwyn, Minister for Housing and Planning
Debates etc.
Rate support grants (19:01:89) 497-507, 511-2, 518, 520, 521, 525, 535-6, 539, 540, 543, 555, 556, 559
Questions
Community charge 632w
Community charge, Emergency services 500-1w
Community charge, Local government staff 459w, 500w
Community charge rebates 500w
Community charges register 152w, 500w, 632w
Local authority powers, Regional planning & development 23w
Local government revenue, Greater London 632w
Local government staff, Manpower 646w
Non-domestic rates 148w
Rates & rating, Nurses 460w
Rates & rating, Revenue support grant 25w
Rating revaluations, Equipment 795-6w
Uniform business rate, Devon 733w

Gynaecology
Eastern Health & Social Services Board 493-4w

Gypsies
Armagh 491-2w

Halifax
Water pollution 463w

Hamilton, Mr Archie, Minister of State for the Armed Forces
Questions
Air accidents, Lockerbie 27-8w
Air force bases, Scotland 753w
Antiaircraft missiles 450w
Armed forces, Lockerbie 447w
Armed forces deployment, Western Europe 129w
Armed forces training, Military aid to civil community 447w
Armoured fighting vehicles 450w
Arms control, Research 654w
Army, Scotland 752w
Artillery 450w
BAOR, Antiaircraft missiles 130w
BAOR, Antitank missiles 129-30w
BAOR, Armed forces training 130w
BAOR, Army strength 129w
BAOR, Tanks 129w
Chipmunk aircraft 277w
Defence expenditure, OECD countries 758w
Emergency planning, Clyde Submarine Base 556w
Emergency planning, Rosyth dockyard 280w
Guided weapons, Defence research 756w
Military aid to civil community, Emergency planning 447w
Military aid to civil community, Food supply 447w
Minesweepers, Operating costs 753w
Nuclear safety, Rosyth dockyard 279w
Nuclear submarines, Nuclear accidents 280w
Nuclear submarines, Radiation hazards 452w
Nuclear submarines, Radioactive waste disposal 279-80w, 556-7w

Hamilton, Mr Archie—continued
Nuclear weapons, Modernisation 128-9w
Polaris submarines, Radiation hazards 452w
Royal yacht, Operating costs 131w
Submarines, Shipping accidents 131w
Transport of radioactive materials, Air freight transport 756w

Hamilton, Mr Neil
Debates etc.
Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Bill, Allocation of time motion (23:01:89) 699, 704, 707
Private notice question point of order (18:01:89) 345
Protection of Privacy Bill, 2R (27:01:89) 1336-40, 1359
Questions
Consumer credit, Interest rates 1170
Hungary, Visas 364w
NHS administration 532w
Nurses, Career structure 862
Private rented housing 1009-10
Public expenditure, National income 683w
Self-employed 164w

Hammersmith & Fulham
Rates & rating 1012-3

Hampson, Dr Keith
Questions
Business statements 485
Graduates, Industry 133w
Higher education admission, Vocational guidance 598w
Loan guarantee scheme 183w
Market research, Expenditure 16w
Marketing, Government contracts 16w
Trent Valley Garden Centre, Planning permission 211w

Handicap benefits
Disablement Income Group 118-9w

Handicapped
Social Security Advisory Committee 805w
Wales 680

Handicapped workers
Employment opportunities 177w
Employment Training 177w
Treasury 689w
Young people 751-2w

Hanley, Mr Jeremy
Debates etc.
Child benefit (18:01:89) 351, 352
Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Bill, Allocation of time motion (23:01:89) 724
Questions
Boeing, AWACS 330
British Poultry Federation 313-4w
National Savings Bonds 578w
Overseas trade, Tunisia 323
Privy Council Office, Cash limits 698-9w
Self-employed, Manpower 259w

Hannam, Mr John
Debates etc.
Protection of Privacy Bill, 2R (27:01:89) 1326-9
Questions
Uniform business rate, Devon 733w

Hantergantick quarry
Prosecutions 554w

Harbour Works (Assessment of Environmental Effects) (No 2) Regulations 1988
Debates etc.
(26:01:89) 1290

Hard core unemployed
163w, 679w
Greater London 181w
Northern Ireland 28-9w
Restart programme 624w
Youth employment 259w

Hardy, Mr Peter
Debates etc.
Hedgerows Bill, 1R (16:01:89) 31
Hedgerows Bill, Points of order (27:01:89) 1364
Questions
Business statements 487-8
Channel tunnel, Railway transport 84w
Chemical weapons 195w
Derelict land, Government grants 642w
Electricity supply industry, Capital investment 155w
Employment Training, Working hours 421w
Income tax, Costs 685-6w
Methyl phosphonyl difluoride, Exports 443w
Nurses, Career structure 530w
Optical fibres, Education 229w
Pesticide residues, Vegetables 311w
Regional aid 331
Road tolls 12

Hares
Research 603w

Hargreaves, Mr Andrew
Debates etc.
Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Bill, Allocation of time motion (23:01:89) 716

Hargreaves, Mr Ken
Questions
Abortion, Doctors 533w
Bus services, Competition 92w
Infant Life (Preservation) Act 1929, Prosecutions 684
Unemployment, Lancashire 163w

Harman, Ms Harriet
Questions
Barristers, Women 763-4w
Family doctors 853-4
Health service staff, Manpower 609-10w
Inner cities initiative, Employment 767-8w
North Peckham task force, Ministers' domestic visits 668-9w
Oswestry Hospital, Property transfer 356w
Solicitors, Women 764w

Harris, Mr David
Questions
Drug abuse, AIDS 357w
Hospital doctors, Manpower 530w
Housing associations, Housing finance 640w
Potato Marketing Board 315w
Retirement age, Retirement pensions 246w
Tourist industry 170w

Haselhurst, Mr Alan
Questions
A120, Road works 4
Airport security, Buildings 28
Boeing, Offset arrangements 330
Excise duties, Lead free petrol 1164

Hattersley, Rt Hon Roy
Debates etc.
Official Secrets Bill, Com (25:01:89) 1047-53, 1055, 1075, 1088, 1095-6, 1097-8, 1109
Security Service Bill, Com (16:01:89) 32-44
Security Service Bill, 3R (23:01:89) 749-53
Questions
Mendis, Viraj, Arrests 335-7

Hayes, Brian
319

Hayes, Mr Jerry
Questions
Business statements 1186
Committee on Safety of Medicines, Drug side effects 549w
Family doctors, Cash limits 853
Human organs, Retail trade 713-4w
Investment 681w
Museums & galleries, Vocational training 263-4w
Paracetamol, Drug hazards 413w

Hayes, Mr Jerry—continued
Police, Essex 581-2w

Hayhoe, Rt Hon Sir Barney
Debates etc.
Official Secrets Bill, Com (25:01:89) 1128, 1136-7

Haynes, Mr Frank
Questions
Bed & breakfast accommodation, Per capita costs 639w
Coal mining, Redundancy 143
Deer, Tuberculosis 313w
Museums & galleries, Manpower 74w
Peak District national park 1024
Sausages 470

Hayward, Mr Robert
Questions
Small Firms Service 145-6

Hazardous wastes
Imports 209w, 1010-1

Heads of state
Disasters 3w

Health
34w
Belfast 492w

Health & Safety at Work etc Act 1974
Questions
554-5w

Health & Safety Commission
see Health & Safety Executive

Health & Safety Executive
51w, 147-8, 184-5w, 553-5w
Accidents 96-7w
Building industry safety 147

Health Care International
Private hospitals 217-8w

Health education
Dental health 410w

Health Education Authority
545w

Health hazards
Aluminium 799-800w
Bovine somatotropin 157w
Ethylene dibromide 419w
Water pollution 227w

Health service ancillary staff
Wales 677-8

Health service staff
Blood transfusion services 35w
Career structure 397w, 530w
Geriatrics 610w
Managers 114w
Manpower 609-10w
Pay 298w
Political impartiality 115w
Scientists 116w, 410w, 866
Technicians 355w
Vaccination 540w

Health services
606w
Local government social services 114w
London Docklands 547w
Newham 547w
Pregnancy 545-6w

Health warnings
Smoking 535w

Hearing aids
Hearing therapists 226w

Hearing therapists
Hearing aids 226w
Manpower 225-6w
Pay 226w
Training 226w

Heart diseases
Publicity 544-5w
Transplant surgery 296w

Heathrow Airport
467w, (26:01:89) 1199-200
Airport security 23-5, 27-8, 325w
Capital investment 467w
Police 589-90w
Railway network 86-7w

Heating
Income support 119w

Heddle, Mr John
Questions
Accounting, Subsidiary companies 105w
Alexander Fleming House, Repairs & maintenance 304w
Construction, VAT 651w, 737-8w
Derelict land, Staffordshire 204w
Freehold housing, Flats 260-1w
Housing compensation 148w
Housing (Homeless Persons) Act 1977, HMSO 80w
Housing starts, Private sector housing 304w
Inner city areas, Industrial development 565w
Land Registry Office, Administrative delays 260w
Latent Damage Act 1986 260w
Leasehold housing, Appeals 147w
Local plans 204w
Planning authorities, Housing construction 148w
Retirement pensions, Administrative delays 257-8w
Simplified planning zones, Private investment 304w
Tipping of waste, Construction materials 147w
VAT, Building industry 604w
VAT, Construction 570w, 578w
VAT, European Court of Justice 79w

Hedgerows Bill 1988/89
Debates etc.
1R (16:01:89) 31
2R order read (27:01:89) 1364

Hedges & ditches
Devon 502w
Environment protection (16:01:89) 31, 501-2w
Government grants 310-1w

Heffer, Mr Eric S
Debates etc.
Official Secrets Bill, Com (25:01:89) 1060, 1066, 1072-3, 1088, 1094, 1115-6, 1123-4
Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Bill, Allocation of time motion (23:01:89) 725-6
Protection of Privacy Bill, 2R (27:01:89) 1325
Rate support grants (19:01:89) 503, 508
Security Service Bill, Com (16:01:89) 43, 44, 53-6, 72, 77, 78, 80, 109, (17:01:89) 182-3
Security Service Bill, 3R (23:01:89) 757
Questions
Building industry, Death 148
Business statements 485-6, 1182
Local authorities, Public bodies 1014-5

Helicopters
Armed forces 279w

"Help with Hostel Charges Proposals for Change Consultation Paper"
805w

Henderson, Mr Doug
Debates etc.
Pre-school education (18:01:89) 399
Questions
Ford Motor Company 334
Industrial health & safety 184w
Interest rates, Small businesses 689w
Road safety, Urban areas 98w

Hepatitis
Blood Products Laboratory 36w

"Hero from Zero"
682-3

Hexham
Unemployment 421-2w

Hicks, Mrs Maureen
Questions
Drug abuse, Narcotics 154
Empty housing, Council housing 642w
Health service staff, Career structure 530w
Infant mortality 860
Inner city areas, Private sector 230w
Inner city school compacts 182w
Restart programme 143-4

Hicks, Mr Robert
Debates etc.
EC Agriculture Council (25:01:89) 1029
Questions
Regional aid 234w
Saltash tunnel, A38 293w

HIDB
see Highlands & Islands Development Board

Higgins, Rt Hon Terence L
Debates etc.
Official Secrets Bill, Com (25:01:89) 1130
Questions
Airport security, Heathrow Airport 24
Motorcycles, Courier services 6

High Moor colliery
Mine accidents 283-4w, 345w, 425w, 619w
Mine safety 283w

Higher education
Fees & charges 381w
Local authorities 665w
School leaving 399w
Wales 665w

Higher education admission
Student numbers 759-60w
Vocational guidance 598w

Higher education teachers
Colleges of education 400-2w
Scotland 400-2w

Higher pensioner premium
48w

Highland Regional Council
592w

Highlands & Islands Development Board
220w

Hinchliffe, Mr David
Debates etc.
Food, Consumer protection (24:01:89) 897, 910-3
Questions
Cook-chill catering, Frozen food 543w
District health authorities, Managers 412w, 716w
Food hygiene, Cook-chill catering 301w, 411-2w
Food poisoning 299-300w
HMS Resolution, Repairs & maintenance 132w
Hospital catering, Cook-chill catering 115-6w, 301-2w, 411w
Inflation 678w
Listeria monocytogenes 299w
Listeria monocytogenes, Agricultural research 320w
Listeria monocytogenes, Cook-chill catering 42-3w, 411w
Listeria monocytogenes, Food contamination 115w
Listeria monocytogenes, Food poisoning 716w
Public Health Laboratory Service, Cook-chill catering 115w
Slaughterhouses, Food hygiene 56w
Wakefield Health Authority, Hospital catering 301w

Hinchliffe, Mr David—continued
Wakefield Health Authority, Public appointments 37w, 716w
Yorkshire Regional Health Authority, Cook-chill catering 116w
Youth training scheme, Industrial health & safety 175w

Hind, Mr Kenneth
Debates etc.
Official Secrets Bill, Com (25:01:89) 1091-2
Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Bill, Allocation of time motion (23:01:89) 709-15, 717, 731
Security Service Bill, Com (16:01:89) 55, 71-6, 79, 83, 84
Questions
Abortion 534w
Birth registration, Prosecutions 368w
Bombings, Guildford 8-10w
Capital investment 680-1w
Channel tunnel, Railway network 83w
Country Landowners' Association 313w
Crown Prosecution Service 685
Drinking & driving, Breathalysers 352-3w
Factories, Construction 203w
Hospitals, Construction 114w
Industrial development, Northern region 328
Industry 1170
Official engagements 485-6w

Hip replacements
Hospital waiting lists 35-6w

Hirohito, Emperor
12w, 661w, 1176

HM Factory Inspectorate
see Factory Inspectorate

HM Inspectorate of Pollution
26w, 151w, 506-7w, 794-5w

HM Inspectorate of Schools
Annual reports 761w

HM Land Registry
see Land Registry Office

HMI
see HM Inspectorate of Schools

HMS Bronington
27w

HMS Resolution
Repairs & maintenance 132w

HMSO
52w
Housing (Homeless Persons) Act 1977 80w
Pay incentives 378-9w
"Wages Councils 1988 Consultation Document" 366w

Hogg, Mr Douglas, Under-Secretary of State at the Home Office
Debates etc.
Official Secrets Bill, Com (25:01:89) 1096
Regional crime squads, West Midlands (25:01:89) 1157-60
Questions
Absent voting 275w
Albany Prison, Prison accommodation 272w
Animal experiments, Cosmetics 508-9w
Badgers, Animal cruelty 137w
Breathalysers, Christmas 515-6w
Breathalysers, Greater London 137-8w
Breathalysers, Police powers 516w
Breathalysers, Rugby 138w, 392w
Business vote, City of London 592w
Civic dignitaries 592w
Crime, AIDS 774w
Crime, South Bank 510w
Dog fighting, Criminal investigation 394w
Drug crimes, Arrests 675w
Feltham Remand Centre, Costs 273w
Firearms, Amnesties 510-5w
Firearms certificates 770w
Firearms certificates, Manpower 391w

Hogg, Mr Douglas—continued
Football, Arrests 276w, 353-4w, 390w, 464w
Football, Convictions 137w
Football, Hooliganism 771w
Football, Identity cards 137w, 675w, 771w
Football, Public order policing 275w, 671-2w
Forensic science, AIDS 351w
Illegal immigrants, Nigeria 273-4w
Lay visitors, Insurance 136w
Leeds Prison, Construction 273w
Luton Town Football Club, Arrests 276w
Members' correspondence, Administrative delays 8w
Mentally disturbed offenders, Prisoners' release 3w
Metropolitan Police, Accountability 392w
Metropolitan Police, Buildings 350-1w
Metropolitan Police, Law enforcement 776w
Missing persons, Young people 350w
Mobile homes, Transient people 137w
Pay incentives, Home Office 509w
Pay incentives, Metropolitan Police 670w
Police, Career structure 5w
Police, Cumbria 5w
Police, Essex 581-2w
Police, Greater Manchester 7w, 393w
Police, Heathrow Airport 589-90w
Police, Manpower 4w
Police custody, Prisoners on remand 273w
Police powers, Tape recorded evidence 7w
Police surgeons, Part-time employment 771w
Prison accommodation, AIDS 3w
Prison accommodation, Banstead 5w
Prison hospitals, Hospital patients 773w
Prison hospitals, Prison visitors 274-6w
Prison population, AIDS 3w
Prison rules 518w
Prison staff, Ethnic minorities 201w, 390w
Prison staff, Greater London 274w
Prison staff, Race relations 507-8w, 580w
Prison visitors, Race relations 390w, 579w
Prisoners, Body belts 580-1w
Prisoners, Childbirth 517w
Prisoners, Ethnic monitoring 580w
Prisoners, Mothers 517w
Prisoners, Race relations 579w
Prisoners, Segregation of prisoners 200-1w, 770-1w
Prisoners, Women 516-7w, 675w
Prisoners on remand, Members' correspondence 137w
Prisons, Construction 136w, 271-2w
Prisons, Construction costs 348-9w
Prisons, Environmental health 773w
Prisons, Environmental health officers 774w
Prisons, Ethnic monitoring 579w
Prisons, Food hygiene 771-3w
Prisons, Food poisoning 773w
Prisons, Greater London 274w
Prisons, Modernisation 272w
Prisons, Mother & baby units 517w
Prisons, Race relations 579-80w
Segregation of prisoners, Wandsworth Prison 350w
Shotgun certificates 6w
Shotgun certificates, Minors 275w
Stray dogs, Nottingham 200w
Summertime 273w
Television engineering, Commercial television 391w
Wormwood Scrubs, Prison hospitals 774w
Youth custody, Departmental correspondence 200w

Hogg, Mr Norman
Questions
Cumbernauld Development Corporation, Public appointments 408-9w
New towns development corporations, Public sector housing sales 409w

Holiday accommodation
142

Holiday play schemes
43w

Holland, Mr Stuart
Questions
Exports 1167-8

Holt, Mr Richard
Debates etc.
By election writs, Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 634, 638, 640, 664
Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Bill, Allocation of time motion (23:01:89) 703, 714
Prime Minister's questions, Supplementary questions (19:01:89) 496
Private notice question intervention (18:01:89) 341
Private notice question point of order (18:01:89) 341
Questions
Business statements 489-90, 1186
Cleveland County Council 478
Director of Public Prosecutions 367w
Middlesbrough Borough Council, Privatisation 1019-20
Retirement age, Costs 706w
Trailers, Road accidents 94w
Unemployment, Northern region 165w

Holy Loch
Radioactivity 407w

Home Affairs Select Committee
(18:01:89) 457

Home Office
Cash limits 776-7w
Ministerial policy advisers 5-6w
Pay incentives 509w, 670w

Home purchase assistance scheme
First time buyers 501w
House prices 501w

Home Robertson, Mr John
Debates etc.
A1, Northumberland (23:01:89) 844-5, 848
Beef, EC action (18:01:89) 440-4
Food, Consumer protection (24:01:89) 889
Housing support grants, Scotland (23:01:89) 800, 808-9
Questions
Energy Technology Support Unit, Inquiries 343w
Former Members, Public appointments 72-3w
Nature Conservancy Council, Environment protection 207-8w
Salmonella, Eggs 224-5w
Scottish Enterprise, Rural areas 725w
Set-aside schemes, Agricultural workers 285w
Tax allowances, Atlantic Salmon Conservation Trust 378w
Wave power, Electricity generation 341-2w
Wave power, Energy costs 342-3w
Wave power, Energy research 341w, 343-4w

Homelessness
Audit Commission for Local Authorities in England & Wales 636-7w
Families 636w
Housing Act 1985 148w, 643w
Mortgage defaulters 149w, 641w

Homeworking
140

Homosexuality
Young offenders 199-200w

Hood, Mr Jimmy
Debates etc.
Housing support grants, Scotland (23:01:89) 822

Hooliganism
Football 771w
Sportsgrounds 462w

Hordern, Sir Peter
Debates etc.
EC Agriculture Council (25:01:89) 1035
Questions
House of Commons questions, Public Accounts Commission 256w

Hormone treatments
Wales 433w

Horne Committee
see Public Utilities Street Works Act 1950 Review

Horse racing
(24:01:89) 876-9
Betting 507w

Horserace Betting Levy Board
507w

Horses
Army 280w, 454w, 758w

Horticulture
Research finance 307w

Hospices
534w
Finance 1173-4

Hospital admissions
Mater Hospital 494w
Royal Victoria Hospital, Belfast 494w

Hospital ancillary staff
Pension rights 153-4

Hospital beds
Private hospitals 14w
Royal Victoria Hospital, Belfast 493-4w
Scotland 721-2w
Wales 14w

Hospital catering
Cook-chill catering 43w, 115-6w, 301-2w, 411w
Wakefield Health Authority 301w, 543w

Hospital closures
Brook Hospital 226w
Eastern Health & Social Services Board 493w
Mater Hospital 493w
Royal Victoria Hospital, Belfast 493w

Hospital consultants
Dismissal 593w
Manpower 37w, 541w
NHS 14w
Private health services 14w
Scotland 593w
Wales 14w

Hospital doctors
Manpower 530w

Hospital patients
528-9w, 540w
Per capita costs 796-7w
Prison hospitals 773w
Social security benefits 525w

Hospital staff
Manpower 543w

Hospital waiting lists
864
Calderdale 300w
Coventry & Warwickshire Hospital 530-1w
Hip replacements 35-6w
Mersey Regional Health Authority 528w
Mid Glamorgan Health Authority 430w
NHS finance 866
Pontefract Health Authority 38w
South East Thames Regional Health Authority 605w
Trent Regional Health Authority 865
Wales 430w, 484w
Yorkshire & Humberside 38w

Hospitals
Belfast 497w
Cardiff 678

Hospitals—continued
Construction 114w
Contracts for services 14-5w
Eastern Health & Social Services Board 492w
Medical equipment 479w
NHS administration 114w
Resource management initiative 542w
Wales 14-5w
Yorkshire Regional Health Authority 545w

Hostels
649w
Board & lodging charges 418w

Hotels
Property development 184w
Standards enforcement 251w

House of Commons chamber
Speaker's rulings & statements (18:01:89) 439

House of Commons divisions
Speaker's rulings & statements (24:01:89) 929

House of Commons Fees Office
Parliamentary furnishings 729w

House of Commons Library
127-8w

House of Commons procedure
(16:01:89) 44, (25:01:89) 1110, 1132
Speaker's rulings & statements (19:01:89) 496, (23:01:89) 681, (26:01:89) 1175, 1204, 1205

House of Commons questions
Attorney-General 154w
Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster 563-4w
Church Commissioners 486w
Costs 656w
Dept of Employment 284w
Dept of Energy 696w
Dept of Health 356w
Dept of Social Security 521w
Leader of the House of Commons 257w
Minister for the Civil Service 487w
Ministry of Agriculture 699w
Ministry of Defence 555w, 656w
Northern Ireland Office 395w
Office of Arts & Libraries 488w
Prime Minister 329w
Public Accounts Commission 256w
Scottish Office 289w
Wallenberg, Raoul 362-3w
Welsh Office 664w

House of Commons Select Committees
Speaker's rulings & statements (25:01:89) 1041

House of Commons services
Day care of children 394w

House of Fraser
Company investigations 239-40w, 444w, 682-3
Takeovers 322

House prices
Home purchase assistance scheme 501w
Inflation 1171-2

House renovation grants
203-4w
Local government expenditure 13w
Wales 13w

Households
227-8w
Personal income 414w, 707-8w
Post codes 412w

Housing
Blaenau Gwent 432w
Discrimination 396w
"East Thames-side Housing Study Report" 1019
Greater London 650-1w, 1019

Housing—continued
Northern Ireland 396w
Planning permission 1019
Wales 677

Housing Act 1985
Questions
Homelessness 148w, 643w

Housing action trusts
149w
Consultants 636w

Housing & Local Government Bill 1988/89
Questions
Multiple occupation 630w

Housing associations
Domestic rents 639-40w
Housing construction 506w
Housing finance 640w
Northern Ireland 335w
Oxfordshire 644w

Housing benefits
Corby 613-4w
Council tenants 613-4w
Mendis, Viraj 651-2w
Pensioners 241w
Rents 360w
Social security claims 614-5w
Social security recipients 616w
Social security reform 616w
Wales 677
Young people 707w

Housing compensation
148w

Housing completions
205w
Bolton 631w
Council housing 152w
Derbyshire 460-1w
Wakefield 21w

Housing construction
Council housing 506w
Housing associations 506w
Inner London boroughs 23w, 463w
Planning appeals 204-6w
Planning authorities 148w
Public sector housing 1009

Housing Corporation
644w

Housing finance
Housing associations 640w

Housing (Homeless Persons) Act 1977
Questions
149-50w
HMSO 80w

Housing improvement
Public sector housing 20w

Housing investment programmes
Greater London 648w

Housing starts
Private sector housing 304w

Housing subsidies
651w
Council house sales 149w

Housing Support Grant (Scotland) Order 1989
Debates etc.
(23:01:89) 799-843

Housing support grants
Edinburgh 406w
Scotland 406w, (23:01:89) 799-843

Housing tenure
Tenants 20w

Howard, Mr Michael, Minister of State for Local Government
Questions
Enforcement notices, Local authority powers 634w

Howard, Mr Michael—continued
Planning appeals, Administrative delays 633w
River pollution 1021-2
Urban planning, Greater London 630-1w
Water authorities, Environment protection 505w
Water authorities, Land ownership & tenure 630w
Water pollution, EC law 145-6w
Water supply, Standards enforcement 632w
Yorkshire Water Authority 1021-2
Yorkshire Water Authority, River pollution 1021

Howarth, Mr George
Questions
EC Agriculture Commissioner 313w
Mortgage interest rates 690w
Rent increases 1023

Howarth, Mr Gerald
Debates etc.
Protection of Privacy Bill, 2R (27:01:89) 1321, 1329-31
Questions
NHS administration 531-2w
Society of British Aerospace Companies 236w

Howell, Rt Hon David
Debates etc.
Rate support grants (19:01:89) 500

Howell, Rt Hon Denis
Questions
Football, Identity cards 1026

Howell, Mr Ralph
Debates etc.
Food, Consumer protection (24:01:89) 883
Questions
Capital investment 789-90w
NHS, Land values 547-8w
Public expenditure 577w
Tax yields 786-8w
Taxation, Tax yields 787-90w

Howells, Mr Geraint
Debates etc.
Beef, EC action (18:01:89) 447-8
Questions
Animal husbandry, Government assistance 312w
Bronglais Hospital Aberystwyth 680
Cardigan bypass, Road construction 664w
Potato Marketing Board, Wales 433w
RNAD Trecwn 197w
Royal Welsh Agricultural Society, Government grants 664w
Sheep, Agricultural subsidies 476
Water authorities, Land ownership & tenure 637w

Hoyle, Mr Doug
Questions
Business statements 490, 1185
Restrictive trade practices, Legal profession 322
Tax burden 691w
Turkey, Human rights 1175

HSE
see Health & Safety Executive

Hughes, Mr John
Debates etc.
Fuel & Energy Provision Bill, 1R (17:01:89) 177-9
Questions
Business statements 489
Geriatrics, NHS finance 610w

Hughes, Mr Robert G
Debates etc.
Rate support grants (19:01:89) 557-60, 568, 569
Questions
Abortion 534w
Autoguide electronic route guidance system, Greater London 387w

Hughes, Mr Robert G—continued
Building industry, Employment opportunities 228w
Building industry safety 167w
Dance 75w
EC Internal Market Council 239w
Family doctors, Pay 113w
Investment 681w
Local authorities 1015
Married personal allowance 357w
Mobility of disabled, Government assistance 94-5w
Playgrounds, Accidents 186w
"Public Expenditure White Paper" 258w
Rates & rating, Nurses 460w
Waste disposal, Law reform 506-7w

Hughes, Mr Roy
Questions
Dartford tunnel, Road tolls 763w
Unemployment, Newport 680-1

Hughes, Mr Sean
Questions
Armed forces catering services, Marines 277w
Armed forces deployment, Western Europe 129w
BAOR, Antiaircraft missiles 130w
BAOR, Antitank missiles 129-30w
BAOR, Armed forces training 130w
BAOR, Army strength 129w
BAOR, Drunkenness 27w
BAOR, Tanks 129w
Capital gains tax, Property transfer 377w
Capital gains tax, Tax yields 376-7w
Conventional weapons, Armed conflict 869
Eggs, Salmonella 309w
Government contracts 379w
Ministry of Defence, Payroll deduction scheme 652-3w
Mortgage relief 783w
Mortgage relief, Civil service manpower 377-8w
Mortgage relief, Expenditure 783-4w
Mortgage relief, Fraud 377w
Pay incentives, Cabinet Office 329w
Pay incentives, Central Computer & Telecommunications Agency 378w
Pay incentives, Crown Prosecution Service 662w
Pay incentives, Customs & Excise 379w
Pay incentives, Dept of Education & Science 326w
Pay incentives, Dept of Energy 344w
Pay incentives, Dept of Health 548-9w
Pay incentives, Dept of Social Security 416w
Pay incentives, Dept of the Environment 729w
Pay incentives, Dept of Trade & Industry 471w
Pay incentives, Dept of Transport 737w
Pay incentives, Foreign & Commonwealth Office 373w
Pay incentives, HMSO 378-9w
Pay incentives, Home Office 509w
Pay incentives, Land Registry Office 663w
Pay incentives, Lord Chancellor 662-3w
Pay incentives, Metropolitan Police 670w
Pay incentives, Ministry of Agriculture 499w
Pay incentives, Ministry of Defence 653w
Pay incentives, Office of Arts & Libraries 354w
Pay incentives, Property Services Agency 729w
Pay incentives, Training Agency 550-1w
Pay incentives, Welsh Office 345w
Social security, Administrative costs 706-7w
Tax collection, Costs 784-5w
Treasury, Merit awards 488w

Hughes, Mr Simon
Debates etc.
Ministers, Press releases (26:01:89) 1203, 1205
Pre-school education (18:01:89) 411-4

Hughes, Mr Simon—continued
School Curriculum Development Committee & Secondary Examinations Council Order 1988 (16:01:89) 121, 124, 126-7
Questions
British Rail, Investment 92w
Business statements 1188-9
Council house rents, Rent arrears 210w
Council house sales 152w
Educational finance 265-6w
Educational finance, Cash limits 266w
Local authorities, Companies 794w
Metropolitan Police, Buildings 350-1w
Natural Environment Research Council, Research finance 17-8w
Nurses, Pay settlements 529-30w
Rate increases 306w
Recycling 566w
Sanctuary, Police powers 338

Human organs
Retail trade 713-4w

Human rights
Burma 194-5w
Czechoslovakia 153
Turkey 256w, 792w, 1175
USSR 152, 328-9w

Human Rights Bill 1988/89
Debates etc.
2R order read (27:01:89) 1364

Hume, Mr John
Questions
Youth training scheme, Northern Ireland 29-30w

Hungary
Visas 364w

Hunt, Mr John
Questions
Air force, Armed forces recruitment 555w
Armed forces recruitment, Land acquisition 555w
RAF Cranwell, Armed forces recruitment 555w
Town & country planning 642w

Hunter, Mr Andrew
Debates etc.
Beef, EC action (18:01:89) 441, 448
Questions
Agricultural research, Research finance 312w
Armed forces casualties, Personal injury compensation 769-70w
Economic growth 687w
Eggs, Salmonella 469
Planning permission, Farm buildings 647w
Population, Basingstoke & North Hampshire Health Authority 801w
Railway accidents, Clapham Junction 98w
Terrorism 775w
Terrorism, Immigration controls 774-5w
Terrorism, International cooperation 775-6w

Hurd, Rt Hon Douglas, Secretary of State for the Home Department*
Debates etc.
Official Secrets Bill, Com (25:01:89) 1123, 1134
Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Bill, Allocation of time motion (23:01:89) 733-6
Security Service Bill, Com (17:01:89) 208, 213-22, 235-6
Security Service Bill, 3R (23:01:89) 743-8
Written questions, Disclosure of information (17:01:89) 173-4
Questions
Association of Chief Police Officers 673-4w
Bombings, Guildford 8-10w
Charity Commission, Public appointments 394w
Drinking & driving, Breathalysers 352-3w
Frontiers, EC action 510w
Home Office, Cash limits 776-7w

Hurd, Rt Hon Douglas—continued
Magistrates' Courts Review 139-40w
Mendis, Viraj, Arrests 335-43
Mendis, Viraj, Deportation 340-1, 343
Mendis, Viraj, Employment 340-1
Metropolitan Police 518w
Ministerial policy advisers, Home Office 5-6w
Official Secrets Bill 1988/89, Disclosure of information 674-5w
Police raids, Leyton 671w
Sanctuary 338-9
Sanctuary, Police powers 338
Terrorism 775w
Terrorism, Arrests 140-2w
Terrorism, Immigration controls 775w
Terrorism, International cooperation 775-6w
Trevi Group 509w
Trevi Group, Terrorism 509w

Hypothermia
Death 543-4w

IBA
see Independent Broadcasting Authority

Identity cards
Berwick Rangers Football Club 348w
Football 23w, 25[illegible] 137w, 149-51, 456w, 633-4w, 675w, 771w, 1024-6, 1176-7
Northern Ireland Office 394-5w
Police national computer 675w

ILEA
see Inner London Education Authority

Illegal broadcasting
Independent Television Commission 276w

Illegal immigrants
Nigeria 273-4w

Illsley, Mr Eric
Questions
Bottle banks 228w
Employment Training, Inquiries 282w
Greenbelt, Barnsley 643w
Inflation, EC countries 358w
M1, Road traffic control 82w
Unemployment, Barnsley 165w

IMF
see International Monetary Fund

Immigrant detainees
Nigeria 274w

Immigration
Advisory services 7w

Immigration Appeal Tribunal
392w

Immigration appeals
392w

Immigration Appellate Authorities
392w

Immigration applications
Genetics 389w

Immigration controls
Mete, Ayten 351w
Terrorism 774-5w

Immigration rules
British citizenship 352w
Members' correspondence 6w

Import duties
USA 325

Imported Food Regulations 1984
Questions
Prosecutions 550w

Imports
Beef 429w
Coal 619w, 694-5w
Eggs 309-10w
Footwear 236-8w, 328
Hazardous wastes 209w, 1010-1

Imports*—*continued
Motor vehicles 442-4w

In-service training
Teacher training 703w

Income
Property transfer 80-2w

Income support
Heating 119w
Maintenance 257w
Nottingham 244w
Scotland 710-2w
Social security benefits rules 417w
Social security recipients 416w, 616w
Social security reform 48w, 417w, 616w
Wallsend 245w
Water charges 244w
Young people 617-8w, 707w

Income tax
Costs 685-6w
Mendis, Viraj 791w
Pensioners 241w
Personal income 77-8w
Profit sharing 79w
Tax allowances 78w, 376w
Tax rates & bands 78w

Independent Broadcasting Authority
138w, 591w
Public appointments 479, 1174-5

Independent Television Commission
591-2w
Illegal broadcasting 276w

India
Educational aid 371w
Overseas aid 369w
Water supply 270-1w

Industrial accidents
Youth training scheme 141, 810w

Industrial democracy
Mergers 185w

Industrial development
Inner city areas 565w
North West region 327-8
Northern Ireland (26:01:89) 1291-8
Northern region 328

Industrial Development Board for Northern Ireland
220w

Industrial disputes
Lost working days 173-4w
Postal services 106w
Voting methods 185w

Industrial health & safety
177-8w, 184w
Lead 185w
Opencast mining 622w
Ports 623-4w
Prosecutions 553-5w, 628-9w
Scotland 554w
Youth training scheme 175w

Industrial injuries
Crime victims 390w

Industrial investment
Manufacturing industries 323-5, 680w, 689w, 1172-3
North West region 229w

Industrial production
Manufacturing industries 229-30w

Industrial relations
181w
Post Office 15w

Industrial training
172w, 178w
Business 182w
Training Agency 184w

Industrial tribunals
221-2w
Employment discrimination 222w

Industrial tribunals*—*continued
Legal costs 750w

Industries
Employment 165w

Industry
332, 1170
Economic regions 563w
Graduates 133w
Interest rates 203w, 432-3w, 683w
Railway transport 332

Industry & Trade Select Committee
see Trade & Industry Select Committee

Infant foods
Aluminium 610-1w, 806-7w
Food composition 807w
Food labelling 807w

Infant Life (Preservation) Act 1929
Questions
533w, 684
Prosecutions 328w, 684

Infant mortality
859-60
Equipment 34w
Medical research 33-4w, 717w
Research 34w
Research finance 145w
Scotland 717w
Wales 145w

Infectious diseases
Dogs 677w
Prostitution 669-70w

Inflation
375w, 677-8w, 1169
EC countries 358w, 678w
House prices 1171-2

Information
NHS Review 865
Sites of special scientific interest 320w

Information services
Training Agency 179-80w

Information technology
Mapper system 278-9w

Ingram, Mr Adam
Debates etc.
Housing support grants, Scotland (23:01:89) 804
Questions
Low flying, Aircraft noise 449w
Low flying, Borders region 448-9w
Low flying, Military aircraft 448-9w, 770w
Low flying, Scotland 449w
National Engineering Laboratory, Privatisation 766w
Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 1981 552w

Inheritance tax
Tax burden 359-60w

Injuries
Fireworks 290w
Lost working days 174w

Inland Revenue
789-90w
Cash limits 693-4w
Shares 694w

Inmos
325-6

Inner area programmes
317-8
Brent 317

Inner cities initiative
178-9w, 651w
Accountability 321
East Midlands 320
Employment 767-8w
Expenditure 472-3w
Local authorities 321

Inner cities initiative*—*continued
Local authority powers 320-1

Inner city areas
Church & state 228w
Employment Training 171w
Industrial development 565w
Private investment 651w
Private sector 230w
Small businesses 145-6
Unemployment 251w

Inner city school compacts
137, 182w

Inner London boroughs
Housing construction 23w, 463w

Inner London Education Authority
226w, 598-9w, 794w, 1012-3

Inquiries
Crewe Health Authority 606w
Employment Training 282w
Energy Technology Support Unit 343w

Insolvency Act 1986
Questions
Wrongful trading 105w

Institute of Civil Defence
776w

Institute of Physical Sciences in Medicine
116w

Institution of Environmental Health Officers
701w, 772w

Insurance
Doctors 116w
Lay visitors 136w

Intelligence services
(17:01:89) 180-309, 367w, (23:01:89) 743-98
Disclosure of information 11w, 368-9w
Members 866-7

Interception warrants
(17:01:89) 180-309

Inter-city rail transport
Passengers 86w

Interest rates
258w, 682-3w, 1167, 1169-71
Consumer credit 1170
Industry 203w, 432-3w, 683w
Small businesses 689w
Wales 432-3w, 675, 681

International conferences
Air pollution control 869
Arms control 654w
Ozone layer 729-30w

International cooperation
Broadcasting 393w
Chemical weapons 659w
Terrorism 775-6w

International Maritime Organisation
Shipping safety 389w

International Monetary Fund
World Bank 679w

International Parliamentary Organisations (Registration) Bill 1988/89
Debates etc.
2R order read (27:01:89) 1363

Intervention stocks
312w
Butter 58-9w

Interviews
Broadcasting programmes 620w
Prime Minister 367w
Restart programme 186-8w

Invalidity benefits
Reduced earnings allowance 243w

Investment
359w, 681w, 1162-3
British Coal Corporation 567-8w

Investment—continued*
British Rail 92w
Channel Five 591w
National Savings Bank 1163
Railway network 738w
Social security benefits rules 417w
West coast railway line 89-90w

IPSM
see Institute of Physical Sciences in Medicine

Iran
256w
Diplomatic relations (18:01:89) 458-64
EC external trade 240-1w
Export controls 240-1w

Iraq
Biological weapons 194w

Irish Sea
306w
Ferries 120w, 190w, 761w
Sea pollution 645w
Waste disposal 210w

Irvine, Mr Michael
Questions
Road accidents, Motorways 93w

Irving, Mr Charles
Questions
Feltham Remand Centre, Costs 273w
Leeds Prison, Construction 273w
Prisons, Construction costs 348-9w

Isle of Dogs enterprise zone
348w, 458w
Rate rebates 459w

Isle of Skye
Bridges 592w

Israel
Foreign policy 151
Ministers' visits abroad 704w
Political prisoners 128w

Jack, Mr Michael
Debates etc.
EC Agriculture Council (25:01:89) 1037
Food, Consumer protection (24:01:89) 902
Telepoint services (26:01:89) 1198
Questions
Air pollution control, International conferences 869
Airbus Industrie 318
Arts, Business 76w
Budget 686w
Central Office of Information, Cash limits 578w
Economic models 203w
Supply Estimates 693w
Training & enterprise councils 182w
Women's Farmers' Union 314w

Jackson, Mr Robert, Under-Secretary of State for Education and Science*
Questions
Agricultural & Food Research Council, Research finance 19-20w
Bradford University, University finance 382w
Edinburgh University, University finance 382w
Glandular fever, Research 476w
Graduates, Industry 133w
Higher education, Fees & charges 381w
Higher education admission, Student numbers 759-60w
Higher education admission, Vocational guidance 598w
Medical education, Drug abuse 598w
Medical research, AIDS 598w
Mendis, Viraj, Tuition fees 476w
Natural Environment Research Council, Greenhouse effect 381-2w
Natural Environment Research Council, Redundancy 381w
Natural Environment Research Council, Research finance 17-8w

Jackson, Mr Robert—continued*
Open University, Finance 267w
School leaving, Universities 384-6w
Schools, Libraries 382-3w
Science & technology research, Sea pollution 599-600w
Student grants, Durham 381w
Student numbers, Universities 597w
Universities, Tourism 284w
University finance, Rates & rating 267w
University teachers, Pay 192w
University teachers, Pay settlements 477w

Jackton bridge
Road works 717w

Jaguar aircraft
770w

Janman, Mr Tim
Questions
Dental services 539w
Empty housing, Greater London 647w
Foreign investment in UK, Employment opportunities 231w
Labour costs, Manufacturing industries 375w
Public sector borrowing requirement 682w
Wages councils 178w

Janner, Mr Greville
Questions
Accidents, Health & Safety Executive 96-7w
Business statements 1187
Chlorofluorocarbons, Air pollution control 1016-7
Director of Public Prosecutions 368w
Hospital waiting lists, Trent Regional Health Authority 865
Japan, Funerals 1176
Middle East, Peace negotiations 156-7

Japan
Antidumping 566w
Chemical weapons 656w
Foreign companies in UK 290-1w, 330-1w
Funerals 12w, 661w, 1176
Overseas trade 230w
Prisoners of war 363w, 660-1w

Jessel, Mr Toby
Questions
Arts finance, Government assistance 76w
Museums & galleries, Purchase grants 15

Job start scheme
Pay 282w

Jobclubs
173w, 812w

Johnston, Sir Russell
Questions
Burundi 687-8
Middle East, Peace negotiations 151, 156

Jones, Mr Barry
Questions
Breast cancer, Screening 269w
British Waterways Board, Public appointments 732w
Cervical cancer, Screening 433w
Community care, Wales 268w
Consumer organisations, Ministers' domestic visits 562w
Environment, Research finance 482w
Environmental health, Local government services 482-3w
Exhaust emissions, Wales 483-4w
Farmers, Ministers' domestic visits 561-2w
Football, Wales 462w
Hormone treatments, Wales 433w
Hospital waiting lists, Wales 484w
Hospitals, Medical equipment 479w
Interest rates, Industry 432-3w
Interest rates, Wales 681
Junior hospital doctors, Working hours 483w
Local government finance, Wales 15w
NHS Review, Wales 15w
Noise, Complaints 484w

Jones, Mr Barry—continued*
Railway network, Investment 738w
Severe weather payments, Wales 525-6w
Severn bridge, Road accidents 762w
Severn bridge, Road tolls 467w
Special education, Wales 479-80w
Water pollution, Wales 484w
Water supply industry, Privatisation 673-4
Wrexham Water Works Company, Wealth 267w

Jones, Mr Gwilym
Questions
Books, Anniversaries 430w
Eggs, Wales 676
Football, Wales 145w
River Severn, Toll bridges 671
Shareholders 690w
Welsh Office, Cash limits 562-3w

Jones, Mr Ieuan Wyn
Debates etc.
Beef, EC action (18:01:89) 452-3
Questions
Eggs, Salmonella 676
Nurses, Career structure 861-2
Vocational training, Young people 137-8

Jones, Mr Martyn
Debates etc.
Food, Consumer protection (24:01:89) 915-6
Questions
Building industry safety 166-7w
Eggs, Compensation 431w
Fish farming, Maerdy 154w
Inflation 677w
Salmonella, Food poisoning 111-2w
Social security appeals 708w

Jones, Mr Robert B
Questions
Self-employed 164w
Takeovers, Foreign companies in UK 442w

Judges
Women 763w

Junior hospital doctors
Wales 483w
Working hours 37w, 483w, 527-8w, 678, 854-6

Juries
Peremptory challenge 673w

Kaufman, Rt Hon Gerald
Debates etc.
Poverty, Greater Manchester (19:01:89) 585
Questions
Tunisia, Ministers' visits abroad 155

Keep Sunday Special campaign
273w

Kellett-Bowman, Dame Elaine
Debates etc.
Avon Light Rail Transit Bill (HL), Members' voting behaviour (24:01:89) 874
Beef, EC action (18:01:89) 436
By election writs, Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 656
Child benefit (18:01:89) 375
EC Agriculture Council (25:01:89) 1032
Food, Consumer protection (24:01:89) 880, 906, 914
Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Bill, Allocation of time motion (23:01:89) 704
Protection of Privacy Bill, 2R (27:01:89) 1324, 1337, 1347
Questions
Driving offences, Speed limits 271w
Motorways, North West region 11
Nurses, Career structure 862-3

Kennedy, Mr Charles
Debates etc.
Child benefit (18:01:89) 361, 367-9
Food, Consumer protection (24:01:89) 899-903
Monopolies & Mergers Commission (Performance of Functions) Order 1988 (25:01:89) 1148-9

Kennedy, Mr Charles—continued
Telepoint services (26:01:89) 1194
Questions
Bridges, Isle of Skye 592w
Foreign investment in UK, USA 324
Interest rates 683w
Newsagents, Distributive trade 232w

Kensington & Chelsea
Rates & rating 1012-3

Kent
704w

Key, Mr Robert
Questions
Dept of Social Security, Operating costs 805-6w
Enforcement notices, Local authority powers 634w
Government Legal Services Review 262-3w
Industrial investment, Manufacturing industries 1172
Mendis, Viraj, Arrests 343
Network SouthEast, Railway travel 86w
Special education, Curriculum 18-9w
Tourist industry, Cathedrals 139
Waste disposal 1011

Kidneys
Transplant surgery 864

Kilfedder, Mr James
Debates etc.
Elected Authorities (Northern Ireland) Bill, Rep & 3R (26:01:89) 1226-8
Questions
Tourism, Northern Ireland 139

King, Mr Roger
Questions
Budget 686w
Bus lanes, Codes of practice 99w
Business growth training, Government assistance to industry 552w
Employment level 163w
Excise duties, Lead free petrol 1164
Import duties, USA 325
NHS administration 532w

King, Rt Hon Tom, Secretary of State for Northern Ireland
Debates etc.
Elected Authorities (Northern Ireland) Bill, Rep & 3R (26:01:89) 1274-5
Questions
House of Commons questions, Northern Ireland Office 395w
Housing, Discrimination 396w

King's College Hospital
Finance 527w

King's Cross
103-4w
Channel tunnel 7
Fire services 738w

King's Cross Fire Inquiry
Expenditure 103-4w

Kingston upon Hull
Container terminals 481-2

Kinnock, Rt Hon Neil
Questions
Food hygiene 478-9
Football, Identity cards 150
Hospices, Finance 1173-4
Tax burden 868

Kirkhope, Mr Timothy
Questions
EC internal trade, Publicity 333-4
Economic growth, Consumer expenditure 687w
Hospitals, Yorkshire Regional Health Authority 545w
Lost working days, Industrial disputes 174w
River pollution 638w

Kirkwood, Mr Archy
Debates etc.
Access to Personal Files (Social Work) (Scotland) Regulations 1989 (24:01:89) 985, 989-93

Kirkwood, Mr Archy—continued
EC Agriculture Council (25:01:89) 1036
Scarce Resources (Conservation) Bill, 1R (25:01:89) 1042
Questions
Agency Benefits Unit, Administrative delays 804w
Air traffic control, Manpower 467w
Air traffic control, South East region 88w
Child care, Travel grants 258w
Crime, South Bank 510w
Defence research, Defence expenditure 652w
Eggs, Salmonella 718w
Energy conservation, Environment 696w
Excise duties, Lead free petrol 1163
Green pound 307w
Heathrow Airport, Capital investment 467w
Local government staff 502w
Local government staff, Scotland 398w
Mortgage relief 782-3w
Mortgage relief, Personal income 783w
NHS administration 531-2w
Post offices 17w
Poultry, Animal breeding 719w
Rent arrears, Scotland 219w
Spaceflight 261w
"State of the World's Children, 1989" 370w
Tax allowances, Tax yields 359w
Waste disposal, North Sea 633w

Knapman, Mr Roger
Questions
ACP countries, Lome Convention 371-2w
Civil service recruitment, Women 17-8
Economic growth, Consumer expenditure 687w
Export promotion, Trade competitiveness 108-10w
Percentage for Arts schemes 73w
Textiles, China 17w
Unemployment, West Midlands 165w

Knight, Mr Greg
Debates etc.
BREL (1988), Privatisation (17:01:89) 165
Protection of Privacy Bill, 2R (27:01:89) 1300, 1302, 1323-4, 1334, 1338-9, 1345, 1359-62
Questions
Broadcasting, International cooperation 393w
Estate Action, Government grants to local authorities 305w
European Security Conference, Eastern Europe 793w
Farm Animal Welfare Council 156w
National Film & Television School 76w
National training task force 139-40
Shareholders 259w

Knight, Dame Jill
Questions
Junior hospital doctors, Working hours 855

Knowles, Mr Michael
Questions
GATT 316w

Knox, Mr David
Questions
Council house sales 648w
National Farmers' Union, Dairy farming 311w

Labour costs
Manufacturing industries 375w, 682w

Labour Party
1169
Consumer credit 1173

Laganside Development (Northern Ireland) Order 1989
Debates etc.
(16:01:89) 31

Lamond, Mr James
Questions
Business statements 485

Lamont, Rt Hon Norman, Financial Secretary to the Treasury
Questions
Budget 358w, 380w, 690w
Capital allowances, Canary Wharf 348w
Capital gains tax, Building land 78-9w
Capital gains tax, Group of Seven 790-1w
Capital gains tax, Property transfer 377w
Capital gains tax, Tax burden 359-60w
Capital gains tax, Tax yields 376-7w, 692w
Composite tax rate system, Pensioners 785-6w
Composite tax rate system, Tax yields 692w
Composite tax rate system, Taxpayers 691-2w
Corporation tax, Tax yields 791-2w
Economic situation, North West region 686w
Income tax, Costs 685-6w
Income tax, Profit sharing 79w
Income tax, Tax allowances 78w, 376w
Income tax, Tax rates & bands 78w
Inland Revenue, Cash limits 693-4w
Inland Revenue, Shares 694w
London Docklands, Employment opportunities 348w
Married personal allowance 357w
Mendis, Viraj, Income tax 791w
Mortgage relief 782-3w
Mortgage relief, Civil service manpower 377-8w
Mortgage relief, Expenditure 783-4w
Mortgage relief, Fraud 377w
Mortgage relief, Personal income 783w
National Savings, Composite tax rate system 692w
PAYE, Computers 789-90w
Personal income, Income tax 77-8w
Personal income, Tax burden 374w, 376w
Personal income, Tax thresholds 80w, 376w
Personal savings, Tax thresholds 380w
Shareholders 259w, 376w, 690w
Stamp duties, Tax yields 690w
Tax allowances, Atlantic Salmon Conservation Trust 378w
Tax allowances, Canary Wharf 359w
Tax allowances, Private education 80w, 380w
Tax allowances, Tax yields 359w
Tax burden 691w, 784w
Tax burden, Average earnings 357w
Tax collection, Costs 784-5w
Taxation, Carbon dioxide 693w
Taxation, Small businesses 688w
VAT, Average earnings 680w

Lancashire
Unemployment 163w

Lanchester
Unemployment 750w

Land
Housing construction 148w

Land acquisition
Armed forces recruitment 555w
Bradford 634-5w
Forestry Commission 405-7w
NHS 548w
RAF Biggin Hill 555w
Water authorities 24w

Land ownership & tenure
Television engineering 592w
Water authorities 24-5w, 630w, 637w

Land Registry Office
Administrative delays 260w, 487w
Manpower 487w
Pay incentives 663w

Land values
East London river crossing 387w
NHS 547-8w
Water authorities 728w

Landing cards
352w

Landlord & tenant
Community charge 595w
Private rented housing 640w

Landlords
Property Services Agency 650w

Lang, Mr Ian, Minister of State for Scotland*
Questions
Community charge, Defence land 398w
Community charge, Landlord & tenant 595w
Community charge, Prisoners 595w
Community charge, Scotland 397-8w, 594-5w
Community charge, Water charges 287-8w
Community charge exemptions, Mentally handicapped 594w
Community charge exemptions, Scotland 594w
Community charges register, Age 397-8w
Community charges register, Disclosure of information 397w
Community charges register, Scotland 717w
Cumbernauld Development Corporation, Public appointments 408-9w
Domestic rates, Scotland 593-4w
Electricity supply industry, Scotland 62w
Employment opportunities, Glasgow 490w
Employment Training, Expenditure 491w
Employment Training, Scotland 288-9w, 490-1w, 596w
Health Care International, Private hospitals 217-8w
Local government expenditure, Scotland 287w
New towns development corporations, Public sector housing sales 409w
Nuclear safety, Air accidents 718w
Public expenditure, Scotland 400w, 596w
Rate support grants, Scotland 491w
Regional development grants, Scotland 408w
Regional selective assistance, Scotland 407w
Retail trade, Rural areas 220w
Scottish Enterprise, Rural areas 725w
Youth training scheme, Girvan 159-60w

Langbaurgh District Council
1019-20

Languages education
Northern Ireland 334w

Latent Damage Act 1986
Questions
260w

Latham, Mr Michael
Questions
Cars, Fraud 329-30
Health service staff, Scientists 116w
Interest rates 683w
Leicestershire Health Authority, Maternity services 541w
Middle East, Peace negotiations 156
Ministers' visits abroad, Israel 704w
Ministers' visits abroad, USA 485w

Law Commission
260-1w

Law enforcement
Metropolitan Police 776w

Law Officers' Dept
see Attorney-General

Law reform
Abortion 532w
Food 319w
Litter 630w
Planning permission 636w
Town & country planning 210w
Waste disposal 506-7w

Lawrence, Mr Ivan
Debates etc.
Protection of Privacy Bill, 2R (27:01:89) 1333-5, 1338, 1345
Security Service Bill, 3R (23:01:89) 770, 779, 782-5
Questions
Business statements 1187
Legal profession 683
Legal profession, Departmental publications 569w
Middle East, Peace negotiations 158-9

Lawson, Rt Hon Nigel, Chancellor of the Exchequer*
Questions
Crown Estate Commissioners 258-9w
Debts, Developing countries 488-9w
Disposable income 380w
Economic growth 1161
European monetary system 1162
Exchange rates 1161-2
Group of Seven 678w
Handicapped workers, Treasury 689w
Industry 1170
Inflation 1169
International Monetary Fund, World Bank 679w
Investment 1162
Mortgage interest rates, Retail price index 1169
Public expenditure 1166
Public expenditure, Transport infrastructure 1167
Public sector borrowing requirement 1165-7

Lay visitors
Insurance 136w

LDDC
see London Docklands Development Corporation

Le Vay Committee
see Magistrates' Courts Review

Leach, Christine
332-3w

Lead
Industrial health & safety 185w

Lead free petrol
632w
Excise duties 1163-4
Garages & petrol stations 394w, 632w

Leadbitter, Mr Ted
Debates etc.
EC Agriculture Council (25:01:89) 1035
Questions
Housing, "East Thames-side Housing Study Report" 1019

Leader of the House of Commons
House of Commons questions 257w

Leasehold housing
Appeals 147w

Leasehold Reform Act 1967
Questions
147w

Ledsome, Neville
319

Lee, Mr John, Under-Secretary of State for Employment*
Questions
Association of British Travel Agents, South Africa 751w
Business in the Community, Local enterprise agencies 252w
Employment 745-9w
Employment, Educational qualifications 282w, 423-6w
Employment, Graduates 553w
Employment, Industries 165w
Employment, Manufacturing industries 419-22w, 742-3w

Lee, Mr John—continued*
Employment level, Graduates 425-6w
Employment opportunities, Handicapped workers 177w
Enterprise allowance scheme 177w
Hard core unemployed 163w
Hard core unemployed, Greater London 181w
Holiday accommodation 142
Hotels, Property development 184w
Hotels, Standards enforcement 251w
Job start scheme, Pay 282w
Jobclubs 173w
Manufacturing industries, North West region 163w
Mendis, Viraj, Unemployment benefits 552w
National Online Manpower Information System 183w
Overseas students, Part-time employment 623w
Pay 418w
Productivity 179w
Restart programme, Hard core unemployed 624w
Restart programme, Interviews 186-8w
Restart programme, North West region 624-6w
Retail price index 183w, 622w
Self-employed 164w
Small businesses, Management 551w
Small businesses, Redundancy 142
Social security claims, Members' correspondence 622-3w
Tourism, Government grants 170w, 284w
Tourism, Local government functions 366w
Tourism, North West region 170w
Tourism, Northern Ireland 139
Tourism Review Committee 284w
Tourism Review Committee, Publishing 284w
Tourist industry 170w
Tourist industry, Cathedrals 139
Tourist industry, Coastal areas 170w
Tourist industry, Employment 170w
Tourist industry, Gaming clubs 146
Tourist industry, National income 138-9
Tourist industry, Small businesses 146
Tourist information 142-3
Tourists 141-2
Unemployment 165-6w
Unemployment, Barnsley 165w
Unemployment, Devon 166w
Unemployment, East Anglia 164w
Unemployment, East Midlands 164w
Unemployment, Greater London 164w
Unemployment, Hexham 421-2w
Unemployment, Inner city areas 251w
Unemployment, Lancashire 163w
Unemployment, Lanchester 750w
Unemployment, Northern region 165w
Unemployment, Pontefract 50w
Unemployment, South West region 164w
Unemployment, Statistics 251w
Unemployment, Vacancies 51w
Unemployment, West Midlands 165w
Unemployment, Willington 750w
Unemployment, Yorkshire & Humberside 164w
Unemployment benefit offices 284-5w
Unemployment benefit offices, Office closures 749-50w
Unemployment benefits, Nottingham 364w
Unemployment benefits, Social security benefits disqualification 51-2w
Unemployment benefits, Young people 752w
Vacancies, Greater London 251-2w
Visas 142
Wages councils 811w
Women's employment 743-6w
Youth training scheme, Industrial accidents 810w
Youth unemployment, Pontefract 50w

Lee, Mr John—continued
Leeds
Council house sales 208w

Leeds Prison
Construction 273w

Leg protectors
Motorcycles 5-6

Legal costs
Industrial tribunals 750w
Mendis, Viraj 391w, 487w

Legal profession
683, 1175
Departmental publications 569w
Restrictive trade practices 322

Leicester City Council
152-3w

Leicestershire County Council
152-3w

Leicestershire Health Authority
Maternity services 541w

Leigh, Mr Edward
Debates etc.
By election writs, Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 626, 639, 655, 657
Questions
Bomber Command, Military decorations 1177-8
Economic forecasting 689-90w
National training task force 182-3w
Railway closures 571-2w, 735w

Leighton, Mr Ron
Debates etc.
City of London (Spitalfields Market) Bill, 3R (24:01:89) 939-42
Protection of Privacy Bill, 2R (27:01:89) 1340
Questions
Dept of Employment, Advertising 809-10w
Dept of Employment, Public relations 809w
Docklands Liaison Group 741-2w
EC social policy 364w
Employment Training 149, 172-3w
Employment Training, Community programme 281-2w
Health services, London Docklands 547w
King's Cross Fire Inquiry, Expenditure 103-4w
London Docklands, Relocation of employees 457w, 459w
London Docklands Development Corporation, Training 729w
London Underground, Fires 104w
London Underground, Radio 102w
London Underground, Safety measures 102w
Minimum wage, EC countries 364-5w
Personal pensions 389-1w
Renault, Subsidies 766w
Restart programme, Hard core unemployed 624w
Skills Training Agency, Privatisation 185-6w
Social security appeals, Availability for work 415w
Technical & vocational education initiative, School leaving 254w
Training & enterprise councils, Newham 742w

Leighton Hospital
(17:01:89) 310-6

Lennox Castle Hospital
Finance 407w

Leptospirosis
295-6w

Lester, Mr Jim
Questions
Disposable income 518-20w
Pensioners, Disposable income 612-4w

Lestor, Miss Joan
Debates etc.
Pre-school education (18:01:89) 416-9
Questions
Burma, Armed forces training 195w
Burma, Human rights 194-5w
Burma, Refugees 195w
Homelessness, Mortgage defaulters 641w
International Monetary Fund, World Bank 679w
Missing persons, Young people 350w
Nigeria, Overseas aid 373w
Overseas aid 686
World Bank 370w

Lewis, Mr Terry
Questions
Vocational education, Educational qualifications 181w

Leyton
Police raids 671w

Liability
Water treatment 22-3w

Libraries
Schools 382-3w

Libyan Arab Republic
Barbouti, Ishan 352w
Chemical weapons 704w
Exports 444w
Overseas trade 323

Licensing
Bovine somatotropin 157w
Cellular phones 231w
Financial services 331w
Gaming clubs 146
Waste disposal 151w

Lie detectors
Civil service 20

Life insurance
236w

Lifshitz, Boris
USSR 362w

Lifshitz, Galina
362w

Lighting
Crime prevention 590w
Motor vehicles 99-100w

Lilley, Mr Peter, Economic Secretary to the Treasury*
Questions
Antidumping duties, Electronic equipment 259-60w
Balance of payments 1168
Bank of England 684w
Barbouti, Ishan, Export controls 359w
Central Office of Information, Cash limits 578w
Cider, Excise duties 686w
Consumer credit, Codes of practice 693w
Consumer credit, Credit controls 693w
Corporation tax, Scotland 379-80w
Customs 692-3w
Customs & Excise, Cash limits 578w
Drug seizures 128w
European monetary system 358w, 688w
Exchange rates 358w, 679w
Excise duties, Lead free petrol 1163-4
Foreign investment in UK 1168
Group of Seven 678w

Lilley, Mr Peter—continued
Housing (Homeless Persons) Act 1977, HMSO 80w
Inflation 375w, 677-8w
Inflation, EC countries 358w, 678w
Interest rates 258w, 682-3w, 1169-71
Interest rates, Small businesses 689w
Investment 359w
Mortgage interest rates 259w, 690w, 1171
Mortgage interest rates, First time buyers 358w
National debt 685w
National Savings 128w, 202-3w
National Savings Bonds 578w
Pay incentives, Customs & Excise 379w
Pay incentives, HMSO 378-9w
Personal savings 358w, 375w, 690-1w
Petroleum revenue tax 490w
Sterling, Exchange rates 685w
Tax yields, Fossil fuels 358w
Taxpayers, Scotland 379w
Tobacco, Expenditure 81-2w
Tobacco, Tobacco duties 81w
VAT, Books 680w
VAT, Building industry 604w
VAT, Construction 578w
VAT, European Court of Justice 79w, 679w
VAT, NHS 79w
VAT, Postage stamps 81w
VAT, Scotland 379w
VAT exempted goods, Taxation 680w
West Germany, Ministers 258w

Limavady District Council
499w

Lincolnshire
Driving offences 271w

List 99
Teachers 476-8w

Listeria monocytogenes
299w, 301w, 411w
Agricultural research 319-20w
Cook-chill catering 42-3w, 411w
Food contamination 115w, 157-8w
Food poisoning 607w, 716w
Medical research 355w
Poultry meat 319-20w
Standing Order No 20 applications (16:01:89) 30-1

Litherland, Mr Robert
Debates etc.
Mendis, Viraj, Standing Order No 20 applications (18:01:89) 343-4
Questions
Channel tunnel, Railway freight transport 85w
Mendis, Viraj, Arrests 337

Litter
Law reform 630w
Local government expenditure 504w

Liver diseases
Transplant surgery 36w

Liverpool
Bridges 386w
Channel tunnel 83-4w, 386w

Liverpool bay
Radioactive waste disposal 461w

Livestock
Defence land 757-8w
EC action 317-8w
Foxes 214w
Salmonella 427w

Livingstone, Mr Ken
Debates etc.
By election writs, Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 631-2
Rate support grants (19:01:89) 558, 564-5
Questions
Cruelty to children, Gleneyre & Burnside Children's Home 395w
Inner area programmes, Brent 317

Livingstone, Mr Ken—continued*
Police firearms, Theft 395w
Road traffic, Greater London 89w

Livsey, Mr Richard
Debates etc.
EC Agriculture Council (25:01:89) 1030
Questions
A470, Road works 679
Cattle, Prices 311w
National Rivers Authority, Departmental correspondence 25w
Water Bill 1988/89, Consumer organisations 646w
Water supply industry, Privatisation 672

Lloyd, Sir Ian
Questions
Science & Technology Assessment Office 125-6w
South Africa, Cricket 479

Lloyd, Mr Peter, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Dept of Social Security*
Debates etc.
Poverty, Greater Manchester (19:01:89) 585-9
Questions
Agency Benefits Unit, Administrative delays 246-8w, 804w
Child care, Travel grants 258w
Dept of Social Security, Civil service dispersal 257w
Dept of Social Security, Departmental publications 243w
Dept of Social Security, Operating costs 618w
Dept of Social Security local offices, Durham 805w
Dept of Social Security local offices, Greenock 709-10w
Dept of Social Security local offices, North West region 119w
Dept of Social Security local offices, Oldham 522-3w
Disposable income 518-20w
Family credit, Administrative delays 48w, 616w
Family credit, One parent families 244w
Family credit, Social security claims 806w
Family credit, Take-up 617w
Family income supplements, One parent families 360w
Family income supplements, Social security claims 618w
Family income supplements, Social security recipients 804w
"Help with Hostel Charges Proposals for Change Consultation Paper" 805w
Hostels, Board & lodging charges 418w
House of Commons questions, Dept of Social Security 521w
Housing benefits, Corby 613-4w
Housing benefits, Rents 360w
Housing benefits, Social security claims 614-5w
Housing benefits, Social security recipients 616w
Housing benefits, Young people 707w
Income support, Heating 119w
Income support, Maintenance 257w
Income support, Nottingham 244w
Income support, Scotland 710-2w
Income support, Social security benefits rules 417w
Income support, Social security recipients 616w
Income support, Social security reform 417w
Income support, Wallsend 245w
Income support, Water charges 244w
Income support, Young people 617-8w
Mendis, Viraj, Social security benefits 523w
National insurance cards 615w
National insurance contributions, Employees' contributions 241-2w
National insurance surcharge, Tax yields 706w

Lloyd, Mr Peter—continued*
One parent families, Disposable income 526-8w
Pay incentives, Dept of Social Security 416w
Pensioners, Clothing 49w
Pensioners, Disposable income 612-4w
Pensioners, Earnings rules 805w
Pensioners, Housing benefits 241w
Pensioners, Nottingham 47w, 414w
Pensioners, Social security benefits 241w
Personal income, Households 414w, 707-8w
Personal pensions 380-1w
Residential care, Elderly 244-5w
Retirement age 524w
Retirement age, Costs 524w, 706w
Retirement age, Retirement pensions 246w
Retirement pensions 523w
Retirement pensions, Administrative delays 257-8w
Retirement pensions, Age 523-4w
Road accidents, Dept of Social Security 417-8w
Servite houses, Old people's homes 118w
Severe weather payments, Wales 525-6w
Sheltered housing, Mentally ill 707w
Social Fund, Community care 242w, 805w
Social Fund, Expenditure 519-20w
Social Fund, Greater London 711w
Social Fund, Greenock 710w
Social Fund, Microcomputers 706w
Social Fund, Oldham 521-3w
Social Fund, Publicity 117-8w
Social Fund, Scotland 117w
Social Fund, Wallsend 245w
Social security, Administrative costs 706-7w
Social security abuse, Doncaster 242w
Social security appeals 708w
Social security appeals, Availability for work 415w
Social security benefits, Hospital patients 525w
Social security benefits, Mentally handicapped 519w, 613w
Social security benefits, Social security recipients 524-5w
Social security benefits, South Somerset 245w
Social security benefits rules, Investment 417w
Social security claims, Administrative delays 48-9w
Social security claims, Greenock 708-10w
Social security recipients, Standard of living 414w
Social security reform, Lothian 415-6w
Social security reform, Young people 245-6w
Social security reform, Youth training scheme 521w
Unemployment benefit 246w
Unemployment benefits, Social security benefits disqualification 257w
Widows' benefits 617-8w
Widows' benefits, Expenditure 248w

Lloyd, Mr Tony
Debates etc.
BREL (1988), Privatisation (17:01:89) 172
Poverty, Greater Manchester (19:01:89) 584, 585
Private notice question point of order (18:01:89) 346-7
Questions
Air routes, Singapore 103w
Air routes, USA 294w
Airport security, Heathrow Airport 28
Breathalysers, Greater London 137-8w
Breathalysers, Rugby 138w
Career development loan scheme 625-6w
Century Newspapers, Takeovers 106w
Community charges register 152w
Dept of Employment, Departmental publications 366w
Dept of Social Security local offices, North West region 119w
District health authorities, North West region 40w

Lloyd, Mr Tony—continued*
Economic situation, North West region 686w
Eggs, Production 308w
Entry clearances, Administrative delays 675w
European Security Conference 255w
Furniture, Fire prevention 240w
Grant maintained schools, Trafford 19w
Income support, Young people 617-8w
Manchester Trades Union Council Pensioners' Association, Departmental correspondence 194w
Nurses, Career structure 40w
Police, Greater Manchester 7w
Railway network, Manchester Airport 102w
Residential care, North West region 42w
Restart programme, Employment 144
Restart programme, North West region 624-6w
Road construction, Burley-in-Wharfedale 123w
Road safety education, Courier services 13-4
Secondary education, Trafford 19w
Suzuki, Motor vehicle safety 191-2w
Training, North West region 814w
Transport infrastructure, EC grants & loans 294-5w
Tyre tread depths, Research 294w
Tyre tread depths, Road accidents 294w
Unemployment benefits, Young people 752w
"Wages Councils 1988 Consultation Document"" 366w
"Wages Councils 1988 Consultation Document", HMSO 366w
Youth training scheme 627w
Youth training scheme, Employment discrimination 627-8w
Youth training scheme, North West region 626-7w, 813-4w
Youth training scheme, Take-home pay 751-2w
Youth training scheme, Training allowances 627w

Loan guarantee scheme
183w, 254w

Local authorities
1015
Companies 794w
District health authorities 40w, 113w, 1014-5
Higher education 665w
Inner cities initiative 321
Public bodies 1014-5
Road construction 189w

"Local Authorities Interests in Companies Consultation Paper"
794w

Local authority associations
677

Local authority powers
Enforcement notices 634w
Inner cities initiative 320-1
Regional planning & development 23w
Urban programme 304w
Waste disposal 151w

Local education authorities
Capital investment 63-4w
School governors 382w
Scotland 63-4w
Teachers 192w

Local employer network scheme
173w

Local enterprise agencies
183-4w
Business in the Community 252w

Local Enterprise Development Unit
(26:01:89) 1291-8

Local government
Greater London (25:01:89) 1044-6

Local Government Act 1972
Questions
Local government expenditure 636w

Local Government Bill 1988/89
Debates etc.
1R (25:01:89) 1044-6

Local government elections
Northern Ireland (26:01:89) 1206-90

Local government expenditure
Council housing 206-8w
House renovation grants 13w
Litter 504w
Local Government Act 1972 636w
Scotland 287w
Street cleaning 630w

Local government finance
Local government revenue 25w
Parish councils 641w
Wales 15w

Local government functions
Tourism 366w

Local government manual workers
Street cleaning 505w

Local Government Practices & Procedures Inquiry
503w

Local government reform
Greater London Council 795w

Local government revenue
Council house sales 504
Greater London 632w
Local government finance 25w

Local government services
Competition 1019-20
Environmental health 482-3w
Mentally handicapped 547w
Privatisation 547w

Local government social services
Health services 114w
Nursing homes 13w

Local government staff
502w
Community charge 459w, 500w
Day care of children 649w
Manpower 646w
Pay settlements 457w
Scotland 398w

Local plans
204w
Rural areas 639w

Local radio
Radio broadcasting licences 6w

Location of industry
Montupet 144w
Strangford 144w

Lockerbie
141-2
Air accidents 27-8w, 159, 161-2w, 718w, 739w
Armed forces 27-8w, 447w
Armed forces pay 28w

Lofthouse, Mr Geoffrey
Debates etc.
Rate support grants (19:01:89) 554-7
Questions
Aplastic anaemia 38-9w
Aplastic anaemia, Medical research 716-7w
Business statements 1181
Hospital waiting lists, Yorkshire & Humberside 38w
Housing completions, Wakefield 21w

Lofthouse, Mr Geoffrey—continued
Motorways, Road freight transport 11
Pontefract Health Authority, Hospital waiting lists 38w
Pontefract Health Authority, NHS finance 38w
Unemployment, Pontefract 50w
Water authorities, Land ownership & tenure 637w
Youth unemployment, Pontefract 50w

Lome Convention
ACP countries 371-2w

London Ambulance Service
606-7w

London boroughs
Amusement arcades 459w
Transport supplementary grants 738-40w

London Docklands
Business 457w
Employment 650w
Employment opportunities 348w, 457-8w
Government grants 647w
Health services 547w
Redundancy 458w
Relocation of employees 457w, 459w
Transport 388w

London Docklands Development Corporation
457w, 459w, 647w, 650w
Training 729w

London Fire Brigade
104w, 738w

London Planning Advisory Committee
795w

London Regional Transport
85w, 737w, 740-1w
Rates & rating 739-40w
Safety 96w

London Regional Transport (Penalty Fares) Bill (HL) 1986/87
Debates etc.
2R order read (19:01:89) 465, (26:01:89) 1161

London Residuary Body
794-5w

London Underground
88w, 738w, 776w
Fires 104w
Radio 102w
Safety measures 102-4w

Londonderry
396w

Look After Your Heart
544-5w

Loran navigator system
386w

Lord, Mr Michael
Debates etc.
Food, Consumer protection (24:01:89) 904, 917-8
Questions
Eggs, Salmonella 214-5w
Nitrates, Agricultural land 473
Unemployment, Economic regions 678w

Lord Chancellor
262-3w
Cash limits 663-4w
Ministerial policy advisers 11w
Pay incentives 662-3w

Lord Chancellor's Office
see Lord Chancellor

Lorries
Motor vehicle testing 291-2w
Pedestrian areas 97w

Lost working days
Industrial disputes 173-4w
Injuries 174w

Lothian
Social security reform 415-6w

Low flying
656-7w
Air traffic control 558-9w
Aircraft noise 449w, 755w
Borders region 448-9w
Bristol Airport 754w
Military aircraft 130-2w, 448-9w, 558w, 754-6w, 770w
Military exercises 654w
Military police 558w
Morocco 557w
Night flying 449w
RAF West Drayton 656w
Scotland 449w
Skyguard radar 654w
Swansea 656w
Urban areas 557w
Wales 558w

Lowermoor Incident Health Advisory Group
227w, 802w

Lowermoor water treatment works
227w, 802w
Water pollution 210-1w, 306w

Loyden, Mr Eddie
Questions
Channel tunnel, Liverpool 83w

LPAC
see London Planning Advisory Committee

LRT
see London Regional Transport

Luce, Rt Hon Richard, Minister of State Privy Council Office (Minister for the Arts)
Questions
Art works, Conservation 77w
Art works, Objects in lieu of tax 667w
Arts, Business 76w
Arts finance 76w
Arts finance, Devon 75w
Arts finance, Government assistance 76w
British Library, Construction 666w
British Museum 76w
British Museum, Conservation 17
Child care, Office of Arts & Libraries 666-7w
Civil servants, Day care of children 52w
Civil service 19-20
Civil service, Foreign & Commonwealth Office 264-5w
Civil service, Lie detectors 20
Civil service, Public relations 20
Civil service agencies 52w
Civil service agencies, Management 18
Civil service agencies, Pay 19
Civil service dispersal 21
Civil service recruitment, Pay 18
Civil service recruitment, Women 17-8
Civil service unions 52w
Dance 75w
Government Communications Headquarters, Trade union membership 21-2
House of Commons questions, Minister for the Civil Service 487w
House of Commons questions, Office of Arts & Libraries 488w
Minister for the Civil Service, Cash limits 666w
Minister for the Civil Service, Environmental policy 53w
Museum of the Moving Image 75w
Museums & galleries 488w
Museums & galleries, Conservation 75w
Museums & galleries, Expenditure 14-5
Museums & galleries, Government grants 15-7
Museums & galleries, Greater London 75w
Museums & galleries, Manpower 74w
Museums & galleries, Opening hours 16
Museums & galleries, Purchase grants 15
Museums & galleries, Stock control 73-4w
Museums & galleries, Vacancies 74w

Luce, Rt Hon Richard—continued
Museums & galleries, Vocational training 263-4w
Museums & Galleries Commission, Exhibitions 73w
National Film & Television School 76w
Office of Arts & Libraries, Cash limits 667w
Opera, Subsidies 354w
Pay incentives, Office of Arts & Libraries 354w
Percentage for Arts schemes 73w
Public libraries, Fees & charges 154w
Regional arts associations 75w
Victoria & Albert Museum, Conservation 15
Victoria & Albert Museum, Stock control 73w

Lung diseases
Exhaust emissions 355w

Luton Town Football Club
151
Arrests 23-4w, 276w

Lyell, Sir Nicholas, Solicitor-General*
Questions
"Hero from Zero" 683
House of Fraser, Company investigations 682-3
Infant Life (Preservation) Act 1929 684
Infant Life (Preservation) Act 1929, Prosecutions 684

M1
120w
Air accidents 124w
Road traffic 572w
Road traffic control 82w, 572w

M3
468w
Road construction 468w

M3-M27 link
Public inquiries 468w

M4
563w
Road construction 431w

M25
11-2

M40
Road construction 385-6w

M42
Road construction 97-8w

McAllion, Mr John
Debates etc.
Housing support grants, Scotland (23:01:89) 827-34, 837, 840
Questions
Budget 686w
Channel tunnel 84w
Interest rates 258w
NHS administration 531-2w
Offshore structures, Competition 211w

McAvoy, Mr Thomas
Questions
Channel tunnel, Economic regions 84w
Health services, Pregnancy 545-6w
Interest rates 683w

McCartney, Mr Ian
Debates etc.
All party groups, House of Commons whips (24:01:89) 875
Questions
Road traffic, Costs 93w
Tenants' choice, Armed forces housing 643-4w
VAT, Average earnings 680w

McCrea, Rev William
Debates etc.
Elected Authorities (Northern Ireland) Bill, Rep & 3R (26:01:89) 1230-4, 1237, 1249-51, 1254, 1265-6, 1281-2

McCrindle, Mr Robert
Questions
Consumer protection, Departmental responsibilities 570-1w
Consumer protection, Government departments 571w
Football, Identity cards 675w
Hospital consultants, Manpower 37w
Junior hospital doctors, Working hours 37w

McCusker, Mr Harold
Questions
Prisoners' release, Northern Ireland 599-600w

Macdonald, Mr Calum
Questions
NHS Review 856
Unemployment, Rural areas 171w

McFall, Mr John
Debates etc.
Child benefit (18:01:89) 372-3
Housing support grants, Scotland (23:01:89) 836-7
Questions
Balance of payments 684w
Business statements 492
Channel tunnel, Construction 6
Emergency planning, Clyde Submarine Base 556w
Emergency planning, Rosyth dockyard 280w
Nuclear safety, Rosyth dockyard 279w
Nuclear submarines, Nuclear accidents 280w
Nuclear submarines, Radioactive waste disposal 279-80w, 556-7w

McGrady, Mr Eddie
Debates etc.
Beef, EC action (18:01:89) 449-51
Elected Authorities (Northern Ireland) Bill, Rep & 3R (26:01:89) 1228-30, 1231, 1244-5, 1278, 1280
Questions
Colleges of education, Government grants 602w
Colleges of education, Student numbers 600-2w
Natural Environment Research Council, Greenhouse effect 381-2w
Natural Environment Research Council, Redundancy 381w
Nuclear accidents, Disclosure of information 486w
Ozone layer, EC Environment Council 502w
Radioactive waste disposal 459w

MacGregor, Rt Hon John, Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food*
Debates etc.
Beef, EC action (18:01:89) 435-9
Pesticides (Fees & Enforcement) Bill, 1R (18:01:89) 347
Questions
Agricultural products, EC external trade 60w
Agriculture, EC grants & loans 313w
British Food & Farming Year 1989, Ministry of Agriculture 321w
British Poultry Federation 467
Common agricultural policy, EC action 317w
Common farm prices, National Farmers' Union 156w
EC Agriculture Commissioner 313w
Eggs, Compensation 53-4w
Eggs, Salmonella 214-5w, 467-9, 473-5
Food, Law reform 319w
GATT 316w
GATT, Agriculture 314w
Green pound 307w
Green pound, Farm incomes 307w
Ministerial policy advisers, Ministry of Agriculture 57w
Ministers' visits abroad, USA 320-1w
Ministry of Agriculture, Anniversaries 312w

MacGregor, Rt Hon John—continued
Ministry of Agriculture, Ministers' domestic visits 55-6w
National Farmers' Union, Common agricultural policy 308w
National Farmers' Union, Common farm prices 156w
Potato Marketing Board 361w
Potato Marketing Board, Costs 361w
Women's Farmers' Union 314w

Machine tools industry
228-9w

McKay, Mr Allen
Questions
Industry, Economic regions 563w
Motorways, Road works 87-8w
Nurses, Career structure 863
Tourism, Government grants 284w
Tourism, Local government functions 366w
Tourism Review Committee 284w
Tourism Review Committee, Publishing 284w

MacKay, Mr Andrew
Debates etc.
By election writs, Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 591, 635-9
Questions
Business statements 1188
Lead free petrol, Garages & petrol stations 632w
Middle East, Peace negotiations 159
Youth training scheme 175w

McKelvey, Mr William
Questions
Building industry safety, Electrical safety 168w
National Farmers' Union, Common agricultural policy 308w

McLeish, Mr Henry
Questions
Assisted places scheme, Expenditure 65w
Assisted places scheme, Scotland 64w
Balance of payments 684w
Business development initiative, Expenditure 445-6w
Convention of Scottish Local Authorities, Education 219w
Education, Capital investment 71-2w
Educational equipment, Expenditure 70-2w
Educational publications, Expenditure 403-4w
Employment, Educational qualifications 282w, 423-6w
Employment, Graduates 553w
Employment level, Graduates 425-6w
Employment Training, Expenditure 491w
Employment Training, Scotland 288-9w, 490-1w, 596w
Further education, Scotland 407w
Grant Maintained Schools Trust 161w
Higher education teachers, Colleges of education 400-2w
Higher education teachers, Scotland 401w
Local education authorities, Capital investment 63-4w
Nursery schools, Expenditure 402w
Nursery schools, Scotland 64-5w
Private education, School population 70-2w
Private education, Scotland 65-9w
Rate support grants, Scotland 491w
Regional aid, Wales 435w
Regional development grants, Expenditure 445-6w
Regional development grants, Scotland 408w
Regional enterprise grants, Expenditure 444-5w
Regional enterprise grants, Wales 434-5w
Regional selective assistance, Scotland 407w
School administration, Scotland 161w
School boards, Video recordings 160w
School population, Scotland 401-4w
Scottish Council of Independent Schools 161w

McLeish, Mr Henry—continued
Tax allowances, Private education 80w, 380w
Teachers, Scotland 162w

Maclennan, Mr Robert
Debates etc.
Official Secrets Bill, Com (25:01:89) 1052, 1079-81, 1085, 1093, 1110, 1130, 1133-4
Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Bill, Allocation of time motion (23:01:89) 715-8
Security Service Bill, Com (16:01:89) 47-8, 54-5, 70, 114-5, (17:01:89) 185-7, 201, 229-30, 250-1, 262, 269, 273, 275, 284-5, 292-3, 295, 296-7, 303-4
Security Service Bill, 3R (23:01:89) 771-3
Questions
Exhaust emissions, EC law 190w
Nuclear Industry Radioactive Waste Executive, Radioactive waste disposal 642w
Official Secrets Bill 1988/89, Disclosure of information 674-5w
Post Office Counters, Privatisation 566w
Regional arts associations 75w

McLoughlin, Mr Patrick
Debates etc.
BREL (1988), Privatisation (17:01:89) 167
By election writs, Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 625
Committee stage, Official Report (25:01:89) 1047
Oral questions, Ministers (26:01:89) 1203
Rate support grants (19:01:89) 501, 507, 508, 520, 540-6
Written questions, Disclosure of information (17:01:89) 173
Questions
Abortion, Mental handicap 532w
Business statements 490
GATT, Agriculture 314w
Office of Population Censuses & Surveys, Cash limits 605-6w
Official engagements 485-6w
Peak Park Joint Planning Board, Ministers' domestic visits 1023-4
Rates & rating, Derbyshire County Council 1013-4
School population, Nottinghamshire 475w
Teachers, Derbyshire 474-5w
Youth training scheme 253-4w

McNair-Wilson, Sir Michael
Questions
Abortion, Law reform 532w
Absent voting 275w
Doctors, Insurance 116w
Doctors, Manpower 608-9w
Lead free petrol, Garages & petrol stations 394w
Royal Devon & Exeter Hospital, Radiotherapy 116w
Social security benefits, Hospital patients 525w

McNamara, Mr Kevin
Debates etc.
Elected Authorities (Northern Ireland) Bill, Rep & 3R (26:01:89) 1245, 1256, 1258, 1270, 1275-8
Questions
Conditions of employment, Northern Ireland 223w
Employment discrimination, Civil service manpower 221-2w
Employment discrimination, Industrial tribunals 222w
Employment discrimination, Northern Ireland 335-6w, 676-7w
Fair Employment (Northern Ireland) Bill 1988/89 677w
Fair Employment (Northern Ireland) Bill 1988/89, Codes of practice 676w
Opera, Subsidies 354w
Public contracts, Northern Ireland 396w
Public expenditure, Northern Ireland 395w
Royal Ulster Constabulary, Disciplinary proceedings 498w

McNamara, Mr Kevin—continued
Witnesses, Republic of Ireland 194w, 663w

McWilliam, Mr John
Debates etc.
Official Secrets Bill, Com (25:01:89) 1087, 1099
Telepoint services (26:01:89) 1193-4
Questions
Agriculture, EC grants & loans 313w

Madden, Mr Max
Debates etc.
By election writs, Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 614, 620, 625, 663
Deportation (23:01:89) 691
Pre-school education (18:01:89) 401
Private notice question point of order (18:01:89) 344, 345
Questions
Bradford Health Authority 38w
British citizenship, Immigration rules 352w
Business statements 491, 1186-7
Economic League 330
Housing action trusts, Consultants 636w
Industrial training 172w
Landing cards 352w
Visas 142
Yorkshire Water Authority 1021

Madel, Mr David
Debates etc.
Child benefit (18:01:89) 376-7
Questions
Network SouthEast, Railway travel 85w
Veterinary services, Research finance 61w

Maerdy
Fish farming 154w

MAFF
see Ministry of Agriculture

Magherafelt District Council
499w

Maginnis, Mr Ken
Debates etc.
Elected Authorities (Northern Ireland) Bill, Rep & 3R (26:01:89) 1213-6, 1223-4, 1251-2, 1253

Magistrates
369w
Public appointments 369w
Tameside 439-41w

Magistrates' courts
Departmental responsibilities 569w

Magistrates' Courts Review
139-40w

Magnox reactors
Nuclear fuel reprocessing 697w

Mahon, Mrs Alice
Debates etc.
Avon Light Rail Transit Bill (HL), 2R (24:01:89) 959
By election writs, Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 593
Questions
Building industry safety 169w
Business statements 1182-3
Calderdale Health Authority, Cook-chill catering 301w
Fire service, Rates & rating 305w
Football, Identity cards 456w
Homeworking 140
Hospital waiting lists, Calderdale 300w
Hostels, Board & lodging charges 418w
India, Water supply 270-1w
Iran 256w
Mendis, Viraj, Legal costs 391w
Old people's homes, Calderdale 300w
Private health services, Calderdale 300w
Radioactive waste disposal, Yorkshire & Humberside 731-2w
Tenants' choice 635w
Trade agreements, China 324-5
Turkey, Human rights 256w

Mahon, Mrs Alice—continued
Water pollution, Aluminium 463w

Maidstone Hospital
Radiotherapy 223w

Maintenance
Income support 257w

Major, Rt Hon John, Chief Secretary to the Treasury
Questions
Balance of payments 684w
Balance of trade 686-7w
Budget 686w
Capital investment 680-1w, 789-90w
Consumer credit, Interest rates 1170
Economic forecasting 689-90w
Economic growth 375-6w, 686-7w
Economic growth, Consumer expenditure 687w
Economic models 203w
Economic situation 1163
Exports 685w
Foreign investment in UK 681w
Foreign investment in UK, Capital movements 374w, 681w
Government assistance to industry, Expenditure 687-8w
Hard core unemployed 679w
Hard core unemployed, Youth employment 259w
Industrial investment, Manufacturing industries 680w, 689w, 1172-3
Interest rates, Industry 203w, 683w
Investment 681w, 1162-3
Labour costs, Manufacturing industries 375w, 682w
National income 678w, 691w
National insurance contributions 682w
National Savings Bank, Investment 1163
New businesses 689w, 693w
Oil revenues, North Sea oil 80-2w
Overseas investment 685w
Public expenditure 577w
Public expenditure, National income 375w, 683w
"Public Expenditure White Paper" 258w
Public sector borrowing requirement 682w
Rating revaluations, Non-domestic rates 202w
Self-employed, Manpower 259w
Self-employed, Part-time employment 682w, 688w
Tax yields 375w, 786-8w
Tax yields, Northern Ireland 692w
Taxation, Tax yields 787-90w
Unemployment, Economic regions 259w, 679w

Malaysia
Air routes 762w

Mallon, Mr Seamus
Debates etc.
Elected Authorities (Northern Ireland) Bill, Rep & 3R (26:01:89) 1229, 1233, 1234-5
Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Bill, Allocation of time motion (23:01:89) 698, 717, 727-30
Questions
Business statements 487
Hard core unemployed, Northern Ireland 28-9w

Malta
Overseas trade 441-2w

Management Bulletin
Production costs 225w

Managers
District health authorities 412w, 716w
Employment Training 281w
Health service staff 114w

Managing agents
282w, 627-8w

Manchester Airport
99w, 103w, 294w, 467w, 738w
Air accidents 99w, 573-4w

Manchester Airport—continued
Railway network 102w

Manchester Trades Union Council Pensioners' Association
Departmental correspondence 194w

Manchester University
476w

Mans, Mr Keith
Questions
Airbus Industrie 318
Chlorofluorocarbons 1017
Employment opportunities 169-70w
Excise duties, Lead free petrol 1164
Lead free petrol 632w
Loan guarantee scheme 254w
Secured loans 766-7w

Manufacturing industries
235-6w
Employment 419-22w, 742-3w
Foreign investment in UK 325
Industrial investment 323-5, 680w, 689w, 1172-3
Industrial production 229-30w
Labour costs 375w, 682w
Manpower 629-30w
North West region 163w
Productivity 231w
Profitability 323-4

Maples, Mr John
Debates etc.
Child benefit (18:01:89) 353
Telepoint services (26:01:89) 1196
Questions
Food & Agriculture Organisation 369w
Metropolitan Police 518w

Mapper system
Information technology 278-9w

Maps
Northern Ireland 141w

Marek, Dr John
Debates etc.
BREL (1988), Privatisation (17:01:89) 168
Questions
Dornoch firth, Railway network 159w
Excise duties, Lead free petrol 1164
Falkland Islands, Upland geese 11w
Government Communications Headquarters, Trade union membership 21-2
Housing benefits, Wales 677
Museums & galleries, Conservation 75w
Pulford-Gresford bypass, Costs 431w
Pulford-Gresford bypass, Road construction 665-6w
Road construction, EC grants & loans 563w
St Helena, Educational qualifications 12w
Severn bridge, Construction costs 574w
South Georgia, Fish conservation 12w

Marines
Armed forces catering services 277w

Market research
Expenditure 16w

Marketing
Government contracts 16w

Markets
Spitalfields (24:01:89) 933-46

Marland, Mr Paul
Debates etc.
Food, Consumer protection (24:01:89) 884, 893, 894
Questions
Eggs, Salmonella 467
Green pound, Farm incomes 307w
Small businesses, Small Firms Service 176w

Marlow, Mr Tony
Debates etc.
Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Bill, Allocation of time motion (23:01:89) 697, 698

Marlow, Mr Tony—continued
Private notice question point of order (18:01:89) 346
Questions
AIDS, Foreign patients 860
Army, Horses 280w, 454w, 758w
Business statements 487
Buy British 229w
Football, Identity cards 1025-6
Housing construction, Inner London boroughs 23w, 463w
Mendis, Viraj, Costs 674w
Middle East, Peace negotiations 158
Republic of Ireland, Aliens 329-30w

Married personal allowance
357w

Marshall, Mr David
Questions
Airports, Ownership 325w
Employment opportunities, Glasgow 490w
Motorways, Road safety barriers 289w
Transport, Accidents 90-1w

Marshall, Mr Jim
Debates etc.
Elected Authorities (Northern Ireland) Bill, Rep & 3R (26:01:89) 1219-21, 1225, 1259-61, 1268-70
Questions
Community health services, Belfast 492w
Eastern Health & Social Services Board, Accident & emergency departments 493w
Eastern Health & Social Services Board, Hospitals 492w
Eastern Health & Social Services Board, Mater Hospital 493w
Eastern Health & Social Services Board, Relocation of employees 494w
Eastern Health & Social Services Board, Royal Victoria Hospital Belfast 492-4w
Health, Belfast 492w
Hospitals, Belfast 497w
Mater Hospital, Obstetrics 599w
Road traffic, Urban areas 96w
Royal Victoria Hospital Belfast 496-7w
Royal Victoria Hospital Belfast, Building alterations 494-6w
Royal Victoria Hospital Belfast, Hospital admissions 494w
Royal Victoria Hospital Belfast, Hospital beds 493-4w
Royal Victoria Hospital Belfast, Security 495-6w
Vocational training, Young people 137

Marshall, Mr John
Debates etc.
Child benefit (18:01:89) 374
Questions
British Food & Farming Year 1989, Ministry of Agriculture 321w
Clergy, Retirement 486-7w
Community care 541w
Confederation of British Industry 327
Football, Identity cards 633w
Grant maintained schools 478w
Local government services, Competition 1020
Palestine Liberation Organisation, Assassination 362w
Personal savings 375w
Planning permission, Construction 461w
Shareholders 376w
USSR, Lifshitz, Boris 362w
Vacancies, Greater London 251-2w

Marshall, Mr Michael
Debates etc.
Telepoint services (26:01:89) 1194

Martin, Mr David
Debates etc.
By election writs, Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 599
Questions
Unemployment, Young people 163-4w
Wessex Regional Health Authority 543w

Martin, Mr Michael J
Debates etc.
BREL (1988), Privatisation (17:01:89) 166
Housing support grants, Scotland (23:01:89) 813-5
Questions
Air pollution, Greater London 648-9w
Channel tunnel 84-5w

Martlew, Mr Eric
Debates etc.
Food, Consumer protection (24:01:89) 889, 890, 913, 914, 917
Questions
Milk, Price increases 466
Police, Cumbria 5w
Settle-Carlisle railway, Railway closures 102w
Tax burden 691w
Untreated milk, Retail trade 316w

Mass media
Ministers' visits abroad 2w

Mater Hospital
492-4w
Eastern Health & Social Services Board 493w
Hospital admissions 494w
Hospital closures 493w
Obstetrics 599w

Maternity services
Leicestershire Health Authority 541w

Matrimonial & Family Proceedings (Northern Ireland Consequential Amendment) Order 1988
Debates etc.
(17:01:89) 176

Matrimonial & Family Proceedings (Northern Ireland) Order 1988
Debates etc.
(17:01:89) 176

Maude, Mr Francis, Under-Secretary of State for Corporate and Consumer Affairs*
Debates etc.
Monopolies & Mergers Commission (Performance of Functions) Order 1988 (25:01:89) 1143, 1145, 1151-3, 1154
Questions
Bookmakers, Office of Fair Trading 443w
British Coal Corporation, Investment 567-8w
Century Newspapers, Takeovers 472w
Company investigations 564-5w
Company investigations, Administrative delays 565w
Company investigations, Prosecutions 565w
EC Internal Market Council 239w
EC internal trade, Conferences 668w
EC internal trade, Publicity 668w
House of Fraser, Company investigations 444w
Manufacturing industries, Manpower 629-30w
Secured loans 766-7w

Mawhinney, Dr Brian, Under-Secretary of State for Northern Ireland*
Questions
Colleges of education, Government grants 602w
Colleges of education, Student numbers 600-2w
Further education, Newtownards 29w
Further education colleges, Ards peninsula 143w
Further education colleges, Donaghadee 498w
Further education colleges, Northern Ireland 143w
Languages education, Northern Ireland 334w
School buildings, Armagh 333-4w
Special education, Northern Ireland 141-2w
Teachers, Early retirement 29w
Teachers, Northern Ireland 142-3w

Maxton, Mr John
Debates etc.
Housing support grants, Scotland (23:01:89) 822, 837-9

Maxwell-Hyslop, Mr Robin
Questions
Business statements 1182
Sanctuary 338-9

Mayhew, Rt Hon Sir Patrick, Attorney-General
Questions
Abortion, Prosecutions 368w
Attorney-General, Republic of Ireland 367-8w
Barristers, Women 763-4w
Birth registration, Prosecutions 368w
Bombings, Guildford 368w
Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament, Public records 663w
Clough, Brian, Prosecutions 368w
Crown Prosecution Service 684-5
Crown Prosecution Service, Cash limits 764-5w
Crown Prosecution Service, Manpower 685
Director of Public Prosecutions 367-8w, 683
Freehold housing, Flats 260-1w
Guardian, Prosecutions 11w, 368-9w
House of Commons questions, Attorney-General 154w
Infant Life (Preservation) Act 1929, Prosecutions 328w
Intelligence services 367w
Judges, Women 763w
Land Registry Office, Administrative delays 260w, 487w
Latent Damage Act 1986 260w
Legal profession 683
Legal profession, Departmental publications 569w
Lord Chancellor, Cash limits 663-4w
Magistrates 369w
Magistrates, Public appointments 369w
Mendis, Viraj, Legal costs 487w
Ministerial policy advisers, Lord Chancellor 11w
Obscene Publications Act 1959, Prosecutions 154w
Pay incentives, Crown Prosecution Service 662w
Pay incentives, Land Registry Office 663w
Pay incentives, Lord Chancellor 662-3w
Solicitors 328w
Solicitors, Women 764w
Witnesses, Republic of Ireland 194w, 663w

Meacher, Mr Michael
Questions
Dept of Employment, Advertising 553w
Dept of Social Security local offices, Oldham 522-3w
Employment Training 621w
Retail price index 622w
Royal yacht, Operating costs 131w
Skill shortages 138
Social Fund, Oldham 521-3w

Meale, Mr Alan
Debates etc.
British Racing Commission Bill, 1R (24:01:89) 876-8
Child Benefit (18:01:89) 371
Questions
Football, Identity cards 1176-7
Lost working days, Injuries 174w
Private rented housing, Landlord & tenant 640w

Measuring instruments
(17:01:89) 176, (27:01:89) 1364

Meat
EC countries 701-2w
Food contamination 701-2w
Food exports 238-40w
Food hygiene 470-2
Food inspection 56w, 702w
Republic of Ireland 429w, 470-1, 701-2w

Medical appeal tribunals
119w, 708w
Medical equipment 118w

Medical education
Drug abuse 598w

Medical equipment
Abortion 113w, 356-7w
Hospitals 479w
Medical appeal tribunals 118w
St Thomas' Hospital 302w
Wales 479w

Medical examinations
Territorial Army 769w

Medical malpractice
Accidents 354w

Medical profession
Manpower 608w

Medical research
AIDS 598w
Aplastic anaemia 716-7w
Infant mortality 33-4w, 717w
Listeria monocytogenes 355w
Salmonella 713w

Medical treatments
Abortion 533w
Contracts for services 679
NHS 297w
War casualties 226w

Mellor, Mr David, Minister of State, Dept of Health
Questions
Abortion, Disciplinary proceedings 532w
AIDS, Disease control 861
AIDS, Drugs 716w
AIDS, Foreign patients 860
AIDS, Notifiable diseases 802w
Bradford Health Authority 38w
Child care 44w
Child care, Child safety 43w
Child care, Equal Opportunities Commission 44w
Children in care, Northumberland 298w
Committee on Safety of Medicines, Drug side effects 549w
Community care 541w
Crewe Health Authority, Inquiries 606w
Cruelty to children, Broxtowe estate 607w
Cruelty to children, Sexual offences 798-800w
Cyclotron Trust, Government grants 227w
District health authorities, Day nurseries 714w
District health authorities, Local authorities 40w, 113w
District health authorities, Managers 412w, 716w
District health authorities, North West region 40w
Doctors, Insurance 116w
Doctors, Manpower 608-9w
Doctors' list of patients, Northern Regional Health Authority 797-8w
Drug abuse, AIDS 357w
Drug abuse, Disposable syringes 528w
Drugs, Prices 714w, 802w
Family doctors, Greater London 355w
Family doctors, Pay 113w
Family practitioner committees 540w
Health service staff, Career structure 530w
Health service staff, Managers 114w
Health service staff, Manpower 609-10w
Health service staff, Pay 298w
Health service staff, Political impartiality 115w
Health service staff, Scientists 116w, 410w
Health service staff, Technicians 355w
Health services, London Docklands 547w
Hearing therapists, Hearing aids 226w
Hearing therapists, Manpower 225-6w
Hearing therapists, Pay 226w
Hearing therapists, Training 226w
Hospital consultants, Manpower 37w, 541w

Mellor, Mr David—continued
Hospital doctors, Manpower 530w
Hospital staff, Manpower 543w
Hospital waiting lists, Calderdale 300w
Hospitals, NHS administration 114w
Hospitals, Resource management initiative 542w
House of Commons questions, Dept of Health 356w
Junior hospital doctors, Working hours 37w, 527-8w, 854-6
Liver diseases, Transplant surgery 36w
Local government social services, Health services 114w
Management Bulletin, Production costs 225w
Medical equipment, St Thomas' Hospital 302w
Medical malpractice, Accidents 354w
Mental health community care, Finance 224w
Midwives, Career structure 298w
Midwives, Pay settlements 530w
NHS, Cleaning services 297w
NHS, Conditions of employment 529w
NHS, Expenditure 529w
NHS, Scientists 866
NHS administration 531-2w
NHS administration, Cost effectiveness 532w
NHS administration, Pay 802w
NHS & private practice, Expenditure 542w
NHS finance 41-2w, 543w
NHS finance, North West region 545w
Norwich Health Authority, NHS finance 544w
Nurses, Career structure 40w, 112w, 530w, 605w, 715-6w
Nurses, Educational health services 298-9w, 608w
Nurses, Manpower 44-6w
Nurses, Pay 297w
Nurses, Pay settlements 529-30w
Nurses' training 546w
Paracetamol, Drug hazards 413w
Parent & child, Mental illness 606w
Pay incentives, Dept of Health 548-9w
Pharmacists 605w
Pharmacists, Manpower 303w
Pontefract Health Authority, NHS finance 38w
Primary health care, Patient-professional relationship 412w
Private health services, Calderdale 300w
Private hospitals, Emergencies 714-5w
Public expenditure, Dept of Health 608w
Residential care 413w
Royal College of Midwives 546w
Royal Devon & Exeter Hospital, Radiotherapy 116w, 410-1w
Royal National Orthopaedic Hospital 34w
Royal National Orthopaedic Hospital, Accident & emergency departments 863
South East Thames Regional Health Authority, Hospital waiting lists 605w
Urban programme, Dept of Health 609w
Veterinary services, Glasgow University 861
Wakefield Health Authority, Public appointments 37w, 716w
Wessex Regional Health Authority 543w
Wheelchairs, Batteries 542w
Yorkshire Regional Health Authority 545w

Members
Intelligence services 866-7
Speaker's rulings & statements (23:01:89) 726, (24:01:89) 873

Members' allowances
196-8w
Expenditure 10-1w

Members' attendance
Speaker's rulings & statements (24:01:89) 972

Members' conduct
(17:01:89) 278, (25:01:89) 1096, 1098, 1100
Speaker's rulings & statements (23:01:89) 789, 792, (24:01:89) 959, (27:01:89) 1362

Members' correspondence
Administrative delays 8w
Immigration rules 6w
Prisoners on remand 137w
Social security claims 622-3w

Members' facilities
Facsimile transmission 127w

Members' interventions
(16:01:89) 52, 74, (17:01:89) 228
Speaker's rulings & statements (17:01:89) 150, (18:01:89) 339, 360, (20:01:89) 595, 601, 620, 637, 639, 649, 654, 655, 656, (26:01:89) 1254, (27:01:89) 1325

Members' pay
196-8w
Ministerial resignations 79w
Ministers 1165

Members' personal statements
Bell, Stuart (19:01:89) 494
Speaker's rulings & statements (19:01:89) 494

Members' speeches
(16:01:89) 102, 115
Speaker's rulings & statements (18:01:89) 411, (19:01:89) 494, 521, 555, 569, (24:01:89) 883, (27:01:89) 1308

Mendis, Viraj
338-9
Arrests 335-43
Costs 674w
Council housing 651w
Deportation 340-1, 343, 516w, 674w
Employment 340-1
Housing benefits 651-2w
Income tax 791w
Legal costs 391w, 487w
Social security benefits 523w
Standing Order No 20 applications (18:01:89) 343-4
Tuition fees 476w
Unemployment benefits 552w

Meningitis
North Derbyshire Health Authority 410w, 803w

Mental handicap
Abortion 532w

Mental Health Act 1983
Questions
413-4w

Mental health community care
Finance 224w

Mental health review tribunals
413-4w

Mental hospitals
Ethnic monitoring 113w
Property transfer 548w

Mental illness
Parent & child 606w

Mentally disturbed offenders
Prisoners' release 3w

Mentally handicapped
Bexley 547w
Community charge exemptions 594w
Local government services 547w
Social security benefits 519w, 613w

Mentally ill
Community charge 1013
Sheltered housing 707w

Mergers
Industrial democracy 185w

Merit awards
NHS administration 160w
Treasury 488w

Mersey Regional Health Authority
Hospital waiting lists 528w

Merseyside
District health authorities 40w

Merseyside Fire & Civil Defence Authority
305w

Mete, Ayten
Immigration controls 351w

Methyl phosphonyl difluoride
Exports 443w

Metropolitan Police
7w, 518w
Accountability 392w
Buildings 350-1w
Law enforcement 776w
Pay incentives 670w

Meyer, Sir Anthony
Questions
European Commission, Wales 675-6
Water supply industry, Privatisation 433w, 673

MI5
(16:01:89) 32-118, (17:01:89) 180-309, 706w, 866-7, (25:01:89) 1047-142

Michael, Mr Alun
Questions
Debts, Advisory services 234-5w
Inflation 375w
National Rivers Authority Advisory Committee, Public appointments 643w
NHS, Wales 677-8
Railway travel 88w

Michie, Mr Bill
Questions
Fire services, Equipment 670w

Michie, Mrs Ray
Debates etc.
Housing support grants, Scotland (23:01:89) 816-7
Questions
Air pollution, Trees 645w
Cervical cancer, Screening 298w
Community charge, Landlord & tenant 595w
Community charge, Prisoners 595w
Community charge, Scotland 397-8w, 594-5w
Community charge exemptions, Mentally handicapped 594w
Community charge exemptions, Scotland 594w
Equal opportunities 628w
Equal pay, Equal Opportunities Commission 162w
National Farmers' Union, Common farm prices 156w
Osteoporosis, Screening 550w
Paper industry, Dioxins 669w
Police housing, Scotland 405w
Post Office Counters 234w
Rent arrears, Scotland 722-6w
Retail trade, Rural areas 220w

Microcomputers
Social Fund 706w

Mid Cornwall Meatpackers
429w

Mid Glamorgan
Employment 664w

Mid Glamorgan Health Authority
Hospital waiting lists 430w

Middle East
Peace negotiations 151, 155-61, 576w

Middlesbrough Borough Council
1020-1
Privatisation 1019-20

Midland main railway line
Railway electrification 737w

Midwives
Career structure 298w
Cornwall & Isles of Scilly Health Authority 298w

Midwives—continued
Pay settlements 530w

Mileometers
329-30
Fraud 765w

Military aid to civil community
Armed forces training 447w
Emergency planning 447w
Food supply 447w
Lockerbie 447w

Military aircraft
Air accidents 653w
Low flying 130-2w, 448-9w, 558w, 754-6w, 770w

Military decorations
Bomber Command 1177-8

Military exercises
Low flying 654w

Military Low-Flying Management Group
558w, 658w, 755w

Military police
Low flying 558w

Milk
Agricultural subsidies 58w
Bovine somatotropin 157w
Confectionery 466
Food hygiene 477
Price increases 466-7

Milk Marketing Board
477

Miller, Sir Hal
Questions
Labour costs, Manufacturing industries 682w
Toyota, Foreign companies in UK 1176

Mills, Mr Iqin
Debates etc.
Rate support grants (19:01:89) 549-51
Questions
World Development Movement, Departmental correspondence 196w

Milton Bridge Camp
398w

Milton Hutchings
641w

Mine accidents
High Moor colliery 283-4w, 345w, 425w, 619w

Mine safety
282w, 365-6w
High Moor colliery 283w
Opencast mining 551w

Minehead
Accidents 555w

Mines (Safety of Exit) Regulations 1988
Questions
365-6w

Minesweepers
Operating costs 753w

Minibuses
Safety belts 762-3w

Minimum wage
EC countries 364-5w
Prosecutions 180-1w

Minister for the Civil Service
Cash limits 666w
Environmental policy 53w
House of Commons questions 487w
Recycling 53w

Ministerial policy advisers
Attorney-General 11w
Dept of Employment 50w
Dept of Health 35w

Ministerial policy advisers—continued*
Dept of Social Security 47-8w
Dept of Trade & Industry 16w, 768w
Dept of Transport 100w
Home Office 5-6w
Lord Chancellor 11w
Ministry of Agriculture 57w
Prime Minister 1-2w
Scottish Office 62-3w
Welsh Office 12-3w

Ministerial powers
320w
Water Act 1973 26w

Ministerial resignations
Departmental correspondence 480-1
Members' pay 79w

Ministerial speeches
Speaker's rulings & statements (19:01:89) 575

Ministerial statements
BREL (1988) (17:01:89) 162-72
EC Agriculture Council (25:01:89) 1027-37
Speaker's rulings & statements (26:01:89) 1205
Telepoint services (26:01:89) 1190-8

Ministers
867
Members' pay 1165
Shareholders 261w
West Germany 258w

Ministers' domestic visits
Consumer organisations 562w
Farmers 561-2w
Ministry of Agriculture 55-6w
North Peckham task force 668-9w
Peak Park Joint Planning Board 1023-4
Tees & Hartlepool Port Authority 82w

Ministers' visits abroad
Council of Ministers 675
European Commission 675
Israel 704w
Mass media 2w
Saudi Arabia 660w
Tunisia 155
USA 320-1w, 485w

Ministry of Agriculture
56w, 61w, 367w, (24:01:89) 880-932
Anniversaries 312w
British Food & Farming Year 1989 321w
Child care 700w
Consumers 152-3
Food standards 603-4w
House of Commons questions 699w
Ministerial policy advisers 57w
Ministers' domestic visits 55-6w
Pay incentives 499w
Public bodies 427w

Ministry of Agriculture Fisheries & Food see Ministry of Agriculture

Ministry of Defence
451w, 654w, 706w
House of Commons questions 555w, 656w
Pay incentives 653w
Payroll deduction scheme 652-3w
Written questions 754w

Minors
Shotgun certificates 275w

Missing persons
Young people 350w

Mitchell, Mr Andrew
Questions
Bypasses, Road construction 96w
Heart diseases, Publicity 544-5w
Intervention stocks 312w
New businesses 693w
NHS Review 869-70
Space technology 232-3w
Unemployment, East Midlands 164w

Mitchell, Mr Austin
Debates etc.
Monopolies & Mergers Commission (Performance of Functions) Order 1988 (25:01:89) 1144-6, 1153-4

Mitchell, Mr Austin—continued*
Questions
Restrictive trade practices, Estate agents 322

MMC
see Monopolies & Mergers Commission

Moate, Mr Roger
Questions
Farm diversification scheme, Planning permission 477

Mobile homes
Transient people 137w

Mobility allowance
Social security claims 119w

Mobility of disabled
Government assistance 94-5w

MOD
see Ministry of Defence

Modernisation
Nuclear weapons 128-9w
Prisons 272w

Molyneaux, Rt Hon James
Debates etc.
Elected Authorities (Northern Ireland) Bill, Rep & 3R (26:01:89) 1210, 1221-2, 1235
Questions
Airport security, Heathrow Airport 24-5

Monetary compensatory amounts
Pigmeat 427w

Monofilament gill nets
Prosecutions 159w

Monopolies
Postal services 105-6w

Monopolies & Mergers Commission
106-7w, 124w, 444w, 567-8w, (25:01:89) 1143-54

Monopolies & Mergers Commission (Performance of Functions) Order 1989
Debates etc.
(25:01:89) 1143-54

Monro, Sir Hector
Questions
Air accidents, Lockerbie 161-2w
Scottish Office, Cash limits 725-6w

Montgomery, Sir Fergus
Questions
Southern African Development Coordination Conference, Overseas aid 372w

Montupet
(26:01:89) 1291-8
Location of industry 144w

Moonie, Dr Lewis
Debates etc.
By election writs, Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 625
Food, Consumer protection (24:01:89) 886, 905-8
Questions
Exports 685w
Food microbiology, Research 307w
Health services 606w

Moore, Rt Hon John, Secretary of State for Social Security*
Debates etc.
Child benefit (18:01:89) 354, 357-63
Questions
Dept of Social Security, Civil service dispersal 46-7w
Ministerial policy advisers, Dept of Social Security 47-8w

Moredun Research Institute
807-8w

Morgan, Mr Rhodri
Debates etc.
By election writs, Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 612, 618, 623
Questions
Cars, Fraud 329

Morgan, Mr Rhodri—continued*
Electricity consumption, Electricity area boards 30w
Electricity supply industry, Scotland 62w
Higher education, Fees & charges 381w
Inflation 677w
Nurses, Appeals 682

Morley, Mr Elliot
Questions
Bed & breakfast accommodation 638w
Eggs, Food consumption 308w
Interest rates, Industry 683w
Road safety, Railway closures 13-4

Morocco
Low flying 557w

Morris, Rt Hon Alfred
Debates etc.
Poverty, Greater Manchester (19:01:89) 581-5
Questions
AIDS, Drugs 716w
Air accidents, Manchester Airport 573-4w
Air routes, USA 738w
Airport security, Heathrow Airport 23-4
Handicap benefits, Disablement Income Group 118-9w
Hearing therapists, Hearing aids 226w
Hearing therapists, Manpower 225-6w
Hearing therapists, Pay 226w
Hearing therapists, Training 226w
Medical research, AIDS 598w
Mendis, Viraj, Deportation 341

Morris, Rt Hon John
Questions
Crown Prosecution Service 684

Morris, Mr Michael
Debates etc.
Food, Consumer protection (24:01:89) 908-10
Questions
Mendis, Viraj, Arrests 337-8

Morrison, Sir Charles
Questions
Environmentally sensitive areas 470

Morrison, Rt Hon Peter, Minister of State for Energy*
Questions
Energy conservation 695w, 698w
Energy conservation, Environment 696w
Lead free petrol, Garages & petrol stations 394w

Mortgage defaulters
Departmental responsibilities 2-3w
Homelessness 149w, 641w
Repossession orders 641w

Mortgage interest rates
259w, 682w, 690w, 1170-2
First time buyers 358w
Retail price index 1169

Mortgage relief
782-3w
Civil service manpower 377-8w
Expenditure 783-4w
Fraud 377w
Personal income 783w

Mortgages
868-9

Moss, Mr Malcolm
Questions
EC Foreign Affairs Council 577w
National income 691w
Small businesses, British Venture Capital Association 176w

Mother & baby units
Prisons 517w

Mothers
Prisoners 517w

Motor vehicle safety
Road freight transport 673w
Suzuki 191-2w

Motor vehicle testing
Lorries 291-2w
Public service vehicles 389w

Motor vehicles
Balance of trade 442-4w
Export promotion 228w
Fraud 123w
Imports 442-4w
Lighting 99-100w

Motorcycles
Casualties 5-6
Courier services 6
Driving licences 386-7w
Leg protectors 5-6

Motorways
Channel tunnel 85w
North West region 11, 87w
Road accidents 93w
Road construction 87w
Road freight transport 11
Road safety barriers 289w
Road signs 189w, 561w
Road tolls 12-3
Road traffic control 95w, 120w
Road works 87-8w
Wales 561w

Mowlam, Ms Marjorie
Debates etc.
By election writs, Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 601
Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Bill, Allocation of time motion (23:01:89) 696, 702, 719-20, 722
Questions
Deer, Tuberculosis 313w
Inflation, EC countries 678w
Middlesbrough Borough Council 1020
Road safety 98w
Terrorism, Arrests 140-2w

Moynihan, Mr Colin, Under-Secretary of State for the Environment (Sport)*
Questions
Berwick Rangers Football Club, Identity cards 348w
British Waterways Board, Public appointments 732w
Football, Arrests 23-4w, 464w, 732w
Football, Identity cards 23w, 25w, 456w, 633-4w, 1024-6
Football, Wales 462w
Luton Town Football Club, Arrests 23-4w
National Rivers Authority, Departmental correspondence 25w
National Rivers Authority Advisory Committee, Public appointments 643w
Nottingham County Football Club 347w
Oil pollution 24w
River pollution 638w
Rivers, Yorkshire & Humberside 455w
Sea pollution 640w
Sea pollution, Irish Sea 645w
Seas & oceans, Environment protection 644w
Sewage, Bristol channel 22w
Sewage, Capital investment 304-5w
Sewage, Government grants 347w
Sewage, Pollution control 454-5w
Sewage, South Yorkshire 346w
Sportsgrounds, Hooliganism 462w
Springfields, Water pollution 794-5w
Waste disposal, Irish Sea 210w
Water Act 1973, Ministerial powers 26w
Water Act 1973, Water charges 303w
Water authorities, Land acquisition 24w
Water authorities, Land ownership & tenure 24-5w, 637w
Water authorities, Pay 794w
Water authorities, Public sector assets 728w
Water Bill 1988/89, Consumer organisations 646w
Water pollution, Aluminium 463w
Water pollution, Detergents 793-4w
Water pollution, EC law 647w, 728w
Water pollution, Fish 731w
Water pollution, Greater London 153w

Moynihan, Mr Colin—continued*
Water pollution, Nitrates 645-6w
Water pollution, South Yorkshire 26w
Water storage 455-6w
Water supply, Aluminium 305-6w
Water supply disconnections 150w
Water supply disconnections, Codes of practice 463w
Water supply industry, Capital investment 651w
Water supply industry, Costs 462w
Water supply industry, Ownership 648w
Water supply industry, Privatisation 22-3w, 728w

Mudd, Mr David
Questions
Drug seizures 128w
Sonic booms, Cornwall 100w

Mudiad Ysgolion Meithrin
Government grants 431w

Mullin, Mr Chris
Debates etc.
Security Service Bill, Com (16:01:89) 72, 73
Written questions, Disclosure of information (17:01:89) 173, 175
Questions
British Shipbuilders 232w
Dept of the Environment, Public appointments 21w
Director of Public Prosecutions 683
Football, Identity cards 23w
Members' correspondence, Administrative delays 8w
Pay settlements 1165
Vietnam, Overseas aid 371w
Water authorities, Land ownership & tenure 630w

Multiple occupation
Housing & Local Government Bill 1988/89 630w

Multipoint video distribution systems
Television channels 566w

Murphy, Mr Paul
Questions
Exchange rates 679w
Local authority associations 677

Museum of the Moving Image
75w

Museums & galleries
488w
Business sponsorship incentive scheme 14-5
Conservation 75w
Expenditure 14-5
Government grants 15-7
Greater London 75w
Manpower 74w
Opening hours 16
Purchase grants 15
Scotland 72w
Stock control 73-4w
Vacancies 74w
Vocational training 263-4w

Museums & Galleries Commission
Exhibitions 73w

Museums Association
263-4w

Mylnefield Research Establishment
288w

NAO
see National Audit Office

Narcotics
Drug abuse 154

NASDIM
see National Association of Security Dealers & Investment Managers

National Air Traffic Services
658w

National Association of Security Dealers & Investment Managers
331w

National Audit Office
693w

National Bus Company
Accounting 575w

National Coal Board
see British Coal Corporation

National Council for Vocational Qualifications
181w

National Curriculum Council
(16:01:89) 119-28

National Curriculum History Working Group
597w

National debt
685w

National Engineering Laboratory
Privatisation 766w

National Farmers' Union
Common agricultural policy 308w
Common farm prices 156w
Dairy farming 311w

National Federation of Football Supporters' Clubs
634w

National Film & Television School
76w

National Finance
see Treasury

National grid
695w

National Health Service (Scotland) Act 1978
Questions
159w

National income
678w, 691w
Overseas aid 269w
Public expenditure 375w, 683w
Tourist industry 138-9, 141-2

National insurance benefits
712-4w

National insurance cards
615w

National insurance contributions
682w
Employees' contributions 241-2w
Personal income 77-8w
Tax yields 787-90w

National insurance surcharge
Tax yields 706w

National Museum of Wales
782w

National Online Manpower Information System
183w

National parks
Public appointments 1023-4

National Rivers Authority
454-5w, 505w
Departmental correspondence 25w

National Rivers Authority Advisory Committee
25w
Public appointments 643w

National Savings
128w, 202-3w
Composite tax rate system 692w

NATO—continued
Transport 121w

Natural Environment Research Council
Greenhouse effect 381-2w
Redundancy 381w
Research finance 17-8w

Nature Conservancy Council
Environment protection 207-8w

Nature conservation
EC trade 153w, 503w
Road construction 97w

Nature Conservation & Amenity Lands (Amendment) (Northern Ireland) Order 1989
Debates etc.
(16:01:89) 31

NCB
see British Coal Corporation

NCC
see Nature Conservancy Council

Neale, Mr Gerrard
Questions
Lowermoor Incident Health Advisory Group 802w
Water pollution, EC law 145-6w

Needham, Mr Richard, Under-Secretary of State for Northern Ireland*
Debates etc.
Elected Authorities (Northern Ireland) Bill, Rep & 3R (26:01:89) 1215, 1222-5, 1237, 1243-4, 1246-7, 1251, 1252-4, 1256-7, 1266-8, 1270, 1287-9
Questions
Antrim Hospital 497w
Community health services, Belfast 492w
Dogs, Infectious diseases 677w
Domestic rates, Northern Ireland 499w
Eastern Health & Social Services Board, Accident & emergency departments 493w
Eastern Health & Social Services Board, Hospitals 492w
Eastern Health & Social Services Board, Mater Hospital 493w
Eastern Health & Social Services Board, Relocation of employees 494w
Eastern Health & Social Services Board, Royal Victoria Hospital Belfast 492-4w
Fire services, Planning permission 334w
Health, Belfast 492w
Hospitals, Belfast 497w
Housing associations, Northern Ireland 335w
Mater Hospital, Obstetrics 599w
Ordnance Survey, Prices 141w
Orlit houses, Comber 221w
Orlit houses, Donaghadee 221w
Rateable value, Northern Ireland 498-9w
Road accidents, Donaghadee 497-8w
Road accidents, Newtownards 334w
Royal Victoria Hospital Belfast 496-7w
Royal Victoria Hospital Belfast, Building alterations 494-6w
Royal Victoria Hospital Belfast, Hospital admissions 494w
Royal Victoria Hospital Belfast, Hospital beds 493-4w
Royal Victoria Hospital Belfast, Security 495-6w

NEL
see National Engineering Laboratory

Nellist, Mr Dave
Debates etc.
Private notice question point of order (18:01:89) 344
Questions
Building industry safety 167-8w
Coventry & Warwickshire Hospital, Hospital waiting lists 530-1w
Pay settlements, Economic situation 1165
Youth training scheme, Death 140-1

Nelson, Mr Anthony
Debates etc.
Monopolies & Mergers Commission (Performance of Functions) Order 1988 (25:01:89) 1146-8

Nelson, Mr Anthony—continued
Questions
Central Selling Organisation for Diamonds 236w

NERC
see Natural Environment Research Council

Net Book Agreement
472w
Disclosure of information 108w
Shops 107-8w

Network SouthEast
119-20w
Railway travel 85-6w

Neubert, Mr Michael, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Armed Forces*
Questions
Air accidents, Lockerbie 28w
Air force, Armed forces recruitment 555w
Air force, West Germany 26-7w
Armed forces, Community charge 453w
Armed forces casualties, Personal injury compensation 769-70w
Armed forces catering services, Marines 277w
Armed forces housing, Fees & charges 452-4w
Armed forces recruitment, Land acquisition 555w
Armed forces training, Dartmoor national park 757w
Army, Armed forces pay 451-2w
Army, Horses 280w, 454w, 758w
BAOR, Drunkenness 27w
Firing ranges, Dartmoor national park 756-8w
Low flying 656-7w
Low flying, Air traffic control 558-9w
Low flying, Aircraft noise 449w, 755w
Low flying, Borders region 448-9w
Low flying, Bristol Airport 754w
Low flying, Military aircraft 130-2w, 448-9w, 558w, 754-6w, 770w
Low flying, Military police 558w
Low flying, Morocco 557w
Low flying, Scotland 449w
Low flying, Swansea 656w
Low flying, Urban areas 557w
Military aircraft, Air accidents 653w
Military exercises, Low flying 654w
Military Low-Flying Management Group 558w, 658w, 755w
Ministry of Defence, Written questions 754w
RAF Cranwell, Armed forces recruitment 555w
RAF West Drayton, Low flying 656w
Rescue services 450-1w
RNAD Trecwn 197w
Skyguard radar, Low flying 654w
Territorial Army, Medical examinations 769w
Territorial Army, Political activities 769w
Woolwich Arsenal, Property development 556w

New businesses
23w, 689w, 693w
Strangford 220w

New Dawn
123w, 131w

New Earnings Survey
418w

"New Financial Regime for Local Authority Housing in England & Wales Consultation Paper"
637-8w

New towns
Public sector housing 305w

New towns development corporations
Public sector housing sales 409w
Scotland 409w

New Zealand
Butter 212w
EC external trade 807w

New Zealand—continued
Sheep meat 699-700w

Newcastle upon Tyne
Vacancies 421-2w

Newham
Health services 547w
Training & enterprise councils 742w

Newport
261w
Unemployment 680-1

Newsagents
Distributive trade 232w

Newspaper press
Photographs 154w

Newton, Rt Hon Tony, Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster & Minister of Trade & Industry*
Questions
Barlow Clowes, Financial services 331w
Barlow Clowes, Self-regulating organisations 331-2w
British Shipbuilders 232w
Building industry, Employment opportunities 228w
Business development initiative, Expenditure 445-6w
Competition 328
Confederation of British Industry 235w, 327
Debts, Advisory services 234-5w
EC Research Council 108w
Financial Intermediaries' Managers' & Brokers' Association, Vocational education 333w
Financial services, Licensing 331w
Financial services, Self-regulating organisations 332-3w
Footwear, Imports 328
Hayes, Brian 319
House of Commons questions, Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster 563-4w
House of Fraser, Company investigations 239-40w
House of Fraser, Takeovers 322
Industrial development, North West region 327-8
Industrial development, Northern region 328
Inner area programmes 317-8
Inner area programmes, Brent 317
Inner cities initiative, Expenditure 472-3w
Inner city areas, Church & state 228w
Inner city areas, Industrial development 565w
Inner city areas, Private sector 230w
Life insurance 236w
Magistrates, Tameside 439-41w
Restrictive trade practices 321-2
Restrictive trade practices, Estate agents 322
Restrictive trade practices, Legal profession 322
Securities & Investments Board, Self-regulating organisations 332w
Telecommunications technology 233w
Television Licensing Organisation 239w
Urban areas, Church of England 327

Newtownards
Further education 29w
Road accidents 334w

NFFSC
see National Federation of Football Supporters' Clubs

NFU
see National Farmers' Union

NHS
856-8
Cleaning services 297w
Conditions of employment 529w
Contracts for services 114-5w, 297w, 540-1w
Expenditure 529w

NHS—continued
Hospital consultants 14w
Land acquisition 548w
Land values 547-8w
Medical treatments 297w
Property transfer 290w, 432w, 719w
Scientists 866
Scotland 290w, 719w
VAT 79w
Wales 677-8
West Glamorgan 432w

NHS administration
531-2w, 856-8
Cost effectiveness 532w
Councillors 856-8
Eastern Health & Social Services Board 497w
Hospitals 114w
Merit awards 160w
NHS finance 856
Pay 802w
Scotland 160w
Scottish health boards 159w

NHS & private practice
Expenditure 542w

NHS finance
41-2w, 543w
Geriatrics 610w
Hospital waiting lists 866
NHS administration 856
North West region 545w
Norwich Health Authority 544w
Pontefract Health Authority 38w
Transplant surgery 36w
Wales 778-80w

NHS (Health Boards Membership Procedure & Payment of Subscriptions) (Scotland) Regulations 1975
Questions
159w

NHS Review
531-2w, 856-9, 869-70
Community Care Review 859
District health authorities 856-8
Information 865
Nottingham Health Authority 856
Regional health authorities 856-8
Wales 15w

NI Office
see Northern Ireland Office

Nicholls, Mr Patrick, Under-Secretary of State for Employment*
Questions
Accidents, Minehead 555w
Building industry, Death 147-8
Building industry safety 166-9w
Building industry safety, Demolition 252-3w
Building industry safety, Electrical safety 168w
Building industry safety, Fires 169w
Building industry safety, Greater London 166w
Building industry safety, Pay 147-8
Building industry safety, Union of Construction Allied Trades & Technicians 148
Closed shop 175-6w
Coal mining, Redundancy 143
Community programme, Nottingham 280-1w
Dept of Employment, Departmental publications 366w
Docklands Liaison Group 741-2w
Employment Training 171-3w, 621w, 810w
Employment Training, Age 171w
Employment Training, Aircrew 551w
Employment Training, Bury 172w
Employment Training, Child care 281w
Employment Training, Community programme 172w, 281-2w
Employment Training, Handicapped workers 177w
Employment Training, Inner city areas 171w

Nicholls, Mr Patrick—continued
Employment Training, Inquiries 282w
Employment Training, Managers 281w
Employment Training, Take-up 281w
Employment Training, Trades Union Congress 171-2w
Employment Training, Warrington Borough Council 621w
Equal opportunities 628w
Equal pay, Equal Opportunities Commission 162w
Ethylene dibromide, Health hazards 419w
Factories Act 1961, Young people 185w
Factory Inspectorate, Civil service manpower 51w
Hantergantick quarry, Prosecutions 554w
High Moor colliery, Mine accidents 283-4w, 425w
High Moor colliery, Mine safety 283w
House of Commons questions, Dept of Employment 284w
Industrial democracy, Mergers 185w
Industrial disputes, Voting methods 185w
Industrial health & safety 177w, 184w
Industrial health & safety, Prosecutions 553-5w, 628-9w
Industrial relations 181w
Industrial training 178w
Industrial tribunals, Legal costs 750w
Lost working days, Industrial disputes 173-4w
Lost working days, Injuries 174w
Mine safety 282w, 365-6w
Minimum wage, EC countries 364-5w
Minimum wage, Prosecutions 180-1w
Opencast mining, Flood control 50w
Opencast mining, Industrial health & safety 622w
Opencast mining, Mine safety 551w
Pay differentials 623w
Pay settlements 180w
Personal income, Pay 550w
Playgrounds, Accidents 186w
Ports, Accidents 624w
Ports, Industrial health & safety 623-4w
Restart programme 143-4
Restart programme, Employment 144
Trades Union Congress 182w
Training, Women 809w
Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 1981 552w
Unemployment, Parliamentary constituencies 163w
Wages councils 178w
"Wages Councils 1988 Consultation Document" 366w
"Wages Councils 1988 Consultation Document", HMSO 366w
Working hours, Young people 185w

Nicholson, Mr David
Questions
Hospitals, Resource management initiative 542w
Investment 681w
Sudan, Overseas aid 151
Telephone selling 470-1w
Tourism, Government grants 170w
Youth training scheme 138

Nicholson, Miss Emma
Questions
Animal feed, Poultry 314-5w
Eggs, Salmonella 468
Unemployment, South West region 164w

NIFA
see Northern Ireland Fire Authority

Nigeria
Illegal immigrants 273-4w
Immigrant detainees 274w
Overseas aid 373w
Technical assistance 688

Night flying
Low flying 449w

NIREX
see Nuclear Industry Radioactive Waste Executive

Nissan
Exports 235w

Nitrates
Agricultural land 472-3
River pollution 472-3
Water pollution 473, 645-6w

Nitrogen dioxide
648-9w
Air pollution monitoring 503-4w

Nitrogen oxides
483-4w

Noise
Complaints 484w

Noise control
Stansted Airport 191w
Wales 484w

Non-departmental public bodies
Dept of Energy 697w
Dept of the Environment 730-1w

Non-domestic rates
148w
Rating revaluations 202w

Norfolk
Community charge 631w

Norman Shaw Buildings
Deposited papers 127-8w

Norris, Mr Steve
Debates etc.
Official Secrets Bill, Com (25:01:89) 1070-2, 1087, 1092
Questions
Dept of Social Security, Civil service dispersal 46-7w

North Atlantic Treaty Organisation
see NATO

North Derbyshire Health Authority
Meningitis 410w, 803w

North East region
330-1w

North of Scotland Hydro-Electric Board
341-2w

North Peckham task force
767-8w
Ministers' domestic visits 668-9w

North Sea
Waste disposal 464-6w, 633w

North Sea oil
Oil revenues 80-2w

North Wales
Cancer 678

North West region
Channel tunnel 6-7, 84w
Dept of Social Security local offices 119w
District health authorities 40w
EC internal trade 230w
Economic situation 686w
Industrial development 327-8
Industrial investment 229w
Manufacturing industries 163w
Motorways 11, 87w
NHS finance 545w
Residential care 42w
Restart programme 624-6w
Tourism 170w
Training 814w
Youth training scheme 626-7w, 813-4w

North Western Regional Health Authority
545w

North Yorkshire
Sheep 57w

Northern Health & Social Services Board
497w

Northern Ireland
Action for Community Employment 221w
Agricultural land 144-6w

Northern Ireland—continued
Conditions of employment 223w
Dog licences 677w
Domestic rates 499w
Employment Bill 1988/89 602w
Employment discrimination 221-2w, 335-6w, 676-7w
Farm incomes 222-3w
Farmers 144w
Firearms 395-6w
Firearms certificates 602-3w
Food hygiene 471
Further education colleges 143w
Hard core unemployed 28-9w
Housing 396w
Housing associations 335w
Industrial development (26:01:89) 1291-8
Languages education 334w
Local government elections (26:01:89) 1206-90
Maps 141w
Prisoners' release 599-600w
Public contracts 396w
Public expenditure 395w
Rateable value 498-9w
Special education 141-2w
Tax yields 692w
Teachers 29w, 142-3w
Tourism 139
Youth training scheme 29-30w

Northern Ireland Assembly
(26:01:89) 1206-90

Northern Ireland Dept of the Environment
334w

Northern Ireland Education & Library Boards
141-2w

Northern Ireland Fire Authority
334w

Northern Ireland Industrial Development Board
(26:01:89) 1291-8

Northern Ireland Office
Cash limits 768-9w
House of Commons questions 395w
Identity cards 394-5w

Northern region
Industrial development 328
Roads 95-6w
Unemployment 165w

Northern Regional Health Authority
Doctors' list of patients 797-8w

Northumberland
A1 293-4w, (23:01:89) 844-52
Children in care 298w
Common sheep meat regime 320w
Curriculum 703-4w

Norton-Taylor, Richard
11w, 368-9w

Norwich
Youth training scheme 174w

Norwich Health Authority
NHS finance 544w

Notifiable diseases
AIDS 802w

Nottingham
Civil service dispersal 257w
Community programme 280-1w
Council house rents 303w
Defence procurement 276-7w
Factory Inspectorate 51w
Farms 699w
Income support 244w
Pensioners 47w, 414w
Stray dogs 200w
Unemployment benefits 364w

Nottingham County Football Club
347w

Nottingham Health Authority
715-6w
NHS Review 856

Nottingham Health Authority—continued
Nurses 112w

Nottinghamshire
School population 475w
Teachers 474-5w

Nottinghamshire County Council
479-80, 705w

NSHEB
see North of Scotland Hydro-Electric Board

Nuclear accidents
Disclosure of information 486w
Nuclear submarines 280w
Sellafield 715w

Nuclear age
660w

Nuclear fuel reprocessing
Magnox reactors 697w
Nuclear safeguards 697w

Nuclear fuels
Exports 652w
Transport of radioactive materials 754-5w
USA 753w

Nuclear fusion
Defence research 754w

Nuclear Industry Radioactive Waste Executive
25w, 150w, 459w, 461w, 635-6w, 731-2w
Radioactive waste disposal 642w

Nuclear Non Proliferation Treaty
Saudi Arabia 660w

Nuclear power
Public records 753w
Treaties 660w

Nuclear power stations
Environment 619-20w

Nuclear reactors
Exports 659w

Nuclear safeguards
Nuclear fuel reprocessing 697w
Plutonium 696w

Nuclear safety
Air accidents 718w
Rosyth dockyard 279w

Nuclear submarines
132w, 407w
Nuclear accidents 280w
Radiation hazards 452w
Radioactive waste disposal 279-80w, 556-7w
Scotland 452w

Nuclear weapons
Modernisation 128-9w

Nursery schools
Expenditure 402w, 478w
Scotland 64-5w, 402w

Nurses
Appeals 682
Career structure 40w, 112w, 299w, 338-42w, 530w, 605w, 715-6w, 861-3
Educational health services 298-9w, 608w
Manpower 44-6w
Nottingham Health Authority 112w
Pay 297w
Pay settlements 529-30w
Rates & rating 460w, 631w, 1012-3
Scotland 338-42w, 397w
Wales 682

Nurses' training
546w

Nursing homes
Local government social services 13w
Private health services 13w
Wales 13w

Nutrition & health
Diets 296w

Oakes, Rt Hon Gordon
Debates etc.
Food, Consumer protection (24:01:89) 891-4

OAL
see Office of Arts & Libraries

Objects in lieu of tax
Art works 667w

O'Brien, Mr William
Debates etc.
Rate support grants (19:01:89) 567-70
Unemployment benefit offices, Standing Order No 20 applications (25:01:89) 1038
Questions
Estate Action, Energy conservation 640-1w
Estate Action, Expenditure 211w
Rent increases 1023
Wakefield Health Authority, Hospital catering 543w

Obscene Publications Act 1959
Questions
Prosecutions 154w

Obstetrics
Mater Hospital 599w

Occupied territories
128w, 155, 158

ODA
see Overseas Development Administration

OECD
see Organisation for Economic Cooperation & Development

OECD countries
Defence expenditure 758w

Office closures
Unemployment benefit offices 749-50w

Office of Arts & Libraries
Cash limits 667w
Child care 666-7w
House of Commons questions 488w
Pay incentives 354w

Office of Fair Trading
470-1w
Bookmakers 443w

Office of Population Censuses & Surveys
Cash limits 605-6w

Office of Telecommunications
470-1w

Office of the Minister for the Civil Service see Minister for the Civil Service

Offices
Defence Quality Assurance Directorate 447-8w
South East Thames Regional Health Authority 295w
Welsh Office 434w

Official engagements
127w, 261-2w, 485-6w, 705-6w

Official Report
Speaker's rulings & statements (25:01:89) 1047

Official secrets
Disclosure of information (25:01:89) 1047-142

Official Secrets Bill 1988/89
Debates etc.
Com (25:01:89) 1047-142
Questions
Disclosure of information 674-5w

Offset arrangements
330
Boeing 330

Offshore safety
Oil industry safety 344-5w

Offshore structures
Competition 211w
Fulmar oilfield 31w
Safety standards 32w

OFT
see Office of Fair Trading

Oftel
see Office of Telecommunications

Oil industry accidents
Fulmar oilfield 30-2w

Oil industry safety
Offshore safety 344-5w

Oil pipelines
Fulmar oilfield 31w

Oil pollution
24w
Birds 463w
English Channel 292w, 463w
Pollution monitoring 292-3w

Oil revenues
North Sea oil 80-2w
Royalties 490w

Old people's homes
Calderdale 300w
Scotland 218-9w
Servite houses 118w

Older workers
Employment Training 148-9

Oldham
Dept of Social Security local offices 522-3w
Social Fund 521-3w

OMCS
see Minister for the Civil Service

One parent families
Disposable income 526-8w
Family credit 244w
Family income supplements 360w

One person operation
82-3w

O'Neill, Mr Martin
Questions
Boxer system, Communication engineering 278w
Challenger tanks 199w
Challenger tanks, Defence contracts 198w
Defence research establishments, Audit 198-9w
Fastnet project, Telephone systems 278w
Guided weapons, Defence expenditure 279w
Helicopters, Armed forces 279w
Mapper system, Information technology 278-9w
Opcon system, Data banks 278w
Pindar project, Armed forces 278w

Onslow, Rt Hon Cranley
Questions
Safety belts, Minibuses 762-3w

Opcon system
Data banks 278w

OPCS
see Office of Population Censuses & Surveys

Open University
Finance 267w

Opencast mining
Flood control 50w
Industrial health & safety 622w
Mine safety 551w
Water supply 551w

Opening hours
Museums & galleries 16

Opera
Subsidies 354w

Operating costs
British embassies 473w
Dept of Social Security 618w, 805-6w

Operating costs—continued
Frigates 753w
Minesweepers 753w
Royal yacht 131w
Treasury 694w

Operating theatres
864
Costs 863-4

Oppenheim, Mr Phillip
Debates etc.
BREL (1988), Privatisation (17:01:89) 167
Telepoint services (26:01:89) 1197-8
Questions
Antidumping, Japan 566w
Antidumping duties, Electronic equipment 259-60w
Burglary, Derbyshire 275-6w
Economic growth 687w
Industrial training, Business 182w
Manufacturing industries, Industrial production 230w
Semiconductor devices, Protectionism 326

Opposition days
Child benefit (18:01:89) 351-90
Food (24:01:89) 880-932
Pre-school education (18:01:89) 391-434

Optical fibres
Education 229w

Oral questions
Speaker's rulings & statements (19:01:89) 482, (24:01:89) 873, 874, 875, (25:01:89) 1039-40, (26:01:89) 1201, 1203

Ordnance Survey
Prices 141w

Organ donor cards
544w

Organ donors
713-4w
Transplant surgery 544w

Organisation for Economic Cooperation & Development
504w

Orlit houses
Comber 221w
Contracts 221w
Donaghadee 221w

Orthopaedics
Ayrshire & Arran Health Board 61-2w

Oslo Convention
464-6w

Ossett
(25:01:89) 1038

Osteoporosis
Screening 550w

Oswestry Hospital
Property transfer 356w

"Our Changing Schools"
Welsh Office 664w

Overseas aid
371w, 686-8
ACP countries 373w
Afghanistan 686-7
British dependent territories 793w
Caribbean 371w
Cash limits 486w
Child health 126w
Debts 269-70w
Eggs 370w
Food aid from UK 688-90
India 369w
National income 269w
Nigeria 373w
Pakistan 686-7
Rain forests 11w
Somalia 563w
South Africa 270w
Southern African Development Coordination Conference 372w

Overseas aid—continued
Sudan 151
Vietnam 371w
War on Want 686

Overseas development
see Foreign & Commonwealth Office

Overseas Development Administration
486w, 661w

Overseas investment
685w

Overseas loans
Developing countries 661-2w
Zambia 661w

Overseas students
Part-time employment 623w

Overseas trade
Japan 230w
Libyan Arab Republic 323
Malta 441-2w
Plutonium 155-6w
Tunisia 322-3

Overtime
Passport Office 588-90w

Owen, Rt Hon David
Debates etc.
Official Secrets Bill, Com (25:01:89) 1067-70
Security Service Bill, Com (16:01:89) 59-62

Ownership
Airports 325w
Water supply industry 648w

Oxfordshire
Housing associations 644w

Ozone layer
Air pollution control 569-70w, 1016-7
EC Environment Council 502w
International conferences 729-30w

Packaging industry
Compensation 54w
Redundancy 309w

Page, Mr Richard
Questions
Caribbean, Drug crimes 793w
Ministers 867
Transplant surgery, Organ donors 544w

Paice, Mr James
Debates etc.
Pre-school education (18:01:89) 423-4
Questions
Economic growth 1161
Milk, Price increases 467
Unemployment benefit offices 284-5w
Youth training scheme, Manpower 175w

Paisley, Rev Ian
Debates etc.
By election writs, Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 651
Elected Authorities (Northern Ireland) Bill, Rep & 3R (26:01:89) 1207-13, 1215-6, 1218, 1230, 1232, 1233, 1285-6
Oral questions, Ministers (26:01:89) 1203

Pakistan
Overseas aid 686-7

Palestine Liberation Organisation
151, 155, 159
Assassination 362w

Pan American Airways
718w

Paper industry
Dioxins 669w

Paracetamol
Drug hazards 413w

Parc Beck Allotment Society
15w

Parent & child
Courts 672-3w
Mental illness 606w

Parents
Perinatal mortality 546-7w

Parish councils
Local government finance 641w
Planning permission 209w

Parking Enforcement Working Party
93w

Parkinson, Rt Hon Cecil, Secretary of State for Energy*
Questions
Electricity supply industry, Privatisation 698w
Fulmar oilfield, Offshore structures 31w
Fulmar oilfield, Oil industry accidents 30-2w
Fulmar oilfield, Oil pipelines 31w
High Moor colliery, Mine accidents 345w
House of Commons questions, Dept of Energy 696w
Interviews, Broadcasting programmes 620w
Non-departmental public bodies, Dept of Energy 697w
Offshore structures, Competition 211w
Offshore structures, Safety standards 32w
Oil industry safety, Offshore safety 344-5w
Pay incentives, Dept of Energy 344w
Public expenditure, Dept of Energy 621w

Parliament House, Edinburgh
Security industry 160w

Parliamentary constituencies
Census of population 41-2w
Unemployment 163w

Parliamentary furnishings
House of Commons Fees Office 729w

Parliamentary Press Gallery
Speaker's rulings & statements (23:01:89) 828

Parry, Mr Robert
Questions
Channel tunnel, Liverpool 83-4w
Economic situation, North West region 686w

Part-time employment
Manpower 259w
Overseas students 623w
Police surgeons 771w
Self-employed 682w, 688w
Women's employment 743-6w

Passengers
Inter-city rail transport 86w

Passport Office
582-8w
Belfast 135-6w
Civil service manpower 135-6w, 583-6w
Overtime 588-90w
Pay 587-8w
Temporary staff 585-7w

Passports
582-5w
Administrative delays 583-7w
Publicity 587w
Telephone services 586w, 588w

Patchett, Mr Terry
Questions
British Rail 86w
Interest rates, Industry 683w
Radioactive waste disposal, South Yorkshire 25w
Waste disposal, Barnsley 153w
Water pollution, South Yorkshire 26w

Patient-professional relationship
Primary health care 412w

Patnick, Mr Irvine
Debates etc.
By election writs, Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 643
Pre-school education (18:01:89) 403
Rate support grants (19:01:89) 510

Patnick, Mr Irvine—continued*
Questions
British Wool Marketing Board 315w
Hospital waiting lists, Trent Regional Health Authority 865
Housing construction, Council housing 506w
Unemployment, Inner city areas 251w

Patten, Mr Chris, Minister of State for Overseas Development*
Questions
ACP countries, Lome Convention 371-2w
ACP countries, Overseas aid 373w
Afghanistan, Overseas aid 686-7
Armenia, Disaster relief 372w
Brazil, Rain forests 271w
Burundi 687-8
Caribbean, Overseas aid 371w
Developing countries, Debts 370w
Disaster relief, Expenditure 269w
Educational aid, Distance learning 662w
Food aid from UK, Overseas aid 688-90
Food & Agriculture Organisation 369w
India, Educational aid 371w
India, Overseas aid 369w
India, Water supply 270-1w
Nigeria, Overseas aid 373w
Nigeria, Technical assistance 688
Overseas aid 371w, 686
Overseas aid, Cash limits 486w
Overseas aid, Child health 126w
Overseas aid, Debts 269-70w
Overseas aid, Eggs 370w
Overseas aid, National income 269w
Overseas aid, Rain forests 11w
Overseas loans, Developing countries 661-2w
Somalia, Overseas aid 563w
South Africa, EC aid 270w
South Africa, Overseas aid 270w
Southern African Development Coordination Conference, Overseas aid 372w
"State of the World's Children, 1989" 370w
Sudan, Debts 372w
Uganda, Dairy farming 370w
Vietnam, Overseas aid 371w
War on Want 686
War on Want, Overseas aid 686
World Bank 370w
World Development Movement, Departmental correspondence 196w
Zambia, Overseas loans 661w

Patten, Mr John, Minister of State at the Home Office*
Debates etc.
Official Secrets Bill, Com (25:01:89) 1051, 1079, 1082, 1093-104, 1109, 1115, 1122, 1126-33, 1135, 1136, 1137-8
Security Service Bill, Com (16:01:89) 87, (17:01:89) 228, 239-40, 243-4, 251-3, 266-9, 270, 274, 278-9, 281, 288-9, 290-1, 295-6, 303, 304, 306-8, 309
Security Service Bill, 3R (23:01:89) 775, 789, 791-4
Questions
Blasphemy 137w
Breathalysers, Christmas 201-2w
Burglary, Derbyshire 275-6w
Civil defence, Conferences 776w
Courts, Parent & child 672-3w
Crime prevention, Lighting 590w
Crime victims, Industrial injuries 390w
Criminal Injuries Compensation Board, Administrative delays 350w, 590w
Cruelty to children, Research finance 671-2w
Driving offences, Prosecutions 673w
Driving offences, Speed limits 271w
Fire services 135w
Fire services, Equipment 670w
Fires, Arson 134-5w
Fly posting, Prosecutions 671w
Homosexuality, Young offenders 199-200w
Horse racing, Betting 507w
Juries, Peremptory challenge 673w
Prisoners, Confessions 393w

Patten, Mr John—continued*
Prisoners on remand, Prison population 393w
Prostitution, Venereal diseases 669-70w
Racial discrimination, Prosecutions 141w
Sexual offences, South Yorkshire 353w

Pawsey, Mr James
Debates etc.
Pre-school education (18:01:89) 414-7
Questions
Educational finance, Warwickshire 474w
Goods vehicles 232w
M1, Road traffic 572w
M1, Road traffic control 572w
M40, Road construction 385-6w
Mental health community care, Finance 224w
Pupil records 326-8w

Pay
418w
Building industry safety 147-8
Civil service agencies 19
Civil service recruitment 18
Family doctors 113w
Health service staff 298w
Hearing therapists 226w
Job start scheme 282w
NHS administration 802w
Nurses 297w
Passport Office 587-8w
Personal income 550w
Scottish health boards 777-8w
Teachers 192-3w
University teachers 192w
Water authorities 794w

Pay beds
Wales 13-4w

Pay differentials
623w

Pay incentives
Cabinet Office 329w
Central Computer & Telecommunications Agency 378w
Crown Prosecution Service 662w
Customs & Excise 379w
Dept of Education & Science 326w
Dept of Employment 550-1w
Dept of Energy 344w
Dept of Health 548-9w
Dept of Social Security 416w
Dept of the Environment 729w
Dept of Trade & Industry 471w
Dept of Transport 737w
Foreign & Commonwealth Office 373w
HMSO 378-9w
Home Office 509w
Land Registry Office 663w
Lord Chancellor 662-3w
Metropolitan Police 670w
Ministry of Agriculture 499w
Ministry of Defence 653w
Office of Arts & Libraries 354w
Property Services Agency 729w
Scottish health boards 64w
Training Agency 550-1w
Welsh Office 345w

Pay settlements
180w, 327, 1165
Economic situation 1165
Local government staff 457w
Midwives 530w
Nurses 529-30w
University teachers 477w

PAYE
Computers 789-90w

Payroll deduction scheme
Ministry of Defence 652-3w

Peace negotiations
Eritrea 473w
Middle East 151, 155-61, 576w

Peacock, Mrs Elizabeth
Questions
Abortion, Medical treatments 533w
Investment 681w
Transpennine 1174

Peak District national park
1024

Peak Park Joint Planning Board
Ministers' domestic visits 1023-4

Peckham
668-9w

Pedestrian areas
Lorries 97w

Pembroke
Residential care 481-2w

Pembury Hospital
223w

Pendry, Mr Tom
Questions
Football, Arrests 23-4w, 288w, 338w, 353-4w, 464w
Football, Identity cards 25w, 634w
Luton Town Football Club, Arrests 23-4w, 276w

Pension rights
Hospital ancillary staff 153-4

Pensioners
Clothing 49w
Composite tax rate system 785-6w
Disposable income 612-4w
Earnings rules 805w
Housing benefits 241w
Income tax 241w
Nottingham 47w, 414w
Reduced earnings allowance 243w
Social security benefits 241w

Pensions
867

Per capita costs
Bed & breakfast accommodation 639w
Hospital patients 796-7w

Percentage for Arts schemes
73w

Peremptory challenge
Juries 673w

Performance indicators
462w

Performance related pay
64w

Performance reviews
628w

Perinatal mortality
Parents 546-7w

Personal income
Families 80w
Fringe benefits 376w
Households 414w, 707-8w
Income tax 77-8w
Mortgage relief 783w
National insurance contributions 77-8w
Pay 550w
Tax burden 374w, 376w
Tax thresholds 80w, 376w

Personal injury compensation
Armed forces casualties 769-70w

Personal pensions
380-1w

Personal records
Scotland (24:01:89) 982-1001
Social work (24:01:89) 982-1001
Teachers 19w

Personal savings
358w, 375w, 690-1w
Tax thresholds 380w

Pest control
Rodents 319w

Pesticide residues
Vegetables 311w

Pesticides
318-9w
Fish farming 720w

Pesticides (Fees & Enforcement) Bill 1988/89
Debates etc.
1R (18:01:89) 347

Petroleum revenue tax
490w

PFA
see Professional Footballers' Association

Pharmacists
605w
Manpower 303w
Technicians 303w

"Phones on the Move"
(26:01:89) 1190-8

Photographs
Newspaper press 154w

Pield Heath Nurseries, Uxbridge
Planning appeals 641w

Pigmeat
Monetary compensatory amounts 427w

Pigs
Agricultural subsidies 404-5w, 806w
Animal feed 405w
Bankruptcy 403w
Scotland 403-5w

Pike, Mr Peter L
Debates etc.
EC Agriculture Council (25:01:89) 1031
Questions
Buses, Vandalism 82-3w
Freight transport 12
Government assistance to industry, Publicity 331-2
Health service staff, Vaccination 540w
Industrial investment, North West region 229w
Manufacturing industries, North West region 163w
Official engagements 127w, 485-6w
Sea pollution, Irish Sea 645w
Sheep premiums 156w
VAT exempted goods, Taxation 680w

Pindar project
Armed forces 278w

Pinegar, Arthur
115w

Pirate radio stations
Greater London 446w

Planning appeals
648w
Administrative delays 633w
Housing construction 204-6w
Pield Heath Nurseries Uxbridge 641w

Planning authorities
Archaeological sites 796w
Housing construction 148w

Planning inquiries
Chelsea Football Club 729w

Planning permission
Animal welfare 210w
Construction 461w
Demolition (25:01:89) 1042
Farm buildings 647w
Farm diversification scheme 477
Fire services 334w
Housing 1019
Law reform 636w
Parish councils 209w
Public inquiries 152w
Railway stations 21-2w
Tinsley Park (27:01:89) 1366-72
Trent Valley Garden Centre 211w
Waste disposal 150-1w

Planning Permission (Demolition of Houses) Bill 1988/89
Debates etc.
1R (25:01:89) 1042

Playgrounds
Accidents 186w

Plessey
Takeovers 336w, (20:01:89) 665-70

PLO
see Palestine Liberation Organisation

Plutonium
Nuclear safeguards 696w
Overseas trade 155-6w
Sellafield 696-7w

POA
see Prison Officers' Association

Points of order
Speaker's rulings & statements (18:01:89) 339, 341, 345, 346, 347, (19:01:89) 472, 587, (20:01:89) 591-664 passim, (23:01:89) 691, 759, (24:01:89) 874, 875, 956, (25:01:89) 1026

Polaris submarines
Radiation hazards 452w
Scotland 452w

Police
Airport security 28
Career structure 5w
Cumbria 5w
Essex 581-2w
Ethnic minorities 201w
Greater Manchester 7w, 393w
Heathrow Airport 589-90w
Manpower 4w

Police Authority for Northern Ireland
498w

Police civilians
4w, 6w, 391w

Police custody
Prisoners on remand 273w

Police Federation
see Police Federation of England & Wales

Police Federation of England & Wales
137w

Police firearms
Theft 395w

Police housing
Scotland 405w

Police national computer
Identity cards 675w

Police powers
Breathalysers 516w
Sanctuary 338
Tape recorded evidence 7w

Police raids
Leyton 671w

Police surgeons
Part-time employment 771w
Women 353w

Political activities
Territorial Army 769w

Political impartiality
Health service staff 115w

Political prisoners
Israel 128w

Pollution control
River Humber 1021
Sewage 454-5w

Pollution Inspectorate
see HM Inspectorate of Pollution

Pollution monitoring
Oil pollution 292-3w

Polytechnics
Student numbers 597w

Pontefract
Unemployment 50w
Youth unemployment 50w

Pontefract Health Authority
Hospital waiting lists 38w
NHS finance 38w

Population
Basingstoke & North Hampshire Health Authority 801w

Port Glasgow
710-2w
Dept of Social Security local offices 709-10w
Social Fund 710w
Social security claims 708-10w

Port of Tyne Bill (HL) 1987/88
Debates etc.
3R* (17:01:89) 137

Porter, Mr Barry
Questions
Caravan Sites Act 1968 461w

Porter, Mr David
Questions
Self-employed, Part-time employment 688w
White fish, Fishing quotas 316-7w

Portillo, Mr Michael, Minister for Public Transport*
Debates etc.
Avon Light Rail Transit Bill (HL), 2R (24:01:89) 963-4, 965
BREL (1988), Ministerial statements (17:01:89) 162-72
Questions
Barnstaple-Exeter railway, Government grants 95w
Boats, Accidents 189-90w
Borough junction 292w
British Rail 86w
British Rail, Investment 92w
British Transport Police 293w
Bus services, Competition 92w
Bus services, Publicity 571w
Buses, Vandalism 82-3w
Central London Rail Study 95w, 385w
Channel tunnel 84-5w
Channel tunnel, Construction 6
Channel tunnel, Economic regions 84w
Channel tunnel, King's Cross 7
Channel tunnel, Liverpool 83-4w, 386w
Channel tunnel, North West region 6-7, 84w
Channel tunnel, Railway freight transport 7-8, 85w
Channel tunnel, Railway network 7, 83w, 102w, 573w, 737w
Channel tunnel, Railway stations 101-2w, 293w, 763w
Channel tunnel, Railway transport 84w
Chiltern line, Capital investment 121w
Construction, VAT 737-8w
Docklands Light Railway, Expenditure 573w
Ferries, Irish Sea 120w, 190w, 761w
Inter-city rail transport, Passengers 86w
International Maritime Organisation, Shipping safety 389w
King's Cross, Fire services 738w
King's Cross Fire Inquiry, Expenditure 103-4w
London Regional Transport, Rates & rating 739-40w
London Regional Transport, Safety 96w
London Underground, Fires 104w
London Underground, Radio 102w
London Underground, Safety measures 102w
Network SouthEast, Railway travel 86w
Oil pollution, English Channel 292w
Oil pollution, Pollution monitoring 292-3w
Ports 90w
Public expenditure, Dept of Transport 574-5w
Railway accidents 89w
Railway accidents, Clapham Junction 98w
Railway closures 91w, 571-2w, 735w
Railway closures, Bus services 122-3w
Railway electrification, Midland main railway line 737w

Portillo, Mr Michael—continued*
Railway Inspectorate 99w
Railway network, EC countries 122w
Railway network, Heathrow Airport 86-7w
Railway network, Investment 738w
Railway network, Manchester Airport 102w
Railway safety 90w
Railway stations 293w
Railway travel 88w
Railway travel, Dover 735-6w
Railway travel, Gloucester 102w
Ridley, Tony, Resignations 737w
River Thames, Tunnels 122w
River Thames, Water transport 122w
Sea navigation, Radio engineering 386w
Settle-Carlisle railway, Railway closures 102w
Shipping accidents, Battersea bridge 573w
Stansted Airport, Noise control 191w
Submarines, Shipping accidents 123w
Taxis, Wheelchairs 10-1
Tees & Hartlepool Port Authority, Ministers' domestic visits 82w
Trains, Clapham Junction 92w
Transport, NATO 121w
Transport infrastructure, EC grants & loans 294-5w
Transport of radioactive materials, Railway transport 468-9w
Urban programme, Dept of Transport 469w
West coast railway line, Investment 89-90w
West London line, Railway transport 121-2w

Ports
90w
Accidents 624w
Industrial health & safety 623-4w
Tilbury 623-4w
Waste disposal 649w

Post codes
Households 412w

Post Office
16w, 566w
Employment discrimination 221w
Industrial relations 15w
Postal services 16w

Post Office Counters
17w, 234w
Privatisation 566w

Post offices
17w

Postage stamps
VAT 81w

Postal services
16w
Industrial disputes 106w
Monopolies 105-6w
Post Office 16w

Potato Marketing Board
315w, 361w
Costs 361w
Wales 433w

Poultry
309w
Animal breeding 719w
Animal feed 314-5w
Salmonella 54w, 110-1w, 308-9w, 322-4w, 428w, 702-3w, 720-1w
Scotland 719-21w

Poultry meat
Listeria monocytogenes 319-20w

Poverty
870
Elderly (18:01:89) 348-50
Greater Manchester (19:01:89) 581-90

Powell, Mr Ray
Questions
Water supply industry, Privatisation 672

Powell, Mr William
Debates etc.
Security Service Bill, Com (16:01:89) 56-9
Questions
Foreign companies in UK 231w, 669w
Government assistance to industry, Corby 331
Housing benefits, Corby 613-4w
Road works, Greater London 734-5w
Unemployment 166w
Unemployment, Economic regions 679w

Pregnancy
Health services 545-6w

Pre-school education
265w
Departmental responsibilities 1w
Opposition days (18:01:89) 391-434
Scotland 592-3w

Prescott, Mr John
Questions
Airport security, Airport staff 29
British Rail, Public service obligation grant 10, 119-20w
Heathrow Airport, Airport security 325w
Road tolls, Motorways 13

Press advertising
Community charges register 347w

Press releases
Speaker's rulings & statements (26:01:89) 1204

Preston, Peter
11w, 368-9w

Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1984
Questions
140-2w

Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Bill 1988/89
Debates etc.
Allocation of time motion (23:01:89) 692-742

Price, Sir David
Debates etc.
BREL (1988), Privatisation (17:01:89) 170
Rate support grants (19:01:89) 516-8
Questions
Cabotage, Shipping 704w
Glandular fever, Research 476w
Government contracts, Competition 374-5w
Labour costs, Manufacturing industries 682w

Price increases
Milk 466-7

Price Waterhouse
459w

Prices
Cattle 311w
Drugs 714w, 802w
Food 60w
Ordnance Survey 141w

Primarolo, Ms Dawn
Debates etc.
Avon Light Rail Transit Bill (HL), Members' voting behaviour (24:01:89) 874
Avon Light Rail Transit Bill (HL), 2R (24:01:89) 954-63, 975
By election writs, Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 592
Protection of Privacy Bill, 2R (27:01:89) 1312-5
Questions
Council house sales, Torbay 208w
Local government expenditure, Local Government Act 1972 636w

Primary health care
Patient-professional relationship 412w

Prime Minister
House of Commons questions 329w
Interviews 367w
Ministerial policy advisers 1-2w

Prime Minister's Office
see Prime Minister

Prime Minister's questions
Speaker's rulings & statements (19:01:89) 478, 480, (24:01:89) 867

Prison accommodation
AIDS 3w
Albany Prison 272w
Banstead 5w

Prison hospitals
Food 772w
Hospital patients 773w
Prison visitors 274-6w
Wormwood Scrubs 774w

Prison medical services
Psychiatry 580-1w

Prison Officers' Association
579w

Prison population
AIDS 3w
Prisoners on remand 393w

Prison rules
518w

Prison staff
Craft industries 274w
Ethnic minorities 201w, 390w
Greater London 274w
Race relations 507-8w, 580w

Prison visitors
Prison hospitals 274-6w
Race relations 390w, 579w

Prisoners
Body belts 580-1w
Childbirth 517w
Community charge 595w
Confessions 393w
Ethnic monitoring 580w
Mothers 517w
Race relations 579w
Segregation of prisoners 200-1w, 770-1w
Women 516-7w, 675w

Prisoners of war
Japan 660-1w

Prisoners on remand
Members' correspondence 137w
Police custody 273w
Prison population 393w

Prisoners' release
Mentally disturbed offenders 3w
Northern Ireland 599-600w

Prisons
Building repairs 274w
Construction 136w, 271-2w
Construction costs 348-9w
Environmental health 773w
Environmental health officers 774w
Ethnic monitoring 579w
Food hygiene 771-3w
Food poisoning 773w
Greater London 274w
Modernisation 272w
Mother & baby units 517w
Race relations 579-80w

Privacy
Disclosure of information (27:01:89) 1299-363

Private education
School population 70-2w, 596w
Scotland 65-72w, 80w
Tax allowances 80w, 380w

Private health services
Abortion 532-3w
Calderdale 300w
Hospital consultants 14w
Nursing homes 13w

Private hospitals
Crewe Health Authority (17:01:89) 310-6
Emergencies 714-5w
Health Care International 217-8w
Hospital beds 14w

Private investment
Inner city areas 651w
Simplified planning zones 304w

Private Members' Bills
Speaker's rulings & statements (25:01:89) 1042, 1044, (27:01:89) 1364

Private Members' motions
(26:01:89) 1205

Private rented housing
207w, 1009-10
Landlord & tenant 640w

Private sector
Inner city areas 230w
Screening 34-5w

Private sector housing
Housing starts 304w

Privately owned mines
155w

Privatisation
British Steel Corporation 567w
Bus services 12w
Electricity supply industry 155w, 695w, 698w
Local government services 547w
Middlesbrough Borough Council 1019-20
National Engineering Laboratory 766w
Post Office Counters 566w
Short Brothers 676w
Skills Training Agency 185-6w
Water supply industry 22-3w, 291w, 433w, 672-4, 679, 728w

Privy Council Office
Cash limits 698-9w

Privy councillors
(16:01:89) 32-118

PRO
see Public Record Office

Procurators fiscal
490w, 554w

Production costs
Management Bulletin 225w

Productivity
179w, 324
Manufacturing industries 231w

Professional Footballers' Association
464w

Profit sharing 479
Income tax 79w

Profitability
Manufacturing industries 323-4

Property development
Hotels 184w
Woolwich Arsenal 556w

Property Services Agency
Landlords 650w
Pay incentives 729w
Rents 650w
Tenancy agreements 650w

Property transfer
Ayrshire & Arran Health Board 61w
Capital gains tax 377w
County Hall 457w, 795w
Income 80-2w

Property transfer—continued
Mental hospitals 548w
NHS 290w, 432w, 719w
Oswestry Hospital 356w
Public sector housing 1015-6

Prosecutions
Abortion 368w
Birth registration 368w
Clough, Brian 368w
Company investigations 565w
Driving offences 673w
Fly posting 671w
Guardian 11w, 368-9w
Hantergantick quarry 554w
Imported Food Regulations 1984 550w
Industrial health & safety 553-5w, 628-9w
Infant Life (Preservation) Act 1929 328w, 684
Minimum wage 180-1w
Monofilament gill nets 159w
Obscene Publications Act 1959 154w
Racial discrimination 141w

Prostitution
Venereal diseases 669-70w

Protection of Privacy Bill 1988/89
Debates etc.
(27:01:89) 1299-363

Protectionism
Semiconductor devices 326

Provisional Sinn Fein
see Sinn Fein

PSA
see Property Services Agency

Psychiatry
Prison medical services 580-1w

Public access
361w

Public Accounts Commission
House of Commons questions 256w

Public appointments
Ayrshire & Arran Health Board 162w
British Waterways Board 732w
Charity Commission 394w
Cumbernauld Development Corporation 408-9w
Dept of the Environment 21w
Dept of Trade & Industry 565w
European Commission 125w, 704-5w
Former Members 72-3w
Independent Broadcasting Authority 479, 1174-5
Magistrates 369w
National parks 1023-4
National Rivers Authority Advisory Committee 643w
Scottish health boards 215-8w, 718-9w
Wakefield Health Authority 37w, 716w
Water Space Amenity Commission 345w

Public bodies
Local authorities 1014-5
Ministry of Agriculture 427w

Public buildings
Radon gas 455w

Public contracts
EC internal trade 334
Northern Ireland 396w

Public expenditure
577w, 1166
Dept of Education & Science 600w
Dept of Energy 621w
Dept of Health 608w
Dept of Transport 574-5w
National income 375w, 683w
Northern Ireland 395w
Scotland 400w, 596w
Transport infrastructure 1167

"Public Expenditure White Paper"
258w

Public footpaths
Rhizomania disease 361w

Public Health Laboratory Service
Cook-chill catering 115w

Public inquiries
M3-M27 link 468w
Planning permission 152w
Severn bridge 431w

Public libraries
Fees & charges 154w

Public order policing
Football 276w, 671-2w

Public petitions
Sunday trading (19:01:89) 580

Public Record Office
663w

Public records
Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament 663w
Nuclear power 753w
Treaties 660w

Public Records Act 1958
Questions
753w

Public Records Act 1967
Questions
753w

Public relations
Civil service 20
Dept of Employment 809w
Government contracts 215w

Public sector assets
Water authorities 728w

Public sector borrowing requirement
682w, 1165-7

Public sector housing
1010
Empty housing 207w
Housing construction 1009
Housing improvement 20w
New towns 305w
Property transfer 1015-6
Telford Development Corporation 1015-6

Public sector housing sales
New towns development corporations 409w

Public service obligation grant
British Rail 10, 119-20w

Public service vehicles
Motor vehicle testing 389w

Public utilities
Road works 123w, 292w, 736-7w

Public Utilities Street Works Act 1950 Review
123w, 292w, 736-7w

Public Utility Transfers & Water Charges Act 1988
Questions
Water charges 303w

Publicity
Bus services 571w
Drinking & driving 91w
Drug abuse 546w
EC internal trade 333-4, 668w
Government assistance to industry 331-2
Heart diseases 544-5w
Passports 587w
Social Fund 117-8w
Water authorities 462w

Publishing
Tourism Review Committee 284w

Pulford-Gresford bypass
Costs 431w
Road construction 665-6w

Pupil records
326-8w

Pupil-teacher ratios
Wales 480-2w

Purchase grants
Museums & galleries 15

Quality control
Television engineering 591-2w

Quarrying
Buckinghamshire (24:01:89) 1002-8

Quin, Ms Joyce
Debates etc.
EC Agriculture Council (25:01:89) 1032-3
Questions
Chlorofluorocarbons 639w
Civil service unions 52w
Higher education admission, Student numbers 759-60w
Manufacturing industries, Manpower 629-30w
Nitrates, Agricultural land 473
Nurses, Career structure 530w
Pay differentials 623w
Public expenditure 1166
West Germany, Ministers 258w

Racal Decca Marine Navigation
386w

Race relations
Prison staff 507-8w, 580w
Prison visitors 390w, 579w
Prisoners 579w
Prisons 579-80w

"Race Relations in Prison"
580w

Racial discrimination
Prosecutions 141w

Radiation hazards
Nuclear submarines 452w
Polaris submarines 452w

Radiation Incident Monitoring Network
146-7w

Radio
673-4w
London Underground 102w

Radio broadcasting licences
Local radio 6w

Radio engineering
Glengarry forest 336w
Sea navigation 386w

Radio frequencies
566w

Radio Investigation Service
446w

Radioactive waste disposal
150w, 459w
Liverpool Bay 461w
Nuclear Industry Radioactive Waste Executive 642w
Nuclear submarines 279-80w, 556-7w
South Yorkshire 25w
Yorkshire & Humberside 731-2w

Radioactive wastes
Air force bases 655w

Radioactivity
Disclosure of information 347w
Holy Loch 407w

Radiotherapy
Maidstone Hospital 223w
Royal Devon & Exeter Hospital 116w, 356w, 410-1w

Radon gas
Public buildings 455w

RAF Biggin Hill
Land acquisition 555w

RAF Cranwell
555w
Armed forces recruitment 555w

RAF West Drayton
Low flying 656w

Raffan, Mr Keith
Questions
Cancer, North Wales 678
NHS finance, Wales 778-80w
Training & enterprise councils, Wales 432w
Water supply industry, Privatisation 673

Railway accidents
89w
Clapham Junction 98w

Railway closures
91w, 571-2w, 735w
Bus services 122-3w
Road safety 13-4
Scotland 9-10
Settle-Carlisle railway 102w

Railway electrification
Midland main railway line 737w

Railway freight transport
Channel tunnel 7-9, 85w

Railway Inspectorate
99w

Railway network
Channel tunnel 7, 83w, 102w, 570w, 573w, 737w
Dornoch firth 159w
EC countries 122w
Essex 8-9
Heathrow Airport 86-7w
Investment 738w
Manchester Airport 102w

Railway safety
90w
Greater London 292w
Railway signals 85w

Railway signals
121w
Railway safety 85w

Railway stations
293w
Channel tunnel 22w, 101-2w, 293w, 763w
Planning permission 21-2w

Railway timetables
British Rail 9

Railway transport
Channel tunnel 84w, 674
Industry 332
Transport of radioactive materials 468-9w
Wales 674
West London line 121-2w

Railway travel
88w
Bristol 675
British Rail 1-2, 4, 9-10
Cardiff 674
Dover 735-6w
Gloucester 102w
Network SouthEast 85-6w

Rain forests
869
Brazil 271w
Environment protection (25:01:89) 1042
Overseas aid 11w

Raison, Rt Hon Timothy
Debates etc.
Child benefit (18:01:89) 362
Pre-school education (18:01:89) 393, 406-11, 416
Questions
Disposable income 380w
Mendis, Viraj, Arrests 340

Randall, Mr Stuart
Debates etc.
Security Service Bill, Com (16:01:89) 106, 110-3, (17:01:89) 227-8
Security Service Bill, 3R (23:01:89) 787-91

Rapid transit systems
Avon (24:01:89) 947-81

Rate increases
306w
Domestic rates 644w

Rate limitation
Basildon District Council 642-3w

Rate precepts
305w, 739-40w

Rate rebates
Isle of Dogs enterprise zone 459w

Rate support grants
(19:01:89) 497-579, 639w
Scotland 491w
Wales 436-40w

Rateable value
Northern Ireland 498-9w

Rates & rating
Armed forces housing 452-4w
Derbyshire County Council 1013-4
Ealing 631w
Fire services 305w
Greater London 733-4w
Hammersmith & Fulham 1012-3
Kensington & Chelsea 1012-3
London Regional Transport 739-40w
Nationalised industries 150w
Nurses 460w, 631w, 1012-3
Revenue support grant 25w
South East region 733-4w
Streatham 460w
University finance 267w

Rating revaluations
Equipment 795-6w
Non-domestic rates 202w

Reagan, Ronald 870

Records of achievement
326-8w
Educational finance 133-4w

Records of Achievement National Steering Committee
326-8w

Recycling
566w
Environment protection (25:01:89) 1042
Minister for the Civil Service 53w

Redmond, Mr Martin
Debates etc.
Avon Light Rail Transit Bill (HL), 2R (24:01:89) 956, 972, 977-9
City of London (Spitalfields Market) Bill, 3R (24:01:89) 942-5
Questions
Air safety 385w
Archaeological sites 454w
Archaeological sites, Planning authorities 796w
Armed forces, Lockerbie 447w
Armed forces training, Military aid to civil community 447w
Art works, Conservation 77w
Borough Junction 292w
Capital gains tax, Building land 78-9w
EC internal trade, Departmental publications 105w
Food supply, NATO 54w
Health service staff, Managers 114w
Housing, Discrimination 396w
Industrial democracy, Mergers 185w
Leptospirosis 295-6w
M1 120w
Military aid to civil community, Emergency planning 447w
Military aid to civil community, Food supply 447w
Nurses, Career structure 605w
Pensioners, Earnings rules 805w
Privately owned mines 155w
Radiation Incident Monitoring Network 146-7w

Redmond, Mr Martin—continued
Radon gas, Public buildings 455w
Rivers, Yorkshire & Humberside 455w
Road construction, Local authorities 189w
Road transport, Cabotage 121w
Sewage, Government grants 347w
Sewage, Pollution control 454-5w
Sewage, South Yorkshire 346w
Sexual offences, South Yorkshire 353w
Social Fund, Community care 242w
Social Fund, Publicity 117-8w
Social security abuse, Doncaster 242w
Summertime 273w
Transport, NATO 121w
Venereal diseases, Children 224w
Waste disposal, South Yorkshire 148w

Reduced earnings allowance
242-3w
Invalidity benefits 243w
Pensioners 243w

Redundancy
Coal mining 143
London Docklands 458w
Natural Environment Research Council 381w
Packaging industry 309w
Small businesses 142

Redwood, Mr John
Debates etc.
BREL (1988), Privatisation (17:01:89) 169-70
Oral question time point of order (19:01:89) 472
Questions
Capital investment 680-1w
Food subsidies 471-2
Income tax, Tax allowances 78w
Income tax, Tax rates & bands 78w
Manufacturing industries, Foreign investment in UK 325
Personal income, Income tax 77-8w
Teachers, Superannuation Act 1972 475w
University teachers, Pay settlements 477w
Vocational education, Educational qualifications 181w

Rees, Rt Hon Merlyn
Debates etc.
Official Secrets Bill, Com (25:01:89) 1100, 1117-20
Protection of Privacy Bill, 2R (27:01:89) 1349
Security Service Bill, Com (16:01:89) 50, 51, 52, 86-7
Security Service Bill, 3R (23:01:89) 765-9, 772
Questions
Airport security, Police 28

Refugees
Burma 195w
Thailand 195w

Reg(EEC)2052/88
106-7w

Reg(EEC)3626/82
153w, 503w

Reg(EEC)3929/86
336-7w

Regional aid
234w, 331
Scotland 568-70w
Wales 435w, 568-70w

Regional arts associations
75w

Regional crime squads
West Midlands (25:01:89) 1155-60

Regional development grants
Expenditure 445-6w
Scotland 408w

Regional enterprise grants
Expenditure 444-5w
Wales 434-5w

Regional health authorities
NHS Review 856-8

Regional planning & development
Local authority powers 23w

Regional selective assistance
237-8w, 435w, 568-70w
Expenditure 445-6w
Scotland 407-8w

Registrar General
32-3w

Reid, Dr John
Debates etc.
Airport security, Standing Order No 20 applications (26:01:89) 1199-200
Housing support grants, Scotland (23:01:89) 804, 810, 822-7, 832
Questions
Balance of trade 686-7w
British Rail 86w
Interest rates, Industry 203w
Nurses, Career structure 530w

Relocation of employees
Eastern Health & Social Services Board 494w
London Docklands 457w, 459w

Remote sensing
765w

Renault
Subsidies 766w

Rent arrears
Brent 208-9w
Council house rents 210w
Scotland 219w, 722-6w

Rent assessment committees
1022

Rent control
1022

Rent increases
1023
Council house rents 306w

Rent officers
1022-3

Renton, Mr Tim, Minister of State at the Home Office
Debates etc.
Protection of Privacy Bill, 2R (27:01:89) 1325, 1340-50
Questions
Barbouti, Ishan 351-2w
Barbouti, Ishan, Libyan Arab Republic 352w
Barbouti, Ishan, West Germany 352w
British citizenship, Immigration rules 352w
Broadcasting, International cooperation 393w
Channel Five, Expenditure 591w
Channel Five, Investment 591w
Channel Five, Television engineering 591w
Entry clearances, Administrative delays 675w
Immigrant detainees, Nigeria 274w
Immigration appeals 392w
Immigration applications, Genetics 389w
Immigration rules, Members' correspondence 6w
Independent Television Commission, Illegal broadcasting 276w
Landing cards 352w
Local radio, Radio broadcasting licences 6w
Mendis, Viraj, Costs 674w
Mendis, Viraj, Deportation 516w, 674w
Mendis, Viraj, Legal costs 391w
Mete, Ayten, Immigration controls 351w
Passport Office, Belfast 135-6w
Passport Office, Civil service manpower 583-6w
Passport Office, Overtime 588-90w
Passport Office, Pay 587-8w
Passport Office, Temporary staff 585-7w

Renton, Mr Tim—continued
Passports 582-5w
Passports, Administrative delays 583-7w
Passports, Publicity 587w
Passports, Telephone services 586w, 588w
Radio 673-4w
Satellite broadcasting, Television reception 201w
Sunday trading 273w
Television engineering, Commercial television 391w
Television engineering, Finance 591w
Television engineering, Land ownership & tenure 592w
Television engineering, Quality control 591-2w
Television engineering, Standards specifications 591w
Television licences, Fees & charges 671w
Television reception, Counterfeit manufacturing 590w
Terrorism, Broadcasting controls 138-9w
Terrorism, Immigration controls 774-5w
United Kingdom Immigrants' Advisory Service, Scotland 7w
Wallenberg, Raoul, Departmental correspondence 773w

Rents
Housing benefits 360w
Property Services Agency 650w
Scotland 595w

Repairs & maintenance
Alexander Fleming House 304w
HMS Resolution 132w
Saltash tunnel 293w

Repossession orders
Mortgage defaulters 641w

Republic of Ireland
AIDS 860
Aliens 329-30w
Attorney-General 367-8w
British residents abroad 329-30w
Meat 429w, 470-1, 701-2w
Witnesses 194w, 663w

Rescue services
450-1w

Research
Air transport 471-2w
Arms control 654w
Food microbiology 307w
Glandular fever 476w
Greenhouse effect 381-2w
Hares 603w
Infant mortality 34w
Social security reform 804-5w
Tyre tread depths 294w

Research finance
Agricultural & Food Research Council 19-20w
Agricultural research 312w, 807-8w
Alternative energy 698w
Bovine tuberculosis 215w
Climate 638w
Cruelty to children 671-2w
Environment 482w, 635w
Horticulture 307w
Infant mortality 145w
Natural Environment Research Council 17-8w
Thalassaemia 357w
Veterinary services 61w

Residential care
413w
Elderly 244-5w, 247-52w, 481-2w
North West region 42w
Pembroke 481-2w

Residential Care Services Working Party
413w

Resignations
Ridley, Tony 737w

Resource management initiative
Resource management initiative—continued
Hospitals 542w

Restart programme
143-4
Employment 144
Hard core unemployed 624w
Interviews 186-8w
North West region 624-6w
Social security benefits disqualification 624-6w

Restrictive trade practices
321-2
Chemists' shops 321-2
Estate agents 322
Legal profession 322

Retail price index
183w, 622w
Mortgage interest rates 1169

Retail Prices Index Advisory Committee
183w

Retail trade
Cook-chill catering 798w
Human organs 713-4w
Rural areas 220w
Scotland 220w
Untreated milk 316w

Retirement
Clergy 486-7w

Retirement age
524w
Costs 524w, 706w
Retirement pensions 246w

Retirement pensions
523w
Administrative delays 257-8w
Age 523-4w
Retirement age 246w

Revenue support grant
Rates & rating 25w
Scotland 287w

Rhizomania disease
Public footpaths 361w

Richardson, Ms Jo
Questions
Child care 44w
Child care, Cabinet Office 705w
Child care, Child safety 43w
Child care, Dept of Education & Science 761w
Child care, Dept of Employment 742w
Child care, Dept of Energy 803-4w
Child care, Dept of Trade & Industry 765-6w
Child care, Equal Opportunities Commission 44w
Child care, Foreign & Commonwealth Office 792w
Child care, Ministry of Agriculture 700w
Child care, Office of Arts & Libraries 666-7w

Richmond Yorks
By election writs (20:01:89) 591-664

Riddick, Mr Graham
Questions
Bradford University, University finance 382w
British Coal Corporation, Investment 567-8w
Composite tax rate system, Pensioners 785-6w
Composite tax rate system, Tax yields 692w
Composite tax rate system, Taxpayers 691-2w
Confederation of British Industry 235w
Economic growth 375-6w
Farm diversification scheme, Departmental publications 315w
Football, Public order policing 671-2w
Industrial relations 181w
Riddick, Mr Graham—continued
Motorcycles, Casualties 5-6
National Savings, Composite tax rate system 692w
NHS administration 531-2w
Official engagements 705-6w
Water supply, Standards enforcement 632w

Riders of Equine Animals (Wearing of Protective Headgear) Bill 1988/89
Debates etc.
2R order read (27:01:89) 1364

Ridley, Rt Hon Nicholas, Secretary of State for the Environment
Questions
Chlorofluorocarbons 1017-8
Chlorofluorocarbons, Air pollution control 1016-7
Community charge 460w, 1013-4
Community charge, Mentally ill 1013
Community charge, Norfolk 631w
Community charges register 460w
Community charges register, Press advertising 347w
Dept of the Environment, Public appointments 21w
Environment protection, Expenditure 732w
Housing, "East Thames-side Housing Study Report" 1019
Housing, Planning permission 1019
Local government finance, Local government revenue 25w
Lowermoor water treatment works, Water pollution 210-1w, 306w
Non-departmental public bodies, Dept of the Environment 730-1w
Pay incentives, Dept of the Environment 729w
Pay incentives, Property Services Agency 729w
Rates & rating, Derbyshire County Council 1013-4
Rates & rating, Nurses 1012-3
Sherwood forest 1018
Torbay Borough Council, Council house sales 631w
Tree conservation 732w
Urban development corporations 630w
Waste disposal, Law reform 506-7w
Water authorities, Publicity 462w
Water supply industry, Television advertising 348w
"You & the Community Charge" 348w

Ridley, Tony
Resignations 737w

Rifkind, Rt Hon Malcolm, Secretary of State for Scotland
Questions
Administration of justice, Glasgow 408w
Air accidents, Lockerbie 161-2w
Former Members, Public appointments 72-3w
House of Commons questions, Scottish Office 289w
Ministerial policy advisers, Scottish Office 62-3w
Public relations, Government contracts 215w
Scottish courts, Glasgow 285-6w
Scottish Office, Cash limits 725-6w

Right to buy
Leeds 208w

RIMNET
see Radiation Incident Monitoring Network

RIS
see Radio Investigation Service

River Humber
Pollution control 1021

River pollution
455w, 638w, 1021-2
Nitrates 472-3
Waste disposal 318w

River pollution—continued*
Yorkshire Water Authority 1021

River Severn
671
Toll bridges 671

River Thames
573w
Tunnels 122w
Water transport 122w

Rivers
Yorkshire & Humberside 455w

RNAD Trecwn
197w

Road accidents
A1 293-4w
Christmas 515-6w
Death 90w
Dept of Social Security 417-8w
Donaghadee 497-8w
Motorways 93w
Newtownards 334w
Severn bridge 762w
Trailers 94w
Tyre tread depths 294w

Road construction
Administrative delays 97w
Burley-in-Wharfedale 123w
Bypasses 96w
Cardigan bypass 664w
Disley bypass 571w
EC grants & loans 563w
Local authorities 189w
M3 468w
M4 431w
M40 385-6w
M42 97-8w
Motorways 87w
Nature conservation 97w
Pulford-Gresford bypass 665-6w
Wales 563w
Watermead country park 152-3w

Road freight transport
Motor vehicle safety 673w
Motorways 11

Road safety
98w
A1 89w
Children 98w
Railway closures 13-4
Urban areas 98w

Road safety barriers
Motorways 289w
Scotland 289w

Road safety education
Courier services 13-4

Road signs
Bridges 573w
Motorways 189w, 561w
Rural areas 83w

Road tolls
12
Dartford tunnel 763w
Motorways 12-3
Severn bridge 467w

Road traffic
Costs 93w
Greater London 89w, 92w
M1 572w
South East region 93-4w
Urban areas 96w

Road traffic control
Equipment 89w
M1 82w, 572w
Motorways 95w, 120w

Road Traffic Regulation (Parking) Bill 1988/89
Debates etc.
2R* (27:01:89) 1363

Road transport
Cabotage 121w

Road Vehicle (Construction & Use Regulations 1986)
Questions
673w

Road works
A12 3-4
A120 4
A470 679
Britannia bridge 325w
Eaglesham moor road 717w
Greater London 734-5w
Jackton bridge 717w
Motorways 87-8w
Public utilities 123w, 292w, 736-7w
South West region 4-5

Roads
95w
East Anglia 3-4
Greater London 83w
Northern region 95-6w

Roberts, Mr Allan
Debates etc.
Private notice question point of order (18:01:89) 339
Questions
Channel tunnel, Liverpool 386w
Ministers, Shareholders 261w
Nitrogen dioxide, Air pollution monitoring 503-4w
Waste disposal 1012
Waste disposal, Transport of hazardous materials 504w

Roberts, Mr Wyn, Minister of State for Wales
Questions
A470, Road works 679
Books, Anniversaries 430w
Bus services, Privatisation 12w
Cardigan bypass, Road construction 664w
Eggs, Agricultural production 431w
Eggs, Compensation 431w
Eggs, Salmonella 676
Eggs, Wales 676
Exhaust emissions, Wales 483-4w
M4, Road construction 431w
Motorways, Road signs 561w
Mudiad Ysgolion Meithrin, Government grants 431w
National Museum of Wales 782w
Pulford-Gresford bypass, Costs 431w
Pulford-Gresford bypass, Road construction 665-6w
Pupil-teacher ratios, Wales 480-2w
Road construction, EC grants & loans 563w
Severn bridge, Public inquiries 431w
Special education, Wales 479-80w
Training & enterprise councils, Wales 432w
Water supply industry, Privatisation 679
Welsh language, Curriculum 346w, 431-2w
Welsh language, Schools 780-2w
Welsh language, Teachers 345-6w, 781-2w
Welsh Office, "Our Changing Schools" 664w

Robertson, Mr George
Questions
Barbouti, Ishan 351-2w
Barbouti, Ishan, Export controls 359w
Barbouti, Ishan, Libyan Arab Republic 352w
Barbouti, Ishan, West Germany 352w
USSR, Human rights 152

Robinson, Mr Peter
Debates etc.
Elected Authorities (Northern Ireland) Bill, Rep & 3R (26:01:89) 1232, 1235-8

Rodents
Pest control 319w

Roe, Mrs Marion
Debates etc.
Child benefit (18:01:89) 369-72
Horticulture, Glasshouse growers (16:01:89) 129-33

Roe, Mrs Marion—continued*
Questions
Air transport, EC action 86w
Cellular phones, Licensing 231w
Investment 681w

Rogers, Mr Allan
Debates etc.
Security Service Bill, Com (16:01:89) 82
Questions
Interest rates, Small businesses 689w
Sheep 476

Rolls-Royce Aeroengines
318-9
Exports 667-8w

Rooker, Mr Jeff
Debates etc.
Food, Consumer protection (24:01:89) 881
Official Secrets Bill, Com (25:01:89) 1135
Questions
Airport security 27
Building industry safety, Demolition 252-3w
Census of population, Parliamentary constituencies 41-2w
Community charges register 632w
Cyclotron Trust, Government grants 227w
Derelict land grants, Birmingham 147w
Disasters, Heads of state 3w
House of Fraser, Company investigations 239-40w, 682-3
Official engagements 705-6w
Operating theatres 864
Police surgeons, Part-time employment 771w
Ports 90w
Prime Minister, Interviews 367w
Road accidents, Dept of Social Security 417-8w
Salmonella, Eggs 409w
Tax yields 375w
Unemployment, Parliamentary constituencies 163w
Water supply industry, Privatisation 22-3w
Water treatment, Chemicals 26w

Ross, Mr Ernie
Questions
Firearms certificates, Northern Ireland 602-3w
Middle East, Peace negotiations 157

Ross, Mr William
Debates etc.
EC Agriculture Council (25:01:89) 1031-2
Elected Authorities (Northern Ireland) Bill, Rep & 3R (26:01:89) 1216-9, 1224, 1227, 1238, 1240-3, 1245-6, 1248-9, 1263-5, 1282-4
Industrial development, Northern Ireland (26:01:89) 1293
Prime Minister's questions, House of Commons procedure (19:01:89) 496
Questions
Agricultural land, Northern Ireland 144-6w
Boeing 757, Air safety 469w
Dogs, Infectious diseases 677w
Domestic rates, Northern Ireland 499w
Farm incomes, Northern Ireland 222-3w
Farmers, Bank loans 144w
Firearms, Amnesties 510-5w
Firearms, Northern Ireland 396w
Firearms certificates 770w
Food hygiene, Northern Ireland 471
Rateable value, Northern Ireland 498-9w

Rosyth area public safety scheme
280w

Rosyth dockyard
280w
Emergency planning 280w, 556w
Nuclear safety 279w

Rowe, Mr Andrew
Questions
Civil service, Public relations 20
Manufacturing industries, Industrial production 229-30w

Rowe, Mr Andrew—continued*
NHS, Conditions of employment 529w
Small Firms Service 146

Rowlands, Mr Ted
Questions
Mobility allowance, Social security claims 119w
NHS Review 858-9
Water supply disconnections 150w
Water supply disconnections, Codes of practice 463w
Water supply disconnections, Wales 145w, 673

Rowntree
466

Royal Arsenal Sports & Recreational Association
East London river crossing 277-8w

Royal College of Midwives
546w

Royal Devon & Exeter Hospital
Radiotherapy 116w, 356w, 410-1w

Royal docks
729w

Royal National Orthopaedic Hospital
34w
Accident & emergency departments 863

Royal Opera House
354w

Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals
463w
Deadline 462w

Royal Society for the Protection of Birds
463w

Royal Ulster Constabulary
396w, 602-3w
Disciplinary proceedings 498w
Royal Victoria Hospital, Belfast 495-6w

Royal Victoria Hospital, Belfast
496-7w
Building alterations 494-6w
Eastern Health & Social Services Board 492-4w
Hospital admissions 494w
Hospital beds 493-4w
Hospital closures 493w
Royal Ulster Constabulary 495-6w
Security 495-6w

Royal Welsh Agricultural Society
Government grants 664w

Royal yacht
Operating costs 131w

Royalties
Oil revenues 490w

RSPB
see Royal Society for the Protection of Birds

RSPCA
see Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals

RUC
see Royal Ulster Constabulary

Ruddock, Mrs Joan
Questions
Ambulance services, Greater London 606-7w
London Docklands, Government grants 647w
Nuclear weapons, Modernisation 128-9w
Road traffic, South East region 93-4w
Transport of radioactive materials, Air freight transport 468w
Transport of radioactive materials, EC action 468w

Ruddock, Mrs Joan—continued*
Transport of radioactive materials, Railway transport 468-9w

Rugby
Breathalysers 138w, 392w

Rumbold, Mrs Angela, Minister of State for Education and Science*
Debates etc.
Pre-school education (18:01:89) 427-30
School Curriculum Development Committee & Secondary Examinations Council Order 1988 (16:01:89) 123-8
Questions
Child care, Dept of Education & Science 761w
City technology colleges, Rural areas 596w
Curriculum, Northumberland 703-4w
Educational finance 265-6w
Educational finance, Cash limits 266w
Grant maintained schools, Trafford 19w
National Curriculum History Working Group 597w
Nursery schools, Expenditure 478w
Pay incentives, Dept of Education & Science 326w
Pre-school education 265w
Public expenditure, Dept of Education & Science 600w
Records of achievement, Educational finance 133-4w
School governors, Local education authorities 382w
Special education, Curriculum 18-9w
Special schools, Government grants to local authorities 598-9w
Teacher training, Deaf 193w
Teacher training, In-service training 703w
Teachers, Conditions of employment 760w
Teachers, Local education authorities 192w
Teachers, Manpower 19w, 760w
Teachers, Pay 192-3w
Teachers, Statistics 760w
Urban programme, Dept of Education & Science 477w

Rural areas
City technology colleges 596w
Local plans 639w
Retail trade 220w
Road signs 83w
Scottish Enterprise 725w
Unemployment 171w

RWAS
see Royal Welsh Agricultural Society

Ryder, Mr Richard, Parliamentary Secretary, Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food*
Debates etc.
Food, Consumer protection (24:01:89) 881, 885-91, 922-5
Questions
Agricultural research, Research finance 312w
Agriculture, Departmental publications 603w
Animal feed, Poultry 314-5w
Animal feed, Salmonella 808w
British Poultry Federation 313-4w
Cook-chill catering, Food labelling 604w
Country Landowners' Association 313w
Countryside Commission 314w
EC free food scheme 321w
Eggs 361w
Eggs, Compensation 53-4w
Eggs, Food consumption 308w
Eggs, Food standards 310w
Eggs, Imports 309-10w
Eggs, Production 308w
Eggs, Salmonella 308-10w, 808w
Environmentally sensitive areas 316w, 470
Environmentally sensitive areas, Agricultural improvement scheme 470
Farm Animal Welfare Council 156w
Farm diversification scheme, Departmental publications 315w
Farm diversification scheme, Planning permission 477

Ryder, Mr Richard—continued*
Farm woodland scheme 316w
Food composition 311-2w
Food contamination, Aflatoxin 57w
Food contamination, Chlorine 318w
Food industry, Self-regulating organisations 156w
Food microbiology, Research 307w
Food supply, NATO 54w
Hares, Research 603w
Horticulture, Research finance 307w
Infant foods, Aluminium 610-1w, 806-7w
Infant foods, Food composition 807w
Infant foods, Food labelling 807w
Listeria monocytogenes, Agricultural research 319-20w
Listeria monocytogenes, Poultry meat 319-20w
Ministry of Agriculture, Food standards 603-4w
Nitrates, Agricultural land 473
Nitrates, River pollution 472-3
Nitrates, Water pollution 473
Pesticide residues, Vegetables 311w
Pesticides 318-9w
Potato Marketing Board 315w
Poultry 309w
Poultry, Salmonella 308w
Rhizomania disease, Public footpaths 361w
Rodents, Pest control 319w
Sausages 470
Sausages, Food standards 469
Set-aside schemes, EC action 315w
Set-aside schemes, Expenditure 59-60w
Set-aside schemes, Take-up 426w
Sites of special scientific interest, Information 320w
Small Farmers' Association 316w
Tenant Farmers' Association 317w
Veterinary services, Research finance 61w
Waste disposal, River pollution 318w
Water Act 1973 54-5w

Safety
London Regional Transport 96w

Safety belts
Minibuses 762-3w

Safety measures
London Underground 102-4w

Safety standards
Offshore structures 32w

Sainsbury, Mr Tim, Under-Secretary of State for Defence Procurement*
Questions
Air force bases, Radioactive wastes 655w
Armoured fighting vehicles, Defence procurement 451w
Arms control, International conferences 654w
Boxer system, Communication engineering 278w
Challenger tanks 199w
Challenger tanks, Defence contracts 198w
Challenger tanks, Employment opportunities 276-7w
Challenger tanks, Vickers Defence Systems 453-4w
Chemical weapons 655w
Chemical weapons, Arms control 655w
Chemical weapons, Japan 656w
Defence Communications Centre 451w
Defence procurement, Competition 336w
Defence procurement, Expenditure 448w
Defence Quality Assurance Directorate, Offices 447-8w
Defence research, Defence expenditure 652w
Defence research, Nuclear fusion 754w
Defence research establishments, Audit 198-9w
Fastnet project, Telephone systems 278w
Guided weapons, Defence expenditure 279w
Helicopters, Armed forces 279w
HMS Bronington 27w
HMS Resolution, Repairs & maintenance 132w

Sainsbury, Mr Tim—continued
Mapper system, Information technology 278-9w
Ministry of Defence, Payroll deduction scheme 652-3w
Nuclear fuels, Exports 652w
Nuclear fuels, Transport of radioactive materials 754-5w
Nuclear fuels, USA 753w
Nuclear power, Public records 753w
Opcon system, Data banks 278w
Pay incentives, Ministry of Defence 653w
Pindar project, Armed forces 278w
Plessey, Takeovers 336w
Radio engineering, Glengarry forest 336w
Royal Arsenal Sports & Recreational Association, East London river crossing 277-8w
Youth training scheme, Cyprus 425-6w

St Anne's Hospital School, Nottingham
School closures 17w

St Helena
Educational qualifications 12w

St Mary's College of Education, Belfast
600-2w

St Thomas' Hospital
Medical equipment 302w

St William's Hospital, Rochester
223w

Salmond, Mr Alex
Debates etc.
EC Agriculture Council (25:01:89) 1033
Questions
Business statements 486
Defence procurement, Expenditure 448w
Football, Scotland 720w
Mortgage relief, Expenditure 783w
Motorways, Road safety barriers 289w
Nuclear Industry Radioactive Waste Executive 635-6w
Petroleum revenue tax 490w
Public expenditure, Scotland 400w
School leaving, Higher education 399w
School leaving, Universities 384-6w

Salmonella
Animal feed 158-9w, 428-9w, 808w
Eggs 214-5w, 224-5w, 308-10w, 324w, 409w, 467-9, 473-5, 676, 718w, 808w
Food poisoning 111-2w
Livestock 427w
Medical research 713w
Poultry 54w, 110-1w, 308-9w, 322-4w, 428w, 702-3w, 720-1w

Saltash tunnel
A38 293w
Repairs & maintenance 293w

Salter's duck
343w

Sampson, Colin
498w

Sanctuary
335-40, 342-3
Police powers 338

Satellite broadcasting
Television licences 107w
Television reception 201w

Satellites
233w

Saudi Arabia
Ministers' visits abroad 660w
Nuclear Non Proliferation Treaty 660w

Sausages
470
Food standards 469

Sayeed, Mr Jonathan
Debates etc.
Avon Light Rail Transit Bill (HL), 2R (24:01:89) 968, 972-3
Questions
AIDS, Notifiable diseases 802w

Sayeed, Mr Jonathan—continued
Crime, AIDS 774w
Drugs, Prices 714w, 802w
Industrial training 178w

Scarce Resources (Conservation) Bill 1988/89
Debates etc.
1R (25:01:89) 1042

Scholarships
Education & industry 235w

School administration
Scotland 161w

School boards
Scotland 160w
Video recordings 160w

School buildings
Armagh 333-4w

School closures
St Anne's Hospital School Nottingham 17w

School Curriculum Development Committee
(16:01:89) 119-28

School Curriculum Development Committee & Secondary Examinations Council (Designation of Staff) Order 1988
Debates etc.
(16:01:89) 119-28

School Curriculum Development Committee & Secondary Examinations Council (Transfer of Property) Order 1988
Debates etc.
(16:01:89) 119-28

School Examinations & Assessment Council
(16:01:89) 119-28, 326-8w

School governors
Local education authorities 382w

School leaving
Higher education 399w
Scotland 399w
Technical & vocational education initiative 254w
Universities 384-6w

School of Peace Studies
Bradford University 382w

School population
596w
Nottinghamshire 475w
Private education 70-2w, 596w
Scotland 401-4w
Staffordshire 475w

Schools
Bolton 133w
Libraries 382-3w
Vandalism 133w, 382w
Welsh language 780-2w

Science & Technology Assessment Office
125-6w

Science & technology research
Sea pollution 599-600w

Scientists
Health service staff 116w, 410w, 866
NHS 866

Scope of debate
(16:01:89) 80, 84
Speaker's rulings & statements (20:01:89) 593, 595, 602, 603, 604, 608, 617, 629, 638, (23:01:89) 744-94 passim, (24:01:89) 934, 941-2, (25:01:89) 1145, 1146, 1149, (26:01:89) 1209, 1211, 1212, 1216, 1220, 1230, 1231, 1232, 1233, 1235

Scotland
Air force bases 753w
Army 752w
Army bases 398w
Assisted places scheme 64-5w
Beef 336-8w

Scotland—continued
Coal 619w
Community charge 287-8w, 397-8w, 594-5w
Community charge exemptions 594w
Community charges register 397-8w, 717w
Corporation tax 379-80w
Council house sales 286-7w, 727w
Domestic rates 593-4w
Education 71-2w
Educational equipment 70-2w
Educational publications 403-4w
Eggs 718w, 721w
Electric cables 341-2w
Electricity supply industry 62w
Employment Training 288-9w, 490-1w, 596w
Empty housing 593w
Farmers 403w
Fish farming 720w
Football 288w, 338w, 720w
Former Members 72-3w
Freshwater fishing 489w
Further education 407w
Higher education teachers 400-2w
Hospital beds 721-2w
Hospital consultants 593w
Housing support grants 406w, (23:01:89) 799-843
Income support 710-2w
Industrial health & safety 554w
Infant mortality 717w
Local education authorities 63-4w
Local government expenditure 287w
Local government staff 398w
Low flying 449w
Museums & galleries 72w
New towns development corporations 409w
NHS 290w, 719w
NHS administration 160w
Nuclear submarines 452w
Nursery schools 64-5w, 402w
Nurses 338-42w, 397w
Old people's homes 218-9w
Personal records (24:01:89) 982-1001
Pigs 403-5w
Polaris submarines 452w
Police housing 405w
Poultry 719-21w
Pre-school education 592-3w
Private education 65-72w, 80w
Public expenditure 400w, 596w
Railway closures 9-10
Rate support grants 491w
Regional aid 568-70w
Regional development grants 408w
Regional selective assistance 407-8w
Rent arrears 219w, 722-6w
Rents 595w
Retail trade 220w
Revenue support grant 287w
Road safety barriers 289w
School administration 161w
School boards 160w
School leaving 399w
School population 401-4w
Set-aside schemes 285w, 399w
Sites of special scientific interest 489w
Social Fund 117w
Tax yields 379w
Taxpayers 379w
Teachers 162w
United Kingdom Immigrants' Advisory Service 7w
VAT 379w
Water supply 159w

Scott, Mr Nicholas, Minister of State, Dept of Social Security
Debates etc.
Child benefit (18:01:89) 384-6
Questions
Attendance allowance, Social security benefits rules 618-9w
Dept of Social Security, Operating costs 805-6w
Handicap benefits, Disablement Income Group 118-9w
Handicapped, Social Security Advisory Committee 805w

Scott, Mr Nicholas—continued
Income support, Social security recipients 416w
Income support, Social security reform 48w
Medical appeal tribunals, Medical equipment 118w
Mobility allowance, Social security claims 119w
National insurance benefits 712-4w
Reduced earnings allowance 242-3w
Reduced earnings allowance, Invalidity benefits 243w
Reduced earnings allowance, Pensioners 243w
Social security benefits disqualification, Advisory services 708w
Social security benefits disqualification, Availability for work 615-6w
Social security benefits disqualification, Employment 616w
Social security finance 711-2w
Social security finance, Expenditure 117w
Social security reform, Research 804-5w

Scottish Consumer Council
220w

Scottish Council of Independent Schools
161w

Scottish courts
Glasgow 285-6w

Scottish Development Agency
220w

Scottish Enterprise
Rural areas 725w

Scottish health boards
NHS administration 159w
Pay 777-8w
Pay incentives 64w
Public appointments 215-8w, 718-9w

Scottish Office
215w, 596w
Cash limits 725-6w
House of Commons questions 289w
Ministerial policy advisers 62-3w

Scottish Special Housing Association
219w

Screening
Breast cancer 34-5w, 269w, 535-9w
Cervical cancer 297-8w, 433w
Osteoporosis 550w
Private sector 34-5w

SDA
see Scottish Development Agency

Sea navigation
Radio engineering 386w

Sea pollution
640w
Coastal areas 649w
Irish Sea 645w
Science & technology research 599-600w

Seas & oceans
Environment protection 644w

Second homes
Community charge 481w
Wales 481w

Secondary education
Trafford 19w

Secondary Examinations Council
(16:01:89) 119-28

Secondhand cars
765w

Secured loans
766-7w

Securities & Investments Board
236w, 331-2w
Self-regulating organisations 332w

Security
Royal Victoria Hospital Belfast 495-6w

Security Commission
(16:01:89) 32-118, (17:01:89) 180-309

Security industry
Parliament House Edinburgh 160w

Security Service Bill 1988/89
Debates etc.
Com (16:01:89) 32-118
Com & Rep* (17:01:89) 180-309
3R (23:01:89) 743-98

Security Service Review Committee
(16:01:89) 32-118

Security Service Tribunal
(17:01:89) 180-309

Sedgemore, Mr Brian
Questions
Building industry, Self-employed 146w
Mete, Ayten, Immigration controls 351w
Multiple occupation, Housing & Local Government Bill 1988/89 630w
Victoria & Albert Museum, Stock control 73w

Segregation of prisoners
Prisoners 200-1w, 770-1w
Wandsworth Prison 350w

Self-employed
164w, 745-9w
Building industry 146w
Manpower 259w
Part-time employment 682w, 688w

Self-regulating organisations
Barlow Clowes 331-2w
Financial services 332-3w
Food industry 156w
Securities & Investments Board 332w

Sellafield
486w
Nuclear accidents 715w
Plutonium 696-7w

Semiconductor devices
326-7
Protectionism 326
Takeovers 325-6

Serious Fraud Office
444w

Service industries
Employment 742-3w

Servite houses
Old people's homes 118w

Set-aside schemes
Agricultural production 59-60w
Agricultural workers 285w
EC action 315w
Expenditure 59-60w
Scotland 285w, 399w
Take-up 426w, 434w
Wales 434w

Settle-Carlisle railway
142
Railway closures 102w

Severe disability premium
48w

Severe weather payments
Wales 525-6w

Severn barrage
Energy research 695w

Severn bridge
Construction costs 574w
Public inquiries 431w
Road accidents 762w
Road tolls 467w

Sewage
Bristol channel 22w
Capital investment 304-5w

Sewage—continued
Government grants 347w
Pollution control 454-5w
South Yorkshire 346w

Sex change operations
542w

Sexual harassment
353w

Sexual offences
Cruelty to children 798-800w
South Yorkshire 353w

SFA
see Small Farmers' Association

Shareholders
259w, 376w, 690w
Ministers 261w

Shares
Inland Revenue 694w

Shaw, Mr David
Questions
Capital gains tax, Tax yields 692w
Channel tunnel, Railway network 737w
Corporation tax, Tax yields 791-2w
Empty housing, Council housing 1010
Investment 681w
Motor vehicles, Imports 442-4w
National Bus Company, Accounting 575w
Personal savings, Tax thresholds 380w
Railway travel, Dover 735-6w
Social security finance, Expenditure 117w
Tourist industry 170w
Tourist industry, Small businesses 146
Unemployment 480

Sheep
476
Agricultural subsidies 476
North Yorkshire 57w

Sheep meat
Food exports 476
New Zealand 699-700w
Wales 433-4w

Sheep premiums
156w
EC action 476

Sheerman, Mr Barry
Debates etc.
Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Bill, Allocation of time motion (23:01:89) 714, 718-9, 724, 730-3
Questions
Air routes, Malaysia 762w
Rolls-Royce Aeroengines, Exports 667-8w

Sheldon, Rt Hon Robert
Questions
Mortgage interest rates, Retail price index 1169
Victoria & Albert Museum, Conservation 15

Sheltered housing
Board & lodging charges 707w
Mentally ill 707w

Shephard, Mrs Gillian
Questions
China, Compensation 256w
Environmentally sensitive areas 316w
Nurses, Pay 297w
Technical & vocational education initiative 178w

Shepherd, Mr Colin
Debates etc.
Beef, EC action (18:01:89) 448-9
EC Agriculture Council (25:01:89) 1033-4
Questions
ACP countries, Overseas aid 373w
Cider, Excise duties 686w
Local enterprise agencies 183-4w
Operating theatres, Costs 863-4

Shepherd, Mr Richard
Debates etc.
Official Secrets Bill, Com (25:01:89) 1053, 1064-7, 1081, 1086, 1094, 1102, 1108-9, 1113-4, 1117, 1127, 1128, 1129, 1138-9

Shepherd, Mr Richard—continued
Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Bill, Allocation of time motion (23:01:89) 699
Security Service Bill, Com (16:01:89) 44-6, 53, 54, 58, 107, 115, (17:01:89) 180-5, 214, 215, 216, 232-5, 239, 241, 257-60, 267, 288, 289-90, 295
Security Service Bill, 3R (23:01:89) 745, 747, 758, 769-71
Questions
Hip replacements, Hospital waiting lists 35-6w

Shersby, Mr Michael
Debates etc.
By election writs, Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 603-4, 629
Food, Consumer protection (24:01:89) 893, 894-9
Questions
British Antarctic Territory 473w
Cook-chill catering, Food labelling 604w
Food hygiene, Cook-chill catering 803w
Health education, Dental health 410w
Metropolitan Police, Accountability 392w
PAYE, Computers 789-90w
Pield Heath Nurseries Uxbridge, Planning appeals 641w
Stamp duties, Tax yields 690w

Sherwood forest
1018

Shipping
Cabotage 704w

Shipping accidents
Battersea bridge 573w
Submarines 123w, 131w

Shipping safety
International Maritime Organisation 389w

Shops
Net Book Agreement 107-8w

Shore, Rt Hon Peter
Debates etc.
City of London (Spitalfields Market) Bill, 3R (24:01:89) 934-7, 938
Questions
Middle East, Peace negotiations 160

Short, Ms Clare
Debates etc.
By election writs, Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 607, 613
Protection of Privacy Bill, 2R (27:01:89) 1341, 1350
Regional crime squads, West Midlands (25:01:89) 1155-7, 1158, 1159, 1160
Questions
Employment Training, Child care 281w
Employment Training, Managers 281w
Immigration applications, Genetics 389w
Job start scheme, Pay 282w
Social security benefits disqualification, Advisory services 708w
Social security benefits disqualification, Availability for work 615-6w
Social security benefits disqualification, Employment 616w
Social security reform, Youth training scheme 521w
Training, Women 809w

Short Brothers
Privatisation 676w

Shotgun certificates
6w, 391w, 515w
Minors 275w

SIB
see Securities & Investments Board

Silicosis
354w

Sillars, Mr Jim
Debates etc.
Child benefit (18:01:89) 358
Questions
Defence expenditure, OECD countries 758w

Sillars, Mr Jim—continued
Employment 745-9w
Employment, Manufacturing industries 419-22w, 742-3w
Greater Glasgow Health Board, Contracts for services 719w
Income support, Social security recipients 416w
Nuclear Industry Radioactive Waste Executive 635-6w
Southern General Hospital Glasgow, Contracts for services 719w
Women's employment 743-6w
Youth training scheme 175w

Simplified planning zones
Private investment 304w

Sims, Mr Roger
Questions
Home Office, Cash limits 776-7w
Overseas aid, Cash limits 486w
Overseas students, Part-time employment 623w
Tobacco, Expenditure 81-2w
Tobacco, Tobacco duties 81w

Singapore
Air routes 103w, 124w, 762w

Sinn Fein
138w, (26:01:89) 1206-90

Sites of special scientific interest
305w
Information 320w
Scotland 489w

Skeet, Sir Trevor
Questions
Armenia, Disaster relief 372w

Skill shortages
138, 172w, 176-7w

Skills Training Agency
Privatisation 185-6w

Skinner, Mr Dennis
Debates etc.
BREL (1988), Privatisation (17:01:89) 171
By election writs, Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 591-635 passim
Oral questions, Ministers (24:01:89) 874
Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Bill, Allocation of time motion (23:01:89) 698
Private notice question point of order (18:01:89) 347
Protection of Privacy Bill, 2R (27:01:89) 1309
Telepoint services (26:01:89) 1197
Written questions, Disclosure of information (17:01:89) 174
Questions
Bank of England 684w
British Rail 86w
Building industry safety 168-9w
Business statements 1184
Coal, Imports 694-5w
Government assistance to industry 332-3
Small businesses, Bankruptcy 145

Skyguard radar
Low flying 654w

Skyliner Services
23-4, (26:01:89) 1199-200

Slaughterhouses
Civil service manpower 213-4w
Deer 55w
Enforcement notices 213w
Food hygiene 56w, 212-3w, 318w

Small businesses
176w
Bankruptcy 145
British Venture Capital Association 176w
EC internal trade 144-5
Foreign languages 145
Inner city areas 145-6
Interest rates 689w

Small businesses—continued
Management 551w
Redundancy 142
Small Firms Service 176w
Taxation 688w
Tourist industry 146

Small Farmers' Association
316w

Small Firms Service
145-6
Small businesses 176w

Smith, Mr Andrew
Questions
Beef, Exports 499w
Butter, EC free food scheme 212w
Football, Identity cards 1024-5
Museums & galleries, Vacancies 74w
NHS, Scientists 866

Smith, Mr Chris
Questions
British Museum 76w
Mortgage interest rates 1171
Vocational education, EC internal trade 181w
Wrongful trading, Insolvency Act 1986 105w

Smith, Sir Cyril
Debates etc.
By election writs, Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 623

Smith, Sir Dudley
Questions
Mendis, Viraj, Arrests 341

Smith, Rt Hon John
Questions
Interest rates 1169
Public sector borrowing requirement 1166-7

Smith, Mr Tim
Debates etc.
BREL (1988), Privatisation (17:01:89) 169
Companies (Audit Committees) Bill, 1R (26:01:89) 1205
Monopolies & Mergers Commission (Performance of Functions) Order 1988 (25:01:89) 1149-50
Prime Minister's questions, Supplementary questions (19:01:89) 495
Quarrying, Buckinghamshire (24:01:89) 1002-4
Questions
Balance of payments 1168
Bookmakers, Office of Fair Trading 443w
Budget, 358w
Business statements 1187-8
Capital gains tax, Group of Seven 790-1w
Eggs, Salmonella 309w
"Hero from Zero" 683
Industrial investment, Manufacturing industries 680w
Inland Revenue, Shares 694w
NHS administration 532w
Small businesses, Management 551w

Smoking
Health warnings 535w

Smyth, Rev Martin
Debates etc.
Elected Authorities (Northern Ireland) Bill, Rep & 3R (26:01:89) 1242, 1257-8
Questions
Down's syndrome, Surgery 860
Employment discrimination, Post Office 221w
Housing associations, Northern Ireland 335w
NHS administration 531-2w
Tax yields, Northern Ireland 692w
VAT, Postage stamps 81w

Snape, Mr Peter
Debates etc.
Avon Light Rail Transit Bill (HL), 2R (24:01:89) 964-5
BREL (1988), Privatisation (17:01:89) 162-3

Snape, Mr Peter—continued
Questions
Air routes, Singapore 124w
British Rail, Railway travel 4

Soames, Mr Nicholas
Debates etc.
Oral questions, Ministers (24:01:89) 873
Questions
Hospital waiting lists 864
Public expenditure, Transport infrastructure 1167
Small businesses, Foreign languages 145
Uganda, Dairy farming 370w

Social Fund
Community care 242w, 805w
Doncaster 242w
Expenditure 519-20w
Greater London 711w
Greenock 710w
Microcomputers 706w
Oldham 521-3w
Port Glasgow 710w
Publicity 117-8w
Scotland 117w
Wallsend 245w

Social Policy Management Services
547w

Social security
Administrative costs 706-7w

Social security abuse
Board & lodging charges 242w
Doncaster 242w

Social Security Advisory Committee
Handicapped 805w

Social security appeals
708w
Availability for work 415w

Social security benefits
Administrative delays 245w
Hospital patients 525w
Mendis, Viraj 523w
Mentally handicapped 519w, 613w
Pensioners 241w
Social security recipients 524-5w

Social security benefits disqualification
Advisory services 708w
Availability for work 615-6w
Employment 616w
Restart programme 624-6w
Unemployment benefits 51-2w, 257w, 364w

Social security benefits rules
Attendance allowance 618-9w
Further education 417w
Income support 417w
Investment 417w

Social security claims
Administrative delays 48-9w
Capital rules 417w
Family credit 806w
Family income supplements 618w
Greenock 708-10w
Housing benefits 614-5w
Members' correspondence 622-3w
Mobility allowance 119w
Port Glasgow 708-10w

Social security finance
711-2w
Expenditure 117w

Social security payments
South Somerset 245w

Social security recipients
Family income supplements 804w
Housing benefits 616w
Income support 416w, 616w
Social security benefits 524-5w
Standard of living 414w

Social security reform
Housing benefits 616w
Income support 48w, 417w, 616w

Social security reform—continued
Lothian 415-6w
Research 804-5w
Young people 245-6w
Youth training scheme 521w

Social work
Personal records (24:01:89) 982-1001

Society of British Aerospace Companies
236w

Soley, Mr Clive
Debates etc.
Rate support grants (19:01:89) 498, 502, 503, 504, 505, 507-16, 525, 539, 541-2, 544, 545, 556, 558, 559, 562-3
Questions
Housing, Greater London 650-1w
Perinatal mortality, Parents 546-7w
Prison accommodation, Banstead 5w
Prisons, Environmental health officers 774w
Public sector housing 1010
Public sector housing, New towns 305w
Tax allowances, Canary Wharf 359w
Tenants' choice, Aliens 150w
Wormwood Scrubs, Prison hospitals 774w

Solicitor-General
(16:01:89) 32-118

Solicitors
328w
Women 764w

Somalia
Overseas aid 563w

Sonic booms
Cornwall 100w

South Africa
Association of British Travel Agents 751w
Cricket 479
EC aid 270w
Overseas aid 270w

South African Catholic Bishops' Conference
270w

South African Council of Churches
270w

South Bank
Crime 510w

South East region
Air traffic 85w
Air traffic control 88w
Rates & rating 733-4w
Road traffic 93-4w

South East Thames Regional Health Authority
606-7w
Hospital waiting lists 605w
Offices 295w

South Georgia
Fish conservation 12w

South Glamorgan Health Authority
682

South Korea
Footwear 236-8w
Foreign trade 238w
Whisky 229w

South of Scotland Electricity Board
154-5w

South Shields
Unemployment benefits 51-2w

South Somerset
Social security payments 245w

South Wales
330-1w, 649w

South West region
Road works 4-5
Unemployment 164w

South West Water Authority
210-1w, 306w
Water pollution 145-6w

South Yorkshire
Radioactive waste disposal 25w
Sewage 346w
Sexual offences 353w
Waste disposal 148w
Water pollution 26w

South Yorkshire Fire & Civil Defence Authority
305w

Southern African Development Coordination Conference
Overseas aid 372w

Southern General Hospital, Glasgow
Contracts for services 719w

Southern Water Authority
455w

Soya beans
405w

Space technology
232-3w

Spaceflight
261w

Spare parts
277w

Spastics Society
680

Speaker and his deputies, For rulings & statements see separate heading Speaker's rulings & statements*
Debates etc.
Amendments & new clauses (24:01:89) 880, (26:01:89) 1206, 1246, 1256, 1259-60
Orders & regulations motions (16:01:89) 31, 119, (17:01:89) 176, (24:01:89) 799
Private Members' Bills, 2R order read (27:01:89) 1364
Procedure (17:01:89) 148, 309, (18:01:89) 323, 342, 343, 344, 345, 348, (19:01:89) 480, 481, (20:01:89) 635, 660, 661, (24:01:89) 915
Standing Order No 20 applications, Airport security (26:01:89) 1200
Standing Order No 20 applications, Listeria monocytogenes (16:01:89) 30-1

Speaker's rulings & statements
Adjournment debates (17:01:89) 309
All party groups (24:01:89) 875
Business motions (27:01:89) 1364-5
Calling of Members (24:01:89) 925
House of Commons chamber (18:01:89) 439
House of Commons divisions (24:01:89) 929
House of Commons procedure (19:01:89) 496, (23:01:89) 681, (26:01:89) 1175, 1204, 1205
House of Commons Select Committees (25:01:89) 1041
Members (23:01:89) 726, (24:01:89) 873
Members' attendance (24:01:89) 972
Members' conduct (23:01:89) 789, 792, (24:01:89) 959, (27:01:89) 1362
Members' interventions (17:01:89) 150, (18:01:89) 339, 360, (20:01:89) 595, 601, 620, 637, 639, 649, 654, 655, 656, (26:01:89) 1254, (27:01:89) 1325
Members' personal statements (19:01:89) 494
Members' speeches (18:01:89) 411, (19:01:89) 494, 521, 555, 569, (24:01:89) 883, (27:01:89) 1308
Ministerial speeches (19:01:89) 575
Ministerial statements (26:01:89) 1205
Official Report (25:01:89) 1047
Oral questions (19:01:89) 482, (24:01:89) 873, 874, 875, (25:01:89) 1039-40, (26:01:89) 1201, 1203

Speaker's rulings & statements—continued*
Parliamentary Press Gallery (23:01:89) 828
Points of order (18:01:89) 339, 341, 345, 346, 347, (19:01:89) 472, 587, (20:01:89) 591-664 passim, (23:01:89) 691, 759, (24:01:89) 874, 875, 956, (25:01:89) 1026
Press releases (26:01:89) 1204
Prime Minister's questions (19:01:89) 478, 480, (24:01:89) 867
Private Members' Bills (25:01:89) 1042, 1044, (27:01:89) 1364
Scope of debate (20:01:89) 593, 595, 602, 603, 604, 608, 617, 629, 638, (23:01:89) 744-94 passim, (24:01:89) 934, 941-2, (25:01:89) 1145, 1146, 1149, (26:01:89) 1209, 1211, 1212, 1216, 1220, 1230, 1231, 1232, 1233, 1235
Standing Order No 20 applications (25:01:89) 1013, 1038
Sub judice (18:01:89) 322
Supplementary questions (16:01:89) 14, (17:01:89) 146, (19:01:89) 468, 495-6, (24:01:89) 855, (25:01:89) 1010, 1014, 1018, (26:01:89) 1174, 1175
Ten minute rule Bills (17:01:89) 179, (24:01:89) 878
Unparliamentary expressions (23:01:89) 714
Written questions (17:01:89) 173-6, (26:01:89) 1205

Spearing, Mr Nigel
Debates etc.
Official Secrets Bill, Com (25:01:89) 1090-1
Security Service Bill, Com (17:01:89) 233
Questions
Business statements 1183
Channel tunnel, Railway freight transport 9
London Docklands, Employment 650w
London Regional Transport, Safety 96w
Mortgage defaulters, Departmental responsibilities 2-3w
Oil revenues, North Sea oil 80-2w
Royal College of Midwives 546w
Urban planning, Greater London 630-1w
Water pollution, Detergents 793-4w
Water supply industry, Costs 462w
Water supply industry, Privatisation 291w

Special education
Cost per pupil 597-8w
Curriculum 18-9w
Educational finance 475w
Educational policy 475-6w
Northern Ireland 141-2w
Wales 479-80w

Special schools
Government grants to local authorities 598-9w

Speed limits
Driving offences 271w

Speller, Mr Tony
Questions
Arts finance, Devon 75w
Barnstaple-Exeter railway, Government grants 95w
Electricity supply industry, Expenditure 154-5w
Interest rates, 682w
Nigeria, Technical assistance 688
Obscene Publications Act 1959, Prosecutions 154w
Personal income, Pay 550w
Sausages, Food standards 469
Sewage, Bristol channel 22w
Unemployment, Devon 166w
Waste disposal, Ports 649w

Spicer, Michael
698w

Spicer, Mr Michael, Under-Secretary of State for Energy*
Questions
Alternative energy, Environment 619-20w
Alternative energy, Research finance 698w
Child care, Dept of Energy 803-4w
Coal, Imports 619w, 694-5w

Spicer, Mr Michael—continued*
Coal mining, Manpower 803w
Coal mining, Subsidence 803w
Coal prices 344w
Electricity consumption 211-2w
Electricity consumption, Electricity area boards 30w
Electricity generation, Capital investment 620w
Electricity supply industry, Capital investment 155w, 620w
Electricity supply industry, Expenditure 154-5w
Electricity supply industry, Privatisation 695w, 698w
Energy Technology Support Unit, Inquiries 343w
High Moor colliery, Mine accidents 619w
Nuclear fuel reprocessing, Magnox reactors 697w
Nuclear fuel reprocessing, Nuclear safeguards 697w
Plutonium, Nuclear safeguards 696w
Plutonium, Overseas trade 155-6w
Plutonium, Sellafield 696-7w
Privately owned mines 155w
Severn barrage, Energy research 695w
Wave power, Electricity generation 341-2w
Wave power, Energy costs 342-3w
Wave power, Energy research 341w, 343-4w
Wind power 695-6w

Spitalfields
Markets (24:01:89) 933-46

Sports Council
634w

Sportsgrounds
Hooliganism 462w

Springfields
Water pollution 794-5w

Squire, Mr Robin
Debates etc.
Child benefit (18:01:89) 379
Questions
Dept of Transport, Cash limits 470w
Economic growth 686w
NHS Review, Regional health authorities 856-8
Transport, London Docklands 388w
Waste disposal 1011-2
Waste disposal, Licensing 151w
Waste disposal, Local authority powers 151w
Waste disposal, Planning permission 150-1w

SSEB
see South of Scotland Electricity Board

SSHA
see Scottish Special Housing Association

Staffordshire
Derelict land 204w
Employment Training 281w
School population 475w

Stalker, John
498w

Stamp duties
Tax yields 690w

Stanbrook, Mr Ivor
Questions
Business statements 1184
Legal profession 1175

Standard of living
Social security recipients 414w

Standards enforcement
Hotels 251w
Water supply 632w

Standards specifications
Television engineering 591w

Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights
335-6w, 676w

Standing Order No 20 applications
Airport security (26:01:89) 1199-200
Listeria monocytogenes (16:01:89) 30-1
Mendis, Viraj (18:01:89) 343-4
Speaker's rulings & statements (25:01:89) 1013, 1038
Unemployment benefit offices (25:01:89) 1038

Stanley, Rt Hon Sir John
Questions
Debts, Developing countries 488-9w
Overseas aid, Debts 269-70w
Retirement pensions 523w

Stansted Airport
Noise control 191w

"State of the World's Children, 1989"
370w

State Veterinary Service
719w

Stationery Office
see HMSO

Steel, Rt Hon David
Debates etc.
By election writs, Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 593
Questions
Eritrea, Peace negotiations 473w
Social security reform, Young people 245-6w
Woollen industry, Export promotion 765w

Steen, Mr Anthony
Questions
Armed forces training, Dartmoor national park 757w
Firing ranges, Dartmoor national park 756-8w

Steinberg, Mr Gerry
Debates etc.
Child benefit (18:01:89) 364
Pre-school education (18:01:89) 406-7, 421-3
Questions
Bus services, Publicity 571w
Business premises, Greater London 290w
Coal prices 344w
Common agricultural policy, EC action 317w
Dept of Social Security local offices, Durham 805w
Deposited papers, Norman Shaw Buildings 127-8w
Doctors' list of patients, Northern Regional Health Authority 797-8w
Employment Training, Age 171w
Railway stations 293w
Silicosis 354w
Student grants, Durham 381w
Tax burden 691w
Teachers, Conditions of employment 760w
Teachers, Manpower 760w
Teachers, Statistics 760w
Turkey, Human rights 792w
VAT registration, Durham 236w

Sterling
Exchange rates 685w

Stern, Mr Michael
Debates etc.
By election writs, Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 592, 602, 616, 619
Questions
Electricity distribution, Wales 671
NHS administration 531-2w
Official engagements 261-2w, 485-6w, 705-6w
Railway travel, Bristol 675
Road works, South West region 4-5
Satellites 233w
Severn barrage, Energy research 695w
Shotgun certificates, Minors 275w
Town & country planning, Law reform 210w

Stevenage
Youth training scheme 140

Stevens, Mr Lewis
Questions
Employment Training 171w
New businesses 689w

Stewart, Mr Allan
Debates etc.
Access to Personal Files (Social Work) (Scotland) Regulations 1989 (24:01:89) 989
Questions
Crown Office for Scotland, Cash limits 490w
Shareholders 690w

Stewart, Mr Andy
Questions
Hard core unemployed 679w
Sherwood Forest 1018

Stewart, Rt Hon Ian, Minister of State, Northern Ireland Office
Questions
Cruelty to children, Gleneyre & Burnside Children's Home 395w
Firearms, Northern Ireland 396w
Firearms certificates, Northern Ireland 602-3w
Gypsies, Armagh 491-2w
Identity cards, Northern Ireland Office 394-5w
Northern Ireland Office, Cash limits 768-9w
Police firearms, Theft 395w
Prisoners' release, Northern Ireland 599-600w
Public contracts, Northern Ireland 396w
Public expenditure, Northern Ireland 395w
Royal Ulster Constabulary, Disciplinary proceedings 498w

Stock control
Museums & galleries 73-4w
Victoria & Albert Museum 73w

Stocken Prison
348-9w

Stokes, Sir John
Debates etc.
Official Secrets Bill, Com (25:01:89) 1064, 1071
Questions
Business statements 1180
Cultural heritage 868
National debt 685w

Stott, Mr Roger
Debates etc.
Telepoint services (26:01:89) 1192
Questions
Telecommunications technology 233w

Strang, Mr Gavin
Questions
Balance of payments 684w
Building industry safety, Union of Construction Allied Trades & Technicians 148
Drug abuse, Disposable syringes 528w
Eggs, Salmonella 309w
Trades Union Congress 182w

Strangford
Location of industry 144w
New businesses 220w

Stranmillis College of Education
600-2w

Straw, Mr Jack
Debates etc.
Pre-school education (18:01:89) 391-6, 397, 398, 400, 407
Questions
HM Inspectorate of Schools, Annual reports 761w
Teachers, Personal records 19w

Stray dogs
Nottingham 200w

Streatham
Rates & rating 460w

Street cleaning
Local government expenditure 630w
Local government manual workers 505w

Strontium 90
715w

Student grants
Durham 381w

Student numbers
Colleges of education 600-2w
Higher education admission 759-60w
Polytechnics 597w
Universities 597w

Sub judice
Speaker's rulings & statements (18:01:89) 322

Submarines
Shipping accidents 123w, 131w

Subsidence
Coal mining 803w

Subsidiary companies
Accounting 105w

Subsidies
Canary Wharf 648w
Opera 354w
Renault 766w

Suckler cow premiums
(18:01:89) 435-56

Sudan
Debts 372w
Overseas aid 151

Sumberg, Mr David
Debates etc.
Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Bill, Allocation of time motion (23:01:89) 700, 701-6, 713-4, 726, 733
Questions
Channel tunnel, North West region 6-7, 84w
EC internal trade, North West region 230w
Economic situation, North West region 686w
Employment Training, Bury 172w
NHS finance, North West region 545w
Official engagements 127w, 261-2w, 485-6w, 706w
Tenants' choice, Disclosure of information 647w

Summerleaze Gravel
(24:01:89) 1002-8

Summerson, Mr Hugo
Questions
Hard core unemployed 163w
India, Educational aid 371w
Prison rules 518w
Tenant Farmers' Association 317w

Summertime
273w

Sunday trading
273w
Public petitions (19:01:89) 580

Superannuation Act 1972
Questions
Teachers 475w

Supplementary questions
Speaker's rulings & statements (16:01:89) 14, (17:01:89) 146, (19:01:89) 468, 495-6, (24:01:89) 855, (25:01:89) 1010, 1014, 1018, (26:01:89) 1174, 1175

Supply Estimates
Supply Estimates—continued
693w

Surgery
Ayrshire & Arran Health Board 61-2w
Down's syndrome 860

Suzuki
Motor vehicle safety 191-2w

Swansea
Low flying 656w

Take-home pay
Youth training scheme 751-2w

Takeovers
Bassett Foods 477-8
Century Newspapers, 106w, 472w
Defence procurement 336w
EC law 107w
Foreign companies in UK 442w
House of Fraser 322
Plessey 336w, (20:01:89) 665-70
Semiconductor devices 325-6
UK companies abroad 442w

Tameize, Kayed
362w

Tameside
Magistrates 439-41w

Tanks
BAOR 129w
USSR 660w

Tape recorded evidence
Police powers 7w

Tax allowances
Atlantic Salmon Conservation Trust 378w
Canary Wharf 359w
Income tax 78w, 376w
Private education 80w, 380w
Tax yields 359w

Tax burden
691w, 784w, 868
Average earnings 357w
Capital gains tax 359-60w
Inheritance tax 359-60w
Personal income 374w, 376w

Tax collection
Costs 784-5w

Tax rates & bands
Income tax 78w

Tax thresholds
Personal income 80w, 376w
Personal savings 380w

Tax yields
375w, 786-8w
Capital gains tax 376-7w, 692w
Composite tax rate system 692w
Corporation tax 791-2w
Fossil fuels 358w
National insurance contributions 787-90w
National insurance surcharge 706w
Northern Ireland 692w
Scotland 379w
Stamp duties 690w
Tax allowances 359w
Taxation 787-90w

Taxation
Carbon dioxide 693w
Small businesses 688w
Tax yields 787-90w
VAT exempted goods 680w

Taxis
Wheelchairs 10-1

Taxpayers
Composite tax rate system 691-2w
Scotland 379w

Taylor, Mrs Ann
Questions
Ethylene dibromide, Health hazards 419w
Homosexuality, Young offenders 199-200w
Sites of special scientific interest 305w

Taylor, Mrs Ann—continued
Sites of special scientific interest, Information 320w
Yorkshire Water Authority 1022

Taylor, Mr Ian
Debates etc.
Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Bill, Allocation of time motion (23:01:89) 721, 725-7
Questions
Education & industry, Scholarships 235w
Health service staff, Pay 298w
Hospices 534w
Interest rates 1171
Local government staff, Pay settlements 457w
Middle East, Peace negotiations 160
National insurance contributions 682w
Official engagements 127w, 485-6w, 705-6w
Planning appeals, Administrative delays 633w
Profit sharing 479
Small businesses, EC internal trade 144-5
Teachers, Local education authorities 192w
Teachers, Pay 192-3w
Teachers, Vacancies 326w
University teachers, Pay 192w

Taylor, Rt Hon John David
Questions
Action for Community Employment, Donaghadee 221w
Belfast Airport 676w
Century Newspapers, Takeovers 472w
Further education, Newtownards 29w
Further education colleges, Ards peninsula 143w
Further education colleges, Donaghadee 498w
Further education colleges, Northern Ireland 143w
Gypsies, Armagh 491-2w
Montupet, Location of industry 144w
New businesses, Strangford 220w
Ordnance Survey, Prices 141w
Orlit houses, Comber 221w
Orlit houses, Donaghadee 221w
Road accidents, Donaghadee 497-8w
Road accidents, Newtownards 334w
School buildings, Armagh 333-4w

Taylor, Mr Matthew
Debates etc.
BREL (1988), Privatisation (17:01:89) 167
Food, Consumer protection (24:01:89) 921
Rate support grants (19:01:89) 518-23, 532
Questions
Airport security, Airport staff 26
British Rail, Railway travel 2
Interest rates 682w
Meat, Republic of Ireland 470-1
Midwives, Career structure 298w
Railway travel 88w
Science & technology research, Sea pollution 599-600w
Torbay Borough Council, Council house sales 631w
Water supply industry, Privatisation 728w

Taylor, Mr Teddy
Debates etc.
EC Agriculture Council (25:01:89) 1034
Food, Consumer protection (24:01:89) 887
Monopolies & Mergers Commission (Performance of Functions) Order 1988 (25:01:89) 1151
Official Secrets Bill, Com (25:01:89) 1107-8
Security Service Bill, Com (17:01:89) 244
Questions
Afghanistan, Overseas aid 686-7
Agricultural products, EC external trade 60w
Agricultural subsidies, EC action 125w
Bovine somatotropin 157w
Bovine somatotropin, Health hazards 157w
British Rail 8-9
Butter, Intervention stocks 58-9w
Cancer, Children 116-7w, 549w
Chemical weapons, Libyan Arab Republic 704w

Taylor, Mr Teddy—continued
Civil service recruitment, EC staff 77w
Employment, Industries 165w
European monetary system 688w
Export controls, Iran 240-1w
Export licensing 106w
Food surpluses, Expenditure 59w
House of Fraser, Company investigations 444w
Milk, Agricultural subsidies 58w
Set-aside schemes, Expenditure 59-60w
Takeovers, EC law 107w
Water pollution, Nitrates 645-6w

Teacher training
Deaf 193w
In-service training 703w

Teachers
Conditions of employment 760w
Derbyshire 474-5w
Early retirement 29w
List 99 476-8w
Local education authorities 192w
Manpower 19w, 133w, 760w
Northern Ireland 29w, 142-3w
Nottinghamshire 474-5w
Pay 192-3w
Personal records 19w
Scotland 162w
Statistics 760w
Superannuation Act 1972 475w
Vacancies 326w
Welsh language 345-6w, 781-2w

Technical & vocational education initiative
137, 178w
School leaving 254w

Technical assistance
Nigeria 688

Technicians
Health service staff 355w
Pharmacists 303w

Tees & Hartlepool Port Authority
Ministers' domestic visits 82w

Telecommunications technology
233w

Telephone selling
470-1w

Telephone services
Passports 586w, 588w

Telephone systems
Fastnet project 278w

Telepoint services
Ministerial statements (26:01:89) 1190-8

Television advertising
Water supply industry 348w

Television channels
Multipoint video distribution systems 566w

Television engineering
Channel Five 591w
Commercial television 391w
Finance 591w
Land ownership & tenure 592w
Quality control 591-2w
Standards specifications 591w

Television licences
Fees & charges 671w
Satellite broadcasting 107w

Television Licensing Organisation
239w

Television programmes
Foreign & Commonwealth Office 660w

Television reception
Counterfeit manufacturing 590w
Satellite broadcasting 201w

Telford Development Corporation
1016
Public sector housing 1015-6

Temporary staff
Passport Office 585-7w

Ten minute rule Bills
Speaker's rulings & statements (17:01:89) 179, (24:01:89) 878

Tenancy agreements
Property Services Agency 650w

Tenant Farmers' Association
317w

Tenants
Housing tenure 20w

Tenants' choice
635w
Aliens 150w
Armed forces housing 643-4w
Disclosure of information 647w

Territorial Army
Medical examinations 769w
Political activities 769w

Terrorism
775w
Arrests 140-2w
Broadcasting controls 138-9w
Candidates (26:01:89) 1206-90
Immigration controls 774-5w
International cooperation 775-6w
Trevi Group 509w

Testing
Bovine somatotropin 56w

Textiles
China 17w

Thailand
Refugees 195w

Thalassaemia
Research finance 357w

Thames Water Authority
455w

Thamesline
122w

Thatcher, Rt Hon Margaret, Prime Minister, First Lord of the Treasury and Minister for the Civil Service
Questions
Agricultural products, Departmental responsibilities 193-4w
Agricultural subsidies, EC action 125w
Air pollution control, International conferences 869
Ash-cum-Ridley 485w
Bassett Foods, Takeovers 477-8
Bomber Command, Military decorations 1177-8
Building repairs, Government grants 329w
Cabotage, Shipping 704w
Channel tunnel, Railway network 570w
Chemical weapons, Libyan Arab Republic 704w
Child care, Cabinet Office 705w
Civil servants, Emigration 706w
Civil service dispersal 152
Cleveland County Council 478
Community Care Review 867-8
Consumer credit, Labour Party 1173
Consumer protection, Departmental responsibilities 570-1w
Consumer protection, Government departments 571w
Container terminals, Kingston upon Hull 481-2
Conventional weapons, Armed conflict 869
Cruelty to children, Broxtowe estate 479-80, 705w
Cultural heritage 868
Czechoslovakia, Human rights 153
Disabled Persons (Services Consultation & Representation) Act 1986, Administrative delays 870-1
Disasters, Heads of state 3w
Drug abuse, Narcotics 154

Thatcher, Rt Hon Margaret—continued
European Commission, Public appointments 125w, 704-5w
Food hygiene 478-9
Food inspection, Departmental responsibilities 367w
Food standards, Departmental responsibilities 126w, 485w
Football, Identity cards 149-51, 1176-7
Free trade 1176
Government departments, Debt collection 2w
Government Legal Services Review 262-3w
Greenhouse effect, Departmental coordination 1w, 127w
Hospices, Finance 1173-4
Hospital ancillary staff, Pension rights 153-4
House of Commons questions, Prime Minister 329w
Independent Broadcasting Authority, Public appointments 479, 1174-5
Intelligence services, Members 866-7
Japan, Funerals 1176
Kent 704w
Legal profession 1175
Magistrates' courts, Departmental responsibilities 569w
Manchester Trades Union Council Pensioners' Association, Departmental correspondence 194w
Middle East, Peace negotiations 151
Ministerial policy advisers, Prime Minister 1-2w
Ministerial resignations, Departmental correspondence 480-1
Ministers 867
Ministers, Shareholders 261w
Ministers' visits abroad, Israel 704w
Ministers' visits abroad, Mass media 2w
Ministers' visits abroad, USA 485w
Ministry of Agriculture, Consumers 152-3
Mortgage defaulters, Departmental responsibilities 2-3w
Mortgages 868-9
Newport 261w
NHS Review 869-70
Nuclear accidents, Disclosure of information 486w
Official engagements 127w, 261-2w, 485-6w, 705-6w
Ozone layer, Air pollution control 569-70w
Pay incentives, Cabinet Office 329w
Pensions 867
Poverty 870
Pre-school education, Departmental responsibilities 1w
Prime Minister, Interviews 367w
Profit sharing 479
Reagan, Ronald 870
Republic of Ireland, Aliens 329-30w
Science & Technology Assessment Office 125-6w
South Africa, Cricket 479
Spaceflight 261w
Sudan, Overseas aid 151
Tax burden 868
Toyota, Foreign companies in UK 1176
Transpennine 1174
Turkey, Human rights 1175
Unemployment 480
USSR, Human rights 152, 328-9w
VAT, Construction 570w
Women's employment, Equal opportunities 482

Theft
Police firearms 395w

Thomas, Dr Dafydd Elis
Questions
Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament, Public records 663w
Chemical weapons, International cooperation 659w
Civil servants, Emigration 706w
Defence research, Nuclear fusion 754w
EC free food scheme 321w
EC free food scheme, Wales 268w

Thomas, Dr Dafydd Elis—continued
Electricity supply industry, Privatisation 698w
European Commission, Ministers' visits abroad 675
Foreign & Commonwealth Office, Television programmes 660w
Guided weapons, Defence research 756w
Low flying 656-7w
Low flying, Air traffic control 558-9w
Low flying, Aircraft noise 755w
Low flying, Bristol Airport 754w
Low flying, Military aircraft 558w, 754-6w, 770w
Low flying, Military police 558w
Low flying, Morocco 557w
Low flying, Urban areas 557w
Military Low-Flying Management Group 558w, 658w, 755w
Ministry of Defence, Written questions 754w
Non-departmental public bodies, Dept of Energy 697w
Non-departmental public bodies, Dept of the Environment 730-1w
Nuclear accidents, Sellafield 715w
Nuclear fuel reprocessing, Magnox reactors 697w
Nuclear fuel reprocessing, Nuclear safeguards 697w
Nuclear fuels, Transport of radioactive materials 754-5w
Nuclear fuels, USA 753w
Nuclear power, Public records 753w
Nuclear reactors, Exports 659w
Ozone layer, Air pollution control 569-70w
Ozone layer, International conferences 729-30w
Plutonium, Nuclear safeguards 696w
Plutonium, Overseas trade 155-6w
Plutonium, Sellafield 696-7w
RAF West Drayton, Low flying 656w
Saudi Arabia, Ministers' visits abroad 660w
Sheep 476
Transport of hazardous materials, Air freight transport 737w
Transport of radioactive materials, Air freight transport 756w
Treaties, Public records 660w
USA, Chemical weapons 659w
USSR, Tanks 660w

Thompson, Mr Donald, Parliamentary Secretary for Agriculture*
Debates etc.
Beef, EC action (18:01:89) 455-6
EC Agriculture Council, Ministerial statements (25:01:89) 1027-37
Horticulture, Glasshouse growers (16:01:89) 133-6
Questions
Agricultural research, Research finance 807-8w
Agricultural subsidies, Fraud 212w
Animal feed, Codes of practice 158w
Animal feed, Food inspection 321w
Animal feed, Salmonella 158-9w, 428-9w
Animal husbandry, Government assistance 312w
Animals, Tuberculosis 158w
Beef, Exports 499w
Beef, Imports 429w
Bees, Animal diseases 307w
Bovine somatotropin 157w
Bovine somatotropin, Health hazards 157w
Bovine somatotropin, Licensing 157w
Bovine somatotropin, Milk 157w
Bovine somatotropin, Testing 56w
Bovine spongiform encephalopathy, Disease control 310w
Bovine tuberculosis, Research finance 215w
British Wool Marketing Board 315w
Butter, EC free food scheme 212w
Butter, Food imports 60w, 699-700w
Butter, Intervention stocks 58-9w
Butter, New Zealand 212w
Cattle, Prices 311w
Child care, Ministry of Agriculture 700w

Thompson, Mr Donald—continued
Common sheep meat regime 311w
Common sheep meat regime, Northumberland 320w
Deer, Slaughterhouses 55w
Deer, Tuberculosis 55w, 312-3w, 429-30w
EC Agriculture Council 603w
EC Agriculture Council, Agricultural support systems 767-8w
EC external trade, New Zealand 807w
Eggs, Food labelling 53w
Eggs, Salmonella 324w
Farms, Nottingham 699w
Field walls, Government grants 310-1w
Fish, Animal feed 427w
Fish farming, Codes of practice 214w
Food contamination, Listeria monocytogenes 157-8w
Food hygiene, Northern Ireland 471
Food inspection, Meat 56w
Food subsidies 471-2
Food surpluses, Expenditure 59w
Foxes, Livestock 214w
House of Commons questions, Ministry of Agriculture 699w
Intervention stocks 312w
Livestock, EC action 317-8w
Livestock, Salmonella 427w
Meat, EC countries 701-2w
Meat, Food contamination 702w
Meat, Food hygiene 472
Meat, Food inspection 702w
Meat, Republic of Ireland 429w, 470-1, 701-2w
Milk, Agricultural subsidies 58w
Milk, Confectionery 466
Milk, Price increases 466-7
Milk Marketing Board 477
Ministry of Agriculture, Public bodies 427w
National Farmers' Union, Dairy farming 311w
Pay incentives, Ministry of Agriculture 499w
Pigmeat, Monetary compensatory amounts 427w
Pigs, Agricultural subsidies 806w
Poultry, Salmonella 54w, 322-4w, 428w, 702-3w
Sheep 476
Sheep, Agricultural subsidies 476
Sheep, North Yorkshire 57w
Sheep meat, Food exports 476
Sheep meat, New Zealand 699-700w
Sheep premiums 156w
Slaughterhouses, Civil service manpower 213-4w
Slaughterhouses, Enforcement notices 213w
Slaughterhouses, Food hygiene 56w, 212-3w, 318w
Untreated milk, Retail trade 316w
Waste disposal, Coastal areas 306w
Waste disposal, North Sea 464-6w
White fish, Fishing quotas 316-7w

Thompson, Mr Jack
Questions
Roads, Northern region 95-6w
Tax burden 691w

Thompson, Mr Patrick
Questions
Foreign & Commonwealth Office, Cash limits 576-7w
Machine tools industry 228-9w
Norwich Health Authority, NHS finance 544w
Roads 95w
Unemployment, Economic regions 259w
Youth training scheme, Norwich 174w

Thomson Regional Newspapers
106w, 472w

Thorn Cross Youth Custody Centre
348-9w

Thorne, Mr Neil
Debates etc.
Plessey, Takeovers (20:01:89) 665-7

Thornton, Mr Malcolm
Debates etc.
Pre-school education (18:01:89) 415

Thurnham, Mr Peter
Debates etc.
Child benefit (18:01:89) 353
Questions
Blasphemy 137w
Business statements 1183-4
Civil service agencies 52w
Council house sales, Bolton 209w
Doctors, Complaints 550w
EC internal trade 291w
Electricity supply industry, Privatisation 698w
Housing completions, Bolton 631w
Investment 359w
Overseas aid 371w
Schools, Bolton 133w
Teachers, Manpower 19w, 133w

Tidy Britain Group
Government grants 504-5w

Tilbury
Ports 623-4w

Tinsley Park
Planning permission (27:01:89) 1366-72

Tipping of waste
Construction materials 147w

Tobacco
EC action 227w
Expenditure 81-2w
Tobacco duties 81w

Tobacco duties
Tobacco 81w

"Today"
2-3w, 698w

Toll bridges
River Severn 671

Torbay
Council house sales 169, 208w, 631w

Torquay United Football Club
456w

Tourism
Government grants 170w, 284w
Local government functions 366w
North West region 170w
Northern Ireland 139
Universities 284w

Tourism Review Committee
49w, 146, 284w
Publishing 284w

Tourist industry
170w
Cathedrals 139
Coastal areas 170w
Employment 170w
Gaming clubs 146
National income 138-9, 141-2
Small businesses 146

Tourist information
142-3

Tourists
141-2

Town & country planning
642w
Law reform 210w

Town & Country Planning (Fees for Applications & Deemed Applications) Regulations 1989

Town & Country Planning (Fees for Applications & Deemed Applications) Regulations 1989*—*continued
Debates etc.
(17:01:89) 176

Town & Country Planning General Development Order 1988
Questions
210w

Townend, Mr John
Questions
Container terminals, Kingston upon Hull 481-2
Eggs, Salmonella 475
Public sector borrowing requirement 1165-6
Whisky, South Korea 229w

Toxocariasis
677w

Toyota
669w
Foreign companies in UK 1176

Tracey, Mr Richard
Questions
Tourist industry, National income 138-9

Trade agreements
China 324-5

Trade & Industry Select Committee
(18:01:89) 457

Trade competitiveness
Export promotion 108-10w

Trade union membership
Government Communications Headquarters 19-22

Trades Union Congress
182w
Employment Training 171-2w

Trades Unionists' Association
194w

Trafford
Grant maintained schools 19w
Secondary education 19w

Trailers
Road accidents 94w

Training
Aircrew 572-3w
Hearing therapists 226w
London Docklands Development Corporation 729w
North West region 814w
Women 809w

Training Agency
186w, 282w, 627-8w, 809w, 813-4w
Industrial training 184w
Information services 179-80w
Pay incentives 550-1w

Training allowances
281w
Youth training scheme 627w

Training & enterprise councils
182w
Finance 809w
Government grants 49w
Newham 742w
Wales 432w

Trains
Clapham Junction 92w

Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 1981
Questions
552w

Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) (Amendment) Regulations 1987
Questions
552w

Transient people
Mobile homes 137w

Transpennine
1174

Transplant surgery
EC countries 296w
Heart diseases 296w
Kidneys 864
Liver diseases 36w
NHS finance 36w
Organ donors 544w

Transport
Accidents 90-1w
Greater London 740-1w
London Docklands 388w
NATO 121w

Transport costs
Coal 619w

"Transport in London"
740-1w

Transport infrastructure
EC grants & loans 294-5w
Public expenditure 1167

Transport of hazardous materials
Air freight transport 737w
Waste disposal 504w

Transport of radioactive materials
Air freight transport 468w, 756w
EC action 468w
Greater London 468-9w
Nuclear fuels 754-5w
Railway transport 468-9w

Transport Select Committee
385w

Transport supplementary grants
London boroughs 738-40w

Travel grants
Child care 258w

Treasury
1165
Handicapped workers 689w
Merit awards 488w
Operating costs 694w

Treaties
Nuclear power 660w
Public records 660w

Treaty of Rome
317-8w

Tredinnick, Mr David
Debates etc.
By election writs, Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 594-5, 600-1, 620, 624
Questions
Chlorofluorocarbons 1018

Tree conservation
732w

Trees
Air pollution 645w

Trent Regional Health Authority
410w, 715-6w
Hospital waiting lists 865

Trent Valley Garden Centre
Planning permission 211w

Trevi Group
509w
Terrorism 509w

Trident
Costs 131-2w

Trippier, Mr David, Under-Secretary of State for the Environment
Debates etc.
City of London (Spitalfields Market) Bill, 3R (24:01:89) 938

Trippier, Mr David*—*continued
Questions
Bed & breakfast accommodation 638w
Bed & breakfast accommodation, Per capita costs 639w
Building industry, Self-employed 146w
Canary Wharf, Subsidies 648w
Caravan Sites Act 1968 461w
Construction, VAT 651w
Council house rents, Nottingham 303w
Council house rents, Rent arrears 210w
Council house sales 152w, 640w, 648w
Council house sales, Bolton 209w
Council house sales, Defective housing 347w
Council house sales, Leeds 208w
Council house sales, Torbay 208w
Derelict land, Government grants 642w
Derelict land, Staffordshire 204w
Derelict land grants, Birmingham 147w
Empty housing, Council housing 206-8w, 642w, 1010
Empty housing, Greater London 647w
Empty housing, Public sector housing 207w
Estate Action, Energy conservation 640-1w
Estate Action, Expenditure 211w
Estate Action, Government grants to local authorities 305w
Factories, Construction 203w
Home purchase assistance scheme, First time buyers 501w
Home purchase assistance scheme, House prices 501w
Homelessness, Audit Commission for Local Authorities in England & Wales 636-7w
Homelessness, Families 636w
Homelessness, Mortgage defaulters 149w, 641w
Hostels 649w
House renovation grants 203-4w
Households 227-8w
Housing, Greater London 650-1w
Housing Act 1985, Homelessness 148w, 643w
Housing action trusts, Consultants 636w
Housing associations, Domestic rents 639-40w
Housing associations, Housing finance 640w
Housing associations, Oxfordshire 644w
Housing completions 205w
Housing completions, Bolton 631w
Housing completions, Derbyshire 460-1w
Housing completions, Wakefield 21w
Housing construction, Council housing 506w
Housing construction, Inner London boroughs 23w
Housing (Homeless Persons) Act 1977 149-50w
Housing investment programmes, Greater London 648w
Housing starts, Private sector housing 304w
Housing subsidies 651w
Housing subsidies, Council house sales 149w
Isle of Dogs enterprise zone, Rate rebates 459w
Land acquisition, Bradford 634-5w
Leasehold housing, Appeals 147w
London Docklands, Business 457w
London Docklands, Employment 650w
London Docklands, Employment opportunities 457-8w
London Docklands, Government grants 647w
London Docklands, Redundancy 458w
London Docklands, Relocation of employees 457w, 459w
London Docklands Development Corporation, Training 729w
Mendis, Viraj, Council housing 651w
Mendis, Viraj, Housing benefits 651-2w
Multiple occupation, Housing & Local Government Bill 1988/89 630w
"New Financial Regime for Local Authority Housing in England & Wales Consultation Paper" 637-8w

Trippier, Mr David*—*continued
Private rented housing 207w, 1009-10
Private rented housing, Landlord & tenant 640w
Public sector housing 1010
Public sector housing, Housing construction 1009
Public sector housing, Housing improvement 20w
Public sector housing, New towns 305w
Rate increases 306w
Rent arrears, Brent 208-9w
Rent increases 1023
Rent officers 1022-3
Repossession orders, Mortgage defaulters 641w
Telford Development Corporation 1016
Telford Development Corporation, Public sector housing 1015-6
Tenants, Housing tenure 20w
Tenants' choice 635w
Tenants' choice, Aliens 150w
Tenants' choice, Armed forces housing 643-4w
Tenants' choice, Disclosure of information 647w
Urban development corporations, Employment Select Committee 21w

Tritium
652w

Tropical Hardwoods (Control) Bill 1988/89
Debates etc.
1R (25:01:89) 1042

Truancy
Statistics 597w

Tuberculosis
Animals 158w
Deer 55w, 312-3w, 429-30w

TUC
see Trades Union Congress

Tuition fees
Mendis, Viraj 476w

Tunisia
Ministers' visits abroad 155
Overseas trade 322-3

Tunnels
River Thames 122w

Turkey
Human rights 256w, 792w, 1175

Turner, Mr Dennis
Debates etc.
Rate support grants (19:01:89) 526, 551-2
Questions
Income support, Water charges 244w
Mortgage interest rates 690w

TVLO
see Television Licensing Organisation

Twinn, Dr Ian
Questions
Countryside Commission 314w
Overseas investment 685w

Tyne & Wear Fire & Civil Defence Authority
305w

Tyre tread depths
Research 294w
Road accidents 294w

UCATT
see Union of Construction Allied Trades & Technicians

Uganda
Dairy farming 370w

UGC
see University Grants Committee

UKIAS
see United Kingdom Immigrants' Advisory Service

UN
see United Nations

UN Environment Programme
504w

UN Security Council
473w

Unemployment
165-6w, 480, 1168
Barnsley 165w
Devon 166w
East Anglia 164w
East Midlands 164w
Economic regions 259w, 678-9w
Greater London 164w
Hexham 421-2w
Inner city areas 251w
Lancashire 163w
Lanchester 750w
Newport 680-1
Northern region 165w
Parliamentary constituencies 163w
Pontefract 50w
Rural areas 171w
South West region 164w
Statistics 251w
Vacancies 51w
Wales 680-1
West Midlands 165w
Willington 750w
Yorkshire & Humberside 164w
Young people 163-4w

Unemployment benefit offices
284-5w, 750w
Office closures 749-50w
Standing Order No 20 applications (25:01:89) 1038

Unemployment benefits
246w
Blyth valley 257w
Mendis, Viraj 552w
Nottingham 364w
Social security benefits disqualification 51-2w, 257w, 364w
South Shields 51-2w
Young people 752w

Unemployment Unit
251w

Uniform business rate
Devon 733w

Union of Construction Allied Trades & Technicians
Building industry safety 148

United Kingdom Cancer Coordinating Committee
227w

United Kingdom Immigrants' Advisory Service
Scotland 7w

United Nations
363w, 575-6w, 686
Cyprus 255w

Universities
School leaving 384-6w
Student numbers 597w
Tourism 284w

University finance
Bradford University 382w
Edinburgh University 382w
Rates & rating 267w

University Grants Committee
267w, 284w

University teachers
Pay 192w
Pay settlements 477w

Unlawful interception
(17:01:89) 180-309

Unparliamentary expressions
Speaker's rulings & statements (23:01:89) 714

Untreated milk
Retail trade 316w

Upland geese
Falkland Islands 11w

Urban areas
Church of England 327
Low flying 557w
Road safety 98w
Road traffic 96w

Urban development corporations
630w
Employment Select Committee 21w

Urban planning
Greater London 630-1w, 795w

Urban programme
Dept of Education & Science 477w
Dept of Health 609w
Dept of Transport 469w
Local authority powers 304w

US Senate
792-3w

USA
Air routes 99w, 294w, 738w
Chemical weapons 659w
Foreign investment in UK 324
Import duties 325
Ministers' visits abroad 320-1w, 485w
Nuclear fuels 753w

USS Will Rogers
123w, 131w

USSR
Human rights 152, 328-9w
Lifshitz, Boris 362w
Tanks 660w

Vacancies
Greater London 251-2w
Museums & galleries 74w
Newcastle upon Tyne 421-2w
Teachers 326w
Unemployment 51w
Youth training scheme 141

Vaccination
Health service staff 540w

Vandalism
Buses 82-3w
Schools 133w, 382w

VAT
Average earnings 680w
Books 680w
Building industry 604w
Construction 570w, 578w, 651w, 737-8w
EC law 81w
European Court of Justice 79w, 679w
NHS 79w
Postage stamps 81w
Scotland 379w

VAT Act 1983
Questions
79w

VAT exempted goods
Taxation 680w

VAT registration
180w
Durham 236w

Vaz, Mr Keith
Debates etc.
Private notice question point of order (18:01:89) 347
Questions
Council house sales, Defective housing 347w
Crown Prosecution Service, Manpower 685
Customs 692-3w
Health service staff, Technicians 355w
India, Overseas aid 369w
Inner cities initiative, Local authority powers 320-1

Vaz, Mr Keith—continued
Juries, Peremptory challenge 673w
Mendis, Viraj, Arrests 342-3
Railway Inspectorate 99w
Watermead country park, Road construction 152-3w

Veal
EC action (18:01:89) 435-56

Vegetables
Pesticide residues 311w

Venereal diseases
Children 224w
Prostitution 669-70w
Yorkshire Regional Health Authority 224w

Veterinary medicine
807-8w

Veterinary Products Committee
157w

Veterinary School
Glasgow University 861

Veterinary services
Glasgow University 861
Research finance 61w

Vickers Defence Systems
198w
Challenger tanks 453-4w

Victoria & Albert Museum
Conservation 15
Stock control 73w

Video recordings
School boards 160w

Vietnam
Embassies 8w
Overseas aid 371w

Viggers, Mr Peter, Under-Secretary of State for Northern Ireland
Debates etc.
Industrial development, Northern Ireland (26:01:89) 1293-8
Questions
Action for Community Employment, Donaghadee 221w
Agricultural land, Northern Ireland 144-6w
Belfast Airport 676w
Conditions of employment, Northern Ireland 223w
Employment Bill 1988/89, Northern Ireland 602w
Employment discrimination, Civil service manpower 221-2w
Employment discrimination, Industrial tribunals 222w
Employment discrimination, Northern Ireland 335-6w, 676-7w
Employment discrimination, Post Office 221w
Fair Employment (Northern Ireland) Bill 1988/89 677w
Fair Employment (Northern Ireland) Bill 1988/89, Codes of practice 676w
Farm incomes, Northern Ireland 222-3w
Farmers, Bank loans 144w
Hard core unemployed, Northern Ireland 28-9w
Montupet, Location of industry 144w
New businesses, Strangford 220w
Youth training scheme, Northern Ireland 29-30w

Visas
142
Hungary 364w

Vocational education
EC internal trade 181w
Educational qualifications 181w
Financial Intermediaries' Managers' & Brokers' Association 333w

Vocational guidance
Higher education admission 598w

Vocational training
Museums & galleries 263-4w
Young people 137-8

Voting methods
Industrial disputes 185w

Wages councils
178w, 811w

"Wages Councils 1988 Consultation Document"
366w
HMSO 366w

Wagner Committee
see Residential Care Services Working Party

Wakefield
Housing completions 21w

Wakefield Health Authority
Hospital catering 301w, 543w
Public appointments 37w, 716w

Wakeham, Rt Hon John, Lord President of the Council and Leader of the House of Commons
Debates etc.
By election writs, Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 645-9
Oral questions, Ministers (26:01:89) 1202
Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Bill, Allocation of time motion (23:01:89) 692-6
Sub judice (19:01:89) 495
Questions
Business statements 483-93, 1179-89
Deposited papers, Norman Shaw Buildings 127-8w
House of Commons questions, Leader of the House of Commons 257w
House of Commons services, Day care of children 394w
Members' allowances 196-8w
Members' allowances, Expenditure 10-1w
Members' facilities, Facsimile transmission 127w
Privy Council Office, Cash limits 698-9w

Waldegrave, Mr William, Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office
Questions
Air accidents, Lockerbie 159
Chemical weapons 195w
Chemical weapons, Arms control negotiations 373-4w, 575-6w
Chemical weapons, International cooperation 659w
Child care, Foreign & Commonwealth Office 792w
Diplomatic service, Civil service manpower 473w
Eritrea, Peace negotiations 473w
European Security Conference 255w
European Security Conference, Eastern Europe 793w
Foreign & Commonwealth Office, Television programmes 660w
Iran 256w
Iraq, Biological weapons 194w
Israel, Political prisoners 128w
Middle East, Peace negotiations 156-61, 576w
Nuclear reactors, Exports 659w
Palestine Liberation Organisation, Assassination 362w
Saudi Arabia, Ministers' visits abroad 660w
Tunisia, Ministers' visits abroad 155
Turkey, Human rights 792w
US Senate 792-3w
USA, Chemical weapons 659w
USSR, Lifshitz, Boris 362w
USSR, Tanks 660w
Wallenberg, Raoul 363w
Wallenberg, Raoul, House of Commons questions 362-3w

Wales
Breast cancer 269w
Bus services 12w
Cancer 678-9

Wales—continued
Cervical cancer 433w
Community care 268w
Community charge 682
Consumer organisations 562w
EC free food scheme 268w
Economic situation 432w
Eggs 431w, 676
Electricity distribution 671
Employment opportunities 681
Empty housing 561w
Environment 482w
Environmental health officers 482-3w
European Commission 675-6
Exhaust emissions 483-4w
Farmers 561-2w
Flood control 778w
Football 145w, 462w
Handicapped 680
Health service ancillary staff 677-8
Higher education 665w
Hormone treatments 433w
Hospital beds 14w
Hospital consultants 14w
Hospital waiting lists 430w, 484w
Hospitals 14-5w
House renovation grants 13w
Housing 677
Housing benefits 677
Infant mortality 145w
Interest rates 432-3w, 675, 681
Junior hospital doctors 483w
Local government finance 15w
Low flying 558w
Medical equipment 479w
Motorways 561w
NHS 677-8
NHS finance 778-80w
NHS Review 15w
Noise control 484w
Nurses 682
Nursing homes 13w
Pay beds 13-4w
Potato Marketing Board 433w
Pupil-teacher ratios 480-2w
Railway transport 674
Rate support grants 436-40w
Regional aid 435w, 568-70w
Regional enterprise grants 434-5w
Road construction 563w
Second homes 481w
Set-aside schemes 434w
Severe weather payments 525-6w
Sheep meat 433-4w
Special education 479-80w
Training & enterprise councils 432w
Unemployment 680-1
Water Act 1973 195-6w, 268-9w
Water meters 673
Water pollution 484w
Water supply disconnections 145w, 673
Water supply industry 433w, 672

Wales Council for the Disabled
680

Walker, Mr Bill
Debates etc.
Access to Personal Files (Social Work) (Scotland) Regulations 1989 (24:01:89) 987-8
Housing support grants, Scotland (23:01:89) 810-3, 824, 831, 833
Questions
Business statements 488, 1189
Capital investment 681w
Exports 1167
Scottish health boards, Pay 777-8w

Walker, Peter
675

Walker, Rt Hon Peter, Secretary of State for Wales
Questions
Consumer organisations, Ministers' domestic visits 562w
EC free food scheme, Wales 268w
Economic situation, Wales 432w
Electricity distribution, Wales 671

Walker, Rt Hon Peter—continued
Employment, Mid Glamorgan 664w
Employment opportunities, Wales 681
European Commission, Ministers' visits abroad 675
European Commission, Wales 675-6
Factories, Cynon valley 432w
Farmers, Ministers' domestic visits 561-2w
Fish farming, Maerdy 154w
Football, Wales 145w
Higher education, Local authorities 665w
House of Commons questions, Welsh Office 664w
Interest rates, Industry 432-3w
Interest rates, Wales 675, 681
Local government finance, Wales 15w
Ministerial policy advisers, Welsh Office 12-3w
NHS finance, Wales 778-80w
NHS Review, Wales 15w
Parc Beck Allotment Society 15w
Pay incentives, Welsh Office 345w
Potato Marketing Board, Wales 433w
Railway transport, Wales 674
Railway travel, Bristol 675
Railway travel, Cardiff 674
Rate support grants, Wales 436-40w
Regional aid, Wales 435w
Regional enterprise grants, Wales 434-5w
River Severn, Toll bridges 671
Royal Welsh Agricultural Society, Government grants 664w
Set-aside schemes, Take-up 434w
Sheep meat, Wales 433-4w
Unemployment, Newport 680-1
Water meters, Wales 673
Water Space Amenity Commission, Public appointments 345w
Water supply disconnections, Wales 673
Water supply industry, Privatisation 433w, 672-4
Welsh Office, Cash limits 562-3w
Welsh Office, Offices 434w

Wall, Mr Pat
Debates etc.
Rate support grants (19:01:89) 543, 560-2
Questions
Building industry, Self-employed 146w

Wallace, Mr James
Debates etc.
Tropical Hardwoods (Control) Bill, 1R (25:01:89) 1042
Questions
Business statements 484, 1180
Common farm prices, National Farmers' Union 156w
Community care 529w
National income 678w
Pay settlements 180w
Seas & oceans, Environment protection 644w
Wind power 695-6w

Wallenberg, Raoul
363w
Departmental correspondence 773w
House of Commons questions 362-3w

Waller, Mr Gary
Questions
Productivity 179w

Walley, Ms Joan
Debates etc.
Private notice question point of order (18:01:89) 341
Questions
Chlorofluorocarbons 1018
Climate, Research finance 638w
Cook-chill catering, Retail trade 798w
Employment Training, Take-up 281w
Food poisoning, Cook-chill catering 713w
NHS, Medical treatments 297w
Water supply, Aluminium 305-6w

Wallsend
Income support 245w
Social Fund 245w

Walters, Sir Dennis
Questions
Middle East, Peace negotiations 157-8
Television licences, Fees & charges 671w

Wandsworth Prison
Segregation of prisoners 350w

War casualties
Medical treatments 226w

War on Want
686
Overseas aid 686

Ward, Mr John
Questions
Enterprise initiative 234w
Goods vehicles, Weighing machines 467w
Junior hospital doctors, Working hours 855-6
M3, Road construction 468w
M3-M27 link, Public inquiries 468w

Wardell, Mr Gareth
Questions
Fire services 135w
Fires, Arson 134-5w
Infant mortality, Medical research 33-4w, 717w
Infant mortality, Research finance 145w
Inflation 678w
Lorries, Motor vehicle testing 291-2w
M4, Road construction 431w
Motor vehicles, Lighting 99-100w
Motorways, Road signs 189w, 561w
Motorways, Road traffic control 120w
Nitrates, River pollution 472-3
Police, Career structure 5w
Police, Manpower 4w
Public service vehicles, Motor vehicle testing 389w

Wardle, Mr Charles
Debates etc.
Beef, EC action (18:01:89) 438
Questions
Farm woodland scheme 316w

Wareing, Mr Robert N
Questions
Balance of trade 233w
Civil service unions 52w
Employment opportunities, Handicapped workers 177w
Football, Arrests 719-20w, 732w
Football, Convictions 137w
Football, Identity cards 137w, 456w, 633-4w
Junior hospital doctors, Working hours 527w
Museums & galleries, Manpower 74w

Warren, Mr Kenneth
Questions
Business statements 484-5, 1185
M25 11-2
Remote sensing 765w

Warrington Borough Council
Employment Training 621w

Warwickshire
Educational finance 474w

Waste disposal
1010-2
Barnsley 153w
Coastal areas 306w
Irish Sea 210w
Law reform 506-7w
Licensing 151w
Local authority powers 151w
North Sea 464-6w, 633w
Planning permission 150-1w
Ports 649w
River pollution 318w
South Yorkshire 148w
Transport of hazardous materials 504w

Water Act 1945
Questions
455-6w

Water Act 1973
Questions
54-5w
Ministerial powers 26w
Wales 195-6w, 268-9w
Water charges 303w

Water authorities
Environment protection 505w
Land acquisition 24w
Land ownership & tenure 24-5w, 630w, 637w
Land values 728w
Pay 794w
Public sector assets 728w
Publicity 462w

Water Authorities Association
348w

Water Bill 1988/89
Questions
291w, 637w
Consumer organisations 646w

Water charges
Community charge 287-8w
Income support 244w
Public Utility Transfers & Water Charges Act 1988 303w
Water Act 1973 303w

Water meters
Wales 673

Water pollution
Aluminium 463w
Detergents 793-4w
EC law 145-6w, 647w, 728w
Fish 731w
Greater London 153w
Halifax 463w
Health hazards 227w
Lowermoor water treatment works 210-1w, 306w
Nitrates 473, 645-6w
South West Water Authority 145-6w
South Yorkshire 26w
Springfields 794-5w
Wales 484w

Water Resources Act 1963
Questions
455-6w

Water Space Amenity Commission
Public appointments 345w

Water storage
455-6w

Water supply
Aluminium 305-6w
India 270-1w
Opencast mining 551w
Scotland 159w
Standards enforcement 632w

Water supply disconnections
150w
Codes of practice 463w
Wales 145w, 673

Water supply industry
Capital investment 651w
Costs 462w
European Commission 291w
Fluoridation 302w
Ownership 648w
Privatisation 22-3w, 291w, 433w, 672-4, 679, 728w
Television advertising 348w
Wales 433w, 672

Water transport
River Thames 122w

Water treatment
Chemicals 26w
Liability 22-3w

Watermead country park
Road construction 152-3w

Watson Committee
see National Curriculum History Working Group

Watts, Joseph
801w

Wave power
Electricity generation 341-2w
Energy costs 342-3w
Energy research 341w, 343-4w

Wayland Prison
348-9w

WCD
see Wales Council for the Disabled

Wealth
Wrexham Water Works Company 267w

Weighing machines
Goods vehicles 467w

Weights & Measures (Amendment) Bill 1988/89
Debates etc.
1R (17:01:89) 176
2R* (27:01:89) 1364

Wells, Mr Bowen
Questions
Educational aid, Distance learning 662w
Stansted Airport, Noise control 191w

Welsh, Mr Andrew
Debates etc.
Housing support grants, Scotland (23:01:89) 814, 820-2
Questions
Agency Benefits Unit, Administrative delays 246-7w
British embassies, Facsimile transmission 195w
Community charge, Water charges 287-8w
Council house sales, Scotland 286-7w, 727w
Local government expenditure, Scotland 287w
Mylnefield Research Establishment 288w
Nuclear Industry Radioactive Waste Executive 635-6w
Small businesses 176w

Welsh, Mr Michael
Debates etc.
Avon Light Rail Transit Bill (HL), 2R (24:01:89) 959, 965-6, 968-70
Questions
Burma, Elections 195w

Welsh language
Curriculum 346w, 431-2w
Schools 780-2w
Teachers 345-6w, 781-2w

Welsh Office
482w
Agriculture Dept 434w
Cash limits 562-3w
House of Commons questions 664w
Ministerial policy advisers 12-3w
Offices 434w
"Our Changing Schools" 664w
Pay incentives 345w

Welsh Water Authority
145w, 195-6w, 268w

Wessex Regional Health Authority
543w

West coast railway line
Investment 89-90w

West Germany
Air force 26-7w
Barbouti, Ishan 352w
Ministers 258w

West Glamorgan
NHS 432w

West London line
Railway transport 121-2w

West Midlands
Regional crime squads (25:01:89) 1155-60
Unemployment 165w

West Midlands Fire & Civil Defence Authority
305w

West Yorkshire Fire & Civil Defence Authority
305w

Western Europe
Armed forces deployment 129w

Western flower thrip
(16:01:89) 129-36

Westland Helicopters
319

Westminster City Council
650w

Wheelchairs
Batteries 542w
Taxis 10-1

Wheeler, Mr John
Debates etc.
Security Service Bill, Com (16:01:89) 36
Questions
Airport security, Heathrow Airport 27
Transport, Greater London 740-1w

Whisky
South Korea 229w

White fish
Fishing quotas 316-7w

Whitney, Mr Ray
Debates etc.
Security Service Bill, Com (16:01:89) 41, 50, 51, 61, (17:01:89) 188
Security Service Bill, 3R (23:01:89) 753-9, 789
Questions
Investment 681w

Widdecombe, Miss Ann
Debates etc.
By election writs, Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 628, 641-2, 655, 661
Questions
Abortion, Prosecutions 368w
Infant Life (Preservation) Act 1929 684
Radiotherapy, Maidstone Hospital 223w

Widdicombe Committee
see Local Government Practices & Procedures Inquiry

Widows' benefits
617-8w
Expenditure 248w

Wiggin, Mr Jerry
Debates etc.
Avon Light Rail Transit Bill (HL), 2R (24:01:89) 947-54, 955, 956
Weights & Measures (Amendment) Bill, 1R (17:01:89) 176

Wigley, Mr Dafydd
Debates etc.
By election writs, Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 598, 616
School Curriculum Development Committee & Secondary Examinations Council Order 1988 (16:01:89) 122, 123-4
Questions
Flood control, Expenditure 778w
Food aid from UK, Overseas aid 688-90
Handicapped, Wales 680
Interest rates 683w
Overseas aid, Child health 126w
Pensions 867
Unemployment 165-6w
Water Act 1973 54-5w
Water Act 1973, Ministerial powers 26w
Water Act 1973, Wales 195-6w, 268-9w
Water Act 1973, Water charges 303w
Water meters, Wales 673
Water Space Amenity Commission, Public appointments 345w
Water storage 455-6w

Wigley, Mr Dafydd—continued
Water supply, Scotland 159w

Wilkinson, Mr John
Questions
Airport security, Airport staff 26-7

Williams, Rt Hon Alan
Debates etc.
Oral questions, Ministers (25:01:89) 1039-40, (26:01:89) 1201, 1202
Sub judice (19:01:89) 495
Written questions, Disclosure of information (17:01:89) 173, 174
Questions
Low flying, Swansea 656w
Parc Beck Allotment Society 15w

Williams, Mr Alan W
Debates etc.
EC Agriculture Council (25:01:89) 1034
Questions
Economic situation, Wales 432w
Eggs, Salmonella 308-9w
Greenhouse effect 637w
House renovation grants, Local government expenditure 13w
Nitrates, Water pollution 473

Willington
Unemployment 750w

Wilshire, Mr David
Debates etc.
Rate support grants (19:01:89) 562-4, 568
Questions
Airport security, Aircraft 26
Industrial training, Training Agency 184w
Manufacturing industries, Industrial production 230w
Railway network, Heathrow Airport 86-7w
Reagan, Ronald 870

Wilson, Mr Brian
Debates etc.
Oral question time point of order (25:01:89) 1013
Questions
Beef, Scotland 336-8w
Community charge, Mentally ill 1013
Monofilament gill nets, Prosecutions 159w
Old people's homes, Scotland 218-9w
Residential care, Elderly 244-6w, 247-52w

Wind power
695-6w

Winnick, Mr David
Debates etc.
Prime Minister's questions, Supplementary questions (19:01:89) 495
Security Service Bill, Com (16:01:89) 37, 50, 51, 54, 67, 76-82, 108, (17:01:89) 188, 195-6, 206-10, 217, 219, 230, 286, 307, 308, 309
Security Service Bill, 3R (23:01:89) 754, 768, 776-8, 781
Questions
Business statements 491-2, 1186
Homelessness, Mortgage defaulters 149w
Middle East, Peace negotiations 158
Pensioners, Clothing 49w

Winterton, Mr Nicholas
Questions
A40, Greater London 574w
Barlow Clowes, Financial services 331w
Barlow Clowes, Self-regulating organisations 331-2w
Financial Intermediaries' Managers' & Brokers' Association, Vocational education 333w
Financial services, Licensing 331w
Financial services, Self-regulating organisations 332-3w
NHS finance 41-2w
Securities & Investments Board, Self-regulating organisations 332w

Wise, Mrs Audrey

Wise, Mrs Audrey—continued
Debates etc.
BREL (1988), Privatisation (17:01:89) 170
By election writs, Richmond Yorks (20:01:89) 598, 619-20, 630, 634, 637, 642-5, 656, 662-3
Questions
Crime victims, Industrial injuries 390w
District health authorities, Day nurseries 714w
Listeria monocytogenes, Medical research 355w
Pay 418w
Personal income, Tax thresholds 376w
Springfields, Water pollution 794-5w

Witnesses
Republic of Ireland 194w, 663w

Women
Barristers 763-4w
Civil service recruitment 17-8
Judges 763w
Police surgeons 353w
Prisoners 516-7w, 675w
Solicitors 764w
Training 809w

Women's employment
743-6w
Day nurseries 628w
Equal opportunities 482
Part-time employment 743-6w

Women's Farmers' Union
314w

Women's Hospital Liverpool
Cervical cancer 225w

Wood, Mr Timothy
Questions
Community charge 632w
Motorways, Road construction 87w
Youth training scheme, Take-up 140

Woollen industry
Export promotion 765w

Woolwich Arsenal
Property development 556w

Working conditions
County Hall 794w

Working hours
Employment Training 421w
Junior hospital doctors 37w, 483w, 527-8w, 678, 854-6
Young people 185w

World Bank
370w
International Monetary Fund 679w

World Development Movement
Departmental correspondence 196w

Wormwood Scrubs
Prison hospitals 774w

Worthington, Mr Tony
Debates etc.
Housing support grants, Scotland (23:01:89) 822
Questions
Inflation 677w
Mortgage interest rates 1172

Wray, Mr Jimmy
Debates etc.
Child benefit (18:01:89) 375-6
Questions
Animal feed, Food inspection 321w
Brazil, Rain forests 271w
Energy conservation 695w
Mortgage interest rates, First time buyers 358w
NHS, Cleaning services 297w
Student numbers, Universities 597w

Wrekin District Council
1015-6

Wrexham-Chester railway line
665-6w

Wrexham Water Works Company
Wealth 267w

Written questions
Ministry of Defence 754w
Speaker's rulings & statements (17:01:89) 173-6, (26:01:89) 1205

Wrongful trading
Insolvency Act 1986 105w

Yeo, Mr Tim
Questions
Armenia, Disaster relief 372w
Bank of England 684w
Chlorofluorocarbons, Air pollution control 1016-7
Football, Identity cards 149
Group of Seven 678w
NHS Review 856-8
Overseas trade, Japan 230w
Pay settlements 1165
Roads, East Anglia 3-4

Yorkshire & Humberside
Hospital waiting lists 38w
Radioactive waste disposal 731-2w
Rivers 455w
Unemployment 164w

Yorkshire Regional Health Authority
301w, 545w
Cook-chill catering 116w
Hospitals 545w
Venereal diseases 224w

Yorkshire Water Authority
455w, 1021-2
River pollution 1021

"You & the Community Charge"
348w

Young, Mr David
Questions
Water authorities, Land ownership & tenure 637w

Young, Sir George
Debates etc.
Rate support grants (19:01:89) 523-7

Young offenders
Homosexuality 199-200w

Young people
Factories Act 1961 185w
Handicapped workers 751-2w
Housing benefits 707w
Income support 617-8w, 707w
Missing persons 350w
Social security reform 245-6w
Unemployment 163-4w
Unemployment benefits 752w
Vocational training 137-8
Working hours 185w

Younger, Rt Hon George, Secretary of State for Defence
Questions
House of Commons questions, Ministry of Defence 555w, 656w
Trident, Costs 131-2w

Youth custody
Departmental correspondence 200w

Youth employment
Hard core unemployed 259w

Youth training scheme
138, 174-5w, 253-4w, 627w, 810w
Cyprus 425-6w
Death 140-1
Employment discrimination 627-8w
Girvan 159-60w
Industrial accidents 141, 810w

Youth training scheme—continued*
Industrial health & safety 175w
Manpower 175w
North West region 626-7w, 813-4w
Northern Ireland 29-30w
Norwich 174w
Social security reform 521w
Stevenage 140

Youth training scheme—continued*
Take-home pay 751-2w
Take-up 140
Training allowances 627w
Vacancies 141

Youth unemployment
Pontefract 50w

Zambia
Overseas loans 661w